Verily, Zafâ and Merwah² are of the beacons of God, and he who makes the pilgrimage unto the House, or visits it, it is no crime for him to compass them both about; and he who obeys his own impulse to a good work,—God is grateful and doth know.

Verily, those who hide what we have revealed of manifest signs and of guidance after we have manifested it to men in the Book, them God shall curse, and those who curse shall curse them too. [155] Save those who turn and do right and make (the signs) manifest; these will I turn to again, for I am easy to be turned and merciful.

Verily, those who misbelieve and die while still in misbelief, on them is the curse of God, and of the angels, and of mankind altogether; to dwell therein for aye; the torment shall not be lightened for them, nor shall they be looked upon³.

Your God is one God; there is no God but He, the merciful, the compassionate.

Verily, in the creation of the heavens and the earth, and the alternation of night and day, and in the ship that runneth in the sea with that which profits man, and in what water God sends down from heaven and quicken therewith the earth after its death, and spreads abroad therein all kinds of cattle, and in the shifting of the winds, and in the clouds that are pressed into service betwixt heaven and earth, are signs to people who can understand.

¹ This formula is always used by Mohammedans in any danger and sudden calamity, especially in the presence of death.

² Two mountains near Mecca, where two idols used to stand.

³ Or, 'respired,' as some interpret it.

[160] Yet are there some amongst mankind who take to themselves peers¹ other than God; they love them as they should love God; while those who believe love God more. O that those who are unjust could only see, when they see the torment, that power is altogether God's! Verily, God is keen to torment.

When those who are followed² clear themselves of those who followed them, and see the torment, and the cords³ are cut asunder, those who followed shall say, 'Had we but another turn⁴, then would we clear ourselves of them as they have cleared themselves of us.' So will God show them their works; for them are sighs, and they shall not come forth from out the fire.

O ye folk! eat of what is in the earth, things lawful and things good, and follow not the footsteps of Satan, verily, to you he is an open foe. He does but bid you evil and sin, and that ye should speak against God what ye do not know.

[165] When it is said to them, 'Follow what God has revealed,' they say, 'Nay, we will follow what we found our fathers agreed upon.' What! and though their fathers had no sense at all or guidance—?

The likeness of those who misbelieve is as the likeness of him who shouts to that which hears him

¹ Variouslly interpreted 'idols' and 'chiefs.'

² Chiefs of sects and founders of false religions.

³ I. e. their mutual relations.

⁴ I. e. on earth.

not, save only a call and a cry¹; deafness, dumbness, blindness, and they shall not understand.

O ye who do believe! eat of the good things wherewith we have provided you, and give thanks unto God if it be Him ye serve. He has only forbidden for you what is dead, and blood, and flesh of swine, and whatsoever has been consecrated to other than God²; but he who is forced, neither revolting nor transgressing, it is in no sin for him; verily, God is forgiving and merciful.

Verily, those who hide what God has revealed of the Book, and sell it for a little price, they shall eat nothing in their bellies save fire; and God will not speak to them on the day of resurrection, nor will He purify them, but for them is grievous woe.

[170] They who sell guidance for error, and pardon for torment, how patient must they be of fire!

That (is), because God has revealed the Book with truth, and verily those who disagree about the Book are in a wide schism.

Righteousness is not that ye turn your faces towards the east or the west, but righteousness is, one who believes in God, and the last day, and the angels, and the Book, and the prophets, and who gives wealth for His love to kindred, and orphans, and the poor, and the son of the road³, and beggars, and those in captivity; and who is steadfast in prayer, and gives alms; and those who are sure of their covenant when they make a covenant; and the patient in poverty, and distress, and in time of violence; these are they who are true, and these are those who fear.

¹ I. e. as cattle hear the sound of the drover without understanding the meaning of his words, so the infidels fail to comprehend the meaning and importance of the words that are preached to them.

² At the time of slaughtering an animal the Muslims always repeat the formula bismi'llâh, in the name of God.

³ I. e. the wayfarer.

O ye who believe! Retaliation is prescribed for you for the slain: the free for the free, the slave for the slave, the female for the female; yet he who is pardoned at all by his brother, must be prosecuted in reason, and made to pay with kindness¹.

That is an alleviation from your Lord, and a mercy; and he who transgresses after that for him is grievous woe.

[175] For you in retaliation is there life, O ye possessors of minds! it may be ye will fear.

It is prescribed for you that when one of you is face to face with death, if he leave (any) goods, the legacy is to his parents, and to his kinsmen, in reason. A duty this upon all those that fear.

But he who alters it² after that he has heard it,—the sin thereof is only upon those who alter it; verily, God doth hear and know.

And he who fears from the testator a wrong intention, or a crime, and doth make up the matter between the parties, it is no sin to him; verily, God is forgiving and merciful.

O ye who believe! There is prescribed for you the fast as it was prescribed for those before you; haply ye may fear. [180] A certain number of days, but he amongst you who is ill or on a journey, then (let him fast) another number of days. And those who are fit to fast¹ may redeem it by feeding a poor man; but he who follows an impulse to a good work it is better for him; and if ye fast it is better for you, if ye did but know.

¹ The relations of a murdered man are always allowed to choose the fine instead of the blood revenge.

² The legacy.

The month of Ramadhân, wherein was revealed the Qur'ân, for a guidance to men, and for manifestations of guidance, and for a Discrimination. And he amongst you who beholds this month² then let him fast it; but he who is sick or on a journey, then another number of days;—God desires for you what is easy, and desires not for you what is difficult,—that ye may complete the number, and say, 'Great is God,' for that He has guided you; haply ye may give thanks.

When my servants ask thee concerning me, then, verily, I am near; I answer the prayer's prayer whene'er he prays to me. So let them ask me for an answer, and let them believe in me; haply they may be directed aright.

Lawful for you on the night of the fast is commerce with your wives; they are a garment unto you, and ye a garment unto them. God knows that ye did defraud yourselves, wherefore He has turned towards you and forgiven you; so now go in unto them and crave what God has prescribed for you, and eat and drink until a white thread can be distinguished by you from a black one at the dawn. Then fulfil the fast until the night, and go not in unto them, and ye at your devotions in the mosques the while. These are the bounds that God has set, so draw not near thereto. Thus does God make manifest His signs to men, that haply they may fear.

¹ I. e. able to fast but do not.

² I. e. who is at home during the month Ramadhân and not on a journey, or in a place where it is impossible to keep the fast.

Devour not your wealth among yourselves vainly, nor present it to the judges that ye may devour a part of the wealth of men sinfully, the while ye know.

[185] They will ask thee about the phases of the moon; say, 'They are indications of time for men and for the pilgrimage.' And it is not righteousness that ye should enter into your houses from behind them¹, but righteousness is he who fears; so enter into your houses by the doors thereof and fear God; haply ye may prosper yet.

Fight in God's way² with those who fight with you, but transgress³ not; verily, God loves not those who do transgress.

Kill them wherever ye find them, and drive them out from whence they drive you out; for sedition is worse than slaughter; but fight them not by the Sacred Mosque until they fight you there; then kill them, for such is the recompense of those that misbelieve.

But if they desist, then, verily, God is forgiving and merciful.

But fight them that there be no sedition and that the religion may be God's; but, if they desist, then let there be no hostility save against the unjust.

[190] The sacred month for the sacred month⁴;

¹ The Arabs before Mohammed's time had a superstition that it was unlucky to enter their houses by the doors on their return from Mecca, so they made holes in the hinder walls to enter in by instead.

² Or, 'cause,' see note 4, p. 21.

³ By beginning the fight yourselves.

⁴ The other Arabs had attacked them during the month for all sacred things demand retaliation¹; and whoso transgresses against you, transgress against him like as he transgressed against you; but fear ye God, and know that God is with those who fear.

Expend in alms in God's way and be not cast by your own hands into perdition; but do good, for God loves those who do good.

And fulfil the pilgrimage and the visitation to God; but if ye be besieged, then what is easiest for you by way of gift. But shave not your heads until your gift shall reach its destination; and he amongst you who is sick or has a hurt upon his head, then the redemption is by fasting or by alms or by an offering. But when ye are safe again, then let him who would enjoy the visitation until the pilgrimage² (bring) what is easiest as a gift. And he who cannot find (anything to bring), then let him fast three days on the pilgrimage and seven when ye return; these make ten days complete. That is, for him whose family are not present in the Sacred Mosque; and fear God and know that God is keen to punish.

The pilgrimage is (in) well-known months: whosoever then makes it incumbent on himself (let him have neither) commerce with women, nor fornication, nor a quarrel on the pilgrimage; and whatsoever of good ye do, God knoweth it; then provide yourself for your journey; but the best provision is piety. Fear ye me ye who possess minds.

DHu'lqa'hdah, which was one of their sacred months; the Moslems therefore are bidden to attack them if necessary in the sacred month of Ramadhân.

¹ If a breach of their sanctity be committed.

² I. e. going to the visitation at once without waiting for the month of the pilgrimage to come round.

It is no crime to you that ye seek good¹ from your Lord; but when ye pour forth from 'Arafât, remember God by the sacred beacon². Remember Him how He guided you, although ye were surely before of those who err.

[195] Then pour ye forth from whence men do pour forth and ask pardon of God; verily, God is forgiving and merciful.

And when ye have performed your rites, remember God as ye remember your fathers, or with a keener memory still.

There is among men such as says, 'Our Lord! give us in this world;' but of the future life no portion shall he have.

And some there be who say, 'Our Lord! give us in this world good and in the future good; and keep us from the torment of the fire!'

These,—they have their portion from what they have earned; for God is swift at reckoning up.

Remember God for a certain number of days; but whoso hastens off in two days, it is no sin to him, and he who lingers on it is no sin to him,—for him who fears. So fear ye God and know that unto Him shall ye be gathered.

[200] There is among men one³ whose speech about the life of this world pleases thee, and he calls on God to witness what is in his heart; yet is he most fierce in opposition unto thee. And when he turns away, he strives upon the earth to do evil therein, and to destroy the tilth and the stock ; verily, God loves not evil doing. And when it is said to him, ' Fear God,' then pride takes hold upon him in sin ; but hell is enough for him ! surely an evil couch is that.

¹ By trading during the 'Hagg.

² On the rites and stations of the 'Hagg pilgrimage, see Introduction.

³ A'znas ibn Surâiq عتہ ثناقیف, a fair spoken man of pleasant appearance, who pretended to believe in Mohammed.

And there is among men one who selleth his soul¹, craving those things that are pleasing unto God ; and God is kind unto His servants.

O ye who believe ! enter ye into the peace², one and all, and follow not the footsteps of Satan ; verily, to you he is an open foe. [205] And if ye slip after that the manifest signs have come to you, then know that God is the mighty, the wise.

What can they expect but that God should come unto them in the shadow of a cloud, and the angels too ? But the thing is decreed, and unto God do things return.

Ask the children of Israel how many a manifest sign we gave to them ; and whoso alters God's favours after that they have come to him, then God is keen at following up.

Made fair to those who misbelieve is this world's life ; they jest at those who do believe. But those who fear shall be above them on the resurrection day. God gives provision unto whom He will without account.

Men were one nation once, and God sent prophets with good tidings and with warnings, and sent down with them the Book in truth, to judge between men in that wherein they disagreed; but none did disagree therein save those who had been given it after that manifest signs had come to them, through greed amongst themselves; and God guided those who did believe to that truth concerning which they disagreed by His permission, for God guides whom He will unto the right path.

¹ Zuhâib ibn Sinân er Rûmî, who being threatened at Mecca with death unless he apostatized from Islâm, said, ' I am an old man, who cannot profit you if he be with you, nor hurt you if he be against you,' and was allowed to escape to Medina.

² Here used as a synonym for resignation, i. e. Islâm.

[210] Did ye count to enter Paradise, while there had nothing come to you like those who passed away before you; there touched them violence and harm, and they were made to quake, until the Apostle and those who believed with him said, 'When (comes) God's help? Is not God's help then surely nigh?'

They will ask thee what they are to expend in alms: say, 'Whatsoever good ye expend it should be for parents and kinsmen, and the orphan and the poor, and the son of the road; and whatsoever good ye do, verily, of it God knows.'

Prescribed for you is fighting, but it is hateful to you. Yet peradventure that ye hate a thing while it is good for you, and peradventure that ye love a thing while it is bad for you; God knows, and ye,—ye do not know!

They will ask thee of the sacred month,—of fighting therein. Say, 'Fighting therein is a great sin; but turning folks off God's way, and misbelief in Him and in the Sacred Mosque, and turning His people out therefrom, is a greater in God's sight; and sedition is a greater sin than slaughter.'

They will not cease from fighting you until they turn you from your religion if they can; but whosoever of you is turned from his religion and dies while still a misbeliever; these are those whose works are vain in this world and the next; they are the fellows of the Fire, and they shall dwell therein for aye.

[215] Verily, those who believe, and those who flee¹, and those who wage war² in God's way; these may hope for God's mercy, for God is forgiving and merciful.

They will ask thee about wine³ and el mâisar⁴, say, 'In them both is sin and profit to men; but the sin of both is greater than the profit of the same.'

They will ask thee what they shall expend in alms: say, 'The surplus.' Thus does God manifest to you His signs; haply ye may reflect on this world and the next! They will ask thee about orphans: say, 'To do good to them is best.' But if ye interfere with them—they are your brethren, and God knows the evildoer from the well doer; and if God will He will surely trouble you⁵. Verily, God is mighty, wise.

¹ In the Arabic hâgarû, i. e. who fled with Mohammed in his higrah or expatriation to Medina, from which the Muslim era dates.

² The gihâd, or general war of extermination against infidels, to threaten or preach which is a favourite diplomatic weapon with Mohammedan nations.

³ 'Hamr, which is rendered 'wine,' includes all alcoholic and intoxicating drinks.

⁴ El mâisar was a game of chance, played with arrows, the prize being a young camel, which was slaughtered and given to the poor, the price of it being paid by the losers. This distribution to the poor Mohammed speaks of as useful, but the quarrels and extravagance to which the game gave rise, he considers, over-balanced the profit.

⁵ I. e. if ye wrong orphans.

[220] Wed not with idolatrous women until they believe, for surely a believing handmaid is better than an idolatrous woman, even though she please you. And wed not to idolatrous men until they believe, for a believing slave is better than an idolater, even though he please you.

Those invite you to the fire, but God invites you to paradise and pardon by His permission, and makes clear His signs to men ; haply they may remember.

They will ask thee about menstruation : say, 'It is a hurt.' So keep apart from women in their menstruation, and go not near them till they be cleansed ; but when they are cleansed come in to them by where God has ordered you ; verily, God loves those who turn to Him, and those who keep themselves clean.

Your women are your tilth, so come into your tillage how you choose ; but do a previous good act for yourselves¹, and fear God, and know that ye are going to meet Him ; and give good tidings unto those who do believe.

Make not God the butt of your oaths, that ye will keep clear and fear and make peace amongst men, for God both hears and knows.

[225] He will not catch you up² for a casual word in your oaths, but He will catch you up for what your hearts have earned ; but God is forgiving and clement.

Those who swear off² from their women, they must wait four months ; but if they break their vow God is forgiving and merciful.

¹ Either wishing for a child, or saying, 'in the name of God,' Bâidhâvi.

² See note 1, p. 1.

And if they intend to divorce them, verily, God hears and knows.

Divorced women must wait for themselves three courses; and it is not lawful to them that they hide what God has created in their wombs, if they believe in God and in the last day. Their husbands will do better to take them back in that (case) if they wish for reconciliation; for, the same is due to them as from them; but the men should have precedence over them. God is mighty and wise.

Divorce (may happen) twice; then keep them in reason, or let them go with kindness. It is not lawful for you to take from them anything of what you have given them, unless both fear that they cannot keep within God's bounds. So if ye fear that ye cannot keep within God's bounds there is no crime in you both about what she ransoms herself with¹. These are God's bounds, do not transgress them; and whoso transgresses God's bounds, they it is who are unjust.

[230] But if he divorce her (a third time) she shall not be lawful to him after that, until she marry another husband; but, if he divorce her too, it is no crime in them both to come together again, if they think that they can keep within God's bounds. These are God's bounds which He explains to a people who know.

¹ The confusion of numbers and persons is in the original. The meaning of the passage is that 'divorce is allowed twice only, and that on each occasion the man may take the woman back if pregnant during the next four months; that if a woman be retained after divorce she is to be treated kindly, but if she be sent away she is not to be deprived of her dowry. If, however, they feel that they cannot live together, the woman may give up a part of her dowry to induce her husband to part with her.'

When ye divorce women, and they have reached the prescribed time, then keep them kindly, or let them go in reason, but do not keep them by force to transgress; for whoso does that, he is unjust to his own soul: and do not take God's signs in jest; and remember God's favours to you, and what He has sent down to you of the Book and wisdom, to admonish you thereby; and fear God, and know that God doth all things know.

When ye divorce women, and they have reached their prescribed term, do not prevent them from marrying their (fresh) husbands, when they have agreed with each other reasonably. That is what he is admonished with who amongst you believes in God and in the last day. That is more pure for you and cleaner. But God knows, and ye know not.

Mothers must suckle their children two whole years for one who wishes to complete the time of suckling; and on him to whom it is born its sustenance and clothing are incumbent; but in reason, for no soul shall be obliged beyond its capacity. A mother shall not be forced for her child; nor he to whom it is born for his child. And the same (is incumbent) on the heir (of the father). But if both parties wish to wean, by mutual consent and counsel, then it is no crime in them. And if ye wish to provide a wet-nurse for your children, it is no crime in you when you pay what you have promised her, in reason. Fear God, and know that God on what ye do doth look.

Those of you who die and leave wives behind, let these wait by themselves for four months and ten days; and when they have reached their prescribed time, there is no crime in them for what they do with themselves in reason; for God of what ye do is well aware.

[235] Nor is there any crime in you for that ye make them an offer of marriage, or that ye keep it secret, in your minds. God knows that ye will remember them; but do not propose to them in secret, unless ye speak a reasonable¹ speech; and resolve not on the marriage tie until the Book shall reach its time²; but know that God knows what is in your souls; so beware! and know that God is forgiving and clement.

It is no crime in you if ye divorce your women ere you have yet touched them, or settled for them a settlement. But provide maintenance for them; the wealthy according to his power, and the straitened in circumstances according to his power, must provide, in reason;—a duty this upon the kind.

And if ye divorce them before ye have touched them, but have already settled for them a settlement; the half of what ye have settled, unless they remit it, or he in whose hand is the marriage tie remits it³; and that ye should remit is nearer to piety, and forget not liberality between you. Verily, God on what ye do doth look.

Observe the prayers⁴, and the middle prayer⁵, and stand ye attent before God.

¹ I. e. with honest intentions.

² Until the time prescribed by the Qur'ân be fulfilled.

³ That is, unless the wife choose to give up a part of the half which she could claim, or the husband do the same on his part, in which case an unequal partition is lawful.

⁴ See excursus on the Rites and Ceremonies of Islâm.

⁵ Interpreted to mean either the middle or the odd one of the five.

[240] And if ye fear, then afoot¹ or on horseback ; but when ye are in safety remember God, how He taught you while yet ye did not know.

Those of you who die and leave wives, should bequeath to their wives maintenance for a year, without expulsion (from their home) ; but if they go out, there is no crime in you for what they do of themselves, in reason ; but God is mighty and wise.

And divorced women should have a maintenance in reason,—a duty this on those that fear. Thus does God explain to you His signs ; haply ye may understand.

Dost thou not look at those who left their homes by thousands, for fear of death ; and God said to them ‘ Die,’ and then He quickened them again²? Verily, God is Lord of grace to men, but most men give no thanks.

[245] Fight then in God’s way, and know that God both hears and knows.

Who is there that will lend to God a good loan ? He will redouble it many a double ; God closes His hand and holds it out, and unto Him shall ye return.

Dost thou not look at the crowd of the children of Israel after Moses’ time, when they said to a prophet of theirs³, ‘ Raise up for us a king, and we will fight in God's way?' He said, 'Will ye perhaps, if it be written down for you to fight, refuse to fight?' They said, 'And why should we not fight in God's way, now that we are dispossessed of our homes and sons?' But when it was written down for them to fight they turned back, save a few of them, and God knows who are evildoers. Then their prophet said to them, 'Verily, God has raised up for you *Tâlût*¹ as a king;' they said, 'How can the kingdom be his over us; we have more right to the kingdom than he, for he has not an amplitude of wealth?' He said, 'Verily, God has chosen him over you, and has provided him with an extent of knowledge and of form. God gives the kingdom unto whom He will; God comprehends and knows.'

¹ That is, if ye are in danger, say your prayers, as best you can, on foot or horseback, not staying so as to endanger your lives.

² The legend to which this alludes is variously told, but the most usually accepted version is that a number of the Israelites fled from their homes to avoid a gihād or ‘ religious war,’ and were struck dead, and afterwards revived by the prophet Ezekiel’s intervention. The story is apparently a distorted version of Ezekiel’s vision of the dry bones. Ezek. xxxvii. 1-10.

³ Samuel.

Then said to them their prophet, 'The sign of his kingdom is that there shall come to you the ark with the shechina² in it from your Lord, and the relics of what the family of Moses and the family of Aaron left; the angels shall bear it.' In that is surely a sign to you if ye believe³.

[250] And when Tâlût set out with his soldiery, he said, 'God will try you with a river, and he who drinks therefrom, he is not of mine; but whoso tastes it not, he is of mine, save he who laps it lapping with his hand⁴.'

And they drank from it save a few of them, and

¹ Saul.

² The commentators do not understand that the word sakînah, which is in the original, is identical with the Hebrew shechina, and render it 'repose' or 'tranquillity.'

³ 1 Samuel iv, v, vi.

⁴ Gideon and Saul are here confused; this portion of the story is taken from Judges vi.

when he crossed it, he and those who believed with him, they said, 'We have no power this day against Gâlût¹ and his soldiery,' those who thought that they should meet their Lord said, 'How many a small division of men have conquered a numerous division, by the permission of God, for God is with the patient.'

And when they went out against Gâlût and his soldiery, they said, 'Lord, pour out patience over us, and make firm our steps, and help us against the misbelieving people!'

And they put them to flight by the permission of God, and David killed Gâlût, and God gave him the kingdom and wisdom, and taught him of what He willed. And were it not for God's repelling men one with another the earth would become spoiled; but God is Lord of grace over the worlds.

These are the signs of God, we recite them to thee in truth, for, verily, thou art of those who are sent.

These apostles have we preferred one of them above another. Of them is one to whom God spake²; and we have raised some of them degrees; and we have given Jesus the son of Mary manifest signs, and strengthened him by the Holy Spirit. And, did God please, those who came after them would not have fought after there came to them manifest signs. But they did disagree, and of them are some who believe, and of them some who misbelieve, but, did God please, they would not have fought, for God does what He will.

[255] O ye who believe! expend in alms of what we have bestowed upon you, before the day comes in which is no barter, and no friendship, and no intercession; and the misbelievers, they are the unjust.

¹ Goliath.

² Moses, called Kalîmu 'Ilâh, 'He with whom God spake.'

God¹, there is no god but He, the living, the self-subsistent. Slumber takes Him not, nor sleep. His is what is in the heavens and what is in the earth. Who is it that intercedes with Him save by His permission? He knows what is before them and what behind them, and they comprehend not aught of His knowledge but of what He pleases. His throne extends over the heavens and the earth, and it tires Him not to guard them both, for He is high and grand.

There is no compulsion in religion; the right way has been distinguished from the wrong, and whoso disbelieves in *Tâghût*² and believes in God, he has got hold of the firm handle in which is no breaking off; but God both hears and knows.

God is the patron of those who believe, He brings them forth from darkness into light. But those who misbelieve, their patrons are Tâghût, these bring them forth from light to darkness,—fellows of the Fire, they dwell therein for aye.

[260] Do you not look at him who disputed with Abraham about his Lord, that God had given him the kingdom³? When Abraham said, 'My Lord is He who giveth life and death,' he said, 'I give life and death.' Abraham said, 'But verily, God brings the sun from the east, do thou then bring it from the west?' And he who misbelieved was dumb-founded, for God does not guide unjust folk.

¹ This is the famous âyatu 'l kursîy, or 'verse of the throne,' considered as one of the finest passages in the Qur'ân, and frequently found inscribed in mosques and the like.

² The idols and demons of the ancient Arabs are so called.

³ Nimrod, who persecuted Abraham, according to the eastern legend; see Chapter XXI, verses 52-69.

Or like him who passed by a village¹, when it was desolate and turned over on its roofs, and said, 'How will God revive this after its death?' And God made him die for a hundred years, then He raised him, and said, 'How long hast thou tarried?' Said he, 'I have tarried a day, or some part of a day.' He said, 'Nay, thou hast tarried a hundred years; look at thy food and drink, they are not spoiled, and look at thine ass; for we will make thee a sign to men. And look at the bones how we scatter them and then clothe them with flesh.' And when it was made manifest to him, he said, 'I know that God is mighty over all.'

And when Abraham said, 'Lord, show me how thou wilt revive the dead,' He said, 'What, dost thou not yet believe?' Said he, 'Yea, but that my heart may be quieted.' He said, 'Then take four birds, and take them close to thyself; then put a part of them on every mountain; then call them, and they will come to thee in haste; and know that God is mighty, wise².'

The likeness of those who expend their wealth in God's way is as the likeness of a grain that grows to seven ears, in every ear a hundred grains, for God will double unto whom He pleases; for God both embraces and knows.

¹ According to the Arabic commentators, 'Huzair (Esdras) ibn Sara'hyâ or Al 'Hizr (Elias) is the person alluded to; and the 'village' Jerusalem after its destruction by Ba'htnazr, Nebuchadnezzar. The legend probably refers to Nehemiah ii. 13.

² Cf. Genesis xv. 9.

Those who expend their wealth in God's way, then do not follow up what they expend by taunting with it and by annoyance, these have their hire with their Lord, and no fear is on them, neither shall they grieve.

[265] Kind speech and pardon are better than almsgiving followed by annoyance, and God is rich and clement.

O ye who believe! make not your almsgiving vain by taunts and annoyance, like him who expends what he has for the sake of appearances before men, and believes not in God and the last day; for his likeness is as the likeness of a flint with soil upon it, and a heavy shower falls on it and leaves it bare rock; they can do nought with what they earn, for God guides not the misbelieving folk.

But the likeness of those who expend their wealth craving the goodwill of God, and as an insurance for their souls, is as the likeness of a garden on a hill. A heavy shower falls on it, and it brings forth its eatables twofold; and if no heavy shower falls on it, the dew does; and God on what ye do doth look.

Would one of you fain have a garden of palms and vines, with rivers flowing beneath it, in which is every fruit; and when old age shall reach him, have weak seed, and there fall on it a storm wind with fire therein, and it gets burnt?

Thus does God manifest to you His signs, mayhap ye will reflect.

O ye who believe! expend in alms of the good things that ye have earned, and of what we have brought forth for you out of the earth, and do not take the vile thereof to spend in alms,—[270] what you would not take yourselves save by connivance at it¹; but know that God is rich and to be praised.

The devil promises you poverty and bids you sin, but God promises you pardon from Him and grace, for God both embraces and knows. He bringeth wisdom unto whom He will, and he who is brought wisdom² is brought much good; but none will remember save those endowed with minds.

Whatever expense ye expend, or vow ye vow, God knows it; but the unjust have no helpers. If ye display your almsgiving, then well is it; but if ye hide it and bring it to the poor, then is it better for you, and will expiate for you your evil deeds; for God of what ye do is well aware.

Thou³ art not bound to guide them; but God guides whom He will; and whatever good ye expend it is for yourselves, and do not expend save craving for God's face.

And what ye expend of good, it shall be repaid you, and ye shall not be wronged,—unto the poor who are straitened in God's way, and cannot knock about⁴ in the earth. The ignorant think them to be rich because of their modesty; you will know them

¹ I. e. by a mutual understanding between seller and buyer.

² See note 2, p. 1.

³ I. e. Mohammed.

⁴ I must again remind the reader of the remarks made in the Introduction that the language of the Qur'ân is really rude and rugged, and that although the expressions employed in it are now considered as refined and elegant, it is only because all literary Arabic has been modelled on the style of the Qur'ân. The word which I have ventured to translate by this somewhat inelegant phrase (dharban) means literally, 'to beat or knock about,' and as colloquial English affords an exact equivalent I have not hesitated to use it.

by their mark, they do not beg from men importunately; but what ye spend of good God knows.

[275] Those who expend their wealth by night and day, secretly and openly, they shall have their hire with their Lord. No fear shall come on them, nor shall they grieve.

Those who devour usury shall not rise again, save as he riseth whom Satan hath paralysed with a touch; and that is because they say 'selling is only like usury,' but God has made selling lawful and usury unlawful; and he to whom the admonition from his Lord has come, if he desists, what has gone before is his¹; his matter is in God's hands. But whosoever returns (to usury) these are the fellows of the Fire, and they shall dwell therein for aye. God shall blot out usury, but shall make almsgiving profitable, for God loves not any sinful misbeliever.

Verily, those who believe, and act righteously, and are steadfast in prayer, and give alms, theirs is their hire with their Lord; there is no fear on them, nor shall they grieve.

O ye who believe! fear God, and remit the balance of usury, if ye be believers; and if ye will not do it, then hearken to the proclamation of war from God and His Apostle; but if ye repent, your capital is yours. Ye shall not wrong, nor shall ye be wronged.

[280] And if it be one in difficulties, then wait for easy circumstances; but that ye remit it as alms is better for you, if ye did but know.

Fear the day wherein ye shall return to God; then shall each soul be paid what it has earned, and they shall not be wronged.

¹ I.e. his former conduct shall be pardoned.

O ye who believe! if ye engage to one another in a debt for a stated time, then write it down, and let a scribe write it down between you faithfully; nor let a scribe refuse to write as God taught him, but let him write, and let him who owes dictate; but let him fear God his Lord, and not diminish therefrom aught; but if he who owes be a fool, or weak, or cannot dictate himself, then let his agent dictate faithfully, and let them call two witnesses out from amongst their men; or if there be not two men, then a man and two women, from those whom he chooses for witnesses, so that if one of the two should err, the second of the two may remind the other; and let not the witnesses refuse when they are summoned; and let them not tire of writing it, be it small or great, with its time of payment. That is more just in the sight of God, and more upright for testimony, and brings you nearer to not doubting. Unless, indeed, it be a ready-money transaction between you, which ye arrange between yourselves, then it is no crime against you that ye do not write it down; but bring witnesses to what ye sell one to another, and let not either scribe or witness come to harm, for if ye do it will be abomination in you; but fear God, for God teaches you, and God knows all things. But if ye be upon a journey, and ye cannot find a scribe, then let a pledge be taken. But if one of you trust another, then let him who is trusted surrender his trust, and let him fear God his Lord, and conceal not testimony, for he who conceals it, verily, sinful is his heart: God knows what ye do.

God's is what is in heaven and in the earth, and if ye show what is in your souls, or hide it, God will call you to account; and He forgives whom He will, and punishes whom He will, for God is mighty over all.

[285] The Apostle believes in what is sent down to him from his Lord, and the believers all believe on God, and His angels, and His Books, and His apostles,—we make no difference between any of His apostles,—they say, 'We hear and obey, Thy pardon, O Lord! for to Thee our journey tends. God will not require of the soul save its capacity. It shall have what it has earned, and it shall owe what has been earned from it. Lord, catch us not up, if we forget or make mistake; Lord, load us not with a burden, as Thou hast loaded those who were before us. Lord, make us not to carry what we have not strength for, but forgive us, and pardon us, and have mercy on us. Thou art our Sovereign, then help us against the people who do not believe!'

THE CHAPTER OF IMRÂN'S FAMILY.

(III. Medina.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

A.L.M. God, there is no god but He, the living, the self-subsistent. He has sent down to thee the Book in truth, confirming what was before it, and has revealed the law, and the gospel before for the guidance of men, and has revealed the Discrimination.

Verily, those who disbelieve in the signs of God, for them is severe torment, for God is mighty and avenging.

Verily, God, there is nothing hidden from Him in the earth, nor in the heaven; He it is who fashions you in the womb as He pleases. There is no God but He, the mighty, the wise.

[5] He it is who has revealed to thee the Book, of which there are some verses that are decisive, they are the mother¹ of the Book; and others ambiguous; but as for those in whose hearts is perversity, they follow what is ambiguous, and do crave for sedition, craving for (their own) interpretation of it; but none know the interpretation of it except God. But those who are well grounded in knowledge say, 'We believe in it; it is all from our Lord; but none will remember save those who possess minds.'

'O Lord! pervert not our hearts again when Thou hast guided them, and grant us mercy from Thee, for Thou art He who grants. O Lord! Thou shalt gather together men unto the day wherein is no doubt. Verily, God will not depart from His promise.'

Verily, those who misbelieve, their wealth shall not help them, nor their children, against God at all; and they it is who are the fuel of the fire.

As was the wont of Pharaoh's people, and those before them, they said our signs were lies, and God caught them up in their sins, for God is severe to punish.

[10] Say to those who misbelieve, 'Ye shall be overcome and driven together to hell, an ill couch will it be.

'Ye have had a sign in the two parties who met; one party fighting in the way of God, the other misbelieving; these saw twice the same number as themselves to the eye-sight², for God aids with His help those whom He pleases.' Verily, in that is a lesson for those who have perception. Seemly unto men is a life of lusts, of women, and children, and hoarded talents of gold and silver, and of horses well-bred, and cattle, and tilth;—that is the provision for the life of this world; but God, with Him is the best resort.

¹ I. e. the fundamental part of it.

² On the occasion of the battle of Bedr. See Introduction.

Say, 'But shall we tell you of a better thing than this?' For those who fear are gardens with their Lord, beneath which rivers flow; they shall dwell therein for aye, and pure wives and grace from God; the Lord looks on His servants, who say, 'Lord, we believe, pardon Thou our sins and keep us from the torment of the fire,' [15]—upon the patient, the truthful, the devout, and those who ask for pardon at the dawn.

God bears witness that there is no god but He, and the angels, and those possessed of knowledge standing up for justice. There is no God but He, the mighty, the wise.

Verily, (the true) religion in God's sight is Islâm, and those to whom the Book was given disagreed not until after that there was given to them knowledge, through mutual envy. But whoso disbelieves in God's signs, truly God is quick at reckoning up.

And if they would dispute with thee, then say, 'I turn my face with resignation unto God, and whoso follows me.'

And say to those who have been given the Book, unto the Gentiles¹, 'Are ye, too, resigned?' and if they are resigned, then are they guided. But if they turn their backs, then thou hast only to preach, and God looks on his servants.

¹ The word also means 'illiterate,' and refers here to the Pagan Arabs in Mohammed's time. He seems to have borrowed the expression from the Jews, ummîyûn having the same signification as the Hebrew goyîm.

² See note, p. 15.

[20] Verily, those who disbelieve in God's signs, and kill the prophets without right, and kill those from among men, who bid what is just,—to them give the glad tidings of grievous woe! These are they whose works are void in this world and the next, and helpers have they none.

Did ye not see those who have been given a portion of the Book? they were called unto the Book of God to decide between them; and then a sect of them turned their backs and turned away;—that is because they say the fire shall not touch us save for a certain number of days. But that deceived them in their religion which they had invented. How will it be when we have gathered them together for a day whereof there is no doubt, when each soul shall be paid what it has earned, and they shall not be wronged?

[25] Say, 'O God, Lord of the kingdom! Thou givest the kingdom to whomsoever Thou pleasest, and strippest the kingdom from whomsoever Thou pleasest; Thou honourest whom Thou pleasest, and abasest whom Thou pleasest; in Thy hand is good. Verily, Thou art mighty over all. Thou dost turn night to day, and dost turn day to night, and dost bring forth the living from the dead, and dost provide for whom Thou pleasest without taking count.'

Those who believe shall not take misbelievers for their patrons, rather than believers, and he who does this has no part with God at all, unless, indeed, ye fear some danger from them. But God bids you beware of Himself, for unto Him your journey is.

Say, 'If ye hide that which is in your breasts, or if ye show it, God knows it: He knows what is in the heavens and what is in the earth, for God is mighty over all.'

The day that every soul shall find what it has done of good present before it; and what it has done of evil, it would fain that there were between itself and that a wide interval. 'God bids you beware of Himself, but God is gentle with His servants.'

Say, 'If ye would love God then follow me, and God will love you and forgive you your sins, for God is forgiving and merciful.'

Say, 'Obey God and the Apostle; but if ye turn your backs God loves not misbelievers.'

[30] Verily, God has chosen Adam, and Noah, and Abraham's people, and Imrân's¹ people above the world,—a seed, of which one succeeds the other, but God both hears and knows.

When Imrân's wife said, 'Lord! I have vowed to Thee what is within my womb, to be dedicated unto Thee, receive it then from me. Verily, Thou dost hear and know.' And when she brought it forth she said, 'Verily, I have brought it forth a female'—but God knew best what she brought forth; and a male is not like a female—I have called her Mary, and I seek a refuge in Thee for her and for her seed from Satan the pelted².

¹ Amram, who, according to the Mohammedans, was the father of the Virgin Mary, (Miriam.) A confusion seems to have existed in the mind of Mohammed between Miriam 'the Virgin Mary,' and Miriam the sister of Moses.

² The Mohammedan superstition is that the devils listen at the

And her Lord received her with a good reception, and made her grow up with a good growth, and Zachariah took care of her. Whenever Zachariah entered the chamber to her he found beside her a provision, and said, 'O Mary, how hast thou this?' She said, 'It is from God, for God provides for whom He pleases without count.' Therefore prayed Zachariah to his Lord, and said, 'Lord, grant me from Thee a good seed. Verily, Thou hearest prayer.' And an angel cried out to him as he was standing praying in the chamber (and said) that 'God gives thee the glad tidings of John, to confirm the Word from God,—of a chief and a chaste one, and a prophet from amongst the righteous.'

[35] He said, 'My Lord, how can there be to me a boy when old age has reached me, and my wife is barren?' Said he, 'Thus God does what He pleaseth.' He said, 'My Lord, make for me a sign.' He said, 'Thy sign is that thou shalt not speak to men for three days, save by gesture; but remember thy Lord much, and celebrate His praises in the evening and the morning.'

And when the angels said, 'O Mary! verily, God has chosen thee, and has purified thee, and has chosen thee above the women of the world. O Mary! be devout unto thy Lord, and adore and bow down with those who bow. That is (one) of the declarations of the unseen world which we reveal to gate of heaven for scraps of the knowledge of futurity, and when detected by the angels are pelted with shooting stars. The expression may also refer to the ceremony of 'pelting the devil,' as performed by Hagg pilgrims at Minâ, in memory, it is said, of Abraham's having driven Iblîs away with stones when tempted by him to disobey God and refuse to sacrifice Isaac.

thee, though thou wert not by them when they threw their lots¹ which of them should take care of Mary, nor were ye by them when they did dispute.'

[40] When the angel said, 'O Mary! verily, God gives thee the glad tidings of a Word from Him; his name shall be the Messiah Jesus the son of Mary, regarded in this world and the next and of those whose place is nigh to God. And he shall speak to people in his cradle, and when grown up, and shall be among the righteous.' She said, 'Lord! how can I have a son, when man has not yet touched me?' He said, 'Thus God creates what He pleaseth. When He decrees a matter He only says BE and it is; and He will teach him the Book, and wisdom, and the law, and the gospel, and he shall be a prophet to the people of Israel (saying), that I have come to you, with a sign from God, namely, that I will create for you out of clay as though it were the form of a bird, and I will blow thereon and it shall become a bird by God's permission; and I will heal the blind from birth, and lepers; and I will bring the dead to life by God's permission; and I will tell you what you eat and what ye store up in your houses. Verily, in that is a sign for you if ye be believers. And I will confirm what is before you of the law, and will surely make lawful for you some of that which was prohibited from you. I have come to you with a sign from your Lord, so fear God and follow me, for ¹ The legend is, that the priests threw lots by casting arrows into the river Jordan. The word used for arrows means simply unfeathered and unpointed arrows, and is the same as that used in the Arab game mâisar, referred to in page 32.

God is my Lord, and your Lord, so worship Him :—this is the right path.'

[45] And when Jesus perceived their unbelief, He said, 'Who are my helpers for God?' Said the apostles¹, 'We are God's helpers. We believe in God, so bear witness that we are resigned². Lord, we have believed in what Thou hast revealed, and we have followed the Apostle, so write us down with those which bear witness.' But they (the Jews) were crafty, and God was crafty, for God is the best of crafty ones!

When God said, 'O Jesus! I will make Thee die and take Thee up again to me³ and will clear thee of those who misbelieve, and will make those who follow thee above those who misbelieve, at the day of judgment, then to me is your return. I will decide between you concerning that wherein ye disagree. And as for those who misbelieve, I will punish them with grievous punishment in this world and the next, and they shall have none to help them.'

[50] But as for those who believe and do what is right, He will pay them their reward, for God loves not the unjust.

That is what we recite to thee of the signs and of the wise reminder⁴. Verily, the likeness of Jesus

¹ The Arabic expression is 'Havârîyûn, which means 'fullers,' and is explained by the commentators either as referring to their 'trade' or to their 'sincerity and candour.' The word is really derived from an Ethiopic root signifying 'to send.'

² See note 1, page 15.

³ The Mohammedans believe that it was an eidolon and not Jesus himself who was crucified.

⁴ This word dhikr is used by Mohammedans for the recitation of the Qur'ân, and is also applied to the religious celebrations of the dervishes.

with God is as the likeness of Adam. He created him from earth, then He said to him BE, and he was;—the truth from thy Lord, so be thou not of those who are in doubt. And whoso disputeth with thee after what has come to thee of knowledge, say, 'Come, let us call our sons and your sons, and our women and your women, and ourselves and yourselves: then we will imprecate and put God's curse on those who lie.'

[55] Verily, those are the true stories, and there is no god but God, and, verily, God He is the mighty, the wise; but if they turn back, God knows the evildoers.

Say, 'O ye people of the Book, come to a word laid down plainly between us and you, that we will not serve other than God, nor associate aught with him, nor take each other for lords rather than God.' But if they turn back then say, 'Bear witness that we are resigned.'

O people of the Book, why do ye dispute about Abraham, when the law and the gospel were not revealed until after him? What! do ye not understand? Here ye are, disputing about what ye have some knowledge of; why then do ye dispute about what ye have no knowledge of? God knows and ye know not.

[60] Abraham was not a Jew, nor yet a Christian, but he was a 'Hanîf¹ resigned, and not of the idolaters. Verily, the people most worthy of Abraham are those who follow him and his prophets, and those who believe;—God is the patron of the believers.

¹ See note 1, p. 19.

A sect of the people of the Book would fain they could lead you astray, but they only lead themselves astray, and they do not perceive.

O people of the Book! why do ye disbelieve in the signs of God, the while ye witness them? O people of the Book! why do ye clothe the truth with falsehood and hide the truth the while ye know? [65] A sect of the people of the Book say, 'Believe in what was revealed to those who believed at the first appearance of the day, and disbelieve it at the end thereof,'—that (others) may perchance go back (from their faith)¹—'do not believe save one who followeth your religion.'

Say, 'Verily, the (true) guidance is the guidance of God, that one should be given like what ye are given.' Or would they dispute with you before your Lord, say, 'Grace is in the hand of God, He gives it to whom he pleases, for God both comprehends and knows. He specially favours with his mercy whom he pleases, for God is Lord of mighty grace.'

And of the people of the Book, there are some of them who, if thou entrust them with a talent² give it back to you; and some of them, if thou entrust them with a dinâr², he will not give it back to thee except so long as thou dost stand over him. That is because they say, 'We owe no duty to the Gentiles;' but they tell a lie against God, the while they know.

¹ This is said to allude to some Jews who professed Islâm in the morning and recanted at night, saying that they had in the meantime consulted their books and found nothing to confirm it, hoping by this stratagem to raise doubts in the believers' minds.

² A 'talent,' qin/âr, is used for any very large sum, a dînâr ('denarius') was a gold coin worth about 10s.

[70] Yea, whoso fulfils his covenant and fears,—verily, God loves those who fear. Those who sell God's covenant and their oaths for a little price, these have no portion in the future life. God will not speak to them, and will not look upon them on the resurrection day, and will not purify them; but for them is grievous woe.

And, verily, amongst them is a sect who twist their tongues¹ concerning the Book, that ye may reckon it to be from the Book, but it is not from the Book. They say, 'It is from God,' but it is not from God, and they tell a lie against God, the while they know.

It is not right for a man that God should give him a Book, and judgment, and prophecy, and that then he should say to men, 'Be ye servants of mine rather than of God;' but be ye rather masters² of teaching the Book and of what ye learn.

He does not bid you take the angels and the prophets for your lords; shall He bid you misbelieve again when you are once resigned?

[75] And when God took the compact from the prophets '(this is) surely what we have given you of the Book and wisdom. Then shall come to you the Apostle confirming what is with you. Ye must believe in him and help him.' He said, moreover, 'Are ye resolved and have ye taken my compact on that (condition)?' They say, 'We are resolved.'

¹ I. e. pervert it.

² In the original Rabbânîyîn, an expression identical with Rabbani, cf. John xx. 16.

He said, 'Then bear witness, for I am witness with you; but he who turns back after that, these are sinners¹.'

What is it other than God's religion that they crave? when to Him is resigned whosoever is in the heavens and the earth, will he or nill he, and to him shall they return!

Say, 'We believe in God, and what has been revealed to thee, and what was revealed to Abraham, and Ishmael, and Isaac, and Jacob, and the tribes, and what was given to Moses, and Jesus, and the prophets from their Lord,—we will make no distinction between any of them,—and we are unto Him resigned. Whosoever craves other than Islam for a religion, it shall surely not be accepted from him, and he shall, in the next world, be of those who lose.'

[80] How shall God guide people who have disbelieved after believing and bearing witness that the Apostle is true, and after there come to them manifest signs? God guides the unjust folk.

These, their reward is, that on them is the curse of God, and of the angels, and of men together; they shall dwell therein for aye—the torment shall not be alleviated from them, nor shall they be respited; save those who repent after that, and act aright, for verily, God is forgiving and merciful.

Verily, those who misbelieve after believing, and then increase in misbelief, their repentance shall not be accepted; these are those who err.

[85] Verily, those who misbelieve and die in mis-

¹ The legend, borrowed from Talmudic sources, is that God assembled all past, present, and future prophets on Mount Sinai and entered into the compact mentioned in the text.

belief, there shall not be accepted from any one of them the earth-full of gold, though he should give it as a ransom. For them is grievous woe, and helpers have they none.

Ye cannot attain to righteousness until ye expend in alms of what ye love. But what ye expend in alms, that God knows.

All food was lawful to the children of Israel save what Israel made unlawful to himself before that the law was revealed. Say, 'Bring the law and recite it, if ye speak the truth.' But whoso forges against God a lie, after that, they are the unjust. Say, 'God speaks the truth, then follow the faith of Abraham, a 'hanîf, who was not of the idolaters.'

[90] Verily, the first House founded for men was surely that at Bakkah¹, for a blessing and a guidance to the worlds. Therein are manifest signs,—Abraham's station, and whosoever enters in is safe. There is due to God from man a pilgrimage unto the House, for whosoever can find his way there. But whoso misbelieves—God is independent of the worlds.

Say, 'O people of the Book! why do ye misbelieve in God's signs, while God is witness of what ye do?'

Say, 'O people of the Book! why do ye turn from the way of God him who believes, craving to make it crooked, while ye are witnesses? But God is not careless of what ye do.'

[95] O ye who believe! if ye obey the sect of those to whom the Book was brought, they will turn you, after your faith, to unbelievers again. How can ye misbelieve while unto you are recited the signs of God, and among you is His Apostle? But whoso takes tight hold on God, he is guided into the right way.

¹ Another name of Mecca.

O ye who believe! fear God with the fear that He deserves, and die not save ye be resigned.

Take tight hold of God's rope altogether, and do not part in sects; but remember the favours of God towards you, when ye were enemies and He made friendship between your hearts, and on the morrow ye were, by His favour, brothers. Ye were on the edge of a pit of fire, but he rescued you therefrom¹. Thus does God show to you His signs, perchance ye may be guided; [100] and that there may be of you a nation who shall invite to good, and bid what is reasonable, and forbid what is wrong; these are the prosperous.

Be not like those who parted in sects and disagreed after there came to them manifest signs; for them is mighty woe, on the day when faces shall be whitened and faces shall be blackened. As for those whose faces are blackened,—‘Did ye misbelieve after your faith, then taste the torment for your misbelief!’ But as for those whose faces are whitened, they are in God's mercy, and they shall dwell therein for aye.

These are the signs of God. We recite them to you in truth, for God desires not wrong unto the worlds.

[105] God's is what is in the heavens and what is in the earth, and unto God affairs return.

¹ Alluding to an occasion in which the ancient rivalry between the two tribes of El Aus and El 'Hazrag, which had been reconciled by Islâm, was on the point of breaking out again.

Ye were the best of nations brought forth unto man. Ye bid what is reasonable, and forbid what is wrong, believing in God. Had the people of the Book believed, it would have been better for them. There are believers among them, though most of them are sinners.

They shall surely not harm you save a hurt¹; and if they fight you, they shall show you their backs, then they shall not be helped.

They are smitten with abasement wherever they be found, save for the rope of God and the rope of man²; and they draw on themselves wrath from God. They are smitten, too, with poverty; that is because they did disbelieve in God's signs, and kill the prophets undeservedly. That is because they did rebel and did transgress.

They are not all alike. Of the people of the Book there is a nation upright, reciting God's signs throughout the night, as they adore the while. [110] They believe in God, and in the last day, and bid what is reasonable, and forbid what is wrong, and vie in charity; these are among the righteous.

What ye do of good surely God will not deny, for God knows those who fear.

Verily, those who misbelieve, their wealth is of no service to them, nor their children either, against God; they are the fellows of the Fire, and they shall dwell therein for aye.

The likeness of what they expend in this life of the world, is as the likeness of wind wherein is a cold blast that falls upon a people's tilth who have wronged themselves and destroys it. It is not God who wrongs them, but it is themselves they wrong.

¹ I. e. only a slight hurt.

² That is, unless they enter into either the spiritual or temporal dominion of Islâm, by professing the Mohammedan creed, or by paying a tribute.

O ye who believe! take not to intimacy with others than yourselves; they will not fail to spoil you; they would fain ye came to trouble,—hatred is shown by their mouths; but what their breasts conceal is greater still. We have made manifest to you our signs, did ye but understand.

[115] Ye it is who love them, but they love not you; and ye believe in the Book, all of it. But when they meet you they say, 'We believe;' and when they go aside they bite their finger tips at you through rage. Say, 'Die in your rage, for God doth know the nature of men's breasts.'

If good luck touch you it is bad for them, but if bad luck befall you they rejoice therein; yet if ye are patient and fear, their tricks shall not harm you, for what they do God comprehends.

When thou didst set forth early¹ from thy people to settle for the believers a camp to fight;—but God both hears and knows;—when two companies of you were on the point of showing cowardice; but God was their guardian, for on God surely the believers do rely. Why! God gave you victory at Bedr when ye were in a poor way; fear God, then, haply ye may give thanks. [120] When thou didst say unto the believers, 'Is it not enough for you that your Lord assists you with three thousand of the angels sent down from on high? Yea, if ye are patient and fear God, and they come upon you on a sudden, now, your Lord will assist you with five thousand of His angels, (angels) of mark. God only made this as glad tidings for you to comfort your hearts withal,—for victory is but from God, the mighty, the wise;—to cut off the flank of those who misbelieve, or make them downcast, that they may retire disappointed.'

¹ This refers to the battle of Ohod, when Mohammed experienced a severe check, and lost two teeth by a shot from an arrow.

Thou hast nothing to do with the affair at all, whether He turn towards them again or punish them; for, verily, they are unjust.

God's is what is in the heavens and in the earth. He forgives whom He pleases, and punishes whom He pleases; for God is forgiving and merciful.

[125] O ye who believe! devour not usury doubly doubled, but fear God, perchance ye may be prosperous; fear the fire which is prepared for the unbelievers, and obey God and His Apostle, perchance ye may get mercy. And vie with one another for pardon from your Lord, and for Paradise, the breadth of which is as the heaven and the earth, prepared for those who fear;—for those who expend in alms, in prosperity and adversity, for those who repress their rage, and those who pardon men; God loves the kind. Those who when they do a crime, or wrong themselves, remember God, and ask forgiveness for their sins,—and who forgives sins save God?—and do not persevere in what they did, the while they know;—[130]—these have their reward:—pardon from their Lord, and gardens beneath which rivers flow, dwelling therein for aye; for pleasant is the hire of those who act like this.

Incidents have passed before your time, go on then in the earth, and see what was the end of those who called (the prophets) liars.

This is an explanation unto men, and a guidance and a warning unto those who fear. Do not give way nor grieve, for ye shall have the upper hand if ye but be believers.

If a sore touch you, a sore like it has touched people : these are days ¹ which we make to alternate amongst mankind that God may know who it is that believe, and may take from you witnesses ², for God loves not the unjust ; [135] and that God may assay those who believe, and blot out the misbelievers. Do ye think that ye can enter Paradise and God not know those of you who have fought well, or know the patient ? Why, ye longed for death before ye met it ! Now ye have looked upon it and ye halt !

Mohammed is but an apostle ; apostles have passed away before his time ; what if he die or is killed, will ye retreat upon your heels ? He who retreats upon his heels does no harm to God at all ; but God will recompense the thankful. It is not for any soul to die, save by God's permission written down for an appointed time ; but he who wishes for the reward of this world we will give him of it, and he who wishes for the reward of the future we will give him of it, and we will recompense the grateful.

[140] How many prophets have myriads fought against ! yet they did not give way at what befel them in God's way ! Nor were they weak, nor did they demean themselves :—God loves the patient. And their word was only to say, ' Lord, forgive us our sins and our extravagance in our affairs ; and make firm our footing, and help us against the misbelieving folk !' and God gave them the reward of this world, and good reward for the future too, for God doth love the kind.

¹ Or ' battles.'

² Or ' martyrs.'

O ye who believe ! if ye obey those who misbelieve, they will turn you back upon your heels, and ye will retreat the losers. Nay, God is your Lord, He is the best of helpers. We will throw dread into the hearts of those who misbelieve, for that they associate that with God which He has sent down no power for ; but their resort is fire, and evil is the resort of the unjust.

[145] God has truly kept His promise, when ye knocked them senseless by His permission, until ye showed cowardice, and wrangled, and rebelled, after he had shown you what ye loved. Amongst you are those who love this world, and amongst you are those who love the next. Then He turned you away from them to try you ; but He has pardoned you, for God is Lord of grace unto believers,—when ye went up and looked not round upon any one, although the Apostle was calling you from your rear. Therefore did God reward you with trouble on trouble that ye should not grieve after what ye had missed¹, nor for what befel you, for God is well aware of what ye do. Then He sent down upon you after trouble safety,—drowsiness creeping over one company of you, and one company of you getting anxious about themselves, suspecting about God other than the truth, with the suspicion of the ignorant², and saying, 'Have we any chance in the affair?' Say, 'Verily, the affair is God's.' They conceal in themselves what they will not show to thee, and say, 'If we had any chance in the affair we should not be killed here.' Say, 'If ye were in your houses, surely those against whom slaughter was written down, would have gone forth to fight even to where they are lying now; that God may try what is in your breasts and assay what is in your hearts, for God doth know the nature of men's breasts.'

¹ Plunder.

² This word is always used for the pagan Arabs.

Verily, those of you who turned your backs on that day when the two armies met, it was but Satan who made them slip for something they had earned. But God has now pardoned them; verily, God is forgiving and clement.

[150] O ye who believe! be not like those who misbelieve, and say unto their brethren when they knock about in the earth, or are upon a raid, 'Had they but been at home, they had not died and had not been killed.' It was that God might make a sighing in their hearts, for God gives life and death; and God on what ye do doth look.

And if, indeed, ye be killed in God's way or die, surely forgiveness from God and mercy is better than what ye gather; and if ye die or be killed it is to God ye shall be assembled. It was by a sort of mercy from God thou didst deal gently with them, for hadst thou been rough and rude of heart they had dispersed from around thee. But pardon them, and ask forgiveness for them, and take counsel with them in the affair. As for what thou hast resolved, rely upon God; verily, God loves those who do rely. If God help you, there is none can overcome you; but if He leave you in the lurch, who is there can help you after Him? Upon God then let believers rely.

[155] It is not for the prophet to cheat; and he who cheats shall bring what he has cheated on the resurrection day. Then shall each soul be paid what it has earned, and they shall not be wronged. Is he who follows the pleasure of God, like him who has drawn on himself anger from God, whose resort is hell? An evil journey shall it be! These are degrees with God, and God sees what ye do.

God was surely very gracious to the believers, when He sent amongst them an apostle from themselves, to recite to them His signs, and purify them, and teach them the Book and wisdom, although they surely were before his time in manifest error. Or when an accident befalls you, and ye have fallen on twice as much, ye say, 'How is this¹?' Say, 'It is from yourselves. Verily, God is mighty over all.'

[160] And what befel you the day when the two armies met, it was by God's permission; that He might know the believers, and might know those who behaved hypocritically; for it was said to them, 'Come, fight in God's way,' or 'repel (the foe);' they said, 'If we knew how to fight we would surely follow you.' They were that day far nigher unto misbelief than they were to faith. They say with their mouths what is not in their hearts, but God doth know best what they hid. Those who said of their brethren, whilst they themselves stayed at home, 'Had they obeyed us they would not have been killed.' Say, 'Ward off from yourselves death, if ye do speak the truth.'

¹ He means that the loss at Ohod was more than counter-balanced by their previous success at Bedr. For an account of these engagements see Introduction.

Count not those who are killed in the way of God as dead, but living with their Lord;—provided for, rejoicing in what God has brought them of His grace, and being glad for those who have not reached them yet,—those left behind them; there is no fear for them, and they shall not be grieved; [165] glad at favour from God and grace, and that God wasteth not the hire of the believers. Whoso answered to the call of God and of His prophet after sorrow had befallen them, for those, if they do good and fear God, is a mighty hire. To whom when men said, 'Verily, men have gathered round you, fear then them,' it only increased their faith, and they said, 'God is enough for us, a good guardian is He.' Then they retired in favour from God and grace; no evil touched them; they followed the pleasure of God, and God is Lord of mighty grace.

It is only that Satan who frightens his friends. Do not ye fear them, but fear me, if ye be believers.

[170] Let them not grieve thee who vie with each other in misbelief. Verily, they cannot hurt God at all. God wills not to make for them a portion in the future life; but for them is mighty woe.

Verily, those who purchase misbelief for faith, they do not hurt God at all, and for them is grievous woe.

Let not those who misbelieve reckon that our letting them range is good for themselves. We only let them have their range that they may increase in sin. And for them is shameful woe. God would not leave believers in the state which ye are in, until He discerns the vile from the good. And God would not inform you of the unseen, but God chooses of His apostles whom He pleases. Wherefore believe ye in God and His Apostle; and if ye believe and fear, for you is mighty hire.

[175] And let not those who are niggard of what God has given them of His grace, count that it is best for them;—nay, it is worse for them. What they have been niggard of shall be a collar round their necks upon the resurrection day. And God's is the heritage of the heavens and the earth, and God of what ye do is well aware.

God heard the speech of those who said, 'Verily, God is poor¹ and we are rich.' We will write down what they said, and how they killed the prophets undeservedly, and say, 'Taste ye the torment of burning;' this shall they suffer for what their hands have sent on before;—for, verily, God is no unjust one to His servants,—who say, 'Verily, God has covenanted with us that we should not believe in an apostle until he gives us a sacrifice which fire devours².'

[180] Say, 'There have come to you apostles before me with manifest signs, and with what ye talk about; why then did ye kill them, if ye speak the truth?’

¹ Mohammed, in his message to the Jewish tribe of Kainûka, used the words of the Qur'ân, and bade them 'lend to God at good interest,' when Phineas Ibn Azûra mockingly said, 'Surely, God is poor since they try to borrow for him!' Whereupon Abu Bekr, who had brought the letter, smote him on the face and said, that, but for the truce between them, he would have smitten off his head. On complaint being made of this conduct to Mohammed the above verse was revealed.

² The commentators say that the Jewish Rabbis demanded of Mohammed this proof of his prophetic mission, having regard, probably, to the contest between Elijah and the priests of Baal on Mount Carmel.

And if they did call thee a liar, apostles before thee have been called liars too, who came with manifest signs, and with scriptures, and with the illuminating Book.

Every soul must taste of death; and ye shall only be paid your hire upon the resurrection day. But he who is forced away from the fire and brought into Paradise is indeed happy; but the life of this world is but a possession of deceit. Ye shall surely be tried in your wealth, and in your persons, and ye shall surely hear from those who have had the Book brought them before you, and from those who associate others with God, much harm. But if ye be patient and fear,—verily, that is one of the determined affairs.

When God took the compact from those who have had the Book brought them that ‘Ye shall of a surety manifest it unto men, and not hide it,’ they cast it behind their backs, and bought therewith a little price,—but evil is what they buy.

[185] Count not that those who rejoice in what they have produced, and love to be praised for what they have not done,—think not that they are in safety from woe,—for them is grievous woe!

God’s is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth, and God is mighty over all!

Verily, in the creation of the heavens and the earth, and in the succession of night and day, are signs to those possessed of minds; who remember God standing and sitting or lying on their sides, and reflect on the creation of the heavens and the earth. ‘O Lord! thou hast not created this in vain. We celebrate Thy praise; then keep us from the torment of the fire! Lord! verily, whomsoever Thou hast made to enter the fire, Thou hast disgraced him; and the unjust shall have none to help them.

[190] 'Lord! verily, we heard a crier calling to the faith, "Believe in your Lord," and we did believe. Lord! forgive us our sins and cover our offences, and let us die with the righteous. Lord! and bring us what Thou hast promised us by Thy apostles, and disgrace us not upon the resurrection day; for, verily, Thou dost not break Thy promises!' And the Lord shall answer them, 'I waste not the works of a worker amongst you, be it male or female,—one of you is from the other¹.

'Those who fled, and were turned out of their houses, and were harmed in my way, and who fought and were killed, I will cover their offences, and I will make them enter into gardens beneath which rivers flow.' [195] A reward from God; for God, with Him are the best of rewards.

Let it not deceive you that those who misbelieve go to and fro in the earth. It is a slight possession, and then their resort is Hell; an evil couch shall it be. But those who fear their Lord, for them are gardens beneath which rivers flow, and they shall dwell therein for aye,—an entertainment from God; and that which is with God is best for the righteous.

Verily, of the people of the Book are some who do believe in God, and in what has been revealed to you, and what was revealed to them, humbling themselves before God, and selling not the signs of God for a little price. These shall have their reward with their Lord; verily, God is quick at reckoning up.

¹ This passage was revealed in answer to the objection of Umm Salmâ, one of Mohammed's wives, when the women who fled with him were not mentioned as well as the men in the promised reward of the future life.

[200] O ye who believe! be patient and vie in being patient¹, and be on the alert, and fear God, that haply ye may prosper.

THE CHAPTER OF WOMEN.

(IV. Medīnah.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

O ye folk! fear your Lord, who created you from one soul, and created therefrom its mate, and diffused from them twain many men and women. And fear God, in whose name ye beg of one another, and the wombs; verily, God over you doth watch².

And give unto the orphans their property, and give them not the vile in exchange for the good, and devour not their property to your own property; verily, that were a great sin. But if ye fear that ye cannot do justice between orphans, then marry what seems good to you of women, by twos, or threes, or fours; and if ye fear that ye cannot be equitable, then only one, or what your right hands possess³. That keeps you nearer to not being partial.

And give women their dowries freely; and if they are good enough to remit any of it of themselves, then devour it with good digestion and appetite ¹.

¹ That is, with their enemies.

² That is, fear God, and pay respect to your mothers and wives.

³ That is, female slaves.

But do not give up to fools ² their property which God has made you to stand by; but maintain them from it, and clothe them, and speak to them with a reasonable speech. [5] Prove orphans until they reach a marriageable age, and if ye perceive in them right management, then hand over to them their property, and do not devour it extravagantly in anticipation of their growing up. And he who is rich, let him abstain; but he who is poor, let him devour in reason, and when ye hand over to them their property, then take witnesses against them; but God sufficeth for taking account.

Men should have a portion of what their parents and kindred leave, and women should have a portion of what their parents and kindred leave, whether it be little or much, a determined portion. And when the next of kin and the orphans and the poor are present at the division, then maintain them out of it, and speak to them a reasonable speech. [10] And let these fear lest they leave behind them a weak seed, for whom they would be afraid; and let them fear God, and speak a straightforward speech. Verily, those who devour the property of orphans unjustly, only devour into their bellies fire, and they shall broil in flames.

¹ The Arabic idiom for the enjoyment of property being to eat it up, Mohammed here gives the men permission to enjoy such portion of their wives' dowries as the latter might be pleased to remit, and adds, with a sort of humour, the colloquial expression used by the Arabs when any one is eating. The sentence might be paraphrased 'and if they are kind enough to remit any portion of it of their own accord, then enjoy it, and much good may it do you!'

² To idiots or persons of weak intellect.

God instructs you concerning your children; for a male the like of the portion of two females, and if there be women above two, then let them have two-thirds of what (the deceased) leaves; and if there be but one, then let her have a half; and as to the parents, to each of them a sixth of what he leaves, if he has a son; but if he have no son, and his parents inherit, then let his mother have a third, and if he have brethren, let his mother have a sixth after payment of the bequest he bequeaths and of his debt.

Your parents or your children, ye know not which of them is nearest to you in usefulness:—an ordinance this from God; verily, God is knowing and wise! And ye shall have half of what your wives leave, if they have no son; but if they have a son, then ye shall have a fourth of what they leave, after payment of the bequests they bequeath or of their debts. And they shall have a fourth of what ye leave, if ye have no son; but if ye have a son, then let them have an eighth of what ye leave, after payment of the bequest ye bequeath and of your debts.

[15] And if the man's or the woman's (property) be inherited by a kinsman who is neither parent nor child¹, and he have a brother or sister, then let each of these two have a sixth; but if they are more than that, let them share in a third after payment of the bequest he bequeaths and of his debts, without prejudice²,—an ordinance this from God, and God is knowing and clement!

¹ The word in the original is that always used to express this relationship.

² I. e. to the heirs.

These be God's bounds, and whoso obeys God and the Apostle He will make him enter into gardens beneath which rivers flow, and they shall dwell therein for aye ;—that is the mighty happiness.

But whoso rebels against God and His Apostle, and transgresses His bounds, He will make him enter into fire, and dwell therein for aye ; and for him is shameful woe.

Against those of your women who commit adultery, call witnesses four in number from among yourselves ; and if these bear witness, then keep the women in houses ¹ until death release them, or God shall make for them a way.

[20] And if two of you commit it, then hurt them both ²; but if they turn again and amend, leave them alone, verily, God is easily turned, compassionate.

God is only bound to turn again towards those who do evil through ignorance and then turn again. Surely, these will God turn again to, for God is knowing, wise. His turning again is not for those who do evil, until, when death comes before one of them, he says, 'Now I turn again ;' nor yet for those who die in misbelief. For such as these have we prepared a grievous woe.

O ye who believe ! it is not lawful for you to inherit women's estates against their will ; nor to hinder them¹, that ye may go off with part of what ye brought them, unless they commit fornication manifestly; but associate with them in reason, for if ye are averse from them, it may be that ye are averse from something wherein God has put much good for you.

¹ Women taken in adultery or fornication were at the beginning of Islâm literally immured.

² The commentators are not agreed as to the nature of the offence here referred to. The text, however, speaks of two of the masculine gender. The punishment to be inflicted is also the subject of dispute, the original merely saying, as I have translated it, 'hurt them.'

But if ye wish to exchange one wife for another, and have given one of them a talent², then take not from it anything. What! would you take it for a calumny and a manifest crime³?

[25] How can ye take it when one of you has gone in unto the other, and they have taken from you a rigid compact?

And do not marry women your fathers married,—except bygoness,—for it is abominable and hateful, and an evil way; unlawful for you are your mothers, and your daughters, and your sisters, and your paternal aunts and maternal aunts, and your brother's daughters, and your sister's daughters, and your foster mothers, and your foster sisters, and your wives' mothers, and your step daughters who are your wards, born of your wives to whom ye have gone in; but if ye have not gone in unto them, then it is no crime in you; and the lawful spouses of your sons from your own loins, and that ye form a connexion between two sisters,—except bygoness,—verily, God is forgiving, merciful; and married women, save such as your right hands possess,—God's Book against you!—but lawful for you is all besides this, for you to seek them with your wealth, marrying them and not fornicating; but such of them as ye have enjoyed, give them their hire as a lawful due; for there is no crime in you about what ye agree between you after such lawful due, verily, God is knowing and wise.

¹ That is, from marrying again.

² That is, a large dowry.

³ This question is ironical, and intended as a warning against bringing a false accusation of infidelity against a wife for the sake of keeping her dowry when divorced.

But whosoever of you cannot go the length of marrying marriageable women who believe, then take of what your right hands possess, of your maidens who believe;—though God knows best about your faith. Ye come one from the other; then marry them with the permission of their people, and give them their hire in reason, they being chaste and not fornicating, and not receivers of paramours.

[30] But when they are married, if they commit fornication, then inflict upon them half the penalty for married women; that is for whomsoever of you fears wrong; but that ye should have patience is better for you, and God is forgiving and merciful.

God wishes to explain to you and to guide you into the ordinances of those who were before you, and to turn towards you, for God is knowing, wise. God wishes to turn towards you, but those who follow their lusts wish that ye should swerve with a mighty swerving! God wishes to make it light for you, for man was created weak.

O ye who believe! devour not your property amongst yourselves vainly, unless it be a merchandise by mutual consent. And do not kill yourselves; verily, God is compassionate unto you.

But whoso does that maliciously and unjustly, we will broil him with fire; for that is easy with God.

[35] If ye avoid great sins from which ye are for-bidden, we will cover your offences and make you enter with a noble entrance.

And do not covet that by which God has preferred one of you over another. The men shall have a portion of what they earn, and the women a portion of what they earn; ask God for His grace, verily, God knows all.

To every one have we appointed kinsfolk as heirs of what parents and relatives and those with whom ye have joined right hands leave; so give them their portion, for, verily, God is over all a witness.

Men stand superior to women in that God hath preferred some of them over others, and in that they expend of their wealth: and the virtuous women, devoted, careful (in their husbands') absence, as God has cared for them. But those whose perverseness ye fear, admonish them and remove them into bed-chambers and beat them; but if they submit to you, then do not seek a way against them; verily, God is high and great.

And if ye fear a breach between the two¹, then send a judge from his people and a judge from her people. If they wish for reconciliation, God will arrange between them; verily, God is knowing and aware.

[40] And serve God, and do not associate aught with Him; and to your parents show kindness, and to kindred, and orphans, and the poor, and the neighbour who is akin, and the neighbour who is a stranger, and the companion who is strange, and the son of the road, and what your right hands possess², verily, God loves not him who is proud and boastful; who are miserly and bid men be miserly too, and who hide what God has given them of His grace;—but we have prepared for the misbelievers shameful woe.

¹ Man and wife.

² I. e. slaves.

And those who expend their wealth in alms for appearance sake before men, and who believe not in God nor in the last day;—but whosoever has Satan for his mate, an evil mate has he.

What harm would it do them if they believed in God and in the last day, and expended in alms of what God has provided them with? but God knows about them.

Verily, God would not wrong by the weight of an atom; and if it's¹ a good work, He will double it and bring from Himself a mighty hire.

[45] How then when we bring from every nation a witness, and bring thee as a witness against these on the day when those who misbelieve and rebel against the Apostle would fain that the earth were levelled with them? but they cannot hide the news from God.

O ye who believe! approach not prayer while ye are drunk, until ye well know what ye say; nor yet while polluted,—unless ye be passing by the way,—until ye have washed yourselves. But if ye are sick, or on a journey, or one of you come from the privy, or if ye have touched a woman, and ye cannot find water, then use good surface sand and wipe your faces and your hands therewith; verily, God pardons and forgives.

Do ye not see those who have been given a portion of the Book? they buy error, and they wish that ye may err from the way ! But God knows best who your enemies are, and God suffices as a patron, and sufficient is God as a help.

¹ The abbreviated form taku (for takun) is used in the Arabic.

And those who are Jews, and those who pervert the words from their places, and say, 'We hear but we rebel, and do thou listen without hearing,' and (who say) 'râ'hinâ¹,' distorting it with their tongues and taunting about religion. But had they said, 'We hear and we obey, so listen and look upon us,' it would have been better for them and more upright ;—but may God curse them in their misbelief, for they will not believe except a few.

[50] O ye who have been given the Book ! believe in what we have revealed, confirming what ye had before ; ere we deface your faces and turn them into hinder parts, or curse you as we cursed the fellows of the Sabbath² when God's command was done.

Verily, God pardons not associating aught with Him, but He pardons anything short of that to whomsoever He pleases ; but he who associates aught with God, he hath devised a mighty sin.

Do ye not see those who purify themselves ? nay, God purifies whom He will, and they shall not be wronged a straw³.

Behold, how they devise against God a lie, and that is manifest sin enough.

Do ye not see those to whom a portion of the Book has been given ? They believe in *Gibt*⁴ and *Tâghût*⁴, and they say of those who misbelieve,

¹ See note 3, p. 14.

² See Chapter II, verse 61.

³ The word in the original means a fibre in the cleft of a date stone, or the rush wick of a candle.

⁴ Idols of the ancient Arabs ; see p. 40.

'These are better guided in the way than those who believe.' [55] These are those whom God has cursed, and whom God has cursed no helper shall he find.

Shall they have a portion of the kingdom? Why even then they would not give to men a jot¹.

Do they envy man for what God has given of His grace? We have given to Abraham's people the Book and wisdom, and we have given them a mighty kingdom. And of them are some who believe therein, and of them are some who turn from it, but Hell is flaming enough for them.

Verily, those who disbelieve in our signs, we will broil them with fire; whenever their skins are well done, then we will change them for other skins, that they may taste the torment. Verily, God is glorious and wise.

[60] But those who believe and do aright, we will make them enter gardens beneath which rivers flow, and they shall dwell therein for ever and aye, for them therein are pure wives, and we will make them enter into a shady shade. Verily, God bids you pay your trusts to their owners, and when ye judge between men to judge with justice. Verily, God, excellent is what He admonishes you with; verily, God both hears and sees.

O ye who believe! obey God, and obey the Apostle and those in authority amongst you; and if ye quarrel about anything, refer to God and the Apostle, if ye believe in God and the last day; that is better and fairer as a settlement.

Do ye not see those who pretend that they believe in what has been revealed to them, and what was revealed before thee ; they wish to refer their judgment to *Tāghūt*¹, but they are bidden to disbelieve therein, and Satan wishes to lead them into a remote error. And when it is said to them, 'Come round to what God has sent down and unto the Apostle,' thou seest the hypocrites turning from thee, turning away.

¹ Literally, a dent or cleft in a date stone.

[65] How then when there befalls them a mischance through what their hands have sent on before? then will they come to you, and swear by God, 'We meant naught but good and concord.' These, God knows what is in their hearts. Turn thou away from them and admonish them, and speak to them into their souls with a searching word.

We have never sent an apostle save that he should be obeyed by the permission of God ; and if they, when they have wronged themselves, come to thee and ask pardon of God, and the Apostle asks pardon for them, then they will find God easy to be turned, compassionate.

But no! by thy Lord! they will not believe, until they have made thee judge of what they differ on ; then they will not find in themselves aught to hinder what thou hast decreed, and they will submit with submission. But had we prescribed for them, 'Kill yourselves, or go ye forth out of your houses,' they would not have done it, save only a few of them ; but had they done what they are admonished, then it would have been better for them, and a more firm assurance.

[70] And then we would surely have brought them from ourselves a mighty hire, and would have guided them into a right path.

Whoso obeys God and the Apostle, these are

¹ See note 2, p. 40.

with those God has been pleased with, of prophets and confessors and martyrs and the righteous;—a fair company are they.

That is grace from God, and God knows well enough.

O ye who believe! take your precautions and sally in detachments or altogether. Verily, there is of you who tarries behind, and, if a mischance befalls you, says, 'God has been gracious to me, since I am not with them a martyr.'

[75] But if there befalls you grace from God, he would say—as though there were no friendship between you and him—'O would that I had been with thee to attain this mighty happiness!' Let those then fight in God's way who sell this life of the world for the next; and whoso fights in God's way, then, be he killed or be he victorious, we will give him a mighty hire.

What ails you that ye do not fight in God's way, and for the weak men and women and children, who say, 'Lord, bring us out of this town¹ of oppressive folk, and make for us from Thee a patron, and make for us from Thee a help?'

Those who believe fight in the way of God; and those who disbelieve fight in the way of Taghût; fight ye then against the friends of Satan, verily, Satan's tricks are weak.

Do ye not see those to whom it is said, 'Restrain your hands, and be steadfast in prayer and give alms;' and when it is prescribed for them to fight then a band of them fear men, as though it were the fear of God or a still stronger fear, and they say, 'O our Lord! why hast thou prescribed for us to fight, couldst thou not let us abide till our near appointed time ?' Say, 'The enjoyment of this world is but slight, and the next is better for him who fears ;'—but they shall not be wronged a straw.

¹ Mecca.

[80] Wheresoe'er ye be death will overtake you, though ye were in lofty towers. And if a good thing befall them, they say, 'This is from God,' but if a bad thing, they say, 'This is from thee.' Say, 'It is all from God.' What ails these people ? they can hardly understand a tale.

What befalls thee of good it is from God ; and what befalls thee of bad it is from thyself. We have sent thee to mankind as an apostle, and God sufficeth for a witness.

Whoso obeys the prophet he has obeyed God ; and he who turns back—we have not sent thee to watch over them.

They say, 'Obedience!' but when they sally forth from you, a company of them brood by night over something else than that which thou hast said ; but God writes down that over which they brood. Turn then from them and rely on God, for God sufficeth for a guardian. Do they not meditate on the Qur'ân ? if it were from other than God they would find in it many a discrepancy.

[85] And when there comes to them a matter of security or fear they publish it ; but if they were to report it to the Apostle and to those in authority amongst them, then those of them who would elicit it from them would know it ; but were it not for God's grace upon you and His mercy ye had followed Satan, save a few.

Fight, then, in the way of God ; impose not aught on any but thyself, and urge on the believers ; it may be that God will restrain the violence of those who misbelieve, for God is more violent and more severe to punish.

Whoso intercedes with a good intercession shall have a portion therefrom; but he who intercedes with a bad intercession shall have the like thereof, for God keeps watch over all things.

And when ye are saluted with a salutation, salute with a better than it, or return it;—verily, God of all things takes account.

God, there is no God but He! He will surely assemble you on the resurrection day, there is no doubt therein; who is truer than God in his discourse?

[90] Why are ye two parties about the hypocrites, when God hath overturned them for what they earned? Do ye wish to guide those whom God hath led astray? Whoso God hath led astray ye shall not surely find for him a path. They would fain that ye misbelieve as they misbelieve, that ye might be alike; take ye not patrons from among them until they too flee in God's way; but if they turn their backs, then seize them and kill them wheresoever ye find them, and take from them neither patron nor help,—save those who reach a people betwixt whom and you is an alliance—or who come to you while their bosoms prevent them from fighting you or fighting their own people. But had God pleased He would have given you dominion over them, and they would surely have fought you. But if they retire from you and do not fight you, and offer you peace,—then God hath given you no way against them.

Ye will find others who seek for quarter from you, and quarter from their own people ; whenever they return to sedition they shall be overturned therein : but if they retire not from you, nor offer you peace, nor restrain their hands, then seize them and kill them wheresoever ye find them ;—over these we have made for you manifest power.

It is not for a believer to kill a believer save by mistake ; and whosoever kills a believer by mistake then let him free a believing neck¹ ; and the blood-money must be paid to his people save what they shall remit as alms. But if he be from a tribe hostile to you and yet a believer, then let him free a believing neck. And if it be a tribe betwixt whom and you there is an alliance, then let the blood-money be paid to his friends, and let him free a believing neck ; but he who cannot find the means, then let him fast for two consecutive months—a penance this from God, for God is knowing, wise.

[95] And whoso kills a believer purposely, his reward is hell, to dwell therein for aye ; and God will be wrath with him, and curse him, and prepare for him a mighty woe.

O ye who believe ! when ye are knocking about in the way of God be discerning, and do not say to him who offers you a salutation, ‘Thou art no believer,’ craving after the chances of this world’s life², for with God are many spoils ! So were ye aforetime, but God was gracious to you, be ye then discerning ; verily, God of what ye do is well aware.

¹ Captive.

² Because a believer might not be attacked and plundered as an infidel might be.

Not alike are those of the believers who sit at home without harm, and those who are strenuous in God's way with their wealth and their persons. God hath preferred those who are strenuous with their wealth and their persons to those who sit still, by many degrees, and to each hath God promised good, but God hath preferred the strenuous for a mighty hire over those who sit still,—degrees from him, and pardon and mercy, for God is forgiving and merciful.

Verily, the angels when they took the souls of those who had wronged themselves¹, said, 'What state were ye in?' they say, 'We were but weak in the earth;' they said, 'Was not God's earth wide enough for you to flee away therein?' These are those whose resort is hell, and a bad journey shall it be!

[100] Save for the weak men, and women, and children, who could not compass any stratagem, and were not guided to a way; these it may be God will pardon, for God both pardons and forgives.

Whosoever flees in the way of God shall find in the earth many a spacious refuge; and he who goes forth from his house, fleeing unto God and His prophet, and then death catches him up,—his hire devolves on God, and God is forgiving and merciful.

And when ye knock about in the earth, it is no crime to you that ye come short in prayer, if ye fear that those who disbelieve will set upon you; verily, the misbelievers are your obvious foes.

¹ Alluding to some half-hearted Muslims, slain at Bedr.

When thou art amongst them, and standest up to pray with them, then let a party of them stand up with thee, and let them take their arms ; and when they adore, let them go behind you, and let another party who have not yet prayed come forward and pray with thee ; and let them take their precautions and their arms.

Fain would those who misbelieve that ye were careless of your arms and your baggage, that they might turn upon you with a single turning. And it is no crime to you if ye be annoyed with rain or be sick, that ye lay down your arms ; but take your precautions,—verily, God has prepared for those who misbelieve a shameful woe.

But when ye have fulfilled your prayer, remember God standing and sitting and lying on your sides ; and when ye are in safety then be steadfast in prayer ; verily, prayer is for the believers prescribed and timed !

[105] And do not give way in pursuit of the people ; if ye suffer they shall surely suffer too, even as ye suffer ; and ye hope from God, but they hope not ! and God is knowing, wise.

Verily, we have revealed to thee the Book in truth that thou mayest judge between men of what God has shown thee ; so be not with the treacherous a disputant ; but ask God's pardon : verily, God is forgiving, merciful.

And wrangle not for those who defraud themselves ; for God loves not him who is a fraudulent sinner. They hide themselves from men ; but they cannot hide themselves from God, for He is with them while they brood at night over speeches that please Him not;—but God doth compass what they do !

Here are ye, wrangling for them about this world's life ;—but who shall wrangle with God for them on the day of judgment, or who shall be a guardian over them?

[110] Yet whoso does evil and wrongs himself, and then asks pardon of God, shall find God forgiving and merciful ; and whoso commits a crime, he only commits it against himself, for God is knowing, wise.

And whoso commits a fault or a sin and throws it on the innocent, he hath to bear a calumny and a manifest sin.

Were it not for God's grace upon thee, and His mercy, a party of them would have tried to lead thee astray ; but they only lead themselves astray ; they shall not hurt you in aught : for God hath sent down upon thee the Book and the wisdom, and taught thee what thou didst not know, for God's grace was mighty on thee.

There is no good in most of what they talk in private ; save in his who bids almsgiving, or kindness, or reconciliation between men ; and whoso does this, craving the good pleasure of God, we will give to him a mighty hire.

[115] But he who severs himself from the prophet after that we have made manifest to him the guidance, and follows other than the way of the believers, we will turn our backs on him as he hath turned his back ; and we will make him reach hell, and a bad journey shall it be.

Verily, God forgives not associating aught with Him, but He pardons anything short of that, to whomsoever He will; but whoso associates aught with God, he hath erred a wide error.

Verily, they call not beside Him on aught save females; and they do not call on aught save a rebellious devil.

God curse him! for he said, 'I will take from thy servants a portion due to me; and I will lead them astray; and I will stir up vain desires within them; and I will order them and they shall surely crop the ears of cattle; and I will order them and they shall surely alter God's creation¹;' but he who takes the devil for his patron instead of God, he loses with a manifest loss. He promises them, and stirs up vain desires within them; but the devil promises only to deceive.

[120] These, their resort is hell; they shall not find an escape therefrom! But those who believe, and do what is right, we will make them enter into gardens beneath which rivers flow, to dwell therein for aye,—God's promise in truth; and who is truer than God in speech? Not for your vain desires, nor the vain desires of the people of the Book. He who doeth evil shall be recompensed therewith, and shall not find for him beside God a patron, or a help. But he who doeth good works,—be it male or female,—and believes, they shall enter into Paradise, and they shall not be wronged a jot.

Who has a better religion than he who resigns his face to God, and does good, and follows the faith of ¹ The pagan Arabs used to cut off the ears of cattle, and mutilate their slaves by branding, and filing their teeth, partly that they might recognise them and partly as a superstitious ceremony. See p. 112, note 1.

Abraham, as a 'Hanîf?—for God took Abraham as a friend.

[125] And God's is what is in the heavens and in the earth, and God encompasses all things!

They will ask thee a decision about women; say, 'God decides for you about them, and that which is rehearsed to you in the Book; about orphan women to whom ye do not give what is prescribed for them, and whom ye are averse from marrying; and about weak children; and that ye stand fairly by orphans;—and what ye do of good, verily, that God knows.'

And if a woman fears from her husband perverse-ness or aversion, it is no crime in them both that they should be reconciled to each other, for reconciliation is best. For souls are prone to avarice; but if ye act kindly and fear God, of what ye do He is aware.

Ye are not able, it may be, to act equitably to your wives, even though ye covet it; do not however be quite partial, and leave one as it were in suspense; but if ye be reconciled and fear, then God is forgiving and merciful; but if they separate, God can make both independent out of His abundance; for God is abundant, wise.

[130] God's is what is in the heavens and what is in the earth! We have ordained to those who have been given the Book before you, and to you too that ye fear God;—but if ye misbelieve, verily, God's is what is in the heavens and what is in the earth, and God is rich and to be praised!

God's is what is in the heavens and what is in the earth! and God sufficeth for a guardian!

If He will He can make ye pass away, O men! and can bring others;—God is able to do all that.

He who wishes for a reward in this world,—with God is the reward of this world and of the next, and God both hears and sees.

O ye who believe! be ye steadfast in justice, witnessing before God though it be against yourselves, or your parents, or your kindred, be it rich or poor, for God is nearer akin than either.

Follow not, then, lusts, so as to act partially; but if ye swerve or turn aside, God of what ye do is well aware.

[135] O ye who believe! believe in God and His apostles, and the Book which He hath revealed to His Apostle, and the Book which He sent down before; for whoso disbelieves in God, and His angels, and His Apostle, and the last day, has erred a wide error.

Verily, those who believe and then misbelieve, and then believe and then misbelieve, and then increase in misbelief, God will never pardon them, nor will He guide them in the path.

Give to the hypocrites the glad tidings that for them is grievous woe!

Those who take the misbelievers for their patron rather than believers,—do they crave honour from them? Verily, honour is altogether God's!

He hath revealed this to you in the Book¹, that when ye hear the signs of God disbelieved in and mocked at, then sit ye not down with them until they plunge into another discourse, for verily, then ye would be like them. Verily, God will gather the hypocrites and misbelievers into hell together.

¹ Chap. VI, v. 67, which chronologically precedes the present; see Introduction.

[140] Those who lie in wait for you, and if the victory be yours from God, say, 'Were we not with you?' and if the misbelievers have a chance, they say, 'Did we not get the mastery over you, and defend you from the believers?' But God shall judge between you on the resurrection day; for God will not give the misbelievers a way against believers.

Verily, the hypocrites seek to deceive God, but He deceives them; and when they rise up to pray, they rise up lazily to be seen of men, and do not remember God, except a few; wavering between the two, neither to these nor yet to those! but whomsoever God doth lead astray thou shall not find for him a way.

O ye who believe! take not misbelievers for patrons rather than believers; do ye wish to make for God a power against you?

Verily, the hypocrites are in the lowest depths of hell-fire, and thou shalt not find for them a help.

[145] Save those who turn again, and do right, and take tight hold on God, and are sincere in religion to God; these are with the believers, and God will give to the believers mighty hire.

Why should God punish you, if ye are grateful and believe? for God is grateful and knowing.

God loves not publicity of evil speech, unless one has been wronged; for God both hears and knows.

If ye display good or hide it, or pardon evil, verily, God is pardoning and powerful!

Verily, those who disbelieve in God and His apostles desire to make a distinction between God and His apostles, and say, 'We believe in part and disbelieve in part, and desire to take a midway course between the two : ' [150] these are the misbelievers, and we have prepared for misbelievers shameful woe ! But those who believe in God and His apostles, and who do not make a distinction between any one of them,—to these we will give their hire, for God is forgiving and merciful !

The people of the Book will ask thee to bring down for them a book from heaven ; but they asked Moses a greater thing than that, for they said, ' Show us God openly ; ' but the thunderbolt caught them in their injustice. Then they took the calf, after what had come to them of manifest signs ; but we pardoned that, and gave Moses obvious authority. And we held over them the mountain ¹ at their compact, and said to them, ' Enter ye the door adoring ; ' and we said to them, ' Transgress not on the Sabbath day, ' and we took from them a rigid compact.

But for that they broke their compact, and for their misbelief in God's signs, and for their killing the prophets undeservedly, and for their saying, ' Our hearts are uncircumcised, '—nay, God hath stamped on them their misbelief, so that they cannot believe except a few,—[155] and for their misbelief, and for their saying about Mary a mighty calumny, and for their saying, ' Verily, we have killed the Messiah, Jesus the son of Mary, the apostle of God, ' but they did not kill him, and they did not crucify him, but a similitude was made for them. And verily, those who differ about him are in doubt concerning him ; they have no knowledge concerning him, but only follow an opinion. They did not kill him, for sure! nay, God raised him up unto Himself; for God is mighty and wise¹!

¹ See note, p. 8.

And there shall not be one of the people of the Book but shall believe in him before his death²; and on the day of judgment he shall be a witness against them.

And for the injustice of those who are Jews have we forbidden them good things which we had made lawful for them, and for their obstructing so much the way of God, and for their taking usury when we had forbidden it, and for their devouring the wealth of people in vain,—but we have prepared for those of them who misbelieve a grievous woe.

[160] But those amongst them who are firm in knowledge, and the believers who believe in what is revealed to thee, let what is revealed before thee, and the steadfast in prayer, and the givers of alms, and the believers in God and the last day,—unto these we will give a mighty hire.

Verily, we have inspired thee as we inspired Noah and the prophets after him, and as we inspired Abraham, and Ishmael, and Jacob, and the tribes, and Jesus, and Job, and Jonas, and Aaron, and Solomon; and to David did we give Psalms.

Of apostles we have already told thee of some before; and of apostles some we have not told thee of;—

But Moses did God speak to, speaking;—apostles giving glad tidings and warning, that men should have no argument against God, after the apostles, for God is mighty, wise!

¹ See p. 53, note 3.

² This may allude to the time of his death after his second advent, when he shall slay the antichrist.

But God bears witness to what He has revealed to thee : He revealed it in His knowledge, and the angels bear witness too ; though God is witness enough.

[165] Verily, those who misbelieve and obstruct the way of God, have erred a wide error.

Verily, those who misbelieve and are unjust, God will not pardon them, nor will He guide them on the road—save the road to hell, to dwell therein for aye ;—that is easy enough to God !

O ye folk ! the Apostle has come to you with truth from your Lord : believe then, for it is better for you. But if ye misbelieve, then God's is what is in the heavens and the earth, and God is knowing, wise.

O ye people of the Book ! do not exceed in your religion, nor say against God aught save the truth. The Messiah, Jesus the son of Mary, is but the apostle of God and His Word, which He cast into Mary and a spirit from Him ; believe then in God and His apostles, and say not ' Three.' Have done ! it were better for you. God is only one God, celebrated be His praise that He should beget a Son ! His is what is in the heavens and what is in the earth ; and God sufficeth for a guardian.

[170] The Messiah doth surely not disdain to be a servant of God, nor do the angels who are nigh to Him ; and whosoever disdains His service and is too proud, He will gather them altogether to Himself.

But as for those who believe and do what is right, He will pay their hire and will give increase to them of His grace. But as for those who disdain and are too proud, He will punish them with a grievous woe, and they shall not find for them other than God a patron or a help.

O ye folk! proof has come to you from your Lord, and we have sent down to you manifest light. As for those who believe in God, and take tight hold of Him, He will make them enter into mercy from Him and grace; and He will guide them to Himself by a right way.

[175] They will ask thee for a decision; say, 'God will give you a decision concerning remote kinship¹.'

If a man perish and have no child, but have a sister, let her have half of what he leaves; and he shall be her heir, if she have no son. But if there be two sisters, let them both have two thirds of what he leaves; and if there be brethren, both men and women, let the male have like the portion of two females. God makes this manifest to you lest ye err; for God all things doth know.

THE CHAPTER OF THE TABLE.

(V. Medīnah.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

O ye who believe! fulfil your compacts.—Lawful for you are brute beasts, save what is here recited to you, not allowing you the chase while ye are on pilgrimage; verily, God ordaineth what He will.

O ye who believe! do not deem the monuments of God to be lawful, nor the sacred month², nor the offering, nor its neck garlands, nor those who sojourn at the sacred house, craving grace from their Lord and His pleasure.

¹ See note 1, p. 73.

² Mu'harram.

But when ye are in lawful state again, then chase ; and let not ill-will against the people who turned you from the Sacred Mosque¹ make you transgress ; but help one another in righteousness and piety, and do not help one another to sin and enmity ; but fear God,—verily, God is keen to punish.

Forbidden to you is that which dies of itself, and blood, and the flesh of swine, and that which is devoted to other than God, and the strangled and the knocked down, and that which falls down, and the gored, and what wild beasts have eaten—except what ye slaughter in time—and what is sacrificed to idols², and dividing carcasses by arrows³.

To-day shall those who disbelieve in your religion despair ; do ye not then fear them, but fear me—
[5] To-day is perfected for you your religion, and fulfilled upon you is my favour, and I am pleased for you to have Islâm for a religion. But he who is forced by hunger, not inclined wilfully to sin, verily, God is forgiving, compassionate.

They will ask thee what is lawful for them ? say, ‘ Lawful for you are good things and what ye have taught beasts of prey (to catch), training them like dogs ;—ye teach them as God taught you ;—so eat of what they catch for you, and mention the name of God over it, and fear God, for verily, God is swift in reckoning up.’

Lawful for you to-day are good things, and the food of those to whom the Book has been given is lawful for you, and your food is lawful for them; and chaste women of those who believe, and chaste women of those to whom the Book has been given before you,—when you have given them their hire, living chastely and not fornicating, and not taking paramours. But whoso disbelieves in the faith, of a truth his work is vain, and he shall be in the next life of those who lose.

¹ The Qurâish, who sent to meet Mohammed with 1400 men at ‘Hudâibîyeh to prevent him from approaching Mecca, A. H. 6.

² Literally, ‘stones set up,’ Dolmens and the like, which are so common throughout Arabia.

³ By the game of mâisar, see p. 32.

O ye who believe! when ye rise up to prayer wash your faces, and your hands as far as the elbows, and wipe your heads, and your feet down to the ankles. And if ye are polluted, then purify yourselves. But if ye are sick, or on a journey, or if one of you comes from the privy, or if ye have touched women and cannot find water, then take fine surface sand and wipe your faces and your hands therewith. God does not wish to make any hindrance for you; but He wishes to purify you and to fulfil his favour upon you; haply ye may give thanks.

[10] Remember the favour of God to you and His covenant which He covenanted with you, when ye said, 'We hear and we obey';¹ and fear God, verily, God knows the nature of men's breasts.

O ye who believe! stand steadfast to God as witnesses with justice; and let not ill-will towards people make you sin by not acting with equity. Act with equity, that is nearer to piety, and fear God; for God is aware of what ye do.

God has promised to those who believe and work righteousness, that for them is pardon and a mighty hire. But those who disbelieve and call our signs lies, these are the fellows of hell.

¹ Referring to the oath of fidelity which Mohammed's adherents took at 'Akabah.

O ye who believe! remember God's favour towards you, when a people intended to stretch their hands against you, but He withheld their hands from you¹; and upon God let believers rely.

[15] God did take a compact from the children of Israel, and raised up of them twelve wardens; and God said, 'Verily, I am with you, if ye be steadfast in prayer, and give alms, and believe in my apostles, and assist them, and lend to God a goodly loan; then will I cover your offences and make you enter gardens beneath which rivers flow: and whoso disbelieves after that, he hath erred from the level way.

And for that they broke their compact, we cursed them, and placed in their hearts hardness, so that they perverted the words from their places, and forgot a portion of what they were reminded of².

But thou wilt not cease to light upon treachery amongst them, save a few of them; but pardon them and shun them; verily, God loves the kind.

And of those who say, 'Verily, we are Christians,' we have taken a compact; but they have forgotten a portion of what they were reminded of; wherefore have we excited amongst them enmity and hatred till the resurrection day; but God will tell them of what they have done.

O ye people of the Book! our Apostle has come to you to explain to you much of what ye had hidden of the Book, and to pardon much. There has come to you from God a light, and a perspicuous

¹ Various stories are told in explanation of this passage, but they are all obviously apocryphal, the angel Gabriel intervening to prevent some mischief either to the Apostle or his followers.

² That is, the text foretelling the coming of Mohammed; see Introduction.

Book ; God guides thereby those who follow His pleasure to the way of peace, and brings them into a right way.

They misbelieve who say, 'Verily, God is the Messiah the son of Mary ;' say, 'Who has any hold on God, if he wished to destroy the Messiah the son of Mary, and his mother, and those who are on earth altogether ?'

[20] God's is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth and what is between the two ; He createth what He will, for God is mighty over all !

But the Jews and the Christians say, 'We are the sons of God and His beloved.' Say, 'Why then does He punish you for your sins ? nay, ye are mortals of those whom He has created ! He pardons whom He pleases, and punishes whom He pleases ; for God's is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth, and what is between the two, and unto Him the journey is.

O people of the Book ! our Apostle has come to you, explaining to you the interval of apostles ; lest ye say, 'There came not to us a herald of glad tidings nor a warner.' But there has come to you now a herald of glad tidings and a warner, and God is mighty over all !

When Moses said to his people, 'O my people ! remember the favour of God towards you when He made amongst you prophets, and made for you kings, and brought you what never was brought to anybody in the worlds. O my people ! enter the Holy Land which God has prescribed for you ; and be ye not thrust back upon your hinder parts and retreat losers. [25] They said, 'O Moses ! verily, therein is a people, giants ; and we will surely not enter therein until they go out from thence; but if they go out then we will enter in.' Then said two men of those who fear,—God had been gracious to them both,—'Enter ye upon them by the door, and when ye have entered it, verily, ye shall be victorious; and upon God do ye rely if ye be believers.' They said, 'O Moses! we shall never enter it so long as they are therein; so, go thou and thy Lord and fight ye twain; verily, we will sit down here.' Said he, 'My Lord, verily, I can control only myself and my brother; therefore part us from these sinful people.' He said, 'Then, verily, it is forbidden them; for forty years shall they wander about in the earth; so vex not thyself for the sinful people.'

[30] Recite to them the story of the two sons of Adam; truly when they offered an offering and it was accepted from one of them, and was not accepted from the other, that one said, 'I will surely kill thee;' he said, 'God only accepts from those who fear. If thou dost stretch forth to me thine hand to kill me, I will not stretch forth mine hand to kill thee; verily, I fear God the Lord of the worlds; verily, I wish that thou mayest draw upon thee my sin and thy sin, and be of the fellows of the Fire, for that is the reward of the unjust.' But his soul allowed him to slay his brother, and he slew him, and in the morning he was of those who lose. And God sent a crow to scratch in the earth and show him how he might hide his brother's shame, he said, 'Alas, for me! Am I too helpless to become like this crow and hide my brother's shame?' and in the morning he was of those who did repent.

[35] For this cause have we prescribed to the children of Israel that whoso kills a soul, unless it be for another soul or for violence in the land, it is as though he had killed men altogether; but whoso saves one, it is as though he saved men altogether.

Our apostles came to them with manifest signs; then, verily, many of them did after that commit excesses in the earth.

The reward of those who make war against God and His Apostle, and strive after violence in the earth, is only that they shall be slaughtered or crucified, or their hands cut off and their feet on alternate sides, or that they shall be banished from the land;—that is a disgrace for them in this world, and for them in the next is mighty woe; save for those who repent before ye have them in your power, for know ye that God is forgiving, merciful.

O ye who believe! fear God and crave the means to approach Him, and be strenuous in His way, haply ye will prosper then.

[40] Verily, those who disbelieve, even though they had what is in the earth, all of it, and the like thereof with it, to offer as a ransom from the punishment of the resurrection day, it would not be accepted from them; but for them is grievous woe. They may wish to go forth from the Fire, but they shall not go forth therefrom, for them is lasting woe.

The man thief and the woman thief, cut off the hands of both as a punishment, for that they have erred;—an example from God, for God is mighty, wise.

But whoso turns again after his injustice and acts aright, verily, God will turn to him, for, verily, God is forgiving, merciful.

Do ye not know that God, His is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth ; He punishes whom He pleases, and forgives whom He pleases, for God is mighty over all ?

[45] O thou Apostle ! let not those grieve thee who vie in misbelief ; or those who say with their mouths ' We believe,' but their hearts do not believe ; or of those who are Jews, listeners to a lie,—listeners to other people, but who come not to thee. They pervert the words from their places and say, ' If this is what ye are given, take it ; but if ye are not given it, then beware !' but he whom God wishes to mislead, thou canst do nothing with God for him ; these are those whose hearts God wishes not to purify, for them in this world is disgrace, and for them in the next is mighty woe,—listeners to a lie, eaters of unlawful things !

But if they come to thee, then judge between them or turn aside from them ; but if thou turnest aside from them they shall not harm thee at all, but if thou judgest, then judge between them with justice, verily, God loves the just. But how should they make thee their judge, when they have the law wherein is God's judgment ? Yet they turn back after that, for they do not believe.

Verily, we have revealed the law in which is guidance and light ; the prophets who were resigned did judge thereby those who were Jews, as did the masters¹ and doctors by what they remembered of the Book of God and by what they were witnesses of. Fear not men, but fear me, and sell not my signs for a little price ; for whoso will not judge by what God has revealed, these be the misbelievers.

¹ See note 2, p. 56.

We have prescribed for thee therein 'a life for a life, and an eye for an eye, and a nose for a nose, and an ear for an ear, and a tooth for a tooth, and for wounds retaliation;' but whoso remits it, it is an expiation for him, but he whoso will not judge by what God has revealed, these be the unjust.

[50] And we followed up the footsteps of these (prophets) with Jesus the son of Mary, confirming that which was before him and the law, and we brought him the gospel, wherein is guidance and light, verifying what was before it of the law, and a guidance and an admonition unto those who fear.

Then let the people of the gospel judge by that which is revealed therein, for whoso will not judge by what God has revealed, these be the evildoers.

We have revealed to thee the Book in truth verifying what was before it, and preserving it; judge then between them by what God has revealed, and follow not their lusts, turning away from what is given to thee of the truth.

For each one of you have we made a law and a pathway; and had God pleased He would have made you one nation, but He will surely try you concerning that which He has brought you. Be ye therefore emulous in good deeds; to God is your return altogether, and He will let you know concerning that wherein ye do dispute.

Wherefore judge thou between them by what God has revealed, and follow not their lusts; but beware lest they mislead thee from part of what God has revealed to thee; yet if they turn back, then know that God wishes to fall on them for some sins of theirs,—verily, many men are evildoers.

[55] Is it the judgment of the Ignorance they crave¹? but who is better than God to judge for people who are sure?

O ye who believe! take not the Jews and Christians for your patrons: they are patrons of each other; but whoso amongst you takes them for patrons, verily, he is of them, and, verily, God guides not an unjust people.

Thou wilt see those in whose hearts is a sickness vieing with them; they say, 'We fear lest there befall us a reverse.' It may be God will give the victory, or an order from Himself, and they may awake repenting of what they thought in secret to themselves.

Those who believe say, 'Are these they who swore by God with their most strenuous oath that they were surely with you?'—their works are in vain and they shall wake the losers.

O ye who believe! whoso is turned away from his religion—God will bring (instead) a people² whom He loves and who love Him, lowly to believers, lofty to unbelievers, strenuous in the way of God, fearing not the blame of him who blames. That is God's grace! He gives it unto whom He pleases, for God both comprehends and knows.

[60] God only is your patron, and His Apostle and those who believe, who are steadfast in prayer and give alms, bowing down. Whoso taketh as patrons God and His apostles and those who believe;—verily, God's crew, they are victorious!

O ye who believe! take not for patrons those who take your religion for a jest or a sport, from amongst those who have been given the Book before and the misbelievers; but fear God if ye be believers. Nor those who, when ye call to prayer, take it for a jest and a sport; that is because they are a people who do not understand.

¹ The time before the Mohammedan dispensation is always so called.

² I. e. to take his place.

Say, 'O people of the Book! do ye disavow us, for aught but that we believe in God, and what was revealed to us before, and for that most of you are evildoers?'

[65] Say, 'Can I declare unto you something worse than retribution from God?' Whomsoever God has cursed and been wroth with—and he has made of them apes and swine—and who worship Tâghût, they are in a worse plight and are more erring from the level path. When they come to you they say, 'We believe;' but they entered in with unbelief, and they went out therewith, and God knows best what they did hide.

Thou wilt see many of them vieing in sin and enmity, and in eating unlawful things,—evil is it that they have done. The masters and their doctors prohibit them from speaking sin and eating unlawful things,—evil is what they have performed.

The Jews say, 'God's hand is fettered;' their hands are fettered and they are cursed for what they said; nay! His hands are outspread, He expends how He pleases! and that which has been sent down to thee from thy Lord will surely increase many of them in their rebellion and misbelief, for we have cast amongst them enmity and hatred till the resurrection day. Whenever they light a fire¹ for war,

¹ The ancient Arabs always lit a beacon-fire as a proclamation of war, or a notice of the approach of an enemy.

God puts it out; they strive for corruption in the earth, but God loves not the corrupt.

[70] But did the people of the Book believe and fear, we would cover their offences, and we would make them enter into gardens of pleasure; and were they steadfast in the law and the gospel, and what has been sent down to them from their Lord, they should eat from above them and below them. Amongst them are a nation who are moderate, but many of them—bad is what they do.

O thou Apostle! preach what has been revealed to thee from thy Lord; if thou do it not thou hast not preached His message, and God will not hold thee free from men; for God guides not people who misbelieve.

Say, 'O people of the Book! ye rest on naught until ye stand fast by the law and the gospel, and what is revealed to you from your Lord.' But what has been revealed to thee from thy Lord will of a surety increase many of them in rebellion and misbelief, vex not thyself then for a people who misbelieve.

Verily, those who believe and those who are Jews, and the Sabæans, and the Christians, whosoever believes in God and the last day, and does what is right, there is no fear for them, nor shall they grieve.

We took a compact of the children of Israel, and we sent to them apostles; every time there came to them an apostle with what their souls loved not, a part of them they did call liars and a part of them they slew.

[75] And they reckoned that there would be no disturbance; but they were blind and deaf! and then

God turned again towards them : and then many amongst them were blind and deaf ! but God saw what they did.

They misbelieve who say, ' Verily, God is the Messiah the son of Mary ; ' but the Messiah said, ' O children of Israel ! worship God, my Lord and your Lord ; ' verily, he who associates aught with God, God hath forbidden him Paradise, and his resort is the Fire, and the unjust shall have none to help them.

They misbelieve who say, ' Verily, God is the third of three ; ' for there is no God but one, and if they do not desist from what they say, there shall touch those who misbelieve amongst them grievous woe.

Will they not turn again towards God and ask pardon of Him ? for God is forgiving and merciful.

The Messiah the son of Mary is only a prophet : prophets before him have passed away ; and his mother was a confessor ; they used both to eat food.— See how we explain to them the signs, yet see how they turn aside !

[80] Say, ' Will ye serve, other than God, what can neither hurt you nor profit you ? ' but God, He both hears and knows.

Say, ' O people of the Book ! exceed not the truth in your religion, and follow not the lusts of a people who have erred before, and who lead many astray, and who go away from the level path. '

Those of the children of Israel who disbelieved were cursed by the tongue of David and Jesus the son of Mary ; that is because they rebelled and did transgress ; they would not desist from the wrong they did ; evil is that which they did. Thou wilt see many of them taking those who disbelieve for their patrons; evil is that which their souls have sent before them, for God's wrath is on them, and in the torment shall they dwell for aye. But had they believed in God and the prophet, and what was revealed to him, they had not taken these for their patrons; but many of them are evildoers.

[85] Thou wilt surely find that the strongest in enmity against those who believe are the Jews and the idolaters; and thou wilt find the nearest in love to those who believe to be those who say, 'We are Christians;' that is because there are amongst them priests and monks, and because they are not proud.

And when they hear what has been revealed to the prophet, you will see their eyes gush with tears at what they recognise as truth therein; and they will say, 'O our Lord! we believe, so write us down amongst the witnesses. Why should we not believe in God and the truth that is given to us, nor desire that our Lord should make us enter with the upright people?'

Therefore has God rewarded them, for what they said, with gardens beneath which rivers flow, to dwell therein for aye; that is the reward of those who do good; but those who disbelieve and say our signs are lies, they are the fellows of hell.

O ye who believe! forbid not the good things which God has made lawful for you, nor transgress; verily, God loves not the transgressors.

[90] But eat of what God has provided you lawfully of good things; and fear God, in whom ye believe.

God will not catch you up for a casual word in your oaths, but He will catch you up for having what ye make deliberate oaths about; and the expiation thereof is to feed ten poor men with the middling food ye feed your families withal, or to clothe them, or to free a neck¹; but he who has not the means, then let him fast three days. That is the expiation of your oaths, when ye have sworn to keep your oaths; thus does God explain to you His signs,—haply ye may be grateful.

O ye who believe! verily, wine, and el mâisar², and statues³, and divining (arrows) are only an abomination of Satan's work; avoid them then that haply ye may prosper. Satan only desires to place enmity and hatred between you by wine and mâisar, and to turn you from the remembrance of God and from prayer; but will ye not desist, and obey God, and obey the apostles, and beware, for if ye turn back then know that our Apostle has only his message to preach?

There is no crime in those who believe and do right, for having tasted food, when they fear God, and believe, and do what is right, and then fear Him, and believe, and then fear, and do good, for God loves those who do good.

[95] O ye who believe! God will try you with something of the game that your hands and your lances take, that God may know who fears Him in secret; and whoso transgresses after that, for him is grievous woe.

O ye who believe! kill not game while ye are on pilgrimage. But he amongst you who kills it purposely, his compensation is the like of that which he has killed, in sheep—of which two equitable persons amongst you shall be judge—an offering brought to the Kaabah; or as an expiation, the food of poor persons, or an equivalent thereof in fasting, that he may taste the evil result of his deed. God pardons bygones; but whoso returns, God will take vengeance on him, for God is mighty and the avenger.

¹ I.e. from the yoke of captivity.

² See note 4, p. 32.

³ This has been thought by strict Musselmans to exclude the game of chess. Sunnîs, however, play the game with plain pieces like drafts, though Persians and Indians are not so scrupulous.

Lawful for you is the game of the sea, and to eat thereof; a provision for you and for travellers; but forbidden you is the game of the land while ye are on pilgrimage; so fear God to whom ye shall be gathered.

God has made the Kaabah, the sacred House, to be a station for men, and the sacred month, and the offering and its neck garland; this is that ye may know that God knows what is in the heavens and what is in the earth, and that God knows all things. Know that God is keen to punish, but that God is forgiving, merciful.

The Apostle has only to preach his message, but God knows what ye show and what ye hide.

[100] Say, 'The vile shall not be deemed equal with the good, although the abundance of the vile please thee.' Fear God then, O ye who have minds! haply ye may prosper.

O ye who believe! ask not about things which if they be shown to you will pain you; but if ye ask about them when the (whole) Qur'ân is revealed, they shall be shown to you. God pardons that, for God is forgiving and clement. People before you have asked about that, yet on the morrow did they disbelieve therein.

And God has not ordained any Ba'hîrah or Sâibah, nor Wazîlah nor 'Hâmî¹, but those who misbelieve invent a lie against God, for most of them do not understand.

And when it is said to them, 'Come round to what God has revealed unto His Apostle,' they say, 'Enough for us is what we found our fathers agreed upon.' What! though their fathers knew nothing and were not guided.

O ye who believe! mind yourselves; he who errs can do you no hurt when ye are guided: unto God is your return altogether, and He will declare to you that which ye do not know.

[105] O ye who believe! let there be a testimony between you when any one of you is on the point of death—at the time he makes his will—two equitable persons from amongst you; or two others from some other folk, if ye be knocking about in the land, and the calamity of death befall you; ye shall shut them both up after prayer, and they shall both swear by

¹ These were the names given to certain animals which were marked and allowed to graze at liberty. Ba'hîrah was the name given to a camel which had had ten young ones; her ear was then slit and she was turned loose to feed. When she died her flesh was eaten by the men only, the women being forbidden to touch it. There were, however, cases in which any she-camel was so called and treated. Sâibah signifies merely a camel turned loose, her being so turned out was generally in fulfilment of a vow. Wazîlah was a term applied to any cattle, including sheep and goats, and generally meant a beast who had brought forth a male and female at the seventh parturition. 'Hâmî was a stallion camel which, after begetting ten young ones, was turned loose. As all these customs were connected with the idolatrous superstitions of the pagan Arabs, and tended to keep alive the rites and beliefs of paganism, Mohammed forbade them, with other similar superstitions.

God, if ye doubt them, (saying), 'We will not sell (our testimony) for a price, though it were to a relative, nor will we hide God's testimony, verily, then, we should be among sinners.' But if it shall be lit upon that they too have deserved the imputation of sin, then let two others stand up in their place with those who think them deserving of the imputation, the nearest two in kin, and they shall both swear by God, 'Indeed, our testimony is truer than the testimony of those two, and we have not transgressed, for then we should surely be of the unjust : ' thus is it easier for men to bear testimony according to the purport thereof, else must they fear lest an oath be given to rebut their own oath ; but let them fear God and listen, for God guides not the people who do ill.

On the day when God shall assemble the apostles and shall say, 'How were ye answered?' they will say, 'We have no knowledge ; verily, thou art He who knoweth the unseen.'

When God said, 'O Jesus, son of Mary! remember my favours towards thee and towards thy mother, when I aided thee with the Holy Ghost, till thou didst speak to men in the cradle and when grown up.

[110] 'And when I taught thee the Book and wisdom and the law and the gospel ; when thou didst create of clay, as it were, the likeness of a bird, by my power, and didst blow thereon, it became a bird ; and thou didst heal the blind from birth, and the leprous by my permission ; and when thou didst bring forth the dead by my permission ; and when I did ward off the children of Israel from thee, when thou didst come to them with manifest signs, and those who misbelieved amongst them said, "This is naught but obvious magic."

'And when I inspired the apostles that they should believe in him and in my Apostle, they said, "We believe; do thou bear witness that we are resigned."'

When the apostles said, 'O Jesus, son of Mary! is thy Lord able to send down to us a table from heaven?' he said, 'Fear God, if ye be believers; and they said, 'We desire to eat therefrom that our hearts may be at rest, and that we may know that what thou hast told us is the truth, and that we may be thereby amongst the witnesses.' Said Jesus the son of Mary, 'O God, our Lord! send down to us a table from heaven to be to us as a festival,—to the first of us and to the last, and a sign from Thee,—and grant us provision, for Thou art the best of providers.'

[115] God said, 'Verily, I am about to send it down to you; but whoso disbelieves amongst you after that, verily, I will torment him with the torment which I have not tormented any one with in all the worlds.'

And when God said, 'O Jesus, son of Mary! is it thou who didst say to men, take me and my mother for two gods, beside God?' He said, 'I celebrate Thy praise! what ails me that I should say what I have no right to? If I had said it, Thou wouldst have known it; Thou knowest what is in my soul, but I know not what is in Thy soul; verily, Thou art one who knoweth the unseen. I never told them save what Thou didst bid me,—"Worship God, my Lord and your Lord," and I was a witness against them so long as I was amongst them; but when Thou didst take me away to thyself Thou wert the watcher over them, for Thou art witness over all. If Thou shouldst punish them, verily, they are Thy servants; if Thou shouldst forgive them, verily, Thou art the mighty and the wise.' God said, 'This is the day when their confession shall profit the confessors, for them are gardens beneath which rivers flow, to dwell therein for ever and for aye.'

God is well pleased with them, and they well pleased with Him; that is the mighty happiness.

[120] God's is the kingdom of the heavens, and the earth, and all that is therein, and He is mighty over all.

THE CHAPTER OF CATTLE¹.

(VI. Mecca.)

In the name of the merciful and compassionate God!

Praise belongs to God who created the heavens and the earth, and brought into being the darkness and the light². Yet do those who misbelieve hold Him to have peers.

He it is who created you from clay; then He decreed a term,—a term³ ordained with Him. And yet ye doubt thereof.

He is God in the heavens and the earth. He knows your secret conduct and your plain, and He knows what ye earn⁴.

¹ So called from the mention which it contains of the superstitious customs of the Arabs with regard to their cattle.

² Said to be a protest against the dualistic doctrine that Light and Darkness were two co-eternal principles.

³ I.e. a term for your life and another for your resurrection.

⁴ By good or evil works.

There came not to them any sign of the signs of their Lord, but they turned away; [5] and they have called the truth a lie now that it has come to them, but there shall come to them the message of that at which they mocked.

Do not they see how many a generation we have destroyed before them, whom we had settled in the earth as we have not settled for you, and sent the rain of heaven upon them in copious showers, and made the waters flow beneath them? Then we destroyed them in their sins, and raised up other generations after them.

Had we sent down to thee a book on paper, and they had touched it with their hands, still those who misbelieve would have said, 'This is naught but obvious magic.' They say, 'Why has not an angel been sent down to him?' but if we had sent down an angel, the affair would have been decided, and then they would have had no respite.

And had we made him¹ an angel, we should have made him as a man too; and we would have made perplexing for them that which they deem perplexing now.

[10] There have been prophets before thee mocked at, but that encompassed them which the scoffers among them mocked at.

Say, 'Go about in the earth, then wilt thou see how has been the end of those who called them liars.'

Say, 'Whose is what is in the heavens and the earth?'

Say, 'God's, who has imposed mercy on himself.'

¹ I.e. the prophet.

He will surely gather you together for the resurrection day. There is no doubt in that, but those who waste their souls¹ will not believe.

His is whatsoever dwells in the night or in the day, He both hears and knows.

Say, 'Other than God shall I take for a patron, the Originator of the heavens and the earth? He feedeth men, but is not fed.' Say, 'I am bidden to be the first of those resigned;' and it was said to me, 'Be not thou of the idolaters.' [15] Say, 'I fear, if I rebel against my Lord, the torment of the mighty day.'

Whomsoever it is averted from on that day, God will have had mercy on; and that is obvious happiness.

And if God touch thee with harm, there is none to take it off but He; and if He touch thee with good, He is mighty over all. He is sovereign over His servants, He is the wise, the aware!

Say, 'What is the greatest witness?' Say, 'God is witness between you and me.' This Qur'ân was inspired to me to warn you and those it reaches. Do ye really bear witness that with God are other gods? Say, 'I bear not witness thereto:' say, 'He is but one God, and I am clear of your associating (gods with him).'

[20] Those to whom we have brought the Book know him² as they know their sons;—those who lose their souls do not believe.

Who is more unjust than he who forges against God a lie, or says His signs are lies? verily, the unjust shall not prosper.

¹ I.e. their innate propensities to good and their reason.

² Mohammed.

On the day when we shall gather them all together, then shall we say to those who have associated others with ourself, 'Where are your associates whom ye did pretend?' Then they will have no excuse but to say, 'By God our Lord, we did not associate (others with thee)!' See how they lie against themselves, and how what they did forge deserts them! [25] And they are some who listen unto thee, but we have placed a veil upon their hearts lest they should understand it, and in their ears is dulness of hearing; and though they saw each sign they would not believe therein; until when they come to thee to wrangle with thee, the unbelievers say, 'These are but old folks' tales.'

They forbid it and they avoid it;—but they destroy none but themselves; yet they do not perceive.

But couldst thou see when they are set over the fire and say, 'Would that we were sent back! we would not call our Lord's signs lies, but we would be of the believers?' Nay! now is shown to them what they did hide before; and could they be sent back, they would return to that they were forbidden, for they are very liars.

They say there is naught but this life of ours in the world and we shall not be raised. [30] But couldst thou see when they are set before their Lord; he says, 'Is not this the truth?' They say, 'Yea, by our Lord!' he says, 'Then taste the torment, for that ye did misbelieve!'

Losers are they who disbelieved in meeting God, until when the hour comes suddenly upon them they say, 'Woe is us for our neglect thereof!' for they shall bear their burdens on their backs, evil is what they bear.

The life of this world is nothing but a game and a sport, and surely the next abode were better for those who fear. What! do they not understand?

Full well we know that verily that which they say grieves thee; but they do not call thee only a liar, for the unjust gainsay the signs of God. Called liars too were apostles before thee; but they were patient of being called liars and of being hurt until our help came to them; for there is none to change the words of God—now has there come to thee the story of those He sent.

[35] And if their turning from thee be hard for thee, and if thou canst seek for a shaft down into the earth, or a ladder up into the sky, to bring them a sign—but if God pleased He would bring them all to guidance, be thou not then of the ignorant.

He only answers the prayer of those who listen; but the dead will God raise up, then unto Him shall they return. They say, 'Unless there be sent down some sign from his Lord'—say, 'Verily, God is able to send down a sign, but most of them do not know.'

There is not a beast upon the earth nor a bird that flies with both its wings, but is a nation like to you; we have omitted nothing from the Book; then to their Lord shall they be gathered. Those who say our signs are lies—deafness, dumbness, in the dark! whom He pleases does God lead astray, and whom He pleases He places on the right way.

[40] Say, 'Look you now! if there should come God's torment, or there should come to you the hour, on other than God would ye call, if ye do tell the truth?' Nay, it is on Him that ye would call, and He will avert that which ye call upon Him for if He but please; and ye shall forget that which ye did associate with Him.

Ere this we sent unto nations before thee, and we caught them in distress and trouble that haply they might humble themselves. And do they not, when our violence falls upon them, humble themselves?—but their hearts were hard, and Satan made seemly to them that which they had done.

And when they forgot what they were reminded of, we opened for them the gates of everything, until when they rejoiced at what they had, we caught them up suddenly, and lo! they were in despair.

[45] And the uttermost part of the people who did wrong were cut off; praise be to God, Lord of the worlds!

Say, 'Look you now! if God should catch your hearing and your sight, and should set a seal upon your hearts—who is god but God to bring you it again?'

Say, 'Look you now! if God's torment should come upon you suddenly or openly, would any perish save the people who do wrong?'

We do not send our messengers save as heralds of glad tidings and of warning, and whoso believes and acts aright, there is no fear for them, and they shall not be grieved, but those who say our signs are lies, torment shall touch them, for that they have done so wrong.

[50] Say, 'I do not say to you, mine are the treasures of God, nor that I know the unseen; I do not say to you, I am an angel—if I follow aught but what I am inspired with—:' say, 'Is the blind equal to him who sees—?' what! do ye not reflect?

Admonish therewith those who fear that they shall be gathered unto their Lord; there is no patron for them but Him, and no intercessor; haply they may fear.

Repulse not those who call upon their Lord in the morning and in the evening, desiring His face; they have no reckoning against thee at all, and thou hast no reckoning against them at all;—repulse them and thou wilt be of the unjust.

So have we tried some of them by others, that they may say, 'Are these those unto whom God has been gracious amongst ourselves?' Does not God know those who give thanks?

And when those who believe in our signs come to thee, say, 'Peace be on you! God hath prescribed for Himself mercy; verily, he of you who does evil in ignorance, and then turns again and does right,—verily, He is forgiving and merciful.'

[55] Thus do we detail our signs, that the way of the sinners may be made plain.

Say, 'I am forbidden to worship those ye call upon beside God;' say, 'I will not follow your lusts, for then should I err and not be of the guided.'

Say, 'I stand on a manifestation from my Lord, which ye call a lie. I have not with me what ye fain would hasten on, that the matter might be settled between me and you; but God knows best who are the unjust.'

With Him are the keys¹ of the unseen. None knows them save He; He knows what is in the land and in the sea ; and there falls not a leaf save that He knows it ; nor a grain in the darkness of the earth, nor aught that is moist, nor aught that is dry, save that is in His perspicuous Book.

¹ Most of the Mohammedan commentators say this word means 'treasuries.' The allusion, however, is obviously to the Rabbinical tradition of the three keys, in the hands of God.

[60] He it is who takes you to Himself at night¹, and knows what ye have gained in the day ; then He raises you up again, that your appointed time may be fulfilled ; then unto Him is your return, and then will He inform you of what ye have done.

He triumphs over His servants ; He sends to them guardian angels, until, when death comes to any one of you, our messengers take him away ; they pass not over any one, and then are they returned to God, their true sovereign.

Is not His the rule ? but He is very quick at reckoning up.

Say, ' Who rescues you from the darkness of the land and of the sea ? ' ye call upon Him in humility and in secret, ' Indeed, if He would rescue us from this, we will surely be of those who give Him thanks.' Say, ' God rescues from the darkness thereof, and from every trouble, yet ye associate others with Him.'

[65] Say, ' He is able to send torment on you from above you and from beneath your feet, and to confuse you in sects, and to make some of you taste the violence of others.'

See how we turn about the signs, that haply they may discriminate. Thy people called it a lie, and yet it is the truth. Say, ' I have not charge over you ; to every prophecy is a set time, and in the end ye shall know.'

¹ In sleep.

When thou dost see those who plunge deeply into the discussion of our signs, turn from them until they plunge deeply into some other discourse; for it may be that Satan may make thee forget; but sit not, after thou hast remembered, with the unjust people.

Those who fear are not bound to take account of them at all, but mind!—haply they may fear.

Leave those who have taken their religion for a play and a sport, whom this world's life hath deceived, and remind them thereby that a soul shall be given up for what it has earned; nor has it, beside God, patron or intercessor; and though it should compensate with the fullest compensation, it would not be accepted. Those who are given up for what they have gained, for them is a drink of boiling water, and grievous woe for that they have misbelieved.

[70] Say, 'Shall we call on what neither profits us nor harms us, and be thrown back upon our heels after God has guided us, like him whom Satan hath led away bewildered in the earth, who has companions who call him to guidance, "Come to us?"' Say, 'Verily, God's guidance is the guidance, and we are bidden to resign ourselves unto the Lord of the worlds, and be ye steadfast in prayer and fear Him, for He it is to whom we shall be gathered.'

He it is who has created the heavens and the earth in truth; and on the day when He says, 'BE,' then it is. His word is truth; to Him is the kingdom on the day when the trumpets shall be blown; the knower of the unseen and of the evident; He is wise and well aware.

When Abraham said to his father Âzar¹, 'Dost thou take idols for gods? verily, I see thee and thy people in obvious error.' [75] Thus did we show Abraham the kingdom of heaven and of the earth, that he should be of those who are sure. And when the night overshadowed him he saw a star and said, 'This is my Lord;' but when it set he said, 'I love not those that set.' And when he saw the moon beginning to rise he said, 'This is my Lord;' but when it set he said, 'If God my Lord guides me not I shall surely be of the people who err.' And when he saw the sun beginning to rise he said, 'This is my Lord, this is greatest of all;' but when it set he said, 'O my people! verily, I am clear of what ye associate with God; verily, I have turned my face to him who originated the heaven and the earth, as a 'Hanîf, and I am not of the idolaters.' [80] And his people disputed with him;—he said, 'Do ye dispute with me concerning God, when He has guided me? but I fear not what ye associate with Him unless my Lord should wish for anything. My Lord doth comprehend all things in His knowledge, will ye not then remember? How should I fear what ye associate with Him, when ye yourselves fear not to associate with God what He has sent down to you no power to do? Which then of the two sects is worthier of belief, if indeed ye know?'

Those who believe and do not obscure their faith with wrong, they are those who shall have security, and they are guided.

¹ The Hebrew Terah is in Arabic Târah. Eusebius gives the form Athar, which may in some measure account for the name here given.

These are our arguments which we gave to Abraham against his people ;—we raise the rank of whom we will ; verily, thy Lord is wise and knowing. And we gave to him Isaac and Jacob, each did we guide. And Noah we guided before and all his seed,—David and Solomon and Job and Joseph and Moses and Aaron,—for thus do we reward those who do good. [85] And Zachariah and John and Jesus and Elias, all righteous ones ; and Ishmael and Elisha and Jonas and Lot, each one have we preferred above the worlds ; and of their fathers and their seed and brethren ; we have chosen them and guided them into a right way.

That is God's guidance ; He guides those whom He will of His servants ; and if they associate aught with Him,—vain is that which they have worked.

It is to these we give the Book and judgment and prophecy ; and if these disbelieve therein we have given them in charge to a people who shall not disbelieve.

[90] It is these that God hath guided, and by their guidance be thou led.

Say, 'I will not ask you for it a hire : it is naught save a reminder to the worlds.'

They do not prize God at His true worth when they say, 'God has never revealed to mortal anything.' Say, 'Who revealed the Book wherewith Moses came, a light and a guidance unto men ? Ye put it on papers which ye show, though ye hide much¹ ; and ye are taught what ye knew not, neither you nor your fathers.' Say, 'God,' then leave them in their discussion to play.

¹ The Jews are here, as frequently in the Qur'ân, accused of suppressing and altering those parts of their scriptures which referred, according to the Mussulman theory, to the mission of Mohammed.

This is the Book which we have revealed, a blessing and a confirmation to those which were before it, and that the mother of cities¹ may be warned, with those who are round about her. Those who believe in the last day believe therein, and they unto their prayers will keep.

Who is more unjust than he who devises against God a lie, or says, 'I am inspired²,' when he was not inspired at all? and who says, 'I will bring down the like of what God has sent down;' but didst thou see when the unjust are in the floods of death, and the angels stretch forth their hands, 'Give ye forth your souls; to-day shall ye be recompensed with the torment of disgrace, for that ye did say against God what was not true, and were too proud to hear His signs³. And ye come now single-handed as we created you at first, and ye have left behind your backs that which we granted you; and we see not with you your intercessors whom ye pretended were partners⁴ amongst you; betwixt you have the ties

¹ Mecca.

² This refers to Abdallah ibn Sa'hd ibn Abî Sar'h, who acted as amanuensis to Mohammed, and when he came to the words 'We have created man from an extract of clay . . . , then we produced it another creation,' he said, 'and blessed be God, best of creators,' and Mohammed told him to write that down too; whereupon he boasted that he also had been inspired with this sentence which Mohammed acknowledged to be part of the Qur'ân.

³ This word is nearly always used for the verses of the Qur'ân.

⁴ That is, partners with God, idols; to associate being the usual phrase in the Qur'ân for idolatry.

been cut asunder; and strayed away from you is what ye did pretend.'

[95] Verily, God it is who cleaves out the grain and the date-stone; He brings forth the living from the dead, and it is He who brings the dead from the living. There is God! how then can ye be beguiled?

He it is who cleaves out the morning, and makes night a repose, and the sun and the moon two reckonings—that is the decree of the mighty, the wise!

He it is who made for you stars that ye might be guided thereby in the darkness of the land and of the sea. Now have we detailed the signs unto a people who do know.

He it is who made you spring from one soul, and gave you a settlement and a depository¹. Now have we detailed the signs unto a people who discern.

He it is who sends down from the heavens water; and we bring forth therewith growths of everything; and we bring forth therefrom green things, wherefrom we bring forth grain in full ear; and the palm, from its spathe come clusters within reach; and gardens of grapes and olives and pomegranates, alike and unlike;—behold its fruit when it fruits and ripens! verily, in that ye have a sign for the people who believe.

[100] Yet they made the ginn² partners with

¹ In the womb.

² Supernatural beings created, like the devils, of fire instead of clay, and possessed of miraculous powers. They are devoutly believed in by Muslims, and are supposed to be subject to the same controlling laws as mankind, and to have also had prophets sent to them. They are probably a survival of some old worship

God, though He created them! and they ascribed to Him sons and daughters, though they have no knowledge; celebrated be His praise! and exalted be He above what they attribute to Him! The inventor of the heavens and the earth! how can He have a son, when He has no female companion, and when He has created everything, and everything He knows?

There is God for you,—your Lord! There is no god but He, the Creator of everything; then worship Him, for He o'er everything keeps guard!

Sight perceives Him not, but He perceives men's sights; for He is the subtle, the aware.

Now has an insight from your Lord come unto you, and he who looks therewith it is for himself; but he who is blind thereto, it is against his soul; and I am not your keeper.

[105] Thus do we turn about the signs, that they may say, 'Thou hast studied,' and that we may explain to those who know.

Follow what is revealed to thee from thy Lord; there is no god but He, and shun the idolaters.

But had God pleased, they would not have associated aught with Him; but we have not made thee a keeper over them, nor art thou for them a warder.

Do not abuse those who call on other than God, for then they may abuse God openly in their ignorance. So do we make seemly to every nation their work, then unto their Lord is their return, and He will inform them of what they have done.

of the powers of nature. The word ginn is the same as that which in the old translation of the Arabian Nights is rendered 'genie.'

They swore by God with their most strenuous oath, that if there come to them a sign they will indeed believe therein. Say, 'Signs are only in God's hands; — but what will make you understand that even when one has come, they will not believe?'

[110] We will overturn their hearts and their eyesights, even as they believed not at first; and we will leave them, in their rebellion, blindly wandering on.

And had we sent down unto them the angels, or the dead had spoken to them, or we had gathered everything unto them in hosts¹, they would not have believed unless that God pleased—but most of them are ignorant.

So have we made for every prophet an enemy,— devils of men and ginns; some of them inspire others with specious speech to lead astray; but had thy Lord pleased they would not have done it; so leave them with what they do devise.

And let the hearts of those who believe not in the hereafter listen to it; and let them be well pleased with it; and let them gain what they may gain!

Of other than God shall I crave a decree, when it is He who has sent down to you the Book in detail, and those to whom we gave the Book know that it is sent down from thy Lord, in truth? be thou not then of those who doubt.

[115] The words of thy Lord are fulfilled in truth and justice; there is none to change His words, for He both hears and knows.

But if thou followest most of those who are in the land, they will lead thee astray from the path of God; they only follow suspicion and they only (rest on) conjecture.

¹ This word may also be rendered 'before them' or 'a surety' (for the truth of the revelation).

Thy Lord, He knows best who errs from His path, and He knows best the guided.

Eat then of what God's name has been pronounced over, if ye believe in His signs. What ails you that ye do not eat from what God's name is pronounced over, when He has detailed to you what is unlawful for you? Save what ye are forced to; but, verily, many will lead you astray by their fancies, without knowledge. Verily, thy Lord knows best the transgressors.

[120] Leave alone the outside of sin and the inside thereof; verily, those who earn sin shall be recompensed for what they have gained.

But eat not of what the name of God has not been pronounced over, for, verily, it is an abomination. Verily, the devils inspire their friends that they may wrangle with you; but if ye obey them, verily, ye are idolaters.

Is he who was dead and we have quickened him, and made for him a light, that he might walk therein amongst men, like him whose likeness is in the darkness whence he cannot come forth? Thus is made seemly to the misbelievers what they have done.

And thus have we placed in every town the great sinners thereof, that they may use craft therein; but they use not craft except against themselves, although they do not understand.

And when there comes to them a sign, they say, 'We will not believe until we are brought like what the apostles were brought;' God knows best where to put His message. There shall befall those who sin, meanness in God's eyes, and grievous torment for the craft they used.

[125] Whomsoever God wishes to guide, He expands His breast to Islâm; but whomsoever He wishes to lead astray, He makes his breast tight and straight, as though he would mount up into heaven¹; thus does God set His horror on those who do not believe.

This is the way of thy Lord—straight. We have detailed the signs unto a mindful people; for them is an abode of peace; and their Lord, He is their patron for what they have done.

And on the day when He shall gather them all together, 'O assembly of the ginns! ye have got much out of mankind.' And their clients from among mankind shall say, 'O our Lord! much advantage had we one from another;' but we reached our appointed time which thou hadst appointed for us. Says He, 'The fire is your resort, to dwell therein for aye! save what God pleases; verily, thy Lord is wise and knowing.'

Thus do we make some of the unjust patrons of the others, for that which they have earned.

[130] O assembly of ginns and men! did there not come to you apostles from among yourselves, relating to you our signs, and warning you of the meeting of this very day of yours? They say, 'We bear witness against ourselves.' The life of this world deceived them, and they bear witness against themselves that they were unbelievers.

¹ That is, makes him appear as one who would attempt some great but impossible thing and fails therein.

That is because thy Lord would never destroy towns unjustly while their people are careless; but for every one are degrees of what they have done; and thy Lord is not careless of that which they do.

Thy Lord is rich, merciful; if He pleases He will take you off, and will cause what He pleases to succeed you; even as He raised you up from the seed of other people.

Verily, what ye are promised will surely come, nor can ye frustrate it.

[135] Say, 'O my people! act according to your power, verily, I am acting too; and soon shall ye know whose is the future of the abode!' verily, the unjust shall not prosper.

They set apart for God, from what He raises of tilth and of cattle, a portion, and they say, 'This is God's;'—as they pretend—'and this is for our associates¹;' but that which is for their associates reaches not to God, and that which was for God does reach to their associates;—evil is it what they judge².

Thus too have their associates made seemly to many of the idolaters the killing of their children³,

¹ I. e. the idols.

² The pagan Arabs used to set apart certain of the produce of their fields to Allah the chief God, and other portions to minor deities of their pantheon. The fruits of the portion of the latter were reserved for the priests, who were careful to restore to their lot anything that might have fallen into that of Allah, but seldom troubled themselves to do the converse. This custom survives to a certain extent in the desert to the present day, where one tree in every district is devoted to patron saints, and allowed to grow untouched, although the others in the neighbourhood are hacked to pieces as food for camels.

³ Alluding both to human sacrifices to idols and the cruel custom of burying female children alive. See Introduction.

to destroy them, and to obscure for them their religion¹; but had God pleased they would not have done it, leave them alone and that which they have forged.

And they say, 'These cattle and tilth are inviolable; none shall taste thereof, save such as we please'—as they pretend—and there are cattle whose backs are prohibited, and cattle over whom God's name is not pronounced,—forging a lie against Him! He shall reward them for what they have forged.

[140] And they say, 'What is in the wombs of these cattle is unlawful for our wives, but if it be (born) dead, then are they partners therein.' He will reward them for their attribution; verily, He is wise and knowing.

Losers are they who kill their children foolishly, without knowledge, and who prohibit what God has bestowed upon them, forging a lie against God; they have erred and are not guided.

He it is who brought forth gardens with trailed² and untrailed vines, and the palms and corn land, with various food, and olives, and pomegranates, alike and unlike. Eat from the fruit thereof whene'er it fruits, and bring the dues thereof on the day of harvest, and be not extravagant; verily, He loves not the extravagant.

Of cattle are there some to ride on and to spread³. Eat of what God has bestowed upon you, and follow

¹ That is, to obscure what little trace it had of the original faith of Abraham the 'Hanîf.

² Trailed over an 'Arîsh, that is, a sort of hut made of boughs.

³ That is, spread out when slaughtered, or from the hides and wool, &c., of which a bed (farsh) is made.

not the footsteps of Satan; verily, he is to you an open foe.

Eight pairs,—of sheep two, and of goats two; say, 'Are the two males unlawful, or the two females, or what the wombs of the two females contain? inform me with knowledge if ye tell the truth.' [145] And of camels two, and cows two; say, 'Are the two males unlawful, or the two females, or what the wombs of the two females contain? Were ye witnesses when God ordained for you these?—Then who is more unjust than he who devises a lie against God, to lead men astray without knowledge? verily, God guides not the unjust people¹.'

Say, 'I cannot find in what I am inspired with anything unlawful for the taster to taste; unless it be dead (of itself), or blood that has been shed, or the flesh of swine,—for that is a horror—or an abomination that is consecrated to other than God. But he who is forced, not wilfully nor transgressing,—then, verily, thy Lord is forgiving and merciful.'

To those who were Jews did we prohibit everything that hath a solid hoof; and of oxen and sheep did we prohibit to them the fat, save what the backs of both do bear, or the inwards, or what is mixed with bone; with that did we recompense them for their rebellion, for, verily, we are true.

And if they give thee the lie, say, 'Your Lord is of ample mercy, nor shall His violence be turned back from the sinful people.'

¹ The Arabs alternately made it unlawful to eat the males, and then the young of these four kinds of cattle. Mohammed in this passage shows the absurdity of their custom by pointing out the difficulty of deciding which is lawful and unlawful in the case of eight pairs.

Those who associate others with God will say, 'Had God pleased, we had not so associated, nor our fathers; nor should we have forbidden aught.' Thus did they give the lie to those who came before them, until they tasted of our violence! Say, 'Have ye any knowledge? if so, bring it forth to us: ye only follow suspicion, and ye do but conjecture.'

[150] Say, 'God's is the searching argument; and had He pleased He would have guided you all.'

• Say, 'Come on then with your witnesses, who bear witness that God has prohibited these!' but if they do bear witness, bear thou not witness with them; nor follow the lust of those who say our signs are lies, and those who do not believe in the last day, or those who for their Lord make peers.

Say, 'Come! I will recite what your Lord has forbidden you, that ye may not associate aught with Him, and (may show) kindness to your parents, and not kill your children through poverty;—we will provide for you and them;—and draw not nigh to flagrant sins, either apparent or concealed, and kill not the soul, which God hath forbidden save by right¹; that is what God ordains you, haply ye may understand.'

And draw not nigh unto the wealth of the orphan, save so as to better it, until he reaches full age; and give weight and measure with justice. We do not compel the soul save what it can compass; and when ye pronounce, then be just, though it be in the case of a relative.

And God's compact fulfil ye; that is what He ordained you, haply ye may be mindful. Verily, this is my right way; follow it then, and follow not various paths, to separate yourselves from His way; that is what He has ordained you, haply ye may fear!

¹ That is, commit no homicide unless it be by legal execution or the slaying of infidels in war.

[155] Then we gave Moses the Book, complete for him who acts aright, and a decision and a guidance and a mercy; haply in the meeting of their Lord they will believe.

This is the Book which we have sent down; it is a blessing; follow it then and fear; haply ye may obtain mercy. Lest ye say, 'The Book was only sent down to two sects before us; verily, we, for what they read, care naught.' Or, lest ye should say, 'Had we had a book revealed to us we should surely have been more guided than they;' but there is come to them a manifest sign from their Lord, and a guidance and a mercy; who then is more unjust than he who calls God's signs lies, and turns from them? we will reward those who turn from our signs with an evil punishment for that they turned away.

What do they expect but that the angels should come for them, or that thy Lord should come, or that some signs¹ of thy Lord should come? On the day when some signs do come, its faith shall profit no soul which did not believe before, unless it has earned some good by its faith. Say, 'Wait ye expectant, then we wait expectant too.'

[160] Verily, those who divided their religion and became sects, thou hast not to do with them, their matter is in God's hands, He will yet inform them of that which they have done.

¹ Signs of the approach of the day of judgment.

He who brings a good work shall have ten like it; but he who brings a bad work shall be recompensed only with the like thereof, for they shall not be wronged.

Say, 'As for me, my Lord has guided me to the right way, a right religion,—the faith of Abraham the 'Hanîf, for he was not of the idolaters.'

Say, 'Verily, my prayers and my devotion and my life and my death belong to God, the Lord of the worlds. He has no partner; that is what I am bidden; for I am first of those who are resigned.'

Say, 'Other than God shall I crave for a Lord when He is Lord of all?' but no soul shall earn aught save against itself¹; nor shall one bearing a burden bear the burden of another; and then unto your Lord is your return, and He will inform you concerning that whereon ye do dispute.

[165] He it is who made you vicegerents, and raised some of you above others in degree, to try you by that which he has brought you;—verily, thy Lord is swift to punish, but, verily, He is forgiving and merciful.

¹ Not receive the recompense of other than persons' evil actions.

THE CHAPTER OF AL AARÂF¹.

(VII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

A. L. M. S. A book revealed to thee,—so let there be no straitness in thy breast, that thou mayest warn thereby,—and a reminder to the believers.

Follow what has been revealed to you from your Lord, and follow not beside Him patrons; little is it that ye mind.

Yet how many a town have we destroyed, and our violence came upon it by night, or while they slept at noon; and their cry, when our violence came upon them, was only to say, 'Verily, we were unjust!' [5] But we will of a surety question those to whom the prophets were sent, and we will narrate to them with knowledge, for we were not absent. The balance on that day is true, and whosoever scales are heavy, they are prosperous; but whosoever scales are light, they it is who lose themselves, for that they did act unjustly by our signs.

We have established you in the earth, and we have made for you therein livelihoods; little is it that ye thank; [10] and we created you, then we fashioned you, then we said unto the angels, 'Adore Adam,' and they adored, save Iblîs, who was not of those who did adore.

Said He, 'What hinders thee from adoring when ¹ The name of the bridge between heaven and hell described in this chapter.

I order thee?' he said, 'I am better than he; Thou hast created me from fire, and him Thou hast created out of clay.'

Said He, 'Then go down therefrom; what ails thee that thou shouldst be big with pride therein? go forth! verily, thou art of the little ones.'

He said, 'Respite me until the day when they shall be raised.' He said, 'Verily, thou art of the respited;' [15] said he, 'For that Thou hast led me into error, I will lie in wait for them in Thy straight path; then I will surely come to them, from before them and from behind them; and most of them Thou shalt not find thankful.' He said, 'Go forth therefrom, despised, expelled; whoso follows thee, I will surely fill hell with you altogether. But, O Adam, dwell thou and thy wife in Paradise and eat from whence ye will, but draw not nigh unto this tree or ye will be of the unjust.'

But Satan whispered to them to display to them what was kept back from them of their shame, and he said, 'Your Lord has only forbidden you this tree lest ye should be twain angels, or should become of the immortals;' [20] and he swore to them both, 'Verily, I am unto you a sincere adviser;' and he beguiled them by deceit, and when they twain tasted of the tree, their shame was shown them, and they began to stitch upon themselves the leaves of the garden. And their Lord called unto them, 'Did I not forbid you from that tree there, and say to you, Verily, Satan is to you an open foe?' They said, 'O our Lord! we have wronged ourselves—and if Thou dost not forgive us and have mercy on us, we shall surely be of those who are lost!' He said, 'Go ye down, one of you to the other a foe; but for you in the earth there is an abode, and a provision for a season.' He said, 'Therein shall ye live and therein shall ye die, from it shall ye be brought forth.'

[25] O sons of Adam! we have sent down to you garments wherewith to cover your shame, and plumage¹; but the garment of piety, that is better. That is one of the signs of God, haply ye may remember.

O sons of Adam! let not Satan infatuate you as he drove your parents out of Paradise, stripping from them their garments, and showing them their shame; verily, he sees you—he and his tribe, from whence ye cannot see them. Verily, we have made the devils patrons of those who do not believe, and when they commit an abomination they say, 'We found our fathers at this, and God bade us do it.'

Say, 'God bids you not to do abomination; do ye say against God that which ye do not know?'

Say, 'My Lord bids only justice:—set steadfastly you faces at every mosque and pray to Him, being sincere in your religion. As He brought you forth in the beginning, shall ye return. A sect He guides, and for a sect of them was error due; verily, they did take the devils for their patrons instead of God, and they did count that they were guided.'

O sons of Adam! take your ornaments to every mosque²; and eat and drink, but do not be extravagant, for He loves not the extravagant.

[30] Say, 'Who has prohibited the ornaments of God which He brought forth for His servants, and the good things of His providing?' say, 'On the day of judgment they shall only be for those who believed when in the life of this world¹. Thus do we detail the signs unto a people that do know.

¹ I. e. fine dresses.

² That is, wear your best apparel in the mosque.

Say, 'My Lord has only prohibited abominable deeds, the apparent thereof and the concealed thereof, and sin, and greed for that which is not right, and associating with God what He has sent down no power for, and saying against God that which ye do not know.'

Every nation has its appointed time, and when their appointed time comes they cannot keep it back an hour, nor can they bring it on.

O sons of Adam! verily, there will come to you apostles from amongst you, narrating unto you my signs; then whoso fears God and does what is right, there is no fear for them, nor shall they grieve. But those who say my signs are lies, and who are too big with pride for them, these are the fellows of the Fire, they shall dwell therein for aye!

[35] Who is more unjust than he who devises against God a lie, or says His signs are lies? These, their portion of the Book shall reach them², until when our messengers come to take their souls away, and say, 'Where is what ye used to call upon instead of God?' they say, 'They have strayed away from us;' and they shall bear witness against themselves that they have been misbelievers.

He will say, 'Enter ye—amongst the nations who ¹ Whereas now idolaters share in the good things of this world; but on the day of judgment those only shall enjoy them who were believers here.

² That is, they shall have whatever portion of good or evil is written for them in the book of their fate.

have passed away before you, both of *ginns*¹ and men—into the fire;’ whenever a nation enters therein, it curses its mate²; until, when they have all reached it, the last of them will say unto the first, ‘O our Lord! these it was who led us astray, give them double torment of the fire!’ He will say, ‘To each of you double! but ye do not know.’ And the first of them will say unto the last, ‘Ye have no preference over us, so taste ye the torment for that which ye have earned!’

Verily, those who say our signs are lies and are too big with pride for them; for these the doors of heaven shall not be opened, and they shall not enter into Paradise until a camel shall pass into a needle’s eye.

It is thus that we reward the sinners; for them is a couch of hell-fire, with an awning above them! thus do we reward the unjust!

[40] But those who believe and do what is right—we will not oblige a soul more than its capacity—they are the fellows of Paradise, they shall dwell therein for aye.

We will strip away what ill feeling is in their breasts—there shall flow beneath them rivers, and they shall say, ‘Praise belongs to God who guided us to this! for we should not have been guided had not God guided us!—the apostles of our Lord did come to us with truth!’ And it shall be cried out to them, ‘This is Paradise which ye have as an inheritance for that which ye have done!’ And the fellows of Paradise will call out to the fellows of the Fire, ‘We have now found that what our Lord promised us is true; have ye found that what your

¹ See p. 127, note 2.

² Literally, his sister.

Lord promised you is true ?' They will say, 'Yea !' And a crier from amongst them will cry out, 'The curse of God is on the unjust who turn from the way of God and crave to make it crooked, while in the hereafter they do disbelieve !'

And betwixt the two there is a veil, and on al Aarâf are men who know each by marks ; and they shall cry out to the fellows of Paradise, 'Peace be upon you !' they cannot enter it although they so desire. [45] But when their sight is turned towards the fellows of the Fire, they say, 'O our Lord ! place us not with the unjust people.' And the fellows on al Aarâf will cry out to the men whom they know by their marks, and say, 'Of no avail to you were your collections, and what ye were so big with pride about ; are these those ye swore that God would not extend mercy to ? Enter ye Paradise ; there is no fear for you, nor shall ye be grieved.'

But the fellows of the Fire shall cry out to the fellows of Paradise, 'Pour out upon us water, or something of what God has provided you with¹.' They will say, 'God has prohibited them both to those who misbelieve ; who took their religion for a sport and a play ; whom the life of the world beguiled.'—To-day do we forget them as they forgot the meeting of this day, and for that they did deny our signs !

[50] Now we have brought them a book explaining it in knowledge, a guidance and a mercy to a people who believe.

Do they wait now for aught but its interpretation?—on the day when its interpretation shall come, those who forgot it before will say, 'There did come to us the apostles of our Lord in truth, have we intercessors to intercede for us? or, could we return, we would do otherwise than we did.' They have lost themselves, and that which they devised has strayed away from them.

¹ The fruits of Paradise.

Verily, your Lord is God who created the heavens and the earth in six days; then He made for the Throne¹. He covers night with the day—it pursues it incessantly—and the sun and the moon and the stars are subject to His bidding. Aye!—His is the creation and the bidding,—blessed be God the Lord of the worlds!

Call on your Lord humbly and secretly, verily, He loves not the transgressors. And do not evil in the earth after it has been righted; and call upon Him with fear and earnestness; verily, the mercy of God is nigh unto those who do well.

[55] He it is who sends forth the winds as heralds before His mercy; until when they lift the heavy cloud which we drive to a dead land, and send down thereon water, and bring forth therewith every kind of fruit;—thus do we bring forth the dead; haply ye may remember.

And the good land brings forth its vegetation by the permission of its Lord; and that which is vile brings forth naught but scarcity. Thus do we turn about our signs for a people who are grateful.

We did send Noah unto his people, and he said, 'O my people! serve God, ye have no god but Him; verily, I fear for you the torment of the mighty day.' Said the chiefs of his people, 'Verily, ¹ The highest heaven is so called.

we do surely see you in obvious error.' Said he, 'O my people! there is no error in me; but I am an apostle from the Lord of the worlds. [60] I preach to you the messages of my Lord, and I give you sincere advice; and I know from God what ye know not. What! do ye wonder that there came to you a reminder from your Lord by a man from amongst yourselves, to warn you, and that ye may fear? but haply ye may receive mercy.'

But they called him a liar, and we rescued him and those who were with him in the ark; and we drowned those who said our signs were lies, verily, they were a blind people.

And unto 'Âd¹ (we sent) their brother Hûd², who said, 'O my people! serve God, ye have no god save Him; what! will ye not then fear?' Said the chiefs of those who misbelieved amongst his people, 'Verily, we see thee in folly, and, verily, we certainly think thou art of the liars.' [65] He said, 'O my people! there is no folly in me; but I am an apostle from the Lord of the worlds; I preach to you the messages of your Lord; and, verily, I am to you a faithful adviser. What! do ye then wonder that there comes to you a reminder from your Lord by a man from amongst yourselves, to warn you? remember when He made you vicegerents after Noah's people and increased you in length of stature; remember, then, the benefits of God,— haply ye may prosper!' They said, 'Hast thou come to us that we may worship God alone, and leave what our fathers used to worship? then bring us what thou dost threaten us with, if thou art of those who tell the truth!' He said, 'There shall fall upon you from your Lord horror and wrath; do ye wrangle with me about names, which ye and your fathers have named yourselves, for which God sent down no power; wait then expectant, and I with you will wait expectant too! [70] But we rescued him and those with him, by mercy from ourselves, and we cut off the hindermost parts of those who said our signs were lies and who were not believers.'

¹ An extinct tribe of the ancient Arabs,

² Hûd and Thamûd, both mentioned in the works of Ptolemy, were two tribes of the ancient Arabs, extinct in Mohammed's time, whose disappearance had been attributed, by popular tradition, to divine vengeance.

Unto Thamûd (we sent) their brother Zâli'h, who said, 'O my people! worship God; ye have no god but Him: there has come to you a manifest sign from your Lord. This she-camel of God's is a sign for you; leave her then to eat in the land of God, and touch her not with evil, or there will overtake you grievous woe. And remember how he made you vicegerents after 'Âd and stablished you in the earth, so that ye took for yourselves castles on its plains and hewed out mountains into houses¹; and remember the benefits of God, and waste not the land, despoiling it.' Said the chiefs of those who were big with pride from amongst his people to those who were weak,—to those amongst them who believed, 'Do ye know that Zâli'h is sent from his Lord?' They said, 'We do believe in that with which he is sent.' Said those who were big with pride, 'Verily, in what ye do believe we disbelieve.'

¹ Referring to the numerous excavated rock-dwellings in Idumaea.

[75] Then they did hamstring the camel, and rebelled against the bidding of their Lord and said, 'O Zâli'h! bring us what thou didst threaten us with, if thou art of those who are sent.' Then the earthquake took them, and in the morning they lay prone in their dwellings; and he turned away from them and said, 'O my people! I did preach to you the message of my Lord, and I gave you good advice; but ye love not sincere advisers¹.'

¹ All that has been hitherto written about the legend Zâli'h and his camel is pure conjecture; the native commentators add nothing but a few marvellous details to the story as given in the Qur'ân, and the European annotators can only suggest possible identifications for Zâli'h himself, such as the Schelah of Gen. xi. 13. My own view of the matter is of course an hypothesis too, but it has at least some circumstantial evidence in its favour; it is embodied in the following extract from my 'Desert of the Exodus,' p. 50: 'Near El Watfeyh is situated the tomb of Nebi Sáleh, a wretched little building, but accounted by the Bedawin one of the most sacred spots on the Peninsula (of Sinai). Hither they resort in great numbers at certain seasons of the year to perform ceremonies and sacrificial rites. Who and what was Nebi Sáleh, "the Prophet Sáleh," or, as his name implies, "the Righteous Prophet?" A great saint with the Bedawin, perhaps the ancestor of the Sawáliheh tribe, who are named after him; but this explanation is vague and unsatisfactory, and in the absence of any certain information on the subject I will venture to propound a theory. I must premise that near the summit of Jebel Musa is a peculiar mark in the stone which has a strong resemblance to the imprint of a camel's foot. It is regarded by the Bedawin with great veneration, and the girls, when tending their flocks on the mountains, often milk their goats into it as a sure means of obtaining increase and prosperity. This mark is called Athar Nágat en Nebí, "the footprint of the Prophet's She-camel." It is generally taken for granted that the Prophet in question is Mohammed, but to my mind there are several circumstances which seem to connect the Nebi Sáleh of the tomb with the prophet of the legend. A Bedawin's notions of the separate identity of Moses, Elias, and Sáleh are of the vaguest

And Lot, when he said to his people, 'Do ye approach an abomination which no one in all the world ever anticipated you in? verily, ye approach men with lust rather than women—nay, ye are a people who exceed.' [80] But his people's answer only was to say, 'Turn them out of your village, verily, they are a people who pretend to purity.' But we saved him and his people, except his wife, who was of those who lingered; and we rained down upon them a rain;—see then how was the end of the sinners!

And unto Midian did we send their brother kind, and if asked to which of his national saints the camel belonged you will find that he has never even thought of the question at all. There is no point in attributing the mysterious footprint to the camel of Mohammed, for the celebrated "night journey" to heaven, the Prophet's only recorded aeronautic trip, was performed on Borák, a creature with the feet of a mule. But Mohammed has a legend in the Qur'ân of a certain "Nebi Sáleh," who was sent as a prophet to the people of Thamûd, and whose divine mission was attested by the production of a she-camel from the rock. The author of "El Islâm" certainly did visit the Sinaitic mountains, and may in all probability have taken the story from the national traditions of the Peninsula. The origin and history of Nebi Sáleh is quite unknown to the present Bedawin inhabitants, but they nevertheless regard him with more national veneration than even Moses himself. I should therefore conclude that the Nebi Sáleh of the tomb in Wády es Sheikl, the prophet of the camel's footprint, and the Sáleh of the Qur'ân are identical, and that the "people of Thamûd" are the Saracen inhabitants of Sinai, who preceded the Mohammedan invasion. Who then was Nebi Sáleh? Looking at the veneration in which his memory is held, and at the character of the miracle attributed to him—the rock smitten with a rod, and a live camel, the greatest of Bedawin blessings, miraculously produced therefrom—with the subsequent rebellion of the people for whom the Prophet worked the sign, I fancy we may recognise in the tradition a distorted reminiscence of the Israelitish lawgiver himself.

Sho'hâib¹, who said, 'O my people! serve God, ye have no god save Him. There has come to you a manifest sign from your Lord; then give good weight and measure, and be not niggardly of your gifts to men, and do not evil in the earth after it has been righted. That is better for you if ye are believers; and sit not down in every path, threatening and turning from the path of God those who believe in Him, and craving to make it crooked. Remember when ye were few and He multiplied you; and see what was the end of the evildoers! [85] And if there be a party of you who believe in what I am sent with, and a party who believe not, then wait patiently until God judges between us, for He is the best of judges.' Said the crowd of those who were big with pride amongst His people, 'We will of a surety turn thee out, O Sho'hâib! and those who believe with thee, from our village; or else thou shalt return unto our faith.' Said he, 'What even if we be averse therefrom? We shall have devised a lie against God if we return unto your faith, after God has saved us from it; and what should ail us that we should return thereto, unless that God our Lord should please? our Lord embraces everything in His knowledge;—on God do we rely. O our Lord! open between us and between our people in truth, for Thou art the best of those who open².' And the chiefs of those who disbelieved amongst his people said, 'If ye follow Sho'hâib, verily, ye shall be the losers;' then there took them the earthquake, and in the morning they lay in their dwellings prone. [90] Those who called Sho'hâib a liar, (were) as though they had not dwelt therein!—Those who called Sho'hâib a liar, they were the losers then! And he turned away from them and said, 'O my people! I preached to you the messages of my Lord, and I gave you good advice; how should I be vexed for a people who do misbelieve?'

¹ The Jethro of the Bible.

² That is, 'give us a chance,' the idiom is still current in modern parlance. A shopkeeper, for instance, who has not sold anything all day, or who refuses a bargain, always says yefta'h'allah, 'never mind! God will give me a chance of selling it.'

We have not sent unto a city any prophet except we overtook the people thereof with trouble and distress, that haply they might humble themselves; and then did we give them, in exchange for evil, good, until they increased and said, 'Distress and joy both touched our fathers;' then we overtook them suddenly ere they could perceive.—Had the people of the town but believed and feared, we would have opened up for them blessings from the heavens and from the earth; but they said it was a lie, so we overtook them for that which they had earned.

[95] Were the people of these cities then secure that our violence would not come on them by night, while they slept? were the people of these cities secure that our violence would not come on them in the morning whilst they played? were they secure from the craft of God? none feel secure from the craft of God except a people that shall lose.

Is it not shown to those who inherit the earth after its (former) people, that, did we please, we would smite¹ them in their sins, and would set a stamp upon their hearts, and then they should not hear?

¹ The word is used of an arrow that hits a mark, and hence of any sudden calamity that falls on a man.

These cities, we do relate to thee their stories. There came to them our apostles with manifest signs; but they did not at all believe in what they called a lie before.—Thus doth God set a stamp upon the hearts of those who misbelieve.

[100] Nor did we find in most of them a covenant; but we did find most of them workers of abomination.

Then we raised up after them Moses with our signs to Pharaoh and his chiefs; but they dealt unjustly therewith, and see what was the end of the evildoers!

Moses said, 'O Pharaoh! verily, I am an apostle from the Lord of the worlds; it is not right for me to speak against God aught but the truth. I have come to you with a manifest sign from my Lord; send then the children of Israel with me.' Said he, 'If thou hast come with a sign, then bring it, if thou art of those who speak the truth.' Then he threw his rod down, and lo! it was an obvious snake; [105] and he drew out his hand, and lo! it was white to the beholders. Said the chiefs of Pharaoh's people, 'Verily, this is surely a knowing magician; he desires to turn you out of your land;—what is it then ye bid?' They said, 'Give him and his brother some hope; and send into the cities to collect and bring you every knowing magician.' [110] And the magician came to Pharaoh and said, 'Is there indeed a reward for us if we are conquerors?' He said, 'Yea! and ye shall be of those who draw nigh unto me.' They said, 'O Moses! wilt thou cast down (thy rod) or shall we be (first) to throw?' Said he, 'Throw down;' and when they threw down, they did enchant the people's eyes, and made them dread, and brought a mighty magic. But we inspired Moses (saying), 'Throw down thy rod, and it will gulp down that which they devise;' [115] and the truth stood fast, and vain was that which they had done; and they were conquered there, and turned back feeling small! and the magicians threw themselves down adoring. Said they, 'We believe in the Lord of the worlds, the Lord of Moses and Aaron!' [120] Said Pharaoh, 'Do ye believe in him ere I give you leave? This is craft which ye have devised in the land, to turn its people out therefrom, but soon shall ye know! I will cut off your hands and your feet from opposite sides, then I will crucify you altogether!' They said, 'Verily, we unto our Lord return! nor dost thou take vengeance on us, save for that we believe in the signs of our Lord, when they come to us.

'O our Lord! pour out upon us patience, and take us to Thyself resigned¹.' And the chiefs of Pharaoh's people said, 'Will ye leave Moses and his people to do evil in the land, and to leave thee and thy gods?' Said he, 'We will have their sons slain and their women we will let live, for, verily, we are triumphant over them.'

[125] Said Moses unto his people, 'Ask for aid from God and be patient; verily, the earth is God's! He gives it for an inheritance to whom He pleases of His servants, and the future is for those who fear.' They said, 'We have been hurt before thou didst come to us, and since thou hast come to us.' Said he, 'It may be that your Lord will destroy your foe, and will make you succeed him in the earth; and He will see how ye act.'

¹ Or, cause us to die Moslems.

We had overtaken Pharaoh's people with the years (of dearth) and scarcity of fruits, that haply they might remember; but when there came to them a good thing they said, 'This is ours;' and if there befel them an evil, they took the augury from Moses and those with him;—is not their augury only in God's hands?—but most of them know not.

And they said, 'Whatever thou dost bring us as a sign to enchant us therewith, yet will we not believe in thee.'

[130] Then we sent upon them the flood and the locusts and the lice and the frogs and the blood,—signs detailed; but they were big with pride and were a people who did sin.

And when there fell upon them the plague, they said, 'O Moses! call upon thy Lord for us, as He has covenanted with thee; verily, if thou dost remove the plague from us, we will believe in thee; and we will assuredly send with thee the children of Israel.' But when we removed from them the plague until the appointed time which they should reach, lo! then they broke their promise. But we took vengeance on them, and we drowned them in the sea, for that they said our signs were lies and were careless thereof. And we gave as an inheritance unto the people who had been weak, the eastern quarters of the earth and the western quarters thereof, which we had blest; and the good word of thy Lord was fulfilled on the children of Israel, for that they were patient; and we destroyed that which Pharaoh and his people had made and that which they had piled¹. And with the children of Israel we passed across the sea ; and they came unto a people devoted to their idols, and said, ' O Moses ! make for us a god as they have gods.' Said he, ' Verily, ye are ignorant people.' [135] Verily, these—destroyed shall be that which they are given to ; and vain is that which they have done.

¹ The word y'arishûn is properly used of making wooden huts,

He said, ' Other than God then do ye crave for a god, when He has preferred you above the worlds ?'

And when we saved you from Pharaoh's people who wrought you evil woe, killing your sons, and letting your women live ; and in that was a mighty trial from your Lord.

And we appointed for Moses thirty nights, and completed them with ten (more), so that the time appointed by his Lord was completed to forty nights. And Moses said unto his brother Aaron, ' Be thou my vicegerent amongst my people, and do what is right, and follow not the path of the evildoers.'

And when Moses came to our appointment, and his Lord spake unto him, he said, ' O my Lord ! show me,—that I may look on thee !' He said, ' Thou canst not see me ; but look upon the mountain, and if it remain steady in its place, thou shalt see me ;' but when his Lord appeared unto the mountain He made it dust, and Moses fell down in a swoon !

[140] And when he came to himself, he said, ' Celebrated be thy praise ! I turn repentant unto Thee, and I am the first of those who are resigned.'

He said, ' O Moses ! verily, I have chosen thee over the people with my messages and my words, take then what I have brought thee, and be of those but is here applied to any structures, especially the massive temples and other piles of Egyptian buildings.

who thank.' And we wrote for him upon tablets an admonition concerning everything, and a detailing of everything: 'Take them then with firmness, and bid thy people take them for what is best thereof. I will show you the abode of those who work abominations; I will turn from my signs those who are big with pride in the earth without right; and if they see every sign they shall not believe therein, and if they see the path of rectitude they shall not take it for a path; but if they see the path of error they shall take it for a path;—that is because they have said our signs are lies and have been careless of them.'

[145] But those who say our signs and the meeting of the last day are lies,—vain are their works: shall they be rewarded save for that which they have done?

And Moses' people after him took to themselves of their ornaments a corporeal calf that lowed¹; did they not see that it could not speak with them, nor could it guide them in the path? They took it and they were unjust; but when they bit their hands with fruitless rage and saw that they had gone astray, they said, 'Verily, if our Lord have not compassion on us and forgive us we shall surely be of those who lose!'

And when Moses returned unto his people angry and grieved, he said, 'Evil is it that ye have done after me! Would ye hasten on the bidding of your Lord?' and he threw down the tablets and took his brother by the head to drag him towards him, but he said, 'O son of my mother! verily, the people weakened me and well-nigh killed me; make not then mine enemies glad about me, and put me not with the unjust people.' [150] He said, 'O Lord! pardon me and my brother, and let us enter into Thy mercy; for Thou art the most merciful of the merciful. Verily, these have taken to themselves a calf; there shall reach them wrath from their Lord, and abasement in the life of this world; for thus do we reward those who forge a lie. But those who have done bad works, and then turn again after them and believe,—verily, thy Lord, after that, is forgiving and merciful.'

¹ This is also a Talmudic legend.

And when Moses' wrath calmed down he took the tables, in the inscription of which was guidance and mercy for those who dread their Lord.

And Moses chose from his people seventy men for our appointment; and when the earthquake took them he said, 'O my Lord! hadst Thou willed, Thou hadst destroyed them before and me. Wilt Thou destroy us for what the fools amongst us have done? This is naught but Thy trial, wherewith Thou dost lead astray whom Thou pleasest and guidest whom Thou pleasest; Thou art our patron! forgive us and have mercy on us, for Thou art the best of those who do forgive!

[155] 'And write down for us in this world good, and in the future too; verily, we are guided unto Thee.' He said, 'My punishment—with it I fall on whom I will; and my mercy embraceth everything; and I will write it down for those who fear, and who give alms, and those who in our signs believe,—who follow the Apostle—the illiterate prophet¹, whom they find written down with them in the law and the gospel, bidding them what is reasonable and forbidding them what is wrong, and making lawful for them what is good, and making unlawful evil things; and setting down for them their burdens and the yokes which were upon them;—to those who believe in him and aid him and help him and follow the law which has been sent down with him—they shall be the prosperous.’

¹ Or, the apostle of the Gentiles.

Say, ‘O ye folk! verily, I am the Apostle of God unto you all,’—of Him whose is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth, there is no god but He! He quickens and He kills! believe then in God and His Apostle, the illiterate prophet,—who believes in God and in His words—then follow him that haply ye may be guided.

Amongst Moses’ people is a nation guided in truth, and thereby act they justly.

[160] And we cut them up into twelve tribes, each a nation; and we revealed unto Moses, when his people asked him for drink, ‘Strike with thy staff the rock!’ and there gushed forth from it twelve springs, each folk knew their drinking place. And we overshadowed them with the cloud; and sent down upon them the manna and the quails, ‘Eat of the good things we have provided you with!’—Yet they did not wrong us, but it was themselves they wronged.

And when it was said unto them, ‘Dwell in this city and eat therefrom as ye will, and say hittatun and enter the gate adoring; so will we pardon you your sins;—we will increase those who do well.’ But those amongst them who did wrong changed it for another word than which was said to them; and we sent upon them a plague from heaven for that they were unjust.

Ask them too about the city which stood by the sea, when they transgressed upon the Sabbath; when their fish came to them on the Sabbath day sailing straight up to them; but on the days when they kept not the Sabbath, they came not to them, thus did we try them for the abominations that they wrought¹.

And when a nation from amongst them said, 'Why do ye warn a people whom God would destroy, or punish with severe torment?' they said, 'As an excuse to your Lord, that haply they may fear.' [165] But when they forgot what they had been reminded of, we saved those who forbade evil, but we overtook those who did wrong with punishment;—evil was the abomination that they did, but when they rebelled against what they were forbidden, we said to them, 'Become ye apes, despised and spurned!' and then thy Lord proclaimed that He would surely send against them till the resurrection day, those who should wreak them evil torment; verily, thy Lord is quick at following up, but, verily, He is forgiving, merciful.

We cut them up in the earth into nations. Of them are the righteous, and of them are the reverse of that; we have tried them with good things and with bad things; haply they may return.

But there succeeded them successors who inherited the Book! They take the goods of this lower world and say, 'It will be forgiven us.' But if the like goods came to them they would take them too! Was there not taken from them a covenant by the Book, that they should not say against God aught but the truth? Yet they study therein! But the abode of the future life is better for those who fear—do ye not then understand? But those who hold fast by the Book and are steadfast in prayer—verily, we will not waste the hire of those who do right.

¹ Cf. Chapter II, 61.

[170] And when we shook the mountain over them, as though it were a shadow, and they thought it would fall upon them (saying), 'Take ye what we have given you with firmness, and remember what is therein; haply ye may fear.'

And when thy Lord took from the children of Adam out of their loins their seed, and made them bear witness against themselves, 'Am I not your Lord?' They said, 'Yea! we do bear witness'—lest ye should say on the day of resurrection, 'Verily, for this we did not care;' or say, 'Verily, our fathers associated others with God before us, and we were but their seed after them: wilt Thou then destroy us for what vandoers did?'—Thus do we detail the signs; haply they may return.

Read to them the declaration of him to whom we brought our signs, and who stepped away therefrom, and Satan followed him, and he was of those who were beguiled¹. [175] Had we pleased we would have exalted him thereby, but he crouched upon the earth and followed his lust, and his likeness was as the likeness of a dog, whom if thou shouldst attack he hangs out his tongue, or if thou should leave him, hangs out his tongue too. That is the likeness of the people who say our signs are lies. Tell them then these tales—haply they may reflect.

¹ Said to refer to Balaam, but also to several pretenders of prophecy amongst the Arabians. By some it is referred to 'Omâiy-yat ibn Abi Zalt, or to a certain Jewish Rabbi, who had prophesied the coming of a prophet about Mohammed's time, but would not acknowledge the latter as such.

Evil is the likeness of a people who say our signs are lies; themselves it is they wrong!

We have created for hell many of the ginn and of mankind; they have hearts and they discern not therewith; they have eyes and they see not therewith; they have ears and they hear not therewith; they are like cattle, nay, they go more astray! these it is who care not.

But God's are the good names; call on Him then thereby, and leave those who pervert His names¹; they shall be rewarded for that which they have done.

[180] And of those whom we have created is a nation who are guided in truth and thereby act with equity; but they who say our signs are lies, we will bring them down by degrees from whence they know not. I will let them range;—verily, my stratagem is efficacious!

Do they not then reflect that their companion² is not possessed³? he is but an obvious warner! Do they not behold the kingdoms of the heavens and of the earth, and what things God has created, and (see that), it may be, their time is already drawing nigh? in what relation then will they believe? [185] He whom God leads astray there is no guide for him! He leaves them in their rebellion, blindly wandering on.

¹ The word yul'hidûna is used in the later Arabic for any form of atheism. The expression in the text means the perversion, as Mohammed called it, of the name Allâh in the names of the other gods, such as Allât, the feminine form of the same word.

² Mohammed.

³ Literally, under the influence of the ginn.

They will ask you about the Hour, for what time it is fixed?—say, 'The knowledge thereof is only with my Lord; none shall manifest it at its time but He; it is heavy in the heavens and the earth, it will not come to you save on a sudden.'

They will ask as though thou wert privy to it, say, 'The knowledge thereof is only with God,'—but most folk do not know.

Say, 'I cannot control profit or harm for myself, save what God will. If I knew the unseen I should surely have much that is good, nor would evil touch me; I am but a warner and a herald of good tidings unto a people who believe.'

He it is who created you from one soul, and made therefrom its mate to dwell therewith; and when he covered her she bore a light burden and went about therewith; but when it grew heavy they called on God, Lord of them both, 'Surely if thou givest us a rightly-shaped child we shall of a surety be of those who thank.' [190] And when He gave them both a rightly-shaped child they joined partners with Him for that which He had given them, but exalted be God above that which they associate with Him¹. Will they associate with Him those who cannot create aught, but are themselves created, which have no power to help them, and cannot even help themselves?

¹ This story is said to refer to Adam and Eve; the act of idolatry mentioned being the naming of their first son, at the instigation of Satan, 'Abd el 'Hareth, 'servant of 'Hareth,' instead of 'servant of God,' 'Hareth being Satan's name among the angels. The legend arose probably from a misunderstanding of the title given to Cain in the Bible, 'Obed Adâma, 'a tiller of the ground,' which would read word for word in Arabic 'Abd el 'Hareth.

But if ye call them unto guidance they will not follow you. It is the same to them if Thou dost call them or if Thou dost hold thy tongue.

Those whom ye call on other than God are servants like yourselves. Call on them then, and let them answer you, if so be ye tell the truth! Have they feet to walk with? or have they hands to hold with? or have they eyes to see with? or have they ears to hear with? Call upon your partners; then plot against me, and do not wait.

[195] Verily, my patron is God, who hath sent down the Book, and He is the patron of the righteous. But those whom ye call on beside Him cannot help you, nor can they even help themselves. But if ye call them unto the guidance they will not hear, thou mayest see them looking towards thee, yet they do not see. Take to pardon, and order what is kind, and shun the ignorant; and if an incitement from the devil incites you, then seek refuge in God: verily, He both hears and knows.

[200] Verily, those who fear God, if a wraith from the devil touch, mention Him, and lo! they see¹.

And their brethren he shall increase in error, then they shall not desist.

Shouldst Thou not bring them a sign² they say, 'Hast Thou not yet made choice of one?' Say, 'I only follow what is inspired to me by my Lord.

¹ I. e. if an evil suggestion occurs to them, they mention God's name and immediately see the folly and wickedness thereof.

² That is, a verse in the Qur'ân.

These are perceptions from my Lord, and a guidance and a mercy to a people who believe.'

And when the Qur'ân is read, then listen thereto and keep silence; haply ye may obtain mercy.

And remember thy Lord within thyself humbly and with fear, not openly in words, in the morning and in the evening; and be not of those who do not care. [205] Verily, they who are with my Lord are not too big with pride for His service, but they do celebrate His praise, and Him they do adore.

THE CHAPTER OF THE SPOILS.

(VIII. Medīnah.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

They will ask thee about the spoils. Say, 'The spoils are God's and the Apostle's; fear God and settle it amongst yourselves; obey God and the Apostle if ye do believe.'

Verily, the believers are those who, when God's name is mentioned, their hearts sink with fear; and when His signs are rehearsed to them they increase them in faith; and on their Lord do they rely; who are steadfast in prayer, and of what we have bestowed upon them give in alms; these are in truth believers; to them are degrees with their Lord, and forgiveness, and a generous provision.

[5] As thy Lord caused thee to go forth from thy house¹ with the truth, although a sect of the believers were averse therefrom. They wrangled with thee about the truth after it was made plain, as though they were being driven on to death and looked thereon; and when God promised you that one of the two troops should be yours, and ye would fain have had those who had no arms. God wished to prove the truth true by His words, and to cut off the hindermost parts of those who misbelieve—to prove the truth true, and to make vain the vain, although the sinners are averse¹.

¹ At Medīnah.

When ye asked for succour from your Lord, and He answered you, 'I will assist you with a thousand angels, with others in reserve.'

[10] God made it only glad tidings to quiet your hearts therewith; for victory is only from God! verily, God is mighty and wise.

When drowsiness covered you as a security from Him, and He sent down upon you from the heavens water to purify you withal, and to take away from you the plague of Satan, and to tie up your hearts and to make firm your footsteps².

When your Lord inspired the angels—'Verily, I am with you; make ye firm then those who believe; I will cast dread into the hearts of those who misbelieve,—strike off their necks then, and strike off from them every finger tip.'

¹ The occasion alluded to was one when Mohammed had made preparations for attacking an unarmed caravan on its way from Syria to Mecca, when Abu Sufân, who was in charge of it, sent to Mecca and obtained an escort of nearly a thousand men; many of Mohammed's followers wished to attack the caravan only, but the prophet and his immediate followers were for throwing themselves on the escort.

² The Muslims were fewer in number than the enemy, and the latter had command of the water, at both of which circumstances their hearts sank. In the night, however, rain fell, refreshed them and supplied their wants.

That is, because they went into opposition against God and His Apostle ; for he who goes into opposition against God and His Apostle—verily, God is keen to punish.

There, taste it ! since for the misbelievers is the torment of the Fire.

[15] O ye who believe ! when ye meet those who misbelieve in swarms, turn not to them your hinder parts ; for he who turns to them that day his hinder parts, save turning to fight or rallying to a troop, brings down upon himself wrath from God, and his resort is hell, and an ill journey shall it be !

Ye did not slay them, but it was God who slew them ; nor didst thou shoot when thou didst shoot, but God did shoot¹, to try the believers from Himself with a goodly trial ; verily, God both hears and knows. There ! verily, God weakens the stratagem of the misbelievers..

If ye wish² the matter to be decided, a decision has now come to you ; but if ye desist, it is better for you ; and if ye turn back we will turn too, and your troop shall avail nothing, great in number though it be, since God is with the believers !

[20] O ye who believe ! obey God and His Apostle, and turn not from Him while ye hear, and be not like those who say, 'We hear,' and yet they hear not.

Verily, the worst of beasts in God's sight are the deaf, the dumb who do not understand. Had God known any good in them, He would have made them hear; but had He made them hear, they would have turned back and have swerved aside.

¹ Alluding to the alleged miracle of the gravel thrown into the eyes of the Qurâis at the battle of Bedr, to which the Muslim victory was due.

² An address to the Meccans who, when threatened with an attack from Mohammed, took sanctuary in the Kaabah, and prayed to God that if they were right He would help them, but that if Mohammed was in the right He would help him.

O ye who believe! answer God and His Apostle when He calls you to that which quickens you; and know that God steps in between man and his heart; and that to Him ye shall be gathered. [25] And fear temptation, which will not light especially on those of you who have done wrong; but know that God is keen to punish.

Remember when ye were few in number and weak in the land, fearing lest people should snatch you away; then He sheltered you and aided you with victory, and provided you with good things; haply ye may give thanks.

O ye who believe! be not treacherous to God and His Apostle; nor be treacherous to your engagement while ye know!

Know that your wealth and your children are but a temptation, and that God—with Him is mighty hire!

O ye who believe! if ye fear God He will make for you a discrimination¹, and will cover for you your offences, and will forgive you; for God is Lord of mighty grace.

[30] And when those who misbelieve were crafty with thee to detain thee a prisoner, or kill thee, or drive thee forth; they were crafty, but God was crafty too, for God is best of crafty ones!

But when our verses were rehearsed to them they said, 'We have already heard.—If we pleased we could speak like this; verily, this is nothing but tales of those of yore.'

¹ Here used in the sense of victory.

When they said, 'O God! if this be truth, and from Thee, then rain upon us stones from heaven or bring us grievous woe!'

But God would not torment them while thou art amongst them; nor was God going to torment them while they asked Him to forgive. But what ails them that God should not torment them while they turn folk away from the Holy Mosque, though they are not the guardians thereof—its guardians are only the pious?—but most of them know not.

[35] Their prayer at the House was naught but whistling and clapping hands!—taste then the torment for that ye misbelieved!

Verily, those who misbelieve expend their wealth to turn folk from the path of God; but they shall spend it, and then it shall be for them sighing, and then they shall be overcome! Those who misbelieve, into hell shall they be gathered!—that God may distinguish the vile from the good, and may put the vile, some on the top of the other, and heap all up together, and put it into hell!—These are those who lose!

Say to those who misbelieve, 'if they desist they will be forgiven what is past; but if they return,—the course of those of former days has passed away¹.

[40] Fight them then that there should be no sedition, and that the religion may be wholly God's; but if they desist, then God on what they do doth look. But if they turn their backs, then know that God is your Lord; a good Lord is He, and a good help; and know that whenever ye seize anything as a spoil, to God belongs a fifth thereof, and to His Apostle, and to kindred and orphans, and the poor and the wayfarer ; if ye believe in God and what we have revealed unto our servants on the day of the discrimination,—the day when the two parties met ; and God is mighty over all. When ye were on the near side of the valley, and they were on the far side, and the camels were below you ; had ye made an appointment then ¹ ye would have failed to keep your appointment—but it was that God might accomplish a thing that was as good as done ! that he who was to perish might perish with a manifest sign ; and that he who was to live might live with a manifest sign ; for, verily, God hears and knows !

¹ That is, they have the doom of former people as a warning and an example.

[45] When God showed thee them in thy dream as though they were but few ; but had He shown thee them as though they were many, ye would have been timid, and ye would have quarrelled about the matter ;—but God preserved you ; verily, He knows the nature of men's breasts !

And when He showed them to you, as ye encountered them, as few in your eyes ; and made you seem few in their eyes ; that God might accomplish a thing that was as good as done ; for unto God do things return !

O ye who believe ! when ye encounter a troop, then stand firm and remember God ; and haply ye may prosper ! and fear God and His Apostle, and do not quarrel or be timid, so that your turn of luck go from you ; but be ye patient, verily, God is with the patient. And be not like those who went forth from their homes with insolence, and for appearance sake before men, and to turn folks off God's way; for all they do God comprehends.

¹ That is, had ye agreed to attack them.

[50] And when Satan made their works appear seemly to them, and said, 'There is none amongst mankind to conquer you to-day, for, verily, I am your neighbour!' and when the two troops came in sight of each other, he turned upon his heels and said, 'Verily, I am clear of you! verily, I see what you see not¹! verily, I fear God, for God is keen to punish!'

And when the hypocrites and those in whose hearts was sickness said, 'Their religion hath beguiled these men², but he who relies upon God, verily, God is mighty and wise.'

Couldst thou see when the angels take away the souls of those who misbelieve; they smite them on their faces and hinder parts.—'Taste ye the torment of burning! that is for what your hands have sent on before; and for that God is no unjust one towards his servants.'

As was the wont of Pharaoh's people and those before them! they disbelieved in the signs of God, and God overtook them in their sins; verily, God is strong and keen to punish.

[55] That is because God is not one to change a favour He has favoured a people with, until they change what they have in themselves, and for that God both hears and knows.

As was the wont of Pharaoh's people and those before them! they said our signs were lies, and we destroyed them in their sins, and drowned

¹ The angels who were fighting on the Muslim side.

² I.e. beguiled them into attacking a force superior in numbers.

Pharaoh's people; and all of them were evil-doers.

Verily, the worst of beasts in God's eyes are those who misbelieve and will not believe; with whom if thou dost make a league, they break their league each time, for they fear not God; but shouldst thou ever catch them in war, then make those who come after them run by their example¹, haply they may remember then.

[60] And shouldst thou ever fear from any people treachery, then throw it back to them in like manner; verily, God loves not the treacherous. Deem not that those who misbelieve can win; verily, they cannot make (God) powerless!

Prepare ye against them what force and companies of horse ye can, to make the enemies of God, and your enemies, and others beside them, in dread thereof. Ye do not know them, but God knows them! and whatever ye expend in God's way He will repay you; and ye shall not be wronged. But if they incline to peace, incline thou to it too, and rely upon God; verily, He both hears and knows.

But if they wish to betray thee, then God is enough for thee! He it is who supports thee with His help and with the believers; and reconciles their hearts! Didst thou expend all that is in the earth thou couldst not reconcile their hearts, but God reconciled them, verily, He is mighty and wise!

[65] O thou prophet! God is sufficient for thee, with those of the believers who follow thee! O thou prophet! urge on the believers to fight. If there be of you twenty patient men, they shall conquer two hundred; if there be of you a hundred, they shall conquer a thousand of those who misbelieve, because they are a people who did not discern.—Now has God made it light for you; He knows that there is a weakness amongst you: but if there be amongst you but a patient hundred, they will conquer two hundred; and if there be of you a thousand, they will conquer two thousand, by the permission of God,—for God is with the patient!

¹ That is, make them an example to all future opponents by the severity of thy dealing with them.

It has not been for any prophet to take captives until he hath slaughtered in the land! Ye wish to have the goods of this world, but God wishes for the next, for God is mighty, wise! Were it not for a book from God that had gone before, there would have touched you, for that which ye took, a mighty punishment¹.

Eat of what spoils ye have taken, what is lawful and good; and fear God, verily, God is forgiving and merciful.

[70] O thou prophet! say to such of the captives as are in your hands, 'If God knows of any good in your hearts, he will give you better than that which is taken from you, and will forgive you; for God is forgiving and merciful.'

But if they desire to betray thee,—they have betrayed God before! but He hath given you power over them; for God is knowing, wise!

Verily, those who believe and have fled and fought strenuously with their wealth and persons in God's way, and those who have given refuge¹ and help, these shall be next of kin to each other². But those who believe, but have not fled, ye have naught to do with their claims of kindred, until they flee as well. But if they ask you for aid for religion's sake, then help is due from you, except against a people between whom and you there is an alliance; for God on what ye do doth look.

¹ Mohammed here blames them for having accepted ransom from the captives which they took at the battle of Bedr; but acknowledges that previously revealed passages of the Qur'ân did in the strict letter allow of such ransom being taken.

And those who misbelieve, some of them are next of kin to others—unless ye act the same there will be sedition in the land, and great corruption.

[75] Those who believe and have fled and fought strenuously in God's cause, and those who have given a refuge and a help, those it is who believe; to them is forgiveness and generous provision due. And those who have believed afterwards and have fled and fought strenuously with you; these too are of you, but blood relations are nearer in kin by the Book of God. Verily, God all things doth know.

THE CHAPTER OF REPENTANCE OR IMMUNITY.

(IX. Medînah.)

AN immunity from God and His Apostle to those idolaters with whom ye have made a league³.

¹ To the prophet.

² The Ansârs and Muhâgerîn, that is, those who lent aid to, and those who fled with Mohammed were at first regarded as next of kin and heirs to each other's property to the exclusion of blood relationship, until the above passage was abrogated by the last words of this chapter.

³ This chapter is without the initial formula 'In the name of God,' &c. The Caliph Othman said that the omission arose from Roam ye at large in the land for four months, but know that ye cannot make God helpless, and that God disgraces the misbelievers.

A proclamation from God and His Apostle to the people on the day of the greater pilgrimage, that God is clear of the idolaters as is His Apostle ! If then ye repent it is better for you ; but if ye turn your backs, then know that ye cannot make God helpless. Give to those who misbelieve glad tidings of grievous woe !— Except to those of the idolaters with whom ye have made a league, and who then have not failed you at all, and have not backed up any one against you. Fulfil for them then your covenant until the time agreed upon with them ; verily, God loves those who fear.

[5] But when the sacred months are passed away, kill the idolaters wherever ye may find them ; and take them, and besiege them, and lie in wait for them in every place of observation ; but if they repent, and are steadfast in prayer, and give alms, then let them go their way ; verily, God is forgiving and merciful.

And if any one of the idolaters ask thee for aid, then aid him, in order that he may hear the word of God ; then let him reach his place of safety,— that is, because they are a folk who do not know.

How can there be for the idolaters a treaty with God and with His Appstle, save those with whom ye have made a league at the Sacred Mosque !

its having been revealed shortly before Mohammed's death, who left no instructions on the subject. But some commentators assert that it arises from its having originally formed part of the previous chapter.

Then while they stand by you, stand ye by them ; verily, God loves those who fear.

How !—if they prevail against you, they will not observe either ties of blood or ties of clientship ; they please you with their mouths, but their hearts refuse ; and most of them do work abomination. They barter God's signs for a little price, and they turn folk from His way ; verily, they—evil is that which they have done.

[10] They will not observe in a believer ties of kindred nor ties of clientship ; but they it is are the transgressors.

But if they repent and are steadfast in prayer and give alms, then they are your brethren in religion—we detail the signs unto a people that do know.

But if they break faith with you after their treaty, and taunt your religion, then fight the leaders of misbelief ; verily, they have no faith, haply they may desist.

Will ye not fight a people who broke their oaths, and intended to expel the Apostle ? They began with you at first, are ye afraid of them ? God is more deserving that ye should fear Him ! If ye be believers, kill them ! God will torment them by your hands, and disgrace them, and aid you against them, and heal the breasts of a people who believe ; [15] and will remove rage from their hearts ; for God turns unto Him whomsoever He pleases, and God is knowing, wise !

Did ye reckon that ye would be left, when God knows not as yet those of you who fought strenuously, and who did not take other than God and His Apostle, and the believers for an intimate friend ?

for God is well aware of what ye do. It is not for idolaters to repair to the mosques of God, bearing witness against themselves to unbelief; they it is whose works are vain, and in the Fire shall they dwell for aye!

He only shall repair to the mosques of God who believes in God and the last day, and is steadfast in prayer, and gives the alms, and fears only God;—it may be that these will be of those who are guided.

Have ye made out the giving drink to the pilgrims and the repairing to the Sacred Mosque¹ to be like being one who believes in God and in the last day, and is strenuous in the way of God?—they are not equal in God's sight, and God guides not an unjust people.

[20] Those who believe and who have fled and been strenuous in the way of God, with their wealth and with their persons, are highest in rank with God, and these it is who are happy. Their Lord gives them glad tidings of mercy from Himself, and goodwill; and gardens shall they have therein and lasting pleasure, to dwell therein for aye! Verily, God, with Him is mighty here.

O ye who believe! take not your fathers and your brothers for patrons if they love misbelief rather than faith; for whosoever amongst you takes them for patrons these are the unjust.

Say, 'If your fathers, and your sons, and your brethren, and your wives, and your clansmen, and the wealth which ye have gained, and the merchandise which ye fear may be slack, and the dwellings which ye love are dearer to you than God and His Apostle, and than fighting strenuously in His way,—then wait awhile, until God brings His bidding, for God guides not a people who work abomination !'

¹ Abu 'l 'Abbâs, Mohammed's uncle, when taken prisoner and reproached with his unbelief, appealed to his having performed these duties as entitling him to as much consideration as if he had professed Islâm.

[25] God has helped you in many a place, and on the day of 'Honein¹ when ye were so pleased with your numbers ; but it did not serve you at all, and the road grew too strait for you, where it had been broad ; and then ye turned your backs retreating ; then God sent down His shechina² upon His Apostle and upon the believers ; and sent down armies which ye could not see, and punished those who misbelieved ; for that is the reward of the misbelievers, then God turns after that to whom He will, for God is forgiving and merciful !

O ye who believe ! it is only the idolaters who are unclean ; they shall not then approach the Sacred Mosque after this year. But if ye fear want³ then God will enrich you from His grace if He will ; verily, God is knowing, wise !

Fight those who believe not in God and in the last day, and who forbid not what God and His Apostle have forbidden, and who do not practice the religion of truth from amongst those to whom the Book has been brought, until they pay the tribute by their hands and be as little ones.

¹ 'Honein is the name of a valley about three miles to the north-east of Mecca, where, in the eighth year of the Flight, a battle took place between Mohammed and his followers with an army of twelve thousand men, and two tribes of idolatrous Arabs. Too confident in their numbers the Moslems at first received a check, but were rallied by Mohammed and his immediate followers and kindred.

² See p. 38, note 2.

³ That is, from the stoppage of traffic and merchandise.

[30] The Jews say Ezra is the son of God ; and the Christians say that the Messiah is the son of God ; that is what they say with their mouths, imitating the sayings of those who misbelieved before.—God fight them ! how they lie !¹

They take their doctors and their monks for lords² rather than God, and the Messiah the son of Mary ; but they are bidden to worship but one God, there is no god but He ; celebrated be His praise, from what they join with Him !

They desire to put out the light of God with their mouths, but God will not have it but that we should perfect His light, averse although the mis-believers be !

He it is who sent His Apostle with guidance and the religion of truth, to make it prevail over every other religion, averse although idolaters may be !

O ye who believe ! verily, many of the doctors and the monks devour the wealth of men openly, and turn folk from God's way ; but those who store up gold and silver and expend it not in God's way,

¹ The Moslem tradition is that Ezra, after being dead 100 years, was raised to life, and dictated from memory the whole of the Jewish Scriptures which had been lost during the captivity, and that the Jews said he could not have done this unless he had been the son of God. There is no Jewish tradition whatever in support of this accusation of Mohammed's, which probably was entirely due to his own invention or to misinformation. Bâidhâvî, the well-known commentator, says that it must have been true because the Jews themselves, to whom the passage was read, did not deny it.

² Alluding to the word rabbi, which in Arabic is applied to God alone.

—give them glad tidings of grievous woe ! [35] On the day when it shall be heated in the fire of hell, and their brows shall be branded therewith, and their sides and their backs !—‘ This is what ye stored up for yourselves, taste then what ye stored up !’

Verily, the number of months with God is twelve months in God’s Book, on the day when He created the heavens and the earth ; of these are four that are sacred ; that is the subsisting religion. Then do not wrong yourselves therein, but fight the idolaters one and all, as they fight you one and all, and know that God is with those who fear.

Verily, putting off is but an increase in misbelief¹ to lead astray therewith those who misbelieve. They make it lawful one year, but they make it unlawful another year, that they may come to an understanding as to the number which God has made sacred, and make lawful what God has prohibited. Seemly to them are their evil works, but God guides not a misbelieving people.

O ye who believe ! what ailed you when ye were told to march forth in God’s way, that ye sank down heavily upon the earth ? were ye content with the life of this world instead of the next ? but the provision of this world’s life is but a little to the next. Unless ye march forth He will punish you with grievous woe, and will put in your stead a people other than you ! ye cannot hurt Him at all, for God is mighty over all !

¹ The pagan Arabs used to put off the observance of a sacred month when it was inconvenient to them and observe another instead ; this Mohammed deprecates.

[40] Unless ye help him¹ — and God did help him, when those who misbelieved drove him forth the second of two². When they twain were in the cave; when he said to his comrade, ‘Grieve not, verily, God is with us;’ and God sent down His shechina upon him, and aided him with hosts ye could not see, and made the word of those who misbelieved inferior, and the word of God superior; for God is mighty and wise. March ye then, light and heavy, and fight strenuously with your wealth and persons in God’s way; that is better for you if ye did but know!

Were there goods nigh at hand, and a moderate journey, they would have followed you; but the distance was too far for them; they will swear by God, ‘If we could, we would have gone forth with you.’ They destroy themselves, but God knows that they lie!

God forgive thee; why didst thou give them leave (to stay) until it was made manifest to thee who spake the truth—until thou mightest know the liars?

Those who believe in God and in the last day will not beg off from fighting strenuously with their wealth and their persons; but God knows those who fear.

[45] It is only those who believe not in God and in the last day who beg off from thee, and those whose hearts are in doubt, and in their doubt do hesitate.

Had they wished to go forth, they would have prepared for it a preparation; but God was averse from their starting off, and made them halt, and they were told to sit with those who sit. Had they gone forth with you they would but have made you more trouble, and they would have hurried about amongst you craving a sedition; amongst you are some who would have listened to them; but God knows those who are unjust! They used to crave sedition before and upset thy affairs; until the truth came, and God's bidding was made manifest, averse although they were.

¹ The prophet.

² That is, with only one companion, namely Abubekr.

Of them are some who say, 'Permit me¹, and do not try me!' Have they not fallen into the trial already, but hell shall encompass the misbelievers.

[50] If good befall thee it seems ill to them; but if a calamity befall thee they say, 'We had taken care for our affair before;' and they turn their backs and they are glad.

Say, 'Nought shall befall us save what God has written down for us; He is our Lord, and upon God believers do rely!'

Say, 'Do ye await for us aught but one of the two best things²?' we too await for you that God will inflict on you torment from Himself, or by our hands. Wait then; and we with you are waiting too!

Say, 'Expend ye in alms, whether ye will or no, it shall not be accepted from you; verily, ye are a people who do work abomination.'

But nought hinders their alms-giving from being accepted save that they misbelieve in God and His Apostle, and perform not prayer save lazily, and expend not in alms save reluctantly.

¹ That is, excuse me from the fighting in the cause of religion.

² I. e. victory or martyrdom.

[55] Let not their wealth please you nor their children, God only wishes to torment them therewith in the life of this world, and that their souls may pass away while still they misbelieve.

They swear by God that, verily, they are of you ; but they are not of you, and they are a people who do stand aside in fear. Could they but have found a refuge, or some caves, or a place in which to creep, they would have turned round in haste thereto.

Of them are some who defame thee, with respect to alms ; though if they are given a part thereof, they are content ; and if they are not given a part thereof, then are they in a rage. Would that they were content with what God and His Apostle had brought them, and would say, 'God is enough for us ! God will bring us of His grace, and so will His Apostle ; verily, unto God is our desire !'

[60] Alms are only for the poor and needy, and those who work for them¹, and those whose hearts are reconciled², and those in captivity, and those in debt, and those who are on God's path, and for the wayfarer ;—an ordinance this from God, for God is knowing, wise.

And of them are some who are by the ears³ with the prophet, and say, 'He is all ear.' Say, 'An ear of good for you !' he believes in God, and believes in those who do believe, and is a mercy unto such of you as believe ; but those who are by the ears with the Apostle of God, for them is grievous woe !

¹ I. e. in collecting or distributing them.

² Reconciled, that is, to Islâm.

³ That is, reproach or quarrel with the prophet ; I have used the old fashion English expression in order to preserve the pun upon the word ear which exists in the original.

They swear by God to please you ; but God and His Apostle are more worthy for them to please if they be believers. Do they not know that whoso setteth himself against God and His Apostle, for him is the fire of hell, to dwell therein for aye ? and that is mighty shame !

[65] The hypocrites are cautious lest there be revealed against them a sûrah¹ to inform them of what is in their hearts ; say, 'Mock ye ! verily, God will bring forth that of which ye are so cautious !' But if thou shouldst ask them, they will say, 'We did but discuss and jest ;' say, 'Was it at God and His signs, and His Apostle, that ye mocked ?'

Make no excuse ! Ye have misbelieved after your faith ; if we forgive one sect of you, we will torment another sect, for that they sinned !

The hypocrites, men and women, some of them follow others, bidding what is wrong and forbidding what is right, and they clench their hands². They forget God and He forgets them ! Verily, the hypocrites, they are the doers of abomination !

God has promised unto the hypocrites, men and women, and unto the misbelievers, hell-fire, to dwell therein for aye ; it is enough for them ! God shall curse them, and theirs shall be enduring woe.

[70] Ye are like those who were before you. They were stronger than you and more abundant in wealth and children ; they enjoyed their portion then, and ye enjoy your portion, as they enjoyed their portion before you ; and ye discuss as they discussed. Their works are vain in this world and the next, and they it is who lose.

¹ Chapter of the Qur'ân.

² I. e. are niggardly and refuse to give alms.

Did there not come to them the declaration of those who were before them? of the people of Noah and 'Âd and Thamûd, and of the people of Abraham, and the people of Midian? and of the overturned (cities)¹? Their apostles came to them with manifest signs; for God would not wrong them, but it was themselves they wronged.

And the believers, men and women, are some the patrons of others; they bid what is reasonable, and forbid what is wrong, and are steadfast in prayer, and give alms, and obey God and His Apostle. On these will God have mercy; verily, God is mighty, wise!

God has promised to believers, men and women, gardens beneath which rivers flow, to dwell therein for aye; and goodly places in the garden of Eden, But good-will from God is the greatest of all! that is the mighty happiness!

O thou prophet! strive strenuously against the misbelievers and the hypocrites, and be stern against them; for their resort is hell, and an ill journey shall it be.

[75] They swear by God they did not speak it, but they did speak the word of misbelief; and they disbelieved after they had embraced Islâm, and they designed what they could not attain; and they only disapproved it because God and His Apostle had enriched them of His grace². If they turn again 'tis better for them ; but if they turn their backs, God will torment them with mighty woe in this world and in the next, nor shall they have upon the earth a patron or protector.

¹ Sodom and Gomorrah.

² A plot had been set afoot at Medînah to kill Mohammed, and was only abandoned because of the increased trade and prosperity which Mohammed's residence then brought.

And of them are some who make a treaty with God, that 'If He bring us of His grace, we will give alms and we will surely be among the righteous.' But when He gave them of His grace they were niggardly thereof, and turned their backs and swerved aside. So He caused hypocrisy to pursue them in their hearts unto the day when they shall meet Him,—for that they did fail God in what they promised Him, and for that they were liars !

Do they not know that God knows their secrets and their whisperings, and that God knows the unseen things ?

[80] Those who defame such of the believers as willingly give their alms, and such as can find nothing to give but their exertions, and who mock at them,—God will mock at them, and for them is grievous woe !

Ask forgiveness for them or ask not forgiveness for them ! if they shouldst ask forgiveness for them seventy times, yet would not God forgive them ; that is because they disbelieved in God and His Apostle, for God guides not a people who work abomination.

Those who were left behind¹ rejoiced in staying behind the Apostle of God, and were averse from fighting strenuously with their wealth and their persons in God's way, and said, 'March not forth in the heat.' Say, 'The fire of hell is hotter still, if ye could but discern!’ Let them then laugh little, and let them weep much, as a recompense for that which they have earned!

¹ At the battle of Tabûk.

But if God bring thee back to a sect of them, and they ask thee then for leave to sally forth; say, ‘Ye shall by no means ever sally forth with me, nor shall ye ever fight a foe with me! verily, ye were content to sit at home the first time, sit ye then now with those who stay behind.’

[85] Pray not for any one of them who dies, and stand not by his tomb; verily, they disbelieved in God and His Apostle and died workers of abomination!

Let not their wealth and their children please you, God only wishes to torment them therewith in this world, and that their souls may pass away the while they misbelieve.

Whenever a sûrah is sent down to them, ‘Believe ye in God, and fight strenuously together with His Apostle,’ those of them who have the means will ask thee for leave to stay at home and say, ‘Let us be amongst those who stay behind.’ They are content to be with those who are left behind. A stamp is set upon their hearts that they should not discern.

But the Apostle and those who believe with him are strenuous with their wealth and with their persons; these shall have good things, and these it is shall prosper.

[90] God has prepared for them gardens beneath which rivers flow, to dwell therein for aye; that is the mighty happiness!

There came certain desert Arabs that they might be excused; and those stayed behind who had called

God and His Apostle liars. There shall befall those of them who misbelieved, a mighty woe. For the weak, and the sick, and those who cannot find wherewith to expend in alms there is no hindrance, so they be only sincere towards God and His Apostle. There is no way against those who do well; for God is forgiving and merciful. Nor against those to whom, when they came to thee that thou shouldst mount them, thou didst say, 'I cannot find wherewith to mount you,' turned their backs while their eyes poured forth with tears, for grief that they could not find wherewith to expend. Only is there a way against those who ask thee for leave to stay at home while they are rich; content to be with those who are left behind; on whose hearts God has set a stamp, so that they should not know.

[95] They make excuses to you when ye return to them: say, 'Make no excuse, we believe you not; God has informed us concerning you. God sees your works and His Apostle too!' Then shall ye be brought back unto Him who knows the unseen and the seen; and He shall inform you of that which ye have done.

They will adjure you by God when ye have come back to them, to turn aside from them; turn ye aside then from them; verily, they are a plague, and their resort is hell! a recompense for that which they have earned!

They will adjure you to be pleased with them; but if ye are pleased with them, God will not be pleased with a people who work abomination.

The Arabs of the desert are keener in misbelief and hypocrisy, and are more likely not to know the bounds which God has sent down to His Apostle; but God is knowing and wise.

And of the Arabs of the desert are some who take what they expend to be a forced loan, and they wait a turn of fortune against you; against them shall a turn of evil fortune be; for God both hears and knows.

[100] And of the Arabs of the desert are some who believe in God and the last day, and who take what they expend in alms to be a means of approach to God and to the Apostle's prayers,—is it not a means of approach for them? God will make them enter into His mercy; verily, God is forgiving and merciful.

As for the foremost in the race, the first of those who fled¹, and the helpers², and those who followed them in their kindness, God is well pleased with them, and they are well pleased with Him; He has prepared for them gardens beneath which rivers flow, to dwell therein for aye; that is the mighty happiness.

And of those who are round about you of the Arabs of the desert, some are hypocrites, and of the people of Medīnah, some are stubborn in hypocrisy; thou dost not know them—we know them; we will torment them twice over; then shall they be sent off into mighty woe.

And others have confessed their sins,—that they have mixed with a righteous action another evil action;—haply it may be God will turn again to them; verily, God is forgiving and merciful.

¹ The Muhâgerīn, or those who fled with Mohammed from Mecca.

² The Ansārs who helped him while at Medīnah.

Take from their wealth alms to cleanse and purify them thereby; and pray for them; verily, thy prayer is a repose for them; for God both hears and knows.

[105] Do they not know that God accepts repentance from His servants, and takes alms; and that God is He who is easily turned and merciful.

And say, 'Act ye;' and God and His Apostle and the believers shall see your acts, and ye shall be brought back to Him who knows the seen and the unseen, and He shall inform you of that which ye have done.

And others are in hopes of God's bidding; whether He will torment them, or whether He turn again towards them; for God is knowing, wise.

And there are those who have taken to a mosque for mischief, and for misbelief, and to make a breach amongst the believers, and for an ambush for him who made war against God and His Apostle before; they surely swear, 'We only wished for what was good;' but God bears witness that they are liars.

Never stand up therein!—there is a mosque founded on piety from the first day¹: it is more right that thou shouldst stand therein;—therein are men who love to be clean; for God doth love the clean.

[110] Is he who has laid his foundation upon the fear of God and of His good-will better, or he who has laid his foundation upon a crumbling wall of sand, which crumbles away with him into the fire of hell?—but God guides not a people who do wrong.

¹ The Mosque of Qubá', about two miles from Medînah, the foundation stone of which was laid by Mohammed four days before he entered Medînah on his flight from Mecca, was the first place of public prayer in Islâm. The Beni Ghanm had built another mosque to rival this, at the instigation of Abu 'Hâmir, a monk who was opposed to Mohammed, and wished the prophet to consecrate it.

The building which they¹ have built will not cease to be a source of doubt in their hearts until their hearts are cut asunder²; but God is knowing, wise.

Verily, God hath bought of the believers their persons and their wealth, for the paradise they are to have; they shall fight in the way of God, and they shall slay and be slain: promised in truth, in the law and the gospel and the Qur'ân;—and who is more faithful to His covenant than God?

Be ye glad then in the covenant which ye have made with Him, for that is the mighty happiness! Those who repent, those who worship, those who praise, those who fast, those who bow down, those who adore, those who bid what is right and forbid what is wrong, and those who keep the bounds of God,—glad tidings to those who believe!

[115] It is not for the prophet and those who believe to ask forgiveness for the idolaters, even though they be their kindred, after it has been made manifest to them that they are the fellows of hell.

Nor was Abraham's asking pardon for his father aught else but through a promise he had promised him; but when it was made manifest to him that he was an enemy to God, he cleansed himself of him; verily, Abraham was pitiful and clement.

¹ The Beni Ghanm.

² I. e. they will feel compunctions about it till the day of their death.

Nor will God lead astray a people after He has guided them until that is made manifest to them which they have to fear; verily, God all things doth know.

Verily, God's is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth! He quickens and He kills! Nor have ye beside God a patron or protector.

God has now turned towards the prophet and those who fled with him, and towards the helpers who followed him in the hour of difficulty, after that the hearts of a part of them had well-nigh gone amiss.

Then He turned unto them; verily, to them He is kind and merciful:—unto the three¹ who were left behind, so that the earth with all its ample space was too strait for them, and their souls were straitened for them, and they thought that there was no refuge for them from God save unto Him.

Then He turned again towards them that they might also turn; verily, God, He is easily turned and merciful!

[120] O ye who believe! fear God and be with those who speak the truth.

It was not for the people of Medīnah, and those around about them of the Arabs of the desert, to stay behind the Apostle of God and not to prefer their souls to his: that is because neither thirst, nor toil, nor heat, nor hunger befel them on God's way. Nor do they stop to anger the misbelievers, nor do they get any (harm) from the enemy without a good work being written down to them; verily, God wastes not the hire of those who do well.

¹ Three of the Ansârs who refused to accompany Mohammed to Tabûk.

Nor do they expend in alms a small or great expense, nor do they cross a wady¹ without it being written down to them; that God may reward them with better than that which they have done.

The believers should not march forth altogether; and if a troop of every division of them march not forth, it is only that they may study their religion and warn their people when they return to them, that haply they may beware.

O ye who believe! fight those who are near to you of the misbelievers, and let them find in you sternness; and know that God is with those who fear.

[125] And whenever a sūrah is sent down, there are some of them who say, 'Which of you has this increased in faith?' But as for those who believe, it does increase them in faith, and they shall rejoice: but as for those in whose hearts is sickness, it only adds a plague to their plague, and they die misbelievers.

Do they not see that they are tried in every year once or twice? Yet they do not turn again, nor do they mind!

And whenever a sūrah is sent down, some of them look at the others—'Does any one see you?'—Then they turn away! God has turned their hearts, for that they are a people who do not discern.

There has come to you an apostle from amongst yourselves; hard for him to bear is it that ye commit iniquity; he is anxious over you after the believers, pitiful, compassionate.

¹ A wady is the bed of a torrent, which in Arabia is generally dry, but occasionally after a storm is filled with the torrent.

[130] But if they turn their backs, then say, 'God is enough for me! there is no god but He! upon Him do I rely, for He is Lord of the mighty throne!'

THE CHAPTER OF JONAH, (PEACE BE ON HIM!)

(X. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

A. L. R. Those are the signs of the wise Book! was it a wonder to the folk¹ that we inspired a man from amongst themselves, 'Warn thou the folk; and give glad tidings to those who believe, that for them there is an advance of sincerity² gone before them with their Lord?' The misbelievers say, 'Verily, this is an obvious sorcerer!'

Verily, your Lord is God, who created the heavens and the earth in six days; then He made for the throne, to govern the affair; there is no intercessor, except after His permission. That is God for you—your Lord! Then worship Him—do ye not mind?

To Him is your return all of you—God's promise in truth; verily, He produces the creature, then He makes it return again, that He may recompense those who believe and do what is right with justice ; but those who misbelieve, for them is a drink of boiling water, and grievous woe, for that they did misbelieve.

¹ Of Mecca.

² I. e. a reward awaiting them for their sincerity.

[5] He it is who made the sun for a brightness, and the moon for a light, and decreed for it mansions, that ye may know the number of the years and the reckoning.—God only created that in truth. He details the signs unto a people who do know.

Verily, in the alternation of night and day, and in what God has created of the heavens and the earth, are signs unto a people who do fear.

Verily, those who hope not for our meeting, and are content with the life of this world, and are comforted thereby, and those who are neglectful of our signs,—these, their resort is fire for that which they have earned !

Verily, those who believe and do what is right, their Lord guides them by their faith ; beneath them shall rivers flow in the gardens of pleasure.

[10] Their cry therein shall be, ‘Celebrated be Thy praises, O God!’ and their salutation therein shall be, ‘Peace!’ and the end of their cry shall be, ‘Praise (belongs) to God, the Lord of the worlds!’

And if God should hasten on the bad to men as they would hasten on the good, their appointed time would surely be fulfilled. But we will let those who hope not for our meeting go on in their rebellion, blindly wandering on.

When distress touches man, he calls us to his side, whether sitting or standing ; but when we have removed from him his distress, he passes on as though he had not called on us in a distress that touched him. Thus unto the extravagant is made seemly that which they have done.

We have already destroyed generations before you when they did wrong, and there came to them their apostles with manifest signs, but they would not believe. Thus do we reward the sinful people.

[15] Then we made you their successors in the earth after them, that we may see how ye will act.

But when our evident signs are recited to them, those who hope not for our meeting say, 'Bring a Qur'ân other than this; or change it.' Say, 'It is not for me to change it of my own accord; I do not follow aught but what I am inspired with; verily, I fear, if I rebel against my Lord, the torment of a mighty day!'

Say, 'Had God pleased, I should not have recited it to you, nor taught you therewith. I have tarried a lifetime amongst you before it;—have ye not then any sense?'

Who is more unjust than he who forges against God a lie, or says His signs are lies? verily, the sinners shall not prosper.

They worship beside God what can neither harm them nor profit them, and they say, 'These are our intercessors with God!' Say, 'Will ye inform God of aught in the heavens or the earth, that He knows not of?' Celebrated be His praise! and exalted be He, above what they associate with Him!

[20] People were but one nation once, then they disagreed; and had it not been for thy Lord's word already passed, there would have been decided between them that concerning which they disagreed.

They say, 'Why is not a sign sent down upon him from his Lord?' Say, 'The unseen is only God's; but wait ye for a while, verily, I with you am one of those who wait!'

When we have let men taste of mercy after distress which has touched them, lo! they use a stratagem against our signs! Say, 'God is quicker at stratagem.' Verily, our messengers¹ write down what stratagem ye use.

He it is who makes you travel in the land and sea, until when ye are in the ships—and these carry them² afloat with a favouring wind, and they rejoice therein, there comes to them a violent wind, and there comes to them the wave from every place, and they think that they are encompassed about; then they call on God, sincere in religion towards Him, 'If thou dost save from this we will surely be of those who thank.' But when He has saved them, lo! they are wilful in the earth unjustly;—O ye folk! your wilfulness against yourselves is but a provision of this world's life; then unto us is your return, and we will inform you of that which ye have done!

[25] Verily, the likeness of this world's life is like water which we send down from the sky, and the plants of the earth, from which men and cattle eat, are mingled therewith; until when the earth puts on its gilding and is adorned, the people thereof think that they have power over it. Our order comes to it by night or day, and we make it as it were mown down—as though it had not yesterday been rich!—Thus do we detail the signs unto a people who reflect.

¹ The recording angels.

² An instance of the frequent abrupt changes of persons with which the Qur'ân abounds.

God calls unto the abode of peace, and guides whom He will into the right path.

To those who do what is good, goodness and increase! nor shall blackness or abasement cover their faces! these are the fellows of Paradise, they shall dwell therein for aye.

But, as for those who have earned ill, the reward of evil is the like thereof; abasement shall cover them! they shall have none to defend them against God;—as though their faces were veiled with the deep darkness of the night; these are the fellows of the Fire, and they shall dwell therein for aye.

And on the day we gather them all together then we will say to those who associated other gods (with us), 'To your places, ye and your associates!' and we will part them; and their associates will say, 'It was not us ye worshipped.—[30] But God is witness enough between us and you, that we were heedless of your worshipping us.' There shall every soul prove what it has sent on before; and they shall be returned unto God, their God, their true sovereign, and that which they devised shall stray away from them.

Say, 'Who provides you from the heaven and the earth? who has dominion over hearing and sight? and who brings forth the living from the dead, and brings forth the dead from the living? and who governs the affair?' And they will say, 'God.' Say, 'Do ye not then fear?'

That is God, your true Lord! and what is there after the truth but error? how then can ye turn away?

Thus is the word of thy Lord verified against those who commit abomination; verily, they will not believe. Say, 'Is there any of your associates who can produce a creature and then turn it back again?' Say, 'God produces a creature, then turns it back again; how then can ye lie?' [35] Say, 'Is there any of your associates who guides unto the truth?' Say, 'God guides unto the truth.' Is then He who guides unto the truth more worthy to be followed, or he that guides not except he be himself guided? What ails you then, how ye judge?

But most of them follow only suspicion; verily, suspicion does not avail against the truth at all; verily, God knows what they do.

This Qur'ân could not have been devised by any beside God; but it verifies that which was before it, and details the Book—there is no doubt therein—from the Lord of the worlds.

Do they say, 'He¹ hath devised it?' say then, 'Bring a sûrah like it,—and call, if ye can, on other than God, if ye do tell the truth!'

[40] Yet they call that a lie, the knowledge of which they cannot compass, while its interpretation has not yet come to them; so did those before them charge with lying, and see what was the end of the unjust!

Of them are some who believe therein; and of them are some who do not believe therein; but thy Lord knows best who are corrupters.

¹ I. e. Mohammed.

But if they call thee liar, say, 'I have my work, and ye have your work; ye are clear of what I work, and I am clear of what ye work.'

There are some of them who listen to thee—canst thou make the deaf to hear, although they have no sense? And of them are some who look at thee—canst thou guide the blind, although they cannot see?

[45] Verily, God wrongs not man at all, but men do wrong themselves.

And on the day when we will gather them together it will be as though they had not tarried save an hour of the day, they shall know each other. Lost are those who called the meeting with God a lie, and were not guided!

Either we will show thee something of that with which we threatened them, or we will take thee to ourself, for unto us is their return; then is God a witness to what they do.

Every nation has its apostle; and when their apostle comes to them, it is decided between them with justice, and they are not wronged.

But they say, 'When is this threat (to come), if ye tell the truth?'

[50] Say, 'I have no power over myself for harm or for profit, save what God will. Every nation has its appointed time; when their appointed time comes to them they cannot delay it for an hour or bring it on.'

Say, 'Let us see now when the torment comes to you, by night or day, what will the sinners fain bring on thereof? And when it has fallen—will ye believe in it now!—And yet ye wish to bring it on! Then shall it be said to those who have done wrong, Taste ye the torment of eternity ! shall ye be recompensed except for that which ye have earned ?' They will ask thee to inform them whether it be true. Say, 'Aye, by my Lord ! verily, it is the truth, nor can ye weaken him.'

[55] And if every soul that hath done wrong had whatever is in the earth, it would give it as a ransom. They will utter their repentance when they see the torment ; and it shall be decided between them with justice, nor shall they be wronged.

Is not indeed what is in the heavens and what is in the earth God's ? is not indeed the promise of God true ? Though most of them know not. He quickens and He kills, and unto Him are ye returned !

O ye folk ! there has come to you a warning from your Lord, and a balm for what is in your breasts, and a guidance and a mercy to believers.

Say, 'By the grace of God and by His mercy,—and in that let them rejoice ! It is better than that which they collect !'

[60] Let us see now what God has sent down to you of provision ! and yet ye have made of it unlawful and lawful. Say, 'Does God permit you, or against God do ye forge lies ?'

What will those who forge lies against God think on the resurrection day ? Verily, God is Lord of grace towards men, but most of them do not give thanks !

Nor shalt thou be in any affair, nor shalt thou recite concerning it a Qur'ân¹—nor shall ye do a work, without our being witness against you, when ye are engaged therein : nor does the weight of an atom escape thy Lord in earth or in heaven ; nor is there less than that or greater, but it is in the perspicuous Book.

¹ A portion of the Qur'ân. The word means reading.

Are not, verily, the friends of God those on whom there is no fear, neither shall they be grieved?— They who believed and who did fear—[65] for them are good tidings in the life of this world, and in the future too ; there is no changing the words of God ! That is the mighty happiness !

Let not their speech grieve thee ; verily, power is wholly God's ! He both hears and knows.

Is not, verily, whoever is in the heavens and whoever is in the earth God's ? What then do they follow who call on associates other than God ?

Verily, they follow nothing but suspicion, and verily, they are telling naught but lies.

He it is who made for you the night, that ye might rest therein, and the day to see therein ; verily, in that are signs unto a people who can hear.

They say, ' God has taken to Himself a son.' Celebrated be His praises ! He is the rich one ! His is whatever is in the heavens, and whatever is in the earth. Ye have no authority for this ! will ye say against God, that which ye do not know ?

[70] Say, ' Verily, those who forge against God a lie shall not prosper !'

A provision in this world—then unto us is their return ! then we will make them taste keen torment for that they misbelieved.

Recite to them the story of Noah, when he said to his people, ' O my people ! if my stay with you be grievous to you, and my reminding you of the signs of God, yet upon God do I rely ! Collect then your affairs and your associates¹; nor let your affair (be ordered) for you in the dark; then decide respecting me, and do not wait; and if ye turn your backs, I ask you not for hire; my hire is only due from God, and I am bidden to be of those resigned.' But they called him a liar; and we saved him, and those with him, in the ark; and we made these² successors, and drowned those who had said our signs were lies; see then how was the end of those who had been warned!

[75] Then we raised up after him apostles unto their people, and they came to them with manifest signs; but they would not believe in what they had called a lie before. Thus do we set a stamp upon the hearts of the transgressors.

Then we raised up after them Moses and Aaron, unto Pharaoh and his chiefs with our signs; but they were too big with pride, and were a sinful people; and when the truth came to them from us they said, verily, 'This is obvious sorcery.'

Moses said, 'Will ye say of the truth when it comes to you, Is this sorcery? But sorcerers shall not prosper.'

They said, 'Hast thou come to turn us away from what we found our fathers at, that there may be for you twain grandeur in the earth? but we will not believe you.'

[80] And Pharaoh said, 'Bring me every knowing sorcerer;' and when the sorcerers came, Moses said to them, 'Throw down what ye have to throw!' and when they threw down, Moses said, 'What ye have brought is sorcery! verily, God will make it vain; verily, God rights not the work of evil-doers !'

¹ Your idols.

² Noah's people.

But God verifies the truth by His words, although the sinners are averse therefrom.

But none believed in Moses, save a race of his own people, through fear of Pharaoh and his chiefs; lest he should afflict them, for verily, Pharaoh was lofty in the earth, and verily, he was extravagant.

And Moses said, 'O my people! if ye did believe in God, then on Him rely, if ye be resigned.' [85] They said, 'Upon God do we rely. O our Lord! make us not a cause of trial for a people who do wrong, but save us by Thy mercy from the people who misbelieve!'

And we inspired Moses and his brother thus, 'Establish, ye twain, houses for your people in Egypt; and make ye your houses a qiblah¹; and be ye steadfast in prayer, and give glad tidings to those who believe.'

Moses said, 'O our Lord! verily, Thou hast brought to Pharaoh and his chiefs ornaments and wealth in the life of this world; O our Lord! that they may err from Thy way! O our Lord! confound their wealth and harden their hearts that they may not believe until they see grievous woe!' He said, 'Your prayer is answered; be upright then, ye two, and follow not the path of those who do not know!'

[90] And we brought the children of Israel across the sea; and Pharaoh and his hosts followed them eager and hostile, until when drowning overtook him, he said, 'I believe that there is no god but

¹ I. e. adapt them by their position and construction to become places in which prayer may be performed.

He in whom the children of Israel believe, and I am of those who are resigned !'—' Now¹ ! but thou didst rebel aforetime, and wert of those who do evil ; but to-day we will save thee in thy body, that thou mayest be to those who come after thee a sign, for verily, many men are careless of our signs² !'

And we established the people of Israel with a sure establishment, and we provided them with good things ; nor did they disagree until there came to them the knowledge. Verily, thy Lord shall decide between them on the resurrection day concerning that whereon they did dispute.

And if thou art in doubt of that which we have sent down unto thee, ask those who read the Book before thee ; verily, the truth is come to thee from thy Lord, be not then of those who are in doubt. And be not of those who say the signs of God are lies, or thou wilt be of those who lose !
[95] Verily, those against whom God's word is pronounced will not believe, even though there come to them every sign, until they see the grievous woe. Were it not so, a city would have believed and its faith would have profited it. But (none did) except the people of Jonas ; when they believed we removed from them the torment of disgrace in this world, and we gave them provision for a while. But had thy Lord pleased, all who are in the earth would have believed altogether ; as for thee, wilt thou force men to become believers ?

¹ This is supposed to be the taunting reply of the angel Gabriel.

² Compare Exodus xiv. 30. The Mohammedan legend is that as some of the children of Israel doubted whether Pharaoh was really drowned, the angel Gabriel caused the naked corpse to swim that they might see it.

[100] It is not for any person to believe save by the permission of God; He puts horror on those who have no sense.

Say, 'Behold what is in the heavens and in the earth! but signs and warners avail not a people who do not believe. Do they await aught but the like of the days of those who passed away before them?' Say, 'Wait ye then! verily, I am with you one of those who wait.' Then we will save our apostles and those who believe; thus is it due from us to save believers.

Say, 'O ye folk! if ye are in doubt concerning my religion, I will not worship those ye worship other than God; but I worship God, who takes you to Himself, and I am bidden to be of the believers!' [105] And, 'Make steadfast thy face to the religion as a 'Hanif¹; and be not of the idolaters; and call not besides God on what can neither profit thee nor harm thee; for if thou dost, verily, thou art then of the unjust!'

And should God touch thee with harm, there is none to remove it save He; and if He wish thee well, there is none to repel His grace; He makes it fall on whom He will of His servants; for He is pardoning and merciful!

Say, 'O ye people! there has come to you the truth from your Lord, and he who is guided, his guidance is only for his soul; and he who errs, errs only against it; and I am not a guardian over you.'

Follow what is revealed to thee, and be patient until God judges, for He is the best of judges.

¹ See p. 19, note 1.

THE CHAPTER OF HÛD.

(XI. Mecca.)

A. L. R. A book whose signs are confirmed and then detailed, from the wise one, the aware : that ye worship not other than God,—verily, I am to you from Him a warner and a herald of glad tidings ; and that ye seek pardon from your Lord, then turn again to Him ! He will cause you to enjoy a good provision to a named and appointed time, and will give His grace to every one deserving grace ; but if ye turn your backs, I fear for you the torment of a great day.

Unto God is your return, and He is mighty over all.

[5] Do they not, verily, fold up their breasts, that they may hide from Him ? But when they cover themselves with their garments, does He not know what they conceal and what they display ? verily, He knows the nature of men's breasts !

There is no beast that walks upon the earth but its provision is from God. He knows its settlement and its resting-place ; all is in the perspicuous Book.

He it is who created the heavens and the earth in six days, and His throne was upon the water¹ that He might try you, which of you did best.

[10] But shouldst thou say, 'Ye will be raised up after death,' those who misbelieve will surely say, 'This is naught but obvious sorcery;' and if we keep back from them the torment to a stated generation, they will surely say, 'What hinders it?'—Aye! on the day it comes to them there is no turning it away from them, but that shall close in on them at which they mocked.

¹ That is, before the creation ; see Genesis i. 2.

And if we make man taste of mercy from us and then strip it off from him, verily, he is despairing, ungrateful; and if we make him taste of comfort after distress has touched him, he will surely say, 'The evils have gone away from me;' verily, then he is joyful and boasting. Save those who are patient and do right; these—for them is pardon and a mighty hire!

[15] Haply thou art leaving part of what is revealed to thee and thy breast is straitened thereby, lest they should say, 'Why is not a treasure sent down to him? or why did not an angel come with him?—thou art only a warner, and God is guardian over all.'

Or they will say, 'He hath devised it;' say, 'Bring ten sûrahs like it devised; and call upon whom ye can beside God, if ye do tell the truth!' And if they do not answer, then know that it is revealed by the knowledge of God, and that there is no god but He—are ye then resigned?

Whosoever shall wish for the life of this world and its ornaments, we will pay them their works therein, and they shall not be cheated. These are those for whom there is nothing in the hereafter save the Fire; and void is what they made therein, and vain what they were doing!

[20] Is he (like them) who stands upon a manifest sign from his Lord, which is a witness from Him, and recites it, with the book of Moses before him for a model and a mercy? These believe in it; and whosoever of the crews¹ disbelieves in him, the Fire is his promise.

Be not thou in doubt about it; verily, it is truth from thy Lord, though most men do not believe.

Who is more unjust than he who forges against God a lie? they shall be set before their Lord, and the witnesses shall say, 'These it is who lied against their Lord.' Aye! God's curse is on the unjust who turn men away from the path, and crave to make it crooked, and in the hereafter disbelieve! They cannot make Him helpless in the earth, nor have they other than God for patrons. Doubled for them is the torment. They could not hear, nor did they see! Those it is who lose themselves; and that which they did devise has strayed away from them. No doubt but that in the hereafter these are those who lose!

[25] Verily, those who believe and do what is right, and humble themselves to their Lord, they are the fellows of Paradise; they shall dwell therein for aye. The two parties' likeness is as the blind and the deaf, and the seeing and the hearing; shall they two be equal in likeness? will ye not mind?

We did send Noah unto his people, 'Verily, I am to you an obvious warner; that ye should not worship any save God. Verily, I fear for you the torment of the grievous day. But the chiefs of those who misbelieved amongst his people said, 'We only see in thee a mortal like ourselves; nor do we see that any follow thee except the reprobates amongst us by a rash judgment; nor do we see that you have any preference over us; nay more, we think you liars!' [30] He said, 'O my people! let us see! if I stand upon a manifest sign from my Lord, and there come to me mercy from him, and ye are blinded to it; shall we force you to it while ye are averse therefrom?

¹ That is, of the idolater.

'O my people! I do not ask you for wealth in return for it; my hire is only from God; nor do I repulse those who believe; verily, they shall meet their Lord. But I see you, a people who are ignorant. O my people! who will help me against God, were I to repulse you? do ye not then mind? I do not say that I have the treasures of God; nor do I know the unseen; nor do I say, "Verily, I am an angel;" nor do I say of those whom your eyes despise, "God will never give them any good!"—God knows best what is in their souls—verily, then should I be of the unjust.'

They said, 'O Noah! thou hast wrangled with us, and hast multiplied wranglings with us; bring us then what thou hast threatened us with, if thou art of those who tell the truth.' [35] Said he, 'God will only bring it on you if He pleases, nor can ye make Him helpless; nor will my advice profit you, should I wish to advise you, if God wish to lead you into error. He is your Lord, and unto Him shall ye be returned.'

Do they say, 'He has devised it¹?' Say, 'If I have devised it, then on me be my sin. But I am clear of that wherein ye sin.'

And Noah was inspired, 'None shall surely believe amongst thy people but those who have believed already; take not then ill that which they do. And make the ark under our eyes, and at our inspiration; and plead not with me for those who have done wrong; verily, they shall be drowned.'

¹ The Qur'ân.

[40] So he made the ark, and every time the chiefs of his people passed by him they jested at him. Said he, 'If ye jest at us, verily, we shall jest at you even as ye are jesting, and ye shall surely know.'

'He to whom a torment comes, it shall shame him, and there shall light upon him lasting torment.'

Until at length when our order came, and the oven boiled¹, we said, 'Load therein of every kind two, and likewise thy family,—save those on whom the sentence has already been passed—likewise those who believe;' but there believed not with him save a few. And he said, 'Ride ye therein; in the name of God is its course, and its mooring. Verily, my Lord is forgiving and merciful.'

And it floated on with them mid waves like mountains; and Noah cried to his son who had gone aside, 'O my boy! ride with us and be not with the misbelievers.' [45] Said he, 'I will betake me to a mountain that shall save me from the water.' Said he, 'There is none to save to-day from the command of God, except for him on whom He may have mercy.' And the wave came between them, and he was amongst the drowned².

And it was said, 'O earth! swallow down thy

¹ Tannûr (oven) signifies also a reservoir of water. Its use in this passage has, however, given rise to some ridiculous superstitions amongst the Mohammedans as to the origin of the deluge.

² This story and the further allusion to Noah's son in the next page were probably suggested by Genesis ix. 20-25.

water!' and, 'O heaven! hold!' and the water abated; and the affair was decided, and it¹ settled on Gûdî², and it was said, 'Away with the people who are evildoers!'

And Noah went unto his Lord and said, 'My Lord, verily, my son is of my people, and, verily, Thy promise is true, and Thou art the justest of judges.' He said, 'O Noah! he is not of thy people; verily, it is a work that is not right. Then, ask me not for that of which thou knowest naught. Verily, I admonish thee that thou shouldst not be of the ignorant.' He said, 'My Lord, verily, I seek refuge in Thee from asking Thee for aught of which I know nothing; and, unless Thou dost forgive me and have mercy on me, I shall be of those who lose.'

[50] It was said, 'O Noah! descend in safety from us, and blessings upon thee and upon (some) nations of those who are with thee³; but (some) nations we will allow to enjoy prosperity and then there shall touch them from us grievous woe.' These are stories of the unseen which we reveal to thee; thou didst not know them, thou nor thy people before this. Be patient, then; verily, the issue is for those who fear.

And unto 'Âd (we sent) their brother Hûd; he said, 'O my people! serve God; ye have no god but Him. Ye do but devise a lie. O my people! I do not ask you for hire in return; my hire is only from Him who created me : have ye then no sense ?

¹ The ark.

² Gûdî is a corruption apparently for Mount Giordi, the Gordyæi of the Greeks, situated between Armenia and Mesopotamia.

³ I. e. upon some of the nations who are to form the posterity of thyself and the members of thy family saved with thee.

‘O my people! ask pardon of your Lord ; then turn to Him ; He will send the skies down on you in torrents ; [55] and He will add strength to your strength : do not then turn back sinners.’

They said, ‘O Hûd ! thou hast not come to us with a manifest sign ; nor will we leave our gods at thy word ; nor will we believe in thee. We can only say that some of our gods have attacked thee with evil.’ Said he, ‘Verily, I call God to witness, and do ye bear witness too, that I am free from that which ye associate beside Him.

‘Plot then against me altogether, and give me no delay. Verily, I rely upon God, my Lord and your Lord. There is no beast that walks, but He taketh it by its forelock. Verily, my Lord is on the right way !

[60] ‘But if ye turn your backs,—then I have conveyed to you what I was sent to you with ; and my Lord will make another people your successors. Ye cannot harm Him at all ; verily, my Lord is guardian over all !’

And when our order came we saved Hûd, and those who believed with him, by mercy from us ; and we saved them from harsh torment. That (tribe of) ‘Âd denied the signs of their Lord, and rebelled against His apostles, and followed the bidding of every headstrong tyrant. They were followed in this world by a curse, and on the resurrection day—‘Did not ‘Âd disbelieve their Lord ? Aye ! away with ‘Âd the people of Hûd !’

And unto Thamûd (we sent) their brother Zâli’h ; said he, ‘O my people ! worship God ; ye have no god but Him. He it is that produced you from the earth, and made you live therein! Then ask pardon of Him; then turn again to Him: verily, my Lord is nigh and answers!

[65] They said, 'O Zâli'h! thou wert amongst us one we hoped in before this: dost thou forbid us to worship what our fathers worshipped? verily, we are in hesitating doubt as to that to which thou callest us.'

He said, 'O my people! let us see; if I stand upon a manifest sign from my Lord, and there come from Him mercy, who will help me against God if I rebel against Him? Ye will add only to my loss.

'O my people! this she-camel¹ of God is a sign for you; leave her, then, to feed in God's earth, and touch her not with evil, or there will catch you torment that is nigh.' But they did hamstring her, and he said, 'Enjoy yourselves in your houses for three days;—that is the promise that shall not be belied.'

And when our order came we saved Zâli'h, and those who believed with him, by our mercy, from disgrace upon that day. Verily, thy Lord He is powerful and mighty.

[70] And the noise caught those who had done wrong; and on the morrow they were lying corpses in their houses, as though they had never dwelt therein. Did not Thamûd indeed disbelieve in their Lord? Aye! away with Thamûd!

Our messengers did come to Abraham with glad tidings; they said, 'Peace!' He said, 'Peace be it!' nor did he delay to bring the roasted calf. But when he saw that their hands reached not thereto, he could not understand them, and harboured fear of them. They said, 'Fear not. Verily, we are sent unto the people of Lot.' And his wife was standing by, laughing; and we gave her the glad tidings of Isaac, and of Jacob after Isaac. [75] Said she, 'Alas for me! shall I bear a son when I am an old woman, and this husband of mine an old man? Verily, this is a wonderful thing!' They said, 'Dost thou wonder at the bidding of God? God's mercy and blessings upon you, ye people of the house! Verily, He is to be praised and glorified.'

¹ See note, p. 107.

And when his terror left Abraham, and the glad tidings came to him, he wrangled with us about the people of Lot; verily, Abraham was clement, pitiful, relenting.

'O Abraham! avoid this; verily, the bidding of thy Lord has come; verily, there is coming to them torment that cannot be put off.'

[80] And when our messengers came to Lot, he was grieved for them; but his arm was straitened for them¹, and he said, 'This is a troublesome day!' And his people came to him, rushing at him, for before that they used to work evil. He said, 'O my people! here are my daughters, they are purer for you; then, fear God, and do not disgrace me through my guests;—is there not among you one right-thinking man?'

They said, 'Thou knowest that we have no claim on thy daughters; verily, thou knowest what we want!' He said, 'Had I but power over you; or could I but resort to some strong column¹. . . !' (The angels) said, 'O Lot! verily, we are the messengers of thy Lord, they shall certainly not reach thee; then travel with thy people in the darkness of the night, and let none of you look round except thy wife: verily, there shall befall her what befalls them. Verily, their appointment is for the morning! and is not the morning nigh?'

¹ I. e. he was powerless to help them.

And when our bidding came, we made their high parts their low parts². And we rained down upon them stones and baked clay³ one after another, marked⁴, from thy Lord, and these are not so far from the unjust⁵!

[85] And unto Midian (we sent) their brother Sho'hâib⁶. He said, 'O my people! serve God; ye have no god but Him, and give not short measure and weight. Verily, I see you well off; but, verily, I fear for you the torments of an encompassing day. O my people! give measure and weight fairly, and defraud not men of their things; and wreak not wrong in the earth, corrupting it. God's residue⁷

¹ I. e. some support, such as a powerful clan or chieftain.

² That is, overturned the cities of the plain.

³ The Abyssinians, who had invaded Mecca some years before, are mentioned in the Chapter of the Elephant (CV) as being destroyed in a similar manner by flocks of birds, who threw down such missiles upon them.

⁴ The legend is that they each contained the name of the person for whom they were destined; so the old saying, 'every bullet has its billet.'

⁵ I. e. the same punishment is likely to overtake other wrong-doers, the threat being especially directed against the unbelieving inhabitants of Mecca.

⁶ See Chapter VII.

⁷ A little which God leaves you after paying every one his due.

is better for you if ye be believers. But I am not a guardian over you.'

They said, 'O Sho'hâib! Do thy prayers bid thee that we should forsake what our fathers served, or that we should not do as we please with our wealth? Thou art, forsooth, the clement and straightforward one!'

[90] He said, 'O my people! Do ye see? If I stand upon a manifest sign from my Lord; and He provides me from Himself with a goodly provision, and I consent not with you to that which I forbid you, I only wish to better you so far as I can,—nor comes my grace through any one but God; on Him do I rely, and unto Him I turn. O my people! let not a breach with me make you so sin that there befall you the like of that which befel the people of Noah, or the people of Hûd, or the people of Zâli'h—nor are the people of Lot so far from you! Ask pardon, then, from your Lord, then turn to Him; verily, my Lord is merciful, loving!'

They said, 'O Sho'hâib! we do not understand much of what thou sayest, and we see that thou art weak amongst us; and were it not for thy family we would stone thee, nor couldst thou be powerful over us.'

He said, 'O my people! are my family more esteemed by you than God? or have you taken Him as something to cast behind your backs? Verily, my Lord, whate'er ye do, doth comprehend. [95] O my people! act according to your power; verily, I too will act, and ye at length shall know! To whomsoever torment comes it shall disgrace him, and him who is a liar. Watch then; verily, I with you am watching too!'

And when our bidding came we saved Sho'hâib, and those who believed with him, by our mercy; and the noise caught those who had done wrong, and on the morrow they were in their houses prone, as though they had not dwelt therein. Aye! 'Away with Midian!' as it was, 'Away with Thamûd!'

And we sent Moses with our signs and with obvious power unto Pharaoh and his chiefs; but they followed Pharaoh's bidding, and Pharaoh's bidding was not straightforward.

[100] He shall approach his people on the resurrection day, and take them down to water¹ at the Fire,—an evil watering-place to water at!

In this (world) were they followed by a curse; and on the resurrection day evil shall be the aid they are aided with!

That is one of the stories of the cities which we recite to thee—some of them are standing now and some mown down!

We did not wrong them, but they wronged themselves. Their gods availed them naught, on which they called instead of God, when once the bidding of thy Lord had come; nor did they add save to their downfall!

Thus is thy Lord's overtaking when He overtakes the cities that have done wrong; verily, His overtaking is grievous, keen.

[105] Verily, in that is a sign to him who fears the torment of the last day;—that is a day unto which men shall be gathered;—that is a witnessed day!

¹ The word used is that always applied by desert Arabs to going to a spring for water.

We will not delay it, save unto a numbered and appointed time. The day when it shall come no soul shall speak save by His permission, and amongst them (shall be) the wretched and the glad.

And as for those who are wretched—why, in the Fire! there shall they groan and sob! to dwell therein for aye, so long as the heavens and the earth endure; save what thy Lord will. Verily, thy Lord is one who works His will.

[110] And as for those who are glad—why, in Paradise! to dwell therein for aye, so long as the heavens and the earth endure; save what thy Lord will¹,—a ceaseless boon!

Be not then in doubt concerning what these men do serve;—they only serve as their fathers served before; and we will give them their portion undiminished.

We gave Moses the Book before, and then they disagreed concerning it, and, had it not been for a word that had been passed by thy Lord, it would have been decided between them; but, verily, they are (still) in hesitating doubt concerning it.

But, verily, every one thy Lord will surely repay for their works; verily, He of what they do is well aware!

Do thou then be upright, as thou art bidden, and whosoever turns repentantly with thee; and transgress ye not:—verily, He on what ye do doth look.

[115] Lean not unto those who do wrong, lest the Fire touch you, for ye have no patrons but God; and, moreover, ye shall not be helped!

¹ I. e. unless He please to increase their happiness.

And be thou steadfast in prayer at the two ends of the day, and the (former and latter) parts of the night. Verily, good works remove evil works;—that is a reminder to the mindful! And be thou patient, for God wastes not the hire of those who do good.

And were there among the generations before you any endowed with a remnant (of piety) forbidding evildoing in the earth, save a few of those whom we saved; but the evildoers followed what they enjoyed, and were sinners.

Thy Lord would not have destroyed the cities unjustly while the people of them were welldoers.

[120] Had thy Lord pleased, He would have made men one nation; but they will not cease to differ, save those thy Lord has had mercy on. For this has He created them, and the word of thy Lord is fulfilled, 'I will surely fill hell with ginns and mankind altogether.'

And all that we relate to thee of the stories of the apostles is what will stablish thy heart: and herein has the truth come to thee, and an admonition and a reminder to the believers.

Say to those who believe not, 'Act according to your power, verily, we are acting too! And wait ye, verily, we are waiting too!'

God's are the unseen things of the heavens and of the earth; and unto Him the affair doth all return. Then serve Him and rely on Him; for thy Lord is not heedless of that which ye do.

THE CHAPTER OF JOSEPH, (PEACE BE ON HIM!)

(XII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

A. L. R. Those are the signs of the perspicuous Book. Verily, we have revealed it, an Arabic Qur'ân; haply ye may understand.

We tell thee the best of stories, in inspiring thee with this Qur'ân, though thou wert before it among the heedless.

When Joseph said to his father, 'O my sire! verily, I saw eleven stars, and the sun, and the moon,—I saw them adoring me!'

[5] He said, 'O my boy! tell not thy vision to thy brethren, for they will plot a plot against thee; verily, the devil is to man an open foe.'

Thus does thy Lord choose thee, and teach thee the interpretation of sayings, and fulfil His favour upon thee, and upon Jacob's people, as He fulfilled it upon thy two forefathers before thee, Abraham and Isaac,—verily, thy Lord is knowing, wise!

In Joseph and his brethren were signs to those who enquire!

When they said, 'Surely, Joseph and his brother are dearer to our father than we, a band¹ although we be; verily, our father is in obvious error.

'Slay Joseph, or cast him in some land; that your father's face may be free for you, and ye may be, after he is gone, a people who do right.'

[10] A speaker from amongst them spake, 'Slay

¹ The word means a band of between twenty and forty persons.

not Joseph, but throw him into the bottom of the pit; some of the travellers may pick him up, if so ye do.'

Said they, 'O our father! what ails thee that thou wilt not trust us with Joseph while we are unto him sincere? Send him with us to-morrow to revel and to play, and, verily, we over him will keep good guard.'

Said he, 'Verily, it grieves me that ye should go off with him, for I fear lest the wolf devour him while ye of him do take no heed.'

Said they, 'Why, if the wolf should devour him while we are (such) a band, verily, we then should deserve to lose!'

[15] And when they had gone off with him and agreed to put him in the depths of the pit, and we inspired him, 'Thou shalt surely inform them of this affair of theirs and they shall not perceive¹.'

And they came to their father at eve and weeping said, 'O our father! verily, we went forth to race and left Joseph by our goods, and the wolf devoured him,—but thou wilt not believe us, truth tellers though we be.'

And they brought his shirt with lying blood upon it. Said he, 'Nay, but your souls have induced you to do this; but patience is fair! and God is He whom I ask for aid against that which ye describe.'

And travellers came and sent their water-drawer; and he let down his bucket. Said he, 'O glad tidings! this is a youth.' And they kept him secret, as a chattel; but God knew what they were doing.

¹ This is a prophetic intimation to Joseph of his future interview with his brethren in Egypt.

[20] And they sold him for a mean price,—drachmæ counted out,—and they parted with him cheaply.

And the man from Egypt who had bought him said to his wife, 'Honour his abiding here; it may be he will be of use to us, or we may adopt him as a son.'

Thus did we stablish Joseph in the land; and we did surely teach him the interpretation of sayings; for God can overcome His affairs, though most men do not know.

And when he had reached his strength¹ we brought him judgment and knowledge, for thus do we reward those who do good.

And she in whose house he was desired him for his person; and she locked the doors and said, 'Come along with thee!' Said he, 'Refuge in God! verily, my Lord has made good my abiding here; verily, the wrong-doers shall not prosper.'

And she was anxious for him, and he would have been anxious for her, had it not been that he saw the demonstration² of his Lord; thus did we turn evil and fornication from him; verily, he was of our sincere servants.

[25] And they raced to the door and she rent his shirt from behind; and they met her master at the door. Said she, 'What is the recompense of him who wishes evil for thy family, but that imprisonment or a grievous torment?'

Said he, 'She desired me for my person.' And a witness from among her family bore witness : ' If his shirt be rent from in front, then she speaks the truth and he is of the liars ; but if his shirt be rent from behind, then she lies and he is of the truth tellers.'

¹ The age of puberty.

² The angel Gabriel in the form of his father appeared with a warning gesture, according to the Muslim commentators.

And when he saw his shirt rent from behind he said, ' This is one of your tricks ; verily, your tricks are mighty ! Joseph ! turn aside from this. And do thou, woman, ask pardon for thy fault ; verily, thou wert of the sinners.'

[30] And women in the city said, ' The wife of the prince desires her young man for his person ; he has infatuated her with love : verily, we see her in obvious error.' And when she heard of their craftiness, she sent to them and prepared for them a banquet, and gave each of them a knife ; and she said, ' Come forth to them !' And when they saw him they said, ' Great God !' and cut their hands ¹ and said, ' God forbid ! This is no mortal, this is nothing but an honourable angel.' Said she, ' This is he concerning whom ye blamed me. I did desire him for his person, but he was too continent. But if he do not what I bid him he shall surely be imprisoned and shall surely be among the small !' Said he, ' My Lord ! Prison is dearer to me than what they call on me to do ; and unless Thou turn from me their craftiness I shall feel a passion for them and shall be among the ignorant !' And his Lord answered him and turned from him their craftiness ; verily, He both hears and knows !

[35] Then it appeared good to them, even after they had seen the signs ², to imprison him until a time.

¹ In their sudden emotion at his beauty.

² Of his innocence.

And there entered the prison with him two young men. Said one of them, 'Verily, I see myself¹ pressing wine.' And the other said, 'Verily, I see myself bearing on my head loaves from which the birds do eat; inform us of the interpretation thereof; verily, we see that thou art of those who do good.'

He said, 'There shall not come to you any food with which ye are provided, but I will inform you both of its interpretation before it comes to you. That is (some) of what my Lord has taught me; verily, I have left the faith of a people who do not believe in God, while in the future too they disbelieve. And I have followed the faith of my fathers, Abraham and Isaac and Jacob; we could not associate aught with God; that is from God's grace upon us and upon men: but most men give not thanks. O ye twain fellow-prisoners! Are manifold lords better, or God, the one, the dominant? [40] What ye worship beside Him are naught but names which ye have named, ye and your fathers, for which God has sent down no authority. Judgment is only God's; He bids you worship only Him. That is the standard of religion,—but most men do not know. O ye twain fellow-prisoners! as for one of you, he shall pour out wine for his lord: and as for the other, he shall be crucified, and the birds shall eat of his head. The matter is decreed whereon ye asked me for a decision!'

And he said to him whom he thought would escape of those two, 'Remember me with thy lord!' But Satan made him² forget the remembrance of his lord, so he tarried in prison a few years.

¹ In a dream.

² The application of the pronoun is vague in the text of this

Then said the king, 'Verily, I see seven fat kine which seven lean kine devoured; and seven green ears of corn and others dry. O ye chiefs! Explain to me my vision, if a vision ye can expound!'

Said they, 'Confused dreams, and naught of the exposition of such dreams know we!'

[45] Then he who had escaped of those twain said,—remembering after a while,—'Verily, I will inform you of the interpretation thereof, so send me.'

'Joseph! O thou truth teller! explain to us the seven fat kine which seven lean devoured; and the seven green ears of corn and others dry. Haply I may go back to the men, haply they then may know!'

He said, 'Ye shall sow for seven years, as is your wont; but what ye reap, let it remain in the ear, except a little whereof ye shall eat. Then there shall come after that seven severe (years) which shall devour what ye have put by before for them, save a little of what ye shall preserve. Then there will come after that a year in which men shall have rain and in which they shall press¹.'

[50] Then said the king, 'Bring him to me.'

And when the messenger came to him, he said, 'Go back to thy lord, and ask him, "What meant the women who cut their hands? Verily, my lord knows their craftiness!"'

He said, 'What was your design when ye desired Joseph for his person?' They said, 'God passage, which is variously interpreted, either that Satan made the butler forget to mention Joseph to his lord Pharaoh, or that Satan made Joseph forget for the moment his Lord God, and place his trust on the man rather than on Him.

¹ I. e. press wine and oil.

forbid! we know no bad of him.' Said the wife of the prince, 'Now does the truth appear! I desired him for his person and, verily, he is of those who tell the truth.'

'That' (said Joseph) 'was that he might know that I did not betray him in his absence, and that God guides not the craft of those who do betray! Yet I do not clear myself, for the soul is very urgent to evil, save what my Lord has had mercy on; verily, my Lord is forgiving and merciful!'

And the king said, 'Bring him to me. I will take him specially for myself.' And when he had spoken with him he said, 'Verily, to-day thou art with us in a permanent place of trust.'

[55] He said, 'Place me over the treasures of the land; verily, I will be a knowing keeper.'

Thus did we stablish Joseph in the land that he might settle in what part thereof he pleased—we overtake with our mercy whom we will, nor do we waste the hire of those who do good; and surely the hire of the future life is better for those who believe and who have feared.

And his brethren came to Joseph, and they entered in unto him and he knew them, but they recognised not him.

And when he had equipped them with their equipment he said, 'Bring me a brother that ye have from your father; do ye not see that I give good measure, and that I am the best of entertainers? [60] But if ye bring him not to me, no measure shall ye have with me, nor shall ye come nigh me.'

They said, 'We will desire him of our father, and we will surely do it.'

Then he said to his young men, 'Put their chattels¹ in their packs, haply they may know it when they are come back to their family; haply they may return.'

And when they returned to their father, they said, 'O our father! Measure is withheld from us; so send with us our brother that we may get measure, and, verily, him we will keep!'

He said, 'Shall I entrust you with him, save as I entrusted you with his brother before? but God is the best of keepers, and He is the most merciful of the merciful.'

[65] And when they opened their goods they found their chattels restored to them. Said they, 'O our father! What more can we crave? Here are our chattels restored to us, and we shall guard our brother, and shall have an additional measure beside that—a small measure².'

He said, 'I will by no means send him with you until you give me a compact from God that ye will surely bring him to me, unless ye be encompassed³.'

So when they had given him their compact he said, 'God over what ye say has charge.'

And he said, 'O my sons! enter not by one gate, but enter by several gates; but I cannot avail you aught against God. Judgment is only God's; upon Him do I rely, and on Him do the reliant rely.'

¹ The goods which they had brought to barter, or the money they had paid for the corn.

² Commentators differ as to whether this means that what they had brought was insufficient, or whether the additional measure was a small quantity for Pharaoh to bestow, or whether Jacob utters the words meaning that it is not enough to induce him to part with his son.

³ By some unavoidable hindrance.

And when they had entered as their father bade them, it availed them nothing against God, save for a want in Jacob's soul which it fulfilled; for, verily, he was possessed of knowledge, for that we had taught him;—but most men do not know.

And when they entered in unto Joseph, he took his brother to stay with him, and said, 'Verily, I am thy brother—then take not ill that which they have been doing.'

[70] And when he had equipped them with their equipment he placed the drinking cup in his brother's pack; then a crier cried out, 'O ye caravan! verily, ye are thieves!'

They said, approaching them, 'What is it that ye miss?'

Said they, 'We miss the goblet of the king, and whoso brings it shall have a camel-load, and I am guarantee thereof.'

They said, 'By God! Ye knew we came not to do evil in the land, and that we were not thieves.'

They said, 'And what shall be the recompense thereof if ye be liars?'

[75] They said, 'The recompense thereof is he in whose pack it is found—he shall be the recompense thereof; thus do we recompense the unjust.'

And he began with their sacks before the sacks of his brother; then he drew it forth from his brother's sack. Thus did we devise a stratagem for Joseph. He could not take his brother by the king's religion¹ except God pleased;—we raise the degrees of whomsoever we please, and over every possessor of knowledge is one who knows.

¹ I. e. by the law of Egypt it was not lawful for Joseph to take his brother for a bondsman as a punishment for theft.

They said, 'If he has stolen, a brother of his has stolen before him.'

But Joseph kept it secret in his soul and disclosed it not to them. Said he, 'Ye are in a bad case, and God knows best about what ye describe.'

They said, 'O prince! Verily, he has a father, a very old man; take then one of us instead of him; verily, we can see that thou art of those who do good.'

Said he, '(I seek) refuge in God from taking any save him with whom we found our property; verily, we should then be certainly unjust.'

[80] And when they despaired of him they retired to consult privately. Said the eldest of them, 'Do ye not know that your father has taken a compact from God against you? Aforetime ye exceeded in the matter of Joseph—I will surely not quit the land until my father give me leave, or God judge for me, for He is the best of judges.'

'Return ye to your father and say, "O our father! verily, thy son has committed theft, and we bore testimony to naught but what we knew; for of the unforeseen we were not keepers!"'

'Ask then in the city where we were, and of the caravan in which we approached it, for, verily, we tell the truth.'

Said he, 'Nay, your souls have induced you to do this thing. But patience is fair. It may be that God will give me them all together;—verily, He is knowing, wise.'

And he turned away from them and said, 'O my lament for Joseph!' and his eyes grew white with grief, for he repressed (his woe).

[85] They said, 'By God! thou wilt not cease to remember Joseph till thou art at the point of death, or art of those who perish!'

Said he, 'I only complain of my emotion and my grief to God, for I know that from God which ye know nothing of.

'O my sons! go and enquire concerning Joseph and his brother, and despair not of God's comfort; for, verily, none need despair of God's comfort save a misbelieving people!'

And when they entered in unto him they said, 'O prince! distress has touched both us and our families, and we have brought trifling chattels. So give us full measure and bestow upon us in charity; verily, God rewards the charitable.'

He said, 'Do ye know what ye did with Joseph and his brother, while ye were ignorant?'

[90] They said, 'Art thou then indeed Joseph?' He said, 'I am Joseph, and this is my brother; God has been gracious towards us. Verily, whoso fears God and is patient,—verily, God wastes not the hire of those who do good!'

They said, 'By God! God has chosen thee over us; and we indeed were sinners.'

He said, 'No reproach against you to-day! God will pardon you, for He is the most merciful of the merciful. Take this my shirt, and throw it over the face of my father, he will become able to see; and bring me your families all together.'

And when the caravan departed, their father said, 'Verily, I find the smell of Joseph, unless ye think I dote!'

[95] They said, 'By God! thou art in thy old error.' And when the herald of glad tidings came he threw it on his face, and he was restored to sight.

Said he, 'Did I not tell you that I know from God that of which ye know not?'

They said, 'O our father! ask pardon for us of our sins;—verily, we were sinners!'

He said, 'I will ask pardon for you from my Lord; verily, He is the pardoning and merciful.'

[100] And when they entered in unto Joseph, he took his father to stay with him, and said, 'Enter ye into Egypt, if it please God, safe.' And he raised his father upon the throne, and they fell down before him adoring.

And he said, 'O my sire! This is the interpretation of my vision aforetime; my Lord has made it come true, and He has been good to me, in bringing me forth out of prison, and bringing you from the desert, after Satan had made a breach between me and my brethren;—verily, my Lord is kind to whomsoever He will;—verily, He is the knowing, the wise!

'O my Lord! thou hast given me dominion, and hast taught me the interpretation of sayings; O originator of the heavens and the earth! Thou art my patron in this world and the next; take me to Thyself resigned, and let me reach the righteous!'

That is one of the stories of the unseen which we inspire thee with, though thou wert not with them when they agreed in their affair, when they were so crafty.—And yet most men, though thou shouldst be urgent, will not believe.

Thou dost not ask them for it a hire; it is naught but a reminder to the world.

[105] How many a sign in the heavens and the earth do they pass by and turn away therefrom !

Nor do most of them believe in God without associating (other gods) with Him.

Are they safe, then, from overwhelming vengeance coming on them from the torment of God ? or from the Hour coming upon them suddenly while they do not perceive ?

Say, ' This is my way ; I call now unto God on clear proof, I and those who follow me ; and celebrated be God's praises, for I am not of the idolaters.'

Nor did we ever send before thee any save men whom we inspired, of the people of the cities. Have they not journeyed on in the earth, and beheld how was the end of those before them ? But the abode of the future is surely better for those who believe ;—what ! have they then no sense ?

[110] Until when the apostles despaired and they thought that they were proved liars, our help came to them, and whosoever we pleased was saved ; but our violence is not averted from the sinful people.

Their stories were a lesson to those endowed with minds. It was not a tale forged, but a verification of what was before it, and a detailing of everything, and a guide and a mercy to a people who believe.

THE CHAPTER OF THUNDER.

(XIII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

A. L. M. R. Those are the signs of the Book, and that which is sent down to thee from thy Lord is the truth; but most people will not believe. God it is who has raised the heavens without columns that ye can see; then He made for the throne, and subjected the sun and the moon; each one runs on to a stated and appointed time; He governs the affair, details the signs;—haply of the meeting with your Lord ye will be sure.

And He it is who has stretched out the earth and placed therein firm mountains and rivers, and of every fruit has He placed therein two kinds. He makes the night cover the day;—verily, in that are signs unto a people who reflect.

And on the earth are neighbouring portions, and gardens of grapes and corn and palms growing together (from one root) and not growing together; they are watered with one water, yet we distinguish one over the other as food;—verily, in that are signs unto a people who have sense.

[5] And if thou shouldst wonder, wondrous is their speech: 'What! when we have become dust, shall we really then be created anew?'

These are they who disbelieve in their Lord, and these are they with fetters round their necks, and these are the fellows of the Fire; they shall dwell therein for aye!

They will wish thee to hasten on the evil rather than the good ; examples have passed away before them : but thy Lord is possessor of forgiveness unto men, notwithstanding their injustice ; but, verily, thy Lord is keen to punish.

Those who misbelieve say, ' Unless a sign be sent down upon him from his Lord . . . '—Thou art only a warner, and every people has its guide.

God knows what each female bears, and what the wombs fall short of or add ; for dimensions of everything are with Him.

[10] He who knows the unseen and the visible,—the great, the lofty one.

Alike among you is he who keeps secret his speech and he who displays it ; and he who hides by night and he who stalks abroad by day. Each of them has pursuers¹ before him and behind him, to keep guard over him at the command of God ; verily, God changes not what a people has until they change it for themselves. And when God wishes evil to a people there is no averting it, nor have they a protector beside Him.

He it is who shows you the lightning for fear and hope² ; and He brings up the heavy clouds.

And the thunder celebrates His praise, and the angels too for fear of Him ; and He sends the thunder-clap and overtakes therewith whom He will ;—yet they wrangle about God ! But He is strong in might.

[15] On Him is the call of truth, and those who call on others than Him shall not be answered at all, save as one who stretches out his hand to the water that it may reach his mouth, but it reaches it not! The call of the misbelievers is only in error.

¹ Guardian angels.

² I.e. hope of rain ; lightning is always hailed with joy by the Arabs as a precursor of rain.

And God do those who are in the heavens and the earth adore, whether they will or no! as do their shadows also morn and eve.

Say, 'Who is Lord of the heavens and the earth?' say, 'God;'; say, 'Do ye take beside God patrons who cannot control profit or harm for themselves?' say, 'Shall the blind and the seeing be held equal? or shall the darkness and the light be held equal? or have they made associates with God who can create as He creates, so that the creation seem familiar to them?' say, 'God is the creator of everything, and He is the one, the dominant.'

He sends down from the sky water, and the water-courses flow according to their bulk, and the torrent bears along the floating scum: and from what they set fire to, craving ornaments or utensils, comes a scum like that;—thus does God hit the truth and the falsehood;—and as for the scum it is thrown off, and as for what profits man it stays on the earth. Thus does God strike out parables!

For those who respond to their Lord is good; but those who respond not to Him, had they all that is in the earth and the like thereof as well, they would give it for a ransom; these shall have an evil reckoning up! and their resort is hell,—an evil couch shall it be!

Is he who knows that naught but the truth is sent down upon thee from thy Lord like him who is blind? Only those possessed of minds will remember!

[20] Those who fulfil God's covenant and break not the compact, and those who attain what God has bidden to be attained, and dread their Lord and fear the evil reckoning up; and those who are patient, craving their Lord's face, and are steadfast in prayer, and expend in alms of what we have bestowed upon them secretly and openly, and ward off evil with good,—these shall have the recompense of the abode, gardens of Eden, into which they shall enter with the righteous amongst their fathers and their wives and their seed; and the angels shall enter in unto them from every gate:—‘Peace be upon you! for that ye were patient; and goodly is the recompense of the abode.’

[25] And those who break God's covenant after compacting for it, and who cut asunder what God hath bidden to be joined, and who do evil in the earth, these—upon them is the curse of God, and for them is an evil abode.

God extends his bounty freely to whomsoever He will, or He metes it out; and they rejoice in the life of this world, but the life of this world is naught but a (temporary) provision compared with the next.

Those who misbelieve say, ‘Unless a sign is sent down upon him from his Lord’ Say, ‘God leads whom He will astray, but guides unto Him those who turn again.’

‘Those who believe and whose hearts are comforted by the mention of God,—aye! by the mention of God shall their hearts be comforted, who believe and do what is right. Good cheer for them and an excellent resort.’

Thus have we sent thee to a nation before which other nations have passed away, to recite to them that which we have inspired thee with; yet they misbelieve in the merciful! Say, 'He is my Lord; there is no god but He; upon Him do I rely, and unto Him is my repentance.'

[30] And though it were a Qur'ân by which the mountains were moved, or by which the earth were cut up, or the dead made to speak¹—nay, God's is the command altogether! Did not those who believed know² that if God had pleased He would have guided men altogether?

And a striking calamity shall not cease to overtake those who misbelieve for what they have wrought, or to alight close by their dwellings; until God's promise comes—verily, God fails not in His promise.

Before thee have apostles been mocked at; and those who misbelieved have I allowed to range at large; and then it caught them up! How then was my punishment?

Shall He who is standing over every soul (to note) what it has earned——? And they join partners with God! Say, 'Name them; can ye inform Him of what He does not know in the earth? or is it for name's sake only (that ye call upon them)?

'Nay, then, stratagem is made seemly to those who misbelieve, and they turn folks from the path of God! But whomsoever God doth lead astray, no guide has he.'

¹ They would not believe.

² The word used in the original, yâi'as, means 'despair,' but in the patois of the Na'zâ'h tribe signifies 'know,' and is so interpreted by the native commentators on this passage.

For them is torment in this world's life ; but surely the torment of the next is more wretched still—nor have they against God a keeper.

[35] The likeness of the Paradise which those who fear God are promised, beneath it rivers flow, its food is enduring, and likewise its shade! That is the recompense of those who fear ; but the recompense of misbelievers is the Fire!

And those to whom we brought the Book rejoice in that which we have sent down to thee ; but of the confederates are some who deny a part thereof.

Say, 'I am only bidden to serve God and not to associate any with Him ; on Him I call and to Him is my recourse.'

Thus have we sent it down, an Arabic judgment, but hadst thou followed their lusts, after the knowledge that has come to thee, thou hadst not had against God a patron or a keeper.

And we sent apostles before thee, and we made for them wives and seed ; and no apostle could bring a sign save by God's permission ;—for every period there is a book.

God blots out what He will, or He confirms ; and with Him is the Mother of the Book ¹.

[40] Either we will let thee see a part of what we threaten them with, or we will take thee to Ourselves ; but thy duty is only to deliver thy message, and ours to reckon up.

Did they not see that we come to the land and diminish the borders thereof²? God judges, and there is none to reverse His judgment, and He is swift at reckoning up!

¹ See p. 2, note 2.

² Alluding to the conquests of Islâm.

And those who were before them were crafty too; but God's is the craft altogether! He knows what every soul earns; and the misbelievers shall know whose is the recompense of the abode.

And those who misbelieve say, 'Thou art not sent!' Say, 'God is witness enough between me and you; and so is he who has the knowledge of the Book!'

THE CHAPTER OF ABRAHAM, (PEACE BE ON HIM!)

(XIV. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

A. L. M. A book which we have sent down to thee, to bring men forth from darkness into light, by permission of their Lord, unto the way of the mighty and praiseworthy one.

God is He whose is whatsoever is in the heavens and whatsoever is in the earth. Alas for the misbelievers, for their torment is keen! Who love this world's life better than the next, and turn folks from the path of God, and crave to make it crooked; these are in remote error.

We have not sent any apostle save with the language of his people, that he might explain to them. But God leads whom He will astray, and guides whom He will; and He is the mighty, the wise.

[5] We did send Moses with our signs, 'Bring forth thy people from the darkness into the light, and remind them of the days¹ of God!' verily, in that are signs to every patient, grateful one.

When Moses said to his people, 'Remember the favours of God towards you, when He saved you from Pharaoh's people, who sought to wreak you evil woe, slaughtering your sons and letting your women live;' in that was a great trial for you from your Lord. When your Lord proclaimed, 'If ye give thanks I will surely give you increase; but if ye misbelieve, verily, my torment is severe!' And Moses said, 'If ye misbelieve, ye and those who are on the earth altogether—then, verily, God is rich, and to be praised!'

Has not the story come to you of those who were before you, of the people of Noah, and 'Âd, and Thamûd, [10] and those who came after them? none knows them save God. Apostles came unto them with manifest signs; but they thrust their hands into their mouths² and said, 'Verily, we disbelieve in that which ye are sent with, and we are in hesitating doubt concerning that to which ye call us!' Their apostles said, 'Is there doubt about God, the originator of the heavens and the earth? He calls you to pardon you for your sins, and to respite you until an appointed time.'

They said, 'Ye are but mortals like ourselves; ye wish to turn us from what our fathers used to serve. Bring us, then, obvious authority!'

Their apostles said unto them, 'We are only

¹ This may, according to the Arab idiom, mean either 'battles' in which God had given victory to the believers; or simply 'days' on which God has shown them favour.

² Easterns, when annoyed, always bite their hands; see Chapter III, verse 115.

mortals like yourselves ; but God is gracious unto whomsoever He will of His servants, and it is not for us to bring you an authority, save by His permission ; but upon God do the believers rely !' [15] What ails us that we should not rely on God when He has guided us in our paths ? we will be surely patient in your hurting us ; for upon God rely those who do rely.

And those who misbelieved said to their apostles, ' We will drive you forth from our land ; or else ye shall return to our faith !' And their Lord inspired them, ' We will surely destroy the unjust ; and we will make you to dwell in the land after them. That is for him who fears my place and fears my threat !'

Then they asked for an issue ; and disappointed was every rebel tyrant ! Behind such a one is hell, and he shall be given to drink liquid pus¹ ! [20] He shall try to swallow it, but cannot gulp it down ; and death shall come upon him from every place, and yet he shall not die ; and behind him shall be rigorous woe !

The likeness of those who disbelieve on their Lord,—their works are as ashes whereon the wind blows fiercely on a stormy day. They have no power at all over that which they have earned.—That is the remote error !

Dost not thou see that God created the heavens and the earth in truth ? If He please He can take you off and bring a new creation ; nor is that hard for God !

¹ Sale and Rodwell have softened down this filthy expression, one rendering it 'filthy water' and the other 'tainted water;' the Arabic, however, will not bear this rendering. The first word meaning 'water' or 'liquid,' and the second, in apposition with it, 'pus,' or purulent matter oozing from a corpse or a sore.

They all come out to God ; and the weak say to those who were big with pride, ' We were followers of yours, can ye now avail us aught against God's torment ?'

[25] They say, ' If God had guided us we would have guided you. It is the same to us if we are agonized or if we are penitent, we have no escape.'

And Satan says, when the affair is decided, ' Verily, God promised you a promise of truth ; but I promised you and failed you ; for I had no authority over you. I only called you, and ye did answer me ; then blame me not, but blame yourselves ; I cannot help you, nor can you help me. I disbelieved in your associating me (with God) before ; verily, the wrong-doers, for them is grievous woe !'

But I will cause those who believe and do aright to enter gardens beneath which rivers flow, to dwell therein for aye by the permission of their Lord ; their salutation therein is ' Peace !'

Dost thou not see how God strikes out a parable ? A good word is like a good tree whose root is firm, and whose branches are in the sky ; [30] it gives its fruit at every season by the permission of its Lord—but God strikes out parables for men that haply they may be mindful.

And the likeness of a bad word is as a bad tree, which is felled from above the earth, and has no staying place.

God answers those who believe with the sure word in this world's life and in the next ; but God leads the wrong-doers astray; for God does what He will.

Dost not thou see those who have changed God's favours for misbelief, and have made their people to alight at the abode of perdition?—in hell they shall broil, and an ill resting-place shall it be!

[35] And they made peers for God, to lead men astray from His path. Say, 'Enjoy yourselves, for, verily, your journey is to the Fire.'

Say to my servants who believe, that they be steadfast in prayer and expend in alms of what we have bestowed upon them in secret and in public, before there comes the day when there shall be no buying and no friendship.

God it is who created the heavens and the earth; and sent down from the sky water, and brought forth therewith fruits as a provision for you; and subjected to you the ships, to float therein upon the sea at His bidding; and subjected for you the rivers; and subjected for you the sun and the moon, constant both; and subjected for you the night and the day; and brought you of everything ye asked Him: but if ye try to number God's favours, ye cannot count them;—verily, man is very unjust and ungrateful.

And when Abraham said, 'My Lord, make this land¹ safe, and turn me and my sons away from serving idols!

'My Lord, verily, they have led many men astray; but he who follows me, verily, he is of me; but he who rebels against me,—verily, thou art pardoning, merciful!

¹ Mecca and its neighbourhood.

[40] 'O our Lord! verily, I have made some of my seed dwell in a valley without corn, by thy Sacred House¹. O our Lord! let them be steadfast in prayer and make the hearts of men yearn towards them, and provide them with fruits, haply they may give thanks.

'O our Lord! verily, Thou knowest what we hide and what we publish; for naught is hid from God in the earth or in the sky. Praise to God who hath bestowed on me, notwithstanding my old age, Ishmael and Isaac!—verily, my Lord surely hears prayer.

'O my Lord! make me steadfast in prayer, and of my seed likewise! O our Lord! and accept my prayer! O our Lord! pardon me and my parents and the believers on the reckoning day!'

So think not God careless of what the unjust do; He only respites them until the day on which all eyes shall stare!

Hurrying on, raising up their heads, with their looks not turned back to them², and their hearts void; and warn men of the day when the torment shall come!

[45] And those who have done wrong shall say, 'O our Lord! respite us until an appointed time nigh at hand, and we will respond to Thy call, and follow the apostles!'—'What! did ye not swear before, ye should have no decline?'

And ye dwelt in the dwellings of those who had wronged themselves; and it was made plain to you how we did with them; and we struck out parables for you : but they plotted their stratagems, but with God is a stratagem for them, although at their stratagem the mountains should give way.

¹ The Kaabah at Mecca.

² I.e. with their looks fixed straight in front of them through terror.

Think then not indeed that God fails in his promise to his apostles ;—verily, God is mighty, the Lord of vengeance ; on the day when the earth shall be changed for another earth, and the heavens too ; and (all) shall go forth unto God, the one, the dominant.

[50] Thou shalt see the sinners on that day bound together in fetters ; with shirts of pitch, and fire covering their faces ;—that God may reward each soul according to what it has earned ; verily, God is swift at reckoning up !

This is a message to be delivered to men that they may be warned thereby, and know that only He is God,—one,—and that those who have minds may remember.

THE CHAPTER OF EL 'HAGR¹.

(XV. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God !

A. L. R. Those are the signs² of the Book and of a perspicuous Qur'ân.

Many a time will those who disbelieve fain they had been resigned³.

¹ El 'Hagr, literally, 'the rock : ' the Petra of Strabo, and the traditional habitation of 'the people of Thamûd.'

² Verses.

³ See note 1, p. 15.

Leave them to eat and enjoy themselves and let hope beguile them, but they at length shall know!

We never destroyed a city without it had its noted doom.

[5] No nation can hasten on its appointed time, nor put it off.

But they say, 'O thou to whom the Reminder has been sent down! verily, thou art possessed. Why dost thou not bring us the angels if thou dost tell the truth?'

We sent not down the angels save by right; nor even then would these be respited.

Verily, we have sent down the Reminder, and, verily, we will guard it.

[10] And we sent before thee among the sects of those of yore. But there never came an apostle to them but they mocked at him. Such conduct also will we put into the hearts of the sinners. They will not believe therein, but the course of those of yore is run. But had we opened to them a door of the sky and they had mounted up into it all the while; [15] then also had they said, 'Our eye-sight is only intoxicated; nay, we are an enchanted people!'

And we have placed in the sky the signs of the zodiac, and have made them seemly to the beholders; and we have guarded them from every pelted devil¹; save from such as steal a hearing, and there follows him an obvious shooting-star.

And the earth we have stretched out and have thrown on it firm mountains, and have caused to grow upon it of everything a measured quantity.

¹ See note 2, pp. 50, 51.

[20] And we have made for you means of livelihood therein, and for those for whom ye have not to provide.

Nor is there aught but the treasures of it are with us, and we do not send it down save in a noted quantity.

And we send forth the impregnating winds¹, and we send down water from the sky, and we give it to you to drink, nor is it ye who store it up.

And we, verily, we quicken and kill; and we are of (all things) heirs.

And we already know the foremost of you, and we know the laggards too!

[25] And, verily, it is your Lord who will gather you; verily, He is wise and knowing.

And we did create man from crackling clay of black mud wrought in form.

And the jinns had we created before of smokeless fire.

And when thy Lord said to the angels, 'Verily, I am creating a mortal from crackling clay of black mud wrought into shape;

[30] 'And when I have fashioned it, and breathed into it of my spirit, then fall ye down before it adoring.'

And the angels adored all of them together, save Iblîs, who refused to be among those who adored.

He said, 'O Iblîs! what ails thee that thou art not among those who adore?'

¹ I. e. the winds that bring the rain-clouds and fertilise the earth.

Said he, 'I would not adore a mortal whom Thou hast created from crackling clay of black mud wrought into form.'

He said, 'Then get thee forth therefrom, and, verily, thou art to be pelted! [35] And, verily, the curse is upon thee until the day of judgment.'

Said he, 'O my Lord! respite me until the day when they shall be raised.' He said, 'Then, verily, thou art of the respited until the day of the noted time.'

He said, 'O my Lord! for that Thou hast seduced me I will surely make it seem seemly for them on earth, and I will surely seduce them all together; [40] save such of Thy servants amongst them as are sincere.' Said He, 'This is a right way against me. Verily, my servants thou hast no authority over, save over those who follow thee of such as are seduced: and, verily, hell is promised to them all together. It has seven doors; at every door is there a separate party of them.'

[45] Verily, those who fear God shall dwell amidst gardens and springs: 'Enter ye' therein with peace in safety!' And we will strip off whatever ill-feeling is in their breasts; as brethren on couches face to face¹.

No toil shall touch them therein, nor shall they be brought forth therefrom.

Inform my servants that I am the pardoning, the merciful; [50] and that my woe is the grievous woe.

And inform them concerning Abraham's guests

¹ Because to turn their backs on each other would appear contemptuous.

when they entered in unto him and said, 'Peace!' he said, 'Verily, we are afraid of you.' They said, 'Be not afraid! verily, we give thee glad tidings of a knowing boy.' He said, 'Do ye give me this glad tidings although old age has touched me? give me the glad tidings then!' [55] They said, 'We give the glad tidings of the truth, then be not of those who despair!' He said, 'Who would despair of the mercy of his Lord save those who err?' He said, 'What is your business, O ye messengers?' They said, 'Verily, we are sent unto a sinful people; save only Lot's family, them will we save all together, [60] except his wife; we have decreed, verily, she shall be of those who linger.'

And when the messengers came unto Lot's family, he said, 'Verily, ye are a people whom I recognise not.' They said, 'Nay, but we have come to thee with that whereof they¹ did doubt. And we have brought thee the truth, and, verily, we speak the truth! [65] Travel then with thy family in the deep darkness of the night, and follow thou their rear; and let not any one of you turn round to look; but go on to where ye are bidden.'

And we decided for him this affair because the uttermost one of these people should be cut off on the morrow.

Then the people of the city came, glad at the tidings. Said he, 'Verily, these are my guests, therefore disgrace me not; but fear God, and put me not to shame.'

[70] They said, 'Have we not forbidden thee² everybody in the world?' He said, 'Here are

¹ I. e. thy people.

² I. e. to protect.

my daughters, if do it ye must.'—By thy life¹! verily, they were surely in their intoxication blindly wandering on!—

And the noise caught them at the dawn. And we made the higher parts (of the cities) their lower parts, and rained down on them stones of baked clay. [75] Verily, in that is a sign to those who mark. And, verily, the (cities) are on a path that still remains². Verily, in that is a sign to the believers.

And the fellows of the Grove³ too were unjust; and we took vengeance on them, and, verily, they both⁴ are for an obvious example.

[80] And the fellows of El 'Hagr⁵ called the messengers liars, and we brought them our signs, but they therefrom did turn away. And they did hew them in the mountain houses to dwell in in safety.

But the noise caught them in the morn; and that which they had earned availed them naught.

[85] We did not create the heavens and the earth and all that is between them both, save in truth. And, verily, the Hour is surely coming; then do thou pardon with a fair pardon, Verily, thy Lord He is the creator, the knowing! We have already brought thee Seven of the Repetition⁶, and the mighty Qur'ân.

¹ Addressed to Mohammed.

² On the road from the territory of the Qurâis to Syria.

³ The Midianites, who are spoken of as dwelling in a grove, and to whom Jethro, or, as he is called in the Qur'ân, Sho'hâib, was sent as an apostle; see p. 148.

⁴ I. e. both Sodom and Midian.

⁵ The tribe of Thamûd, see p. 146.

⁶ The Opening Chapter, which contains seven verses, and is

Let not thine eyes strain after what we have allowed a few pairs of them¹ to enjoy, nor grieve for them; but lower thy wing² to the believers, and say, 'Verily, I am an obvious warner.'

[90] As we sent down (punishment) on the separatists³ who dismember the Qur'ân.

But, by thy Lord! we will question them, one and all, about what they have done.

Therefore, publish what thou art bidden, and turn aside from the idolaters.

[95] Verily, we are enough for thee against the scoffers.

Who place with God other gods; but they at length shall know! And we knew that thy breast was straitened at what they say.

Then celebrate the praises of thy Lord, and be thou of those who adore.

And serve thy Lord until the certainty shall come to thee.

THE CHAPTER OF THE BEE.

(XVI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

God's bidding will come; seek not then to hasten it on. Celebrated be His praises from what they join with Him!

named the Seven of Repetition (sab'h al Mathânî), from this passage, and because it is to be repeated on so many occasions.

¹ The unbelievers.

² Behave with humility and gentleness.

³ Probably referring to the Jews and Christians who are here and elsewhere accused of mutilating and altering the Scriptures.

He sends down the angels with the Spirit at His bidding upon whom He will of His servants (to say), 'Give warning that there is no god but Me; Me therefore do ye fear.' He created the heavens and the earth in truth! Exalted be He above that which they join with Him!

He created man from a clot; and yet, behold, he is an open opponent!

[5] The cattle too have we created for you; in them is warmth and profit, and from them do ye eat.

In them is there beauty for you when ye drive them home to rest, and when ye drive them forth to graze. And they bear your heavy burdens to towns which ye could not otherwise reach, except with great wretchedness of soul;—verily, your Lord is kind and merciful.

And horses too, and mules, and asses, for you to ride upon and for an ornament.—He creates also what ye know not of. God's it is to show the path; from it some turn aside: but had He pleased He would have guided you one and all.

[10] He it is who sends down water from the sky, whence ye have drink, and whence the trees grow whereby ye feed your flocks.

He makes the corn to grow, and the olives, and the palms, and the grapes, and some of every fruit;—verily, in that is a sign unto a people who reflect.

And He subjected to you the night and the day, and the sun, and the moon, and the stars are subjected to His bidding. Verily, in that are signs to a people who have sense.

And what He has produced for you in the earth varying in hue, verily, in that is a sign for a people who are mindful.

He it is who has subjected the sea, that ye may eat fresh flesh therefrom ; and ye bring forth from it ornaments which ye wear,—and thou mayest see the ships cleaving through it,—and that ye may search after His grace,—and haply ye may give thanks.

[15] And He has cast firm mountains on the earth lest it move with you ; and rivers and roads ; haply ye may be guided.

And landmarks ; and by the stars too are they guided.

Is He who creates like him who creates not?—are they then unmindful ?

But if ye would number the favours of God, ye cannot count them. Verily, God is forgiving, merciful.

God knows what ye keep secret, and what ye disclose.

[20] And those on whom ye call beside God cannot create anything, for they are themselves created. Dead, not living, nor can they perceive !

When shall they be raised ?

Your God is one God, and those who believe not in the hereafter their hearts are given to denial, and they are big with pride !

Without a doubt God knows what ye keep secret and what ye disclose !

[25] Verily, He does not love those big with pride !

And when it is said to them, 'What is it that your Lord has sent down ?' they say, 'Old folks' tales !'

Let them bear the burden of their sins entirely on the resurrection day, and some of the burdens of those whom they led astray without knowledge.—Aye ! an ill burden shall they bear.

Those who were before them devised a 'stratagem, but God brought their building off its foundations, and the roof fell over them, and the torment came to them, from whence they could not perceive ¹.

Then on the resurrection day He will put them to shame, and say, 'Where are your associates whom ye divided into parties about?' Those to whom knowledge is brought will say, 'Verily, disgrace to-day, and evil are upon the misbelievers!'

[30] Those whom the angels took away were wronging themselves; then they offered peace: 'We have done no evil.'—'Yea! verily, God knows what ye did. Wherefore enter ye the doors of hell, to dwell therein for aye; for ill is the resort of the proud.'

And it will be said to those who fear God, 'What is it that your Lord has sent down?' They will say, 'The best,' for those who do good, good in this world; but certainly the abode of the next is best, and surely pleasant is the abode of those who fear.

Gardens of Eden which they shall enter, beneath them rivers flow; therein shall they have what they please;—thus does God reward those who fear Him.

To those whom the angels take off in a goodly state they shall say, 'Peace be upon you! enter ye into Paradise for that which ye have done.'

[35] Do they expect other than that the angels should come to take them off, or that thy Lord's bidding should come?—thus did those before them; God did not wrong them; but it was themselves they wronged.

¹ Said to refer to the building and overthrow of the tower of Babel.

And the evil which they had done befel them, and that environed them at which they used to mock!

And those who associated (others with God) said, 'Had God pleased we had not served aught beside Him, neither we nor our fathers; nor had we prohibited aught without Him;'—thus did those before them: but have messengers aught to do but to deliver their message plainly?

We have sent in every nation an apostle (to say), 'Serve ye God, and avoid Tâghût!' and amongst them are some whom God has guided, and amongst them are some for whom error is due;—go ye about then on the earth, and behold how was the end of those who called (the apostles) liars!

If thou art ever so eager for their guidance, verily, God guides not those who go astray, nor have they any helpers.

[40] They swear by their most strenuous oath, 'God will not raise up him who dies.'—Yea! a promise binding on him true!—but most men do not know. To explain to them that which they disputed about, and that those who misbelieved may know that they are liars.

We only say unto a thing we wish, 'BE,' and it is.

But those who fled for God's sake, after they were wronged, we will surely establish them in this world with good things; but the hire of the future life is greater, if ye did but know.

Those who are patient, and upon their Lord rely!

[45] And we have not sent before thee any but men whom we inspire,—ask ye those who have the Reminder¹, if ye know not yourselves,—with manifest signs and with scriptures; and we have sent down the Reminder to thee too, that thou mayest explain to men what has been sent down to them, and haply they may reflect.

¹ The Pentateuch and Gospels.

Are those who were so crafty in evil sure that God will not cleave open the earth with them, or bring them torment from whence they cannot perceive, or seize them in their going to and fro? for they cannot make Him helpless.

Or that He should seize them with a gradual destruction? for, verily, your Lord is kind, merciful.

[50] Do they not regard whatever thing God has created; its shadow falls on the right or the left, adoring God and shrinking up?

Whatever is in the heavens and in the earth, beast or angel, adores God; nor are they big with pride!

They fear their Lord above them, and they do what they are bidden.

And God says, 'Take not to two gods; God is only one; me then do ye fear!'

His is what is in the heavens and in the earth; to Him is obedience due unceasingly; other than God then will ye fear?

[55] And whatever favours ye have, they are from God; then, whenever distress touches you, unto Him ye turn for succour. Yet, when He removes the distress from you, lo! a party of you join partners with their Lord.

That they may disbelieve in what we have brought them and may enjoy,—but at length they shall know!

And they set aside for what they know not a portion of what we have bestowed upon them¹.—By God! ye shall be questioned concerning that which ye have devised.

They make for God daughters;—celebrated be His praise!—and for themselves they like them not².

[60] When any one of them has tidings of a female child, his face is overclouded and black, and he has to keep back his wrath.

He skulks away from the people, for the evil tidings he has heard;—is he to keep it with its disgrace, or to bury it in the dust?—aye! evil is it that they judge!

For those who disbelieve in the future life is a similitude of evil: but for God is the loftiest similitude; for He is the mighty, the wise!

If God were to punish men for their wrong-doing He would not leave upon the earth a single beast; but He respites them until a stated time; and when their time comes they cannot put it off an hour, nor can they bring it on.

They set down to God what they abhor themselves; and their tongues describe the lie that 'good is to be theirs.' Without a doubt theirs is the Fire, for, verily, they shall be sent on there!

[65] By God! we sent (messengers) to nations before thee, but Satan made their works seemly to them, for he is their patron to-day, and for them is grievous woe!

¹ See note 2, p. 132.

² The Arabs used to call the angels 'daughters of God.' They, however, objected strongly (as do the modern Bedawîn) to female offspring, and used to bury their infant daughters alive. This practice Mohammed elsewhere reprobates. See p. 132, note 3.

We have only sent down to thee the Book, that thou mayest explain to them that which they did dispute about, and as a guidance and a mercy to a people who believe.

And God sends down water from the sky, and quickens therewith the earth after its death ; verily, in that is a sign to a people who can hear.

Verily, ye have in cattle a lesson ; we give you to drink from that which is in their bellies, betwixt chyme and blood,—pure milk,—easy to swallow for those who drink.

And of the fruit of the palms and the grapes ye take therefrom an intoxicant and a goodly provision ; verily, in that is a sign to a people who have sense !

[70] And thy Lord inspired the bee, ‘Take to houses in the mountains, and in the trees, and in the hives they build.

‘Then eat from every fruit, and walk in the beaten paths of thy Lord ;’ there cometh forth from her body a draught varying in hue¹, in which is a cure for men ; verily, in that are signs unto a people who reflect.

God created you ; then He will take you to Himself ; but amongst you are some whom He will thrust into the most decrepit age ; so that he may not know aught that once he knew. Verily, God is knowing, powerful.

And God has preferred some of you over others in providing for you ; but those who have been preferred will not restore their provision to those whom their right hands possess¹ that they may share equally therein:—is it God's favours they gainsay?

¹ The Arab writers mention several varieties of honey differing in colour, and some of which are used as medicine.

And God has made for you from amongst yourselves wives, and has made for you from your wives sons and grandchildren; and has provided you with good things;—is it in vanity that they believe, while for God's favour they are ungrateful?

[75] And they serve beside God what cannot control for them any provision from the heavens or the earth, and have no power at all.

Do not then strike out parables for God! Verily, God knows, but ye do not know.

God has struck out a parable; an owned slave, able to do nothing; and one whom we have provided with a good provision, and who expends therefrom in alms secretly and openly:—shall they be held equal?—Praise be to God, most of them do not know!

And God has struck out a parable: two men, one of them dumb, able to do nothing, a burden to his lord; wherever he directs him he comes not with success; is he to be held equal with him who bids what is just and who is on the right way?

God's are the unseen things of the heavens and the earth; nor is the matter of the Hour aught but as the twinkling of an eye, or nigher still! Verily, God is mighty over all!

[80] God brings you forth out of the wombs of your mothers knowing naught; and He makes for you hearing, and sight, and hearts,—haply ye may give thanks!

¹ Their slaves.

Do they not see the birds subjected in the vault of the sky?—none holds them in but God: verily, in that is a sign unto a people who believe.

God made for you in your houses a repose; and made for you, of the skins of cattle, houses¹, that ye may find them light, on the day ye move your quarters and the day when ye abide; and from their wool, and from their fur, and from their hair come furniture and chattels for a season.

And God has made for you, of what He has created, shades; and has made for you shelters in the mountains; and He has made for you shirts to keep you from the heat, and shirts² to keep you from each other's violence:—thus does He fulfil His favours towards you,—haply ye yet may be resigned.

But if they turn their backs,—thine is only to preach thy plain message.

[85] They recognise the favours of God, and yet they deny them, for most men are ungrateful.

And on the day when we shall send from every nation a witness; then shall those who misbelieve not be allowed (to excuse themselves), and they shall not be taken back into favour.

And when those who join their partners with God say, 'Our Lord! these be our partners on whom we used to call beside Thee.' And they shall proffer them the speech, 'Verily, ye are liars!' And they shall proffer on that day peace unto God; and that which they had devised shall stray away from them.

¹ 'Tents' are called 'houses of hair' or 'of hide' by the desert Arabs.

² Of mail.

[90] Those who misbelieve and turn folks off God's path, we will add torment to their torment, for that they were evildoers.

And on the day when we will raise up in every nation a witness against them from among themselves, and we will bring thee as a witness against these¹; for we have sent down to thee a book explaining clearly everything, and a guidance, and a mercy, and glad tidings to the believers.

Verily, God bids you do justice and good, and give to kindred (their due), and He forbids you to sin, and do wrong, and oppress; He admonishes you, haply ye may be mindful!

Fulfil God's covenant when ye have covenanted, and break not your oaths after asseverating them, for ye thereby make God your surety; verily, God knows what ye do.

And be not like her who unravels her yarn, fraying it out after she hath spun it close, by taking your oaths for mutual intrigue, because one nation is more numerous than another; God only tries you therewith, but He will make manifest to you on the resurrection day that whereon ye did dispute².

[95] But had God pleased He would have made you one nation; but He leads astray whom He will, and guides whom He will;—but ye shall be questioned as to that which ye have done.

Take not therefore your oaths for mutual intrigue, lest a foot slip after being planted firmly, and ye taste of evil for that ye turned folks off the path of God, and for you there be mighty woe!

¹ The Meccans.

² The Arabs, like most half-savage tribes, used to consider superior numerical strength as entitling them to disregard a treaty.

And sell not God's covenant for a little price; with God only is what is better for you, if ye did but know.

What ye have is spent, but what God has endures; and we will recompense the patient with their hire for the best deeds they have done.

Whoso acts aright, male or female, and is a believer, we will quicken with a goodly life; and we will recompense them with their hire for the best deeds they have done.

[100] When thou dost read the Qur'ân, ask refuge with God from Satan the pelted one¹.

Verily, he has no power over those who believe and who upon their Lord rely. His power is only over those who take him for a patron, and over the idolaters.

And whenever we change one verse for another, —God knows best what He sends down. They say, 'Thou art but a forger!'—Nay, most of them do not know. Say, 'The Holy Spirit² brought it down from thy Lord in truth, to stablish those who believe, and for a guidance and glad tidings to those who are resigned³.'

[105] We knew that they said, 'It is only some mortal who teaches him.'—The tongue of him they lean towards is barbarous, and this is plain Arabic⁴.

Verily, those who believe not in God's signs, God will not guide them, and for them is grievous woe.

¹ See p. 50, note 2.

² Gabriel.

³ See p. 15, note 1.

⁴ For an account of the persons supposed to have helped Mohammed in the compilation of the Qur'ân, see Introduction.

Only they are the forgers of a lie who believe not in God's signs ; and these, they are the liars.

Whoso disbelieves in God after having believed, unless it be one who is forced and whose heart is quiet in the faith,—but whoso expands his breast to misbelieve,—on them is wrath from God, and for them is mighty woe !

That is because they preferred the love of this world's life to the next ;—but, verily, God guides not the unbelieving people. [110] These are they on whose hearts, and hearing, and eyesight, God has set a stamp, and these, they are the careless. Without a doubt that in the next life they will be the losers.

Then, verily, thy Lord, to those who fled¹ after they had been tried, and then fought strenuously and were patient,—verily, thy Lord after that will be forgiving and merciful.

On the day every soul will come to wrangle for itself, and every soul shall be paid what it has earned, and they shall not be wronged.

God has struck out a parable : a city² which was safe and quiet, its provision came to it in plenty from every place, and then it denied God's favours, and God made it feel³ the clothing of hunger and fear, for that which they had wrought.

And there came to them an apostle from amongst themselves, but they called him a liar, and the torment seized them, while yet they were unjust.

[115] Eat, then, from what God has provided

¹ The Ansârs.

² Any town, but Mecca in particular.

³ Literally, 'taste.'

you with, things lawful and good, and give thanks for the favours of God, if it be Him ye serve.

He has only forbidden you that which dies of itself, and blood, and the flesh of swine, and that which is devoted to other than God; but he who is forced, neither revolting nor transgressing, it is no sin for him: verily, God is forgiving and merciful.

And say not of the lie your tongues pronounce, 'This is lawful, and this is unlawful,' forging against God a lie; verily, those who forge against God a lie shall not prosper. A little enjoyment—then for them is grievous woe!

For those who are Jews we have forbidden what we have narrated to thee before¹; we did not wrong them, but it was themselves they wronged.

[120] Then, verily, thy Lord to those who have done evil in ignorance and then repented after that and done aright,—verily, thy Lord afterwards is forgiving and merciful.

Verily, Abraham was a high priest², a 'Hanîf, and was not of the idolaters: thankful for His favours; He chose him and He guided him unto the right way.

And we gave him in this world good things; and, verily, in the next he will be among the righteous.

Then we inspired thee, 'Follow the faith of Abraham, a 'Hanîf, for he was not of the idolaters.'

[125] The Sabbath was only made for those who dispute thereon; but, verily, thy Lord will judge

¹ See p. 134.

² Some commentators take this word ummatan as equivalent to imâman, 'antistes,' and this interpretation I have followed. Others take it in its ordinary sense of 'nation;' but the use of the other epithets seems to favour the former interpretation.

between them on the resurrection day concerning that whereon they do dispute.

Call unto the way of thy Lord with wisdom and goodly warning; and wrangle with them in the kindest way; verily, thy Lord He knows best who has erred from His way, for He knows best the guided ones.

But if ye punish, punish (only) as ye were punished; but if ye are patient, it is best for those who are patient¹.

Be thou patient then; but thy patience is only in God's hands. Do not grieve about them; and be not in a strait at their craftiness;—verily, God is with those who fear Him, and with those who do well.

¹ This passage refers to the killing of 'Hamzah, Mohammed's uncle, at the battle of O'hod, and the subsequent mutilation of his corpse by the Meccans, and is a protest against taking too severe a revenge.

VOWELS.		I Class.	II Class.	III Class.	IV Class.	V Class.	VI Class.	VII Class.	VIII Class.
1	Neutralis	0	ä
2	Laryngo-palatalis	ě	ä
3	" labialis	ö	ä
4	Gutturalis brevis	a	ä
5	" longa	ā	(a)	ä
6	Palatalis brevis	i	ä
7	" longa	ī	(i)	ä
8	Dentalis brevis	ē	ä
9	" longa	ē	ä
10	Lingualis brevis	ri	ä
11	" longa	ri	ä
12	Labialis brevis	u	ä
13	" longa	ū	(u)	ä
14	Gutturo-palatalis brevis	e	ä
15	" longa	ē	(e)	ä
16	Diphthongus gutturo-palatalis	ai	(ai)	ä
17	"	ei	(ei)	ä
18	"	oi	(ou)	ä
19	Gutturo-labialis brevis	o	ä
20	" longa	ō	(o)	ä
21	Diphthongus gutturo-labialis	au	(au)	ä
22	"	eu	(eu)	ä
23	"	ou	(ou)	ä
24	Gutturalis fracta	ä	ä
25	Palatalis fracta	i	ä
26	Labialis fracta	ü	ä
27	Gutturo-labialis fracta	ö	ä

Dentales modificatae
(linguales, &c.)

38	Tennis	t	ت	ط	ظ
39	" aspirata	th	ث	ط
40	Media	d	ذ	ط
41	" aspirata	dh	ذ	ض
42	Nasalis	n	ن
43	Semivocalis	r	ر	ر
44	" fricata	r	r
45	" diacritica	R
46	Spiritus asper	sh	ش	sh
47	" lenis	zh

Labiales.

48	Tennis	p	प	.
49	" aspirata	ph	फ़	.
50	Media	b	ब	.
51	" aspirata	bh	भ	.
52	Tenuissima		p	.	.
53	Nasalis	'm	म	.
54	Semivocalis	w
55	" aspirata	bw
56	Spiritus asper	f
57	" lenis	v	व	.
58	Anusvāra		m	म्	.
59	Vīsarga		h	ह्	.

CONSONANTS (continued).	MISSIONARY ALPHABET.			Sanskrit.	Zend.	Pehlevi.	Persian.	Arabic.	Hebrew.	Chinese.
	I Class.	II Class.	III Class.
18 Semivocalis	y	... (y)	...	य	𐬨	𐬨	ي	ي	י	y
19 Spiritus asper
20 " lenis (j)	...
21 " asper assibilatus		s	...	श	𐬨	𐬨	ش	ش	ש	z
22 " lenis assibilatus		z	...
Dentales.
23 Tenus	t	त	𐬨	𐬨	ت	ت	ת	t
24 " aspirata	th	थ	𐬨	𐬨	تھ	تھ	ת	th
25 " assibilata			TH
26 Media	d	द	𐬨	𐬨	د	د	ד
27 " aspirata	dh	ध	𐬨	𐬨	دھ	دھ	ד
28 " assibilata			DH
29 Nasalis	n	न	𐬨	𐬨	ن	ن	נ	n
30 Semivocalis	l	ल	𐬨	𐬨	ل	ل	ל	l
31 " mollis 1		l	...
32 " mollis 2			L
33 Spiritus asper 1	s	स	𐬨	𐬨	س	س	ס	s
34 " asper 2			S
35 " lenis	z
36 " asperimus 1			Z
37 " asperimus 2			Z (j)

TRANSLITERATION OF ORIENTAL ALPHABETS ADOPTED FOR THE TRANSLATIONS OF THE SACRED BOOKS OF THE EAST.

[6]

1

CONSONANTS.	MISSIONARY ALPHABET.			Sanskrit.	Zend.	Pehlvi.	Persian.	Arabic.	Hebrew.	Chinese.
	I Class.	II Class.	III Class.
Gutturales.
1 Tenuis	k	क	𐬕	𐬑	ک	ک	𐤊	k
2 " aspirata	kh	ख	𐬖	𐬒	کھ	کھ	𐤊	kh
3 Media	g	ग	𐬔	𐬓	گ	گ	𐤅	..
4 " aspirata	gh	घ	𐬚	𐬑𐬚	گھ	گھ	𐤅	..
5 Gutturo-labialis	q	ق	ق	𐤑	..
6 Nasalis	h (ng)	ङ	𐬢	𐬢	ن	ن	𐤎	..
7 Spiritus asper	h	ह	𐬨	𐬨	ه	ه	𐤈	h, hs
8 " lenis	'h	𐬨	𐬨	ه	ه	𐤈	..
9 " asper faucalis	"h	𐬨	𐬨	ه	ه	𐤈	..
10 " lenis faucalis	"h	𐬨	𐬨	ه	ه	𐤈	..
11 " asper fricatus	"h	𐬨	𐬨	ه	ه	𐤈	..
12 " lenis fricatus	"h	𐬨	𐬨	ه	ه	𐤈	..
Gutturales modificatae (palatales, &c.)
13 Tenuis	k	च	𐬑	𐬑	چ	چ	𐤉	k
14 " aspirata	kh	छ	𐬑𐬚	𐬑𐬚	چھ	چھ	𐤉	kh
15 Media	g	ज	𐬔	𐬓	ج	ج	𐤍	..
16 " aspirata	gh	झ	𐬚	𐬑𐬚	جھ	جھ	𐤍	..
17 " Nasalis	ñ	ञ	𐬢	𐬢	ن	ن	𐤎	..

Digitized by Google

3 2044 024 503 682

This book should be returned to the Library on or before the last date stamped below.

A fine is incurred by retaining it beyond the specified time.

Please return promptly.

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

The Sacred Books of the East: The institutes of Vishnu

Friedrich Max
Müller

The New York Public Library

Astor, Lenox & Tilden Foundations

* * *

The R. Heber Newton

Collection

Presented by His Children

* 1931 *

THE
SACRED BOOKS OF THE EAST

Dup. to Be Kept

London
HENRY FROWDE

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS WAREHOUSE
7 PATERNOSTER ROW

THE
SACRED BOOKS OF THE EAST

TRANSLATED

BY VARIOUS ORIENTAL SCHOLARS

AND EDITED BY

F. MAX MÜLLER

VOL. VII

Oxford

AT THE CLARENDON PRESS

1880

[All rights reserved]

NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

ROY W. B.
1916
1916

THE INSTITUTES OF VISHNU

TRANSLATED BY

JULIUS JOLLY

Oxford

AT THE CLARENDON PRESS

1880

[All rights reserved]

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
INTRODUCTION	ix
Vishṇu and the Goddess of the Earth	1
The Four Castes	12
Duties of a King	13
Weights and Measures	23
Criminal and Civil Law	24
Law of Debt	42
Writings	46
Witnesses	48
Ordeals	52
Inheritance	61
Funeral Ceremonies	75
Funeral Oblations	83
Impurity	87
Women	106
Sacraments	112
Studentship	116
Crimes	131
Hells	140
Transmigration	144
Penances	149
Duties of a Householder	189
Rules for a Snâtaka	224
Self-restraint	231
Śrâddhas	232
Pious Gifts	263
The Hermit	276
The Ascetic	279

	PAGE
Meditation on Vishnu	287
Conclusion	291
General Index	303
Sanskrit Index	307
Additions and Corrections	312
Transliteration of Oriental Alphabets adopted for the Translations of the Sacred Books of the East . . .	313

LIST OF THE MORE IMPORTANT ABBREVIATIONS.

- Âpast. — Âpastamba's Dharma-sûtra, ed. Bühler.
 Âsv. — Âsvalâyana's Grîhya-sûtra, ed. Stenzler.
 Gaut. — Gautama's Dharmasâstra, ed. Stenzler.
 Gobh. — Gobhila's Grîhya-sûtra, in the Bibl. Ind.
 M. — Mânava Dharmasâstra, Calcutta edition, with the Commentary of Kullûka.
 Nand. — Nandapandîta, the commentator of the Vishnu-sûtra.
 Pâr. — Pâraskara's Grîhya-sûtra, ed. Stenzler.
 Sâñkh. — Sâñkhâyana's Grîhya-sûtra, ed. Oldenberg, in the fifteenth volume of the Indische Studien.
 Y. — Yâgñavalkya's Dharmasâstra, ed. Stenzler.
 Âpast. and Gaut. refer also to Dr. Bühler's translation of these two works in the second volume of the Sacred Books of the East.

INTRODUCTION.

THE Vishnu-smṛiti or Vaishṇava Dharmaśāstra or Vishnu-sūtra is in the main a collection of ancient aphorisms on the sacred laws of India, and as such it ranks with the other ancient works of this class which have come down to our time¹. It may be styled a Dharma-sūtra, though this ancient title of the Sūtra works on law has been preserved in the MSS. of those Smṛitis only, which have been handed down, like the Dharma-sūtras of Āpastamba, Baudhāyana, and Hiranyakesin, as parts of the respective Kalpa-sūtras, to which they belong. The size of the Vishnu-sūtra, and the great variety of the subjects treated in it, would suffice to entitle it to a conspicuous place among the five or six existing Dharma-sūtras; but it possesses a peculiar claim to interest, which is founded on its close connection with one of the oldest Vedic schools, the Kaṭhas, on the one hand, and with the famous code of Manu and some other ancient law-codes, on the other hand. To discuss these two principal points, and some minor points connected with them, as fully as the limits of an introduction admit of, will be the more necessary, because such a discussion can afford the only safe basis for a conjecture not altogether unsupported regarding the time and place of the original composition of this work, and may even tend to throw some new light on the vexed question as to the origin of the code of Manu. Further on I shall have to speak of the numerous interpolations traceable in the Vishnu-sūtra, and a few remarks regarding the materials used for this translation, and the principles of interpretation that have been followed in it, may be fitly reserved for the last.

¹ This was first pointed out by Professor Max Müller, History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature, p. 134. His results were confirmed and expanded by the subsequent researches of Dr. Bühler, Introduction to Bombay Digest, I, p. xxii; Indian Antiquary, V, p. 30; Kasmîr Report, p. 36.

There is no surer way for ascertaining the particular Vedic school by which an ancient Sanskrit law-book of unknown or uncertain origin was composed, than by examining the quotations from, and analogies with, Vedic works which it contains. Thus the Gautama Dharma-sâstra might have originated in any one among the divers Gautama Karanas with which Indian tradition acquaints us. But the comparatively numerous passages which its author has borrowed from the Samhitâ and from one Brâhmaṇa of the Sâma-veda prove that it must belong to one of those Gautama Karanas who studied the *Sâma-veda*¹. Regarding the code of Yâgñavalkya we learn from tradition that a Vedic teacher of that name was the reputed author of the White Yagur-veda. But this coincidence might be looked upon as casual, if the Yâgñavalkya-smṛiti did not contain a number of Mantras from that Vedic Samhitâ, and a number of very striking analogies, in the section on funeral ceremonies particularly, with the Grîhya-sûtra of the Vâgasaneyins, the Kâtiya Grîhya-sûtra of Pârasakara². In the case of the Vishnu-sûtra an enquiry of this kind is specially called for, because tradition leaves us entirely in the dark as to its real author. The fiction that the laws promulgated in Chapters II-XCVII were communicated by the god Vishnu to the goddess of the earth, is of course utterly worthless for historical purposes; and all that it can be made to show is that those parts of this work in which it is started or kept up cannot rival the laws themselves in antiquity.

Now as regards, first, the Vedic Mantras and Pratîkas (beginnings of Mantras) quoted in this work, it is necessary to leave aside, as being of no moment for the present purpose, 1. very well-known Mantras, or, speaking more precisely, all such Mantras as are frequently quoted in Vedic works of divers Sâkhâs; 2. the purificatory texts enumerated under the title of Sarva-veda-pavitrâni in LVI. The latter can afford us no help in determining the particular Sâkhâ to which this work belongs, because they are actually taken, as they profess to be, from all the Vedas indiscriminately, and because nearly the whole of Chapter LVI is found in the Vâsishtha-smṛiti as well (see further on), which probably does not belong to the same Veda as this work. Among the former class of Mantras may be included, particularly, the Gâyatrî, the Purushasûkta, the Aghamarshana, the Kûshmândîs, the Vyâhrîtis, the Gyeshtha Sâmans, the Rudras, the Trinâkiketa, the Trisuparna, the Vaishnava, Sâkra, and Bârhaspatya Mantras mentioned in XC, 3, and the Mantra quoted in XXVIII, 51 (= Gautama's 'Retasya'). Among the twenty-two Mantras quoted in Chapters XLVIII, LXIV, LXV (including repetitions, but excluding the Purushasûkta, Gâyatrî, Aghamarshana) there are also some which may be referred to this class, and the great majority of them occur in more than one Veda at the same time. But it is worthy of note that no less than twelve, besides occurring in at least one other Sâkhâ, are either actually found in the Samhitâ of the Kârâyanîya-kathas, the *Kâthaka*¹ (or Karaka-sâkhâ?), or stated to belong to it in the Commentary, while one is found in the Kâthaka alone, a second in the Atharva-veda alone, a third in the Taittirîya Brâhmaṇa alone, and a fourth does not occur in any Vedic work hitherto known². A far greater number of Mantras occurs in Chapters XXI, LXVII, LXXIII, LXXIV, LXXXVI, which treat of daily oblations, Srâddhas, and the ceremony of setting a bull at liberty. Of all these Mantras, which,—including the Purushasûkta and other such well-known Mantras as well as the short invocations addressed to Soma, Agni, and other deities, but excluding the invocations addressed to Vishnu in the spurious Sûtra, LXVII, 2,—are more than a hundred in number, no more than forty or so are found in Vedic works hitherto printed, and in the law-books of Manu, Yâgñavalkya, and others; but nearly all are quoted, exactly in the same order as in this work, in the Kârâyanîya-kâthaka Grîhya-sûtra, while some of them have been traced in the Kâthaka as well. And what is even more important, the Kâthaka Grîhya does not contain those Mantras alone, but nearly all the Sûtras in which they occur; and it may be stated therefore, secondly, that the Vishnu-sûtra has four long sections, viz. Chapter LXXIII, and Chapters XXI, LXVII, LXXXVI, excepting the final parts, in common with that work, while the substance of Chapter LXXIV may also be traced in it. The agreement between both works is very close, and where they differ it is generally due to false readings or to enlargements on the part of the Vishnu-sûtra. However, there are a few cases, in which the version of the latter work is evidently more genuine than that of the former, and it follows, therefore, that the author of the Vishnu-sûtra cannot have borrowed his rules for the performance of Srâddhas &c. from the Kâthaka Grîhya-sûtra, but that both must have drawn from a common source, i. e. no doubt from the traditions current in the Katha school, to which this work is indebted for so many of its Mantras as well.

¹ See Bühler, Introduction to Gautama (Vol. II of the Sacred Books of the East), pp. xlv-xlvi.

² Bühler, Introduction to Digest, p. xxxii; Stenzler, on Pârasakara's Grîhya-sûtra, in the Journal of the German Oriental Society, VII, p. 527 seq.

¹ In speaking of this work I always refer to the Berlin MS.

² XLVIII, 10. Cf., however, Vâgas. Samh. IV, 12.

For these reasons¹ I fully concur in the view advanced by Dr. Bühler, that the bulk of the so-called Vishnu-smṛiti is really the ancient Dharma-sûtra of the Kârâyanîya-kâthaka Sâkhâ of the Black Yagur-veda. It ranks, like other Dharma-sûtras, with the Grîhya and Srauta-sûtras of its school; the latter of which, though apparently lost now, is distinctly referred to in the Grîhya-sûtra in several places, and must have been in existence at the time when the Commentaries on Kâtyâyana's Srauta-sûtras were composed, in which it is frequently quoted by the name of Kāṭha-sūtra on divers questions concerning Srauta offerings, and at the time, when the Kasmīrian Devapāla wrote his Commentary on the Kāṭhaka Gr̥hya-sūtra, which was, according to the Kasmīrian tradition, as explored by Dr. Bühler, before the conquest of Kasmīr by the Mahomedans. Devapāla, in the Introduction to his work, refers to 'thirty-nine Adhyāyas treating of the Vaitānika (= Srauta) ceremonies,' by which the Gr̥hya-sūtra was preceded, from which statement it may be inferred that the Kāṭhaka Srauta-sūtras must have been a very voluminous work indeed, as the Gr̥hya-sūtra, which is at least equal if not superior in extent to other works of the same class, forms but one Adhyāya, the fortieth, of the whole Kalpa-sūtra, which, according to Devapāla, was composed by one author. It does not seem likely that the Vishṇu-sūtra was composed by the same man, or that it ever formed part of the Kāṭhaka Kalpa-sūtra, as the Dharma-sūtras of Baudhāyana, Āpastamba, and Hiraṇyakesin form part of the Kalpa-sūtras of the respective schools to which they belong. If that were the case, it would agree with the Gr̥hya-sūtra on all those points which are treated in both works, such as e.g. the terms for the performance of the Saṃskāras or sacraments, the rules for a student and for a Snātaka, the enumeration and definition of the Krikkhṛas or 'hard penances,' the forms of marriage, &c. Now though the two works have on those subjects a number of such rules in common as occur in other works also, they disagree for the most part in the choice of expressions, and on a few points lay down exactly opposite rules, such as the Vishṇu-sūtra (XXVIII, 28) giving permission to a student to ascend his spiritual teacher's carriage after him, whereas the other work prescribes, that he shall do so on no account. Moreover, if both works had been destined from the first to supplement one another, they would, instead of having several entire sections in common, exhibit such cross-references as are found e.g. between the Āpastamba Gr̥hya and *Dharma-sūtras*¹; though the absence of such references might be explained, in the case of the Vishnu-sûtra, by the activity of those who brought it into its present shape, and who seem to have carefully removed all such references to other works as the original Dharma-sûtra may have contained. Whatever the precise nature of the relations between this work and the other Sûtra works of the Kârâyanîya-kâthaka school may have been, there is no reason for assigning to it a later date than to the Kâthaka Srauta and Grihya-sûtras, with the latter of which it has so much in common, and it may therefore claim a considerable antiquity, especially if it is assumed, with Dr. Bühler, that the beginning of the Sûtra period differed for each Veda. The Veda of the Katthas, the Kâthaka, is not separated from the Sûtra literature of this school by an intermediate Brâhmaṇa stage; yet its high antiquity is testified by several of the most eminent grammarians of India from Yâska down to Kaiyata¹. Thus the Kâthaka is the only existing work of its kind, which is quoted by the former grammarian (Nirukta X, 5; another clear quotation from the Kâthaka, XXVII, 9, though not by name, may be found, Nirukta III, 4), and the latter places the Katthas at the head of all Vedic schools, while Patañjali, the author of the Mahâbhâshya, assigns to the ancient sage Kattha, the reputed founder of the Kattha or Kâthaka school of the Black Yagur-veda, the dignified position of an immediate pupil of Vaisampâyana, the fountain-head of all schools of the older or Black Yagur-veda, and mentions, in accordance with a similar statement preserved in the Râmâyana (II, 32, 18, 19 ed. Schlegel), that in his own time the 'Kâlâpaka and the Kâthaka' were 'proclaimed in every village².' The priority of the Katthas before all other existing schools of the Yagur-veda may be deduced from the statements of the *Karanavyûha*³, which work assigns to them one of the first places among the divers branches of the Karakas, whom it places at the head of all schools of the Yagur-veda. Another argument in favour of the high antiquity of the Kat̥has may be derived from their geographical position¹. Though the statements of the Mahābhāshya and Rāmāyana regarding the wide-spread and influential position of the Kat̥has in ancient times are borne out by the fact that the Karanavyūha mentions three subdivisions of the Kat̥has, viz. the Kat̥has proper, the Prākya Kat̥has, and the Kapishthala Kat̥has, to which the Kārāyanīyas may be added as a fourth, and by the seeming identity of their name with the name of the Καθαῖοι in the Pañgāb on the one hand, and with the first part of the name of the peninsula of Kattivar on the other hand, it seems very likely nevertheless that the original home of the Kat̥has was situated in the north-west, i. e. in those regions where the earliest parts of the Vedas were composed. Not only the Καθαῖοι, but the Καμβίσθολοι as well, who have been identified with the *Kapishthala Kat̥has*², are mentioned by Greek writers as a nation living in the Pañgāb; and while the Prākya Kat̥has are shown by their name ('Eastern Kat̥has') to have lived to the east of the two other branches of the Kat̥has, it is a significant fact that adherents of the Kārāyanīya-kāthaka school survive nowhere but in Kasmīr, where all Brāhmanas perform their domestic rites according to the rules laid down in the Gṛīhya-sūtra of this school³. Kasmīr is moreover the country where nearly all the yet existing works of the Kāthaka school have turned up, including the Berlin MS. of the Kāthaka, which was probably written by a *Kasmīrian*⁴. It is true that some of the geographical and historical data contained in that work, especially the way in which it mentions the Pañkālās, whose ancient name, as shown by the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa (XIII, 5, 4, 7) and Rig-

¹ For details I may refer the reader to my German paper, Das Dharmasûtra des Vishnu und das Kâthakagrîhyasûtra, in the Transactions of the Royal Bavarian Academy of Science for 1879, where the sections corresponding in both works have been printed in parallel columns, the texts from the Kâthaka Grîhya-sûtra having been prepared from two of the MSS. of Devapâla's Commentary discovered by Dr. Bühler (Kasmîr Report, Nos. 11, 12), one in Devanâgarî, and the other in Sârâdâ characters.

¹ Bühler, Introduction to Āpastamba, Sacred Books, II, pp. xi-xiv.

¹ See Weber, Indische Studien XIII, p. 437 seq.

² Mahâbhâshya, Benares edition, IV, fols. 82 b, 75 b.

³ See Weber, Ind. Stud. III, p. 256 seq.; Max Müller, Hist. Anc. Sansk. Lit., p. 369. I have consulted, besides, two Munich MSS. of the Karanavyûha (cod. Haug 45).

¹ See Weber, Über das Rāmāyana, p. 9; Ind. Stud. I, p. 189 seq.; III, p. 469 seq.; XIII, pp. 375, 439; Ind. Litteraturgeschichte, pp. 99, 332; Zimmer, Altindisches Leben, p. 102 seq.

² See, however, Max Müller, Hist. Anc. Sansk. Lit., p. 333.

³ Bühler, Kasmīr Report, p. 20 seq.

⁴ This was pointed out to me by Dr. Bühler.

veda (VIII, 20, 24 ; VIII, 22, 12), was Krivi, take us far off from the north-west, the earliest seat of Âryan civilization, into the country of the Kuru-Pañkâlas in Hindostân proper. But it must be borne in mind that the Kâthaka, if it may be identified with the 'Karaka-sâkhâ,' must have been the Veda of all the Karakas except perhaps the Maitrâya-nîyas and Kapishthalas, and may have been altered and enlarged, after the Katthas and Karakas had spread themselves across Hindostân. The Sûtras of a Sâkhâ which appears to have sprung up near the primitive home of Âryan civilization in India, which was probably the original home of the Katthas at the same time, may be far older than those of mere Sûtra schools of the Black Yagur-veda, which have sprung up, like the Âpastamba school, in South India, i. e. far older than the fourth or fifth century B. C.¹

But sufficient space has been assigned to these attempts at fixing the age of the Kâthaka-sûtras which, besides remaining only too uncertain in themselves, can apply with their full force to those parts of the Vishnu-sûtra only, which have been traced in the Kâthaka Grîhya-sûtra. It will be seen afterwards that even these sections, however closely connected with the sacred literature of the Katthas, have been tampered with in several places, and it might be argued, therefore, that the whole remainder of the Vishnu-sûtra, to which the Kâthaka literature offers no parallel, may be a subsequent addition. But the antiquity of the great majority of its laws can be proved by independent arguments, which are furnished by a comparison of the Vishnu-sûtra with other works of the same class, whose antiquity is not doubted.

In the foot-notes to my translation I have endeavoured to give as complete references as possible to the analogous passages in the Smritis of Manu, Yâgñavalkya, Âpastamba, and Gautama, and in the four Grîhya-sûtras hitherto printed. A large number of analogous passages might have been traced in the Dharma-sûtras of Vâsishtha.²

¹ See Bühler, Introd. to Âpastamba, p. xliii.

² See the Benares edition (1878), which is accompanied with a Commentary by Krishnapandita Dharmâdhikârin. I should have given references to this and Baudhâya as well, not to mention Hiranyakesin's Dharma-sûtra, which, according to Dr. Bühler, is nearly identical with the Dharma-sûtra of Âpastamba. Two facts may be established at once by glancing at these analogies, viz. the close agreement of this work with the other Sûtra works in point of form, and with all the above-mentioned works in point of contents. As regards the first point, the Sûtras or prose rules of which the bulk of the Vishnu-sûtra is composed, show throughout that characteristic laconism of the Sûtra style, which renders it impossible in many cases to make out the real meaning of a Sûtra without the help of a Commentary; and in the choice of terms they agree as closely as possible with the other ancient law-books, and in some cases with the Grîhya-sûtras as well. Numerous verses, generally in the Sloka metre, and occasionally designed as 'Gâthâs,' are added at the end of most chapters, and interspersed between the Sûtras in some; but in this particular also the Vishnu-sûtra agrees with at least one other Dharma-sûtra, the Vâsishtha-smṛiti, and it contains in its law part, like the latter work, a number of verses in the ancient Trishṭubh metre¹. Four of these Trishṭubhs are found in the Vâsishtha-smṛiti, and three in Yâska's Nirukta as well, and the majority of the Slokas has been traced in the former work and the other above-mentioned law-books, and in other Smṛitis. In point of contents the great majority both of the metrical and prose rules of the Vishnu-sûtra agrees with one, or some, or all of the works named above. The Grîhya-sûtras, excepting the Kâthaka Grîhya-sûtra, naturally offer a far smaller number of analogies with it than the Smṛitis, still they exhibit several rules, in the Snâtaka-dharmas and otherwise, that have not been traced in any other Smṛiti except the work here translated. Among the Smṛitis again, each single one may be seen work, the first complete and reliable edition of the Vâsishtha-smṛiti, in the footnotes to my translation, but for the fact that it did not come into my hands till the former had gone to the press. For Baudhâya I have consulted a Munich MS. containing the text only of his Sûtras (cod. Haug 163).

¹ XIX, 23, 24; XXIII, 61; XXIX, 9, 10; XXX, 47 (see Nirukta II, 4; Vâsishtha II, 8-10); LVI, 27 (see Vâsishtha XXVIII, 15); LIX, 30; LXXII, 7; LXXXVI, 16.

from the references to contain a number of such rules, as are only met with in this work, which is a very important fact because, if the laws of the Vishnu-sûtra were found either in all other Smritis, or in one of them only, its author might be suspected of having borrowed them from one of those works. As it is, meeting with analogous passages now in one work, and then in another, one cannot but suppose that the author of this work has everywhere drawn from the same source as the other Sûtrakâras, viz. from ancient traditions that were common to all Vedic schools.

There are, moreover, a number of cases in which this work, instead of having borrowed from other works of the same class, can be shown to have been, directly or indirectly, the source from which they drew, and this fact constitutes a third reason in favour of the high antiquity of its laws. The clearest case of this kind is furnished by the Vâsishtha-smṛiti, with which this work has two entire chapters in common, which are not found elsewhere. I subjoin in a note the text of Vâsishtha XXVIII, 10-15, with an asterisk to those words which contain palpable mistakes (not including blunders in point of metre), for comparison with Chapter LVI of this work in the Calcutta edition, which is exceptionally correct in this chapter and in Chapter LXXXVII, which latter corresponds to Vâsishtha XXVIII, 18-22¹. In both

¹ सर्ववेदपवित्राणि वक्ष्याम्यहमतः परम् ।

येषां जपैश्च होमैश्च पूयन्ते नात्र संशयः ॥१०॥

अथमर्घ्यं देवकृतं शुद्धवत्य*स्तरत्समाः ।

कूष्माण्डानि पाषाणान्यो दुर्गौसाविन्निरेव (?) च ॥११॥

*अभिषङ्गाः पदस्तोभाः सामानि व्याहृतीस्तथा (?) ।

*भारद्वजानि सामानि गायत्रं देवतं तथा ॥१२॥

पुरुषव्रतं च भासं च तथा देवव्रतानि च ।

अग्निं (?) बार्हस्पत्यं वाक्सूक्तं मध्वसूक्तं ॥१३॥

शतरुद्रियमथर्वेशिरस्त्रिसुपर्णी महाव्रतम् ।

गोमूक्तं चाश्वसूक्तं च इन्द्रशुद्धे (?) च सामनी ॥१४॥

क्षीरान्ज्यदोहानि रथनारं च

सग्नेव्रतं वामदेव्यं बृहच्च । chapters Vishnu has mainly prose Sûtras and throughout a perfectly correct text, whereas Vâsishtha has bad Slokas which, supported as they are by the Commentary or by the metre or by both, can only be accounted for by carelessness or clerical mistakes in some cases, and by a clumsy versification of the original prose version preserved in this work in others. Another chapter of the Vishnu-sûtra, the forty-eighth, nowhere meets with a parallel except in the third Prasna of the Dharma-sûtra of Baudhâya, where it recurs almost word for word. An examination of the various readings in both works shows that in some of the Slokas Baudhâya has better readings, while in one or two others the readings of Vishnu seem preferable, though the unsatisfactory condition of the MS. consulted renders it unsafe to pronounce a definitive judgment on the character of Baudhâya's readings. At all events he has a few Vedic Mantras more than Vishnu, which however seem to be very well-known Mantras and are quoted by their Pratikas only. But he omits the two important Sûtras 9 and 10 of Vishnu, the latter of which contains a Mantra quoted at full, which, although corrupted (see Vâgas. Samh. IV, 12) and hardly intelligible, is truly Vedic in point of language; and he adds on his part a clause at the end of the whole chapter¹, which inculcates the worship of Ganesa or Siva or both, and would be quite sufficient in itself to cast a doubt on the genuineness and originality of his version. It is far from improbable that both Vâsishtha and Baudhâya may have borrowed

इतानि * ज्ञानानि (= गीतानि Vishnu LVI, 27) पुनर्नि जनून्
जातिस्मरत्वं लभते यदीच्छेत् ॥१५॥

Vishnu LVI, 15, 16, the best MSS. read पुरुषव्रते सामनी ॥१५॥ अश्लिष्टम् ॥१६॥ but the Calc. ed. and one London MS. have पुरुषव्रते । भासम् । like Vâsishtha. Of Vishnu LXXXVII the latter has an abridged version, which contains the faulty readings कृष्णमार्गजम् ('the skin of a black antelope,' Comm.) and अतुर्वैक्ता (as an epithet of the earth = अतुरन्ता Vishnu LXXXVII, 9).

¹ गयान्यश्यति गयाधिपतिं पश्यति विद्यां पश्यति विद्याधिपतिं पश्यति । इत्याह भगवान्बोधायनः ।

the sections referred to directly from an old recension of this work, as Baudhâya has borrowed another chapter of his work from Gautama, while Vâsishṭha in his turn has borrowed the same chapter from Baudhâya¹. It may be added in confirmation of this view, that as far as Vâsishṭha is concerned, his work is the only Smṛiti, as far as I know, which contains a quotation from the 'Kâtṭhaka' (in XXIX, 18). The Dharma-sûtras of Âpastamba and Gautama have nowhere a large number of consecutive Sûtras in common with the Vishṇu-sûtra, but it is curious to note that the rule, which the latter (X, 45) quotes as the opinion of 'some' (eke), that a non-Brahmanical finder of a treasure, who announces his find to the king, shall obtain one-sixth of the value, is found in no other law-book except in this, which states (III, 61) that a Sûdra shall divide a treasure-trove into twelve parts, two of which he may keep for himself. Of the metrical law-books, one, the Yâgñavalkya-smṛiti, has been shown by Professor Max Müller² to have borrowed the whole anatomical section (III, 84-104), including the simile of the soul which dwells in the heart like a lamp (III, 109, 111, 201), from this work (XCVI, 43-96; XCVII, 9); and it has been pointed out by the same scholar, that the verse in which the author of the former work speaks of the Âraṇyaka and of the Yoga-sâstra as of his own works (III, 110) does not occur in the Vishṇu-sûtra, and must have been added by the versificator, who brought the Yâgñavalkya-smṛiti into its present metrical form. Several other Slokas in Yâgñavalkya's description of the human body (III, 99, 105-108), and nearly the whole section on Yoga (Y. III, 111-203, excepting those Slokas, the substance of which is found in this work and in the code of Manu, viz. 131-140, 177-182, 190, 198-201) may be traced to the same source, as may be also the omission of Vishṇu's enumeration of the 'six limbs' (XCVI, 90) in the Yâgñavalkya-smṛiti, and probably all the minor points on which it differs from this work. Generally speaking, those passages which have been justly noticed as marking the comparatively late period in which that law-book must have been composed¹: such as the allusions to the astrology and astronomy of the Greeks (Y. I, 80, 295), which render it necessary to refer the metrical redaction of the Yāgñavalkya-smṛiti to a later time than the second century A. D.; the whole passage on the worship of Gaṇesa and of the planets (I, 270–307), in which, moreover, a heterodox sect is mentioned, that has been identified with the Buddhists; the philosophical doctrines propounded in I, 349, 350; the injunctions regarding the foundation and endowment of monasteries (II, 185 seq.)—all these passages have no parallel in this work, while it is not overstating the case to say that nearly all the other subjects mentioned in the Yāgñavalkya-smṛiti are treated in a similar way, and very often in the same terms, in the Vishṇu-sūtra as well. Some of those rules, in which the posteriority of the Yāgñavalkya-smṛiti to other law-books exhibits itself, do occur in the Vishṇu-sūtra, but without the same marks of modern age. Thus the former has two *Sloka*s concerning the punishment of forgery (II, 240, 241), in which coined money is referred to by the term nānaka; the Vishṇu-sūtra has the identical rule (V, 122, 123; cf. V, 9), but the word nānaka does not occur in it. Yāgñavalkya, in speaking of the number of wives which a member of the three higher castes may marry (I, 57), advocates the Puritan view, that no Sūdra wife must be among these; this work has analogous rules (XXIV, 1–4), in which, however, such marriages are expressly allowed. The comparative priority of all those Sūtras of Vishṇu, to which similar *Sloka*s of Yāgñavalkya correspond, appears probable on general grounds, which are furnished by the course of development in this as in other branches of Indian literature; and to this it may be added, as far as the civil and criminal laws are concerned, that the former enumerates them quite promiscuously, just like the other Dharma-sûtras, with which he agrees besides in separating the law of inheritance from the body of the laws, whereas Yâgñavalkya enumerates all the laws in the order of the eighteen 'titles of law' of Manu and the more recent law-books, though he does not mention the titles of law by name.

¹ See Bühler, Introduction to Gautama, pp. l-liv.

² Hist. Anc. Sansk. Lit., p. 331.

¹ See Stenzler, in the Preface to his edition of Yāgñavalkya; Jacobi, on Indian Chronology, in the Journal of the German Oriental Society, XXX, 305 seq. &c. Vishṇu's rules (III, 82) concerning the wording &c. of royal grants, which agree with the rules of Yāgñavalkya and other authors, must be allowed a considerable antiquity, as the very oldest grants found in South India conform to those rules. See Burnell, South Indian Palæography, 2nd ed., p. 95.

However much the Vishnu-sûtra may have in common with the Yâgñavalkya-smṛiti, there is no other law-book with which it agrees so closely as with the code of Manu. This fact may be established by a mere glance at the references in the foot-notes to this translation, in which Manu makes his appearance far more frequently and constantly than any other author, and the case becomes the stronger, the more the nature of these analogies is inquired into. Of Slokas alone Vishnu has upwards of 160 in common with Manu, and in a far greater number of cases still his Sûtras agree nearly word for word with the corresponding rules of Manu. The latter also, though he concurs in a very great number of points with the other law authors as well, agrees with none of them so thoroughly as with Vishnu. All the Smṛitis of Âpastamba, Baudhâyana, Vâsishtha, Yâgñavalkya, and Nârada contain, according to an approximate calculation, no more than about 130 Slokas, that are found in the code of Manu as well. The latter author and Vishnu differ of course on a great many minor points, and an exhaustive discussion of this subject would fill a treatise; I must therefore confine myself to notice some of those differences, which are particularly important for deciding the relative priority of the one work before the other. In a number of Slokas Manu's readings are decidedly older and better than Vishnu's. Thus the latter (XXX, 7) compares the three 'Atigurus' to the 'three gods,' i.e. to the post-Vedic Trimûrti of 'Brahman, Vishnu, and Siva,' as the commentator expressly states, whereas Manu in an analogous Sloka (II, 230) refers to the 'three orders' instead. At the end of the section on inheritance (XVIII, 44) Vishnu mentions among other indivisible objects 'a book,' pustakam; Manu (IX, 219) has the same Sloka, but for pustakam he reads prakāshate. Now pustaka is a modern word¹, and Varāhamihira, who lived in the sixth century A.D., appears to be the first author, with a known date, by whom it is used. It occurs again, Vishṇu-sūtra XXIII, 56 (prokshanena ka pustakam), and here also Manu (V, 122) has a different reading (punaḥpākena mrinmayam). The only difference between Vishṇu-sūtra XXII, 93 and Manu V, 110 consists in the use of singular forms (te, srinu) in the former work, and of plural forms (vaḥ, srinuta) in the latter. Now there are a great many other Smṛitis besides the Manu-smṛiti, such as e.g. the Yāgñavalkya and Parāśara Smṛitis, in which the fiction is kept up, that the laws contained in them are promulgated to an assembly of Rishis; but there are very few Smṛitis of the least notoriety or importance besides the Vishṇu-sūtra, in which they are proclaimed to a single person. Other instances in which Manu's readings appear preferable to Vishṇu's may be found, LI, 60 (pretya keha kṛā nishkrītim) = Manu V, 38 (pretya ganmani ganmani); LI, 64 (iti kathaṅkana) = M. V, 41 (ity abravīnmanuḥ); LI, 76 (tasya) = M. V, 53 (tayoh); LIV, 27 (brāhmanyāt) = M. XI, 193 (brahmanā); LVII, 11 (purastād anukoditām) = M. IV, 248; Vāsishṭha XIV, 16; Āpastamba I, 6, 19, 14 (purastād aprakoditām); LXVII, 45 (sāyamprātas tvatithaye) = M. III, 99 (samprāptāya tvatithaye), &c. But these instances do not prove much, as all the passages in question may have been tampered with by the *Vishṇu*itic editor, and as in some other cases the version of Vishṇu seems preferable. Thus 'practised by the virtuous' (sādhubhisṭha nishevitam, LXXI, 90) is a very common epithet of 'ātāra,' and reads better than Manu's nibaddham sveshu karmasu (IV, 155); and krikkhrātikrikkhram (LIV, 30) seems preferable to Baudhāyana's and Manu's krikkhrātikrikkhrau (XI, 209). What is more important, the Vishṇu-sūtra does not only contain a number of verses in the ancient Trishṭubh metre, whereas Manu has none, but it shows those identical three Trishṭubhs of Vāsishṭha and Yāska, which Dr. Bühler has proved to have been converted into Anushṭubh Slokas by Manu (II, 114, 115, 144)¹; and Manu seems to have taken the substance of his three Slokas from this work more immediately, because both he (II, 144) and Vishṇu (XXX, 47) have the reading āvrinoti for ātrinatti, which truly Vedic form is employed both by Vāsishtṛa and Yāska. The relative antiquity of Vishṇu's prose rules, as compared to the numerous corresponding Slokas of Manu, may be proved by arguments precisely similar to those which I have adduced above in speaking of the Yāgñavalkya-smṛiti. As regards those points in the code of Manu, which are usually considered as marks of the comparatively late date of its composition, it will suffice to mention, that the Vishṇu-sūtra nowhere refers to South Indian nations such as the Dravīdas and Andhras, or to the Yavanas; that it shows no distinct traces of an acquaintance with the tenets of any other school of philosophy except the Yoga and Sāṅkhya systems; that it does not mention female ascetics disparagingly, and in particular does not contain Manu's rule (VIII, 363) regarding the comparatively light punishment to be inflicted for violation of (Buddhist and other) female ascetics; and that it does not inveigh (see XV, 3), like Manu (IX, 64-68), against the custom of Niyoga or appointment of a widow to raise offspring to her deceased husband. It is true, on the other hand, that in many cases Vishṇu's rules have a less archaic character than the corresponding precepts of Manu, not only in the Slokas, but in the Sūtra part as well. Thus written documents and ordeals are barely mentioned in the code of Manu (VIII, 114, 115, 168; IX, 232); Vishṇu on the other hand, besides referring in divers places to royal grants and edicts, to written receipts and other private documents, and to books, devotes to writings (lekhyā) an entire chapter, in which he makes mention of the caste of Kāyasthas, 'scribes,' and he lays down elaborate rules for the performance of five species of ordeals, to which recourse should be had, according to him, in all suits of some importance. But in nearly all such cases the antiquity of Vishṇu's rules is warranted to a certain extent by corresponding rules occurring in the Smṛitis of Yāgñavalkya and Nārada ; and the evidence for the modifications and entire transformations, which the code of Manu must have undergone in a number of successive periods, is so abundant, that the archaic character of many of its rules cannot be considered to constitute a sufficient proof of the priority of the whole code before other codes which contain some rules of a comparatively modern character. To this it must be added that the Nārada-smṛiti, though taken as a whole it is decidedly posterior to the code of Manu¹, is designated by tradition as an epitome from another and more bulky recension of the code of Manu than the one which we now possess ; and if this statement may be credited, which is indeed rather doubtful, the very particular resemblance between both works in the law of evidence and in the rules regarding property (see LVIII) can only tend to corroborate the assumption that the Vishnu-sūtra and the Manu-smṛiti must have been closely connected from the first.

¹ See Max Müller, Hist. Anc. Sansk. Lit., p. 512.

¹ Introduction to Bombay Digest, I, p. xxviii seq.

This view is capable of further confirmation still by a different set of arguments. The so-called code of Manu is universally assumed now to be an improved metrical edition of the ancient Dharma-sūtra of the (Maitrāyaṇīya-) Mānavas, a school studying the Black Yagur-veda ; and it has been shown above that the ancient stock of the Vishnu-sūtra, in which all the parts hitherto discussed may be included, represents in the main the Dharma-sūtra of the Kârāyaṇīya-kathas, another school studying the Black Yagur-veda. Now these two schools do not only belong both to that Veda, but to the same branch of it, as may be seen from the Karāṇavyūha, which work classes both the Kathas and Kârāyaṇīyas on the one hand, and the Mānavas together with the six or five other sections of the Maitrāyaṇīyas on the other hand, as subdivisions of the Kāraka Sakhā of the Black Yagur-veda. What is more, there exists a thorough-going parallelism between the literature of those two schools, as far as it is known. To begin with their respective Samhitās, it has been shown by L. Schröder¹ that the Maitrāyaṇī Samhitā has more in common with the Kāthaka, the Samhitā of the Kāthas, than with any other Veda. As the Kāthas are constantly named, in the Mahābhāshya and other old works, by the side of the Kālāpas, whereas the name of the Maitrāyaṇīyas does not occur in any Sanskrit work of uncontested antiquity, it has been suggested by the same scholar that the Maitrāyaṇīyas may be the Kālāpas of old, and may not have assumed the former name till Buddhism began to prevail in India. However this may be, the principal Sūtra works of both schools stand in a similar relation to one another as their Samhitās. Some of those Mantras, which have been stated above to be common to the Vishṇu-sūtra and Kāthaka Gṛihya only, and to occur in no other Vedic work hitherto printed, have been traced in the Mānava Srauta-sūtra, in the chapter on Pinda-pitriyagña (I, 2 of the section on Prāk-soma)², and the conclusion is, that if the Srauta-sūtra of the Kāthaka school were still in existence, it would be found to exhibit a far greater number of analogies with the Srauta-sūtra of the Mānavas. The Gṛihya-sūtra of this school³ agrees with the Kāthaka Gṛihya-sūtra even more closely than the latter agrees with the Vishṇu-sūtra, as both works have not only several entire chapters in common (the chapter on the Vaisvadeva sacrifice among others, which is found in the Vishṇu-sūtra also), but concur everywhere in the arrangement of the subject-matter and in the choice of expressions and Mantras. The Brāhmaṇa stage of Vedic literature is not represented by a separate work in either of the two schools, but a further argument in favour of their alleged historical connection may be derived from their respective geographical position. If it has been rightly conjectured above, that the original seats of the Kāthas were in the north-west, whence they spread themselves over Hindostān, the Maitrāyaṇīyas, though now surviving nowhere except in some villages 'near the Sāt-pudā mountain, which is included in the Vindhya¹,' must have been anciently their neighbours, as the territory occupied by them extended 'from the Mayūra mountain into Gugarāt,' and reached 'as far as the north-western country' (vāyavyadesa)². Considering all this evidence regarding the original connection between the Kāthas and Mānavas, it may be said without exaggeration, that it would be far more surprising to find no traces of resemblance between their respective Dharma-sūtras, such as we possess them, than to find, as is actually the case, the contrary; and it may be argued, vice versâ, that the supposed connection of the two works with the Vedic schools of the Kāthas and *Mānavas*³ respectively, is confirmed by the kinship existing between these two schools.

¹ See the evidence collected in the Preface to my Institutes of Nārada (London, 1876), to which the important fact may be added that Nārada uses the word dīnāra, the Roman denarius. It occurs in a large fragment discovered by Dr. Bühler of a more bulky and apparently older recension of that work than the one which I have translated ; and I may be allowed to mention, incidentally, that this discovery has caused me to abandon my design of publishing the Sanskrit text of the shorter recension, as it may be hoped that the whole text of the original work will soon come to light.

¹ On the Maitrāyaṇī Samhitā, Journal of the German Oriental Society, XXXIII, 177 seq.

² Cod. Haug 53 of the Munich Library.

³ Cod. Haug 55 and 56 of the Munich Library. For details, see my German paper above referred to.

In turning now from the ancient parts of the Vishṇu-sūtra to its more recent ingredients, I may again begin by quoting Professor Max Müller's remarks on this work, which contain the statement, that it is 'enlarged by modern additions written in Slokas⁴.' After him, Dr. Bühler pointed out⁵ that the whole work appears to have been recast by an adherent of Vishṇu, and that the final and introductory chapters in particular are shown by their very style to have been composed by another author than the body of the

¹ Bhāt Dājī, Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, X, 40.

² See a passage from the Mahārṇava, as quoted by Dr. Bühler, Introduction to Āpastamba, p. xxx seq. The same readings are found in a Munich MS. of the Karavyūtha-vyākhyā (cod. Haug 45). With the above somewhat unclear statement Manu's definition of the limits of Brahmāvarta (II, 17) may not unreasonably be compared.

³ The code of Manu has very little in common with the Mānava Grhya-sūtra, both in the Mantras and otherwise. Both Vishṇu and Manu agree with the Kāthaka in the use of the curious term abhinimrukta or abhinirmukta; but the same term is used by Āpastamba, Vāsishta, and others.

⁴ Hist. Anc. Sansk. Lit., p. 134.

⁵ Introduction to Bombay Digest, p. xxii.

work. If the latter remark were in need of further confirmation, it might be urged that the description of Vishnu as 'the boar of the sacrifice' (yagñavarāha) in the first chapter is bodily taken from the Harivamśa (2226-2237), while most of the epithets given to Vishnu in I, 49-61 and XCVIII, 7-100 may be found in another section of the Mahābhārata, the so-called Vishnu-sahasranāma. Along with the introductory and final chapters, all those passages generally are distinctly traceable to the activity of the Vishnuitic editor, in which Vishnu (Purusha, Bhagavat, Vāsudeva, &c.) is mentioned, or his dialogue with the goddess of the earth carried on, viz. I; V, 193; XIX, 24; XX, 16-21; XXII, 93; XXIII, 46; XXIV, 35; XLVII, 10; XLIX; LXIV, 28, 29; LXV; LXVI; LXVII, 2; XC, 3-5, 17-23; XCVI, 97, 98; XCVII, 7-21; XCVIII-C. The short invocation addressed to Vishnu in LXVII, 12 is proved to be ancient by its recurrence in the corresponding chapter of the Kāthaka Gṛihya-sūtra, and Chapter LXV contains genuine Kāthaka Mantras transferred to a Vishnuitic ceremony. Chapter LXVI, on the other hand, though it does not refer to Vishnu by name, seems to be connected with the same Vishnuitic rite, and becomes further suspected by the recurrence of several of its rules in the genuine Chapter LXXIX. The contents of Chapter XCVII, in which it is attempted to reconcile some of the main tenets of the Sāṅkhya system, as propounded in the Sāṅkhya-kārikā, Sāṅkhya-pravāṇabhāṣya, and other works, with the Vaiṣṇava creed and with the Yoga; the fact that the two Slokas in XCVI (97, 98) and part of the Slokas in XCVII (15-21) have their parallel in similar Slokas of the Bhagavad-gītā and of the Bhāgavata-purāṇa; the terms Mahatpati, Kapila, and Sāṅkhyâkârya, used as epithets of Vishnu (XCVIII, 26, 85, 86); and some other passages in the Vishnuitic chapters seem to favour the supposition that the editor may have been one of those members of the Vishnuitic sect of the Bhāgavatas, who were conspicuous for their leaning towards the Sāṅkhya and Yoga systems of philosophy. The arrangement of the Vishnu-sūtra in a hundred chapters is no doubt due to the same person, as the Commentary points out that the number of the epithets given to Vishnu in XCVIII is precisely equal to the number of chapters into which the laws promulgated by him are divided (II-XCVII); though the number ninety-six is received only by including the introductory and final invocations (XCVIII, 6, 101) among the epithets of Vishnu. It seems quite possible, that some chapters were inserted mainly in order to bring up the whole figure to the round number of a hundred chapters, and it is for this reason chiefly that the majority of the following additions, which show no Vishnuitic tendencies, may also be attributed to the Vishnuitic editor.

1. Most or all of the Slokas added at the end of Chapters XX (22-53) and XLIII (32-45) cannot be genuine; the former on account of their great extent and partial recurrence in the Bhagavad-gîtâ¹, Mahâbhârata, and other works of general note, and because they refer to the self-immolation of widows and to Kâla, whom the commentator is probably right in identifying with Vishnu; the latter on account of their rather extravagant character and decidedly Purânic style, though the Gârûḍa-purâṇa, in its very long description of the hells, offers no strict parallel to the details given here. The verses in which the Brâhmanas and cows are celebrated (XIX, 22, 23; XXIII, 57-61) are also rather extravagant; however, some of them are Trishubhs, and the verses in XIX are closely connected with the preceding Sûtras. The two final Slokas in LXXXVI (19, 20) may also be suspected as to their genuineness, because they are wanting in the corresponding chapter of the Kâthaka Gṛhya-sûtra; and a number of other verses in divers places, because they have no parallel in the Smṛiti literature, or because they have been traced in comparatively modern works, such as the Bhagavad-gîtâ, the Pañkatantra, &c. 2. The week of the later Romans and Greeks, and of modern Europe (LXXVIII, 1-7), the self-immolation of widows (XXV, 14; cf. XX, 39), and the Buddhists and Pâsupatas (LXIII, 36) are not mentioned in any ancient Sanskrit work. Besides, the passages in question may be easily removed, especially the Sûtras referring to the seven days of the week, which form clearly a subsequent addition to the enumeration of the Nakshatras and Tithis immediately following (LXXVIII, 8-50), and the rule concerning the burning of widows (XXV, 14), which is in direct opposition to the law concerning the widow's right to inherit (XVII, 4) and to other precepts regarding widows. That the three terms kâshâyin, pravragita, malina in LXIII, 36 refer to members of religious orders seems clear, but it may be doubted whether malina denotes the Pâsupatas, and even whether kâshâyin (cf. pravragitâ XXXVI, 7) denotes the Buddhists, as dresses dyed with Kashâya are worn by Brahmanical sects also, and prescribed for students, and for ascetics likewise, by some of the Grihya- and Dharma-sûtras. Still the antiquity of the Sûtra in question can hardly be defended, because the acquaintance of the Vishnuitic editor with the Buddhistic system of faith is proved by two other Sûtras (XCVIII, 40, 41), and because the whole subject of good and evil omens is not treated in any other ancient Smṛiti. On the other hand, such terms as vedanindâ and nâstikatâ (XXXVII, 4, 31, &c.) recur in most Smṛitis, and can hardly be referred to the Buddhists in particular.

¹ Besides the passages quoted in the notes, 50-53 nearly = Bhag.-gîtâ II, 22-25.

3. The Tîrthas enumerated in LXXXV, some of which are sacred to Vishnu and Siva, belong to all parts of India, and many of them are situated in the Dekhan, which was certainly not included within the limits of the 'Âryāvarta' of the ancient Dharma-sûtra (LXXXIV, 4). As no other Smṛiti contains a list of this kind, the whole chapter may be viewed as a later addition.

4. The ceremonies described in XC are not mentioned in other Smṛitis, while some of them are decidedly Vishnuitic, or traceable in modern works; and as all the Sûtras in XC hang closely together, this entire chapter seems also to be spurious.

5. The repetitions in the list of articles forbidden to sell (LIV, 18-22); the addition of the two categories of atipâtakâni, 'crimes in the highest degree,' and prakîrṇakam, 'miscellaneous crimes' (XXXIII, 3, 5; XXXIV; XLII), to Manu's list of crimes; the frequent references to the Ganges river; and other such passages, which show a modern character, without being traceable in the Smṛitis of Yâgñavalkya and Nârada, may have been added by the Vishnuitic editor from modern Smṛitis, either for the sake of completeness, or in order to make up the required number of chapters. 6. All the passages hitherto mentioned are such as have no parallel in other ancient Smṛitis. But the Vishnuitic editor did evidently not confine himself to the introduction of new matter into the ancient Dharma-sūtra. That he did not refrain, occasionally, from altering the original text, has been conjectured above with regard to his readings of some of those Slokas, which are found in the code of Manu as well ; and it can be proved quite clearly by comparing his version of the Vṛishotsarga ceremony (LXXXVI) with the analogous chapter of the Kāthaka Gr̥hya-sūtra. In one case (LI, 64 ; cf. XXIII, 50 = M. V, 131) he has replaced the words, which refer the authorship of the Sloka in question to Manu, by an unmeaning term. The superior antiquity of Manu's reading (V, 41) is vouched for by the recurrence of the same passage in the Gr̥hya-sūtra of Sāṅkhāyana (II, 16, 1) and in the Vāsishtasmṛiti (IV, 6), and the reference to Manu has no doubt been removed by the Vishnuitic editor, because it would have been out of place in a speech of Vishṇu. References to sayings of Manu and other teachers and direct quotations from Vedic works are more or less common in all Dharma-sūtras, and their entire absence in this work is apparently due to their systematical removal by the editor. On the other hand, the lists of Vedic and other works to be studied or recited may have been enlarged in one or two cases by him or by another interpolator, namely, XXX, 37 (cf. V, 191), where the Atharva-veda is mentioned after the other Vedas by the name of 'Ātharvaṇa' (not Atharvāṅgirasas, as in the code of Manu and most other ancient works), and LXXXIII, 7, where Vyākaraṇa, 'Grammar,' i. e. according to the Commentary the grammars of Pāṇini and others, is mentioned as distinct from the Vedāṅgas. The antiquity of the former passage might indeed be defended by the example of Āpastamba, who, though referring like this work to the 'three Vedas' both separately and collectively, mentions in another place the 'Ātharvaṇa-veda'.¹ Besides the above works, and those referred to in LVI, the laws of Vishnu name no other work except the Purāṇas, Itihāsas, and Dharmasāstras. 7. As the Vishnuitic editor did not scruple to alter the import of a certain number of passages, the modernisation of the language of the whole work, which was probably as rich in archaic forms and curious old terms as the Kāṭhaka Grihya-sūtra and as the Dharma-sūtra of Āpastamba, may be likewise attributed to him. As it is, the Vishnu-sūtra agrees in style and expressions more closely with the Smṛitis of Manu and Yāgñavalkya than with any other work, and it is at least not inferior to the former work in the preservation of archaic forms. Thus the code of Manu has seven aorist forms¹, while the Vishnu-sūtra contains six, not including those occurring in Vedic Mantras which are quoted by their Pratīkas only. Of new words and meanings of words the Vishnu-sūtra contains also a certain number; they have lately been communicated by me to Dr. von Böhtlingk for insertion in his new Dictionary.

¹ See Bühler, Introduction to Āpastamba, p. xxiv.

All the points noticed render it necessary to assign a comparatively recent date to the Vishnuitic editor; and if the introduction of the week of the Greeks into the ancient Dharma-sūtra has been justly attributed to him, he cannot be placed earlier than the third or fourth century A.D.² The lower limit must be put before the eleventh century, in which the Vishnu-sūtra is quoted in the Mitāksharā of Vigñānesvara. From that time downwards it is quoted in nearly every law digest, and a particularly large number of quotations occurs in Aparārka's Commentary on Yāgñavalkya, which was composed in the twelfth century³. Nearly all those quotations, as far as they have been examined, are actually found in the Vishnu-sūtra; but the whole text is vouched for only by Nandapandita's Commentary, called Vaigyanantī, which was composed in the first quarter of the seventeenth century. The subscriptions in the London MSS. of the Vaigayantî contain the statement, which is borne out by the Introduction, that it was composed by Nandapandita, the son of Râmapandita Dharmâdhikârin, an inhabitant of Benares, at the instigation of the Mahârâga Kesavanâyaka, also called Tammasânâyaka, the son of Kodapanâyaka; and a passage added at the end of the work states, more accurately, that Nandasarman (Nandapandita) wrote it at Kâsî (Benares) in the year 1679 of the era of Vikramabhâsvara (=A. D. 1622), by command of Kesavanâyaka, his own king. These statements regarding the time and place of the composition of the Vaigayantî are corroborated by the fact that it refers in several cases to the opinions of Haradatta, who appears to have lived in the sixteenth century¹, while Nandapandita is not among the numerous authors quoted in the Vîramitrodaya of Mitramisra, who lived in the beginning of the seventeenth century², and who was consequently a contemporary of Nandapandita, if the above statement is correct; and that he attacks in a number of cases the views of the 'Eastern Commentators' (Prâkyas), and quotes a term from the dialect of Madhyadesa.

¹ Whitney, Indische Grammatik, § 826.

² See Jacobi, Journal of the German Oriental Society. XXX, 306. The first author with a known date, who shows an acquaintance with the week of the Greeks, is Varāhamihira (sixth century A. D.)

³ See Bühler, Kashmir Report, p. 52. The MSS. used are from the Dekhan College, Pune.

The subjoined translation is based upon the text handed down by Nandapandita nearly everywhere except in some of the Mantras, which have been rendered according to the better readings preserved in the Kâthaka Gṛihya-sûtra. The two Calcutta editions of the Vishnu-sûtra, the second of which is a mere reprint of the first, will be found to agree in the main with the text here translated. They are doubtless based upon the Vaigayantî, as they contain several passages in which portions of Nandapandita's Commentary have crept into the text of the Sûtras. But the MS. used for the first Calcutta edition must have been a very faulty one, as both Calcutta editions, besides differing from the best MSS. of the Vaigayantî on a very great number of minor points, entirely omit the greater part of Chapter LXXXI

¹ Bühler, Introduction to Âpastamba, p. xliii.

² Bühler loc. cit.

(3-22), the genuineness of which is proved by analogous passages in the other *Smṛitis*¹. An excellent copy of the Vaigayantī in possession of Dr. Bühler has, together with three London MSS. of that work and one London MS. containing the text only, enabled me to establish quite positively nearly in every case the readings sanctioned by Nandapandita. I had hoped to publish a new edition of the text prepared from those MSS., and long ready for the press, before publishing my English version. This expectation has not been fulfilled, but it is hoped that in the mean time this attempt at a translation will be welcome to the students of Indian antiquity, and will facilitate the understanding of the text printed in Givānanda Vidyāsāgara's cheap edition, which is probably in the hands of most Sanskrit scholars. The precise nature of the relation in which the text of my forthcoming edition stands to the Calcutta editions may be gathered from the large specimens of the text as given in the best MSS., that have been edited by Dr. Bühler in the Bombay Digest, and by myself in two papers published in the Transactions of the Royal Bavarian Academy of Science.

Nandapandita has composed, besides the Vaigayantī, a treatise on the law of adoption, called *Dattaka-mīmāṃsā*², a commentary on the code of Parāśara, a work called Vidvanmanoharā-smṛitisindhu, one called Srāddha-kalpa-latā, and commentaries on the Mitāksharā and on Ādityākārya's Āsaukanirnaya. All these works belong to the province of Hindu law, and both his fertility as a writer in that branch of Indian science, and the reputation enjoyed by some of his works even nowadays, must raise a strong presumption in favour of his knowledge of the subject. The general trustworthiness of his Commentary on the Vishnu-sûtra is further confirmed by the frequent references which it contains to the opinions of earlier commentators of that work; and the wide extent of his reading, though he often makes an unnecessary display of it, has been eminently serviceable to him in tracing the connection of certain chapters and Mantras with the Kâthaka literature¹. On the other hand, his very learning, combined with a strict adherence to the well-known theory of Hindu commentators regarding the absolute identity between the teaching of all Smritis, has frequently misled him into a too extensive method of interpretation. Even in commenting the Slokas he assigns in many cases an important hidden meaning to such particles as ka, vâ, tathâ, and others, and to unpretending epithets and the like, which have clearly been added for metrical reasons only². This practice, besides being contrary to common sense, is nowhere countenanced by the authority of Kullûka, in his remarks on the numerous identical Slokas found in the code of Manu. With the Sûtras generally speaking the case is different: many of them would be nearly or quite unintelligible without the explanatory remarks added in brackets from Nandapandita's Commentary³, and in a number of those cases even, where his method jars upon a European mind, the clauses supplied by him are probably correct⁴. The same may be said of his interpretations of the epithets of Vishnu, excepting those which are based on utterly fanciful etymologies⁵.

¹ The first edition of the 'Vaishnava Dharmasāstra' was published in Bengali type by Bhavānīkaraṇa; the second, in Devanāgarī type, is contained in Givānanda Vidyāsāgara's Dharmashāstrasangraha (1876).

² This work has been published repeatedly at Calcutta and Madras, and translated into English by Sutherland (1821), which translation has been reprinted in Stokes' Hindu Law Books. The rest of the above list is made up from an enumeration of Nandapandita's Tīkās at the end of Dr. Bühler's copy of the Vaigayantī, from an occasional remark in the latter work itself (XV, 9), and from Professor Weber's Catalogue of the Berlin Sanskrit MSS.

¹ See the notes on LXV, 2 seq.; LXXIII, 5-9; LXXXVI, 13. In his Commentary on LXVII also Nandapandita states expressly that the description of the Vaisvadeva is according to the rites of the Kâthaka-sâkhâ.

² For instances, see the notes on XX, 45; LXIV, 40.

³ See e. g. Chapter V passim.

⁴ Thus nearly all the 'intentionally's' and 'unintentionally's,' &c., as supplied in the section on penances might seem superfluous, or even wrong; but as in several places involuntary crimes are expressly distinguished from those intentionally committed (see e. g. XXVIII, 48, 51; XXXVIII, 7), and as in other cases a clause of this kind must needs be supplied (see XXXIX, 2; LII, 3; LIII, 5, &c.), Nandapandita is probably right in supplying it from other Smritis in most remaining cases as well. This method has occasionally carried him too far, when his explanations have not been given in the text.

⁵ See I, 51, 55; XCVIII, 40, 41, 46, &c.

as the style of the introductory and final chapters is as artificial, though in another way, as the Sûtra style. Though, however, in works composed in the latter style, every ka, vâ, or iti, &c., which is not absolutely required by the sense, was probably intended by their authors to convey a special meaning¹, it is a question of evidence in every single case, whether those meanings which Nandapandita assigns to these and other such particles and expletive words are the correct ones. In several cases of this or of a similar kind he is palpably wrong², and in many others the interpretations proposed by him are at least improbable, because the authoritative passages he quotes in support of them are taken from modern works, which cannot have been known to the author of the Vishnu-sûtra. Interpretations of this class have, therefore, been given in the notes only; and they have been omitted altogether in a number of cases where they appeared quite frivolous, or became too numerous, or could not be deciphered completely, owing to clerical mistakes in the MSS. But though it is impossible to agree with some of his general principles of interpretation, or with his application of them, Nandapandita's interpretations of difficult terms and Sûtras are invaluable, and I have never deviated from them in my translation without strong reasons to the contrary, which have in most cases been stated in the notes³. Besides the extracts given in the notes, a few other passages from the Commentary and several other additions will be given in p. 312; and I must apologize to my readers for having to note along with the Addenda a number of Corrigenda, which will be found in the same page. In compiling the Index of Sanskrit words occurring in this work, which it has been thought necessary to add to the General Index, I have not aimed at completeness except as regards the names of deities and of penances. My forthcoming edition of the Sanskrit text will be accompanied by a full Index of words.

¹ For instances of this in the Dharma-sûtras of Âpastamba and Gautama, see Bühler, Âpast. I, 2, 7, 24; 8, 5; Gaut. V, 5, 14, 17; IX, 44; XIV, 45; XIX, 13-15, 20; XXI, 9, &c.; and see also Dr. Bühler's remarks on Gñâpaka-sûtras, Âpast. I, 3, 11, 7; Gaut. I, 31, notes.

² See V, 117; VII, 7; XXVII, 10; LI, 26; LXXI, 88; LXXIII, 9; LXXIV, 1, 2, 7, &c.

³ See e.g. XVII, 22; XVIII, 44; XXIV, 40; XXVIII, 5, 11; LV, 20; LIX, 27, 29; LXIII, 36; LXIV, 18; LXVII, 6-8; XCI, 4; XCVII, 7.

In conclusion I have to express my thanks in the most cordial manner to Dr. Bühler, who has constantly assisted me with his advice in the preparing of this translation, and has kindly lent me his excellent copy of the Vaigayanti; and to Dr. von Böhtlingk and Professor Max Müller, who have favoured me with valuable hints on divers points connected with this work. My acknowledgments are due, in the second place, to K. M. Chatfield, Esq., Director of Public Instruction, Bombay, to Dr. von Halm, Chief Librarian of the Royal Library, Munich, to Professor R. Lepsius, Chief Librarian of the Royal Library of Berlin, and to Dr. R. Rost, Chief Librarian of the India Office Library, London, for the valuable aid received from these gentlemen and the great liberality with which they have placed Sanskrit MSS. under their care at my disposal.

VISHNU.

VISHNU.

I.

1. THE night of Brahman being over, and the God sprung from the lotus (Brahman) having woke from his slumber, Vishnu purposing to create living beings, and perceiving the earth covered with water,

2. Assumed the shape of a boar, delighting to sport in water, as at the beginning of each former Kalpa, and raised up the earth (from the water).

3. His feet were the Vedas ; his tusks the sacrificial stakes ; in his teeth were the offerings ; his mouth was the pyre ; his tongue was the fire ; his hair was the sacrificial grass ; the sacred texts were his head ; and he was (endowed with the miraculous power of) a great ascetic.

4. His eyes were day and night ; he was of superhuman nature ; his ears were the two bundles of Kusa grass (for the Ishṭis, or smaller sacrifices, and for the animal offerings) ; his ear-rings were the ends of those bundles of Kusa grass (used for wiping

L. 1. Regarding the duration of a night of Brahman, see XX, 14. 'Bhūtāni' means living beings of all the four kinds, born from the womb and the rest. (Nand.) The three other kinds consist of those produced from an egg, from sweat, and from a shoot or germ ; see Manu I, 43-46.

2. A Kalpa=a day of Brahman ; see XX, 13.

the ladle and other sacrificial implements); his nose (the vessel containing) the clarified butter; his snout was the ladle of oblations; his voice was similar in sound to the chanting of the Sâma-veda; and he was of huge size.

5. He was full of piety and veracity; beautiful; his strides and his strength were immense (like those of Vishnu); his large nostrils were penances; his knees the victim; and his figure colossal.

6. His entrails were the (three) chanters of the Sâma-veda¹; his member was the burnt-oblation; his scrotum was the sacrificial seeds and grains; his mind was the altar (in the hut for the wives and domestic uses of the sacrificer); the hindparts (of Vishnu) in his transformation were the Mantras; his blood was the Soma juice.

7. His shoulders were the (great) altar; his smell was that of the (sacrificial cake and other) oblations; his speed was the oblations to the gods and to the manes and other oblations; his body was the hut for the wives and domestic uses of the sacrificer; he was majestic; and instructed with the initiatory ceremonies for manifold sacrifices (lasting one, or two, three, or twelve years, and others).

8. His heart was the sacrificial fee; he was possessed of the (sacrificial and other) great Mantras employed in order to effect the union of the mind with the Supreme; he was of enormous size (like the long sacrifices lasting more than one day); his lovely lips were the beginnings of the two hymns recited at the beginning of the animal sacrifice; his ornaments were the whirlpool of the milk poured into the heated vessel (at the Pravargya ceremony introductory to the Soma-sacrifice).

6. ¹ 'This is because the vital breaths, by which the sound of the voice is effected, pass through them, it having been said (in 4) that the sound of his voice was like the chanting of the Sâma-veda.' (Nand.)

9. All sorts of sacred texts (the Gâyatri and others) were his path in marching; the mysterious Upanishads (the Vedânta) were his couch; he was accompanied by his consort Khâyâ (Lakshmi); he was in size like the Manisringa mountain.

10. The lord, the creator, the great Yogin, plunging into the one ocean from love of the world,

11. Raised up, with the edge of his tusks, the earth bounded by the sea together with its mountains, forests, and groves, which was immersed in the water of (the seven oceans now become) one ocean, and created the universe anew.

12. Thus the whole earth, after having sunk into (the lower region called) Rasâtala, was in the first place raised in the boar-incarnation by Vishnu, who took compassion upon the living beings.

13, 14. Then, after having raised the earth, the destroyer of Madhu placed and fixed it upon its own (former) seat (upon the oceans) and distributed the waters upon it according to their own (former) station, conducting the floods of the oceans into the oceans, the water of the rivers into the rivers, the water of the tanks into the tanks, and the water of the lakes into the lakes.

15. He created the seven (lower regions called) *Pâtâlas*¹ and the seven worlds, the seven Dvîpas

15.¹ The seven Pâtâlas are, Atala, Vitala, Sutala, Mahâtala, Rasâtala, Talâtala, and Pâtâla; the seven worlds are, Bhûr-loka, Bhuvark-loka, Svar-loka, Mahar-loka, Ganar-loka, Tapar-loka, and Satya- and the seven oceans, and fixed their several limits².

16. (He created) the rulers of the (seven) Dvîpas and the (eight) guardians of the world (Indra and the rest), the rivers, mountains, and trees, the seven Rîshis, who know (and practise) the law, the Vedas together with their Ângas, the Suras, and the Asuras.

17. (He created) Pisâkas (ogres), Uragas (serpents), Gandharvas (celestial singers), Yakshas (keepers of Kubera's treasures), Rakshasas (goblins), and men, cattle, birds, deer and other animals, (in short) all the four kinds of living beings¹, and clouds, rainbows, lightnings, and other celestial phenomena or bodies (such as the planets and the asterisms), and all kinds of sacrifices.

18. Bhagavat, after having thus created, in the loka; the seven Dvîpas or divisions of the terrestrial world are, Gambu, Plaksha, Sâlmâlî, Kusa, Krauñçâ, Sâka, and Pushkara; each Dvîpa is encircled by one of the seven oceans, viz. the seas of Lavana (salt-water), Ikshu (syrup), Sarpih (butter), Dadhi (sour milk), Dugdha (milk), Svâdhu (treacle), and Udaka (water), (Nand.) The enumerations contained in the Vishnu-purâna and other works differ on two or three points only from that given by Nand.—² Besides the interpretation followed in the text, Nand. proposes a second explanation of the term 'sthânâni,' as denoting Bhârata-varsha (India) and the other eight plains situated between the principal mountains.

16. The eight 'guardians of the world' (Lokapâlas) are, Indra, Agni, Yama, Sûrya, Varuna, Pavana, Kubera, and Soma (M.V, 96). The seven Rîshis, according to the Satapatha-brâhmana, are, Gotama, Bharadvâga, Visvâmitra, Gamadagni, Vasishthâ, Kasyapa, and Atri. The six Vedângas are, Sikshâ (pronunciation), Khandas (metre), Vyâkarana (grammar), Nirukta (etymology), Kalpa (ceremonial), and Gyotisha (astronomy). See Max Müller, Ancient Sanskrit Literature, p. 108, &c.

17.¹ See 1.

shape of a boar, this world together with all animate and inanimate things in it, went away into a place hidden from the world.

19. Ganârdana, the chief of the gods, having become invisible, the goddess of the earth began to consider, 'How shall I be able to sustain myself (henceforth)?'

20. 'I will go to Kasyapa to ask: he will tell me the truth. The great Muni has my welfare under constant consideration.'

21. Having thus decided upon her course, the goddess, assuming the shape of a woman, went to see Kasyapa, and Kasyapa saw her.

22. Her eyes were similar to the leaves of the blue lotus (of which the bow of Kâma, the god of love, is made); her face was radiant like the moon in the autumn season; her locks were as dark as a swarm of black bees; she was radiant; her lip was (red) like the Bandhugtva flower; and she was lovely to behold.

23. Her eyebrows were fine; her teeth exceedingly small; her nose handsome; her brows bent; her neck shaped like a shell; her thighs were constantly touching each other; and they were fleshy thighs, which adorned her loins.

24. Her breasts were shining white, firm¹, plump, very close to each other, (decorated with continuous strings of pearls) like the projections on the forehead of Indra's elephant, and radiant like the gold (of the two golden jars used at the consecration of a king).

24. ¹ Or 'equal in size,' according to the second of the two explanations which Nand. proposes of the term 'samau.'

25. Her arms were as delicate as lotus fibres; her hands were similar to young shoots; her thighs were resplendent like golden pillars; and her knees were hidden (under the flesh), and closely touching each other.

26. Her legs were smooth and exquisitely proportioned; her feet exceedingly graceful; her loins fleshy; and her waist like that of a lion's cub.

27. Her reddish nails shone (like rubies); her beauty was the delight of every looker-on; and with her glances she filled at every step all the quarters of the sky as it were with lotus-flowers.

28. Radiant with divine lustre, she illuminated all the quarters of the sky with it; her clothing was most exquisite and perfectly white; and she was decorated with the most precious gems.

29. With her steps she covered the earth as it were with lotuses; she was endowed with beauty and youthful charms; and made her approach with modest bearing.

30. Having seen her come near, Kasyapa saluted her reverentially, and said, 'O handsome lady, O earth, radiant with divine lustre, I am acquainted with thy thoughts.

31. 'Go to visit Ganârdana, O large-eyed lady; he will tell thee accurately, how thou shalt henceforth sustain thyself.

32. 'For thy sake, O (goddess), whose face is lovely and whose limbs are beautiful, I have found out, by profound meditation, that his residence is in the Kshîroda (milk-ocean).'

33. The goddess of the earth answered, 'Yes, (I shall do as you bid me),' saluted Kasyapa rever-entially, and proceeded to the Kshīroda sea, in order to see Kesava (Vishnu).

34. She beheld (then) the ocean, from which the Amṛita arose. It was lovely, like the rays of the moon, and agitated by hundreds of waves produced by stormy blasts of wind.

35. (With its waves) towering like a hundred Himālayas it seemed another terrestrial globe, calling near as it were the earth with its hands, the rolling waves.

36. With those hands it was as it were constantly producing the radiancy of the moon; and every stain of guilt was removed from it by Hari's (Vishnu's) residence within its limits.

37. Because (it was entirely free from sin) therefore it was possessed of a pure and shining frame; its colour was white; it was inaccessible to birds; and its seat was in the lower regions.

38. It was rich in blue and tawny gems (sapphires, coral, and others), and looking therefore as if the atmosphere had descended upon the earth, and as if a number of forests adorned with a multitude of fruits had descended upon its surface.

39. Its size was immense, like that of the skin of (Vishnu's) serpent Sesha. After having seen the milk-ocean, the goddess of the earth beheld the dwelling of Kesava (Vishnu) which was in it:

40. (His dwelling), the size of which cannot be expressed in words, and the sublimity of which is also beyond the power of utterance. In it she saw the destroyer of Madhu seated upon Sesha.

41. The lotus of his face was hardly visible on account of the lustre of the gems decorating the neck of the snake Sesha; he was shining like a hundred moons; and his splendour was equal to the rays of a myriad of suns.

37. See 15, note.

42. He was clad in a yellow robe (radiant like gold); imperturbable; decorated with all kinds of gems; and shining with the lustre of a diadem resembling the sun in colour, and with (splendid) ear-rings.

43. Lakshmi was stroking his feet with her soft palms; and his attributes (the shell, the discus, the mace, and the lotus-flower) wearing bodies were attending upon him on all sides.

44. Having espied the lotus-eyed slayer of Madhu, she knelt down upon the ground and addressed him as follows:

45. 'When formerly I was sunk into the region of Rasātala, I was raised by thee, O God, and restored to my ancient seat, O Vishnu, thanks to thy benevolence towards living beings.

46. 'Being there, how am I to maintain myself upon it, O lord of the gods?' Having been thus addressed by the goddess, the god enunciated the following answer:

47. 'Those who practise the duties ordained for each caste and for each order, and who act up strictly to the holy law, will sustain thee, O earth; to them is thy care committed.'

48. Having received this answer, the goddess of the earth said to the chief of the gods, 'Communicate to me the eternal laws of the castes and of the orders.'

47. Regarding the four castes and the four orders, see II, 1; III, 3.

49. 'I desire to learn them from thee; for thou art my chief stay. Adoration be to thee, O brilliant¹ chief of the gods, who annihilatest the power of the (Daityas and other) enemies of the gods.

50. 'O Nârâyana (son of Nara), O Gagannâtha (sovereign of the world); thou holdest the shell, the discus, and the mace (in thy hands); thou hast a lotus (Brahman) springing from thy navel; thou art the lord of the senses; thou art most powerful and endowed with conquering strength.

51. 'Thou art beyond the cognisance of the senses; thy end is most difficult to know; thou art brilliant; thou holdest the bow Sârnga; thou art the boar¹; thou art terrible; thou art Govinda² (the herdsman); thou art of old; thou art Purushottama (the spirit supreme).

52. 'Thy hair is golden; thy eyes are everywhere; thy body is the sacrifice; thou art free from stain; thou art the "field" (the corporeal frame); thou art the principle of life; thou art the ruler

49. ¹ This is Nand.'s interpretation of the term 'deva,' but it may also be taken in its usual acceptance of 'god.'

51. ¹ This is the third of the three interpretations of the term varâha, which Nand. proposes. According to the first, it would mean 'one who kills his worst or most prominent foes;' according to the second, 'one who gratifies his own desires.' But these two interpretations are based upon a fanciful derivation of varâha from vara and â-han. Of many others among the epithets Nand. proposes equally fanciful etymologies, which I shall pass over unnoticed.—

² This epithet, which literally means 'he who finds or wins cows,' is usually referred to Vishnu's recovering the 'cow,' i.e. the earth, when it was lost in the waters: see Mahâbh. XII, 13228, which verse is quoted both by Nand. and by Saṅkara in his Commentary on the Vishnu-sahasranâma. It originally refers, no doubt, to Vishnu or Krishna as the pastoral god.

of the world; thou art lying on the bed of the ocean.

53. 'Thou art Mantra (prayer); thou knowest the Mantras; thou surpassest all conception; thy frame is composed of the Vedas and Vedāṅgas; the creation and destruction of this whole world is effected through thee.

54. 'Thou knowest right and wrong; thy body is law; law springs from thee; desires are gratified by thee; thy powers are everywhere; thou art (imperishable like) Amṛita (ambrosia); thou art heaven; thou art the destroyer of Madhu and Kaiṭasa.

55. 'Thou causest the increase of the great; thou art inscrutable; thou art all; thou givest shelter to all; thou art the chief one; thou art free from sin; thou art Gîmûta; thou art inexhaustible; thou art the creator.

56. 'Thou increasest the welfare (of the world); the waters spring from thee; thou art the seat of intelligence; action is not found in thee; thou presidest over seven chief things¹; thou art the teacher of religious rites; thou art of old; thou art Puru-shottama.

57. 'Thou art not to be shaken; thou art unde-

55. 'The great (brîhat) means time, space, and the like. . . . He is called "all" because he is capable of assuming any shape.' (Nand.) The sense of the term 'gîmûta,' as an epithet of divine beings, is uncertain. According to Nand., it would mean 'he who sprinkles living beings;' but this interpretation is based upon a fanciful derivation, from gîva and mûtrayati.

56.¹ This refers either to the seven divisions of a Sâman; or to the seven species, of which each of the three kinds of sacrifices, domestic offerings, burnt-offerings, and Soma-sacrifices, consists (cf. Gaut. VIII, 18-20); or to the seven worlds (see 15, note), Bhûr and the rest. (Nand.)

caying; thou art the producer of the atoms; thou art kind to faithful attendants; thou art the purifier (of sinners); thou art the protector of all the gods; thou art the protector of the pious.

58. 'Thou art also the protector of those who know the Veda, O Purushottama. I have come, O Gagannâtha, to the immovable Vâkaspati (the lord of holy speech), the lord;

59. 'To him, who is very pious; invincible; Vasusheta (who has treasures for his armies); who bestows largesses upon his followers; who is endowed with the power of intense devotion; who is the germ of the ether; from whom the rays (of the sun and moon) proceed;

60. 'To Vâsudeva; the great soul of the universe; whose eyes are like lotuses; who is eternal; the preceptor of the Suras and of the Asuras; brilliant; omnipresent; the great lord of all creatures;

61. 'Who has one body and four faces; who is the producer of (the five grosser elements, ether, air, fire, water, and earth), the producers of the world. Teach me concisely, O Bhagavat, the eternal laws ordained for the aggregate of the four castes,

62. 'Together with the customs to be observed by each order and with the secret ordinances.' The chief of the gods, thus addressed by the goddess of the earth, replied to her as follows:

62. According to Nand., the term rahasya, 'secret ordinances or doctrines,' has to be referred either to the laws regarding the occupations lawful for each caste in times of distress (âpaddharma, see II, 15), or to the penances (XLVI seq.) The latter interpretation seems to be the more plausible one, with the limitation, however, that rahasya is only used to denote the penances for secret faults, which are termed rahasya in LV, 1.

63. 'Learn from me, in a concise form, O radiant goddess of the earth, the eternal laws for the aggregate of the four castes, together with the customs to be observed by each order, and with the secret ordinances,

64. 'Which will effect the final liberation of the virtuous persons, who will support thee. Be seated upon this splendid golden seat, O handsome-thighed goddess.

65. 'Seated at ease, listen to me proclaiming the sacred laws.' The goddess of the earth, thereupon, seated at ease, listened to the sacred precepts as they came from the mouth of Vishnu.

II.

1. Brâhmanas, Kshatriyas, Vaisyas, and Sûdras are the four castes.

2. The first three of these are (called) twice-born.

3. For them the whole number of ceremonies, which begin with the impregnation and end with the ceremony of burning the dead body, have to be performed with (the recitation of) Mantras.

4. Their duties are :

5. For a Brâhmana, to teach (the Veda);

6. For a Kshatriya, constant practice in arms ;

7. For a Vaisya, the tending of cattle ;

8. For a Sûdra, to serve the twice-born ;

II. 1. Âpast. I, 1, 1, 3. — 1, 2. M. X, 4 ; Y. I, 10. — 3. M. II, 26 ; Y. I, 10. — 4-9. M. I, 88-91 ; VIII, 410 ; IX, 326-335 ; X, 75-79 ; Y. I, 118-120 ; Âpast. I, 1, 1, 5, 6 ; II, 5, 10, 4-7 ; Gaut. X, 2, 7, 49, 56. — 15. M. X, 81 ; Y. III, 35 ; Gaut. VII, 6. — 16, 17. Gaut. VIII, 23 ; X, 51. 'This chapter treats of the four castes.' (Nand.)

9. For all the twice-born, to sacrifice and to study (the Veda).

10. Again, their modes of livelihood are :

11. For a Brâhmaṇa, to sacrifice for others and to receive alms ;

12. For a Kshatriya, to protect the world (and receive due reward, in form of taxes) ;

13. For a Vaisya, tillage, keeping cows (and other cattle), traffic, lending money upon interest, and growing seeds ;

14. For a Sûdra, all branches of art (such as painting and the other fine arts) ;

15. In times of distress, each caste may follow the occupation of that next (below) to it in rank.

16. Forbearance, veracity, restraint, purity, liberality, self-control, not to kill (any living being), obedience towards one's Gurus, visiting places of pilgrimage, sympathy (with the afflicted),

17. Straightforwardness, freedom from covetousness, reverence towards gods and Brâhmaṇas, and freedom from anger are duties common (to all castes).

III.

1. Now the duties of a king are :

2. To protect his people,

14. According to Nand., the use of the term sarva, 'all,' implies that Sûdras may also follow the occupations of a Vaisya, tillage and the rest, as ordained by Devala.

16. The term Guru, 'superior,' generally denotes the parents and the teacher, or Guru in the narrower sense of the term ; see XXXI, 1, 2. It may also include all those who are one's elders or betters ; see XXXII, 1-3.

III. 2, 3. M. VII, 35, 144 ; Gaut. X, 7 ; XI, 9. — 4, 5. M. VII, 69 ; Y. I, 320. — 6. M. VII, 70 ; Y. I, 320 ; Âpast. II, 10, 25, 2. —

3. And to keep the four castes and the four orders¹ in the practice of their several duties.

4. Let the king fix his abode in a district containing open plains, fit for cattle, and abounding in grain;

5. And inhabited by many Vaisyas and Sûdras.

6. There let him reside in a stronghold (the strength of which consists) either in (its being surrounded by) a desert, or in (a throng of) armed

7-10. M. VII, 115; Âpast. II, 10, 26, 4, 5. — 11-15. M. VII, 116, 117. — 16-21. M. VII, 61, 62; Y. I, 321. — 22-25. M. VII, 130-132; Y. I, 327; Âpast. II, 10, 26, 9; Gaut. X, 24, 25. — 26. M. VII, 133; Âpast. II, 10, 26, 10. — 28. M. VIII, 304; Y. I, 334; Gaut. XI, 11. — 29, 30. M. VII, 128; VIII, 398; Y. II, 161; Gaut. X, 26. — 31. M. VIII, 400; Y. II, 262. — 32. M. VII, 138; Gaut. X, 31-33. — 33. M. IX, 294; Y. I, 352. — 35. M. VII, 122, 184; Y. I, 331, 337. — 36, 37. Y. I, 337. — 38-41. M. VII, 158-161, 182, 183; Y. I, 344-347. — 42. M. VII, 203; Y. I, 342. — 43. M. VII, 215. — 44. M. VII, 88. — 45. M. VII, 89; Y. I, 324; Âpast. II, 10, 26, 2, 3. — 47. M. VII, 202. — 50-52. M. VII, 50, 51. — 55. M. VII, 62; VIII, 39. — 56-58. M. VIII, 37, 38; Y. II, 34; Gaut. X, 43, 44. — 61. Gaut. X, 45. — 62. Y. II, 35. — 63. M. VIII, 35. — 64. M. VIII, 36. — 65. M. VIII, 27, 28; Gaut. X, 48. — 66, 67. M. VIII, 40; Y. II, 36; Âpast. II, 10, 26, 8; Gaut. X, 46, 47. — 68. Gaut. X, 17. — 70. M. VII, 78; Y. I, 312; Gaut. XI, 12. — 71. M. VII, 54, 60; Y. I, 311. — 72. M. VIII, 1; Y. II, 1. — 73. M. VIII, 9; Y. II, 3; Gaut. XIII, 96. — 74. M. VIII, 12-19; Y. II, 2; Âpast. II, 11, 29, 5. — 75. Gaut. XI, 15. — 76, 77. M. VII, 38. — 79, 80. M. VII, 134; Y. I, 338; Âpast. II, 10, 25, 11; Gaut. X, 9, 10. — 81. Âpast. II, 10, 26, 1. — 81, 82. Y. I, 317-319. — 84. M. VII, 82; Y. I, 314. — 85. M. VII, 220. — 87, 88. M. VII, 217, 218. — 89. M. VII, 146. — 91, 92. M. VII, 16; VIII, 126; Y. I, 367; Gaut. X, 8. — 94. M. VIII, 335; Y. I, 357; Âpast. II, 11, 28, 13. — 95. M. VII, 25. — 96. M. VII, 32; Y. I, 333. — 97. M. VII, 33. Chapters III-XVIII contain the section on vyavahâra, 'jurisprudence.' (Nand.)

3.¹ Of student, householder, hermit, and ascetic.

5. 'And there should be many virtuous men in it, as stated by Manu, VII, 69.' (Nand.)

men, or in fortifications (of stone, brick, or others), or in water (enclosing it on all sides), or in trees, or in mountains (sheltering it against a foreign invasion).

7. (While he resides) there, let him appoint chiefs (or governors) in every village;

8. Also, lords of every ten villages;

9. And lords of every hundred villages;

10. And lords of a whole district.

11. If any offence has been committed in a village, let the lord of that village suppress the evil (and give redress to those that have been wronged).

12. If he is unable to do so, let him announce it to the lord of ten villages;

13. If he too is unable, let him announce it to the lord of a hundred villages;

14. If he too is unable, let him announce it to the lord of the whole district.

15. The lord of the whole district must eradicate the evil to the best of his power.

16. Let the king appoint able officials for the working of his mines, for the levying of taxes and of the fares to be paid at ferries, and for his elephants and forests.

17. (Let him appoint) pious persons for performing acts of piety (such as bestowing gifts on the indigent, and the like);

18. Skilled men for financial business (such as examining gold and other precious metals);

11. See 67 and Dr. Bühler's note on Âpast. II, 10, 26, 8.

16. The term nâgavana, which has been translated as a Dvandva compound, denoting elephants and forests, may also be taken to mean 'forests in which there are elephants;' or nâga may mean 'situated in the mountains' or 'a mountain fort.' (Nand.)

18. Or, 'he must appoint men skilled in logic as his advisers in knotty points of argument.' (Nand.)

19. Brave men for fighting ;
20. Stern men for acts of rigour (such as beating and killing) ;
21. Eunuchs for his wives (as their guardians).
22. He must take from his subjects as taxes a sixth part every year of the grain ;
23. And (a sixth part) of all (other) seeds ;
24. Two in the hundred, of cattle, gold, and clothes ;
25. A sixth part of flesh, honey, clarified butter, herbs, perfumes, flowers, roots, fruits, liquids and condiments, wood, leaves (of the Palmyra tree and others), skins, earthen pots, stone vessels, and anything made of split bamboo.
26. Let him not levy any tax upon Brâhmanas.
27. For they pay taxes to him in the shape of their pious acts.
28. A sixth part both of the virtuous deeds and of the iniquitous acts committed by his subjects goes to the king.
29. Let him take a tenth part of (the price of) marketable commodities (sold) in his own country ;
30. And a twentieth part of (the price of) goods (sold) in another country.
31. Any (seller or buyer) who (fraudulently) avoids a toll-house (situated on his road), shall lose all his goods.

23. This rule relates to Syâmâka grain and other sorts of grain produced in the rainy season. (Nand.)

25. 'Haradatta says that "a sixth part" means "a sixtieth part." But this is wrong, as shown by M.VII, 131.' (Nand.) Haradatta's false interpretation was most likely called forth by Gaut. X, 27.

32. Artizans (such as blacksmiths), manual labourers (such as carpenters), and Sûdras shall do work for the king for a day in each month.

33. The monarch, his council, his fortress, his treasure, his army, his realm, and his ally are the seven constituent elements of a state.

34. (The king) must punish those who try to subvert any one among them.

35. He must explore, by means of spies, both the state of his own kingdom and of his foe's.

36. Let him show honour to the righteous ;

37. And let him punish the unrighteous.

38. Towards his (neighbour and natural) enemy, his ally (or the power next beyond his enemy), a neutral power (situated beyond the latter), and a power situated between (his natural enemy and an aggressive power)¹ let him adopt (alternately), as the occasion and the time require, (the four modes of obtaining success, viz.) negotiation, division, presents, and force of arms.

39. Let him have resort, as the time demands, to (the six measures of a military monarch, viz.) making alliance and waging war, marching to battle and sitting encamped, seeking the protection (of a more powerful king) and distributing his forces.

32. According to Nand., the particle ka, 'and,' implies that servile persons, who get their substance from their employers, are also implied. See Manu VII, 138.

35. The particle ka, according to Nand., is used in order to include the kingdoms of an ally and of a neutral prince.

38.¹ The term madhyama has been rendered according to Nand.'s and Kullûka's (on M. VII, 155) interpretation of it. Kullûka, however, adds, as a further characteristic, that it denotes a prince, who is equal in strength to one foe, but no match for two when allied.

40. Let him set out on an expedition in the months of Kaitra or Mârgasīrsha;

41. Or when some calamity has befallen his foe.

42. Having conquered the country of his foe, let him not abolish (or disregard) the laws of that country.

43. And when he has been attacked by his foe, let him protect his own realm to the best of his power.

44. There is no higher duty for men of the military caste, than to risk their life in battle.

45. Those who have been killed in protecting a cow, or a Brâhmaṇa, or a king, or a friend, or their own property, or their own wedded wife, or their own life, go to heaven.

46. Likewise, those (who have been killed) in trying to prevent mixture of castes (caused by adulterous connections).

47. A king having conquered the capital of his foe, should invest there a prince of the royal race of that country with the royal dignity.

48. Let him not extirpate the royal race ;

49. Unless the royal race be of ignoble descent.

50. He must not take delight in hunting, dice, women, and drinking ;

51. Nor in defamation and battery.

52. And let him not injure his own property (by bootless expenses).

53. He must not demolish (whether in his own town, or in the town of his foe conquered by him,

40. The particle vâ indicates, according to Nand., that he may also set out in the month Phâlguna.

or in a fort) doors which had been built there before his time (by a former king).

54. He must not bestow largesses upon unworthy persons (such as dancers, eulogists, bards, and the like).

55. Of mines let him take the whole produce.

56. Of a treasure-trove he must give one half to the Brâhmanas;

57. He may deposit the other half in his own treasury.

58. A Brâhmaṇa who has found a treasure may keep it entire.

59. A Kshatriya (who has found a treasure) must give one fourth of it to the king, another fourth to the Brâhmanas, and keep half of it to himself.

60. A Vaisya (who has found a treasure) must give a fourth part of it to the king, one half to the Brâhmanas, and keep the (remaining fourth) part to himself.

61. A Sûdra who has found a treasure must divide it into twelve parts, and give five parts to the king, five parts to the Brâhmanas, and keep two parts to himself.

62. Let the king compel him who (having found a treasure) does not announce it (to the king) and is found out afterwards, to give up the whole.

63. Of a treasure anciently hidden by themselves let (members of) all castes, excepting Brâhmanas, give a twelfth part to the king.

64. The man who falsely claims property hidden by another to have been hidden by himself, shall be condemned to pay a fine equal in amount to the property falsely claimed by him.

63. This rule refers to a treasure, which has been found by some one and announced to the king. The original owner is bound to prove his ownership. (Nand.) See M. VIII, 35.

65. The king must protect the property of minors, of (blind, lame or other) helpless persons (who have no guide), and of women (without a guardian).

66. Having recovered goods stolen by thieves, let him restore them entire to their owners, to whatever caste they may belong.

67. If he has been unable to recover them, he must pay (their value) out of his own treasury.

68. Let him appease the onsets of fate by ceremonies averting evil omens and propitiatory ceremonies ;

69. And the onsets of his foe (let him repel) by force of arms.

70. Let him appoint as Purohita (domestic priest) a man conversant with the Vedas, Epics, the Institutes of Sacred Law, and (the science of) what is useful in life, of a good family, not deficient in limb, and persistent in the practice of austerities.

71. And (let him appoint) ministers (to help and advise him) in all his affairs, who are pure, free from covetousness, attentive, and able.

72. Let him try causes himself, accompanied by well-instructed Brâhmaṇas.

73. Or let him entrust a Brâhmaṇa with the judicial business.

74. Let the king appoint as judges men of good

70. 'The science of what is useful in life' comprises the fine arts, except music, and all technical knowledge.

74. According to Nand., the particle ka indicates that the judges should be well acquainted, likewise, with the sacred revelation, families, for whom the ceremonies (of initiation and so forth) have been performed, and who are eager in keeping religious vows, impartial towards friend and foe, and not likely to be corrupted by litigants either by (ministering to their) lustful desires or by (stimulating them to) wrath or by (exciting their) avarice or by other (such practices).

75. Let the king in all matters listen to (the advice of) his astrologers.

76. Let him constantly show reverence to the gods and to the Brâhmanas.

77. Let him honour the aged ;

78. And let him offer sacrifices ;

79. And he must not suffer any Brâhmaṇa in his realm to perish with want ;

80. Nor any other man leading a pious life.

81. Let him bestow landed property upon Brâhmanas.

82. To those upon whom he has bestowed (land) he must give a document, destined for the information of a future ruler, which must be written upon a piece of (cotton) cloth, or a copper-plate, and must contain the names of his (three) immediate ancestors, a declaration of the extent of the land, and an imprecation against him who should appropriate the and intent upon performing their daily study of the Veda, as ordained by Yâgñavalkya, II, 2.

75. According to Nand., the particle ka indicates that the king's ministers should also consult the astrologers.

76. 'The particle ka is used here in order to imply that the king should bestow presents upon the Brâhmanas, as ordained by Manu, VII, 79.' (Nand.) See Introduction.

82. The repeated use of the particle ka in this Sûtra signifies that the document in question should also contain the name of the donation to himself, and should be signed with his own seal.

83. Let him not appropriate to himself landed property bestowed (upon Brâhmanas) by other (rulers).

84. Let him present the Brâhmanas with gifts of every kind.

85. Let him be on his guard, whatever he may be about.

86. Let him be splendid (in apparel and ornaments).

87. Let him be conversant with incantations dispelling the effects of poison and sickness.

88. Let him not test any aliments, that have not been tried before (by his attendants, by certain experiments).

89. Let him smile before he speaks to any one.

90. Let him not frown even upon (criminals) doomed to capital punishment.

91. Let him inflict punishments, corresponding to the nature of their offences, upon evil-doers.

donor, the date of the donation, and the words, written in the donor's own hand, 'What has been written above, by that is my own will declared.' The term dânakkkhedopavarmanam, 'containing a declaration of the punishment awaiting the robber of a grant,' may also mean, 'indicating the boundaries (such as fields and the like) of the grant.' The seal must contain the figure of a flamingo, boar, or other animal. (Nand.) Numerous grants on copper-plates, exactly corresponding to the above description, have been actually found in divers parts of India. See, particularly, Dr. Burnell's Elements of South Indian Palaeography.

83. According to Nand., the particle ka is used in order to include in this prohibition a grant made by himself.

86. Nand. proposes a second interpretation of the term sudar-sana besides the one given above, 'he shall often show himself before those desirous of seeing him.'

92. Let him inflict punishments according to justice (either personally or through his attendants).

93. Let him pardon no one for having offended twice.

94. He who deviates from his duty must certainly not be left unpunished by the king.

95. Where punishment with a black hue and a red eye advances with irresistible might, the king deciding causes justly, there the people will prosper.

96. Let a king in his own domain inflict punishments according to justice, chastise foreign foes with rigour, behave without duplicity to his affectionate friends, and with lenity to Brâhmaṇas.

97. Of a king thus disposed, even though he subsist by gleanings, the fame is far spread in the world, like a drop of oil in the water.

98. That king who is pleased when his subjects are joyful, and grieved when they are in grief, will obtain fame in this world, and will be raised to a high station in heaven after his death.

IV.

1. The (very small mote of) dust which may be discerned in a sun-beam passing through a lattice is called trasareṇu (trembling dust).

2. Eight of these (trasareṇus) are equal to a nit.

3. Three of the latter are equal to a black mustard-seed.

4. Three of these last are equal to a white mustard-seed.

5. Six of these are equal to a barley-corn.

6. Three of these equal a Kṛishṇala.

IV. 1-14. M. VIII, 132-138; Y. I, 361-365.

6. Kṛishṇala (literally, 'seed of the Guṇḡa creeper') is another

7. Five of these equal a Mâsha.
8. Twelve of these are equal to half an Aksha.
9. The weight of half an Aksha, with four Mâshas added to it, is called a Suvarna.
10. Four Suvarnas make a Nishka.
11. Two Krishnalas of equal weight are equal to one Mâshaka of silver.
12. Sixteen of these are equal to a Dharana (of silver).
13. A Karsha (or eighty Raktikâs) of copper is called Kârshâpana.
14. Two hundred and fifty (copper) Panas are declared to be the first (or lowest) amercement, five hundred are considered as the middlemost, and a thousand as the highest.

V.

1. Great criminals should all be put to death.

name for Raktikâ or Ratî, the lowest denomination in general use. According to Prinsep (Useful Tables, p. 97) it equals 1.875 grains = 0.122 grammes of the metrical system. According to Thomas (see Colebrooke's Essays, ed: by Cowell, I, p. 529, note) it equals 1.75 grains.

7-10. These names refer to weights of gold.

V. 2, 3. M. VIII, 124; IX, 239, 241; Gaut. XII, 46, 47. — 3-7. M. IX, 237. — 8. M. IX, 241; VIII, 380. — 9, 11. M. IX, 232. — 12, 13. M. VIII, 320, 321. — 18. M. VIII, 371. — 19. M. VIII, 279; Y. II, 215; Âpast. II, 10, 27, 14; Gaut. XII, 1. — 20-22. M. VIII, 281, 282; Âpast. II, 10, 27, 15; Gaut. XII, 7. — 23. M. VIII, 270; Âpast. II, 10, 27, 14. — 24. M. VIII, 272. — 25. M. VIII, 271. — 26-28. M. VIII, 273-275. — 27. Y. II, 204. — 29, 30. Y. II, 210. — 31-33. Y. II, 211. — 35. M. VIII, 269. — 36. M. VIII, 268; Gaut. XII, 12. — 40, 41. M. VIII, 382-385. — 40, 44. Y. II, 286, 289. — 45. M. VIII, 224. — 47. M. VIII, 225. — 49. Y. II, 297. — 50, 52. M. VIII, 296-298; Y. II, 225, 226. — 55-58. M. VIII, 285; Y. II, 227-229. — 60, 61. M. VIII, 280. — 60-73. Y. II, 216-221. — 66-68. M. VIII, 283, 284. — 74. M. IX, 274. —

2. In the case of a Brâhmana no corporal punishment must be inflicted.

3. A Brâhmana must be banished from his own country, his body having been branded.

75. M.VIII, 287; Y. II, 222. — 77. M.VIII, 325. — 79. M.VIII, 320. — 81, 82. M.VIII, 322. — 83, 84. M.VIII, 326-329. — 85, 86. M.VIII, 330; Gaut. XII, 18. — 89, 90. Y. II, 270. — 94. M. VIII, 392; Y. II, 263. — 96, 97. M.VIII, 393. — 98-103. Y. II, 296. — 104. Y. II, 234. — 106, 107. M. IX, 282. — 108. Y. II, 223. — 110. Y. II, 224. — 111. Y. II, 236. — 113. M.VIII, 389; Y. II, 237. — 115-123. Y. II, 232, 235, 236, 239-241. — 124-126. Y. II, 246, 250. — 127. Y. II, 254. — 127, 128. Colebrooke, Dig. III, 3, XXII. — 129. Y. II, 255. — 130. M.VIII, 399; Y. II, 261. — 131. Y. II, 263. — 132. M.VIII, 407. — 134, 135. Y. II, 202. — 136. M. IX, 277; Y. II, 274. — 137, 138. M.VIII, 235; Y. II, 164. — 137-139. Colebrooke, Dig. III, 4, XIV. — 140. Y. II, 159. — 141. Gaut. XII, 19. — 142-145. Y. II, 159, 160. — 142-144. Gaut. XII, 22-25. — 140-146. Colebrooke, Dig. III, 4, XLV, 4. — 146. M.VIII, 241; Y. II, 161; Gaut. XII, 19. — 147, 148. M.VIII, 238, 240; Y. II, 162; Gaut. XII, 21. — 147-149. Colebrooke, Dig. III, 4, XXI. — 150. M. VIII, 242; Y. II, 163. — 151. M.VIII, 412; Y. II, 183; Colebrooke, Dig. III, 1, LVIII. — 152. Y. II, 183. — 153, 154. M.VIII, 215; Y. II, 193; Âpast. II, 11, 28, 2, 3. — 153-159. Colebrooke, Dig. III, 1, LXXX. — 155, 156. Y. II, 197. — 160. M. IX, 71; Y. I, 65. — 162. M. IX, 72; Y. I, 66. — 163. M.VIII, 389. — 162, 163. Colebrooke, Dig. IV, 1, LX. — 164, 165. M.VIII, 202; Y. II, 170. — 166. Y. II, 168. — 167, 168. Y. II, 187. — 169-171. M.VIII, 191. — 172. M. IX, 291; Y. II, 155. — 174. M. IX, 285; Y. II, 297. — 175-177. M. IX, 284; Y. II, 242. — 178. Y. II, 232. — 179. M. VIII, 123; Y. II, 81; Âpast. II, 11, 29, 8; Gaut. XIII, 23. — 180. Y. I, 338. — 183. Colebrooke, Dig. I, 3, CXXX. — 189. M. VIII, 350. — 190. M.VIII, 351. — 194. M.VIII, 126; Y. I, 367. — 195. M.VIII, 128; Y. II, 243, 305.

1. The crimes by the commission of which a man becomes a Mahâpatakin, 'mortal sinner,' will be enumerated below, XXXV.

2. The use of the particle kā implies, according to Nand. and a passage of Yama quoted by him, that, besides branding him, the criminal should be shorn, his deed publicly proclaimed, and himself mounted upon an ass and led about the town.

4. For murdering another Brâhmaṇa, let (the figure of) a headless corpse be impressed on his forehead;

5. For drinking spirits, the flag of a seller of spirituous liquor;

6. For stealing (gold), a dog's foot;

7. For incest, (the mark of) a female part.

8. If he has committed any other capital crime, he shall be banished, taking with him all his property, and unhurt.

9. Let the king put to death those who forge royal edicts;

10. And those who forge (private) documents;

11. Likewise poisoners, incendiaries, robbers, and killers of women, children, or men;

12. And such as steal more than ten Kumbhas of grain,

13. Or more than a hundred Mâshas of such things as are usually sold by weight (such as gold and silver);

14. Such also as aspire to sovereignty, though being of low birth;

15. Breakers of dikes;

10. The use of the particle kā indicates that this rule includes those who corrupt the king's ministers, as stated by Manu, IX, 232. (Nand.)

11. Nand. infers from the use of the particle kā, and from a passage of Kâtâyâna, that false witnesses are also intended here.

12. Nand. here refers kā to women who have committed a capital offence, as mentioned by Yâgñavalkya (II, 278). A Kumbha is a measure of grain equal to twenty Droṇas, or a little more than three bushels and three gallons. Nand. mentions, as the opinion of some, that 1 Kumbha = 2 Droṇas. For other computations of the amount of a Kumbha, see Colebrooke's Essays, I, 533 seq.

13. Regarding the value of a Mâsha, see IV, 7, 11.

15. Nand. infers from the use of the particle kā and from a

16. And such as give shelter and food to robbers,
 17. Unless the king be unable (to protect his subjects against robbers);

18. And a woman who violates the duty which she owes to her lord, the latter being unable to restrain her.

19. With whatever limb an inferior insults or hurts his superior in caste, of that limb the king shall cause him to be deprived.

20. If he places himself on the same seat with his superior, he shall be banished with a mark on his buttocks.

21. If he spits on him, he shall lose both lips;

22. If he breaks wind against him, his hindparts;

23. If he uses abusive language, his tongue.

24. If a (low-born) man through pride give instruction (to a member of the highest caste) concerning his duty, let the king order hot oil to be dropped into his mouth.

25. If a (low-born man) mentions the name or caste of a superior revilingly, an iron pin, ten inches long, shall be thrust into his mouth (red hot).

26. He who falsely denies the sacred knowledge, the country, or the caste (of such), or who says passage of Manu (IX, 280), that robbers who forcibly enter the king's treasury, or the arsenal, or a temple, are likewise intended here.

17. In the case to which this Sûtra refers, the villagers may satisfy the demands of the robbers with impunity, as they are obliged to do so out of regard for their own safety. (Nand.)

20. The particle ka indicates here that if he urines against a superior his organ shall be cut off. (Nand.) See M. VIII, 282.

26. This Sûtra has been rendered in accordance with Kullûka's gloss on M. VIII, 273, Nand.'s interpretation of it being palpably wrong.

that his religious duties have not been fulfilled by (or that the initiatory and other sacramental rites have not been performed for) him, shall be fined two hundred Panas.

27. If a man is blind with one eye, or lame, or defective in any similar way, and another calls him so, he shall be fined two Kârshâpanas, though he speaks the truth.

28. He shall be fined a hundred Kârshâpanas for defaming a Guru.

29. He shall pay the highest amercement for imputing to another (a great crime) entailing loss of caste;

30. The second amercement for (imputing to another) a minor offence (such as the slaughter of a cow);

31. The same for reviling a Brâhmaṇa versed in the three Vedas, or an old man, or a (whole) caste or corporation (of judges or others);

32. For reviling a village or district, the lowest amercement;

33. For using insulting language (such as 'I shall visit your sister,' or 'I shall visit your daughter'), a hundred Kârshâpanas;

34. For insulting a man by using bad language regarding his mother (such as 'I shall visit your mother' or the like speeches), the highest amercement.

35. For abusing a man of his own caste, he shall be fined twelve Panas.

36. For abusing a man of a lower caste, he shall be fined six (Panas).

32. Nand. infers from the use of the particle ka that 'a family' is also intended here.

37. For insulting a member of the highest caste or of his own caste (he having been insulted by him) at the same time, the same fine is ordained ;

38. Or (if he only returns his insult, a fine amounting to) three Kârshâpanas.

39. The same (punishment is ordained) if he calls him bad names.

40. An adulterer shall be made to pay the highest amercement if he has had connection with a woman of his own caste ;

41. For adultery with women of a lower caste, the second amercement ;

42. The same (fine is ordained) for a bestial crime committed with a cow.

43. He who has had connection with a woman of one of the lowest castes, shall be put to death.

44. For a bestial crime committed with cattle (other than cows) he shall be fined a hundred Kârshâpanas.

45. (The same fine is ordained) for giving a (blemished) damsel in marriage, without indicating her blemish (whether the bride be sick, or no longer a maid, or otherwise faulty) ;

46. And he shall have to support her.

47. He who says of an unblemished damsel, that she has a blemish (shall pay) the highest amercement.

48. For killing an elephant, or a horse, or a camel, or a cow, (the criminal) shall have one hand, or one foot, lopped off.

43. The lowest castes (antyâh), according to Âṅgiras, are the following seven, Kandâlas, Svapâṭas, Kshattris, Sûtas, Vaidehakas, Mâgadhas, and Âyogavas.

49. A seller of forbidden meat (such as pork, shall be punished in the same way).

50. He who kills domestic animals, shall pay a hundred Kârshâpanas.

51. He shall make good their value to the owner of those animals.

52. He who kills wild animals, shall pay five hundred Kârshâpanas.

53. A killer of birds, or of fish, (shall pay) ten Kârshâpanas.

54. A killer of insects shall pay one Kârshâpana.

55. A feller of trees yielding fruit (shall pay) the highest amercement.

56. A feller of trees yielding blossoms only (shall pay) the second amercement.

57. He who cuts creepers, shrubs, or climbing plants (shall pay) a hundred Kârshâpanas.

58. He who cuts grass (shall pay) one Kârshâpana.

59. And all such offenders (shall make good) to the owners (of the trees or plants cut down by them) the revenue which they yield.

60. If any man raises his hand (against his equal in caste, with intent to strike him, he shall pay) ten Kârshâpanas ;

61. If he raises his foot, twenty ;

62. If he raises a piece of wood, the first amercement ;

63. If he raises a stone, the second amercement ;

64. If he raises a weapon, the highest amercement.

65. If he seizes him by his feet, by his hair, by

53. Nand. infers from a passage of Kâtyâyana that the particle ka is used here in order to include serpents.

his garment, or by his hand, he shall pay ten Panas as a fine.

66. If he causes pain to him, without fetching blood from him, (he shall pay) thirty-two Panas ;

67. For fetching blood from him, sixty-four.

68. For mutilating or injuring a hand, or a foot, or a tooth, and for slitting an ear, or the nose, the second amercement (is ordained).

69. For rendering a man unable to move about, or to eat, or to speak, or for striking him (violently, the same punishment is ordained).

70. For wounding or breaking an eye, or the neck, or an arm, or a bone, or a shoulder, the highest amercement (is ordained).

71. For striking out both eyes of a man, the king shall (confine him and) not dismiss him from jail as long as he lives ;

72. Or he shall order him to be mutilated in the same way (i. e. deprived of his eyes).

73. Where one is attacked by many, the punishment for each shall be the double of that which has been ordained for (attacks by) a single person.

74. (The double punishment is) likewise (ordained) for those who do not give assistance to one calling for help, though they happen to be on the spot, or (who run away) after having approached it.

75. All those who have hurt a man, shall pay the expense of his cure.

76. Those who have hurt a domestic animal (shall also pay the expense of his cure).

77. He who has stolen a cow, or a horse, or a camel, or an elephant, shall have one hand, or one foot, cut off ;

78. He who has stolen a goat, or a sheep, (shall have) one hand (cut off).

79. He who steals grain (of those sorts which grow in the rainy season), shall pay eleven times its value as a fine ;

80. Likewise, he who steals grain (of those sorts, which grow in winter and spring, such as rice and barley).

81. A stealer of gold, silver, or clothes, at a value of more than fifty Mâshas, shall lose both hands.

82. He who steals a less amount than that, shall pay eleven times its value as a fine.

83. A stealer of thread, cotton, cow-dung, sugar, sour milk, milk, butter-milk, grass, salt, clay, ashes, birds, fish, clarified butter, oil, meat, honey, basket-work, canes of bamboo, earthenware, or iron pots, shall pay three times their value as a fine.

84. (The same fine is ordained for stealing) dressed food.

85. For stealing flowers, green (grain), shrubs, creepers, climbing plants or leaves, (he shall pay) five Krishṇālas.

86. For stealing pot-herbs, roots, or fruits (the same punishment is ordained).

87. He who steals gems, (shall pay) the highest amercement.

88. He who steals anything not mentioned above, (shall make good) its value (to the owner).

89. Thieves shall be compelled to restore all stolen goods to the owners.

90. After that, they shall suffer the punishment that has been ordained for them.

91. He who does not make way for one for whom way ought to be made, shall be fined twenty-five Kârshâpanas.

92. (The same fine is ordained) for omitting to offer a seat to (a guest or others) to whom it ought to be offered.

93. For neglecting to worship such as have a claim to be worshipped, (the same fine is ordained);

94. Likewise, for neglecting to invite (at a Srâdha) a Brâhmaṇa, one's neighbour;

95. And for offering him no food, after having invited him.

96. He who does not eat, though he has received and accepted an invitation, shall give a gold Mâshaka as a fine;

97. And the double amount of food to his host.

98. He who insults a Brâhmaṇa by offering him uneatable food (such as excrements and the like, or forbidden food, such as garlic, must pay) sixteen Suvarṇas (as a fine).

99. (If he insults him by offering him) such food as would cause him to be degraded (were he to taste it, he must pay) a hundred Suvarṇas.

100. (If he offers him) spirituous liquor, he shall be put to death.

101. If he insults a Kshatriya (in the same way), he shall have to pay half of the above amercement;

102. If he insults a Vaisya, half of that again;

103. If he insults a Sûdra, the first amercement.

104. If one who (being a member of the Kandâla or some other low caste) must not be touched, intentionally defiles by his touch one who (as a member of a twice-born caste) may be touched (by other twice-born persons only), he shall be put to death.

93. Those persons 'have a claim to be worshipped' who are worthy to receive the Madhuparka or honey-mixture. (Nand.) See M. III, 119, 120; Y. I, 110; Âpast. II, 4, 8, 5-9; Gaut. V, 27; Weber, Ind. Stud. X, 123.

105. If a woman in her courses (touches such a person), she shall be lashed with a whip.

106. If one defiles the highway, or a garden, or the water (by voiding excrements) near them (or in any other way), he shall be fined a hundred Paṇas;

107. And he must remove the filth.

108. If he demolishes a house, or a piece of ground (a court-yard or the like), or a wall or the like, he shall have to pay the second amercement;

109. And he shall have it repaired (at his own cost).

110. If he throws into another man's house (thorns, spells, or other) such things as might hurt some one, he shall pay a hundred Paṇas.

111. (The same punishment is ordained) for falsely denying the possession of common property;

112. And for not delivering what has been sent (for a god or for a Brāhmaṇa).

113. (The same punishment is) also (ordained) for father and son, teacher (and pupil), sacrificer and officiating priest, if one should forsake the other, provided that he has not been expelled from caste.

114. And he must return to them (to the parents and the rest).

115. (The same punishment is) also (ordained) for hospitably entertaining a Sūdra or religious ascetic at an oblation to the gods or to the manes;

116. And for following an unlawful occupation

115. According to Nand., the particle ka indicates here, that the same punishment is ordained for him who visits a widow by his own accord, as mentioned by Yāgyavalkya (II, 234).

(such as studying the Vedas without having been initiated);

117. And for breaking open a house on which (the king's) seal is laid;

118. And for making an oath without having been asked to do so (by the king or a judge);

119. And for depriving cattle of their virility.

120. The fine for the witnesses in a dispute between father and son shall be ten Panas.

121. For him who acts as surety for either of the two parties in such a contest, the highest amercement (is ordained).

122. (The same punishment is ordained) for forging a balance, or a measure;

123. Also, for pronouncing them incorrect, although they are correct.

124. (The same punishment is) also (ordained) for selling adulterated commodities;

125. And for a company of merchants who prevent the sale of a commodity (which happens to be abroad) by selling it under its price.

126. (The same punishment is ordained) for those (members of such a company) who sell (an article belonging to the whole company for more than it is worth) on their own account.

127. He who does not deliver to the purchaser a commodity (sold), after its price has been paid to him, shall be compelled to deliver it to him with interest;

117. Nand. considers the particle ka to imply that the exchange of sealed goods for others shall be punished in the same way. But this assertion rests upon a false reading (samudraparivarta for samudgaparivarta) of Y. II, 247, which passage Nand. quotes in support of his view.

128. And he shall be fined a hundred Panas by the king.

129. If there should be a loss upon a commodity purchased, which the purchaser refuses to accept (though it has been tendered to him), the loss shall fall upon the purchaser.

130. He who sells a commodity on which the king has laid an embargo, shall have it confiscated.

131. A ferry-man who takes a toll payable (for commodities conveyed) by land shall be fined ten Panas.

132. Likewise, a ferry-man, or an official at a toll-office, who takes a fare or toll from a student, or Vânaprastha (hermit), or a Bhikshu (ascetic or religious mendicant), or a pregnant woman, or one about to visit a place of pilgrimage;

133. And he shall restore it to them.

134. Those who use false dice in gaming shall lose one hand.

135. Those who resort to (other) fraudulent practices in gaming shall lose two fingers (the thumb and the index).

136. Cutpurses shall lose one hand.

137. Cattle being attacked, during day-time, by wolves or other ferocious animals, and the keeper not going (to repel the attack), the blame shall fall upon him;

138. And he shall make good to the owner the value of the cattle that has perished.

139. If he milks a cow without permission, (he shall pay) twenty-five Kârshâpanas (as a fine).

131. The toll mentioned here is the duty on marketable commodities mentioned above, III, 29, 30. (Nand.)

140. If a female buffalo damages grain, her keeper shall be fined eight Mâshas.

141. If she has been without a keeper, her owner (shall pay that fine).

142. (For mischief done by) a horse, or a camel, or an ass (the fine shall be the same).

143. (For damage done by) a cow, it shall be half.

144. (For damage done by) a goat, or a sheep, (it shall be) half of that again.

145. For cattle abiding (in the field), after having eaten (grain), the fine shall be double.

146. And in every case the owner (of the field) shall receive the value of the grain that has been destroyed.

147. There is no offence if the damage has been done near a highway, near a village, or (in a field adjacent to) the common pasture-ground for cattle ;

148. Or (if it has been done) in an uninclosed field ;

149. Or if the cattle did not abide long ;

150. Or if the damage has been done by bulls that have been set at liberty, or by a cow shortly after her calving.

151. He who commits members of the highest (or Brâhmaṇa) caste to slavery, shall pay the highest amercement.

152. An apostate from religious mendicity shall become the king's slave.

153. A hired workman who abandons his work before the term has expired shall pay the whole amount (of the stipulated wages) to his employer ;

154. And he shall pay a hundred Paṇas to the king.

155. What has been destroyed through his want of care, (he must make good) to the owner ;

156. Unless the damage have been caused by an accident.

157. If an employer dismisses a workman (whom he has hired) before the expiration of the term, he shall pay him his entire wages ;

158. And (he shall pay) a hundred Panas to the king ;

159. Unless the workman have been at fault.

160. He who, having promised his daughter to one suitor, gives her in marriage to another, shall be punished as a thief ;

161. Unless the (first) suitor have a blemish.

162. The same (punishment is ordained for a suitor) who abandons a faultless girl ;

163. (And for a husband who forsakes) a (blameless) wife.

164. He who buys unawares in open market the property of another man (from one not authorised to sell it) is not to blame ;

165. (But) the owner shall recover his property.

166. If he has bought it in secret and under its price, the purchaser and the vendor shall be punished as thieves.

167. He who embezzles goods belonging to a corporation (of Brâhmaṇas, and which have been sent to them by the king or by private persons), shall be banished.

168. He who violates their established rule (shall) also (be banished).

169. He who retains a deposit shall restore the commodity deposited to the owner, with interest.

170. The king shall punish him as a thief.

171. (The same punishment is ordained for him) who claims as a deposit what he never deposited.

172. A destroyer of landmarks shall be compelled to pay the highest amercement and to mark the boundary anew with landmarks.

173. He who (knowingly) eats forbidden food effecting loss of caste shall be banished.

174. He who sells forbidden food (such as spirituous liquor and the like), or food which must not be sold, and he who breaks an image of a deity, shall pay the highest amercement ;

175. Also, a physician who adopts a wrong method of cure in the case of a patient of high rank (such as a relative of the king's) ;

176. The second amercement in the case of another patient ;

177. The lowest amercement in the case of an animal.

178. He who does not give what he has promised, shall be compelled to give it and to pay the first amercement.

179. To a false witness his entire property shall be confiscated.

180. (The same punishment is ordained) for a judge who lives by bribes.

181. He who has mortgaged more than a bull's hide of land to one creditor, and without having redeemed it mortgages it to another, shall be corporally punished (by whipping or imprisonment).

171. According to Nand., the particle kā indicates that those who state the nature or amount of a deposit wrongly are also intended here.

173. Thus according to Nand., who says expressly that the causative form cannot here mean causing to eat, because the punishment for the latter offence has been mentioned in Sūtra 98.-

182. If the quantity be less, he shall pay a fine of sixteen Suvarnas.

183. That land, whether little or much, on the produce of which one man can subsist for a year, is called the quantity of a bull's hide.

184. If a dispute should arise between two (creditors) concerning (a field or other immovable property) which has been mortgaged to both at the same time, that mortgagee shall enjoy its produce who holds it in his possession, without having obtained it by force.

185. What has been possessed in order and with a legitimate title (such as purchase, donation, and the like), the possessor may keep; it can never be taken from him.

186. Where (land or other) property has been held in legitimate possession by the father (or grandfather), the son's right to it, after his death, cannot be contested; for it has become his own by force of possession.

187. If possession has been held of an estate by three (successive) generations in due course, the fourth in descent shall keep it as his property, even without a written title.

188. He who kills (in his own defence a tiger or other) animal with sharp nails and claws, or a (goat or other) horned animal (excepting cows), or a (boar or other) animal with sharp teeth, or an assassin, or an elephant, or a horse, or any other (ferocious animal by whom he has been attacked), commits no crime.

189. Any one may unhesitatingly slay a man who attacks him with intent to murder him, whether his spiritual teacher, young or old, or a Brāhmaṇa, or even (a Brāhmaṇa) versed in many branches of sacred knowledge.

190. By killing an assassin who attempts to kill, whether in public or in private, no crime is committed by the slayer : fury recoils upon fury.

191. Assassins should be known to be of seven kinds : such as try to kill with the sword, or with poison, or with fire, such as raise their hand in order to pronounce a curse, such as recite a deadly incantation from the Atharva-veda, such as raise a false accusation which reaches the ears of the king,

192. And such as have illicit intercourse with another man's wife. The same designation is given to other (evil-doers) who deprive others of their worldly fame or of their wealth, or who destroy religious merit (by ruining pools, or other such acts), or property (such as houses or fields).

193. Thus I have declared to thee fully, O Earth, the criminal laws, enumerating at full length the punishments ordained for all sorts of offences.

194. Let the king dictate due punishments for other offences also, after having ascertained the class and the age (of the criminal) and the amount (of the damage done or sum claimed), and after having consulted the Brāhmaṇas (his advisers).

195. That detestable judge who dismisses without punishment such as deserve it, and punishes such as deserve it not, shall incur twice as heavy a penalty as the criminal himself.

196. A king in whose dominion there exists neither thief, nor adulterer, nor calumniator, nor robber, nor murderer, attains the world of Indra.

VI.

1. A creditor shall receive his principal back from his debtor exactly as he had lent it to him.

2. (As regards the interest to be paid), he shall take in the direct order of the castes two, three, four, or five in the hundred by the month (if no pledge has been given).

3. Or let debtors of any caste pay as much interest as has been promised by themselves.

4. After the lapse of one year let them pay interest according to the above rule, even though it have not been agreed on.

5. By the use of a pledge (to be kept only) interest is forfeited.

VI. 2. M. VIII, 142; Y. II, 37. — 1, 2. Colebrooke, Dig. I, 2, XXXI. — 3. M. VIII, 157; Y. II, 38. — 4. Colebrooke, Dig. I, 2, LII. — 5. M. VIII, 143; Y. II, 59; Gaut. XII, 32; Colebrooke, Dig. I, 2, LXXVIII. — 6. Y. II, 59; Colebrooke, Dig. I, 3, LXXXII. — 7. M. VIII, 151; Gaut. XII, 31; Colebrooke, Dig. I, 3, CX. — 8. Colebrooke loc. cit. — 9. Colebrooke, Dig. I, 3, CVII. — 10. Y. II, 44; Colebrooke, Dig. I, 2, LXXVII. — 11-15. M. VIII, 151; Y. II, 39; Gaut. XII, 36; Colebrooke, Dig. I, 2, LXIV. — 16, 17. Colebrooke, Dig. I, 2, LXX. — 18, 19. M. VIII, 50, 176; Y. II, 40; Colebrooke, Dig. I, 6, CCLII. — 20, 21. M. VIII, 139; Y. II, 42; Colebrooke, Dig. I, 6, CCLXXVII. — 22. Y. II, 20. — 24, 25. Y. II, 94; Colebrooke, Dig. I, 6, CCLXXXIII. — 26. Y. II, 93; Colebrooke, Dig. I, 6, CCLXXXVI. — 27. Y. II, 50; Colebrooke, Dig. I, 5, CLXVIII. — 28. Colebrooke, Dig. I, 5, CLXVIII. — 29. Gaut. XII, 40. — 29, 30. Y. II, 51; Colebrooke, Dig. I, 5, CCXX. — 31-33. Y. II, 46; Colebrooke, Dig. I, 5, CCVIII. — 34-36. M. VIII, 166; Y. II, 45. — 38, 39. M. VIII, 166, 167; Y. II, 45; Colebrooke, Dig. I, 5, CXCH. — 41. M. VIII, 158, 160; Y. II, 53; Colebrooke, Dig. I, 4, CXLIV. — 42, 43. Y. II, 55, 56; Colebrooke, Dig. I, 4, CLVI, CLXI.

1, 2. Colebrooke loc. cit. seems to have translated a different reading.

6. The creditor must make good the loss of a pledge, unless it was caused by fate or by the king.

7. (The pledge must) also (be restored to the debtor) when the interest has reached its maximum amount (on becoming equal to the principal, and has all been paid).

8. But he must not restore an immovable pledge without special agreement (till the principal itself has been paid).

9. That immovable property which has been delivered, restorable when the sum borrowed is made good, (the creditor) must restore when the sum borrowed has been made good.

10. Property lent bears no further interest after it has been tendered, but refused by the creditor.

11. On gold the interest shall rise no higher than to make the debt double;

12. On grain, (no higher than to make it) three-fold;

13. On cloth, (no higher than to make it) four-fold;

14. On liquids, (no higher than to make it) eight-fold;

15. Of female slaves and cattle, the offspring (shall be taken as interest).

16. On substances from which spirituous liquor

7. Colebrooke loc. cit. connects this Sûtra with the next. My rendering rests on Nand.'s interpretation.

8. Nand. cites as an instance of an agreement of this kind one made in the following form, 'You shall have the enjoyment of this or that mango grove as long as interest on the principal lent to me has not ceased to accrue.'

is extracted, on cotton, thread, leather, weapons, bricks, and charcoal, the interest is unlimited.

17. On such objects as have not been mentioned it may be double.

18. A creditor recovering the sum lent by any (lawful) means shall not be reproved by the king.

19. If the debtor, so forced to discharge the debt, complains to the king, he shall be fined in an equal sum.

20. If a creditor sues before the king and fully proves his demand, the debtor shall pay as a fine to the king a tenth part of the sum proved ;

21. And the creditor, having received the sum due, shall pay a twentieth part of it.

22. If the whole demand has been contested by the debtor, and even a part of it only has been proved against him, he must pay the whole.

23. There are three means of proof in case of a demand having been contested, viz. a writing, witnesses, and proof by ordeal.

24. A debt contracted before witnesses should be discharged in the presence of witnesses.

25. A written contract having been fulfilled, the writing should be torn.

26. Part only being paid, and the writing not being at hand, let the creditor give an acquittance.

27. If he who contracted the debt should die, or

17. Nand. infers from a passage of Kâtyâyana that this rule refers to gems, pearls, coral, gold, silver, cotton, silk, and wool.

18. The 'lawful means' are mediation of friends and the four other modes of compelling payment of an unliquidated demand. (Nand.) See M. VIII, 49.

22. 'The particle api indicates that he must pay a fine to the king besides, as ordained by Yâgñavalkya II, 11.' (Nand.)

become a religious ascetic, or remain abroad for twenty years, that debt shall be discharged by his sons or grandsons ;

28. But not by remoter descendants against their will.

29. He who takes the assets of a man, leaving or not leaving male issue, must pay the sum due (by him) ;

30. And (so must) he who has the care of the widow left by one who had no assets.

31. A woman (shall) not (be compelled to pay) the debt of her husband or son ;

32. Nor the husband or son (to pay) the debt of a woman (who is his wife or mother) ;

33. Nor a father to pay the debt of his son.

34. A debt contracted by parceners shall be paid by any one of them who is present.

35. And so shall the debt of the father (be paid) by (any one of) the brothers (or of their sons) before partition.

36. But after partition they shall severally pay according to their shares of the inheritance.

37. A debt contracted by the wife of a herdsman, distiller of spirits, public dancer, washer, or hunter shall be discharged by the husband (because he is supported by his wife).

38. (A debt of which payment has been previously) promised must be paid by the householder ;

39. And (so must he pay that debt) which was 38, 39. Regarding these two Sûtras see Jolly, Indisches Schuldrecht, in the Transactions of the Royal Bavarian Academy of Sciences, 1877, p. 309, note.

contracted by any person for the behoof of the family.

40. He who on receiving the whole amount of a loan, promises to repay the principal on the following day (or some other date near at hand), but from covetousness does not repay it, shall give interest for it.

41. Suretiship is ordained for appearance, for honesty, and for payment; the first two (sureties, and not their sons), must pay the debt on failure of their engagements, but even the sons of the last (may be compelled to pay it).

42. When there are several sureties (jointly bound), they shall pay their proportionate shares of the debt; but when they are bound severally, the payment shall be made (by any of them), as the creditor pleases.

43. If the surety, being harassed by the creditor, discharges the debt, the debtor shall pay twice as much to the surety.

VII.

1. Documents are of three kinds:

2. Attested by the king, or by (other) witnesses, or unattested.

3. A document is (said to be) attested by the king when it has been executed (in a court of judicature), on the king ordering it, by a scribe, his

42. In the first case the agreement is made in the following form, 'I shall pay so and so much to you, in the way agreed on.' In the second case the sum is not divided between the sureties, and each of them liable for the whole debt therefore. (Nand.)

VII. 4. Y. II, 84-88. — 5-7. Y. II, 89. — 6. M.VIII, 168. — 12. Y. II, 92.

servant, and has been signed by his chief judge, with his own hand.

4. It is (said to be) attested by witnesses when, having been written anywhere, and by any one, it is signed by witnesses in their own hands.

5. It is (said to be) unattested when it has been written (by the party himself) with his own hand.

6. Such a document, if it has been caused to be written by force, makes no evidence.

7. Neither does any fraudulent document (make evidence);

8. Nor a document (which), though attested, (is vitiated) by the signature of a witness bribed (by one party) or of bad character;

9. Nor one written by a scribe of the same description;

10. Nor one executed by a woman, or a child, or a dependant person, or one intoxicated or insane, or one in danger or in bodily fear.

11. (That instrument is termed) proof which is not adverse to peculiar local usages, which defines clearly the nature of the pledge given¹, and is free from confusion in the arrangement of the subject matter and (in the succession of) the syllables.

12. If the authenticity of a document is contested, it should be ascertained by (comparing with it other)

7. According to Nand., the particle kā is used here in order to include documents that have been executed by a person intoxicated, by one under duress, by a female, by a child, by force, and by intimidation (see Nārada IV, 61). Most of these categories are, however, mentioned in Sūtra 10.

11. ¹ I have translated the reading vyaktādhividhilaṣṭhaṇam, which, though not occurring in the text of any MS., is mentioned by Nand., and is found in an identical passage of the Institutes of Nārada (see Nārada IV, 60, and Appendix, p. 123).

letters or signs (such as the flourish denoting the word Srī and the like) or documents executed by the same man, by (enquiring into) the probabilities of the case, and by (finding out such writings as show) a mode of writing similar (to that contained in the disputed document).

13. Should the debtor, or creditor, or witness, or scribe be dead, the authenticity of the document has to be ascertained by (comparing with it other) specimens of their handwriting.

VIII.

1. Now follow (the laws regarding) witnesses.

2. The king cannot be (made a witness); nor a learned Brāhmaṇa; nor an ascetic; nor a gamester; nor a thief; nor a person not his own master; nor a woman; nor a child; nor a perpetrator of the acts called *sāhasa*¹ (violence); nor one over-aged (or more than eighty years old); nor one intoxicated or insane; nor a man of bad fame; nor an outcast;

VIII. 2, 3, 5. M.VIII, 64-67; Y. II, 70, 71. — 4, 5. Gaut. XIII, 5. — 6. M.VIII, 72; Y. II, 72; Gaut. XIII, 9. — 8. M. VIII, 62, 63; Y. II, 68, 69; Âpast. II, 11, 29, 7; Gaut. XIII, 2. — 9. M.VIII, 77; Y. II, 72. — 10, 11. Y. II, 17. — 14. M.VIII, 81; Âpast. II, 11, 29, 10; Gaut. XIII, 7. — 15, 16. M.VIII, 104-106; Y. II, 83. — 15. Gaut. XIII, 24. — 18. M. VIII, 25, 26; Y. II, 13-15. — 19. M.VIII, 87; Y. II, 73; Âpast. II, 11, 29, 7; Gaut. XIII, 12. — 20-23. M.VIII, 88. — 24-26. M.VIII, 89, 90; Y. II, 73-75. — 37. M.VIII, 107; Y. II, 77; Gaut. XIII, 6. — 38. Y. II, 79. — 39. M.VIII, 73; Y. II, 78. — 40. M.VIII, 117.

2. ¹ There are three kinds of sāhasa. (Nand.) They are, in the enumeration of Nārada, 1. spoiling fruits or the like; 2. injuring more valuable articles; 3. offences directed against the life of a human being, and approaching another man's wife. See Nārada XIV, 4-6.

nor one tormented by hunger or thirst; nor one oppressed by a (sudden) calamity (such as the death of his father or the like), or wholly absorbed in evil passions;

3. Nor an enemy or a friend; nor one interested in the subject matter; nor one who does forbidden acts; nor one formerly perjured; nor an attendant;

4. Nor one who, without having been appointed, comes and offers his evidence;

5. Nor can one man alone be made a witness.

6. In cases of theft, of violence, of abuse and assault, and of adultery the competence of witnesses must not be examined too strictly.

7. Now (those who are fit to be) witnesses (shall be enumerated):

8. Descendants of a noble race, who are virtuous and wealthy, sacrificers, zealous in the practice of religious austerities, having male issue, well versed in the holy law, studious, veracious, acquainted with the three Vedas, and aged (shall be witnesses).

9. If he is endowed with the qualities just mentioned, one man alone can also be made a witness.

10. In a dispute between two litigants, the witnesses of that party have to be examined from which the plaint has proceeded.

11. Where the claim has been refuted as not agreeing with the facts (as e. g. the sum claimed

5. According to Nand., who argues from a passage of Nārada (5, 37), the use of the particle ka implies here, that two witnesses are also not sufficient. But the MSS. of Nārada exhibit a different reading of the passage in question, which reading is supported by the Vīramitrodaya.

8. The particle ka is used here, according to Nand., who argues from a passage of Yāgyavalkya (II, 68), in order to include liberality among the qualities required in a witness.

having been repaid by the debtor), there the witnesses of the defendant have to be examined as well.

12. An appointed witness having died or gone abroad, those who have heard his deposition may give evidence.

13. (The evidence of) witnesses is (of two kinds): either of what was seen, or of what was heard.

14. Witnesses are free from blame if they give true evidence.

15. Whenever the death of a member of any of the four castes (would be occasioned by true evidence, they are free from blame) if they give false evidence.

16. In order to expiate the sin thus committed, (such a witness), if he belongs to a twice-born caste, must pour an oblation in the fire, consecrating it with the texts called Kûshmândî.

17. If he is a Sûdra, he must feed ten cows for one day.

18. A false witness may be known by his altered looks, by his countenance changing colour, and by his talk wandering from the subject.

19. Let the judge summon the witnesses, at the time of sunrise, and examine them after having bound them by an oath.

20. A Brâhmana he must address thus, 'Declare.'

21. A Kshatriya he must address thus, 'Declare the truth.'

16. Vâgasan. Samh. XX, 14-16, or Taitt. Ârany. X, 3-5. Nand. considers the term Kûshmândî to be used in a general sense here, so as to include all the other texts mentioned in an analogous passage of Manu (VIII, 106).

22. A Vaisya he must address thus, 'Thy kine, grain, and gold (shall yield thee no fruit, if thou wert to give false evidence).'

23. A Sûdra he must address thus, 'Thou shalt have to atone for all (possible) heavy crimes (if thou wert to give false evidence).'

24. Let him exhort the witnesses (with the following speeches) :

25. 'Whatever places (of torture) await (the killer of a Brâhmana and other) great criminals and (the killer of a cow and other) minor offenders, those places of abode are ordained for a witness who gives false evidence ;

26. 'And the fruit of every virtuous act he has done, from the day of his birth to his dying day, shall be lost to him.

27. 'Truth makes the sun spread his rays.

28. 'Truth makes the moon shine.

29. 'Truth makes the wind blow.

30. 'Truth makes the earth bear (all that is upon it).

31. 'Truth makes waters flow.

32. 'Truth makes the fire burn.

33. 'The atmosphere exists through truth.

34. 'So do the gods.

35. 'And so do the offerings.

36. 'If veracity and a thousand horse-sacrifices

22, 23. Nand.'s interpretation of these two Sûtras, which has been followed above, does not agree with Kullûka's, of M. VIII, 88. But in another passage of Manu (VIII, 113), where the same terms recur, he interprets them like Nand.

36. This Sloka is also found in the Mahâbhârata I, 3095 &c., in the Mârkaṇḍeya-purâṇa VIII, 42, in the Hitopadeśa IV, 129, and, in a somewhat modified form, in the Râmâyana II, 61, 10. See Bôhtlingk, Ind. Sprüche, 731 &c.

are weighed against each other, (it is found that) truth ranks even higher than a thousand horse-sacrifices.

37. 'Those who, though acquainted with the facts, and appointed to give evidence, stand mute, are equally criminal with, and deserve the same punishment as, false witnesses.' (After having addressed them) thus, let the king examine the witnesses in the order of their castes.

38. That plaintiff whose statement the witnesses declare to be true, shall win his suit; but he whose statement they declare to be wrong, shall certainly lose it.

39. If there is contradictory evidence, let the king decide by the plurality of witnesses; if equality in number, by superiority in virtue; if parity in virtue, by the evidence of the best among the twice-born.

40. Whenever a perjured witness has given false evidence in a suit, (the king) must reverse the judgment; and whatever has been done, must be considered as undone.

IX.

1. Now follows (the rule regarding) the performance of ordeals.

39. Nand. takes the term dvigottama, 'the best among the twice-born,' as an equivalent for 'Brāhmaṇas.' Kullūka (on M. VIII, 73) refers it to 'twice-born men, who are particularly active in the discharge of their religious duties.'

IX. 2. Y. II, 96, 99. — 11. M. VIII, 114, 115; Y. II, 95. — 20-22. Y. II, 95, 96, 99. — 23. Y. II, 98. — 33. Y. II, 97. The whole section on ordeals (IX-XIV) agrees very closely with the corresponding section of the Institutes of Nārada (5, 107-9, 8).

2. In cases of a criminal action directed against the king, or of violence¹ (they may be administered) indiscriminately.

3. In cases of (denial of) a deposit or of (alleged) theft or robbery they must be administered each according to the value (of the property claimed).

4. In all such cases the value (of the object claimed) must be estimated in gold.

5. Now if its value amounts to less than one Krishnala, a Sûdra must be made to swear by a blade of Dûrvâ grass, (which he must hold in his hand);

6. If it amounts to less than two Krishnalas, by a blade of Tila;

7. If it amounts to less than three Krishnalas, by a blade of silver;

8. If it amounts to less than four Krishnalas, by a blade of gold;

9. If it amounts to less than five Krishnalas, by a lump of earth taken from a furrow;

10. If it amounts to less than half a Suvarna, a Sûdra must be made to undergo the ordeal by sacred libation;

11. If it exceeds that amount, (the judge must administer to him) any one of the (other) ordeals, viz. the ordeal by the balance, by fire, by water, or by poison, considering duly (the season, &c.)

12. If the amount (of the matter in contest) is twice as high (as in each of the last-mentioned cases), a Vaisya must (in each case) undergo that ordeal which has (just) been ordained (for a Sûdra);

13. A Kshatriya (must undergo the same ordeals), if the amount is thrice as high;

2. ¹ See VIII, 2, note.

14. A Brâhmana, if it is four times as high. He is, however, not subject to the ordeal by sacred libation.

15. No judge must administer the (ordeal by) sacred libation to a Brâhmana ;

16. Except if it be done as a preliminary proof of his dealing fairly in some future transaction.

17. Instead of (administering the ordeal by) sacred libation to a Brâhmana (in suits regarding an object, the value of which amounts to less than two Suvarnas), let the judge cause him to swear by a lump of earth taken from a furrow.

18. To one formerly convicted of a crime (or of perjury) he must administer one of the ordeals, even though the matter in contest be ever so trifling.

19. But to one who is known (and esteemed) among honest men and virtuous, he must not (administer any ordeal), even though the matter in contest be ever so important.

20. The claimant must declare his willingness to pay the fine (which is due in case of his being defeated);

21. And the defendant must go through the ordeal.

22. In cases of a criminal action directed against the king, or of violence (an ordeal may be administered) even without (the claimant) promising to pay the fine (due in case of defeat in ordinary suits).

23. To women, Brâhmanas, persons deficient in an organ of sense, infirm (old) men, and sick persons, the (ordeal by the) balance must be administered.

24. But it must not be administered to them while a wind is blowing.

25. The (ordeal by) fire must not be administered to lepers, to infirm persons, or to blacksmiths;

26. Nor must it ever be administered in autumn or summer.

27. The (ordeal by) poison must not be administered to lepers, bilious persons, or Brâhmanas;

28. Nor during the rainy season.

29. The (ordeal by) water must not be administered to persons afflicted with phlegm or (another) illness, to the timid, to the asthmatic, nor to those who gain their subsistence from water (such as fishermen and the like);

30. Nor during (the two cold seasons) Hemanta and Sisira (or from middle of November to middle of March);

31. The (ordeal by) sacred libation must not be administered to atheists;

32. Nor when the country is afflicted with disease or pestilence.

33. Let the judge summon the defendant at the time of sunrise, after having fasted on the previous day and bathed in his clothes, and make him go through all the ordeals in the presence of (images of) the gods and of the (assessors and other) Brâhmanas.

X.

1. Now follows the (rule regarding the ordeal by) balance.

29. Nand. infers from a text of Nârada (not found in his Institutes), that the plural is made use of in this Sûtra in order to include women, children, sickly, old, and feeble persons.

32. According to Nand., the particle kā is used here in order to include fire, wind, grasshoppers, and other plagues.

X. 5, 6. Y. II, 100.

2. The transverse beam, by which the balance is to be suspended, should be fastened upon two posts, four Hastas above the ground (each), and should be made two Hastas long.

3. The beam of the balance should be made of strong wood (such as that of the Khadira or Tinduka trees), five Hastas long, and the two scales must be suspended on both sides of it, (and the whole suspended upon the transverse beam by means of an iron hook).

4. A man out of the guild of goldsmiths, or of braziers, should make it equal on both sides.

5. Into the one scale the person (who is to be tried by this ordeal) should be placed, and a stone (or earth or bricks) or some other (equivalent) of the same weight into the other.

6. The equivalent and the man having been made equal in weight and (the position of the scales) well marked, the man should be caused to descend from the balance.

2. One Hasta, 'cubit,' the modern 'hath,' equals two Vitasti, 'spans,' and 24 Aṅgulas, 'digits,' the modern Aṅgul. See Prinsep, Useful Tables, p. 122.

3. See the plate of balance, according to the statements of Indian legislators, in Professor Stenzler's Essay, 'Über die ind. Gottesurtheile,' Journal of the German Oriental Society, IX.

4. Nand. infers from the use of the plural number and from a passage of Pitāmaha and Nārada (see the Institutes of the latter, 5, 122), that merchants may also be appointed for this purpose.

6. Nand. refers the term suñhñitau kṛtvâ to the man and to the equivalent, both having to be marked 'with the king's seal or in some other way, in order that no one may suspect the weight of the equivalent or of the man to have been increased or lessened by the addition or removal of other objects, or of clothes, ornaments, and the like.' 'Others' explain the term in the way in which it has been rendered above.

7. Next (the judge) should adjure by (the following) imprecations the balance

8. And the person appointed to look after the weighing :

9. 'Those places of torture which have been prepared for the murderer of a Brâhmana, or for a false witness, the same places are ordained for a person appointed to look after the weighing, who acts fraudulently in his office.

10. 'Thou, O balance (dhaṭa), art called by the same name as holy law (dharma); thou, O balance, knowest what mortals do not comprehend.

11. 'This man, being arraigned in a cause, is weighed upon thee. Therefore mayest thou deliver him lawfully from this perplexity.'

12. Thereupon the judge should have him placed into the one scale again. If he rises in it, he is freed from the charge according to law.

13. In case of the strings bursting, or of the splitting of the transverse beam, the man should be placed in the scale once more. Thus the facts will be ascertained positively, and a just sentence be the result.

XI.

1. Now follows the (rule regarding the ordeal by) fire.

2. He must make seven circles, sixteen *Āṅgulas*¹ in breadth each, the intervals being of the same breadth.

3. Thereupon he must place seven leaves of the

XI. 2-9. Y. II, 103, 105-107. — 11. Y. II, 104.

2. ¹ See X, 2, note.

3. Nand. takes the term tataḥ, 'thereupon,' to imply that he holy fig-tree into the hands of the person (about to perform the ordeal), who must turn his face towards the east and stretch out both arms.

4. Those (leaves) and his hands he must bind together with a thread.

5. Then he must place into his hands a ball made of iron, red-hot, fifty Palas in weight, and smooth.

6. Having received this, the person must proceed through the (seven) circles, without either walking at a very hurried pace, or lingering on his way.

7. Finally, after having passed the seventh circle, he must put down the ball upon the ground.

8. That man whose hands are burnt ever so little, shall be deemed guilty; but if he remains wholly unburnt, he is freed from the charge.

9. If he lets the ball drop from fear, or if there exists a doubt as to whether he is burnt or not, let him take the ball once more, because the proof has not been decided.

10. At the beginning (of the whole ceremony) the judge shall cause the person to rub some rice in his hands, and shall mark (with red sap, or the like, the already existing scars, eruptions of the skin, &c., which will thus have become visible). Then the judge, after having addressed the iron ball (with the following prayer), shall place it in his hands :

must previously examine the hands of the person about to perform the ordeal and mark existing scars or eruptions of the skin, as prescribed in Sûtra 10.

4. The particle ka implies, according to Nand., that he must further place seven Samf leaves, unbroken grains, Dûrvâ leaves, and grain smeared with sour milk upon his hands, as ordained in a passage of Pitâmaha.

11. 'Thou, O fire, dwellest in the interior of all creatures, like a witness. O fire, thou knowest what mortals do not comprehend.

12. 'This man being arraigned in a cause, desires to be cleared from guilt. Therefore mayest thou deliver him lawfully from this perplexity.'

XII.

1. Now follows the (rule regarding the ordeal by water.

2. (The defendant must enter) water which is free from mud, aquatic plants, (crabs and other) vicious animals, (porpoises or other) large rapacious animals living in water, fish, leeches, and other (animals or plants).

3. The water having been addressed with the Mantras (mentioned hereafter), he must enter it, seizing the knees of another man, who must be free from friendship or hatred, and must dive into the water up to his navel.

4. At the same time another man must discharge an arrow from a bow, which must neither be too strong nor too weak.

5. That arrow must be fetched quickly by another man.

6. He who is not seen above the water in the mean time is proclaimed innocent. But in the contrary case he is (declared) guilty, even though one limb of his only has become visible.

7. 'Thou, O water, dwellest in the interior of all creatures, like a witness. O water, thou knowest what mortals do not comprehend.

8. 'This man being arraigned in a cause, desires to be cleared from guilt. Therefore mayest thou deliver him lawfully from this perplexity.'

XIII.

1. Now follows the (rule regarding the ordeal by) poison.

2. All (other) sorts of poison must be avoided (in administering this ordeal),

3. Except poison from the Sringa tree, which grows on the Himâlayas.

4. (Of that) the judge must give seven grains, mixed with clarified butter, to the defendant (while reciting the prayer hereafter mentioned).

5. If the poison is digested easily, without violent symptoms, he shall recognise him as innocent, and dismiss him at the end of the day.

6. 'On account of thy venomous and dangerous nature thou art destruction to all living creatures; thou, O poison, knowest what mortals do not comprehend.

7. 'This man being arraigned in a cause, desires to be cleared from guilt. Therefore mayest thou deliver him lawfully from this perplexity.'

XIV.

1. Now follows the (rule regarding the ordeal by) sacred libation.

2. Having invoked terrible deities (such as Durgâ, the Âdityas or others, the defendant) must drink three handfuls of water in which (images of) those deities have been bathed,

XIII. 3, 5-7. Y. II, 110, 111.

XIV. 2, 4, 5. Y. II, 112, 113.

3. Uttering at the same time the words, 'I have not done this,' with his face turned towards the deity (in question).

4. He to whom (any calamity) happens within a fortnight or three weeks (such as an illness, or fire, or the death of a relative, or a heavy visitation by the king),

5. Should be known to be guilty; otherwise (if nothing adverse happens to him), he is freed from the charge. A just king should honour (with presents of clothes, ornaments, &c.) one who has cleared himself from guilt by an ordeal.

XV¹.

1. Now there are twelve kinds of sons.

2. The first is the son of the body, viz. he who is begotten (by the husband) himself on his own lawfully wedded wife.

3. The second is the son begotten on a wife, viz. one begotten by a kinsman allied by funeral oblations, or ¹ by a member of the highest caste, on an appointed (wife or widow).

XV. 1-29. M. IX, 127, 136, 158-181; Y. II, 127-132; Gaut. XXVIII, 18, 19, 32, 33; Colebrooke, Dig. V, 4, CLXXXV; V, 4, CCXXV. — 28-30. Colebrooke, Dig. V, 4, CCXCIX. — 30. M. IX, 163. — 31. Colebrooke, Dig. V, 3, CXXI. — 32-34. M. IX, 201-203; Y. II, 140, 141; Gaut. XXVIII, 43, 44. — 32. Âpast. II, 6, 14, 1. — 34-38. Colebrooke, Dig. V, 5, CCCXXVII. — 40. M. IX, 180; Y. II, 132. — 41, 42. M. IX, 182, 183. — 44. M. IX, 138; Colebrooke, Dig. V, 4, CCCII. — 45-47. M. IX, 106, 137, 139. Of Chapters XV and XVII an excellent translation has been published by Dr. Bühler in the Bombay Digest (I, ¹ 338-343). I have followed him literally almost throughout.

3. ¹ I have translated the reading gotpâdita, which was no doubt

4. The third is the son of an appointed daughter.
5. She is called an appointed daughter, who is given away by her father with the words, 'The son whom she bears be mine.'
6. A damsel who has no brother is also (in every case considered) an appointed daughter, though she has not been given away according to the rule of an appointed daughter.
7. The son of a twice-married woman is the fourth.
8. She who, being still a virgin, is married for the second time is called twice married (punarbhû).
9. She also is called twice married (punarbhû) who, though not legally married more than once, has lived with another man before her lawful marriage.

the reading of Nandapandita, as he paraphrases the whole clause as follows, 'begotten by an elder or younger brother of the husband ; on failure of such, by a kinsman allied by funeral oblations ; on failure of him, by one belonging to the same gotra (race) as the husband ; on failure of him, by one descended from the same Rîshi ancestors as he ; on failure of him, by a member of the highest caste, i. e. a Brâhmana.' The above reading is also found in the London MS. of the text and in the two Calcutta editions. Dr. Bühler's MS., in which Nand.'s Commentary on this chapter is wanting, has gotpâditaḥ, and he translates accordingly, 'begotten by a kinsman . . . , who belongs to the highest caste.' The same reading is found in a quotation contained in Gagannâtha and Colebrooke's Dig. loc. cit. (I quote from a very good though fragmentary Bengali MS. in my possession), where, however, this clause runs as follows, niyuktâyâm savarnena gotpâditaḥ, 'begotten by a man of equal class on a widow duly appointed,' Colebrooke. The other Smṛitis do not speak of the appointment of others than kinsmen to beget a son on a widow, or wife of a eunuch, &c., unless Yâgñavalkya's words (II, 128) sagotrenetareṇa vâ, 'by a Sagotra or by another,' may be rendered, contrary to Vignânesvara's interpretation, by 'a kinsman or one who is no kinsman.'

10. The son of an unmarried damsel is the fifth.

11. (He is called so who is) born by an unmarried daughter in the house of her father.

12. And he belongs to the man who (afterwards) marries the mother.

13. The son who is secretly born in the house is the sixth.

14. He belongs to him in whose bed he is born.

15. The son received with a bride is the seventh.

16. He (is called so who) is the son of a woman married while she was pregnant.

17. And he belongs to the husband (of the pregnant bride).

18. The adopted son (dattaka) is the eighth.

19. And he belongs to him to whom he is given by his mother or father.

20. The son bought is the ninth.

21. And he belongs to him by whom he is bought.

22. The son self-given is the tenth.

23. And he belongs to him to whom he gave himself.

24. The son cast away is the eleventh.

25. (He is called so) who was forsaken by his father or mother (or by both).

26. And he belongs to him by whom he is received.

27. The son born by any woman whomsoever¹ is the twelfth.

27. ¹Yatra kvañanotpâdita, 'born wherever,' means, according to Nand., 'begotten anyhow, but otherwise than the above-mentioned sons, upon a woman, whether one's own wife, or another man's wife, whether equal in caste or not, whether legally married to the

28. Amongst these (sons) each preceding one is preferable (to the one next in order).

29. And he takes the inheritance (before the next in order).

30. And let him maintain the rest.

31. He should marry unmarried (sisters) in a manner correspondent with the amount of his property.

32. Outcasts, eunuchs, persons incurably diseased, or deficient (in organs of sense or actions, such as blind, deaf, dumb, or insane persons, or lepers) do not receive a share.

33. They should be maintained by those who take the inheritance.

34. And their legitimate sons receive a share.

35. But not the children of an outcast ;

36. Provided they were born after (the commission of) the act on account of which the parents were outcasted.

37. Neither do children begotten (by husbands of begetter or not, whether still a virgin or not,' &c. But he adds a very lengthy discussion, the upshot of which is, that the term yatra kvañanotpâdita is applicable to adopted sons only, who, although they are considered as the sons of the adopter, or of the legitimate husband of the woman, upon whom they were begotten by another, may also become heirs to the begetter, in case he has no other son. 'Or this term refers to the son of a Sûdra concubine, whom Manu calls Pârasava' (M. IX, 178). The latter interpretation agrees with the one proposed by Dr. Bühler, who identifies the yatra kvañanotpâdita with the 'Nishâda and Pârasava of other lawyers,' especially of Baudhâyana (II, 2, 22), and with the view taken by Gagannâtha, who thinks that the Saudra (son of a Sûdra woman) is meant.

32. 'The particle tu, "but," indicates that those who have entered the order of ascetics must also be understood here.' (Nand.)

34. 'The particle ka indicates that sons begotten on their wives (Kshetragas) shall also receive a share.' (Nand.)

an inferior caste) on women of a higher caste receive a share.

38. Their sons do not even receive a share of the wealth of their paternal grandfathers.

39. They should be supported by the heirs.

40. And he who inherits the wealth, presents the funeral oblation (to the deceased).

41. Amongst wives of one husband also the son of one is the son of all (and must present funeral oblations to them after their death).

42. Likewise, amongst brothers begotten by one (father, the son of one is the son of all, and must present funeral oblations to them all).

43. Let a son present the funeral oblations to his father, even though he inherit no property.

44. Because he saves (trâyate) his father from the hell called Put, therefore (a male child) is called put-tra (protector from Put, son) by Svayambhû himself.

45. He (the father) throws his debt on him (the son); and the father obtains immortality, if he sees the face of a living son.

46. Through a son he conquers the worlds, through a grandson he obtains immortality, and through the son's grandson he gains the world of the sun.

47. No difference is made in this world between the son of a son and the son of a daughter; for even a daughter's son works the salvation of a childless man, just like a son's son.

44. 'Svayambhû means the Veda.' (Nand.)

XVI.

1. On women equal in caste (to their husbands) sons are begotten, who are equal in caste (to their fathers).

2. On women of lower caste than their husbands sons are begotten, who follow the caste of their mothers.

3. On women of higher caste than their husbands sons are begotten, who are despised by the twice-born.

4. Among these, the son of a Sûdra with a Vaisya woman is called Âyogava.

5. The Pukkasa and Mâgadha are sons of a Vaisya and Sûdra respectively with a Kshatriya woman.

6. The Kandâla, Vaidehaka, and Sûta are the sons of a Sûdra, Vaisya, and Kshatriya respectively with a Brâhmana woman.

7. Besides these, there are innumerable other mixed castes produced by further intermixture between those that have been mentioned.

8. Âyogavas must live by artistic performances (such as public wrestling, dancing, and the like).

9. Pukkakas must live by hunting.

10. Mâgadhas must live by calling out in public the good qualities (of saleable commodities).

11. Kandâlas must live by executing criminals sentenced to death.

XVI. 1. M. X, 5; Y. I, 90; Âpast. II, 6, 13, 1. — 4-6. M. X, 11, 12; Y. I, 93, 94; Gaut. IV, 17. — 7. M. X, 31. — 8-15. M. X, 47-53. — 17. M. X, 57. — 18. M. X, 62.

10. According to Manu (X, 47) the Mâgadhas are to live by traffic.

12. Vaidehakas must live by keeping (dancing girls and other public) women and profiting by what they earn.

13. Sûtas must live by managing horses.

14. Kandâlas must live out of the town, and their clothes must be the mantles of the deceased. In this their condition is different (from, and lower than, that of the other mixed castes).

15. All (members of mixed castes) should have intercourse (of marriage, and other community) only between themselves.

16. (In the lower castes also) the son inherits the property of his father.

17. All members of those mixed castes, whether their descent has been kept secret or is generally known, may be found out by their acts.

18. Desertion of life, regardless of reward, in order to save a Brâhmana, or a cow, or for the sake of a woman or child, may confer heavenly bliss even upon (members of those) base castes.

XVII.

1. If a father makes a partition with his sons, he may dispose of his self-acquired property as he thinks best.

XVII. 1. Y. II, 114. — 2. Y. II, 121. — 3. M. IX, 216; Y. II, 122; Gaut. XXVIII, 29; Colebrooke, Dig. V, 2, CII. — 4-16. M. IX, 185-189; Y. II, 135-137; Âpast. II, 6, 14, 2-5; Gaut. XXVIII, 21. — 4-13, 15. Colebrooke, Dig. V, 8, CCCXVII; V, 8, CCCCLIX. — 17. M. IX, 211, 212; Y. II, 138; Gaut. XXVIII, 28. — 18. M. IX, 194, 195; Y. II, 143, 144; Colebrooke, Dig. V, 9, CCCCLVII. — 19. M. IX, 196; Y. II, 145. — 20. M. IX, 197; Y. II, 145. — 21. M. IX, 192; Y. II, 145; Gaut. XXVIII, 24; Colebrooke, Dig. V, 9, CCCXCIV. — 22. M. IX, 200; Colebrooke, Dig. V, 9, CCCCLXXIII. — 23. Y. II, 120.

2. But in regard to wealth inherited of the paternal grandfather, the ownership of father and son is equal.

3. (Sons), who have separated from their father, should give a share to (a brother) who is born after partition.

4. The wealth of a man who dies without male issue goes to his wife ;

5. On failure of her, to his daughter ;

6. On failure of her, to his father ;

7. On failure of him, to his mother ;

8. On failure of her, to his brother ;

9. On failure of him, to his brother's son ;

10. On failure of him, to the relations called Bandhu ;

11. On failure of them, to the relations called Sakulya ;

12. On failure of them, to a fellow-student ;

13. On failure of him, it goes to the king, with the exception of a Brâhmana's property.

14. The property of a Brâhmana goes to (other) Brâhmanas.

8. 'On failure of brothers the sister inherits.' (Nand.)

9. 'On failure of a brother's son the sister's son inherits.' (Nand.)

10. Bandhu means Sapinda (allied by funeral oblations). The inheritance goes first to the Sapindas on the father's side in the following order: (the brother's son), the brother's grandson, the grandfather, his son, grandson, and great-grandson, the great-grandfather, his son, grandson, and great-grandson. Then follow the mother's Sapindas in the same order. (Nand.)

11. Sakulya means distant kinsmen, beginning with the fifth in descent and ascent. On failure of such, the inheritance goes to the spiritual teacher ; on failure of him, to a pupil of the deceased, as ordained by Âpastamba (II, 6, 14, 3) ; and on failure of him, to a fellow-student, as stated in Sûtra 12. (Nand.)

15. The wealth of a (deceased) hermit shall be taken by his spiritual teacher ;

16. Or his pupil (may take it).

17. But let a reunited coparcener take the share of his reunited coparcener who has died (without issue), and a uterine brother that of his uterine brother, and let them give (the shares of their deceased coparceners and uterine brothers) to the sons of the latter.

18. What has been given to a woman by her father, mother, sons, or brothers, what she has received before the sacrificial fire (at the marriage ceremony), what she receives on supersession, what has been given to her by her relatives, her fee (Sulka), and a gift subsequent, are called 'woman's property' (Strīdhana).

19. If a woman married according to (one of the first) four rites, beginning with the Brāhma rite, dies without issue, that (Strīdhana) belongs to her husband.

20. (If she has been married) according to (one of) the other (four reprehensible rites), her father shall take it.

18. 'Sulka, "fee," denotes the price or value of a house or other valuable object presented to the bride by her father ; or it means the fee paid for her by the bridegroom.' (Nand.) The latter interpretation is evidently the correct one. The bride's 'fee' (see Gaut. XXVIII, 25), from being originally the price due to the parents or guardian of the bride for surrendering her to the bridegroom, became in after times a wedding present, which the bride received from the bridegroom either directly or through her parents. This is the only way to account for the Sulka being enumerated among the constituent parts of Strīdhana in this place. See also I. D. Mayne, Hindu Law and Usage, §§ 77, 566 ; Mayr, Indisches Erbrecht, 170 seq. ; Jolly, Stellung der Frauen, 23, note.

19, 20. See XXIV, 17-27.

21. If she dies leaving children, her wealth goes in every case to her daughter.

22. Ornaments worn by women when their husbands were alive, the heirs shall not divide among themselves; if they divide them, they become outcasts.

23. (Coparceners) descended from different fathers must adjust their shares according to the fathers. Let each take the wealth due to his father, no other (has a right to it).

XVIII.

1. If there are four sons of a Brâhmana (springing from four different wives) of the four castes, they shall divide the whole estate of their father into ten parts.

2. Of these, let the son of the Brâhmana wife take four parts;

3. The son of the Kshatriya wife, three parts;

4. The son of the Vaisya wife, two parts;

5. The son of the Sûdra wife, a single part.

22. My rendering of this Sloka is based upon Kullûka's interpretation of the identical passage of Manu (IX, 200), which is supported by Vigñânesvara (Mitâksharâ I, 4, 19 in Colebrooke's version), Mâdhava (Burnell, Dâya-Vibhâga 51), Varadarâga (Burnell, Varadarâga's Vyavahâranirnaya 49), and others. Nand. proposes a different interpretation, on which rests Dr. Bühler's rendering, 'Those ornaments, which the wives usually wear, should not be divided by the heirs whilst the husbands are alive.'

XVIII. 1-5. M. IX, 149, 151-153; Y. II, 125. — 11, 25-27. Y. II, 125. — 1-31, 38-40. Colebrooke, Dig. V, 3, CLIII. — 32-37. Colebrooke, Dig. V, 3, CLXXII; V, 2, LXXXVI; V, 1, LIV. — 36. Y. II, 114; Âpast. II, 6, 14, 1. — 41. M. IX, 210. — 42, 43. M. IX, 208, 209; Y. II, 118, 119. — 44. M. IX, 219; Gaut. XXVIII, 46, 47. — 43, 44. Colebrooke, Dig. V, 2, XCI; V, 5, CCCLXIII.

6. Again, if there are three sons of a Brâhmana (by wives of different castes), but no son by a Sûdra (wife) among them, they shall divide the estate into nine parts.

7. (Of these) let them take, each in the order of his caste, shares amounting to four, three, and two parts of the whole respectively.

8. (If there are three sons by wives of different castes, but) no Vaisya among them, they shall divide the estate into eight parts, and take four parts, three parts, and one part respectively.

9. (If there are three sons, but) no Kshatriya among them, they shall divide it into seven parts, and take four parts, two parts, and a single part respectively.

10. If there is no Brâhmana among them, they shall divide it into six parts, and take three parts, two parts, and a single part respectively.

11. If there are sons of a Kshatriya by a Kshatriya, a Vaisya, and a Sûdra wife, the mode of division shall be the same (i. e. the estate shall be divided into six parts, &c.)

12. Again, if there are two sons of a Brâhmana, the one belonging to the Brâhmana and the other to the Kshatriya caste, they shall divide the estate into seven parts; and of these the Brâhmana son shall take four parts;

13. The Kshatriya son, three parts.

14. Again, if there are two sons of a Brâhmana, and the one belongs to the Brâhmana and the other to the Vaisya caste, the estate shall be divided into six parts; and of these, the Brâhmana shall take four parts;

15. The Vaisya, two parts.

16. Again, if there are two sons of a Brâhmana, and the one belongs to the Brâhmana and the other to the Sûdra caste, they shall divide the estate into five parts;

17. And of these, the Brâhmana shall take four parts;

18. The Sûdra, a single part.

19. Again, if there are two sons of a Brâhmana or a Kshatriya, and the one belongs to the Kshatriya and the other to the Sûdra caste, they shall divide the estate into five parts;

20. And of these, the Kshatriya shall take three parts;

21. The Sûdra, one part.

22. Again, if there are two sons of a Brâhmana or a Kshatriya, and the one belongs to the Kshatriya, the other to the Sûdra caste, they shall divide the estate into four parts;

23. And of these, the Kshatriya shall take three parts;

24. The Sûdra, a single part.

25. Again, if there are two sons of a Brâhmana or a Vaisya or a Sûdra, and the one belongs to the Vaisya, the other to the Sûdra caste, they shall divide the estate into three parts;

26. And of these, the Vaisya shall take two parts;

27. The Sûdra, a single part.

28. If a Brâhmana has an only son, he shall take the whole estate, provided he be a Brâhmana, Kshatriya, or Vaisya.

29. If a Kshatriya has (an only son who is) either a Kshatriya or a Vaisya, (the rule shall be the same.)

30. If a Vaisya has (an only son who is) a Vaisya, (the rule shall also be the same) ;

31. (And so shall the only) son of a Sûdra (be sole heir) to his Sûdra (father).

32. A Sûdra, who is the only son of a father belonging to a twice-born caste, shall inherit one half of his property ;

33. The other half shall devolve in the same way as the property of one who died without leaving issue.

34. Mothers shall receive shares proportionate to their sons' shares ;

35. And so shall unmarried daughters.

36. Sons, who are equal in caste (to their father), shall receive equal shares.

37. A best part (the twentieth part of the inheritance, &c.) shall be given to the eldest, as his additional share.

38. If there are two sons by a Brâhmana wife, and one son by a Sûdra wife, the estate shall be divided into nine parts ; and of these, the two sons of the Brâhmana wife shall take two parts, the one son of the Sûdra wife, a single part.

39. If there are two sons by a Sûdra, and one son by a Brâhmana wife, the estate shall be divided into six parts ; and of these, the son of the Brâhmana wife shall take four parts, and the two sons of the Sûdra wife together shall take two parts.

40. Upon the same principles the shares have to be adjusted in other cases also.

33. See XVII, 4 seq.

34. 'That is to say, a Brâhmana wife shall take four parts, a Kshatriya wife, three parts,' &c. (Nand.)

37. See Gaut. XXVIII, 5.

41. If (brothers), who after a previous division of the estate live again together as parceners, should make a second partition, the shares must be equal in that case, and the eldest has no right to an additional share.

42. What a brother has acquired by his own efforts, without using the patrimony, he must not give up (to his brothers or other co-heirs), unless by his own free will; for it was gained by his own exertion.

43. And if a man recovers (a debt or other property), which could not before be recovered by his father, he shall not, unless by his own free will, divide it with his sons; for it is an acquisition made by himself.

44. Apparel, vehicles¹ (carriages or riding-horses), and ornaments (such as are usually worn according to the custom of the caste), prepared food, water (in a well or pool), females (slaves or mistresses of the deceased), property destined for pious uses or sacrifices, a common pasture-ground², and a book, are indivisible.

42. The term svayamñihitalabdham has been translated according to Kullûka (on M. IX, 208). Nand. interprets this Sloka thus, 'What a brother has acquired by his own efforts, and what has been given to him, at his desire (by friends or others), he must not give up,' &c.

43. Here again I have followed Kullûka (on M. IX, 209), and deviated from Nand.'s interpretation, who renders this Sloka as follows, 'If a man recovers property, &c., or if he gains property by himself (by his learning or valour, &c.) . . .'

44. ¹The term pattra has been rendered above in accordance with the first interpretation proposed by Nand., and with Kullûka's interpretation (on M. IX, 219). Vigñânesvara (in his comment upon the same passage of Manu) refers it to written documents, such especially as relate to a debt to be paid to the deceased; and

XIX.

1. He must not cause a member of a twice-born caste to be carried out by a Sûdra (even though he be a kinsman of the deceased);

2. Nor a Sûdra by a member of a twice-born caste.

3. A father and a mother shall be carried out by their sons (who are equal in caste to their parents).

4. But Sûdras must never carry out a member of a twice-born caste, even though he be their father.

5. Those Brâhmanas who carry out (or follow the corpse of) a (deceased) Brâhmana who has no relatives shall attain a mansion in heaven.

6. Those who have carried out a dead relative and burnt his corpse, shall walk round the pile from left to right, and then plunge into water, dressed in their clothes.

7. After having offered a libation of water to the deceased, they must place one ball of rice on blades of Kusa grass, (and this ceremony has to be repeated on each subsequent day, while the period of impurity lasts.)

8. Then, having changed their dress, they must this interpretation is mentioned by Nand. also. But there is no reason why an unliquidated demand should not be divided; and written documents are only twice referred to in the code of Manu (VIII, 168, and IX, 232).—² In translating the term prâkâra I have again followed Kullûka loc. cit.; see also Petersburg Dictionary s. v. Nand. interprets this term as denoting 'a path leading to or from the house.'

XIX. 1. M. V, 104. — 2. Y. III, 26. — 6. M. V, 103; Y. III, 26. — 7, 8. Y. III, 7, 12, 13. — 14-17. M. V, 73; Y. III, 16. 'Chapters XIX-XXXII contain the section on Âkâra, "Holy Usage."' (Nand.)

bite Nimba leaves between their teeth, and having stepped upon the stone threshold, they must enter the house.

9. Then they must throw unbroken grains into the fire.

10. On the fourth day they must collect the bones that have been left.

11. And they must throw them into water from the Ganges.

12. As many bones of a man are contained in the water of the Ganges, so many thousands of years will he reside in heaven.

13. While the term of impurity lasts, they must continually offer a libation of water and a ball of rice to the deceased.

14. And they must eat food which has been bought, or which they have received unsolicited.

15. And they must eat no meat.

16. And they must sleep on the ground.

17. And they must sleep apart.

18. When the impurity is over, they must walk forth from the village, have their beards shaved, and having cleansed themselves with a paste of sesamum, or with a paste of mustard-seed, they must change their dress and re-enter the house.

19. There, after reciting a propitiatory prayer, they must honour the Brâhmanas.

13. The duration of the impurity varies according to the caste &c. of the deceased. See XXII.

14. The particle ka, according to Nand., indicates that factitious salt must also not be used by them, as stated in a Smr̥iti.

15. Nand. refers the particle ka to an implied prohibition to eat fish, which he quotes from a text of Gautama (not found in his Institutes).

20. The gods are invisible deities, the Brāhmanas are visible deities.

21. The Brāhmanas sustain the world.

22. It is by the favour of the Brāhmanas that the gods reside in heaven; a speech uttered by Brāhmanas (whether a curse or a benediction) never fails to come true.

23. What the Brāhmanas pronounce, when highly pleased (as, if they promise sons, cattle, wealth, or some other boon to a man), the gods will ratify; when the visible gods are pleased, the invisible gods are surely pleased as well.

24. The mourners, who lament the loss of a relative, shall be addressed by men gifted with a tranquil frame of mind with such consolatory speeches as I shall now recite to thee, O Earth, who art cherished to my mind.

XX.

1. The northern progress of the sun is a day with the gods.

2. The southern progress of the sun is (with them) a night.

3. A year is (with them) a day and a night;

4. Thirty such are a month;

5. Twelve such months are a year.

6. Twelve hundred years of the gods are a Kaliyuga.

XX. 1-3. M. I, 67. — 6-9. M. I, 69, 70. — 10. M. I, 71. — 11. M. I, 79. — 12-14. M. I, 72. — 30. Y. III, 11.

6. The Kaliyuga itself consists of a thousand years only; but it is both preceded and followed by a twilight lasting a hundred years. It is similar with the three other Yugas. (Nand.)

7. Twice as many (or two thousand four hundred) are a Dvâpara (Yuga).

8. Thrice as many (or three thousand six hundred) are a Tretâ (Yuga).

9. Four times as many (or four thousand eight hundred) are a Kṛita Yuga.

10. (Thus) twelve thousand years make a Katuryuga (or period of four Yugas).

11. Seventy-one Katuryugas make a Manvantara (or period of a Manu).

12. A thousand Katuryugas make a Kalpa.

13. And that is a day of the forefather (Brahman).

14. His night also has an equal duration.

15. If so many such nights and days are put together that, reckoned by the month and by the year, they make up a period of a hundred years (of Brahman) it is called the age of one Brahman.

16. A day of Purusha (Vishnu) is equal in duration to the age of one Brahman.

17. When it ends, a Mahâkalpa is over.

18. The night following upon it is as long.

19. The days and nights of Purusha that have gone by are innumerable;

20. And so are those that will follow.

21. For Kâla (time) is without either beginning or end.

22. Thus it is, that in this Kâla (time), in whom there is nothing to rest upon, and who is everlasting, I can espy nothing created in which there is the least stability.

23. The sands in the Ganges and (the waters pouring down from the sky) when Indra sends rain can be counted, but not the number of 'Forefathers' (Brahmans) who have passed away.

21. 'Kâla means Vishnu in this place.' (Nand.)

24. In each Kalpa, fourteen chiefs of the gods (Indras) go to destruction, as many rulers of the world (kings), and fourteen Manus.

25. And so have many thousands of Indras and hundred thousands of princes of the Daityas (such as Hiranyakasipu, Hiranyāksha, and others) been destroyed by Kâla (time). What should one say of human beings then?

26. Many royal Rishis too (such as Sagara), all of them renowned for their virtues, gods and Brahmanical Rishis (such as Kasyapas) have perished by the action of Kâla.

27. Those even who have the power of creating and annihilating in this world (the sun, moon, and other heavenly bodies) continually perish by the act of Kâla; for Kâla (time) is hard to overcome.

28. Every creature is seized upon by Kâla and carried into the other world. It is the slave of its actions (in a former existence). Wherefore then should you wail (on its death)?

29. Those who are born are sure to die, and those who have died are sure to be born again. This is inevitable, and no associate can follow a man (in his passage through mundane existence).

30. As mourners will not help the dead in this world, therefore (the relatives) should not weep, but perform the obsequies to the best of their power.

31. As both his good and bad actions will follow

27. Here also Kâla, the god of time, is another name for Vishnu. (Nand.)

29. The same proverb occurs in the Râmâyana II, 84, 21, and in the Bhagavadgîtâ II, 27. See Böhrtlingk, Ind. Sprüche, 2383.

him (after death) like associates, what does it matter to a man whether his relatives mourn over him or no?

32. But as long as his relatives remain impure, the departed spirit finds no rest, and returns to visit (his relatives), whose duty it is to offer up to him the funeral ball of rice and the water libation.

33. Till the *Sapindikarana*¹ has been performed, the dead man remains a disembodied spirit (and is afflicted with hunger and thirst). Give rice and a jar with water to the man who has passed into the abode of disembodied spirits.

34. Having passed into the abode of the manes (after the performance of the Sapindikarana) he enjoys in the shape of celestial food his portion of the Srâddha (funeral oblation); offer the Srâddha, therefore, to him who has passed into the abode of the manes.

35. Whether he has become a god, or stays in hell, or has entered the body of an animal, or of a human being, he will receive the Srâddha offered to him by his relatives.

36. The dead person and the performer of the Srâddha are sure to be benefitted by its performance. Perform the Srâddha always, therefore, abandoning bootless grief.

37. This is the duty which should be constantly discharged towards a dead person by his kinsmen; by mourning a man will neither benefit the dead nor himself.

38. Having seen that no help is to be had from this world, and that his relations are dying (one after the other), you must choose virtue for your only associate, O ye men.

33. ¹ See XXI, 12.

39. Even were he to die with him, a kinsman is unable to follow his dead relative: all excepting his wife are forbidden to follow him on the path of Yama.

40. Virtue alone will follow him, wherever he may go; therefore do your duty unflinchingly in this wretched world.

41. To-morrow's business should be done to-day, and the afternoon's business in the forenoon; for death will not wait, whether a person has done it or not.

42. While his mind is fixed upon his field, or traffic, or his house, or while his thoughts are engrossed by some other (beloved) object, death suddenly carries him away as his prey, as a she-wolf catches a lamb.

43. Kâla (time) is no one's friend and no one's enemy: when the effect of his acts in a former existence, by which his present existence is caused, has expired, he snatches a man away forcibly.

44. He will not die before his time has come, even though he has been pierced by a thousand shafts; he will not live after his time is out, even though he has only been touched by the point of a blade of Kusa grass.

45. Neither drugs, nor magical formulas, nor

39. This is an allusion to the custom of Satee. (Nand.) See XXV, 14.

41. This proverb is found in the Mahâbhârata also (XII, 6536, &c.) See Böhlingk, Ind. Sprüche, 6595.

43. This proverb is also found in the Mahâbhârata XI, 68, and Râmâyana IV, 18, 28, and other works. See Böhlingk, 3194.

45. 'Neither will presents of gold (to Brâhmanas) or other such burnt-offerings, nor prayers will save a man who is in the bonds of death or old age.

46. An impending evil cannot be averted even by a hundred precautions; what reason then for you to complain?

47. Even as a calf finds his mother among a thousand cows, an act formerly done is sure to find the perpetrator.

48. Of existing beings the beginning is unknown, the middle (of their career) is known, and the end again unknown; what reason then for you to complain?

49. As the body of mortals undergoes (successively the vicissitudes of) infancy, youth, and old age, even so will it be transformed into another body (hereafter); a sensible man is not mistaken about that.

50. As a man puts on new clothes in this world, throwing aside those which he formerly wore, even so the self of man puts on new bodies, which are in accordance with his acts (in a former life).

51. No weapons will hurt the self of man, no fire burn it, no waters moisten it, and no wind dry it up.

52. It is not to be hurt, not to be burnt, not to be moistened, and not to be dried up; it is imperishable, perpetual, unchanging, immovable, without beginning.

acts of liberality save him, as the use of the particle ka implies.' (Nand.)

47. This proverb is also found in the Mahābhārata XII, 6760, Pañātāntra II, 134, and other works. See Böhlingk, Ind. Sprüche, 5114.

48. This proverb is also found in the Bhagavadgītā II, 28. See Böhlingk, Ind. Sprüche, 704.

50. Regarding transmigration, see below, XLIV, XLV.

53. It is (further) said to be immaterial, passing all thought, and immutable. Knowing the self of man to be such, you must not grieve (for the destruction of his body).

XXI.

1. Now then ¹, (on the day) after the impurity is over, let him bathe duly (during the recitation of Mantras), wash his hands and feet duly, and sip water duly, (and having invited some Brâhmanas), as many as possible, who must cleanse themselves in the same way and turn their faces towards the north, let him bestow presents of perfumes, garlands, clothes and other things (a lamp, frankincense, and the like) upon them, and hospitably entertain them.

2. At the Ekoddish/a (or Srâddha for one recently deceased) let him alter the Mantras ¹ so as to refer to (the) one person (deceased) ².

XXI. 1-11. Âsv. IV, 7; Pâr. III, 10, 48-53; Sâṅkh. IV, 2; M. III, 247; Y. III, 250, 251, 255. — 12-23. Sâṅkh. IV, 3; V, 9; Y. I, 252-254. Regarding the parallel passages of the Kâṭhaka Grîhya-sûtra, see the Introduction.

1. ¹ 'Having said, in the previous Chapter (XX, 30), that "the obsequies should be performed," he now goes on to describe that part of the obsequies which has not yet been expounded, viz. the "first Srâddha."' (Nand.)

2. ¹ The Mantras here referred to are those contained in the description of the Pârvaṇa and other ordinary Srâddhas in Chapter LXXIII. Thus, the Mantra, 'This is your (share), ye manes' (LXXIII, 12, 13), has to be altered into, 'This is thy (share), father;' and so on. Devapâla, in his Commentary on the Kâṭhaka Grîhya-sûtra, gives an accurate statement of all the modifications which the ordinary Mantras have to undergo at the Ekoddish/a. — ² Nand. states that not only the Mantras, but the whole ritual should be modified. The nature of the latter modifications is stated by Yâg-ñavalkya loc. cit. and by Sâṅkhâya loc. cit.

3. Close to the food left (by the Brâhmanas) let him offer a ball of rice, at the same time calling out his name and (that of) his race.

4. The Brâhmanas having taken food and having been honoured with a gift, let him offer, as imperishable food, water to the Brâhmanas, after having called out the name and Gotra of the deceased; and let him dig three trenches, each four Aṅgulas in breadth, their distance from one another and their depth also measuring (four Aṅgulas), and their length amounting to one Vitasti (or twelve Aṅgulas).

5. Close by the trenches let him light three fires, and having added fuel to them, let him make three oblations (of boiled rice) in each (fire, saying),

6. 'Svadhâ and reverence to Soma, accompanied by the manes.

7. 'Svadhâ and reverence to Agni, who conveys the oblations addressed to the manes.

8. 'Svadhâ and reverence to Yama Aṅgiras.'

9. Then let him offer balls of rice as (ordained) before (in Sûtra 3) on the three mounds of earth (adjacent to the three trenches).

10. After having filled the three trenches with

3. This must be done with the Mantra, 'This is for you.' (Nand.) Regarding this Mantra, see note on Sûtra 10.

4. The 'imperishable water,' akshayyodakam, derives its name from the Mantra, with which it is delivered, expressing the wish that the meal 'may give imperishable satisfaction' (akshayyam astu). This is the explanation which Nand. gives of the term akshayyodakam in his gloss on LXXIII, 27. In his comment on the present Sûtra he says that the 'imperishable water' must be presented with the (further?) Mantras, 'Let arrive' and 'Be satisfied.' See Y. I, 251; Sâṅkh. IV, 2, 5, 6.

10. The whole Mantra runs as follows, 'This is for you, father, rice, sour milk, clarified butter, honey, and meat, let him mutter (the Mantra), 'This is for you.'

11. This ceremony he must repeat monthly, on the day of his death.

12. At the close of the year let him give food to the Brâhmaṇas, after having fed the gods first, in honour of the deceased and of his father, grandfather, and great-grandfather.

13. At (the Ekoddishā belonging to) this ceremony let him perform the burnt-offering, the invitation, and (the offering of) water for washing the feet.

14. Then he must pour the water for washing the feet and the Arghya (water libation) destined for the deceased person into the three vessels containing the water for washing the feet, and the three other vessels containing the Arghya of his three ancestors. At the same time he must mutter and for those after you.' But in the present case (at a 'first Śrâddha') the name of the deceased has to be substituted for the word 'father.' (Nand.) Although Nand. quotes this Mantra from Âsvalâyana's Srauta-sûtra, it seems probable that the author of the Vishnu-sûtra took it from the Kâthaka (IX, 6 of the Berlin MS.)

11. The Sûtras following next refer to the Sapindâkarana or 'ceremony of investing a dead person with the rights of a Sapinda.'

12. 'He must invite six Brâhmaṇas altogether, four as representatives of the deceased person and of his three ancestors, two for the offering to be addressed to the Virvedevâs. The Brâhmaṇa, who represents the deceased person, must be fed according to the rule of the Ekoddishā, and the three Brâhmaṇas, who represent the three ancestors, must be fed according to the rule of the Pârvaṇa Śrâddha, as laid down in Chapter LXXIII.' (Nand.)

13. The import of this Sûtra is, that those three ceremonies must not be omitted in the present case, as is otherwise the case at an Ekoddishā. (Nand.)

14. ¹ The following is a translation of the whole of this Mantra,

(the two Mantras), 'May earth unite thee¹,' and 'United your minds².'

15. Near the leavings he must make (and put) four balls of rice.

16. Let him show out the Brâhmanas, after they have sipped water duly and have been presented by him with their sacrificial fee.

17. Then let him knead together the ball of the deceased person with the three balls (of the three ancestors), as (he has mixed up) his water for washing the feet and his Arghya (with theirs).

18. Let him do the same (with the balls placed) near the three trenches.

19. Or (see Sûtra 12) the Sapindâkarana must be performed on the thirteenth, after the monthly Srâddha has been performed on the twelfth¹ day.

20. For Sûdras it should be performed on the twelfth day, without Mantras.

21. If there be an intercalary month in that year, he must add one day to the (regular days of the) monthly Srâddha.

22. The ceremony of investing women with the relationship of Sapinda has to be performed in the same manner. Later, he must perform a Srâddha every year, while he lives, (on the anniversary of the deceased relative's death)¹.

which is quoted at full in the Kâthaka Grîhya-sûtra, 'May Prithivî (the earth), Vâyu (air), Agni (fire), and Pragâpati (the lord of creatures) unite thee with thy ancestors, and may you ancestors unite with him.' Regarding the particular ancestors implied here, see below, LXXV. — ² Rig-veda X, 191, 4.

19. ¹ I.e. on that day on which the period of impurity expires. (Nand.)

22. ¹ The meaning is, that he must give him food and water, as prescribed in 23. (Nand.)

23. He, for whom the ceremony of investing him with the relationship of Sapinda is performed after the lapse of a year, shall be honoured by the gift, (on each day) of that year, of food and a jar with water to a Brâhmana.

XXII.

1. The impurity of a Brâhmana caused by the birth or death of Sapindas lasts ten days.

2. In the case of a Kshatriya (it lasts) twelve days.

3. In the case of a Vaisya (it lasts) fifteen days.

4. In the case of a Sûdra (it lasts) a month.

5. The relationship of Sapinda ceases with the seventh man (in descent or ascent).

6. During the period of impurity oblations (to the Visvedevâs), gifts and receiving of alms, and study have to be interrupted.

XXII. 1-4. M.V, 83; Y.III, 18, 22; Âpast. I, 5, 16, 18; Gaut. XIV, 1-4. — 5. M.V, 60; Âpast. II, 6, 15, 2; Gaut. XIV, 13. — 25. M.V, 66; Y. III, 20; Gaut. XIV, 17. — 27. Y. III, 23; Gaut. XIV, 44. — 28. M.V, 69; Y. III, 1. — 29, 30. M.V, 67; Y. III, 23. — 35. M.V, 79; Y. III, 20; Gaut. XIV, 6. — 36, 37. Gaut. XIV, 7, 8. — 38. M.V, 79; Y. III, 20. — 39-41. M.V, 75, 76; Y. III, 21; Gaut. XIV, 19. — 42. M.V, 80; Y. III, 24. — 43. Y. III, 25. — 44. M.V, 80, 81; Y. III, 24; Gaut. XIV, 20. — 45. M.V, 82; Y. III, 25. — 46. M.V, 81; Gaut. XIV, 20. — 47. M.V, 89; Y. III, 21, 27; Gaut. XIV, 10-12. — 48-55. M.V, 93-95; Y. III, 27-29. — 48, 49. Gaut. XIV, 45, 46. — 56. M.V, 89; Y. III, 21; Gaut. XIV, 12. — 63-65. M.V, 103; Y. III, 26; Gaut. XIV, 31. — 67. M.V, 144. — 69. M.V, 85; Y. III, 30; Âpast. II, 1, 2, 8, 9; Gaut. XIV, 30. — 70. M.V, 87. — 75. M.V, 145; Y. I, 196; Âpast. I, 5, 16, 14; Gaut. I, 37. — 81. M.V, 135. — 82. M. XI, 95. — 84. M. XI, 96. — 85. M.V, 65. — 86. M.V, 91. — 87. M.V, 88. — 88-93. M.V, 105-110; Y. III, 31-34.

7. No one must eat the food of one impure (unless he be a Sapinda of his).

8. He who eats but once the food of Brâhmanas or others, while they are impure, will remain impure as long as they.

9. When the (period of) impurity is over, he must perform a penance (as follows):

10. If a twice-born man has eaten (the food) of a member of his own caste, while the latter was impure, he must approach a river and plunge into it, mutter the (hymn of) *Aghamarshana*¹ three times, and, after having emerged from the water, must mutter the *Gâyatrî*² one thousand and eight times.

11. If a Brâhmaṇa has eaten the food of a Kshatriya, while the latter was impure, he is purified by performing the same penance and by fasting (on the previous day).

12. (The same penance is ordained for) a Kshatriya who has eaten the food of a Vaisya, while the latter was impure.

13. (The same penance is ordained for) a Brâhmaṇa (who has eaten the food) of an impure Vaisya; but he must fast besides during the three (previous) days.

14. If a Kshatriya or a Vaisya (have eaten the food) of a Brâhmaṇa or a Kshatriya respectively, who were impure, they must approach a river and mutter the Gâyatrî five hundred times.

15. A Vaisya, who has eaten the food of a Brâhmaṇa, while the latter was impure, must (go to a river and) mutter the Gâyatrî one hundred and eight times.

10. ¹ Rig-veda X, 190. — ² Rig-veda III, 62, 10.

16. A twice-born man (who has eaten the food) of a Sûdra, while the latter was impure, must (go to a river and) perform the Prâgâpatya (penance).

17. A Sûdra (who has eaten the food) of an impure man of a twice-born caste must bathe (in a river).

18. A Sûdra (who has eaten the food) of another Sûdra, while the latter was impure, must bathe (in a river) and drink Pañkagavya.

19. Wives and slaves in the direct order of the castes (i. e. who do not belong to a higher caste than their lord) remain impure as long as their lord.

20. If their lord is dead (or if they live apart from him, they remain impure) as long as (members of) their own caste.

21. If Sapindas of a higher caste (are born or have died) the period of impurity has for their lower caste relations the same duration as for members of the higher caste.

22. A Brâhmana (to whom) Sapindas of the Kshatriya, Vaisya, or Sûdra castes (have been born or have died) becomes pure within six nights, or three nights, or one night, respectively.

23. A Kshatriya (to whom Sapindas of the) Vaisya or Sûdra castes (have been born or have died) is purified within six and three nights, respectively.

24. A Vaisya (to whom Sapindas of the) Sûdra caste (have been born or have died) becomes pure within six nights.

16. Regarding the Prâgâpatya penance, see below, XLVI, 10.

18. The Pañkagavya, or five productions of a cow, consist of milk, sour milk, butter, urine, and cow-dung.

25. In a number of nights equal to the number of months after conception, a woman is purified from an abortion.

26. The relatives of children that have died immediately after birth (before the cutting of the navel-string), and of still-born children, are purified at once.

27. (The relatives) of a child that has died before having teethed (are also purified) at once.

28. For him no ceremony with fire is performed, nor offering of water.

29. For a child that has teethed but has not yet been shorn, purity is obtained in one day and night;

30. For a child that has been shorn but not initiated, in three nights;

31. From that time forward (i. e. for initiated persons) in the time that has been mentioned above (in Sûtra 1 seq.)

32. In regard to women, the marriage ceremony is (considered as their) initiation.

33. For married women there is no impurity for the relatives on the father's side.

34. If they happen to stay at their father's house during childbirth or if they die there, (their distant relatives are purified) in one night, and their parents (in three nights).

35. If, while the impurity caused by a birth lasts,

26. 'The meaning is, that the relatives of such children do not become impure.' (Nand.)

28. 'The meaning is, that he must not be burnt.' (Nand.)

32. The import of this Sûtra is this, that the full period of impurity is ordained on the death of women also, in case they were married, as the marriage ceremony takes with them the place of the initiation of males.

another impurity caused by childbirth intervenes, it ends when the former impurity terminates.

36. If it intervenes when one night (only of the period of impurity remains, the fresh impurity terminates) two days later.

37. If it intervenes when one watch (only of the last night remains, the impurity ends) three days later.

38. The same rule is observed if a relative dies during a period of impurity caused by the death (of another relative).

39. If a man, while staying in another country, hears of the birth or death (of a relative), he becomes purified after the lapse of the period still wanting (to the ten days).

40. If the period of impurity, but not a whole year, has elapsed, (he is purified in one night.)

41. After that time (he is purified) by a bath.

42. If his teacher or maternal grandfather has died, (he is purified) in three nights.

43. Likewise, if sons other than a son of the body have been born or have died, and if wives who had another husband before have been delivered of a child or have died.

40. 'Although the general term impurity is used in this Sûtra, it refers to impurity caused by a death only.' (Nand.)

42. 'The use of the particle ka implies, that this rule extends to the death of a maternal grandmother, as ordained in the Shada-sâtismṛiti.' (Nand.)

43. The twelve kinds of sons have been enumerated above, XV, 2-27. Of these, the three species of adopted sons, the son bought, and the son cast off cannot cause impurity, because their sonship dates from a period subsequent to their birth; but their offspring may cause impurity. (Nand.) Parapûrvâs, or 'wives who had another husband before,' are either of the punarbhû or of the svairiṇi kind. (Nand.) See XV, 8, 9, and Nârada XII, 46-54.

44. (He becomes pure) in one day, if the wife or son of his teacher, or his Upādhyāya (sub-teacher ¹), or his maternal uncle, or his father-in-law, or a brother-in-law, or a fellow-student, or a pupil has died.

45. The impurity has the same duration (as in the cases last mentioned), if the king of that country in which he lives has died.

46. Likewise, if a man not his Sapinda has died at his house.

47. The relatives of those who have been killed by (falling from) a precipice, or by fire, or (have killed themselves by) fasting, or (have been killed by) water, in battle, by lightning, or by the king (on account of a crime committed by them), do not become impure ;

48. Nor do kings (become impure) while engaged in the discharge of their duties (such as the protection of their subjects, the trial of lawsuits, &c.)

49. Devotees fulfilling a vow (also do not become impure) ;

50. Nor do sacrificers engaged in a sacrificial ceremony ;

51. Nor workmen (such as carpenters or others) while engaged in their work ;

52. Nor those who perform the king's orders, if the king wishes them to be pure.

53. Nor (can impurity arise) during the installation of the monument of a deity, nor during

44. ¹ See XXIX, 2.

49. The term vratin, 'a devotee fulfilling a vow,' may be referred to students as well, who, however, become impure by the death of their parents. (Nand.)

53. A marriage ceremony is said to have actually begun when the Nāndimukha, or Srāddha preliminary to marriage, has taken place. (Nand.)

a marriage ceremony, if those ceremonies have actually begun;

54. Nor when the whole country is afflicted with a calamity;

55. Nor in times of great public distress (such as an epidemic or a famine).

56. Suicides and outcasts do not cause impurity or receive offerings of water.

57. On the death-day of an outcast a female slave of his must upset a pot with water with her feet, (saying, 'Drink thou this.')

58. He who cuts the rope by which (a suicide) has hung himself, becomes pure by performing the Taptakrikkhra ('hot penance').

59. So does he who has been (in any way) concerned with the funeral of a suicide;

60. And he who sheds tears for such.

61. He who sheds tears for any deceased person together with the relations of the latter (becomes pure) by a bath.

62. If he has done so, before the bones (of the deceased) had been collected, (he becomes pure) by bathing with his apparel.

63. If a member of a twice-born caste has followed the corpse of a dead Sûdra, he must go to a river, and having plunged into it, mutter the Aghamarshana three times, and then, after having emerged from it, mutter the Gâyatri one thousand and eight times.

64. (If he has followed) the corpse of a dead member of a twice-born caste, (the same expiation

55. Giving or taking alms does not effect impurity in such cases. (Nand.)

is ordained, but he must mutter the Gâyatri one hundred and eight times only.

65. If a Sûdra has followed the corpse of a member of a twice-born caste, he must bathe.

66. Members of any caste, who have come near to the smoke of a funeral pile, must bathe.

67. (Bathing is also ordained) after sexual intercourse, bad dreams (of having been mounted upon an ass, or the like), when blood has issued from the throat, and after having vomited or been purged;

68. Also, after tonsure of the head;

69. And after having touched one who has touched a corpse (a carrier of a corpse), or a woman in her courses, or a Kândâla (or other low-caste persons, such as Svapakas), or a sacrificial post;

70. And (after having touched) the corpse of a five-toed animal, except of those kinds that may be eaten¹, or their bones still moist with fat.

71. In all such ablutions he must not wear his (defiled) apparel without having washed it before.

72. A woman in her courses becomes pure after four days by bathing.

73. A woman in her courses having touched another woman in her courses, who belongs to a lower caste than she does, must not eat again till she is purified.

74. If she has (unawares) touched a woman of her own caste, or of a higher caste than her own, she becomes pure at once, after having taken a bath.

75. Having sneezed, having slept, having eaten,

70. ¹ See LI, 6.

75. Nand. argues from a passage of Yâgñavalkya (I, 196) and from texts of Âpastamba (not found in his Dharma-sûtra) and of Praketas, that the particle ka refers to repeated sipping of water.

going to eat or to study, having drunk (water), having bathed, having spat, having put on his garment, having walked on the high road, having discharged urine or voided excrements, and having touched the bones no longer moist with fat of a five-toed animal, he must sip water ;

76. Likewise, if he has talked to a Kândâla or to a Mlekkha (barbarian).

77. If the lower part of his body, below the navel, or one of his fore-arms, has been defiled by one of the impure excretions of the body, or by one of the spirituous liquors or of the intoxicating drinks (hereafter mentioned), he is purified by cleansing the limb in question with earth and water.

78. If another part of his body (above the navel) has been defiled, (he becomes pure by cleansing it) with earth and water, and by bathing.

79. If his mouth has been defiled (he becomes pure) by fasting, bathing, and drinking Pañtagavya;

80. Likewise, if his lip has been defiled.

81. Adeps, semen, blood, dandruff, urine, fæces, ear-wax, nail-parings, phlegm, tears, rheum, and sweat are the twelve impure excretions of the body.

82. Distilled from sugar, or from the blossoms of the Madhûka (Mâdhvî wine¹), or from flour : these three kinds of spirituous liquor have to be discerned ; as one, so are all : none of them must be tasted by the twice-born.

83. Again, distilled from the blossoms of the

76. Regarding the meaning of Mlekkha, see LXXXIV, 4.

82, 83. ¹How the Mâdhvî, Mâdhûka, and Mâdhvîka wines differ from one another, does not become clear. Nand. explains the term Mâdhûka as denoting an extract from Madhûka blossoms (bassia latifolia), and Mâdhvî and Mâdhvîka as two different preparations from Madhu. Now Madhu might be rendered by 'honey;'

Madhûka tree (Mâdhûka wine), from molasses, from the fruits of the Taṅka (or Kapittha tree), of the jujube tree, of the Khargûra tree, or of the bread-fruit tree, from wine-grapes, from Madhûka blossoms (Mâdhvika wine), Maireya, and the sap of the coconut tree :

84. These ten intoxicating drinks are unclean for a Brâhmaṇa ; but a Kshatriya and a Vaisya 'commit no wrong in touching (or drinking) them.

85. A pupil having performed (on failure of other mourners) the funeral of his dead Guru, becomes pure after ten nights, like those (kinsmen) who carry out the dead.

86. A student does not infringe the rules of his order by carrying out, when dead, his teacher, or his sub-teacher, or his father, or his mother, or his Guru.

87. A student must not offer a libation of water to a deceased relative (excepting his parents) till the term of his studentship has expired ; but if, after its expiration, he offers a libation of water, he becomes pure after three nights.

88. Sacred knowledge (see 92), religious austerities (see 90), fire (see XXIII, 33), holy food (Pañḍagavya), earth (see 91), the mind, water (see 91), smearing (with cow-dung and the like, see XXIII, 56), air (see XXIII, 41), (the morning and evening prayers and other) religious acts, the sun but Kullûka, in his comment on the term Mâdhvî (M. XI, 95), states expressly that it means 'Madhûka blossom,' and Hârîta (as quoted by Nand.) says that Mâdhûka, Mâdhvî and Mâdhvika are all preparations from Madhu, i. e. Madhûka blossoms. Maireya, according to the lexicographer Vâkaspati, as quoted by Nand., is an intoxicating drink prepared from the flowers of the grislea tomentosa, mixed with sugar, grain, and water, or, according to the reading of the Sabdakalpadruma (see the Petersburg Dictionary), with sorrel.

(see XXIII, 40), and time (by the lapse of the ten days of impurity and the like) are purifiers of animate objects.

89. Of all pure things, pure food is pronounced the most excellent; for he who eats pure food only, is truly pure, not he who is only purified with earth and water.

90. By forgiveness of injuries the learned are purified; by liberality, those who have done forbidden acts; by muttering of prayers, those who have sinned in secret; by religious austerities, those who best know the Veda.

91. By water and earth is purified what should be purified (because it has been defiled); a river is purified by its current (carrying away all slime and mud); a woman, whose thoughts have been impure, by her menses; and the chief among the twice-born (the Brâhmanas), by renouncing the world.

92. Bodies (when defiled) are purified by water; the mind is purified (from evil thoughts) by truth; the soul (is purified or freed from worldly vanity) by sacred learning and austerities; the understanding (when unable to resolve some doubt), by knowledge.

93. Thus the directions for purifying animate bodies have been declared to thee; hear now the rules for cleaning all sorts of inanimate objects.

XXIII.

1. What has been defiled by the impure excretions of the body, by spirits, or by intoxicating drinks, is impure in the highest degree.

XXIII. 2. Âpast. I, 5, 17, 10; Gaut. I, 29. — 4. Y. I, 185; Gaut. I, 29, 31. — 5. M.V, 123; Gaut. I, 34. — 7-11. M.V, 111, 112, 116, 117; Y. I, 182, 183. — 7, 8. Gaut. I, 29, 30. — 13-

2. All vessels made of iron (or of other metals or of composition metals such as bell-metal and the like), which are impure in the highest degree, become pure by exposure to the fire.

3. Things made of gems or stones or water-shells, (such as conch-shells or mother-of-pearl, become pure) by digging them into the earth for seven days.

4. Things made of horns (of rhinoceroses or other animals), or of teeth (of elephants or other animals), or of bone (of tortoises or other animals, become pure) by planing them.

5. Vessels made of wood or earthenware must be thrown away.

6. Of a garment, which has been defiled in the highest degree, let him cut off that part which, having been washed, is changed in colour.

7. Objects made of gold, silver, water-shells, or gems, when (they are only defiled by leavings of food and the like, and) not smeared (with greasy substances), are cleansed with water.

8. So are stone cups and vessels used at Soma-sacrifices (when not smeared).

15. M. V, 118, 119; Y. I, 184, 182. — 16. M. V, 122. — 17. M. V, 126; Y. I, 191. — 18. M. V, 118. — 19-22. M. V, 120; Y. I, 186, 187. — 25, 26. M. V, 114; Y. I, 190. — 27. M. V, 115; Y. I, 185; Âpast. I, 5, 17, 12; Gaut. I, 29. — 28. Y. I, 185. — 30. M. V, 115; Y. I, 190. — 33. M. V, 122; Y. I, 187. — 38, 39. M. V, 125, 126. — 38. Y. I, 189. — 40. Y. I, 194. — 41. Y. I, 197. — 47-52. M. V, 127-133. — 53-55. M. V, 141-143. — 53. Y. I, 195; Âpast. I, 5, 16, 12; Gaut. I, 38, 41. — 55. Gaut. I, 28. — 56, 57. M. V, 122, 124; Y. I, 188.

7. The defilement in the highest degree having been treated of in the six preceding Sûtras, he now goes on to discuss the various cases of lesser defilement. (Nand.)

8-11. Regarding the shape of the sacrificial implements men-

9. Sacrificial pots, ordinary wooden ladles, and wooden ladles with two collateral excavations (used for pouring clarified butter on a sacrificial fire) are cleansed with hot water (when not smeared).

10. Vessels used for oblations (of butter, fruits, and the like are cleansed) by rubbing them with the hand (with blades of Kusa grass) at the time of the sacrifice.

11. Sword-shaped pieces of wood for stirring the boiled rice, winnowing baskets, implements used for preparing grain, pestles and mortars (are cleansed) by sprinkling water over them.

12. So are beds, vehicles, and seats (when defiled even by the touch of a Sûdra)¹.

13. Likewise, a large quantity (of anything).

14. Grain, skins (of antelopes, &c.), ropes, woven cloth, (fans and the like) made of bamboo, thread, cotton, and clothes (which have only just come from the manufactory, or which are dyed with saffron and will not admit of washing for that reason, are cleansed in the same way, when there is a large quantity of them);

15. Also, pot-herbs, roots, fruits, and flowers;

16. Likewise, grass, firewood, dry cow-dung (used as fuel), and leaves (of the Madhûka, Palâsa, or other trees).

tioned in these Sûtras, see the plates in Professor Max Müller's paper, 'Die Todtenbestattung bei den Brahmanen,' in the Journal of the German Oriental Society, IX, LXXVIII-LXXX.

12. ¹ This Sûtra and the following ones relate to defilement caused by touch. (Nand.)

13. 'I.e. more than one man can carry, as Baudhâyana says.' (Nand.)

14. The use of the particle ka implies that resin and other objects mentioned by Devala must be included in this enumeration. (Nand.)

17. The same (when smeared with excrements and the like, are cleansed) by washing.

18. And so (have the objects mentioned in Sûtra 14, if defiled without being smeared, to be cleansed by washing), when there is only a small quantity of them ;

19. Silk and wool, with saline earths ;

20. (Blankets or plaids) made of the hair of the mountain-goat, with the fruits of the soap plant ;

21. Clothes made of the bark of trees¹, with Bèl fruit ;

22. Linen cloth, with white sesamum ;

23. Likewise, things made of horns, bone, or teeth ;

24. (Rugs or covers) made of deer's hair, with lotus-seeds ;

25. Vessels of copper, bell-metal, tin, and lead, with acidulated water ;

26. Vessels of white copper and iron, with ashes ;

27. Wooden articles, by planing ;

28. Vessels made of fruits (such as cocoa-nuts, bottle-gourds, and Bèl fruits), by (rubbing them with) cows' hair.

29. Many things in a heap, by sprinkling water over them ;

30. Liquids (such as clarified butter, milk, &c.), by straining them ;

17. 'All the objects mentioned in Sûtras 12-16 must be washed, but so as to avoid injuring them, in case they have been defiled by excrements or other such impure substances.' (Nand.)

21. The term amsupa has been rendered in accordance with Nand.'s interpretation, which agrees with Vigñânesvara's (on Y. I, 186). Kullûka (on M.V, 120; see the Petersburg Dictionary) appears to refer it to two different sorts of clothes.

30-37. These Sûtras relate to defilement caused by insects, &c. (Nand.)

31. Lumps of sugar and other preparations from the sugar-cane¹, stored up in large quantities (exceeding a Drona) and kept in one's own house², by water and fire³;

32. All sorts of salt, in the same manner ;

33. Earthen vessels (if smeared with excrements and the like), by a second burning ;

34. Images of gods (if smeared), by cleansing them in the same way as the material (of which they are made is generally cleansed), and then installing them anew (in their former place).

35. Of undressed grain let him remove so much only as has been defiled, and the remainder let him pound in a mortar and wash.

36. A quantity of prepared grain not exceeding a Drona is not spoiled by being defiled (by dogs, crows, and other unclean animals).

37. He must throw away thus much of it only as has been defiled, and must sprinkle over the remainder water, into which a piece of gold has been dropped, and over which the Gâyatrî has been pronounced, and must hold it up before a goat (or before a horse) and before the fire.

31. ¹ Such as raw sugar, candied sugar, &c. — ² If there is no large quantity of them, they require to be sprinkled with water only ; and if they are kept elsewhere than in the house, as if they are exposed for sale in a fair, they require no purification at all. — ³ They must be encircled with fire, and sprinkled with water afterwards. (Nand.)

32. Nand. mentions as the main species of salt, rock-salt, sea-salt, sochal-salt, and Sâmbhala-salt. The last term refers perhaps to salt coming from the famous salt-lake of Sâkambharî or Shambar in Râgputana.

37. 'A quantity less than a Drona having been defiled must be thrown away, as stated by Parâsara.' (Nand.) One Drona = 4 Âdhakas = 1024 Mushâs or handfuls. The meaning of Âdhaka,

38. That (food) which has been nibbled by a bird (except a crow or other such birds that must not be eaten or touched), smelt at by a cow, sneezed on, or defiled by (human) hair, or by insects or worms, is purified by earth scattered over it.

39. As long as the scent or moisture, caused by any unclean substance, remains on the defiled object, so long must earth and water be constantly applied in all purifications of inanimate objects.

40. A goat and a horse are pure, as regards their mouths, but not a cow, nor the impure excretions of a man's body; roads are purified by the rays of the moon and of the sun, and by the winds.

41. Mire and water upon the high road, that has been touched by low-caste people, by dogs, or by crows, as well as buildings constructed with burnt bricks, are purified by the wind.

42. For everybody let him (the Âkârya or spiritual guide) carefully direct the performance of purificatory ceremonies, with earth and water, when he has been defiled in the highest degree.

43. Stagnant water, even if a single cow only has quenched her thirst with it, is pure, unless it is quite filled with (hair or other) unclean objects; it is the same with water upon a rock (or upon the top of a mountain).

44. From a well, in which a five-toed animal (whether man or beast, but not one of the five-toed however, according to Nand's observation, varies in different countries. See Colebrooke's Essays, I, 533 seq.

38. In explanation of the term amedhya, 'unclean substance,' Nand. quotes the following passage of Devala, 'Human bones, a corpse, excrements, semen, urine, the menstrual discharge, adeps, sweat, the rheum of the eyes, phlegm, and spirituous liquors are called unclean substances.'

animals whose flesh may be eaten)¹ has died, or which has been defiled in the highest degree, he must take out all the waters and dry up the remainder with a cloth.

45. If it is a well constructed with burnt bricks (or stones,) he must light a fire and afterwards throw Pañṣagavya into it, when fresh water is coming forth.

46. For small reservoirs of water and for ponds the same mode of purification has been prescribed as for wells, O Earth ; but large tanks (excepting Tīrthas) are not defiled (by dead animals, &c.)

47. The gods have declared, as peculiar to Brāhmaṇas, three causes effecting purity: if an (existing) impurity has not been perceived by them ; if they sprinkle the object (supposed to be impure) with water ; and if they commend it, in doubtful cases, with their speech, (saying, 'This or that shall be pure.')

48. The hand of a (cook or other) artizan, things exposed for sale in a shop (though they may have passed through the hands of many customers), food given to a Brāhmaṇa (by other Brāhmaṇas, or by Kshatriyas, &c., but not by Sūdras), and all manufactures or mines (of sugar, salt, and the like, but not distilleries of spirituous liquor), are always pure.

49. The mouth of a woman is always pure (for the purpose of a kiss); a bird is pure on the fall of fruit (which he has pecked); a sucking calf (or child), on the flowing of the milk ; a dog, on his catching the deer.

50. Flesh of an animal which has been killed by dogs is pronounced pure ; and so is that of an animal slain by other carnivorous creatures (such as tigers) or by huntsmen such as Kandâlas (Svapakas, Kshattris, or other low-caste men).

44. ¹ See LI, 6.

51. The cavities above the navel must be considered as pure; those below it are impure; and so are all excretions that fall from the body.

52. Flies, saliva dropping from the mouth, a shadow, a cow, an elephant, a horse, sun-beams, dust, the earth, air, fire, and a cat are always pure.

53. Such drops as fall from the mouth of a man upon any part of his body do not render it impure, nor do hairs of the beard that enter his mouth, nor remnants of his food adhering to his teeth.

54. Drops which trickle on the feet of a man holding water for others to sip it, are considered as equal to waters springing from the earth: by them he is not soiled.

55. He who is anyhow touched by anything impure, while holding things in his hands, is purified by sipping water, without laying the things on the ground.

51. There are, according to Indian views, nine cavities or apertures of the body: the mouth, the two ears, the two nostrils, the two eyes, and the organs of excretion and generation. The two last are impure, the rest are pure.

55. Nand. and Kullûka (on M. V, 143) explain that hasta, 'hand,' here means 'arm,' as it would be impossible to sip water without using the hand. The former adds that, if the things are being carried with the hand, they must be placed in the cavity formed by the fore-arm. He refutes the opinion of the 'Eastern Commentators,' who, arguing from another Smṛiti, contend that the things have to be placed on the ground and to be sprinkled with water; and he further tries to account for the seemingly contradictory rules propounded by Vâsishṭha (Benares ed., III, 43) and Gautama (I, 28) by explaining that a large quantity of things should be laid on the ground, and a small quantity placed upon

56. A house is purified by scouring it with a broom and plastering the ground with cow-dung, and a manuscript or book by sprinkling water over it. Land is cleansed by scouring, by plastering it with cow-dung,

57. By sprinkling¹, by scraping, by burning, or by letting cows (or goats) pass (a day and a night) on it. Cows are auspicious purifiers, upon cows depend the worlds,

58. Cows alone make sacrificial oblations possible (by producing sacrificial butter), cows take away every sin. The urine of cows, their dung, clarified butter, milk, sour milk, and Goroṣṇā :

59. Those six excellent (productions) of a cow are always propitious. Drops of water falling from the horns of a cow are productive of religious merit, and have the power to expiate all sins (of those who bathe in, or rub themselves with, them).

60. Scratching the back of a cow destroys all guilt, and giving her to eat procures exaltation in heaven.

some other limb, and further, that food should always be placed on the ground, but that a garment, a stick, and the like should be kept in the hand. Compare Dr. Bühler's note on Gaut. loc. cit. It may be remarked, incidentally, that Nand. quotes the reading uḥḥisho 'nidhâya in the passage of Gautama referred to.

56. 'The term pustaka refers to MSS. or books, whether made of palm leaves, or of prepared hemp, or of prepared reeds (sara).' (Nand.) It may be that Nand. means by the last term a sort of paper, though paper is usually called by its Arabian name (kâgad) in Indian works. See regarding the materials used for writing in ancient India, Burnell's Palæography, p. 84 seq. (2nd ed.)

57. ¹ The term seka, 'sprinkling,' either refers to the earth being sprinkled by rain, or to Pañḥagavya being poured over it. (Nand.)

58. Goroṣṇā is a bright yellow pigment which is said to be prepared from the urine or bile of a cow.

61. In the urine of cows dwells the Ganges, prosperity (dwells) in the dust (rising from their couch), good fortune in cow-dung, and virtue in saluting them. Therefore should they be constantly saluted.

XXIV.

1. Now a Brâhmaṇa may take four wives in the direct order of the (four) castes ;

2. A Kshatriya, three ;

3. A Vaisya, two ;

4. A Sûdra, one only.

5. Among these (wives), if a man marries one of his own caste, their hands shall be joined.

6. In marriages with women of a different class, a Kshatriya bride must hold an arrow in her hand ;

7. A Vaisya bride, a whip ;

8. A Sûdra bride, the skirt of a mantle.

9. No one should marry a woman belonging to the same Gotra, or descended from the same Rîshi ancestors, or from the same Pravaras.

XXIV. 1-4. Weber, Ind. Stud. X, 21, 74; M. III, 12-14; Y. I, 56, 57. — 5. M. III, 43; Y. I, 62. — 6-8. M. III, 44; Y. I, 62. — 9, 10. Weber loc. cit. 75; M. III, 5; Y. I, 53; Âpast. II, 5, 11, 15, 16; Gaut. IV, 2-5. — 12-16. M. III, 8. — 12. Y. I, 53. — 17-26. M. III, 20, 21, 27-34; Y. I, 58-61; Âpast. II, 5, 11, 17-II, 5, 12, 2; Gaut. IV, 6-13. — 27, 28. M. III, 23-26, 39; Âpast. II, 5, 12, 3; Gaut. IV, 14, 15. — 29-32. M. III, 37, 38; Y. I, 58-60; Gaut. IV, 30-33. — 38. M. V, 151; Y. I, 63. — 39. Y. I, 63. — 40. M. IX, 90; Y. I, 64. — 41. M. IX, 93.

1. This chapter opens the section on Samskâras or sacraments, i. e. the ceremonies on conception and so forth. (Nand.) This section forms the second part of the division treating of Âtâra. See above, XIX.

9. According to Nand., the term Gotra refers to descent from one of the seven Rîshis, or from Agastya as the eighth; the term Ârsha (Rîshi ancestors), to descent from the Ârshîshenas or Mudgalas,

10. Nor (should he marry) one descended from his maternal ancestors within the fifth, or from his paternal ancestors within the seventh degree ;

11. Nor one of a low family (such as an agriculturer's, or an attendant of the king's family) ;

12. Nor one diseased ;

13. Nor one with a limb too much (as e. g. having six fingers) ;

14. Nor one with a limb too little ;

15. Nor one whose hair is decidedly red ;

16. Nor one talking idly.

17. There are eight forms of marriage :

18. The Brâhma, Daiva, Ârsha, Prâgâpatya, Gândharva, Âsura, Râkshasa, and Paisâka forms.

19. The gift of a damsel to a fit bridegroom, who has been invited, is called a Brâhma marriage.

20. If she is given to a Ritviṣ (priest), while he is officiating at a sacrifice, it is called a Daiva marriage.

21. If (the giver of the bride) receives a pair of kine in return, it is called an Ârsha marriage.

22. (If she is given to a suitor) by his demand, it is called a Prâgâpatya marriage.

or from some other subdivision of the Bhrigus or Âṅgirasas, excepting the Gâmadagnas, Gautamas, and Bhâradvâgas ; and the term Pravara, to the Mantrakṛts of one's own race, i. e. the ancestors invoked by a Brâhmaṇa at the commencement of a sacrifice. Nand.'s interpretation of the last term is no doubt correct ; but it seems preferable to take Gotra in the sense of 'family name' (laukika gotra), and to refer the term samânârsha to descent from the same Rîshi (vaidika gotra). See Dr. Bühler's notes on Âpast. II, 5, 11, 15, and Gaut. XVIII, 6 ; Max Müller, History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature, pp. 379-388 ; Weber, Ind. Stud. X, 69-81. If ârsha were connected with pravara, the whole compound samânârshapravarâ would denote 'a woman descended from the same Rîshi' = samanârshâ, Y. I, 53, and samânapravarâ, Gaut. XVIII, 6.

23. A union between two lovers, without the consent of mother and father, is called a Gândharva marriage.

24. If the damsel is sold (to the bridegroom), it is called an Âsura marriage.

25. If he seizes her forcibly, it is called a Râkshasa marriage.

26. If he embraces her in her sleep, or while she is unconscious, it is called a Paisâka marriage.

27. Among those (eight forms of marriage), the four first forms are legitimate (for a Brâhmana);

28. And so is the Gândharva form for a Kshatriya.

29. A son procreated in a Brâhma marriage redeems (or sends into the heavenly abodes hereafter mentioned) twenty-one men (viz. ten ancestors, ten descendants, and him who gave the damsel in marriage).

30. A son procreated in a Daiva marriage, fourteen;

31. A son procreated in an Ârsha marriage, seven;

32. A son procreated in a Prâgâpatya marriage, four.

33. He who gives a damsel in marriage according to the Brâhma rite, brings her into the world of Brahman (after her death, and enters that world himself).

34. (He who gives her in marriage) according to the Daiva rite, (brings her) into Svarga (or heaven, and enters Svarga himself).

35. (He who gives her in marriage) according to the Ârsha rite, (brings her) into the world of Vishnu (and enters that world himself).

36. (He who gives her in marriage) according to the Prâgâpatya rite, (brings her) into the world of the gods (and enters that world himself).

37. (He who gives her in marriage) according to the Gândharva rite, will go to the world of Gândharvas.

38. A father, a paternal grandfather, a brother, a kinsman, a maternal grandfather, and the mother (are the persons) by whom a girl may be given in marriage.

39. On failure of the preceding one (it devolves upon) the next in order (to give her in marriage), in case he is able.

40. When she has allowed three monthly periods to pass (without being married), let her choose a husband for herself; three monthly periods having passed, she has in every case full power to dispose of herself (as she thinks best).

41. A damsel whose menses begin to appear (while she is living) at her father's house, before she has been betrothed to a man, has to be considered as a degraded woman: by taking her (without the consent of her kinsmen) a man commits no wrong.

39. Regarding the causes effecting legal disability, such as love, anger, &c., see Nârada 3, 43.

40. Nand., arguing from a passage of Baudhâyana (see also M. IX, 90), takes ritu, 'monthly period,' as synonymous with varsha, 'year.' But ritu, which occurs in two other analogous passages also (Gaut. XVIII, 20, and Nârada XII, 24), never has that meaning.

41. Nand. observes, that the rules laid down in this and the preceding Sloka refer to young women of the lower castes only. Nowadays the custom of outcasting young women, who have not been married in the proper time, appears to be in vogue in Brahmanical families particularly. Smṛiti passages regarding the illegality of marriages concluded with such women have been collected by me, Über die rechtl. Stellung der Frauen, p. 9, note 17. The

XXV.

1. Now the duties of a woman (are as follows):
2. To live in harmony with her husband;
3. To show reverence (by embracing their feet and such-like attentions) to her mother-in-law, father-in-law, to Gurus (such as elders), to divinities, and to guests;
4. To keep household articles (such as the winnowing basket and the rest) in good array;
5. To maintain saving habits;
6. To be careful with her (pestle and mortar and other) domestic utensils;
7. Not to practise incantations with roots (or other kinds of witchcraft);
8. To observe auspicious customs;
9. Not to decorate herself with ornaments (or to partake of amusements) while her husband is absent from home;
10. Not to resort to the houses of strangers (during the absence of her husband);

custom of Svayamvara or 'self-choice,' judging from the epics, was confined to females of the kingly caste, and in reality was no doubt of very rare occurrence.

XXV. 1-13. Colebrooke, Dig. IV, 2, XCII. — 2. M.V, 154; Y. I, 77. — 3. Y. I, 83. — 4-6. M.V, 150; Y. I, 83. — 9, 10. M. IX, 75; Y. I, 84. — 12, 13. M.V, 148; IX, 3; Y. I, 85; Gaut. XVIII, 1. — 14. M.V, 158; Colebrooke, Dig. IV, 3, CXXXIII. — 15. M.V, 155. — 17. M.V, 160. 15 is also found in the Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa XVI, 61, and, in a modified form, in other works. See Böhlingk, Ind. Sprüche, 3686, 3679. 16 is also found, in a modified form, in Vṛiddhātākhyā's Proverbs XVII, 9; and 17 in Sārṅgadhara's Paddhati, Sadātāra, 10. See Böhlingk, Ind. Sprüche, 3900, 4948.

10. 'Strangers' means any other persons than her parents-in-law, her brother, maternal uncle, and other near relatives. (Nand.)

11. Not to stand near the doorway or by the windows (of her house);

12. Not to act by herself in any matter ;

13. To remain subject, in her infancy, to her father; in her youth, to her husband; and in her old age, to her sons.

14. After the death of her husband, to preserve her chastity, or to ascend the pile after him.

15. No sacrifice, no penance, and no fasting is allowed to women apart from their husbands; to pay obedience to her lord is the only means for a woman to obtain bliss in heaven.

16. A woman who keeps a fast or performs a penance in the lifetime of her lord, deprives her husband of his life, and will go to hell.

17. A good wife, who perseveres in a chaste life after the death of her lord, will go to heaven like (perpetual) students, even though she has no son.

XXVI.

1. If a man has several wives of his own caste,

14. Nand. states that the self-immolation of widows (Sattee) is a specially meritorious act, and not obligatory. Besides, he quotes several passages from other Smritis and from the Bṛhannâradīya-purâṇa, to the effect that in case the husband should have died abroad, a widow of his, who belongs to the Brâhmaṇa caste, may not commit herself to the flames, unless she can reach the place, where his corpse lies, in a day; and that one who is in her courses, or pregnant, or whose pregnancy is suspected, or who has an infant child, is also forbidden to burn herself with her dead husband. English renderings of all the texts quoted by Nand. may be found in Colebrooke's Essay on the Duties of a Faithful Hindu Widow. See also above, XX, 39. Nand., arguing from a passage of Bau-dhâyana, takes the particle vâ, 'or,' to imply that the widow is at liberty to become a female ascetic instead of burning herself.

XXVI. 2. M. IX, 86. — 4. M. IX, 87. — 1-4. Colebrooke, Dig.

he shall perform his religious duties together with the eldest (or first-married) wife.

2. (If he has several) wives of divers castes (he shall perform them) even with the youngest wife if she is of the same caste as himself.

3. On failure of a wife of his own caste (he shall perform them) with one belonging to the caste next below his own; so also in cases of distress (i. e. when the wife who is equal in caste to him happens to be absent, or when she has met with a calamity);

4. But no twice-born man ever with a Sûdra wife.

5. A union of a twice-born man with a Sûdra wife can never produce religious merit; it is from carnal desire only that he marries her, being blinded by lust.

6. Men of the three first castes, who through folly marry a woman of the lowest caste, quickly degrade their families and progeny to the state of Sûdras.

7. If his oblations to the gods and manes and (his hospitable attentions) to guests are offered principally through her hands, the gods and manes (and the guests) will not eat such offerings, and he will not go to heaven.

XXVII.

1. The Nishekakarman (ceremony of impregna-

IV, 1, XLIX. — 5-7. M. III, 12, 14, 15, 18; Y. I, 56; Weber, Ind. Stud. X, 74. — 7. Colebrooke, Dig. IV, 1, LII.

XXVII. 1-14. Âsv. I, 4-18; Gobh. II, 1-9; Pâr. I, 4-II, 1; Sâñkh. I, 12-28; M. II, 29-35, 66, 67; Y. I, 11-13; Gaut. VIII, 14. — 15-24, 26, 27. Weber, Ind. Stud. X, 21; M. II, 38-47; Y. I, tion) must be performed when the season fit for procreating children¹ distinctly appears (for the first time).

2. The Pumsavana (ceremony to cause the birth of a male) must be performed before the embryo begins to move.

3. The Sîmantonnayana (ceremony of parting the hair) should take place in the sixth or eighth month (of pregnancy).

4. The Gâtakarman (birth-ceremony) should take place on the birth of the child.

5. The Nâmadheya (naming-rite) must be performed as soon as the term of impurity (caused by the birth of the child) is over.

6. (The name to be chosen should be) auspicious in the case of a Brâhmana;

7. Indicating power in the case of a Kshatriya;

8. Indicating wealth in the case of a Vaisya;

9. Indicating contempt in the case of a Sûdra.

14, 37, 38; Âpast. I, 1, 1, 18-21; I, 1, 2, 33-3, 6; Gaut. I, 5, 11-26. — 25. Weber, Ind. Stud. X, 22; M. II, 49; Y. I, 30; Âpast. I, 1, 3, 28-30; Gaut. II, 36. — 28, 29. M. II, 174, 64.

1. ¹ 'Garbha' here means 'ritu,' i.e. the time favourable for procreation, following immediately upon the menstrual evacuation, and the above ceremony should be performed once only, in order to consecrate the mother once for all. (Nand.)

2, 3. The embryo begins to move in the fourth month of pregnancy, and the Pumsavana must be performed in the second or third month of every pregnancy. Thus Nand., who combats expressly the opinion that this ceremony has the consecration of the mother, and not the consecration of the foetus, for its object. Regarding the Sîmantonnayana he seems to consider both views as admissible. According to the former view it would have to be performed only once, like the Nishekakarman.

6-9. Nand. quotes as instances of such names: 1. Lakshmîdhara; 2. Yudhishthîra; 3. Arthapati; 4. Lokadâsa; or (observing,

10. The Âdityadarsana (ceremony of taking the child out to see the sun) should take place in the fourth month (after birth).

11. The Annaprâsana (ceremony of first feeding) should take place in the sixth month.

12. The Kûdâkarana (tonsure rite) should take place in the third year¹.

13. For female children the same ceremonies, (beginning with the birth ceremony, should be performed, but) without Mantras.

14. The marriage ceremony only has to be performed with Mantras for them.

15. The initiation of Brâhmaṇas (should take place) in the eighth year after conception¹;

16. Of Kshatriyas, in the eleventh year after conception¹;

17. Of Vaisyas, in the twelfth year after conception¹;

18. Their girdles should be made of Muṅga grass, a bow-string, and Bâlbaga (coarse grass) respectively.

19. Their sacrificial strings and their garments should be made of cotton, hemp, and wool respectively.

at the same time, another rule regarding the second part of a compound name), 1. Vishṇuśarman; 2. Bhîmavarman; 3. Devagupta; 4. Dharmadâsa.

10. According to Nand., who quotes a passage of Yama in support of his opinion, this Sûtra has to be divided into two, which would, however, require several words to complete their sense, the import of the first being, that the child should be taken out to see the sun in the third month, and to see the moon in the fourth month. See the Introduction.

12. ¹ 'The third year,' i. e. either after conception, or after birth. (Nand.)

15-17. ¹ Nand., 'or after birth.' See Pâr. and Âsv. loc. cit.

20. The skins (which they wear) should be those of a black antelope, of a tiger, and of a he-goat respectively.

21. Their staves should be made of Palâsa, Khadira, and Udumbara wood respectively.

22. Their staves should be of such a length as to reach the hair, the forehead, and the nose respectively.

23. Or all (kinds of staves may be used for all castes indiscriminately).

24. And they should not be crooked, nor should the bark be stripped off.

25. In begging alms, they should put in the word 'Lady' at the beginning, in the middle, and at the end of their request (according to their caste).

26. The ceremony of initiation must not be delayed beyond the sixteenth year in the case of a Brâhmana; beyond the twenty-second, in the case of a Kshatriya; and beyond the twenty-fourth, in the case of a Vaisya.

27. After that, the youths belonging to any of those three castes, who have not been initiated at the proper time, are excluded from initiation, and contemned by the twice-born, and are called Vrâtyas.

28. That skin, that cord, that girdle, that staff, and that garment which has been given to any one (on his initiation), that he must for ever wear when performing any religious observance.

29. His girdle, his skin, his staff, his string, and his ewer he must throw into the water when broken (or spoiled by use), and receive others consecrated with Mantras.

XXVIII.

1. Now¹ students shall dwell at their Guru's (spiritual teacher's) house.

2. They shall recite their morning and evening prayers.

3. (A student) shall mutter the morning prayer standing, and the evening prayer sitting.

4. He shall perform twice a day (in the mornings and evenings) the religious acts of sprinkling the ground (round the altar) and of putting fuel on the fire.

5. He must plunge into the waters like a stick.

XXVIII. passim. Âsv. Grîhya-s. I, 22; III, 7-9; Gobh. Grîhya-s. II, 10, 42-III, 4; Pâr. Grîhya-s. II, 4-6; Sânkh. Grîhya-s. II, 6, 9-12; III, 1. — 1. Âpast. I, 1, 2, 11. — 3. M. II, 101; Y. I. 24, 25; Gaut. II, 11. — 4. M. II, 108; Y. I. 25; Âpast. I, 1, 4, 16. — 5. Âpast. I, 1, 2, 30. — 6, 7. M. II, 73, 182; Y. I. 27; Âpast. I, 2, 5, 27; I, 1, 4, 23; Gaut. I, 54; II, 29, 30. — 8. M. II, 41-47; Y. I. 29; Âpast. I, 1, 2, 33-I, 1, 3, 10; Gaut. I, 15, 16, 22. — 9, 10. M. II, 183, 184, 51; Y. I. 29, 31; Âpast. I, 1, 3, 25, 32; Gaut. II, 35, 37-39. — 11, 12. M. II, 177-179, &c.; Y. I. 33, &c.; Âpast. I, 1, 2, 23-28, &c.; Gaut. II, 13, &c. — 13-23. M. II, 194, 71, 72, 122-124, 195-198; Âpast. I, 2, 4, 28; I, 2, 5, 12, 23; I, 2, 6, 5-9, 14; Gaut. II, 21, 25-28; I, 52; II, 14. — 17. Y. I. 26. — 24-26. M. II, 199, 200. — 27, 28. M. II, 204; Âpast. I, 2, 8, 11, 13. — 29, 30. M. II, 205; Âpast. I, 2, 8, 19-21. — 31-33. M. II, 208, 209; Âpast. I, 2, 7, 28, 30; Gaut. II, 31, 32. — 34-36. M. III, 2; II, 168. — 37-40. M. II, 169-172; Y. II. 39; Âpast. I, 1, 1, 15-17; Gaut. I, 8. — 41. M. II, 219; Âpast. I, 1, 2, 31, 32; Gaut. I, 27. — 42. M. II, 245; Y. I. 51; Âpast. I, 11, 30, 1; Gaut. IX, 1. — 43-46. M. II, 243, 247, 248; Y. I. 49; Âpast. I, 2, 4, 29; Gaut. II, 5-8. — 47. M. II, 249; Gaut. III, 9. — 48-53. M. XI, 121, 123, 124; II, 181, 187, 220. — 51, 52. Y. III. 278, 281; Gaut. XXIII, 20.

1. 'I.e. after the performance of the initiation ceremony.' (Nand.)

5. The sense of this injunction, according to Nand., is, that he must not pronounce any bathing Mantras. But more probably it

6. Let him study when called (by his teacher).
7. He shall act so as to please his Guru (spiritual teacher) and to be serviceable to him.
8. He shall wear his girdle, his staff, his skin, and his sacrificial string.
9. He shall go begging at the houses of virtuous persons, excepting those of his Guru's (and of his own) relatives.
10. He may eat (every morning and evening) some of the food collected by begging, after having received permission to do so from his Guru.
11. He must avoid Srâddhas, factitious salt, food turned sour ¹, stale food, dancing, singing, women, honey, meat, ointments, remnants of the food (of other persons than his teacher), the killing of living beings, and rude speeches.
12. He must occupy a low couch.
13. He must rise before his Guru and go to rest after him.
14. He must salute his Guru, after having performed his morning devotion.
15. Let him embrace his feet with crossed hands, is meant, that he shall swim motionless like a stick (see Âpast. I, 1, 2, 30, with Dr. Bühler's note). According to a third explanation, which is mentioned both by Haradatta and by Devapâla in his Commentary on the Kâṇḍaka Gr̥hya-sūtra, the sense would be, that he is not allowed, while bathing, to rub his skin, in order to clean himself, with bathing powder and the like.

11. ¹ Nand. interprets sukta, 'food turned sour,' by 'rude speeches,' because if taken in its other meaning, it would be included in the next term, paryushita, 'stale food.' However, if Nand.'s interpretation were followed, it would coincide with the last term of this enumeration, aśīla, 'rude speeches;' and its position between two articles of food renders the above interpretation more plausible.

16. The right foot with his right hand, and the left foot with his left.

17. After the salutation (abhivâdaye, 'I salute') he must mention his own name and add the word 'bhos' (Venerable Sir) at the end of his address.

18. He must not speak to his Guru while he is himself standing, or sitting, or lying, or eating, or averting his face.

19. And let him speak, if his teacher sits, standing up; if he walks, advancing towards him; if he is coming near, meeting him; if he runs, running after him;

20. If his face is averted, turning round so as to face him;

21. If he is at some distance, approaching him;

22. If he is in a reclining position, bending to him;

23. Let him not sit in a careless attitude (such as e. g. having a cloth tied round his legs and knees, while sitting on his hams) before the eyes of his teacher.

24. Neither must he pronounce his mere name (without adding to it the word Śrī or a similar term at the beginning).

25. He must not mimic his gait, his manner, his speech, and so on.

26. Where his Guru is censured or foully belied, there let him not stay.

27. Nor must he sit on the same seat with him,

28. Unless it be on a rock¹, on a wooden bench, in a boat, or in a carriage.

28. ¹ Thus according to Kullûka (on M. II, 204). Nand. takes the term śilaphalaka as a compound denoting 'a stone seat.'

29. If his teacher's teacher is near, let him behave towards him as if he were his own teacher.

30. He must not salute his own Gurus without his teacher's leave.

31. Let him behave towards the son of his teacher, who teaches him the Veda, as towards his teacher, even though he be younger or of an equal age with himself ;

32. But he must not wash his feet,

33. Nor eat the leavings of his food.

34. Thus let him acquire by heart one Veda, or two Vedas, or (all) the Vedas.

35. Thereupon, the Vedângas (that treating of phonetics and the rest)¹.

36. He who, not having studied the Veda, applies himself to another study, will degrade himself, and his progeny with him, to the state of a Sûdra.

37. From the mother is the first birth ; the second, from the girding with the sacrificial string.

38. In the latter, the Sâvitṛī hymn¹ is his mother, and the teacher his father.

39. It is this which entitles members of the three higher castes to the designation of ' the twice-born.'

40. Previous to his being girded with the sacrificial string, a member of these castes is similar to a Sûdra (and not allowed to study the Veda).

30. Nand. here interprets Guru by ' a paternal uncle and the rest.'

31. This rule refers to a son of his spiritual teacher, who teaches him one or two chapters of the Veda, while the teacher himself is gone out for bathing or some such reason. Vâ, ' or,' is added in order to include a son of the teacher, who is himself a pupil, as Manu (II, 208) says. (Nand.)

35. ¹ See Max Müller, Ancient Sanskrit Literature, p. 108 seq.

38. ¹ Rig-veda III, 62, 10.

41. A student shall shave all his hair, or wear it tied in one lock.

42. After having mastered the Veda, let him take leave of his teacher and bathe, after having presented him with a gift.

43. Or let him spend the remainder of his life at his teacher's house.

44. If, while he is living there, his teacher should die, let him behave to his teacher's son as towards his teacher himself;

45. Or¹ towards one of his wives, who is equal to him in caste.

46. On failure of such, let him pay homage to the fire, and live as a perpetual student.

47. A Brâhmana who passes thus without tiring (of the discharge of his duties) the time of his studentship will attain to the most exalted heavenly abode (that of Brahman) after his death, and will not be born again in this world.

48. A voluntary effusion of the semen by a twice-born youth (in sexual intercourse with a woman), during the period of his studentship, has been pronounced a transgression of the rule prescribed for students by expounders of the Vedas well acquainted with the system of duties.

49. Having loaded himself with that crime, he must go begging to seven houses, clothed only with the skin of an ass, and proclaiming his deed.

42. After the solemn bath (see Âsv. III, 8, 9; Gobh. III, 4; Pâr. II, 6; Sâñkh. III, 1), which terminates the period of studentship, the student, who is henceforth called Snâtaka, 'one who has bathed,' is allowed to return home.

45. ¹ According to Nand., the particle vâ, 'or,' is used in order to include another alternative, that of living with an old fellow-student, as directed by Gautama, III, 8.

50. Eating once a day only a meal consisting of the alms obtained at those (houses), and bathing at the three Savanas (dawn, noon, and evening), he will be absolved from guilt at the end of the year.

51. After an involuntary effusion of the semen during sleep, a twice-born student must bathe (on the next morning), worship the sun (by offerings of perfumes and the like), and mutter three times the Mantra, 'Again shall my strength return to me¹.'

52. He who for seven days omits to collect alms and to kindle the sacred fire, must perform the penance of an Avakīrṇin (breaker of his vow), provided that he has not been prevented from the discharge of his duties by an illness.

53. If the sun should rise or set while a student is purposely indulging in sleep, ignoring (the precepts of law), he must fast for a day, muttering (the Gâyatrī one thousand and eight times).

XXIX.

1. He who having initiated a youth and instructed him in the Vratas¹, teaches him (one branch of) the Veda (together with its Āṅgas, such as that relating to phonetics, and the rest) is called Ātārya (teacher).

51. ¹ Taitt. Āraṇy. I, 30.

XXIX. 1. Āpast. I, 1, 1, 13; Gaut. I, 9. — 1-3. M. II, 140-143; Y. I, 34, 35. — 7-10. M. II, 111, 112, 114, 115. — 9, 10. See Bühler, Introd. to Digest, p. xxix.

1. The Vratas of a student are certain observances to be kept by him before he is admitted to the regular course of study of the Veda, and again before he is allowed to proceed to the study of the Mahānāmṇī verses and to the other higher stages of Vedic learning. See, particularly, Sāṅkh. II, 11, 12, with Dr. Oldenberg's note (Ind. Stud. XV, 139).

2. He who teaches him (after he has been initiated by another) either (an entire branch of the Veda) in consideration of a fee, or part of a Veda (without taking a fee), is called Upâdhyâya (sub-teacher).

3. He who performs sacrifices (whether based upon Sruti or upon Smṛiti) is called Ritvig (officiating priest).

4. He must not engage a priest for the performance of sacrifices without having ascertained (his descent, character, and conduct).

5. Neither must he admit to his teaching (one whom he does not know).

6. And he must not initiate such a one.

7. If one answers improperly, or the other asks improperly¹, that one (or both) will perish or incur hatred.

8. If by instructing a pupil neither religious merit nor wealth are acquired, and if no sufficient attention is to be obtained from him (for his teacher's words), in such soil divine knowledge must not be sown : it would perish like fine seed in barren soil.

9. The deity of sacred knowledge approached a Brâhmana (and said to him), 'Preserve me, I am thy treasure, reveal me not to a scorner, nor to a wicked man, nor to one of uncontrolled passions : thus I shall be strong.

10. 'Reveal me to him, as to a keeper of thy gem, O Brâhmana, whom thou shalt know to be pure, attentive, possessed of a good memory, and chaste, who will not grieve thee, nor revile thee.'

7. ¹A proper question is, e. g. if the pupil modestly says, 'I don't know about this, therefore I want to be instructed.' An improper question is, e. g. if he says, 'Why do you pronounce this thus wrongly?' An improper answer is an answer to an improper question. (Nand.)

XXX.

1. After having performed the Upâkarman ceremony on the full moon of the month Srâvana, or of the month Bhâdra, the student must (pass over the two next days without studying, and then) study for four months and a half.

2. After that, the teacher must perform out of town the ceremony of Utsarga for those students (that have acted up to this injunction); but not for those who have failed to perform the ceremony of Upâkarman.

3. During the period (subsequent upon the ceremony of Upâkarman and) intermediate between it and the ceremony of Utsarga, the student must read the Vedângas.

4. He must interrupt his study for a day and a night on the fourteenth and eighth days of a month¹.

5. (He must interrupt his study for the next day

XXX. 1-33. Weber, Ind. Stud. X, 130-134; Nakshatras II, 322, 338-339; M. IV, 95-123; II, 71, 74; Y. I, 142-151; Âpast. I, 3, 9-11; Gaut. XVI; I, 51, 53. — 33-38. Âsv. III, 3, 3; M. II, 107; Y. I, 41-46. — 41, 42. M. II, 116. — 43-46. M. II, 117, 146-148, 144.

1-3. The annual course of Vedic studies opens with a ceremony called Upâkarman, and closes with a ceremony called Utsarga. The latter, according to the rule laid down in Sûtra 1, would fall upon the first day of the moon's increase, either in Pausha or in Mâgha. Nand. states that those students who have not performed the Upâkarman ceremony in due time must perform a penance before they can be admitted to the Utsarga; nor must those be admitted to it who have failed to go on to the study of another branch of the Veda at the ordinary time, after having absolved one.

4. ¹ Nand., with reference to a passage of Hârîta, considers the use of the plural and of the particle kā to imply that the study must also be interrupted on the first and fifteenth days.

5. ¹ This refers to the second days of the months Phâlguna, Âshâdha, and Kârttika. (Nand.)

and night) after a season of the year has begun¹,
(and for three nights) after an eclipse of the moon.

6. (He must not study for a day and a night)
when Indra's flag is hoisted or taken down.

7. (He must not study) when a strong wind is going.

8. (He must not study for three days) when rain, lightning, and thunder happen out of season¹.

9. (He must not study till the same hour next day) in the case of an earthquake, of the fall of a meteor, and when the horizon is preternaturally red, as if on fire.

10. (He must not study) in a village in which a corpse lies ;

11. Nor during a battle ;

12. Nor while dogs are barking, jackals yelling, or asses braying ;

13. Nor while the sound of a musical instrument is being heard ;

14. Nor while Sûdras or outcasts are near ;

15. Nor in the vicinity of a temple, of a burial-ground, of a place where four ways meet, or of a high road ;

16. Nor while immersed in water ;

17. Nor with his foot placed upon a bench ;

18. Nor while riding upon an elephant, a horse, or a camel, (or in a carriage drawn by any of those animals), or being borne in a boat, or in a carriage drawn by oxen ;

19. Nor after having vomited ;

8. ¹ 'I. e. not during the rains.' (Nand.)

12. Nand. considers the term śva, 'dog,' to include all the other animals mentioned by Âpastamba, I, 3, 10, 17.

19-21. After having vomited or been purged, he shall interrupt

20. Nor after having been purged ;
21. Nor during an indigestion.
22. When a five-toed animal has passed between the teacher and the pupil (the latter must interrupt his study for a day and a night).
23. When a king or a learned Brâhmana (who has mastered one Veda), or a cow, or a Brâhmana (in general) has met with an accident (he must not study).
24. After the Upâkarman (he must not study for three days).
25. And after the Utsarga (he must interrupt his study for as many days).
26. And (he must avoid to study) the hymns of the Rîg-veda, or those of the Yagur-veda, while the Sâman melodies are being chanted.
27. Let him not lie down to sleep again when he has begun to study in the second half of the night.
28. Let him avoid studying at times when there ought to be an intermission of study, even though a question has been put to him (by his teacher) ;

his study for a day and a night ; when suffering from indigestion, till he has digested his food. (Nand.)

22. According to Nand., the interruption of study is to last for two days, when a crow, or an owl, or a wild cock, or a mouse, or a frog, and the like animals have passed ; and for three days, when a dog, or an ichneumon, or a snake, or a frog (sic), or a cat has passed. He quotes Gaut. I, 59 in support of his interpretation. I have translated according to M. IV, 126 ; Y. I, 147.

23. In these cases the study shall not be taken up again till the accident has been appeased by propitiatory rites. If any of the persons in question has died, the interruption is to last for a day and a night, in case they were persons of little merit ; but in case they should have been very virtuous, it is to last for three days. (Nand.)

28. Every lesson consists of questions put by the teacher and the pupil's answers to them.

29. Since to study on forbidden days neither benefits him in this nor in the other world.

30. To study on such days destroys the life of both teacher and pupil.

31. Therefore should a teacher, who wishes to obtain the world of Brahman, avoid improper days, and sow (on proper days) the seed of sacred knowledge on soil consisting of virtuous pupils.

32. At the beginning and at the end of the lecture let the pupil embrace his teacher's feet ;

33. And let him pronounce the sacred syllable Om.

34. Now he who studies the hymns of the Rig-veda (regularly), feeds the manes with clarified butter.

35. He who studies the Yagus texts, (feeds them) with honey.

36. He who studies the Sâman melodies, (feeds them) with milk.

37. He who studies the Atharva-veda, (feeds them) with meat.

38. He who studies the Purâṇas, Itihâsas, Vedâṅgas, and the Institutes of Sacred Law, feeds them with rice.

39. He who having collected sacred knowledge, gains his substance by it in this world, will derive no benefit from it in the world to come.

33. Nand., quoting a passage of Yama, states the particle ka to imply that the pupil must touch the ground, after having pronounced the syllable Om.

38. Nand. considers the use of a Dvandva compound to imply that logic (Nyâya) and the Mīmāṃsâ system of philosophy are also intended in this Sûtra. Regarding the meaning of the terms Purâṇa and Itihâsa, see Max Müller, Ancient Sanskrit Literature, p. 40 seq.

39. This rule cannot refer to teaching for a reward, because

40. Neither will he (derive such benefit from it), who uses his knowledge in order to destroy the reputation of others (by defeating them in argument).

41. Let no one acquire sacred knowledge, without his teacher's permission, from another who is studying divine science.

42. Acquiring it in that way constitutes theft of the Veda, and will bring him into hell.

43. Let (a student) never grieve that man from whom he has obtained worldly knowledge (relating to poetry, rhetoric, and the like subjects), sacred knowledge (relating to the Vedas and Vedāṅgas), or knowledge of the Supreme Spirit.

44. Of the natural progenitor and the teacher who imparts the Veda to him, the giver of the Veda is the more venerable father; for it is the new existence acquired by his initiation in the Veda, which will last him both in this life and the next.

45. Let him consider as a merely human existence that which he owes to his father and mother uniting from carnal desire and to his being born from his mother's womb.

46. That existence which his teacher, who knows all the Vedas, effects for him through the prescribed rites of initiation with (his divine mother) the Gâyatrī, is a true existence; that existence is exempt from age and death.

47. He who fills his ears with holy truths, who that is a minor offence (upapâtaka ; see below, XXXVII, 20); nor can it refer to teaching in general, because it is lawful to gain one's substance by it; but it refers to those who recite the Veda in behalf of another, and live by doing so. (Nand.)

41. See XXVIII, 6, and the preceding note.

frees him from all pain (in this world and the next), and confers immortality (or final liberation) upon him, that man let the student consider as his (true) father and mother : gratefully acknowledging the debt he owes him, he must never grieve him.

XXXI.

1. A man has three Atigurus (or specially venerable superiors) :

2. His father, his mother, and his spiritual teacher.

3. To them he must always pay obedience.

4. What they say, that he must do.

5. And he must do what is agreeable and serviceable to them.

6. Let him never do anything without their leave.

7. Those three are equal to the three Vedas (Rig-veda, Sâma-veda, and Yagur-veda), they are equal to the three gods (Brahman, Vishnu, and Siva), they are equal to the three worlds (of men, of gods, and of Brahman), they are equal to the three fires.

8. The father is the Gârhapatya (or household) fire, the mother is the Dakshina (or ceremonial) fire, and the spiritual teacher is the Âhavanîya (or sacrificial) fire.

9. He pays regard to all his duties, who pays regard to those three ; he who shows no regard to

XXXI. 1-6. M. II, 225, 226, 228, 229 ; Âpast. I, 4, 14, 6 ; Gaut. II, 50, 51. — 7. M. II, 230. — 8. M. II, 231 ; Âpast. I, 1, 3, 44. — 9. M. II, 234. — 10. M. II, 233.

9. 'The father is said to be of the same nature as the Gârhapatya fire, because the Âhavanîya is produced from it ; the mother is said to be of the same nature as the Dakshina fire, because it them, derives no benefit from any religious observance.

10. By honouring his mother, he gains the present world; by honouring his father, the world of gods; and by paying strict obedience to his spiritual teacher, the world of Brahman.

XXXII.

1. A king, a priest, a learned Brâhmaṇa, one who stops wicked proceedings, an Upâdhyâya, a paternal uncle, a maternal grandfather, a maternal uncle, a father-in-law, an eldest brother, and¹ the parents-in-law of a son or a daughter are equal to a teacher;

2. And so are their wives, who are equal in caste to them.

3. And their mother's sister, their father's sister, and¹ their eldest sister.

4. A father-in-law, a paternal uncle, a maternal has a separate origin, or because she has the sacrificial implements, such as the pestle and mortar and the like, in her charge; and the spiritual teacher is said to be of the same nature as the Âhavanîya fire, because all oblations fall to his share, as the Smṛiti says (Y. I, 27), "Let him (the pupil) deliver to him (the teacher) the collected alms." (Nand.)

XXXII. 1. M. II, 206. — 2. M. II, 210. — 3. M. II, 131. — 4. M. II, 130; Âpast. I, 4, 14, 11. — 5, 6. M. II, 210, 211; Âpast. I, 2, 7, 27; Gaut. II, 31, 32. — 7. M. II, 129. — 8, 9. M. XI, 205; Y. III, 292. — 10. Âpast. I, 1, 2, 20. — 11, 12. M. II, 201; Âpast. I, 2, 8, 15. — 13. M. II, 212; Gaut. II, 34. — 14. M. II, 216. — 15. M. II, 217; Gaut. II, 33; VI, 2. — 16. M. II, 136; Gaut. VI, 20. — 17. M. II, 135; Âpast. I, 4, 14, 25. — 18. M. II, 155.

1. ¹ The particle ka is used here, according to Nand., in order to include a paternal grandfather and other persons mentioned in a Smṛiti.

3. ¹ The particle ka here refers, according to Nand., to the paternal grandmother and others mentioned in a Smṛiti.

uncle, and a priest he must honour by rising to meet and saluting them, even though they be younger than himself.

5. The wives of Gurus (superiors), who are of a lower class than their husbands (such as Kshatriya or Vaisya or Mûrdhâvasikta wives), shall be honoured by (rising to meet and) saluting them from far; but he must not embrace their feet.

6. He should avoid to rub and anoint the limbs of Guru's wives, or to anoint their eyes, or to arrange their hair, or to wash their feet, or to do other such services for them.

7. To the wife of another, even though he does not know her, he must either say 'sister' (if she is of equal age with himself), or 'daughter' (if she is younger than himself), or 'mother' (if she is older than himself).

8. Let him not say 'thou' to his Gurus (superiors).

9. If he has offended one of them (by saying 'thou' to him, or in some other manner), he must keep a fast and not eat again till the end of the day, after having obtained his forgiveness.

10. He must avoid to quarrel with his spiritual teacher and to argue with him (from emulation).

11. And he must not censure him;

5. Sûdra wives are exempt from this rule; he should rise to meet, but not salute them. (Nand.)

8. ¹Other insulting language, as e. g. if he says hush or pish to them, is also included in this term. The use of the particle ka indicates that other persons entitled to respect are also intended in this Sûtra. (Nand.)

10. 'The particle ka is used in order to include Brâhmanas in general in this prohibition.' (Nand.)

11. 'The use of the particle ka shows that defamatory speeches are also intended.' (Nand.)

12. Nor act so as to displease him.

13. (A pupil) must not embrace the feet of a Guru's young wife, if he has completed his twentieth year, or can distinguish virtue from vice.

14. But a young student may at pleasure prostrate himself before a young wife of his Guru, (stretching out both hands) as ordained (see XXVIII, 15), saying, 'I, N. N. (ho! salute thee).'

15. On returning from a journey he shall (once) embrace the feet of the wives of his Gurus (superiors), and daily salute them, remembering the practice of the virtuous.

16. Wealth, kindred, age, the performance of religious observances, and, fifthly, sacred knowledge are titles to respect; each subsequent one is superior to the one preceding in order.

17. A Brâhmana, though only ten years old¹, and a member of the kingly caste, though a hundred years old, must be considered as father and son; and of these two, the Brâhmana is the father.

18. The seniority of Brâhmanas is founded upon sacred knowledge; of Kshatriyas, upon valour in arms; of Vaisyas, upon grain and (other) wealth; of Sûdras, upon (priority of) birth.

XXXIII.

1. Now man has three most dangerous enemies, called carnal desire, wrath, and greed.

17. ¹ I. e. a Brâhmana for whom the ceremony of initiation has been performed. (Nand.) This proverb is also found in the Nîti-sâstra 155, in the Mahâbhârata II, 1385 seq., &c., and in other works. See Böhrling, Ind. Sprüche, 6163, 2456, &c.

XXXIII. 1. Âpast. I, 8, 23, 4, 5.

1. The mention which has been made in the preceding section, that on Âkâra or rules of conduct, of the breach of the vow of

2. They are specially dangerous to the order of householders, because they have (houses, wives, and other) property.

3. Man, being overcome by those (three enemies), commits crimes in the highest degree, high crimes, minor crimes, and crimes in the fourth degree ;

4. Also crimes effecting loss of caste, crimes degrading to a mixed caste, and crimes rendering the perpetrator unworthy (to receive alms and the like);

5. And crimes causing defilement, and miscellaneous offences.

6. This is the threefold path to hell, destructive of self : carnal desire, wrath, and greed : therefore must a man shun those three vices.

XXXIV.

1. Sexual connection with one's mother, or daughter, or daughter-in-law are crimes in the highest degree.

2. Such criminals in the highest degree should proceed into the flames ; for there is not any other way to atone for their crime.

XXXV.

1. Killing a Brâhmana, drinking spirituous liquor, chastity and the penance for it (see XXVIII, 48, 49), causes him (Vishnu) to discuss the law of penance (Prâyasakitta). This is done in the following section, to which Chapter XXXIV serves as Introduction. (Nand.) The section on Prâyasakitta extends as far as Chapter LVII.

6. This proverb is also found in the Bhagavad-gîtâ, XVI, 21, and in the Mahâbhârata, V, 1036. See Böhlingk, Ind. Sprüche, 2645.

XXXV. 1. M. IX, 235 ; XI, 55 ; Y. III, 227 ; Âpast. I, 7, 21, 8 ; Gaut. XXI, 1. — 2, 3. M. XI, 181 ; Y. III, 227, 261 ; Gaut. XXI, 3. — 4. M. XI, 181.

stealing the gold of a Brâhmana, and sexual connection with a Guru's wife are high crimes.

2. And social intercourse with such (criminals is also a high crime).

3. He who associates with an outcast is outcasted himself after a year;

4. And so is he who rides in the same carriage with him, or who eats in his company, or who sits on the same bench, or who lies on the same couch with him.

5. Sexual intercourse, intercourse in sacrificing, and intercourse by the mouth (with an outcast) entails immediate loss of caste.

6. Such mortal sinners are purified by a horse-sacrifice and by visiting all Tîrthas (places of pilgrimage) on earth.

XXXVI.

1. Killing a Kshatriya or Vaisya engaged in a sacrifice, or a woman in her courses, or a pregnant woman, or a woman (of the Brâhmana caste) who has bathed after temporary uncleanness¹, or an embryo

5. 'Intercourse of marriage' means sexual connection with an outcasted man or woman, or giving a damsel in marriage to an outcasted man. 'Intercourse in sacrificing' means sacrificing for, or with, an outcast. 'Mouthly intercourse' means teaching, or being taught by, or studying together with, an outcast. The present rule holds good in cases of voluntary intercourse only; if the intercourse was involuntary, the loss of caste does not follow till after a year. Others assert that the immediate loss of caste is entailed by particularly intimate intercourse only. (Nand.)

XXXVI. 1. M. XI, 88; Y. III, 251; Âpast. I, 9, 24, 6, 8, 9. — 2-7. M. XI, 57-59, 171, 172; Y. III, 228-233. — 2. Gaut. XXI, 10. — 5. Gaut. XXI, 1. — 7. Âpast. I, 7, 21, 9.

1. ¹ The term âtreya (atrigotrâ) has been translated here and in of unknown sex, or one come for protection, are crimes equal to the crime of killing a Brâhmana.

2. Giving false evidence and killing a friend : these two crimes are equal to the drinking of spirituous liquor.

3. Appropriating to one's self land belonging to a Brâhmana or a deposit (belonging to a Brâhmana and not consisting of gold) are crimes equal to a theft of gold (belonging to a Brâhmana).

4. Sexual connection with the wife of a paternal uncle, of a maternal grandfather, of a maternal uncle, of a father-in-law, or of the king, are crimes equal to sexual connection with a Guru's wife ;

5. And so is sexual intercourse with the father's or mother's sister and with one's own sister ;

6. And sexual connection with the wife of a learned Brâhmana, or a priest, or an Upâdhyâya, or a friend ;

7. And with a sister's female friend (or with one's own female friend), with a woman of one's own race, with a woman belonging to the Brâhmana caste, with a (Brâhmana) maiden (who is not yet betrothed to a man), with a low-caste woman, with a woman in her courses, with a woman come for protection, other places in accordance with that interpretation which is sanctioned by the majority among the commentators of law works. Nand., on the other hand, gives the preference to the opinion of those who render it by 'a woman descended from or married to a man of the race of Atri.'

2. 'The term etau, "these," is used in order to include the forgetting of Veda texts and other crimes, which are mentioned as equal to drinking spirituous liquor by Manu (XI, 57) and Yâgñavalkya (III, 229).' (Nand.)

5. 'The particle ka in this Sûtra refers to little girls, as ordained by Manu, XI, 59.' (Nand.)

with a female ascetic, and with a woman entrusted to one's own care.

8. Such minor offenders become pure, like mortal sinners, by a horse-sacrifice and by visiting Tīrthas.

XXXVII.

1. Setting one's self up by false statements (as by saying, 'I have done this,' or the like).

2. Making statements, which will reach the ears of the king, regarding a (minor) offence committed by some one;

3. Unjustly upbraiding a Guru (as by saying, 'You have neglected such a household duty');

4. Reviling the Veda;

5. Forgetting the Veda texts, which one has studied;

6. (Abandoning) one's holy fire, or one's father, mother, son, or wife;

XXXVII. 1-34. M. XI, 56, 57, 60-67; Y. III, 228-230, 234-242; Âpast. I, 7, 21, 12-17; Gaut. XXI, 11. — 35. M. XI, 118; Y. III, 265.

1. 'But if a man who does not know all the four Vedas says, in order to procure a valuable present or some other advantage, 'I know the four Vedas,' or if he says of another, his superior in caste or sacred knowledge, in order to prevent his receiving a valuable present, 'This man is no Brâhmaṇa,' or 'He does not know anything,' in all such cases his crime is equal to the killing of a Brâhmaṇa.' (Nand.)

2. 'But giving information of a heavy crime constitutes a crime equal to the killing of a Brâhmaṇa.' (Nand.)

3. Guru means 'father' here. Heavy reproaches, as e.g. if a son says to his father, 'You have made unequal shares in dividing the patrimony,' are equal to killing a Brâhmaṇa. (Nand.)

4. 'But atheistical detracting from the authority of the Veda constitutes a crime equal to the drinking of spirituous liquor.' (Nand.)

6. 'The use of the particle ka indicates that distant relatives are also intended here, as Yâgñavalkya, III, 239, states.' (Nand.)

7. Eating the food of those whose food may not be eaten, or forbidden food;

8. Appropriating to one's self (grain, copper, or other) goods of another man (but not his gold);

9. Sexual intercourse with another man's wife;

10. Sacrificing for persons for whom it is forbidden to sacrifice (such as Sûdras, persons for whom the initiation has not been performed, and the like);

11. To live by a forbidden occupation (as, if a Brâhmana lives by the occupation of a Kshatriya, or of a Vaisya).

12. Receiving unlawful presents;

13. Killing a Kshatriya, or a Vaisya, or a Sûdra, or a cow;

14. Selling articles that ought not to be sold (such as salt, lac, or others);

15. For an elder brother to suffer his younger brother to marry before him;

16. For a younger brother to marry, though his elder brother is not yet married;

17. To give a girl in marriage to either of those two (categories of offenders);

18. Or to perform the nuptial ceremony for them;

19. To allow the proper time for the ceremony of initiation to pass without being initiated;

10. 'But sacrificing for an outcast is a high crime.' (Nand.)

12. This rule refers to receiving presents from an outcast or other person, whose gifts must not be accepted, to receiving improper gifts, such as a ram, or a black antelope, and to receiving presents at an improper place, such as Kurukshetra, or at an improper time, such as during an eclipse of the sun. The particle ka further refers to giving instruction to those who are not entitled to receive it, as Yama mentions. (Nand.)

20. To teach the Veda for a reward (unless it be in an emergency);
21. To be taught by one who teaches the Veda for a reward (unless it be in an emergency);
22. To be employed (by the king's order) in the working of mines of any sort (whether gold mines, or silver mines, or others, or manufactories);
23. To make large (sharp) instruments (such as instruments for piercing an elephant's ear);
24. Cutting trees, shrubs, creepers, long climbing plants (such as vines), or herbs;
25. Living by (prostituting) one's own wife;
26. Trying to overcome another by incantations (tending to kill him), or by forcible means;
27. Performing the act (of cooking) for one's own sole benefit;
28. Not to have kindled one's own sacred fire;
29. Omitting to pay one's debts to the gods, Rishis, and manes (or sacrificing, study of the Veda, and propagation of one's race);
30. Studying irreligious books;
31. Atheism;
32. Subsisting by a reprehensible art (such as dancing);
33. Intercourse with women who drink spirits;
34. Thus have the crimes in the fourth degree been enumerated.

20. It is true that the above definition of an Upâdhyâya (XXIX, 2) implies that teaching the Veda for a fee is no reprehensible act; but that permission has reference to cases of distress only. (Nand.)

26. Nand. asserts that the particle ka is used here in order to include the performance of an Ahîna sacrifice and of the other sinful acts mentioned by Manu, XI, 198.

31. Atheism (nâstikatâ) consists in denying the existence of another life. (Nand.)

35. Such criminals in the fourth degree shall perform the Kândrâyana or Parâka penances, or shall sacrifice a cow (as the case may require).

XXXVIII.

1. Causing (bodily) pain to a Brâhmaṇa ;
2. Smelling at things which ought not to be smelt (such as excrements), or at spirituous liquor ;
3. Dishonest dealing ;
4. Sexual connection with cattle ;
5. And (sexual connection) with a man (or unnatural intercourse with a woman) :
6. Such are the crimes effecting loss of caste.
7. He who has knowingly committed one of the acts effecting loss of caste shall perform the *Sântapana*¹ penance ; he who has done so unawares shall perform the *Prâgâpatya*¹ penance.

XXXIX.

1. Killing domestic or wild animals are crimes degrading to a mixed caste.
2. He who has committed a crime degrading to a mixed caste shall eat barley-gruel for a month (if he has committed it knowingly), or perform the penance Krikkhrâtikrikkhra (if he has committed it unawares).

35. Regarding the penances called Kândrâyana and Parâka, see below, XLVIII and XLVII, 18.

XXXVIII. 1-6. M. XI, 68.

7. ¹ See XLVI, 19, 10.

XXXIX. 1. M. XI, 69.

2. Regarding the penance Krikkhrâtikrikkhra, see XLVI, 13.
 'The use of the causative form kârayet indicates that he may

XL.

1. Receiving anything from a (Mlekkha or other) despicable person (even though not as a present, but in the form of interest, &c.), traffic (even with articles that are not forbidden to sell), subsisting by money-lending (even without exceeding the legitimate rate of interest), telling lies (even though not in giving evidence), and serving a Sûdra (even though without doing servile acts for him) are crimes rendering unworthy to receive alms.

2. He who has committed a crime rendering unworthy to receive alms, is purified by the penance Taptakrikkhira (in case he committed it knowingly), or by the penance Sitakrikkhira (in case he did it unawares), or by the penance Mahâsântapana (in case it was committed) repeatedly.

XLI.

1. Killing birds, amphibious animals, and aquatic animals (such as fish);

2. And worms or insects;

3. Eating (nutmegs or other) plants similar to intoxicating drinks (in their effect upon the system):

perform the penance mentioned here through a substitute, if unable to perform it himself.' (Nand.)

XL. 1. M. XI, 70.

2. Regarding the penances mentioned here, see XLVI, 11, 12, 20.

XLI. 1-4. M. XI, 71.

3. 'Or the term madyânugata means hemp and the like.' (Nand.) Kullûka (on M. XI, 71) interprets it by 'what has been brought in the same basket or vessel with spirituous liquor;' Medâtithi, quoted by the same, by 'what has been defiled by spirituous liquor.' The rendering given in the text agrees with the first interpretation proposed by Nand.

4. Such are the crimes causing defilement.
5. The penance ordained for crimes causing defilement is the Taptakrikkhura penance (if they were committed unintentionally), or they shall be atoned for by the Krikkhrâtikrikkhura penance (if they were committed intentionally).

XLII.

1. Miscellaneous crimes are those which have not been mentioned before.
2. Having committed one out of the number of miscellaneous crimes, a prudent man should always perform a penance, by the advice of a Brâhmana, after the higher or less degree of his guilt has been ascertained.

XLIII.

1. Now follow the hells. (They are called :)
2. Tâmisra (darkness);
3. Andhatâmisra (complete darkness);
4. Raurava (place of howling);
5. Mahâraurava (place of much howling);
6. Kâlasûtra (thread of time or death);
7. Mahânaraka (great hell);
8. Saṅgîvana (restoring to life);
9. Avîki (waveless);

XLIII. 1-22. M. IV, 88-90; Y. III, 222-224. — 34. M. XII, 76.

4. Nand. derives the term Raurava from 'ruru, a kind of serpent.' But it seems preferable to connect it with the root ru, 'to howl.'

6. This hell is defined by Nand. as a kind of threshing-place, made of copper, burning hot, and measuring ten thousand Yoganās.

8. In this hell those who have perished in consequence of the tortures which they had to undergo are restored to life and tortured anew. (Nand.)

10. Tâpana (burning);
11. Sampratâpana (parching);
12. Samghâtaka (pressing together);
13. Kâkola (ravens);
14. Kudmala (bud);
15. Pâtimrittika (stinking clay);
16. Lohasaṅku (iron-spiked);
17. Rikîsha (frying-pan);
18. Vishamapanthâna (rough or uneven roads);
19. Kantakasâlmali (thorny Sâlmali trees);
20. Dîpanadi (flame river);
21. Asipattravana (sword-leaved forest);
22. Lohakâraka (iron fetters);
23. In each of those (hells) successively criminals in the highest degree, who have not performed the penance (prescribed for their crime), are tormented for the time of a Kalpa.
24. Mortal sinners (who have not done penance) for a Manvantara;
25. Minor offenders, for the same period;

12. In this hell a large number of individuals is packed up closely in a very narrow space. (Nand.)

13. In this hell the sinners are devoured by ravens. (Nand.)

14. In this hell the sinners are put in sacks, which are tied up at the end. (Nand.)

17. In this hell the sinners are roasted. (Nand.)

20. This river, which contains hot water, is called Vaitaraṇî, as it is said, 'The river called Vaitaraṇî has a stinking odour, is full of blood, and is moving on swiftly a torrent of hot water, carrying bones and hair in its course.' (Nand.) A detailed description of the river Vaitaraṇî may be found in the Gârûḍa-purâṇa, p. 8 (Bombay ed., 1863).

22. 'The particle iti is added here, in order to include in the above enumeration the hells called Savisha, Mahâpatha, Kumbhî-pâka, Taptabâluka, and the rest.' (Nand.) See Y. III, 223, 224; M. XII, 76.

26. Criminals in the fourth degree, for the period of a Katuryuga ;

27. Those who have committed a crime effecting loss of caste, for a thousand years ;

28. Those who have committed a crime degrading to a mixed caste, for the same period ;

29. Those likewise who have committed a crime rendering unworthy to receive alms and the like.

30. And those who have committed a crime causing defilement ;

31. Those who have committed one of the miscellaneous crimes, for a great number of years ;

32. All sinners who have committed (one of those nine kinds of) crimes have to suffer terrible pangs, when they have departed life and entered upon the path of Yama.

33. Being dragged hither and thither (upon even and uneven roads), by the dire ministers of Yama, they are conducted (to hell by them), with menacing gestures.

34. (There) they are devoured by dogs and jackals, by hawks, crows, herons, cranes, and other (carnivorous animals), by (bears and other) animals having fire in their mouth, and by serpents and scorpions.

35. They are scorched by blazing fire, pierced by thorns, divided into parts by saws, and tormented by thirst.

36. They are agitated by hunger and by fearful troops of tigers, and faint away at every step on account of the foul stench proceeding from pus and from blood.

31. 'A great number of years' means three hundred years. (Nand.)

37. Casting wistful glances upon the food and drink of others, they receive blows from ministers (of Yama), whose faces are similar to those of crows, herons, cranes, and other horrid animals.

38. Here they are boiled in oil, and there pounded with pestles, or ground in iron or stone vessels.

39. In one place they (are made to) eat what has been vomited, or pus, or blood, or excrements, and in another place, meat of a hideous kind, smelling like pus.

40. Here, enveloped in terrible darkness, they are devoured by worms and (jackals and other) horrible animals having flames in their mouth.

41. There again they are tormented by frost, or have to step through unclean things (such as excrements), or the departed spirits eat one another, driven to distraction (by hunger).

42. In one place they are beaten with their deeds in a former existence, in another they are suspended (by trees and the like, with a rope), or shot with heaps of arrows, or cut in pieces.

43. In another place again, walking upon thorns, and their bodies being encircled by snakes, they are tormented with (grinding) machines, and dragged on by their knees.

44. Their backs, heads, and shoulders are fractured, the necks of these poor beings are not stouter than a needle, and their bodies, of a size fit for a hut only, are unable to bear torments.

45. Having thus been tormented (in the hells) and suffered most acute pain, the sinners have to endure further pangs in their migration through animal bodies.

43. The Gârûḍa-purâṇa (p. 17) also mentions that in one hell the sinners are thrown into machines like the sugar-cane.

XLIV.

1. Now after having suffered the torments inflicted in the hells, the evil-doers pass into animal bodies.

2. Criminals in the highest degree enter the bodies of all plants successively.

3. Mortal sinners enter the bodies of worms or insects.

4. Minor offenders enter the bodies of birds.

5. Criminals in the fourth degree enter the bodies of aquatic animals.

6. Those who have committed a crime effecting loss of caste, enter the bodies of amphibious animals.

7. Those who have committed a crime degrading to a mixed caste, enter the bodies of deer.

8. Those who have committed a crime rendering them unworthy to receive alms, enter the bodies of cattle.

9. Those who have committed a crime causing defilement, enter the bodies of (low-caste) men (such as Kandâlas), who may not be touched.

10. Those who have committed one of the miscellaneous crimes, enter the bodies of miscellaneous wild carnivorous animals (such as tigers).

11. One who has eaten the food of one whose food may not be eaten, or forbidden food, becomes a worm or insect.

XLIV. 1-43. M. XII, 54-67; Y. III, 207-215. — 44, 45. M. XII, 68, 69.

11. See LI, 3 seq.

12. A thief (of other property than gold), becomes a falcon.

13. One who has appropriated a broad passage, becomes a (serpent or other) animal living in holes.

14. One who has stolen grain, becomes a rat.

15. One who has stolen white copper, becomes a Hamsa.

16. One who has stolen water, becomes a water-fowl.

17. One who has stolen honey, becomes a gad-fly.

18. One who has stolen milk, becomes a crow.

19. One who has stolen juice (of the sugar-cane or other plants), becomes a dog.

20. One who has stolen clarified butter, becomes an ichneumon.

21. One who has stolen meat, becomes a vulture.

22. One who has stolen fat, becomes a cormorant.

23. One who has stolen oil, becomes a cock-roach.

24. One who has stolen salt, becomes a cricket.

25. One who has stolen sour milk, becomes a crane.

26. One who has stolen silk, becomes a partridge.

27. One who has stolen linen, becomes a frog.

28. One who has stolen cotton cloth, becomes a curlew.

29. One who has stolen a cow, becomes an iguana.

30. One who has stolen sugar, becomes a Vālguda.

30. 'The Vālguda is a kind of bat.' (Nand.) The name Vālguda is evidently related to valgulf, 'a kind of bat,' and identical with Vāgguda (M. XII, 64) and Vāgvada (Haradatta on Gaut. XVII, 34), which, according to Dr. Bühler's plausible suggestion,

31. One who has stolen perfumes, becomes a musk-rat.

32. One who has stolen vegetables, consisting of leaves, becomes a peacock.

33. One who has stolen prepared grain, becomes a (boar called) Svâvidh (or Sedhâ).

34. One who has stolen undressed grain, becomes a porcupine.

35. One who has stolen fire, becomes a crane.

36. One who has stolen household utensils, becomes a wasp (usually called Karata).

37. One who has stolen dyed cloth, becomes a Kakor partridge.

38. One who has stolen an elephant, becomes a tortoise.

39. One who has stolen a horse, becomes a tiger.

40. One who has stolen fruits or blossoms, becomes an ape.

41. One who has stolen a woman, becomes a bear.

42. One who has stolen a vehicle, becomes a camel.

43. One who has stolen cattle, becomes a vulture.

44. He who has taken by force any property belonging to another, or eaten food not first presented to the gods (at the Vaisvadeva offering), inevitably enters the body of some beast.

45. Women, who have committed similar thefts, receive the same ignominious punishment: they become females to those male animals.

are names of 'a large herbivorous bat, usually called the flying fox (in Gûgaratî vâgud or vâgul). See Dr. Bühler's note on Gaut. loc. cit.

XLV.

1. Now after having undergone the torments inflicted in the hells, and having passed through the animal bodies, the sinners are born as human beings with (the following) marks (indicating their crime):

2. A criminal in the highest degree shall have leprosy;

3. A killer of a Brâhmana, pulmonary consumption;

4. A drinker of spirits, black teeth;

5. A stealer of gold (belonging to a Brâhmana), deformed nails;

6. A violator of his spiritual teacher's bed, a disease of the skin;

7. A calumniator, a stinking nose;

8. A malignant informer, stinking breath;

9. A stealer of grain, a limb too little;

10. One who steals by mixing (i. e. by taking good grain and replacing the same amount of bad grain in its stead), a limb too much;

11. A stealer of food, dyspepsia;

12. A stealer of words¹, dumbness;

XLV. 2-31. M. XI, 49-52; Y. III, 209-211. — 32, 33. M. XI, 53, 54.

2. According to a text of Sâtâta, which Nand. quotes in explanation of this Sûtra, connection with the mother is punished with 'falling or incurable epilepsy,' when the organ falls of; connection with a daughter is punished with red epilepsy; connection with a daughter-in-law, with black leprosy; and connection with a sister, with yellow leprosy.

12. ¹ I. e. according to Kullûka and Nand., 'one who studies the Veda without permission to do so;' or it may denote, according to Nand., 'a stealer of a book,' or 'one who fails to communicate information which he is able to give.'

13. A stealer of clothes, white leprosy ;
14. A stealer of horses, lameness ;
15. One who pronounces an execration against a god or a Brâhmaṇa, dumbness ;
16. A poisoner, a stammering tongue ;
17. An incendiary, madness ;
18. One disobedient to a Guru (father), the falling sickness ;
19. The killer of a cow, blindness ;
20. The stealer of a lamp, the same ;
21. One who has extinguished a lamp, blindness with one eye ;
22. A seller of tin, chowries, or lead, is born a dyer of cloth ;
23. A seller of (horses or other) animals whose foot is not cloven, is born a hunter ;
24. One who eats the food of a person born from adulterous intercourse¹, is born as a man who suffers his mouth to be abused ;
25. A thief (of other property than gold), is born a bard ;
26. A usurer becomes epileptic ;
27. One who eats dainties alone, shall have rheumatics ;
28. The breaker of a convention, a bald head ;

19. Nand. quotes a text of Sâtâtapa, from which he infers the use of the particle tu to indicate here, that a killer of his mother shall also be born blind.

21. The particle ka, according to Nand., indicates here, that such persons shall also be afflicted with the morbid affection of the eyes called Timira, as stated by Sâtâtapa.

24. ¹ Nand. says that kundâsin may also mean 'one who eats food to the amount of a kunda.' See also Dr. Bühler's note on Gaut. XV, 18.

29. The breaker of a vow of chastity, swelled legs ;

30. One who deprives another of his subsistence, shall be poor ;

31. One who injures another (without provocation), shall have an incurable illness.

32. Thus, according to their particular acts, are men born, marked by evil signs, sick, blind, hump-backed, halting, one-eyed ;

33. Others as dwarfs, or deaf, or dumb, feeble-bodied (eunuchs, whitlows, and others). Therefore must penances be performed by all means.

XLVI.

1. Now follow the penances.

2. Let a man fast for three days ;

3. And let him perform each day the three ablutions (at dawn, noon, and sunset) ;

4. And let him, at every ablution, plunge into the water three times ;

5. And let him mutter the Aghamarshana three times, after having plunged into the water ;

6. During day-time let him be standing ;

7. At night let him continue in a sitting position ;

8. At the close of the ceremony let him give a milch cow (to a Brâhmana).

9. Thus¹ has the penance Aghamarshana been described.

XLVI. 10, 11, 18, 19. M. XI, 212, 213, 215, 216. — 10, 11, 13, 18-20, 22, 23. Y. III, 315-323. — 10. Âpast. I, 9, 27, 7. — 10, 11, 13. Gaut. XXIII, 2 ; XXVI, 1-5, 20. — 24, 25. M. XI, 224, 225.

9. ¹ Nand. thinks that the word iti, ' thus,' has a double meaning

10. Let a man for three days eat in the evening only; for other three days, in the morning only; for further three days, food (given to him) unsolicited; (and let him fast entirely for three days): that is the Prâgâpatya (the penance invented by Pragâ-pati).

11. Let him drink for three days hot water; for other three days, hot clarified butter; and for further three days, hot milk; and let him fast for three days: that is the Taptakrikkhra (hot penance).

12. Taking the same (liquids) cold is called the Sitakrikkhra (cold penance).

13. The Krikkhrâtikrikkhra (the most difficult penance) consists in subsisting on milk only for twenty-one days.

14. Eating (nothing but) ground barley mixed with water for a whole month is called the Udaka-krikkhra (water penance).

15. Eating nothing but lotus-fibres (for a whole month) is called the Mûlakrikkhra (root penance).

16. Eating nothing but Bèl fruit (for a whole month) is called the Srîphalakrikkhra (Bèl fruit penance).

17. Or¹ (this penance is performed) by (eating) lotus-seeds.

18. A total fast for twelve days is called Parâka.

19. Subsisting for one day on the urine and fæces of a cow, milk, sour milk, butter, and water here, and refers to another kind of Aghamarshana penance at the same time, which is described by Saṅkha, and consists simply in fasting for three days and muttering the Aghamarshana hymn three times.

17. ¹ According to Nand., the particle vâ, 'or,' here indicates another alternative, that of performing this penance with Âmalakas (Emblia Officinalis Gaertn.) in which Kusa grass has been boiled, and fasting the next day, is called Sântapana (the tormenting penance).

20. Swallowing (the same six things, viz.) cow-urine and the rest, each for one day, is called Mahâ-sântapana (the particularly tormenting penance).

21. Swallowing each for three days is called Atisântapana (the extremely tormenting penance).

22. Swallowing oil-cakes, foam of boiled rice, buttermilk, water, and ground barley (each for one day), with a fasting day between (every two days), is called Tulâpurusha (a man's weight).

23. Drinking water boiled with Kusa grass, leaves of the Palâsa and Udumbara trees, of lotuses, of the Saṅkhapushpī plant, of the banyan tree, and of the Brahmasuvarkalâ plant, each (for one day), is called Parnakrikkhṛa (leaves penance).

24. Let a man perform all those penances after having shorn his hair and his beard, and let him bathe at morning, noon, and evening every day, lying on a low couch, and restraining his passions,

25. And let him (while engaged in performing them) avoid to converse with women, Sûdras, or outcasts, and let him constantly, to the best of his ability, mutter purifying Mantras and make oblations in the fire.

XLVII.

1. Now follows the Kândrâyana (lunar penance).

2. Let a man eat single mouthfuls (of food) unchanged in size ;

XLVII. 1-10. M. XI, 217-222. — 1-3, 9. Y. III, 324, 325. — 1-4. Gaut. XXVII, 12-15.

2. 'Unchanged in size' means 'of that size precisely which the law prescribes.' Yâgñavalkya (III, 324) states that each daily

3. And let him during the moon's increase add (successively) one mouthful (every day, so as to eat one mouthful on the first day of the moon's increase, two mouthfuls on the second day, and so on; fifteen mouthfuls on the day of full moon), and during the wane of the moon let him take off one mouthful (every day, so as to eat fourteen mouthfuls on the first day of the moon's wane, thirteen mouthfuls on the second, and one mouthful on the fourteenth day of the moon's wane), and on the day of new moon let him fast entirely: thus has the barley-shaped Kândrâyana been described.

4. Or the ant-shaped Kândrâyana (may be performed).

5. That Kândrâyana is called 'ant-shaped' in which the day of new moon is placed in the middle.

6. That one is called 'barley-shaped' in which the day of full moon is placed in the middle.

7. If a man eats for a month eight mouthfuls a day, it is (the penance called) Yatikândrâyana (an hermit's Kândrâyana).

8. Eating (for a month) four mouthfuls each morning and evening is (the penance called) Sisukândrâyana (a child's Kândrâyana).

9. Eating anyhow¹ three hundred minus sixty mouthfuls a month is the penance called Sâmânyakândrâyana (general Kândrâyana).

portion must have the size of a peacock's egg, and Gautama (XXVII, 10) prescribes that the size of a mouthful shall be such as not to cause a distortion of the mouth in swallowing it. (Nand.)

9. ¹ 'Anyhow,' i. e. otherwise than ordained above, as e. g. eating four mouthfuls on one day, and twelve on the next day; or fasting on one day, and eating sixteen mouthfuls on the following day; or fasting for two days, and eating twenty-four mouthfuls on the third

10. After having performed this penance, in a former age, the seven holy Rishis, Brahman, and Rudra acquired a splendid abode, O Earth.

XLVIII.

1. Now if a man feels his conscience charged with some guilty act (such as performing a sacrifice for, or accepting a gift from, unworthy persons, or eating excrements) committed by himself (or if his conscience tells him that he has done more evil than good, or if he thinks himself less pure than others), let him boil a handful of barley-gruel for the sake of his own spiritual welfare.

2. Let him not make the (customary) Vaisvadeva offering after that.

3. Neither must he make the Bali offerings.

4. Let him consecrate with Mantras the barley, before it has been put to the fire, while it is being boiled, and after it has been boiled.

5. Let him watch the barley, while it is being boiled (muttering at the same time the following Mantra):

6. 'Soma, who is the highest priest among priests (gods), leader among the wise, Rishi among bards, the falcon among rapacious birds, the Svadhiti tree among trees, trickles murmuring through the filter¹.'

day; or fasting for three days, and eating thirty-two mouthfuls on the fourth day. (Nand.)

XLVIII. 1. Gaut. XIX, 13.

2, 3. Regarding the regular oblations which have to be offered at meal times &c. to the Visvedevâs and to all beings (bhûtâni), see LIX, 22, 24; LXVIII, 1-22.

4. The Mantras are given below, 17-22.

6. ¹ Rig-veda IX, 96, 6. Regarding the translation of this verse, see Dr. Zimmer's remarks, Altindisches Leben, p. 207.

With these words he must fasten blades of Kusa grass (round the neck of the kettle).

7. The pulse having been boiled, he must pour it into another vessel and eat it.

8. Let him help himself to it, while muttering the Mantra, 'The gods, who have sprung up in the mind and satisfy the mind, who are gifted with great energy, and whose father is Daksha, shall protect and help us. To them be Namaḥ (adoration), to them be Svâhâ (hail).'

9. Then, after having sipped water, let him seize the centre (of the vessel) and mutter the Mantra :

10. 'Be satisfied in our stomach, O ye waters, and ye barley-corns, after having been bathed; they shall be salubrious to us, conferring bliss, causing health, divine, causing immortality, and increasers of Rîta (truth and justice).'

11. One desirous of wisdom (must perform this rite) for three days;

12. A sinner, for six days.

13. Any of the mortal sinners (killers of a Brâhmaṇa, stealers of gold, and the rest) becomes purified by swallowing it for seven days.

14. Swallowing it for twelve nights effaces even sins committed by an ancestor;

15. Swallowing it for a month, every sin (whether light or heavy, and whether committed by himself or by an ancestor).

16. And so does swallowing barley-corns dissolved in the excrements of a cow for twenty-one days (efface every sin).

17. 'Thou art barley, thou the king of grains,

8. Taittirîya Saṃhitâ I, 2, 3, 1. See also Vâgasaneyi Saṃhitâ IV, 11, &c.

thou water mixed with honey; the Rishis have proclaimed thee an expeller of every kind of guilt and an instrument of purification.

18. 'You are clarified butter and honey, O ye barley-corns; you are water and ambrosia, O ye barley-corns. May you efface whatever sinful acts I have committed :

19. 'Sins committed by words, by acts, and by evil thoughts. Avert distress and ill-fortune from me, O ye barley-corns.

20. 'Purify food licked at by dogs or pigs, or defiled by leavings (of food), and (purify me from the stain) of disobedience towards mother and father, O ye barley-corns.

21. 'Purify for me food given by a multitude of persons, the food of a harlot, or of a Sûdra, food offered at a Srâddha, food rendered impure by the birth of a child in the house, the food of a thief, and food offered at a Navasrâddha (or new Srâddha, which takes place on the first, third, fifth, seventh, ninth, and eleventh day after a person's demise).

22. 'Purify me, O ye barley-corns, from the sin of injuring a child or of causing (a punishment) to be inflicted on some one by the king, from theft of gold (or other high crimes), from the violation of a religious duty, from performing a sacrifice for an unworthy person, and from abusing a Brâhmaṇa.'

XLIX.

1. After having fasted during the eleventh day of the bright half of the month Mārgaśr̥ṣa, let a

XLIX. 1. 'He must worship Vāsudeva either with sixteen acts, muttering one out of the sixteen verses of the Purushasūkta with each single act, the first act being the invocation of the gods, and man worship, on the twelfth day, the venerable Vāsudeva (Vishṇu).

2. (He shall worship him) with flowers, incense, unguents, lamps, eatables (such as milk), and repasts given to Brāhmaṇas.

3. By performing this rite (on the twelfth day of the bright half of every month, from the month Mārgaśīrsha to the month Kārttika) for one year, he is purified from every sin.

4. By performing it till he dies, he attains Sveta-dvīpa ('the white island,' the abode of Bhagavat).

5. By performing it for a year on each twelfth day of both halves of a month, he attains heaven.

6. By performing it (within the same intervals), till he dies, (he attains) the world of Vishṇu.

7. The same (heavenly rewards are gained by him who performs this rite) on each fifteenth day (after having fasted during the fourteenth).

8. If he worships (according to the latter rite) Kesava (Vishṇu) who has become one with Brahman, on the day of full moon, and Kesava absorbed in meditation, on the day of new moon, he will obtain a great reward.

the last the dismissal of the assembled Brāhmaṇas; or he must worship him with the "five offerings," perfumes, and the rest, muttering at the same time the "twelve syllables" (Om namo bhagavate vāsudevāya, "Om, adoration to the venerable Vāsudeva").' (Nand.)

2. 'He must worship him with those offerings and with burnt-oblations. The burnt-oblation, which must consist either of sesamum, or of barley, or of clarified butter, has to be accompanied by the recitation of the Puruṣasūkta or of the "twelve syllables."' (Nand.)

8. According to Nand., the two forms of Vishṇu mentioned here must be considered as two separate deities, the one having to be invoked with the words 'Adoration to Brahmakesava,' and the

9. If in a year on a day of full moon the moon and the planet Jupiter are seen together in the sky, it is called a great full moon.

10. Gifts, fasts, and the like are declared to be imperishable on that day. The same is the case if a conjunction with the asterism Sravanâ falls on the twelfth day of the bright half (of any month).

L.

1. Let a man make a hut of leaves in a forest and dwell in it;

2. And let him bathe (and perform his prayers) three times a day;

3. And¹ let him collect alms, going from one village to another, and proclaiming his own deed;

4. And¹ let him sleep upon grass:

5. This is called a Mahâvrata (great observance).

6. He who has killed a Brâhmaṇa (unintentionally) must perform it for twelve years.

7. (He who has unintentionally killed) a Kshatriya or a Vaisya engaged in a sacrifice, for the same period.

other with the words 'Adoration to Yogakesava.' 'A great reward' he interprets by 'a shape identical with that of Brahman.'

L. 1-6, 15. M. XI, 73; Y. III, 243; Âpast. I, 9, 24, 11-20; Gaut. XXII, 4-6. — 7-10, 12-14. M. XI, 88, 89, 129-131; Y. III, 251, 266, 267; Gaut. XXII, 12-16. — 16-24. M. XI, 109-116; Y. III, 263. — 25-41. M. XI, 132-138; Y. III, 270-274. — 30-33. Âpast. I, 9, 25, 13; Gaut. XXII, 19. — 34-36. Gaut. XXII, 23-25. — 46-50. M. XI, 141-145; Y. III, 275, 276. — 46. Âpast. I, 9, 26, 2; Gaut. XXII, 20, 21.

3. ¹ Nand., quoting Gautama XXII, 5, takes the particle ka, 'and,' to imply that he should also make way for any Ārya whom he meets.

4. ¹ The particle ka here means, according to Nand., that he ought to remain chaste, as ordained by Gautama, XXII, 4.

8. Likewise, he who has killed (unintentionally) a pregnant woman, or¹ a woman in her courses.

9. Or¹ a woman who has bathed after temporary uncleanness;

10. Or¹ a friend.

11. He who has (unintentionally) killed a king, must perform the Mahâvrata for twice the same number of years (or twenty-four years);

12. He who has (unintentionally) killed a Kshatriya (not engaged in a sacrifice, nor a king), for one quarter of that time less (or for nine years);

13. He who has (unintentionally) killed a Vaisya (not engaged in a sacrifice), for half of that time (or for six years).

14. He who has (unintentionally) killed a (virtuous) Sûdra, for half of that time again (or for three years).

15. He who is performing any of those penances, must carry (on his stick) the skull of the person slain, like a flag.

16. Let a man serve cows for a month, his hair and beard having been shorn.

17. And let him sit down to rest when they rest;

18. And¹ let him stand still when they stand still;

8. ¹ Nand. infers from texts of Praçetas, Yama, and Parâsara, that the particle vâ, 'or,' here refers to pregnant cows, and to women whose confinement is close at hand, or who are married to one who has kindled his sacred fire, or for whom all the sacred rites have been duly performed from their birth.

9. ¹ Nand. refers the particle vâ, 'or,' to women of high rank and to a rival wife, or a mother, or a daughter, or a sister, or a daughter-in-law, or a wife, who is of the same caste as her husband.

10. ¹ 'The particle vâ includes children here.' (Nand.)

18. ¹ According to Nand., the particle ka here refers to the

19. And¹ let him give assistance to a cow that has met with an accident (such as getting into a slough, or falling into a pit).

20. And let him preserve them from (the attacks of lions and tigers and other) dangers.

21. Let him not seek shelter himself against cold (and hot winds) and similar dangers, without having previously protected the cows against them.

22. Let him wash himself with cow-urine (three times a day);

23. And¹ let him subsist upon the (five) productions of a cow :

24. This is the Govrata (cow rite), which must be performed by him who has (unintentionally) killed a cow (belonging to a Kshatriya).

25. If a man has killed an elephant (intentionally), he must give five black (nīla) bulls.

26. If he has killed (unintentionally) a horse, he must give a garment.

27. If he has (intentionally) killed an ass, he must give a bull one year old.

28. The same if he has (intentionally) killed a ram or a goat.

29. If he has (intentionally) killed a camel, he must give one Krishṇala of gold.

precept of Parâsara, that he should drink water when the cows drink, and lie down when they lie down.

19. ¹According to Nand., the particle ka here implies another precept of Parâsara, that he should not take notice of a cow grazing or drinking water upon his own ground or that of another.

23. ¹'The particle ka implies that he should also mutter the Gomatî hymn, as Sâtâtapa says.' (Nand.)

25. 'He is called a black bull whose colour is red, whose mouth and tail are of a yellowish-white colour, and whose hoofs and horns are white.' (Yagñapârsva, quoted by Nand.)

30. If he has (intentionally) killed a dog, he must fast for three days.

31. If he has (unintentionally) killed a mouse, or a cat, or an ichneumon, or a frog, or a Dundubha snake, or a large serpent (a boa constrictor), he must fast one day, and on the next day he must give a dish of milk, sesamum, and rice mixed together to a Brâhmana, and give him an iron hoe as his 'fee.'

32. If he has killed (unintentionally) an iguana, or an owl, or a crow, or a fish, he must fast for three days.

33. If he has killed (intentionally) a Hamsa, or a crane, or a heron, or a cormorant, or an ape, or a falcon, or the vulture called Bhâsa, or a Brâhmanî duck, he must give a cow to a Brâhmana.

34. If he has killed a snake, (he must give) an iron spade.

35. If he has killed emasculated (cattle or birds)¹, (he must give) a load of straw ².

36. If he has killed (intentionally) a boar, (he must give) a Kumbha of clarified butter.

37. If he has (intentionally) killed a partridge, (he must give) a Drona of sesamum.

38. If he has (intentionally) killed a parrot, (he must give) a calf two years old.

39. If he has (intentionally) killed a curlew, (he must give) a calf three years old.

40. If he has (unintentionally) killed a wild carnivorous animal, he must give a milch cow.

35. ¹ Thus according to Nand., who declares himself against the interpretation of shanda by 'a eunuch;' see, however, Kullûka on M. XI, 134, and Dr. Bühler's rendering of Gaut. XXII, 23.—

² Nand. adds, 'and a Mâsha of lead;' see the passages just referred to.

41. If he has (unintentionally) killed a wild animal not carnivorous, (he must give) a heifer.

42. If he has (intentionally) killed an animal not mentioned before, he must subsist upon milk for three days.

43. If he has (unintentionally) killed a bird (not mentioned before), he must eat at night only;

44. Or (if unable to do so), he must give a silver Mâsha.

45. If he has (unintentionally) killed an aquatic animal, he must fast (for a day and a night).

46. If he has killed a thousand (small) animals having bones, or an ox-load of animals that have no bones, he must perform the same penance as for killing a Sûdra.

47. But, if he has killed animals having bones, he must (moreover) give some trifle to a Brâhmaṇa (for each animal which he has killed); if he has killed boneless animals, he becomes purified by one stopping of the breath.

48. For cutting (unawares?) trees yielding fruit (such as the bread-fruit or mango trees), shrubs, creeping or climbing plants, or plants yielding blossoms (such as the jasmine tree), he must mutter a Vedic text (the Gâyatrî) a hundred times.

49. For killing (unintentionally) insects bred in rice or other food, or in (sweets and) the like, or in liquids (such as molasses), or elsewhere (in water and so on), or in flowers or fruits, the penance consists in eating clarified butter.

50. If a man has wantonly cut such plants as 46, 47. Nand. thinks that the former Sloka refers to intentional, and the latter to unintentional murder of those animals.

grow by cultivation (such as rice and barley), or such as rise spontaneously in the wood (such as wild rice), he must wait on a cow and subsist upon milk for one day.

LI.

1. A drinker of spirituous liquor must abstain from all religious rites and subsist on grains separated from the husk for a year.

2. If a man has (knowingly) tasted any of the (twelve) unclean excretions of the body, or of the (twelve) intoxicating drinks, he must perform the Kândrâyana penance.

3. Likewise, if he has (knowingly) eaten garlic, or onions, or red garlic, or any plant which has a similar flavour (to that of garlic or onions), or the meat of village pigs, of tame cocks (and other tame birds), of apes, and of cows.

4. In all those cases men belonging to a twice-born caste have to be initiated a second time, after the penance is over.

5. On their second initiation, the tonsure, the girding with the sacred string, the wearing of the staff, and the begging of alms shall be omitted.

LI. 1. M. XI, 93; Y. III, 254. — 3. M. V, 19; Y. I, 176. — 4, 5. M. XI, 151, 152; Y. III, 255; Gaut. XXIII, 2. — 6. M. V, 18; Y. I, 177; Âpast. I, 5, 17, 37; Gaut. XVII, 27. — 7-20. M. IV, 205-217; Y. I, 161-168; Âpast. I, 5, 16, 27, 29; 17, 4, 5; 18, 21-23; 19, 1, 15; II, 6, 15, 14; Gaut. XVII, 10-12, 17, 19, 21, 31. — 21. M. V, 16; Y. I, 177, 178. — 23. M. XI, 148. — 25. M. XI, 150; Gaut. XXIII, 6. — 26-42. M. V, 5-21, 24, 25; XI, 152-157; Y. I, 169-178; Âpast. I, 5, 17, 17-20, 22-26, 28, 29, 33-36; Gaut. XVII, 14, 16, 22-26, 28, 29, 32-34. — 43-46. M. XI, 158-160. — 59. M. V, 36; Y. I, 179; Âpast. I, 5, 17, 31. — 60. M. V, 38; Y. I, 180. — 61. M. V, 39. — 62. M. V, 34. — 63-78. M. V, 40-55. — 64. Sâṅkh. II, 16, 1. See also Bühler, Introd. to Digest, p. xxxi, note. — 76, 77. Y. I, 181.

6. If a man has (unawares) eaten meat of a five-toed animal, with the exception of the hare, the porcupine, the iguana, the rhinoceros, and the tortoise, he must fast for seven days.

7. If he has eaten the food of a multitude of persons, of a harlot, of a thief, or of a singer, he must subsist upon milk for seven days.

8. And ¹ (if he has eaten) the food of a carpenter or of a leather manufacturer ;

9. Or of a usurer, of a miser, of one who has performed the initiatory ceremony of a Soma-sacrifice, of a jailer, of an Abhisasta, or of a eunuch ;

10. Or of a dissolute woman, of a hypocrite, of a physician, of a hunter, of a hard-hearted or cruel person, and of one who eats the leavings of food ;

11. Or of a woman who has neither husband nor son, of a goldsmith, of an enemy, or of an outcast ;

12. Or of a malignant informer, of a liar, of one who has transgressed the law, and of one who sells himself, or who sells (molasses or other) liquids and condiments ;

13. Or of a public dancer, of a weaver, of an ungrateful man, or of a dyer of clothes ;

14. Or (the food) of a blacksmith, of a man of the Nishâda tribe (who subsist by fishing), of a stage-player ¹, of a worker in cane, or of a seller of weapons ;

8. ¹As shown by ka, "and," other persons who have a dishonourable profession, such as fishermen, have also to be understood.' (Nand.)

9. Abhisasta means 'accused of a heinous crime,' i.e. 'a person of bad repute.' (Nand.) See also Dr. Bühler's notes on Âpast. I, 9, 24, 6, and on Gaut. XVII, 17.

14. ¹This is the usual meaning of the term raṅgâvatârin. Nand. explains it by 'wrestlers and the like.'

15. Or of a trainer of dogs, of a distiller of spirituous liquor, of an oil manufacturer, or of a washerman ;

16. Or (the food) of a woman in her courses (whether belonging to her, or dressed for her), or of one who lives under one roof with the paramour of his wife ;

17. Or (food) which has been looked at by the killer of an embryo (of a Brâhmaṇa), or which has been touched by a woman in her courses, or nibbled by a bird¹, or touched by a dog, or smelt at by a cow ;

18. Or that which has been designedly touched with the foot, or that which has been sneezed at ;

19. Or the food of insane, or wrathful, or sick persons ;

20. Or (food that is given) in a disrespectful manner, or the meat (of animals killed) for no sacred purpose.

21. After having (unawares) eaten the flesh of any sort of fish, excepting the Pâtina, Rohita, Râgiva, Simhatunda, and Sakula fishes, he must fast for three days.

22. Likewise, after having (unawares) eaten the flesh of (any other) aquatic animal (such as the alligator, or the Gangetic porpoise).

23. After having (knowingly) drunk water from a vessel in which spirituous liquor had been kept, he must drink for seven days milk boiled together with the Saṅkhaushpī plant.

17. ¹Nand. considers the term patatrin to refer to crows only in this place. Kullûka (on M. IV, 208) interprets it by 'crows and the like.' See also Gaut. XVII, 10.

20. See Dr. Bühler's notes on Gaut. XVII, 19, 31.

24. After having (knowingly drunk water) from a vessel in which an intoxicating beverage had been kept, (he must drink the same) for five days.

25. A Soma-sacrificer, who has (unawares) smelt the breath of a man who had been drinking spirituous liquor, must plunge into water, (suppress his breath) and mutter the Aghamarshana three times, and eat clarified butter afterwards.

26. For eating (designedly) the flesh of an ass, of a camel, or of a crow¹, he must perform the Kândrâyana penance.

27. Likewise, for eating (knowingly) the flesh of an unknown (beast or bird), meat kept in a slaughter-house, and¹ dried meat.

28. For eating (unawares) the flesh of carnivorous beasts (tigers and others), or birds (hawks and others), he must perform the Taptakrikkhra.

29. For (knowingly) eating a sparrow, or (the heron called) Plava, or a Brâhmaṇṭ duck, or a Hamsa, or the (wild cock called) Raggudâla, or a Sârasa crane, or a Dâtyûha, or a male or female parrot, or a crane, or a heron, or a cuckoo, or a wagtail, he must fast for three days.

30. Likewise, for eating (unawares the flesh of) animals whose hoof is not cloven (such as horses),

26. Nand. argues from a passage of Praketas, that the flesh of the following other animals, dogs, jackals, cocks, boars, carnivorous animals in general, Gangetic porpoises, apes, elephants, horses, tame hogs, cows, and human beings, is also implied here. But if that were the case, Sûtra 26 would be partly a mere repetition of, and partly opposed to, the rules laid down in Sûtras 33 and 22.

27. ¹ Nand. infers from a passage of the Brâhma-purâṇa, that the use of the particle ka further implies a prohibition to eat the flesh on the back, or flesh which had been interred in the ground, or covered with earth, fried meat, and the flesh of the uterus.

or of animals having a double row of teeth (such as the Rohita deer).

31. For eating (unawares) the flesh of any bird, excepting the francoline partridge, the Kâpiṅgala, the (quail called) Lâvaka, the peahen, and the peacock, (he must fast) for a day and a night.

32. For eating (knowingly) insects (ants and others), he must drink for one day (water in which the plant) Brahmasuvarṅgalâ (has been boiled).

33. For eating (unawares) the flesh of dogs, he must perform the same penance¹.

34. For eating (unawares) the mushroom called) Khatrâka, or (the mushroom called) Kavaka, he must perform the Sântapana penance.

35. For eating (unawares) stale food, other than a mess prepared with barley (such as cakes), or with wheat (such as gruel), or with milk (boiled with rice, or mixed with coagulated milk, or otherwise dressed), and dishes sprinkled with fat (such as clarified butter), sour gruel, and sweetmeats, he must fast (for one day).

36. Likewise, (for eating unawares) the juice flowing from an incision in a tree, (plants raised in) unclean substances (such as excrements and the like), and the red exudation of trees.

37. Also, (for eating unawares) the root of the water-lily; (and for eating) rice boiled with sesamum, or with beans, *Samyâva*¹, rice boiled in milk with sugar, pastry, Sashkulî (cakes), or food destined for

33. ¹ 'And he must perform the Sântapana penance mentioned in the next Sûtra, as the use of the particle ka implies.' (Nand.)

37. ¹ Nand. interprets this term by utkarikâ, which, according to Wilson, is a sort of sweetmeat made with milk, treacle, and clarified butter. Kullûka (on M.V, 7) has a somewhat different interpretation.

the gods, if those dishes have not been announced to the gods first; and (for eating) food destined for burnt-oblations.

38. Also, for tasting the milk of any animal, save the milk of cows, goats, and buffalos (and for tasting any eatables made of such milk)¹.

39. Also, (for tasting the milk) of those animals (cows and the rest) within ten days after their giving birth to a young one.

40. And (for tasting) the milk of a cow whose milk flows of itself, of one that has just taken the bull¹, or of one whose calf is dead².

41. And (for tasting the milk of a cow) that has been feeding upon ordures.

42. And (for tasting) any such food as has turned sour (but not that which is sour by nature, like sorrel), except sour milk (and what is made with it).

43. A student, who partakes (unawares) of a Srâddha repast, must fast for three days.

44. And he must remain in water for a whole day (afterwards).

45. If he eats honey or meat (at any time), he must perform the Prâgâpatya penance.

46. If any one eats (unawares) the leavings of the

38. ¹Nand. infers from the use of the particle kā that the same penance is ordained for tasting any other production of those animals, as e.g. their excrements.

40. ¹Sandhinī means 'a cow that has just taken the bull,' or 'a female animal that gives milk once a day,' or 'a cow that is milked by the calf of another cow.' (Nand.) Haradatta (see Âpast. I, 5, 17, 23; Gaut. XVII, 25) interprets it by 'an animal giving milk while big with young.' For other interpretations, see the Petersburg Dictionary. — ²'The particle kā indicates that animals bearing twins have also to be included in this prohibition.' (Nand.) See Gaut. loc. cit.

food of a cat, of a crow, of an ichneumon, or of a rat, he must drink water in which the Brahmasuvarṅkalā plant has been boiled.

47. For eating (unawares) what has been left by a dog, he must fast for one day, and drink Pañṅagavya (afterwards).

48. For tasting (knowingly) the excrements of five-toed animals (excepting human excrements), he must (fast) for seven days (and drink Pañṅagavya on the eighth).

49. If one (not a student) eats (unawares) of a Śrāddha repast consisting of raw food, he must subsist on milk for seven days.

50. If a Brāhmaṇa eats what has been left by a Sūdra, (he must also subsist on milk) for seven days.

51. If he eats what has been left by a Vaisya, (he must subsist upon milk) for five days.

52. If he eats what has been left by a Kshatriya, (he must subsist upon milk) for three days.

53. If he eats what has been left by another Brāhmaṇa, (he must subsist upon milk) for one day.

54. If a Kshatriya eats what has been left by a Sūdra, (he must undergo the same penance) for five days.

55. If he eats what has been left by a Vaisya, (he must undergo it) for three days ;

56. And so must a Vaisya, if he eats what has been left by a Sūdra.

50. Nand. explains that he should drink Pañṅagavya alternately with milk. This explanation extends to the following Sūtras also (up to Sūtra 56). He further argues from another Smṛiti text that the term Sūdra means 'Sūdras and women' here.

57. For (knowingly) eating (undressed) food, which has been left by a Kandâla (or Svapaka or other member of the seven lowest castes), he must fast for three days.

58. For (unawares) eating dressed food (left by such), the Parâka penance is ordained.

59. Let no Brâhmaṇa ever eat (the flesh of) beasts which has not been consecrated with Mantras; but if it has been consecrated with Mantras, he may eat it, following the eternal rule (laid down in the Veda).

60. As many hairs as the beast has, which he has slain in this world, for so many days will the killer of a beast for other purposes than a (Srauta or Smârta) sacrifice, suffer terrible pangs in this world and in the next¹.

61. It is for sacrifices that beasts have been created by the Self-existent (Brahman) himself. Sacrificing causes the whole universe to prosper; therefore is the slaughter (of beasts) for a sacrifice no slaughter.

62. The sin of him who kills deer for the sake of gain, is not so great (and visited less heavily) in the world to come, than the sin of him who eats meat which has not been offered to the gods.

63. Plants, cattle, trees, amphibious animals, and birds, which have been destroyed for the purposes of sacrifice, obtain exaltation in another existence (in which they are born as Gandharvas, or other beings of a high rank).

60. ¹ My translation follows Nand. It is, however, doubtful, whether the reading is correct; see Manu V, 38.

62. This is because the former kills animals in order to support his family, whereas the latter eats meat merely in order to tickle his palate. (Nand.)

64. When honouring a guest, at a sacrifice, or when worshipping the manes, or the gods, a man may slay cattle, but not otherwise on any account.

65. That twice-born man who, knowing the exact truth (promulgated) in the Veda, slays cattle for the sacrifices (ordained in the Veda), will convey himself and the cattle (slain by him) to a blissful abode.

66. A self-controlled¹ man of a twice-born caste, whether he be a householder, or be dwelling with his spiritual teacher, or in the forest, must never slay an animal in opposition to the precepts of the Veda, even in cases of distress.

67. That slaughter which is in accordance with the precepts of the Veda, and has been fixed for this world of movable and immovable creatures, should be considered as no slaughter at all; because it is from the Veda that law shines forth.

68. He who hurts animals that do not hurt any one, merely in order to afford pleasure to himself, will never obtain happiness, whether living or dead¹.

69. He who gives no living creature intentionally the pain of confining or killing (or hurting) it, from benevolence towards all (creatures), will enjoy everlasting happiness.

70. Whatever he thinks of, whatever he strives for, and whatever he desires in his heart, all that is easily obtained by him who does not injure any created being.

71. Meat cannot be obtained without injuring an

66. ¹ Nand. interprets the term âtmavân by saṁnyâsī, 'an ascetic, or member of the fourth order,' apparently because the first three orders are mentioned in this Sloka. I have followed Kullûka's interpretation (on M. V, 43).

68. ¹ 'But it is no sin to kill tigers or other beasts of prey.' (Nand.)

animal, and the murder of animals excludes the murderer from heaven, therefore meat must be avoided.

72. Reflecting upon the origin of flesh¹ and upon the (sin of) hurting or confining animated creatures, he must abstain from animal food of any kind.

73. He who transgresses not the law and eats not flesh like a Pisâka, is beloved by men and remains free from disease.

74. He who gives his consent to the killing of an animal, he who cuts it up, he who kills it, the purchaser and the seller, he who prepares it, he who serves it up, and he who eats it, all these are denominated slaughterers of an animal.

75. There is no greater sinner than he who, without giving their share to the manes and to the gods, wants to increase his own flesh with the flesh of another creature.

76. Those two, he who performs a horse-sacrifice annually for a hundred years and he who does not eat meat, shall both obtain the same recompense for their virtue.

77. By eating (wild rice or other) sacred fruits or roots, and by living upon such grains as are the food of hermits, a man does not reap so high a reward as by avoiding meat.

78. (An eater of flesh must say within himself), 'Me he (mâm sa) will eat in the next world, whose

72. ¹The human soul is enveloped in six sheaths, three of which come from the father, and three from the mother. The three that come from the mother are skin, flesh, and blood. Now flesh is said in the Sruti to be derived from the menstrual discharge, and the latter is one of the species of forbidden food. (Nand.) flesh I am tasting here.' This, say the learned, is the derivation of the word flesh (mâmsa).

LII.

1. He who has stolen the gold (of a Brâhmana), must bring a club to the king, proclaiming his deed.

2. Whether the king kills him with it, or dismisses him unhurt, he is purified.

3. Or (in case he committed the theft unawares), he must perform the *Mahâvrata*¹ for twelve years.

4. He who appropriates (knowingly) a deposit, (must perform the same penance.)

5. He who steals (knowingly) grain or valuable objects¹, (or prepared food belonging to a Brâhmana), (must perform) the *Krikkhra*² for a year.

6. For stealing male or female slaves (not belonging to a Brâhmana, and for seizing) a well or pool (actually containing water), or a field, the Kândrâyana (penance must be performed).

7. (For stealing) articles of small value (such as tin or lead, not exceeding twenty-five Panas in value), the Sântapana (penance must be performed).

8. (For stealing) sweetmeats, (rice or other) food,

LII. 1, 2. M. VIII, 314-316; XI, 100-101; Y. III, 257; Âpast. I, 9, 25, 4-5; Gaut. XII, 43, 44. — 3. M. XI, 102. — 5-13. M. XI, 163-169.

3. ¹ See L, 1-5.

5. ¹ By dhana, 'valuable objects,' the objects mentioned below (in 10), copper and the rest, are meant. (Nand.) — ² Nand. does not explain the meaning of Krikkhra, which is a general term for 'a heavy penance.' It probably denotes the Prâgâpatya penance here, as in a number of other law texts (e. g. below, LIV, 26), and in the corresponding text of Manu in particular. See Kullûka on M. XI, 163.

8-13. Nand. explains that these Sûtras refer to a small amount of those articles which are mentioned in them.

(milk or other) drinks, a bed, a seat, flowers, roots, or fruit, drinking Pañḍagavya (is ordained as penance).

9. (For stealing) grass, firewood, trees, rice in the husk, sugar, clothes, skins, or flesh, the thief must fast for three days.

10. (For stealing knowingly) precious stones, pearls or coral, copper, silver, iron, or white copper, he must eat grain separated from the husk for twelve days.

11. For stealing (unawares) cotton, silk, wool or other (stuffs), he must subsist for three days upon milk.

12. For stealing two-hoofed or one-hoofed animals, he must fast for three days.

13. For stealing birds, or perfumes, or medicinal herbs, or cords, or basket-work, he must fast for one day.

14. Though a thief may have restored to the owner the stolen property (either openly or) in some indirect manner¹, he must still perform a penance, in order to purify himself from guilt.

15. Whatever a man takes from others, unchecked (by the dictates of religion), of that will he be bereft in every future birth.

16. Because life, religious merit, and pleasure depend upon wealth, therefore let a man take care not to injure the wealth (of others by robbing them) by any means.

17. Among those two, he who injures animal life, and he who injures wealth, the one who injures wealth shall incur the heavier penalty.

14. ¹ 'As under pretext of handing over to him the dowry of a wife.' (Nand.)

LIII.

1. One who has (unawares) had illicit sexual intercourse¹, must perform the Prâgâpatya penance for a year, according to the rule of the Mahâvrata, clad in a garment of bark, and living in a forest.

2. The same (penance is ordained) for sexual intercourse with the wife of another man (who belongs to his own caste, but is no Guru of his).

3. For intercourse with a cow, the Govrata (must be performed).

4. For intercourse with a man, for unnatural crimes with a woman, (for wasting his manhood) in the air, (for intercourse with a woman) in water, by day, or in a go-cart¹, he must bathe dressed in his clothes.

5. By intercourse (knowingly) with a Kandâla woman¹, he becomes her equal in caste.

6. For intercourse unawares with such, he must perform the Kândrâyana twice.

7. For intercourse (knowingly) with cattle (other than cows) or with a public prostitute, (he must perform) the Prâgâpatya penance.

8. A woman who has committed adultery once,

LIII. 1-8. M. XI, 106, 171-177. — 4. Y. III, 291. — 9. M. XI, 179.

1. ¹The crime intended here is explained by Nand. as being illicit intercourse with a step-mother, who belongs to the Sûdra caste.

3. See L, 16-24.

4. ¹'Or in a cart drawn by asses or by other beasts of draught, as the particle ka implies.' (Nand.)

5. ¹'Or with a woman of an equally degraded caste, such as the Svapa^{ka} caste and others.' (Nand.)

8. See Sûtra 2.

must perform that penance which has been prescribed for an adulterer.

9. That guilt which a Brâhmana incurs by intercourse with a Kandâla woman one night, he can only remove by subsisting upon alms, and constantly repeating (the Gâyatrî) for three years.

LIV.

1. If a man associates with one guilty of a crime, he must perform the same penance as he.

2. A Brâhmana who has drunk water from a well in which a five-toed animal has perished, or which has been defiled in the highest degree, must fast for three days.

3. A Kshatriya (must fast) for two days (in the same case).

4. A Vaisya (must fast) for one day (and one night).

5. A Sûdra (must fast) for a night only.

6. And all (the former, but not a Sûdra) must drink Pañçagavya, when their penance has been completed.

7. If a Sûdra drinks Pañçagavya, or if a Brâhmana drinks spirituous liquor, they both go to the hell called Mahâraurava ¹.

LIV. 1. M. XI, 182. — 10. M. XI, 203. — 11. M. II, 220; Âpast. II, 5, 12, 22; Gaut. XXIII, 21. — 12. M. XI, 200; Y. III, 277; Gaut. XXIII, 7. — 23. M. XI, 202; Y. III, 291. — 24. M. XI, 195; Y. III, 290. — 25. M. XI, 198; Y. III, 289. — 26. M. XI, 192. — 27. M. XI, 193. — 28. M. XI, 294. — 29. M. XI, 204. — 30. M. XI, 209; Y. III, 293. — 31. M. XI, 190. — 32. M. XI, 191; Y. III, 299. — 34. M. XI, 210; Y. III, 294.

7. ¹ See XLIII, 5. Nand. infers from an anonymous Smṛiti passage, that the first part of this Sûtra refers not only to Sûdras, but to women also, and not only to the drinking of Pañçagavya,

8. If a man has not connection with his wife in the natural season, unless it be on the days of the full and new moon, or because she is ill, he must fast for three days.

9. A false witness¹ must perform the penance ordained for killing a Brâhmana.

10. He who has (unawares) voided excrements without water (being near), must bathe in his clothes, pronounce the 'great words¹,' and offer a burnt-oblation².

11. One who has been surprised asleep by the sun rising or setting, must bathe in his clothes and mutter the Gâyatri one hundred and eight times.

12. He who has been bitten by a dog, a jackal, a tame pig, an ass, an ape, a crow, or a public prostitute, shall approach a river and (standing in it, shall) stop his breath sixteen times.

13. One who forgets the Vedic texts which he has studied, or who forsakes the sacred fires, must subsist upon alms for a year, bathing at the tree Savanas (morning, noon, and evening), sleeping upon the ground, and eating one meal a day.

14. For setting one's self up by false statements, and for falsely accusing or abusing a Guru, he must subsist upon milk for a month.

15. An atheist, one who leads the life of a member of the Kandâla or of other low castes that but also to the offering of burnt-oblations and the muttering of prayers.

9. ¹According to Nand., this particular species of criminals is only quoted as an instance of anupâtakina (criminals in the third degree, see XXXVI), who are all intended in this Sûtra.

10. ¹ See LV, 10. — ² 'The particle ka implies that he must touch a cow besides, as Manu directs (XI, 203).' (Nand.)

14. See XXXVII, 1, 3.

dwell outside the village (Bâhyas)¹, an ungrateful man, one who buys or sells with false weights, and one who deprives Brâhmanas of their livelihood (by robbing them of a grant made to them by the king or private persons, or by other bad practices), all those persons² must subsist upon alms for a year.

16. An unmarried elder brother whose younger brother is married, a younger brother married before the elder, an unmarried elder sister whose younger sister is married, the relative who gives such a damsel in marriage, and the priest who officiates at such a marriage, must perform the Kândrâyana.

17. He who sells living beings, land, religious merit (obtained by a sacrifice or otherwise), or Soma, must perform the Taptakrikkhâ.

18. He who sells fresh ginger¹, (edible) plants (such as rice or barley), perfumes, flowers, fruits, roots, skins, canes, (winnowing baskets or fans and the like) made of split bamboo, chaff, potsherds, hair, ashes, bone, cow-milk or curds, oil-cakes, sesamum, or oil, must perform the Prâgâpatya.

19. He who sells the fruit of the Sleshmâtaka tree, lac, bees-wax, shells, mother-of-pearl, tin, lead, iron, copper, or (sacrificial) vessels made of the horn of the rhinoceros, must perform the Kândrâyana.

20. He who sells dyed cloth, tin¹, precious

15. ¹ 'Or nâstikavṛtti means "one who receives his substance from an atheist."' See also Gaut. XV, 16. — ² 'The use of the particle ka implies that calumniators are also intended.' (Nand.)

17. See XLVI, 11.

18. ¹ The term ârda, which Nand. interprets by ârdrakam, might also be connected with the following word, and both together be translated by 'fresh plants.' See Y. III, 38.

20. ¹ Tin, perfumes, and, of the articles enumerated in Sûtra 21, stones, perfumes, sugar, honey, liquids or condiments (other than sugar, salt, and the like), or wool, must fast for three days.

21. He who sells meat, salt, lac, or milk, must perform the *Kândrâya*na.

22. And¹ all those persons (mentioned in Sûtras 17-21) must be initiated a second time.

23. He who has been riding (voluntarily) upon a camel¹, or upon an ass, and he who has (purposely) bathed, or slept, or eaten, quite naked, must stop his breath three times.

24. By muttering attentively the Gâyatrî three thousand times, (by dwelling) upon the pasture of cows, (and) by subsisting on milk for a month, he becomes free from the sin of accepting unlawful presents.

25. He who has (knowingly) offered a sacrifice for an unworthy person (such as a low-caste person, or an outcast), he who has performed the funeral rites for a stranger, he who has practised magic rites (in order to destroy an enemy), and he who has performed a sacrifice of the kind called *Ahîna*¹, (all those persons) may rid themselves of their lac, and milk have already been mentioned in Sûtras 18 and 19. Nand. tries to remove the difficulty in the second case, by stating the perfumes mentioned here to be perfumes of a different kind, and in the fourth case, by asserting that the milk of female buffalos, &c. is meant in Sûtra 21. But he interprets the two other terms as given above. Probably the passage is interpolated.

22. ¹ Nand. infers from the use of the particle kā that this rule applies equally to the persons mentioned in the next Sûtra.

23. ¹ 'The use of the particle vā, "or," implies that riding upon a cow, and other such animals, is also intended here.' (Nand.)

25. ¹ This kind of sacrifice is defined by Nand. as one connected with repeated drinking of the Soma juice, and lasting from two to twelve days. Medhâtithi (on Manu XI, 198) simply defines sins by performing three Krikkhra (Prâgâpatya) penances.

26. Those twice-born men, by whom the Gâyatri has not been repeated (and the other initiatory ceremonies performed), as the law directs, must be made to perform three (Prâgâpatya) penances and must be initiated according to custom.

27. Those twice-born men who are anxious to make an atonement for having committed an illegal act¹, or for having neglected the study of the Veda, must be made to perform the same penance.

28. Those Brâhmanas who have acquired property by base acts (such as living by the occupations of a lower caste, or accepting unlawful presents) become free from sin by relinquishing it, and by muttering (Veda texts) and practising austerities.

29. For omitting one of the regular acts enjoined in the revealed (and traditional) law, and for a breach of the rules laid down for a *Snâtaka*¹, a fast is ordained as atonement.

it as a sacrifice extending over two days or more; Kullûka (ibid.) states that it lasts three days or more, and that it is said in the Veda to cause impurity. See also Weber, Ind. Stud. X, 355.

26. The recitation and repetition of the Gâyatri is one of the chief elements of the ceremony of initiation. The words with which the pupil must address his teacher on this occasion are given by Nand.; they are quoted from Âsv. I, 21, 4, and Sânkh. II, 5, 10-11. See also Gaut. I, 46, with Dr. Bühler's note.

27. ¹ 'I.e. Brâhmanas and others who have gained their livelihood (in times of distress) by such occupations as are lawful for other castes only, and who, when the times of distress are over, wish to atone for those actions.' (Nand.)

29. ¹ Regarding the meaning of this term, see above, XXVIII, 42, note. The rules to be observed by a Snâtaka are given in Chapter LXXI.

30. For attacking a Brâhmana (by raising a stick or a weapon against him), the *Krikkh*ra (Prâgâpatya) penance must be performed; for striking him, the *Atikrikkh*ra; and for fetching blood from him, the *Krikkhrâtikrikkh*ra.

31. With sinners, who have not expiated their crime, let a man not transact business of any kind. But a man who knows the law must not blame (or shun) those who have expiated it.

32. Let him not, however, live (or have any intercourse) with those who have killed children, or with ungrateful persons, or with those who have slain one come for protection, or a woman, even though such sinners may have obtained their absolution, as directed by the law.

33. (An old man) who has passed his eightieth year, a youth under the age of sixteen, women, and sick persons have only to perform half of every penance¹.

34. In order to remove those sins for which no particular mode of expiation has been mentioned, penances must be prescribed, which shall be in accordance with the ability of the offender, and with the heaviness of his offence.

LIV.

1. Now follow the penances for secret sins.

30. For the *Atikrikkh*ra penance, see M. XI, 214.

33. ¹ Nand. adds, that a youth under the age of sixteen, who has not been initiated, and old women, as well as girls who have not yet attained maturity, must only perform a quarter of it, as directed in a Smṛiti.

LIV. 1. M. XI, 248; Y. III, 301; Gaut. XXIV, 1. — 2, 3. M. XI, 249, 260; Y. III, 302; Gaut. XXIV, 10. — 4. Gaut. XXIV,

2. The killer of a Brâhmaṇa is purified, if, having approached a river (and bathed in it), he restrains his breath sixteen times, and takes only one meal, consisting of food fit for offerings, each day, for a month.

3. At the end of this rite he must give a milch cow.

4. By performing the same rite and by muttering (while standing in the water) the Aghamarshana¹ (instead of stopping his breath), a drinker of spirituous liquor² becomes free from sin.

5. (By performing the same rite and) muttering the Gâyatri one thousand and ten times (each day), a stealer of gold becomes free from guilt.

6. One who has connection with a Guru's wife¹ (becomes free from sin) by fasting for three days and muttering the Purushasûkta² and (at the same time) offering a burnt-oblation.

7. Even as the horse-sacrifice, the king of sacrifices, removes all sin, the hymn of Aghamarshana likewise removes all sin.

8. Let a twice-born man stop his breath, in order to rid himself of all sin; all sins committed by a

10. — 6. M. XI, 252; Y. III, 305. — 7. M. XI, 260. — 10-21. M. II, 76-87.

2. Nand. infers from a text of Manu (XI, 249), that this rule refers to one who has killed a Brâhmaṇa intentionally.

3. This rule, Nand. infers from a passage of Yâgñavalkya (III, 305), applies also to the penances mentioned in the following Sûtra.

4. ¹ Rîg-veda X, 190. — ² 'I. e. one who has knowingly drunk it, the penance for drinking it unknowingly being stated by Yâgñavalkya (III, 304).' (Nand.)

5, 6. ¹ Nand. infers from M. XI, 251, 252, that these two Sûtras also refer to penances for crimes intentionally committed. — ² Rîg-veda X, 90.

twice-born man may be removed by repeated Prânâyâmas.

9. It is called a Prânâyâma, if a man, stopping the breath (which comes from the mouth and from the nostrils), recites the Gâyatrî three times, together with the Vyâhr̥tis ('words')¹, with the sacred syllable Om, and with the (text called) *Sîras*².

10. The lord of creatures (Brahman) has milked out from the three Vedas the letter A, the letter U, and the letter M (of which the sacred syllable Om is composed), and (the three sacred words) Bhûh, Bhuvaḥ, Svaḥ (earth, the atmosphere, and heaven).

11. The lord of creatures, the supreme deity, has also milked out from the three Vedas successively the three verses of the sacred stanza which begins with the word 'tad,' and is called Sâvitṛî (or Gâyatrî).

12. By muttering, every morning and evening, that syllable and that stanza, preceded by the three 'words,' a Brâhmaṇa will obtain that religious merit which the (study of the) Veda confers, just as if he had actually studied the Veda.

13. By repeating those three (Om, the 'words,' and the Gâyatrî every day) for a month out of the village, a thousand times, a twice-born man is purified even from a mortal sin, as a snake (is freed) from its withered skin.

14. Any member of the Brâhmaṇa, Kshatriya, or Vaisya castes, who does not know those three texts,

9. ¹ The three Vyâhr̥tis, 'words,' or Mahâvyâhr̥tis, 'great words,' are quoted in the next Sloka. — ² It begins with the words, 'O ye waters, who are splendour and ambrosia.' (Nand., and Mitâksharâ on Y. I, 23.)

or fails to recite them in the proper season, meets with reproach among the virtuous.

15. The three imperishable 'great words,' preceded by the syllable Om, and the Gâyatrî consisting of three divisions, have to be recognised as the mouth (or beginning) of the Veda¹.

16. He who repeats that stanza (preceded by the syllable Om and the three 'words') carefully every day for three years, will be absorbed in the highest Brahman after death, move as freely as air, and become as pure as air.

17. The monosyllable (Om) is the highest Brahman, the stoppings of the breath are the best of austerities, but nothing is more exalted than the Gâyatrî; (declaring the) truth is better than silence.

18. All religious acts ordained in the Veda, (whether) consisting in burnt-oblations or sacrifices (or alms-giving or other pious observances), perish (after the merit obtained by them has been exhausted); but the syllable Om (akshara) must be known to be imperishable (akshara), as it is identical with Brahman, the lord of creatures.

19. The act of reciting (the syllable Om, the 'words,' and the Gâyatrî) is ten times better than the (Gyotishtoma or other) sacrifices prescribed (by the Veda); it is a hundred times better when muttered in a low voice; it is a thousand times better when repeated mentally only.

20. The four Pākayagñas¹ (small or domestic

15. ¹To explain this, Nand. quotes a passage of Ârvalâyana (Grîhya-sûtra III, 2, 3, where, however, part only of this quotation is found) to the effect that the study of the Veda has to be begun by pronouncing Om, the 'words,' and the Gâyatrî.

20. ¹'The four Pākayagñas are the offerings to gods, goblins (or "all beings"), manes, and men, together with the offering to offerings), together with the sacrifices prescribed (in the Veda), though all united, are not equal to a sixteenth part of the sacrifice performed by reciting (those sacred prayers).

21. A Brâhmana may beyond doubt obtain final emancipation by solely repeating (those prayers), whether he perform any other religious observance or no ; one who is benevolent towards all creatures (and does not slay them for sacrifices) is justly called a Brâhmana (or one united to Brahman).

LVI.

1. Now then¹ follow the purifying Mantras from all the Vedas.

Brahman.' (Nand.; see LIX, 20-25.) Kullûka, on the contrary (on M. II, 86), refers the term Pâkayagña to the four first only out of those five offerings, and this interpretation, besides being more simple than Nand.'s, is preferable for several other reasons. First, the 'offering to Brahman' includes the daily recitation of the Gâyatrî, which is mentioned here as opposed to the four Pâkayagñas. Secondly, the number of four Pâkayagñas is equally given in the Kâthaka Grîhya-sûtra ; and Devapâla, in his Commentary on that work, gives a definition of them, which agrees in the main with Kullûka's. 'Four' Pâkayagñas are mentioned in the Grîhya-sûtras of Kausika, Pâraskara, and Sâṅkhâya also. See Weber, Ind. Stud. X, 48. Thirdly, the Pâkayagñas are brought in here as opposed to the Vidhiyagñas or 'sacrifices prescribed by the Veda.' This is probably because the latter are offered in the triad of sacred fires, whereas the term Pâkayagña, in its narrower use, denotes the oblations offered in the domestic fire. Hence, it might come to include the 'offering to men,' i.e. the feeding of a guest, but certainly not the study of the Veda.

LVI. M. XI, 250-260 ; Y. III, 302-305 ; Gaut. XIX, 12 ; XXIV.

1. ¹'Now then,' i.e. the previous chapter containing an enumeration of secret sins, an enumeration of the purifying Mantras, by which they may be expiated, follows next. (Nand.)

2. By muttering them, or reciting them at a burnt-oblation, the twice-born are purified from their sins. (They are as follows:)

3. The Aghamarshana; 4. The Devakṛita; 5. The Suddhavatis; 6. The Taratsamandīya; 7. The Kūshmāndīs; 8. The Pāvamāntis; 9. The Durgāsāvitri; 10. The Atīshaṅgas; 11. The Padastobhas; 12. The Vyāhṛiti Sāmans; 13. The Bhârundās; 14. The Kandrasâman; 15. The

3. Rig-veda X, 190, 1. (This and the following references are based upon Nand.'s statements.)

4. Vâgasaneyi Samhitâ VIII, 13.

5. Rig-veda VIII, 84, 7-9.

6. Rig-veda IX, 58.

7. Vâgas. Samh. XX, 14-16 (Taitt. Ârany. X, 3-5).

8. The term Pāvamānyaḥ in its most common use denotes the ninth book of the Rig-veda, but Nand. here refers it to Taitt. Brâhm. I, 4, 8.

9. Rig-veda I, 99, 1.

10. Sâma-veda II, 47-49. Regarding this and the following Sâmans see also Benfey, Ind. Stud. III, 199 seq., Burnell's Index to the Ârsheya Brâhmana, and S. Goldschmidt's remarks in his edition of the Âranyaka Samhitâ, Transactions of the Berlin Academy, 1868, p. 246 seq.

11. Sâma-veda II, 578-580.

12. 'The Vyāhṛiti Sāmans, i. e. bhûḥ and the four others.' (Nand.) The four others are, bhuvāḥ, svaḥ, satyam, purushaḥ. See Ūhya-gâna III, 2, 10, in Satyavrata Sâmaśrami's edition of the Sâma-veda Samhitâ.

13. 'Bhârundā is the name of certain Sāmans, twenty-one in number, which begin with the words, yat te krishnaḥ sakuna (Rig-veda X, 16, 6). They are contained in the Âranyagâna.' (Nand.) The reading of the last word is doubtful. At all events, the verse quoted by Nand. does not occur in the Âranyagâna. It may be that the Sāmans called Ekavimsatyanugâna are meant, which are found in that work, though they do not contain the verse referred to.

14. Sâma-veda I, 147.

15. Âranyaka Samhitâ IV, 33, 34, in Goldschmidt's edition, = Rig-veda X, 90, 1, 4.

two Sâmans called Purushavrata; 16. The Abliṅga; 17. The Bârhaspatya; 18. The Gosûkta; 19. The Âsvasûkta; 20. The two Sâmans called Kandra-sûkta; 21. The Satarudriya; 22. The Atharvasiras; 23. The Trisuparna; 24. The Mahâvrata; 25. The Nârâyanyia; 26. And the Purushasûkta;

27. The three Âgyadohas¹, the Rathantara², the Agnivrata³, the Vâmadevya⁴, and the Brîhatsâman⁵, properly chanted, purify man from sin; and if he wishes he may obtain through them recollection of his existence in a former life.

LVII.

1. Now¹ (the following persons) must be avoided:

16. Sâma-veda II, 1187.

17. Sâma-veda, I, 91.

18. Sâma-veda I, 122.

19. The same text as in the preceding Sûtra.

20. Sâma-veda I, 350. Nand. infers from a passage of Vâsishtha (XXVIII, 12) that ka refers to Sâma-veda II, 812, and I, 153.

21. Kâṭhaka XVII, 11-16, &c.

22. 'The text beginning with the words, brahmâ devânâṃ prathamâḥ sambabhûva, "Brahman rose first among the gods."' (Nand.) The Atharvasira Upanishad has the words, very near the beginning, aham ekaḥ prathamam âsīt. See the Calcutta edition.

23. Taitt. Ârany. X, 48-50.

24. Sâma-veda I, 91.

25. Taitt. Ârany. X passim.

26. Rig-veda X, 90, 1. Nand. infers from a passage of Vâsishtha (XXVIII, 13) that ka refers to Rig-veda X, 71, and I, 90, 6-8.

27. ¹ Sâma-veda I, 67. — ² Sâma-veda I, 233. — ³ Sâma-veda I, 27. — ⁴ Sâma-veda I, 169. — ⁵ Sâma-veda I, 234.

LVII. 1, 2. M. II, 39; Y. I, 38. — 3. M. XI, 182-185; Y. III, 295; Âpast. I, 10, 28, 6-8; Gaut. XX, 1. — 4. Âpast. I, 1, 2, 5. — 6, 7. M. IV, 186. — 8. M. IV, 190. — 9. M. IV, 186; Y. I, 213. — 10. M. IV, 247, 250; Y. I, 214; Âpast. I, 6, 18, 1; I, 6, 19, 11; Gaut. XVII, 3. — 11, 12. M. IV, 248, 249; Âpast. I, 6, 19,

2. Vrâtyas (i. e. those for whom the ceremony of initiation has not been performed);

3. Outcasts;

4. Descendants within the third degree¹ of an outcast mother or father, if they (or their outcast ancestors) have not been purified (by a penance).

5. (As a rule) the food of all such persons must not be eaten, nor gifts be accepted from them¹.

6. He must avoid accepting repeated gifts from those whose presents must not be accepted¹.

7. By accepting such gifts, Brâhmaṇas lose their divine lustre.

8. And he who, not knowing the law regarding acceptance of gifts, accepts (illicit) gifts, sinks to hell together with the giver.

9. He who, being worthy to receive gifts, does not accept them, obtains that world which is destined for the liberal-minded (after death).

10. Firewood, water, roots, fruits, protection, meat, honey, a bed, a seat, a house, flowers, sour

14. — 13. M. IV, 251; Y. I, 216; Gaut. XVII, 4. — 14. M. IV, 213; Y. I, 215. — 15, 16. M. IV, 252, 253. — 16. Y. I, 166; Gaut. XVII, 6.

1. ¹ 'There are two classes of sinners, the repentant and the unrepenting. The penances to be performed by the former having been enumerated, he goes on in the present chapter to state that the latter must be avoided.' (Nand.)

3. See XXXV, 1-5.

4. ¹ Nand. refers the term 'in the third degree' to the three ascendants of the parents. The same infers from a passage of Gautama (XX, 1) that the particle ka is used in order to include a murderer of a king also.

5. ¹ Nand. infers from another text of Gautama (XX, 8) that it is also forbidden to converse with them.

6. ¹ 'It is no sin then, in one who is in distress, to accept a present once from them.' (Nand.) See 14.

milk, and vegetables he must not disdain to accept when they are offered to him.

11. Even if an offender (but not a mortal sinner) has beckoned and offered alms to him, which had been brought previously for the purpose, the lord of creatures has declared that they may be accepted from him.

12. Neither will the manes eat (his funeral oblations offered to them) for fifteen years, nor will the fire convey his burnt-offerings (to the gods) if he rejects such alms.

13. If he wishes to provide for his (parents or other) Gurus or for (his wife or other) such persons as he is bound to maintain, or if he wants to worship the manes or the gods, he may accept gifts from any one; but he must not satisfy himself with them.

14. But even in those cases, and though he be worthy to receive presents, let him not accept them from a dissolute woman, from a eunuch, from an outcast, or from an enemy.

15. And if his parents are dead, or if he is living apart from them in a house of his own, he must never, while seeking to obtain food for himself, accept alms from any other persons but those who are of respectable descent (and belong to a twice-born caste).

16. One who ploughs the ground for half the crop (and gives the other half to the king or a private person, who is the owner), a friend of the family, a (house-)slave, a herdsman, a barber, and

11. 'The use of the particle ka implies that Kusa grass &c. is likewise intended, as Yâgñavalkya (I, 214) says.' (Nand.)

16. The reason of this rule, according to Nand., lies in this, that one who announces himself (with the words 'I am your slave'): the food of all such may be eaten, although they are Sûdras.

LVIII.

1. The property of householders is of three kinds:

2. White, mottled, and black.

3. By those obsequies which a man performs with white property, he causes (his departed ancestor) to be born again as a god.

4. By performing them with mottled property, he causes him to be born as a man.

5. By performing them with black property, he causes him to be born as an animal.

6. What has been acquired by the mode of livelihood of their own caste, by members of any caste, is called 'white.'

7. What has been acquired by the mode of livelihood of the caste next below in order to their own, is called 'mottled.'

8. What has been acquired by the mode of livelihood of a caste by two or more degrees lower than their own, is called 'black.'

9. What has been inherited, friendly gifts, and all the castes mentioned in this Sûtra are not properly Sûdras, but the offspring of unions between parents of a different caste, herdsmen being, according to Parâsara, the offspring of a Kshatriya with a Sûdra damsel, &c. The same considers the use of the particle ka to imply that potters are also intended. See Gaut. XVII, 6.

LVIII. 1, 2. Nârada 3, 46. — 9-12. Nârada 3, 53, 47-49, 51.

1. As the obligations of a householder, which will be discussed further on (in LIX), cannot be fulfilled without a certain amount of wealth, he discusses in the present chapter the origin of wealth. (Nand.) the dowry of a wife, that is called white property, for members of any caste indiscriminately.

10. What has been acquired as a bribe, as a fee (for crossing a river and the like, or for a bride, &c.), or by the sale of forbidden articles (such as lac, or salt), or as a return for a benefit conferred, is denoted 'mottled wealth.'

11. What has been acquired by servile attendance¹, by gambling, by thieving, by begging, by deceit (as if a man says that he wants a present for another and takes it himself, or by forging gold or other metals), by robbery, or by fraud (as if a man shows one thing to a purchaser and delivers another to him instead), is called 'black property.'

12. Whatever a man may do (in this world) with anything (he has, whether white, mottled, or black property) he will get his reward accordingly; both in the next world and in this.

LIX.

1. A householder must perform the Pākayagñas¹

¹¹. ¹ Nand. interprets the term pārsvika by 'moving a chowrie to and fro before one's master, while standing by his side.'

LIX. 1. M. IV, 67; Gaut. V, 7-9. — 1, 2. M. IV, 25; Y. I, 97. — 3, 4. Âsv. I, 9; I, 10; Gobh. I, 3, 5-9; Pâr. I, 9; I, 12; Sâṅkh. I, 3. — 2, 4-9. Gaut. VIII, 19, 20. — 4-9. M. IV, 25, 26; XI, 7, 8; Y. I, 124, 125. — 5-7. Âsv. I, 11; Gobh. III, 8; Pâr. III, 1; III, 8; Sâṅkh. III, 8. — 10. M. XI, 27; Y. I, 126. — 11. M. XI, 24; Y. I, 127. — 12. M. XI, 25; Y. I, 127. — 13. M. III, 84, 90, &c. (see below, LXVII). — 14, 15, 18. See the references given below (ad LXVII). — 19, 20. M. III, 68, 69. — 21-25. M. III, 70; Y. I, 102; Âpast. I, 4, 12, 16; I, 4, 13, 1; Gaut. V, 3, 9; Âsv. III, 1, 1-3; Pâr. II, 9, 1. — 26. M. III, 72. — 27-30. M. III, 77, 78, 80, 81.

1. ¹ The term Pākayagña is used in a more restricted sense here than above (LV, 20). Nand. interprets it by 'Vaisvadeva, Sthâ-(small or domestic offerings) in the fire kindled at the time of marriage².

2. He must offer the Agnihotra (or daily oblations of clarified butter) every morning and evening (in the Tretâ fires).

3. He must offer burnt-oblations to the gods (in case the Agnihotra cannot be performed).

4. Let him offer the two Darsapurṇamâsas on the days of conjunction and opposition of the sun and moon.

5. Once in each half of the year, (at the two solstices, let him offer) the Pasubandha (animal sacrifice).

6. In autumn and summer let him offer the Âgrayana (oblation of first-fruits); lîpâka, Sravanâkarman, and similar sacrifices,' i. e. all the sacrifices which have to be performed in the one household fire, as opposed to those for which a Tretâ or triad of sacred fires is required (see Stenzler, note on Âsv. I, 1, 2). Gautama (VIII, 18) enumerates seven Pâkayagñas, among which, however, the Vaisvadeva is not included. The Vaisvadeva is described in LXVII. Regarding the other Pâkayagñas, see the Gṛhya-sûtras. —² 'Or in the fire kindled at the division of the family estate, or in the fire kindled on his becoming master of the house.' (Nand.) See Sâṅkh. I, 1, 3-5.

2. The three Tretâ fires have been enumerated above (XXXI, 8). Regarding the Agnihotra and the sacrifices mentioned in 4-8, see Weber, Ind. Stud. X, 328-337, 343-349, 352-396.

4. 'One who has performed the ceremony of Agnyâdhâna (kindling the sacred fires) must perform these two offerings in the Tretâ fires, one who has not done so, in the household or nuptial fire.' (Nand.) This remark applies equally to the sacrifices mentioned in 5-7.

6. 'If the Âgrayana is offered in the household fire, it must consist of a Sthâlîpâka (cooked offering of grain).' (Nand.) See the Gṛhya-sûtras above cited. Nand. further explains that in autumn the first-fruits of rice, and in summer the firstlings of

7. Or when rice and barley are ripening (in winter and spring).

8. He who has a sufficient supply of food for more than three years (shall perform the Soma-sacrifice)¹.

9. (He shall perform) the Soma-sacrifice once a year (in spring).

10. If he has not wealth (sufficient to defray the expenses of the Pasubandha, Soma, Kâturmâsya, and other Srauta sacrifices), he shall perform the Ishî Vaisvânari.

11. Let him not make an offering of food obtained as alms from a Sûdra.

12. If he has begged articles for a sacrifice (and obtained them), let him employ them all for that purpose (and never for himself).

13. Every evening and morning let him offer up the Vaisvadeva ;

14. And¹ let him give alms to an ascetic (afterwards).

15. For giving alms and showing due honour to the recipient (by pouring water on his hands both before and afterwards) he obtains the same reward as for giving a cow.

barley, or, according to Âpastamba, of Venuyava, have to be offered, and he infers from another text of the same author that the particle ka here refers to an oblation of Syâmâka grain, which has to be offered in the rainy season. The two passages in question are not found in Âpastamba's Dharma-sûtra, but Weber, loc. cit., quotes them from Kâtyâyana.

8. ¹ According to Nand., the Soma-sacrifices here referred to are of the kâmya species (offered in order to obtain the gratification of a special desire).

14. ¹ Nand. infers from the use of the particle ka, and from a text of Parâsara, that an injunction to give alms to a student is also intended here.

16. If there is no ascetic (or other person worthy to receive alms), he must give a mouthful to cows ;

17. Or he must cast it into fire.

18. If there is food in the house, he must not reject a mendicant, (who arrives) after he has taken his meal himself.

19. A householder has five places where animals are liable to be destroyed : his wooden mortar, his slab to grind wheat or condiments upon, his fire-place, his water-pot, and his broom.

20. For the sake of expiating offences committed (by ignorantly destroying life) in those places, he must perform the (five) sacrifices addressed to the Veda, to the gods, to all created beings (or 'to the goblins'), to the manes, and to men.

21. Privately reciting (and teaching) the Veda is the sacrifice addressed to the Veda.

22. The regular burnt-oblation (Vaisvadeva) is the sacrifice addressed to the gods.

23. The Pitṛitarpana (refreshing the manes with food and water) is the sacrifice addressed to the manes.

24. The Bali-offering is the sacrifice addressed to all creatures (or 'to the goblins').

25. The sacrifice addressed to men consists in honouring a guest.

26. He who does not give their share to these five, the gods, his guests, (his wife and children and others,) whom he is bound to maintain, his manes, and himself, is not alive, though he breathes.

18. 'The expression, "if there is food in the house," indicates that he is not bound to cook a fresh meal for his guest.' (Nand.)

27. These (three), the student, the hermit, and the ascetic, derive their existence from the order of householders; therefore must a householder not treat them with disdain, when they have arrived (at his house at the proper time for begging alms).

28. The householder offers sacrifices, the householder practises austerities, the householder distributes gifts; therefore is the order of householders the first of all.

29. The *Rishis*¹, the manes, the gods, all creatures (dogs, &c.), and guests beg householders for support; therefore is the order of householders the best of all.

30. If a householder is intent upon pursuing the three objects of life (virtue, love, and wealth), upon constantly distributing presents of food, upon worshipping the gods, upon honouring the Brâhmanas, upon discharging his duty of privately reciting (and teaching) the Veda, and upon refreshing the manes (with oblations of balls of rice, water, and the like), he will attain the world of Indra.

LX.

1. In (the last watch of the night, which is called)

27. Nand. refers the term bhikshu, which has been rendered by 'ascetic,' i. e. a member of the fourth order, to the six sorts of beggars enumerated by Parâsara. But as the first three orders are mentioned in this Sloka, it is certainly more natural to translate the term as has been done above.

29. ¹ Nand. thinks that hermits or members of the third order are meant by this term. But it seems preferable to refer it to the Rishi authors of the Veda, to whom the first of the five sacrifices, the study of the Veda, is more immediately addressed. See Âpast. I, 4, 13, 1; Gaut. V, 3.

LX. 1. M. IV, 92; Y. I, 115. — 1, 2. M. IV, 50; Y. I, 16; Âpast.

the hour sacred to Brahman, let him rise and void his excrements.

2. By night (let him void them) facing the south, by day and during either twilight (let him void them) facing the north.

3. (He must) not (void them) on earth which has not been previously covered (with grass and the like);

4. Nor on a ploughed field;

5. Nor in the shade of a tree (fit to be used for sacrifices);

6. Nor on barren soil; 7. Nor on a spot abounding in fresh grass; 8. Nor where there are worms or insects; 9. Nor in a ditch (or hole, or upon the roots of a tree); 10. Nor on an ant-hill; 11. Nor on a path; 12. Nor on a public road; 13. Nor in a place previously defiled by another person; 14. Nor in a garden; 15. Nor in the vicinity of a garden or of (a reservoir of) water; 16. Nor on ashes; 17. Nor on coal; 18. Nor on

I, 11, 31, 1; Gaut. IX, 41-43. — 3. M. IV, 49; Âpast. I, 11, 30, 15; Gaut. IX, 38. — 4. M. IV, 46; Âpast. I, 11, 30, 18. — 5. Âpast. loc. cit. 16; Gaut. IX, 40. — 8-10. M. IV, 46, 47. — 11, 12. M. IV, 45; Âpast. loc. cit. 18; Gaut. IX, 40. — 11, 19. Y. I, 134. — 15, 21. M. IV, 46, 56; Y. I, 134, 137; Âpast. loc. cit. 18. — 16, 18. M. IV, 45; Gaut. IX, 40. — 22. M. IV, 48; Y. I, 134; Âpast. 20. — 23-26. M. IV, 49; V, 136, 137. — 23. Âpast. 15; Gaut. IX, 37. — 24. Y. I, 17. Chapters LX-LXIV treat of the daily duties of a householder. (Nand.)

6. Nand. infers from the use of the particle ka, that the following places (mentioned by Manu IV, 46, according to Nand.'s reading, which differs from the traditional one) are also included in this prohibition: a river, a mountain, the ruins of a temple, and the top of a mountain.

17. Nand. infers from the use of the particle ka, and from a text of Yama, that chaff and potsherds are also intended here.

cow-dung; 19. Nor in a fold for cattle; 20. Nor in the air; 21. Nor in water;

22. Nor facing the wind, or fire, or the moon, or the sun, or a woman, or a (father or other) Guru, or a Brâhmaṇa;

23. Nor without having enveloped his head;

24. Having cleaned his hindparts with a clod of earth, or with a brick, (or with wood or grass,) and seizing his organ (with his left, after having removed his garment), he must rise and clean himself with water and earth (previously) fetched for the purpose, so as to remove the smell and the filth.

25. The organ must once be cleaned with earth, the hindparts three times, the one hand (the left) ten times, both hands together seven times, and both feet together three times.

26. Such is the purification ordained for householders; it is double for students; treble for hermits; and quadruple for ascetics.

LXI.

1. A householder must not use¹ Palâsa-wood for cleaning his teeth.

2. Nor (must he use the twigs of) the Sleshmân-

20. 'I. e. in an apartment on the roof or in any other such place.' (Nand.)

LXI. 1. Âpast. I, 11, 32, 9; Gaut. IX, 44.

1. ¹Literally 'eat,' adyât. In 16 and 17 the synonymous verbs bhaksh and as are used. Nevertheless it can hardly be doubted that both of the two modes of cleaning the teeth, which appear to have been customary, are indicated in this chapter: the one consisting in brushing them with little sticks or twigs provided with a brush (see 16), the other in chewing twigs. Unfortunately the reading of Nand.'s gloss on the term sakûrka in 16 is uncertain.

2. Regarding the Vibhîtaka tree, see Dr. Bühler's Kashmir Report, p. 8.

taka (or Selu) plant, nor of the soap plant, nor of the Vibhītaka (or Kalidruma) tree, nor of the Dhava plant, nor of the Dhâmani tree (for that purpose).

3. Nor (the twigs of) the Bandhûka (or Bandhugivaka) plant, nor of the Nirgundî shrub, nor of the Sigru, Tilva, and Tinduka trees.

4. Nor (the twigs of) the Kovidâra (Yugapatraka), Samî, Pîlu (Gudaphala), Pippala (holy fig-tree), Înguda, or Guggula trees;

5. Nor (the twigs of) the Pâribhâdraka (Sakrapâdapa), or tamarind, or Moḥaka, or Semul trees, nor those of the hemp plant;

6. Nor sweet plants (such as liquorice sticks);

7. Nor sour plants (such as Âmlikâs);

8. Nor twigs that have withered on the stem;

9. Nor perforated (or otherwise faulty) wood;

10. Nor stinking wood;

11. Nor smooth wood;

12. He must not (use the sticks) facing the south or west.

13. He must use them facing the north or east;

14. He may use (the twigs of) the banyan or Asana trees, or of the Arka plant, or of the Khadira, or Karaṅga, or Badara (jujube), or Sal, or Nimb trees, or of the Arimeda shrub, or of the Apâmârğa or Malatî plants, or of the Kakubha or Bèl trees;

15. Or of the Kashâya tree, or of the Tikta or Kaṭuka plants.

16. Before sunrise let him silently clean his teeth with a stick, which must be as thick as the top of the little finger, provided with one end that may be chewed (or 'with a brush'), and twelve Âṅgulas long.

17. Having washed¹ and used the stick for cleaning the teeth, he must take care to leave it in a clean place; he must never make use of it on the day of new moon (or on the day of full moon).

LXII.

1. The part at the root of the little finger of a twice-born man is called the Tīrtha sacred to Pragāpati.

2. The part at the root of the thumb is called the Tīrtha sacred to Brahman.

3. The part at the tops of the fingers is called the Tīrtha sacred to the gods.

4. The part at the root of the forefinger is called the Tīrtha sacred to the manes.

5. Let him sip water, which has not been put to the fire and is free from foam (and bubbles), which has not been poured out by a Sūdra (or other uninitiated person), or by a man who has one hand only, and which has no saline flavour¹; and (let him sip it) in a clean place, duly seated, placing (his right hand) between his knees, facing the east or the north (or the north-east), attentively regarding the water, and in a cheerful mood.

6. Let him sip water thrice with the Tīrtha sacred

17. ¹It must be washed both before and after using it. (Nand.)

LXII. 1-4. M. II, 59; Y. I, 19. — 5-8. M. II, 60, 61; Y. I, 20; Âpast. I, 5, 16, 1-7; Gaut. I, 36. — 9. M. II, 62; Y. I, 21.

1. Nand. observes that this chapter and the preceding one follow in order upon Chapter LX, because the purificatory rite described at the end of the latter is immediately followed by the Âśamana (sipping of water), and then by the Dantadhāvana (cleaning the teeth), both of which acts, however, have to be performed on other occasions also, as after a meal, &c.

5. ¹The term kshāra, 'saline flavour,' includes bad or spoiled water of any kind, according to Nand.

to Brahman (or with the Tīrthas sacred to the gods and to Pragâpati respectively).

7. Let him wipe his lips twice (with the root of his thumb).

8. Let him touch the cavities (above his navel)¹, his head, and his breast with water.

9. By water which reaches either their heart, or their throat, or their palate respectively, members of the three twice-born castes are purified each in his turn; a woman and a Sûdra are purified by water which has once touched their palate.

LXIII.

1. In order to obtain wealth and for the sake of security he shall apply to a lord.

2. He must not travel alone; 3. Nor with wicked companions; 4. Nor with Sûdras; 5. Nor with enemies; 6. Nor too early in the morning; 7. Nor too late in the evening; 8. Nor in the twilight; [9. Nor at noon; 10. Nor near water;] 11. Nor in too great a hurry; 12. Nor at night;

8. ¹ See XXIII, 51.

LXIII. 1. M. IV, 33; Gaut. IX, 63. — 2-9. M. IV, 140, 55, 60. — 13-17, 19, 21. M. IV, 67, 131, 57. — 24, 25. M. IV, 78; Y. I, 139; Âpast. II, 8, 20, 11; Gaut. IX, 15. — 26-28. Sâṅkh. IV, 12, 15; M. IV, 39; Y. I, 133; Gaut. IX, 66. — 40. M. IV, 130. — 41. M. IV, 132. — 42. M. IV, 38; Gaut. IX, 52. — 43. M. IV, 38; Gobh. III, 5, 11. — 46. Âsv. III, 9, 6; M. IV, 77; Y. I, 139; Âpast. I, 11, 32, 26; Gaut. IX, 32. — 47. Âpast. I, 11, 32, 27; Gaut. IX, 33. — 49. Gobh. III, 5, 13; Pâr. II, 7, 6; Sâṅkh. IV, 12, 28. — 51. M. IV, 138, 139; Y. I, 117; Âpast. II, 5, 11, 5-7; Gaut. VI, 24, 25.

1. 'A lord' (īśvara) means a king or another rich man, in his own country, or in another country. (Nand.) See also Dr. Bühler's note on Gaut. IX, 63, where the same Sûtra occurs.

9, 10. Sûtras 9 and 10 are wanting in Dr. Bühler's MS.

13. Nor (let him travel) without cessation with (horses or other) beasts of draught that are quite young, diseased, or (otherwise) afflicted ;

14. Nor with such as are deficient in limb ; 15. Nor with weak ones ; 16. Nor with young bulls ; 17. Nor with untrained animals.

18. He must not appease his hunger and allay his thirst without having first given grass and water to the animals.

19. He must not stop at a place where four ways meet ; 20. Nor at night at the root of a tree ; 21. Nor in an empty house ; 22. Nor upon a meadow ; 23. Nor in a stable ;

24. Nor (must he stand) on hair, on the husks of grain, on potsherds, on bones, on ashes, or coal ;

25. Nor on seeds of the cotton plant.

26. When he passes by a place where four ways meet, let him turn his right side towards it.

27. And let him do the same in passing by the image of a deity ;

28. And in passing by well-known large trees.

29. After having seen a fire, or a Brâhmana (with his turban on), or a public prostitute, or a jar filled (with water), or a looking-glass, or an umbrella, or a flag, or a banner¹, or a Bèl tree, or a lid (or platter), or a palace built in the shape of a certain diagram (or in the form of a quadrangle without a western gate)² ;

29. ¹ 'More precisely the term patâkâ signifies "a staff, by which a piece of cloth torn in the middle is fastened."' (Nand.)—

² 'The particle ka is added at the end of this enumeration in order to include in it perfumes, lamps, and other objects mentioned in a Smṛiti.' (Nand.)

30. Or a fan, or a chowrie, or a horse, or an elephant, or a goat, or a cow (having a calf), or sour milk, or milk, or honey, or white mustard ;

31. Or a lute, or sandal-wood, or a weapon, or fresh cow-dung, or fruit, or a flower, or a fresh pot-herb, or Goroṣānā, or blades of Dûrvā grass ;

32. Or a turban, or ornaments, or jewels, or gold, or silver, or clothes, or a seat, or a vehicle, or (raw) meat ;

33. Or a golden vase, or cultivated land which is being carried away (by a stream), or a single (bull or other) piece of cattle tied with a rope, or an unmarried damsel (clad in white), or a (boiled) fish, (let him turn his right side towards them and) go on.

34. Having seen one intoxicated, or insane, or deformed, he must turn back ;

35. (Also, if he has seen) one who has vomited, or one who has been purged, or one who has had his head shorn, or one who wears all his hair tied in one knot, or a dwarf ;

30. 'The particle ka, which is added at the end of this Sûtra, refers to a king, his ministers, his domestic priest, &c., as indicated in a Smṛiti passage.' (Nand.)

31. Nand. infers from another Smṛiti passage that ka here refers to a crow and to a Sûdra or workman with his tools.

32. Nand. here refers ka to shells and other objects mentioned in a Smṛiti.

33. Nand. here refers ka to a dead body and other objects enumerated in a Smṛiti.

34. The enumeration of auspicious objects in Sûtras 29-33 is followed by an enumeration of inauspicious objects in Sûtras 34-38. (Nand.)

35. The particle ka refers to enemies, outcasts, and others mentioned in a Smṛiti. (Nand.)

36. Or (if he has seen) one wearing a dress (of a reddish-yellow colour) dyed with Kashâya¹, or an ascetic, or one smeared² (with ashes)³;

37. Or (if he has seen) oil, or sugar, or dry cow-dung, or fire-wood, or grass (other than Kusa or Dûrvâ grass), or Palâsa (and other leaves, other than betel leaves), ashes, or coal¹;

38. Or (if he has seen) salt, or a eunuch, or (the spirituous liquor called) Âsava, or an impotent man, or cotton cloth, or a rope, or an iron chain for the feet, or a person with dishevelled hair.

39. (If he sees), while about to begin a journey, a lute, or sandal-wood, or fresh pot-herbs, or a turban, or an ornament, or an unmarried damsel, he must praise them¹.

36. ¹ Nand. refers kâshâyin, 'wearing a dress dyed with Kashâya,' to 'persons who wear the marks of an order to which they do not belong.' But this interpretation is evidently wrong. Among the sects that wear a dress dyed with Kashâya, Buddhists are the most prominent, but it must not be overlooked that there are other important sects also, as e.g. the Svâminârâyana's of the present day, who wear such dresses. — ² The term malina, 'smeared,' no doubt refers to a Saiva sect. Nand. interprets it by 'Kâpâlikas and the like;' but more probably the Pâsupatas are meant. — ³ The particle ka further refers to the humpbacked, deaf, and blind, to barren women, and to naked and hungry persons, as stated in a Smṛiti. (Nand.)

37. ¹ Nand. refers the particle ka in this Sûtra to hares, naked mendicants, snakes, iguanas, lizards, skins, and other inauspicious objects and persons enumerated in a Smṛiti.

38. Nand. argues from a passage of Nârada (not found in his Institutes), that the particle ka here refers to persons mounted upon an ass, camel, or buffalo, and others.

39. ¹ Nand. mentions two explanations of this Sûtra : 1. he must eulogise the above objects or persons if he sees them ; 2. he must gladden persons, who have those objects or persons with them, with presents and the like.

40. He must not (knowingly) step on (or step over, or stand on) the shade of the image of a deity, of a (learned) Brâhmaṇa, of a spiritual teacher, of a brown (bull or other animal), or of one by whom the initiatory ceremony at a Soma-sacrifice has been performed.

41. Nor (must he step) on anything spat out or vomited, nor on blood, nor on fæces or urine, nor on water used for ablutions.

42. He must not step over a rope to which a calf (or a cow) is tied.

43. He must not walk quickly in the rain.

44. He must not cross a river without need ;

45. Nor without having previously offered an oblation of water to the gods and to the manes ;

46. Nor (swimming) with his arms ;

47. Nor in a leaky vessel.

48. He must not stand on the bank (of a river).

49. He must not gaze into a pool.

50. He must not cross it (by swimming through it, or in any other way).

51. Way must be made for an aged man, for one carrying a burden, for a king, for a Snâtaka (of any of the three kinds ¹), for a woman, for a sick person, for a bridegroom, and for one riding in a carriage. Among those, should they all meet, a king must be

41. According to Nand., the particle vâ, 'or,' is added at the end of this Sûtra, in order to include an officiating priest and others mentioned by Yâgñavalkya I, 152.

51. ¹ The Snâtaka (see XXVIII, 42, note) is of three kinds: 1. the Vidyâsnâtaka, who has studied the Vedas; 2. the Vratasnâtaka, who has performed the Vratas or vowed observances of a student; 3. the Ubhayasnâtaka, who has completed both the Vedas and the Vratas. (Nand.) See the Gṛhya-sûtras.

honoured by the rest (excepting the Snâtaka); but the king himself must show honour to a Snâtaka.

LXIV.

1. He must not bathe in another man's pool ;
2. In cases of distress (if there is no other water at hand) he may bathe (in another man's pool), after having offered up five (or seven, or four) lumps of clay and (three jars with) water.
3. (He must not bathe) during an indigestion ;
4. Nor while he is afflicted (with a fever or other illness) ;
5. Nor without his clothes ; 6. Nor at night ;
7. Unless it be during an eclipse ; 8. Nor in the twilight.
9. He must bathe early in the morning, when he beholds the east reddening with the rays of the (rising) sun.
10. After having bathed, he must not shake his head (in order to remove the water from his hair) ;
11. And he must not dry his limbs (with his hand or with a cloth) ;
12. Nor must he touch any oily substance.

LXIV. 1. M. IV, 201. — 1, 2. Y. I, 159. — 3, 4. M. IV, 129. — 5. M. IV, 45 ; Gaut. IX, 61 ; Âsv. III, 9, 6 ; Pâr. II, 7, 6 ; Sâṅkh. IV, 12, 31. — 6. M. IV, 129. — 12. M. IV, 83. — 13. Sâṅkh. IV, 12, 32. — 15. Gaut. IX, 16. — 16. M. IV, 263 ; Y. I, 159. — 24. M. IV, 152 ; Y. I, 100. — 27. Y. I, 196.

5. The term nagna, literally 'naked,' has to be taken in its widest sense here. According to Bhrîgu and Gobhila it includes, besides one wholly undressed, 'one without his upper garment, one who has dirty clothes on, one clad in lower garments of silk only, one who wears double clothing or even a greater number of clothes, one who wears a small piece of cloth over the pudenda only,' &c. (Nand.) See also M. IV, 129.

13. He must not put on again the garment which he wore before, without its having been washed.

14. After having bathed, he must cover his head with a turban¹ and put on two garments² washed (by himself).

15. He must not converse, (after having bathed,) with barbarians, low-caste persons, or outcasts.

16. He must bathe in cascades, ponds dug by the gods, and lakes.

17. Stagnant water is more pure (and purifies more effectually) than water taken out (of a well or the like); the water of a spring is more pure than that of a tank; the water of a river is more pure than the former; water collected by (Vasishtha or some other) devout sage¹ is even more pure; but the water of the Ganges is the purest of all.

18. After having removed the dirt by means of earth and water¹, and after having dived under water and returned (to the bank of the river), he must address the bathing-place with the three Mantras (beginning with the words), 'Ye waters are²,' with the four Mantras (beginning with the words),

14. ¹Ushnîsha, 'a turban,' here denotes a bandage used for drying the head, which is wrapped round the head and closely tied together. — ²I. e. an upper and an under garment. (Nand.)

16. The term devakhâta, 'ponds dug by the gods,' refers to Pushkara and other holy bathing-places. (Nand.) See below LXXXV.

17. ¹Nand. cites Vasishthaprákî and Virvâmitraprákî as instances of holy bathing-places of this description.

18. ¹Nand. refers this and the following Sûtras to a midday bath, because a verse, which he quotes, forbids the use of earth (in order to clean one's self with it) in the morning bath. But it seems to follow from 35 and 42, that all the rules given in this chapter refer to that bath, which must be taken at sunrise every day. — ²Rig-

'The golden-coloured (waters) ³,' and with (the one Mantra beginning with the words), 'Carry away (all) that, O ye waters ⁴.'

19. Then he must dive under water and mutter the Aghamarshana three times;

20. Or (he must mutter three times the Mantra which begins with the words), 'That most exalted step of Vishnu;'

21. Or the Drupadâ Sâvitri (which begins with the words, 'Like one released from a post');

22. Or the Anuvâka (which begins with the words), 'They get their minds ready;'

23. Or the Purushasûkta.

24. After having bathed, he must feed the gods and the manes, while standing in the water with his wet clothes on.

25. If (being unable to remain in water after having bathed) he has changed his dress, (he must feed the gods and the manes,) after having crossed the bathing-place (and reached the bank).

26. (But) he must not wring his bathing-dress till he has satisfied the gods and the manes.

27. After having bathed¹ and sipped water, he must sip water (once more) according to the rule.

28. He must offer (sixteen) flowers to Purusha, veda X, 9, 1-3, &c. — ³ Taïtt. Samh. V, 6, 1, 1-2, &c. — ⁴ Rig-veda I, 23, 22, &c.

20. Rig-veda I, 22, 20, &c.

21. Taïtt. Brâhm. II, 4, 4, 9; 6, 6, 3; cf. Vâgasan. Samh. XX, 20; Atharva-veda VI, 115, 3.

22. Rig-veda V, 81, &c.

24. 'The use of the particle ka indicates that he must anoint himself after having bathed.' (Nand.)

27.¹ This expression refers back to the whole proceeding described above, up to the wringing of the bathing-dress. (Nand.)

while muttering the Purushasûkta, one with each verse.

29. Afterwards (he must offer) a libation of water.

30. He must first offer one to the gods with the Tîrtha sacred to the gods.

31. Then he must offer another to the manes with the Tîrtha sacred to the manes.

32. In offering the latter he must first of all feed (the manes of) his next of kin (such as his father, mother, maternal grandfather, uncles, brothers, &c.)

33. After that (he must feed) his relatives (such as a sister's son, a father-in-law, a brother-in-law, &c.) and distant kinsmen (such as the sons of his father's sisters and of his mother's sisters).

34. Then (he must feed) his (deceased) friends.

35. According to the above rule he must bathe every day.

36. After having bathed, he must mutter as many purifying Mantras as possible.

37. And he must mutter the Gâyatri even more often (than other Mantras);

38. And the Purushasûkta.

39. There is nothing more sublime than those two (prayers).

40. One who has bathed is thereby entitled to perform the offerings to the Visvedevâs and to the manes, to mutter sacred texts, and to exercise the duty of hospitality, as prescribed by law.

30, 31. See LXII, 3, 4.

37, 38. 'Or the meaning of these two Sûtras is, that the Gâyatri and the Purushasûkta always have to be muttered besides the other Mantras.' (Nand.)

40. Nand. refers the term vidhinodite to a separate duty, that

41. Distress and misfortune, bad dreams and evil thoughts are taken from him even who only sprinkles himself with water (no matter from where it comes): that is the law.

42. He who regularly takes the prescribed bath (every morning), does not experience the tortures of Yama's hell. By the regular bath criminals even obtain their absolution.

LXV.

1. Now then, after having duly bathed, and duly washed his hands and feet, and duly sipped water, he must worship Bhagavat Vāsudeva (Vishṇu), who is without beginning and end, before an idol or on the sacrificial ground.

2. Having called up in his mind (Vishṇu to life, with the Mantra)¹, 'The two Asvins possess life, may they (give you life),' and having invited (Vishṇu) with the Anuvāka (beginning with the words), 'They get their minds ready²,' he must worship him with his knees, his hands, and his head³.

of worshipping the gods; the particle ka to the propitiation of the planets by sacrifices and other such duties; and the particle tathā to optional acts, such as the gift of a cow to a Brāhmaṇa, and the like. But this is certainly a too extensive interpretation of the text.

LXV, LXVI. These two chapters treat of the worship of Vishṇu. (Nand.)

LXV. 1. The fittest place for worshipping Vishṇu is upon a Sālagrāma (ammonite) stone. (Nand.)

2. ¹ Kâ/haka XI, 7. The rendering of this Mantra is conjectural, as the reading is uncertain. Nand. states expressly that it is quoted from the Kâ/haka. — ² See LXIV, 22. — ³ 'The particle ka indicates that he must also worship Vishṇu in his mind, and with his speech, by saying, 'Om, adoration to Bhagavat Vāsudeva.' (Nand.)

3. With the three Mantras (beginning with the words), 'Ye waters are,' he must (fetch and) announce the Arghya (or water for washing the hands).

4. With the four Mantras (beginning with the words), 'The golden-coloured,' (he must fetch and announce) the water for washing the feet ;

5. With (the one Mantra, beginning with the words), 'May the waters of the plain propitiate us,' the water which is to be sipped ;

6. With (the one Mantra, beginning with the words), 'Carry away (all) that, O ye waters,' the water destined for the bath ;

7. With (the four Mantras, beginning with the words, 'Proud) of the chariot, of the poles, the hero,' unguents and ornaments ;

8. With (the one Mantra, beginning with the words), 'A youth, splendidly arrayed,' a garment ;

9. With (the one Mantra, beginning with the word), 'Blooming,' a flower ;

10. With (the one Mantra, beginning with the

3, 4. See LXIV, 18.

5. This Mantra is found Atharva-veda I, 6, 4 ; XIX, 2, 2 ; Taitt. Âraṇy. VI, 4, 1. Nand. states that it is kaḥarâkhiya, from the Sâkhâ of the Kaḥas ; but I have not found it in the Berlin MS. of the Kâḥaka, the only complete MS. in existence of that work.

6. See LXIV, 18.

7. This Mantra also belongs to the Kaḥa school, according to Nand. It is not found in the MS. of the Kâḥaka, but it occurs in the Taitt. Brâhm. II, 7, 7, 2. The above translation is in part according to Sâyana's Commentary on the Taitt. Brâhm.

8. Rig-veda III, 8, 4, &c.

9. Taitt. Saṃh. IV, 2, 6, 1 ; Kâḥ. XVI, 13 ; Atharva-veda VIII, 7, 27. Nand. says that it is a Taittirîya Mantra.

10. Kâḥ. II, 7 ; Vâgas. Saṃh. I, 8 (cf. Mahîdhara's Commentary). Nand. says that it is a Taittirîya Yagus.

words), 'Thou art murderous (dhûr), slay (dhûrva) (the slayer),' incense (dhûpa);

11. With (the one Mantra, beginning with the words), 'Thou art splendour and light,' a lamp;

12. With (the one Mantra, beginning with the words, 'I have praised) Dadhikrâvan,' a Madhuparka (honey-mixture);

13. With the eight Mantras (beginning with the word), 'Hiranyagarbha,' an offering of (other) eatables.

14. A chowrie, a fan, a looking-glass¹, an umbrella, a (palanquin or other) vehicle, and a (throne or other) seat, all these objects he must announce (and place before) the god (Vishnu), muttering the Gâyatri (at the same time).

15. After having thus worshipped him, he must mutter the Purushasûkta. After that, he who wishes to obtain eternal bliss must make oblations of clarified butter, while reciting the same hymn.

LXVI.

1. He must not make an oblation to the gods or to the manes with water collected at night.

2. He must not give any other fragrant substance than sandal, or musk, or (fragrant) wood (of the odoriferous Devadâru tree), or camphor, or saffron, or the wood of the Gâtîphala tree;

3. Nor a garment dyed with indigo;

11. Vâgas. Samh. XXII, 1. Nand. states that this Mantra belongs to the Sâkhâ of the Kaṭhas; but I have not met with it in the Kâṭhaka.

12. Rig-veda IV, 39, 6, &c.

13. Rig-veda X, 121, 1-8; Kâṭh. XL, 1, &c.

14. ¹ Thus the term mâtrâ is interpreted by Nand.

4. Nor an ornament made of factitious jewels or gold ;

5. Nor (a flower) having a nasty odour ;

6. Nor one that has no odour at all ;

7. Nor one grown upon a thorny plant.

8. But he may give even a flower grown upon a thorny plant, if it is white and sweet-smelling.

9. He may give even a red flower, if it is saffron, or a water-flower (such as the red lotus).

10. (He must) not (give) any animal substance (such as claws or horns) for the incense.

11. (He must) not (give) anything but clarified butter or oil for the lamp.

12. (He must) not (give) forbidden food at the offering of eatables ;

13. Nor the milk of goats or female buffalos, though it is lawful food (otherwise) ;

14. Nor the flesh of five-toed animals, of fishes, and of boars.

15. Fully prepared for the sacrifice and pure, he must announce (and offer up to Vishnu) all the oblations, with his mind fixed upon the deity, with a cheerful heart, and free from precipitation or anger.

LXVII.

1. After having swept the place around the (kitchen) fire, sprinkled it with water all around,

9. The particle ka indicates that fragrant oleander and the like is also permitted. (Nand.)

13. See LI, 38.

14. This prohibition refers to those species of five-toed animals, fish, and boars, whose flesh is not in general forbidden. (Nand.) See LI, 3, 6, 21.

LXVII. 1-32. Âsv. I, 2 ; Gobh. I, 4 ; Pâr. I, 12 ; II, 9 ; Sâṅkh. II, strewed (Kusa grass) all around, and sprinkled (the latter) with water all around, he must take out of all dishes the uppermost part and offer it :

2. To Vāsudeva, to Saṅkarshana, to Pradyumna, to Aniruddha, to Purusha, to Satya, to Akṣyuta, to Vāsudeva.

3. Afterwards (he must offer twelve burnt-oblations) to Agni, to Soma, to Mitra, to Varuna, to Indra, to Indra and Agni united, to the Visvedevās, to Pragâpati, to Anumati, to Dhanvantari, to Vâstoshpati, and to Agni Svishṭakṛit (the god of the fire who causes the proper performance of the sacrifice).

4. Then let him make a Bali-offering with that which has been left of the dishes.

5. To (the serpent demons) Taksha and Upa-taksha,

6. (Strewing the two Balis) on both sides of the fire, to the east of it (on the north-eastern side first, and on the south-eastern side afterwards).

14; M. III, 84-94; Y. II, 103-108; Âpast. II, 2, 3; II, 2, 4, 1-13; Gaut. V, 10-18. — 33-46. Âsv. I, 24; Gobh. IV, 10; Pâr. II, 9, 12-16; I, 3; Sâṅkh. II, 15-17; M. III, 99, 100, 102, 103, 111-118; Y. I, 107-113; Âpast. II, 2, 4, 11-20; II, 3; II, 4; Gaut. V, 21-45. Regarding the parallel passages of the Kâṭhaka and Mânava Grîhya-sûtras, see the Introduction. This chapter treats of the Vaisvadeva sacrifice. (Nand.)

1. Nand. infers from a text of Saunaka, that the particle atha points to the recitation of the Purushasûkta as an initiatory ceremony.

2. Regarding this Sûtra, see the Introduction. The oblations to be offered are eight in number, one for each invocation.

3. Devapâla, in his Commentary on the corresponding section of the Kâṭhaka Grîhya-sûtra, states that the deities to whom burnt-oblations are offered (Sûtra 3) shall be invoked with the word svâhâ, 'hail!' and those for whom Bali-offerings are strewed upon the ground, with the word namaḥ, 'adoration.'

6-8. These three Sûtras have been translated in accordance

7. (Then let him offer other seven Balis) to all (the seven Ishṭakās or goddesses of the bricks of the altar, also to the east of the fire, while pronouncing the Mantras), 'Thy name is Ambā; thy name is Dulā; thy name is Nitatnī (Nitatnir); thy name is Kupunīkā (and so on).'

8. (He must offer four Balis with the Mantras), 'O Nandinī; O Subhagā; O Sumaṅgalī; O Bhadrāṅkarī,' (placing the Balis) in the corners (beginning with the south-eastern corner and proceeding) towards the south.

9. (He must place two Balis), addressed to Srī Hiranyakeśī and to the trees, near the firm pillar¹.

10. (He must place two Balis), addressed to Dharma and Adharma and to Mṛityu, near the door.

11. (He must place one Bali), addressed to Varuṇa, in the water-jar.

12. (With the words, 'Adoration be) to Vishṇu,' (he must place one Bali) in the mortar.

13. (With the words, 'Adoration be) to the Maruts,' (he must place one Bali) on the mill-stone.

14. (In the apartment) on the roof (let him place two Balis) addressed to Vaiśrāvaṇa (Kubera) the king, and to all created beings.

15. (With the words, 'Adoration be) to Indra and to Indra's ministers,' (he must place two Balis) in the eastern part (of the house).

with Devapāla's readings and his remarks on them. Nand. wrongly refers the four names mentioned in 7 to the four quarters of the globe. The Mantra quoted in 7 is found complete in the Kāṇḍaka, XL, 4, and, in a modified form, in the Taitt. Saṃh. IV, 4, 5, 1.

9. ¹ 'I. e. the pillar which supports the house.' (Nand.) It appears from an analogous passage of the Mānava Gṛhya-sūtra, that a pillar in the middle of the house is meant.

16. (With the words, 'Adoration be) to Yama and to Yama's ministers,' (he must place two Balis) in the southern part.

17. (With the words, 'Adoration be) to Varuṇa and to Varuṇa's ministers,' (he must place two Balis) in the western part.

18. (With the words, 'Adoration be) to Soma and to Soma's ministers,' (let him place two Balis) in the northern part.

19. (With the words, 'Adoration be) to Brahman and to Brahman's ministers,' (let him place two Balis) in the centre (of the house).

20. (Let him throw) in the air (a Bali) addressed to Âkâśa (the air).

21. (With the words, 'Adoration be) to the goblins roaming by day,' (let him place a Bali) on the sacrificial ground.

22. (With the words, 'Adoration be to the goblins) roaming by night,' (let him offer a Bali in the same place at the Vaisvadeva which takes place) at night.

23. Afterwards he must offer upon blades of Kusa grass, having the points turned towards the south, balls of rice to his father, to his grandfather, and to his great-grandfather, to his mother, to his grandmother, and to his great-grandmother, proclaiming at the same time their name and race (and adding the word Svadhâ, 'reverence').

24. Along with the balls of rice let him give ointments, flowers, incense, eatables, and the like.

25. After having fetched a jar with water, let him

24. 'And the like' means betel and the sacrificial fee for the Brâhmanas.' (Nand.)

25. This has to be done with the words, svastitvaṃ brûhi, 'say cause a Brâhmana to say the benediction (and give him the jar).

26. (The share) of dogs, crows, and Svapaṅkas let him strew upon the earth.

27. And let him give (a mouthful of food as) alms.

28. By honouring guests he obtains the highest reward.

29. Let him assiduously honour a guest who arrives in the evening (after the Vaisvadeva is over).

30. Let him not suffer a guest to stay at his house unfed.

31. As the Brâhmanas are lords over all other castes, and as a husband is lord over his wives, a guest is the lord of a householder.

32. By honouring a guest he obtains heaven.

33. (One who has arrived as) a guest and is obliged to turn home disappointed in his expectations, takes away from the man, to whose house he has come, his religious merit, and throws his own guilt upon him.

34. A Brâhmana who stays for one night only as a guest, is called atithi (a guest); because he does not stay for a long time, therefore is he termed atithi.

the benediction.' (Nand.) The benediction, according to Deva-pâla, consists of the Purushastûkta, the Kanikrâda (Vâgas. Samh. XIII, 48), and other Mantras.

27. According to Nand., who argues from a passage of Baudhâyana, the particle ka implies that he should feed Brâhmanas also.

33. This proverb is also found in the Mahâbhârata XII, 6995, in the Hitopadesa I, 56 (64 ed. Johnson), and in the Mârkanḍeya-purâṇa XXIX, 31. See Bôhtlingk, Ind. Sprüche, 134.

34. Atithi in this derivation is supposed to mean 'one who does not stay for a whole tithi or lunar day.'

35. Let him not consider a Brâhmana fellow-villager or an acquaintance as his guest, though he has come to the house where his wife and his fires are.

36. But if a Kshatriya has come to his house in the way of a guest, let him hospitably entertain him also, to his heart's desire¹, after the Brâhmana guests have eaten.

37. Should a Vaisya or a Sûdra come to his house as guests, he must even give food to them (at the same time and) with his servants, and treat them with kindness (but not like guests in the proper sense of the term).

38. To (members of) other castes (such as Mûrdhâvasiktas) and to friends (or relatives or) other such persons, who have come to his house out of attachment, let him offer such food as happens to be there, to the best of his power, at the time when his wife takes her meal.

39. One recently married (but not yet delivered to her husband), an unmarried damsel, a sick woman, and a pregnant woman: to these let him give food unhesitatingly, even before his guests.

40. The foolish man who eats first himself, without having offered food to those (persons that have been mentioned), is not aware that he will himself be food (after death) for dogs and vultures.

41. After the Brâhmanas, (the Kshatriyas who have come as guests), the friends and relatives, (the parents and others) whom he is bound to maintain,

36. ¹ This is Kullûka's rendering of the term kâmam (on M. III, 111). According to Nand., it means that he is at liberty to feed such guests or no.

38. The wife takes her meal when the husband has eaten. (Nand.)

(and the servants) have made their repast, let man and wife eat the leavings themselves.

42. Having shown honour to the gods, to the manes, to men, to those whom he is bound to maintain, and to the household deities (as well as to dogs, crows, and the rest), let a householder enjoy that which has been left.

43. He who cooks food for himself only, eats nothing but sin: for that alone is considered as fit food for the virtuous, which is left, after the (customary) oblations have been offered.

44. By the daily recitation of the Veda, by the Agnihotra, by sacrificing, and by austerity, a householder does not obtain such excellent places of abode (after death) as by honouring a guest.

45. Whether he arrives in the evening or in the morning, he must offer a seat and water to his guest, and food, to the best of his ability, after having shown him marks of honour as the law directs¹.

46. By giving (to a guest) shelter, a bed, ointments for his feet, and a lamp: for each of these gifts singly he reaps the same reward as for the gift of a cow.

LXVIII.

1. He must not eat during an eclipse of the moon or of the sun.

45. ¹ For the rules regarding the reception of a guest, see Āsv. I, 24, and the other Gṛihya-sūtras; M. III, 119 seq., and the other Dharmasāstras.

LXVIII. 12. M. IV, 55. — 14. M. IV, 45; Y. I, 131; Āpast. II, 8, 19, 18. — 19. M. IV, 74. — 20. M. IV, 65. — 21. M. IV, 63; Gaut. IX, 56. — 23. M. IV, 74. — 26. M. III, 106; Āpast. II, 4, 8, 4. — 27. M. IV, 62; Āpast. II, 8, 18, 1; II, 8, 20, 10; Gaut. IX, 58. — 29. M. IV, 75. — 34. M. IV, 76. — 37. M. IV, 37; Y.

2. He shall eat, after having previously bathed, when the eclipse is over.

3. If (the sun or moon) have set before the eclipse was over, he must bathe, and on the next day he may eat again, after having seen (the sun or moon rise).

4. A cow or a Brâhmaṇa having met with a calamity, he must not eat on that day.

5. If the king has met with an accident, (he must not eat on that day).

6. An Agnihotrin, who is absent on a journey, must eat at that time of the day when the Agnihotra is supposed to be over.

7. He may also eat at that time of the day when the Vaisvadeva is supposed to be over.

8. On the days of new and full moon (he may eat at that time) when he supposes the sacrifice customary on those days to have been performed.

I, 135. — 38. M. IV, 82. — 40. Âpast. I, 11, 31, 1. — 42, 43. M. II, 54; Y. I, 31; Gaut. IX, 59. — 46. Sâṅkh. IV, 11, 10; M. IV, 43; Y. I, 131; Gaut. IX, 32. — 47. M. IV, 63; Y. I, 138; Âpast. II, 1, 1, 3; Gaut. IX, 9. — 48. M. IV, 62. — 49. M. IV, 65; Gaut. XVII, 13. 'The injunctions regarding meals having been given in the previous chapter, he now proceeds to propound some prohibitions concerning the same subject.' (Nand.)

2, 3. Nand. states that in both of these Sûtras it has to be understood, that the bath occasioned by the eclipse must be followed by the ordinary bath, which precedes every meal.

6. An Agnihotrin is one who daily performs the Agnihotra. Regarding the Agnihotra and the times for its performance, see LIX, 2.

7. The term Vaisvadeva includes not only the oblation to the Visvedevâs (LXVII, 3), but also the Bali-offerings and the entertainment of a guest, &c., as prescribed in LXVII, 4 seq. (Nand.)

8. According to Nand., the use of the particle ka implies, that this rule applies equally to the first days of the moon's increase and wane.

9. He must not eat during an indigestion ;
10. Nor at midnight ; 11. Nor at noon ;
12. Nor in the twilight ;
13. Nor dressed in wet clothes ;
14. Nor without his upper garment ;
15. Nor naked ;
16. Nor in water (nor in a boat) ;
17. Nor lying stretched out on the back ;
18. Nor sitting on a broken stool ;
19. Nor reclining on a couch ;
20. Nor from a broken dish ;
21. Nor having placed the food on his lap ;
22. Nor (having placed the food) upon the ground ;
23. Nor from the palm of his hand.
24. That food which has been seasoned with salt (after having been cooked) he must not eat.
25. He must not abuse children (eating in the same row with him).
26. (He must) not (eat) dainties alone.
27. (He must) not (eat) substances from which the fat has been extracted.
28. Nor (must he eat) roasted grain in the day-time.
29. At night (he must not eat) anything mixed with sesamum-seeds.

9. According to Nand., the use of the particle kā implies a prohibition to eat again, after having partaken of a Śrāddha meal.

15. See note on LXIV, 5.

24. Nand., quoting a passage of Vāsishtā (XIV, 28), states the use of the particle kā to imply, that food twice cooked and food cooked in a frying-pan should also be avoided.

27. This rule refers to skimmed milk and to a dough made of ground sesamum, from which the oil has been extracted. (Nand.)

30. Nor (must he eat at night) sour milk or ground barley.

31. Nor (must he eat) the leaves of the mountain ebony, or of the banyan, or of the holy fig-tree, or of the hemp plant.

32. (He must) not (eat) without having first given to eat (to the gods and to the Brâhmanas);

33. Nor without having made a burnt-offering first;

34. Nor without having sprinkled his feet;

35. Nor without having sprinkled his hands and his face;

36. While having the remains of food on his mouth or hands, he must not take clarified butter.

37. Nor must he look at the moon, or at the sun, or at the stars (while unclean).

38. Nor must he touch his head (while unclean).

39. Nor must he recite the Veda (while unclean).

40. He must eat facing the east;

41. Or facing the south;

42. And after having honoured his food¹;

43. And cheerfully, adorned with a garland of flowers, and anointed with unguents.

42. ¹ Nand. describes the ceremony of 'honouring one's food' as follows: 'He must first sprinkle the food, while reciting the Gâyatrî and the Vyâhritis (see LV, 10). Then he must sprinkle water all around it, with the Mantra, "Forsooth, I sprinkle righteousness around thee." After that he must sip water with the Mantra, "Thou art an imperishable basis" (Taitt. Ârany. X, 32, rendered according to Sâyana's Commentary), and offer up five oblations to Prâna, &c. (see Dr. Bühler's note on Âpast. II, 1, 1, 2). Finally he must eat in silence, without blaming the food, and taking care to leave some remnant of it in the dish, and sip water again, with the Mantra, "Thou art an imperishable covering"' (Taitt. Ârany. X, 35, according to Sâyana).

44. He must not eat up his food completely ;

45. Unless it consist of sour milk, or honey, or (clarified) butter, or milk, or ground barley, or meat, or sweetmeats.

46. He must not eat together with his wife, nor in the open air, nor standing, nor in the presence of many (hungry spectators), nor must many eat in the presence of one (hungry spectator).

47. Let him never eat in an empty house, in a house where the sacred fires are preserved, or in a temple dedicated to the gods. Neither must he drink water out of his joined hands, or satiate himself to repletion.

48. Let him not take a third meal (over and above the two regular meals in the mornings and evenings), nor let him ever take unwholesome food. He must eat neither too early, nor too late, and he must take no food in the evening, after having fully satiated himself in the morning.

49. He must not eat bad food (whether injurious to health or otherwise reprehensible), nor from a bad dish (which is similar to the dishes used by barbarians, or which has been defiled by a wicked man eating from it), nor lying on the ground, nor with his feet raised upon a bench, nor sitting on his hams with a cloth tied round his legs and knees.

46. Nand. thinks that this rule refers to those wives only who belong to a lower caste than their husbands.

48. 'Too early' means before sunrise ; 'too late' means immediately before sunset. (Nand.)

LXIX.

1. He must not have connection with his wife on the eighth, or fourteenth, or fifteenth day of the half-month.

2. And (he must avoid connubial intercourse) after having partaken of a Srâddha;

3. And after having given (a Srâddha);

4. And after having been invited to a Srâddha;

5. And while performing a vow of abstinence (such as that to be kept on the day before a Srâddha, or the fast to be observed on the eleventh day of the half-month);

6. And one who has performed the initiatory ceremony of a Soma-sacrifice;

7. And in a temple, in a burial-ground, and in an empty house;

8. And at the root of a tree (or shrub);

9. And in the day-time; 10. And in the twilight;

11. And with one unclean (or in her courses);

12. And while he is unclean himself; 13. And with one anointed with unguents; 14. And being anointed himself; 15. And with one sick; 16. And while he is sick himself.

17. He must not have connection, if he wishes to enjoy a long life, with a woman who has a limb too little, nor with one who has a limb too much, nor with one older than himself, nor with a pregnant woman.

LXIX. 1. M. IV, 128; Y. I, 79. — 9. Âpast. II, 1, 1, 16. — 15. Gaut. IX, 28. The subject of daily duties being absolved, he now goes on to state (in Chapters LXIX, LXX) the rules that must be observed during the night. (Nand.)

4. The invitations to a Srâddha are issued on the day before it is to take place. (Nand.)

LXX.

1. He must not sleep with his feet wet ;
2. Nor facing the north or the west ;
3. Nor naked ; 4. Nor on wet (fresh) bamboo ;
5. Nor in the open air ;
6. Nor on a bedstead made of Palāsa-wood ;
7. Nor on one made of the wood of five trees ;
8. Nor on one made of the wood of a tree which has been split by an elephant ;
9. Nor on a bedstead made of the wood of a tree that has been kindled by lightning ;
10. Nor on a broken bedstead ;
11. Nor on one made of scorched wood ;
12. Nor on one made of the wood of a tree that used to be watered with a jar ;
13. Nor in a burial-ground, nor in an empty house, nor in a temple ;
14. Nor with people who are restless of limb ;
15. Nor with women ;
16. Nor on grain, nor (in a stable of) cows, nor (on the couch of any of his) Gurus, nor on the fire-place, nor (in a building dedicated to the) gods.
17. He must not sleep while the remnants of

LXX. 1. M. IV, 76. — 2. Y. I, 136. — 3. Âsv. III, 9, 6 ; M. IV, 75 ; Gaut. IX, 60. — 13. M. IV, 57. — 17. Sâṅkh. IV, 11, 17 ; Âpast. I, 1, 2, 24 ; Gaut. II, 13.

7. Nand. mentions three explanations of this term: 1. a bedstead made of five pieces of wood (or of the wood of five trees) ; 2. a bedstead made of any of the five kinds of wood enumerated in the Vishṇu-purāṇa ; 3. a bedstead made of any of the five kinds of wood enumerated in Sūtras 8-12. The second explanation is inadmissible, because part of the species of wood mentioned in the passage of the Vishṇu-purāṇa referred to is identical with those enumerated in Sūtras 8-12.

food are on his hands or face, nor in the day-time, nor in the twilight, nor upon ashes, nor in a place soiled (by excrements and the like), nor in a wet place, nor on the top of a mountain.

LXXI.

1. Now¹ he must not contemn any one (whether of equal rank, or of higher or lower rank than himself).

LXXI. 1. M. IV, 135; Y. I, 153. — 2. M. IV, 141. — 3. Gaut. II, 17. — 4. Gobh. III, 5, 29. — 4-6. M. IV, 17, 18; Y. I, 129, 123. — 8. M. IV, 19. — 9. M. IV, 34; Âpast. I, 11, 30, 13; Gaut. IX, 3. — 11. Gobh. III, 5, 15. — 13-16. M. IV, 36; Y. I, 133. — 14. Sâṅkh. IV, 11, 21. — 17-21. M. IV, 37. — 17, 18. Pâr. II, 7, 6; Sâṅkh. IV, 11, 2; Âpast. I, 11, 31, 20. — 23. Pâr. II, 7, 8; M. IV, 38. — 25. M. IV, 43. — 26. Âsv. III, 9, 6; Sâṅkh. IV, 11, 1; M. IV, 53; Y. I, 135; Gaut. IX, 48. — 32-35. M. IV, 56, 53; Y. I, 137. — 36, 37. M. IV, 54, 53; Y. I, 137. — 39. M. IV, 65. — 40. Âpast. II, 8, 20, 11; Gaut. IX, 32. — 42, 43. M. IV, 70; Âpast. I, 11, 32, 28; Gaut. IX, 51. — 44. M. IV, 69. — 45. M. IV, 74; Y. I, 138; Gaut. II, 17. — 46. M. IV, 69. — 47. M. IV, 66; Gaut. IX, 4, 5. — 48-52. M. IV, 80. — 53. Sâṅkh. IV, 12, 18; M. IV, 82. — 54. M. IV, 250; Y. I, 214. — 55. M. IV, 55. — 56. M. IV, 57; Y. I, 138. — 58. M. IV, 57; Sâṅkh. IV, 11, 6. — 59. Sâṅkh. IV, 11, 6; Gaut. IX, 16. — 60. M. IV, 58. — 61, 62. Âpast. I, 11, 31, 9, 10. — 62. Pâr. II, 7, 14; M. IV, 59; Y. I, 140; Gaut. IX, 23. — 63-68. M. IV, 60, 61. — 69-71. M. IV, 63, 64. — 70. Pâr. II, 7, 3. — 72-74. M. IV, 138; Y. I, 132. — 75. Y. I, 153. — 76. M. IV, 137; Y. I, 153. — 77. M. IV, 94. — 79. M. IV, 144. — 80, 81. M. IV, 164. — 82. M. VIII, 299. — 83. M. IV, 135; Y. I, 153. — 84, 85. M. IV, 176; Y. I, 156. — 86. M. IV, 150. — 87. M. IV, 2, 246; Gaut. IX, 73. — 90. M. IV, 155; Y. I, 154. — 91, 92. M. IV, 156, 158.

1. ¹ This chapter treats of the duties of a Snâtaka (see XXVIII, 42, note). The particle atha, 'now,' however, signifies that some of these duties are common to the Snâtaka and to the householder, whose special duties have been treated in the previous chapters. (Nand.)

2. He must not mock those who have a limb too little or a limb too much, who are ignorant, or who are poor.

3. He must not serve low people.

4. Let him not engage in work that may keep him from repeating (or teaching) the Veda.

5. Let him wear such a dress as becomes his age,

6. And his sacred knowledge, his descent, his means, and his country.

7. He must not be overbearing.

8. He must constantly consult the holy laws and other (salutary precepts relating to the acquisition of wealth, wisdom, and freedom from disease).

9. He must not wear a worn-out or filthy dress, if he has means (enough to procure a new one).

10. (Even though he lacks firewood or the like necessities) he must not say to another man, 'I have got none.'

11. He must not wear a garland of flowers which has no smell at all, or an offensive smell, or which is red.

12. Let him wear a garland of water-flowers even though they be red.

13. And (he must wear) a staff made of bamboo ;

14. And a jar with water ;

15. And a sacrificial string made of cotton thread ;

16. And two golden ear-rings.

2. The particle ka refers to ugly persons and the rest, enumerated by Manu IV, 141. (Nand.)

8. The use of the particle ka implies, according to Nand., that his frame of mind and his speech should also be in conformity with his age, &c., as ordained by Manu IV, 18.

13-16. Nand., arguing from texts of Baudhâya and of Manu (IV, 36), takes the use of the particle ka in Sûtras 13 and 14 to

17. He must not look at the rising sun ;
18. Nor at the setting (sun) ;
19. Nor (must he look at the sun) shining through an awning of cloth (under which he is lying).
20. Nor at the sun reflected in a looking-glass or in water ;
21. Nor at the midday sun ;
22. Nor at the face of any of his Gurus while he is angry ;
23. Nor at his own image reflected in oil or in water ;
24. Nor reflected in a dirty looking-glass ;
25. Nor at his wife eating ;
26. Nor at a naked woman ;
27. Nor at a man in the act of discharging urine (or voiding excrements) ;
28. Nor at an elephant (or other dangerous animal) broken loose from the rope that ties him ;
29. Nor at a fight between bulls (or elephants or buffalos) or the like animals, while he is himself standing in a (crowd or any other) place, from which it would be difficult for him to effect his escape ;
30. Nor at one insane ; imply that a Snâtaka must wear three garments, an under garment, an upper garment, and a mantle, and in Sûtra 16, that he must carry about him a bushel of Kusa grass.

19. This rule appears to refer, likewise, to the custom of suspending, by a tree or a post, an upper garment or a piece of cloth, in order to ward off the rays of the sun.

20. The particle ka here is used, according to Nand., in order to include 'the sun, while it is eclipsed,' as mentioned by Manu IV, 37.

29. 'As shown by ka, a place where arrows, spears, or other missiles are falling down, is also intended here.' (Nand.)

31. Nor at one intoxicated ;
32. He must not throw any impure substances into the fire ;
33. Nor blood ; 34. Nor poison ;
35. Neither (must he throw any of those substances) into water.
36. He must not step over a fire.
37. He must not warm his feet (by the fire).
38. He must not wipe (the dirt from his feet) with blades of Kusa grass.
39. He must not wash (his feet) in a vessel of white copper.
40. He must not (wash) one foot with the other.
41. He must not scratch the ground (with a piece of wood or the like).
42. He must not crush clods of earth.
43. He must not cut grass.
44. He must not tear his nails or the hairs (of his beard or others) with his teeth.
45. He must avoid gambling ;
46. And the heat of the sun just risen.
47. He must not wear a garment, or shoes, or a garland, or a sacrificial string which had before been worn by another.
48. He must not give advice to a Sûdra ;
49. Nor (must he give him) the leavings of his food, nor the residue of an oblation (unless he is his own servant) ;

46. Besides the above interpretation of the term bâlâtapa, which is proposed by Kullûka also (on M. IV, 69), Nand. mentions two others: 1. the heat of that time of the day when the cows are collected for milking ; 2. the heat of the autumn season. The particle ka, according to Nand., is used in order to include the smoke of a burning corpse and the other forbidden objects mentioned by Manu IV, 69.

-
50. Nor (must he give him) sesamum ;
 51. Nor (must he point out) the sacred law to him ;
 52. Nor (must he prescribe) a penance (for him for atonement of a sin).
 53. He must not scratch his head or his belly with both hands joined.
 54. He must not reject sour milk or the Sumanas flower (when offered to him).
 55. He must not take off his garland (from his head) himself (but he may cause another to do so).
 56. Let him not rouse (a superior) from sleep.
 57. He must not (by harsh speeches and the like) render disaffected one who is well affected towards him.
 58. He must not speak to a woman in her courses ;
 59. Nor to barbarians or low-caste persons.
 60. When a sacred fire, or an idol, or a Brâhmaṇa is near, he must stretch forth his right hand (from his upper garment).
 61. If he sees a cow trespassing upon another man's field, he must not announce it (to the owner of that field).
 62. And if he sees a calf sucking (at the udder of a cow, he must not announce it to the owner of the latter).
 63. He must not endeavour to please overbearing men (by flattering their pretensions).
 64. He must not dwell in a kingdom governed by a Sûdra king ;
-

54. Nand. states that this rule does not contain a vain repetition of the rule laid down above (LVII, 10), as the latter refers to householders and the former to Snâtakas.

65. Nor in one abounding with wicked people ;
66. And he must not live (in a kingdom) in which there are no physicians ;
67. Nor in one afflicted (with a disease or other calamity).
68. And (he must not stay) long on a mountain.
69. He must not (walk or otherwise) exert himself without a purpose.
70. He must not dance or sing.
71. He must not make a noise by slapping (his left arm, after having placed it upon his right shoulder, with his right hand).
72. He must not make vulgar speeches.
73. He must not tell an untruth.
74. He must not say disagreeable things.
75. He must not strike any one upon a vital part.
76. He must not despise himself if he wishes to enjoy long life.
77. He must often repeat his prayers at each twilight (if he wishes to live long).
78. He must not play with (venomous) serpents or with weapons.
79. He must not touch the cavities of his body without a cause.
80. He must not raise a stick against another man.
81. One who deserves punishment he must strike in order to punish him.
82. (He must strike) him upon his back with a shoot of bamboo or with a rope.

75. 'Others' take this Sutra to mean, that he must not make public another man's misconduct. (Nand.) This interpretation is proposed by Vigñānēśvara, on Yâgñavalkya I, 153.

79. See XXIII, 51.

83. He must take care not to revile a god, a Brāhmaṇa, the Sāstras, or the high-minded (Rīshis).

84. And (he must avoid) gain and pleasure repugnant to duty.

85. (He must avoid) even lawful acts which may give offence to mankind.

86. On the days of new and full moon let him make a propitiatory offering.

87. He must not cut even grass (on those two days).

88. He must adorn himself (with garlands, sandal, and the like).

89. Thus he must observe established customs.

90. Those customs, which have been explicitly ordained in revealed and in traditional texts, and which are practised by the virtuous, must always be observed by a righteous man with subdued passions.

91. By adhering to established usage he attains to old age; this is the way to obtain that state in the next life which he desires, and imperishable riches, this is the way to destroy the effect of (bodily) marks foreboding future misfortunes.

92. He who observes the usages established among the virtuous, who is a believer in revelation, and free from ill-will, lives a hundred years, even though he does not possess any external marks of prosperity.

84. "“Or repugnant to the final liberation,” as the use of the particle ka implies.’ (Nand.) See Manu VI, 37.

85. The use of the particle ka, Nand. argues from Manu IV, 176, implies that acts which may cause future pain should also be avoided.

88. The use of the particle ka, according to Nand., implies that he must also observe auspicious rites and established customs, as ordained by Manu IV, 145. The latter injunction is, however, expressly given in the next Sūtra.

LXXII.

1. He must persist in keeping his mind and his organs of sense under restraint.

2. Restraint of the mind implies restraint of the senses.

3. One who has acquired complete command over himself, gains this world and the next.

4. One who has no command over himself, reaps no fruit from any of his acts (whether worldly or tending to the acquisition of spiritual merit).

5. Self-restraint is the best instrument of purification; self-restraint is the best of auspicious objects; by self-restraint he obtains anything he may desire in his heart.

6. The man who rides (as it were) in a chariot drawn by his five senses and directed by his mind (as the charioteer), who keeps it on the path of the virtuous, can never be overcome by his enemies (lust, wrath, and greed), unless the horses (unrestrained by the charioteer) run away with the chariot.

7. As the waters (of all streams) are stored up (and reabsorbed) in the ocean, which, though being filled with them, remains unmoved and tranquil, even so that man, in whose mind the passions are stored up (and dissolved), obtains perfect calmness: but not he who strives after the gratification of his desires.

LXXII. 7=Bhagavad-gîtâ II, 70. This chapter treats of duties which are common to all the four orders. (Nand.)

LXXIII.

1. One desirous of celebrating a Srâddha must invite the Brâhmaṇas on the day before (it is to take place).

2. On the next day, in the forenoon, if it falls in the bright half of the month, and in the afternoon, if it falls in the dark half of the month, the Brâhmaṇas, who must have duly bathed and duly sipped water, must be placed by him, in the order of their seniority¹ (or) of their sacred knowledge, upon seats covered with Kusa grass.

3. (He must entertain) two (Brâhmaṇas) facing the east at the Srâddha of the gods (Viśvedevâs), and three facing the north at the Srâddha of the manes;

4. Or one only at each Srâddha.

5. After having (worshipped the Viśvedevâs and) offered a burnt-oblation: during the recitation of the first Paññaka (pentad) at a Srâddha repast con-

LXXIII. 1-32. Âsv. II, 5, 11-14; IV, 7; Gobh. IV, 2-4; Pâr. III, 10, 48-55; Sâṅkh. IV, 1; M. III, 125, 204-259; Y. I, 225-248; Âpast. II, 7, 17, 11-19; Gaut. XV. Regarding the corresponding section of the Kâṭhaka Grîhya-sûtra, see Introduction. This chapter opens the section on Srâddhas (funeral oblations), which consists of thirteen chapters (LXXIII-LXXXV. Nand.)

1. The Ekoddishṭa and Sapindîkarana Srâddhas have been described above, XXI. The rules given in the present chapter refer to all the remaining kinds of Srâddhas. See 5-9, LXXIV, LXXVI-LXXVIII.

2. ¹ At the Srâddha of the manes the oldest Brâhmaṇa represents the great-grandfather; the one next to him in age, the grandfather; the youngest of the three, the father of the sacrificer. (Nand.)

5-9. The three Paññakas referred to in Sûtras 5-9 are respectively vv. 1-5, 6-10, and 11-15 of Kâṭhaka XXXIX, 10. (Nand.) The great majority of the Mantras quoted in Sûtras 11-26 have sisting of undressed grain or performed for the gratification of a special desire¹;

6. At a Srāddha repast consisting of meat, during the recitation of the second Pañākā;

7. At a new moon (Srāddha), during the recitation of the last Pañākā;

8. On the Ashṭakās (or eighth days) of the (three) dark halves subsequent to the full moon day of the month Āgrahāyana (or Mārgaśrsha)¹, during the recitation of the first, second, and last Pañākās respectively;

9. Likewise, on the Anvashṭakās (or ninth days of the dark halves of those months);

10. He must invite the manes, after having received permission to do so from the *Brāhmaṇas*¹.

11. Having driven away the Yātudhānas by strewing grains of sesamum and by reciting the two not been traced in the Berlin MS. of the Kāṭhaka, nor indeed in any other Samhitā of the Veda, but there can be no doubt that they belong to the school of the Kāṭhas, as nearly all are quoted by their Pratīkas in the Kāṭhaka Grīhya-sūtra, and given at full in Devapāla's Commentary on the latter. The above renderings of the Pratīkas rest upon Devapāla's interpretations. That the rules in 5 seq. teach the performance of a Srāddha according to the rites of the Kāṭha school, is confirmed by Nand. in his remarks on 5 seq. and 9 seq.

5. ¹ See LXXVIII.

8. The days referred to are the eighth days of the dark halves of the months Mārgaśrsha, Pausha, and Māgha.

9. 'And on the Srāddhas taking place on the seventh day of the dark half, as ka indicates.' (Nand.) This statement does not, however, deserve much credit, as such Srāddhas are neither mentioned in our work nor in the Kāṭhaka Grīhya-sūtra.

10. ¹ 'The permission of the Brāhmaṇas has to be asked with the Mantra, "I shall invite (the manes);" and their answer must be, "Invite them."' (Nand.)

11. The Yātudhānas are a class of demons supposed to disturb

Mantras (the first of which begins with the words), 'May the Asuras go away;'

12. He must invite the manes (with the four Mantras), 'Come near, O ye manes,' '(Conduct) them all (here), O Agni,' 'May my (ancestors) come near,' 'This is your (share), O ye manes.' Then let him prepare the water for washing the feet with scented water, which has been mixed up with Kusa grass and sesamum, while reciting (the three Mantras), 'Those standing¹,' 'Speech is imperishable,' and 'What my mother (has sinned)¹,' and offer it (to the Brâhmaṇas); let him prepare the Arghya (or water mixed with Dûrvâ grass, flowers, &c.) and offer it to them; let him offer to the Brâhmaṇas, to the best of his power, Kusa grass, sesamum, clothes, flowers, ornaments, incense, and lamps; let him take food sprinkled with clarified butter; let him look them in the face with the Mantra, 'O ye Âdityas, Rudras, and Vasus;' let him say, 'I will offer an oblation in the fire,' and if the Brâhmaṇas say, 'Offer an oblation,' let him offer three burnt-oblations².

13. After having consecrated the offerings with the Mantras, 'They, who are my ancestors,' 'This is your (share), O ye manes,' and 'This offering,' he must pour (what is left of) the food into such vessels as happen to be there, or (into golden ones at the offering addressed to the Visvedevâs and) into silver the effect of a Srâddha. The second Mantra, according to Devapâla, is from the Rig-veda, X, 15, 1.

12. ¹ These two Mantras are also quoted, with slight variations, by Sâṅkhâya III, 13, 5.—² The three burnt-oblations have to be accompanied by the recitation of the three Mantras, 'To Soma accompanied by the manes svadhâ namaḥ; to Yama Âṅgiras svadhâ namaḥ; to Agni who takes the offerings addressed to the manes svadhâ namaḥ.' (Nand.)

ones (at the offering addressed to the manes), and offer it first to the two Brâhmaṇas facing the east (who have been invited to the Srâddha of the gods).

14. Afterwards he must offer it to the (three) Brâhmaṇas facing the north (who represent his three ancestors, addressing himself) to his father, grandfather, and great-grandfather, (and calling out) their name and race.

15. While the Brâhmaṇas are eating the food, let him mutter (the three Mantras), 'Whatever (trickles down) through my fault,' 'With days and nights¹,' and 'Whatever (limb) of yours, Agni.'

16. And (let him mutter) the Itihâsa (Epics), Purâṇa (Legends), and Dharmasâstra (Institutes of the Sacred Law).

17. Near the leavings let him deposit upon blades of Kusa grass with the ends turned towards the south one ball of rice for his father, while saying, 'Earth is (like) a spoon, imperishable (satisfaction).'

18. With the Mantra, 'Air is (like) a spoon, imperishable (satisfaction,' let him deposit) a second ball for his grandfather.

19. With the Mantra, 'Heaven is (like) a spoon, imperishable (satisfaction,' let him deposit) a third ball for his great-grandfather.

20. With the Mantra, 'Those ancestors who

14. The formula of this invocation, according to Nand., is this, 'To NN., my ancestor, of the Gotra NN., who is like a Vasu, (I offer) this food, svadhâ namaḥ.' The use of the particle ka, according to the same, implies that the maternal grandfather and the other maternal ancestors must also be addressed, as ordained below (LXXV, 7).

15. ¹ A similar Mantra is quoted, Sâṅkh. III, 13, 5.

have died,' let him place a garment (upon the balls).

21. With the Mantra, 'Give us sons, O ye manes,' (let him place) food upon them.

22. With the Mantra, 'Enjoy it, O ye manes, partake of it, each according to his share¹,' let him wipe off the grease from his hands with the ends of the blades.

23. With the Mantra, '(Ye waters) imparting vigour¹,' let him sprinkle the balls to the right with the wet (remainder of the food), and offer the Argha², flowers, incense, unguents, and rice, and other victuals and dainties to the Brâhmanas.

24. And (he must offer them) a jar with water, which has been mixed up with honey, clarified butter, sesamum, and (ointments, oil, and the like).

25. The Brâhmanas having eaten and being satisfied, let him sprinkle the food (as much as has been left by them) and the grass with the Mantra, 'Mayest thou not fail me,' and strew the food near the leavings; and having asked them, 'Are you satisfied? Is (the Srâddha) finished,' he must first give water for sipping to the Brâhmanas facing the north, and then to those facing the east; and he must sprinkle the place where the Srâddha has been offered (with water, with the Mantra), 'Well sprinkled.' All these rites he must perform while holding blades of sacred grass in his hand.

26. Afterwards he must, while turning his face towards the Brâhmanas facing the east, circumambu-

22. ¹ Vâgasan. Samh. II, 31; Kâth. IX, 6.

23. ¹ Vâgasan. Samh. II, 34.—² The Argha is a respectful offering, the ingredients of which vary.

late them from left to right, with the Mantra, 'What a crow (may have eaten of my offering),' and turn back again; he must honour them with sacrificial fees, to the best of his power, saying, 'May you be satisfied,' and on their answering, 'We are satisfied,' he must address them with the Mantra, 'The gods and the manes.'

27. After having given (to all) water (with the Mantra, 'May the food and water and whatever else I gave you be) imperishable,' (and) calling out their name and race, and having added the Mantra, 'May the Visvedevâs be satisfied,' he must ask, with folded hands, and with an attentive and cheerful mind, the following (benediction) from the Brâhmaṇas facing the east:

28. 'May the liberal-minded in our race increase in number, and may the (study of the) Vedas and our progeny (also increase). May faith not depart from us, and may we have plenty to bestow on the poor.'

29. They shall answer, 'Thus let it be.'

30. (The second half of the benediction shall be as follows), 'May we have plenty of food, and may we receive guests. May others come to beg of us, and may not we be obliged to beg of any one.'

31. After having received this double benediction (through the Brâhmaṇas saying, 'Thus let it be'),

32. He must dismiss the Brâhmaṇas, with the Mantra, 'With all food¹,' after having honoured them according to custom, accompanied them (as far as the limits of his estate), and taken his leave of them.

32. ¹ Rig-veda VII, 38, 8.

LXXIV.

1. After having worshipped, on each Ashṭakâ, the gods and performed, with vegetables, meat, and cakes respectively, a Srâddha (according to the rules given in the last chapter), he must, on each *Anvashṭakâ*¹, worship the gods and offer a burnt-oblation in the same way as on the Ashṭakâs (i. e. reciting the same three Pañṭakas successively), and entertain Brâhmanas in the same way as (directed) before (in the preceding chapter), in honour of his mother, his paternal grandmother, and his paternal great-grandmother, honour them with presents, accompany them (as far as the limits of his estate), and dismiss them².

2. Then he must dig (six) trenches.

3. On the border of these trenches, to the north-east of them, he must light fires and place balls of rice.

4. On the border of three of the trenches (he must place balls) for the men, and on the border of the other three (he must place balls) for the women.

LXXIV. 1-8. Âsv. II, 5; Gobh. IV, 2; Pâr. III, 3, 10-12; Sâṅkh. III, 13, 6; M. IV, 150. Regarding the corresponding section of the Kâṭhaka Grîhya-sûtra, see the Introduction.

1. ¹ See LXXIII, 8, 9; LXXVI, 1. — ² Nand. considers the use of the particle kā to imply that the father together with the other paternal ancestors, and the maternal grandfather along with the other maternal ancestors, should also be invoked, which would make in all nine ancestors to be invoked. The first part of this observation appears to be correct, but the maternal grandfather and the rest are neither referred to in the following Sûtras, nor in the Kâṭhaka Grîhya-sûtra.

2. Nand. gives it as his opinion, that nine trenches should be made, three of which are to be for the maternal grandfather, &c. But Sûtra 4 refers to three trenches for the men only, and the Kâṭhaka Grîhya-sûtra expressly mentions the number of six trenches.

5. He must fill the three trenches for the men with water mixed with food.

6. (He must fill) the three trenches for the women with milk mixed with food.

7. (And he must fill up) each triad of trenches singly with sour milk, meat, and milk.

8. After having filled (the trenches), he must mutter the Mantra, 'May this (food) be imperishable for ye men and for ye women.'

LXXV.

1. He who makes a Srâddha-offering while his father is alive, must offer it to those persons to whom his father offers (his Srâddhas).

2. (If he offers a Srâddha) while both his father and grandfather are alive, (he must offer it to those persons) to whom his grandfather (offers his Srâddhas).

3. While his father, grandfather, and great-grandfather are alive, he must offer no Srâddha at all.

4. He whose father is dead (but whose grandfather is alive), must first of all offer a ball of rice to his father, after that, two balls to the two ancestors coming before his grandfather (or to his great-grandfather and to his fourth ascendant).

5. He whose father and grandfather are dead (but whose great-grandfather is alive), must first offer two balls to those two, and then offer one ball to the grandfather of his grandfather.

7. Nand. renders this Sûtra differently, in accordance with his own theory regarding the number of the trenches.

LXXV. 1. M. III, 220. — 4. M. III, 221. — 7. Y. I, 228.

6. He whose grandfather is dead (but whose father and great-grandfather are alive), must give one ball to his grandfather and two balls to the father and grandfather of his great-grandfather.

7. An intelligent man must offer Srâddhas to his maternal grandfather, and to the father and grandfather of him, in the same way (as to his paternal ancestors), duly modifying the Mantras. But the Srâddhas addressed to other relatives, (uncles, brothers, and the like, must be performed) without Mantras.

LXXVI.

1. The (twelve) days of new moon, the three Ashṭakâs, the three Anvashṭakâs, a Mâgha day (i.e. 'day on which the moon enters the lunar asterism Maghâ'), which falls on the thirteenth of the dark half of the month Praushṭapada, and the two seasons when rice and barley grow ripe (or autumn and spring):

7. The Mantras are those quoted above, in Chapters LXXIII and LXXIV. They have to be modified, i.e. the names of the maternal ancestors must be put in, and the verb &c. of the sentence be altered accordingly. (Nand.)

LXXVI. 1. M. III, 122, 273, 281; IV, 150; Y. I, 217, 260; Gaut. XV, 2; Âpast. II, 7, 16, 4-6.

1. Nand. infers from a passage of Âsvalâyana (Grihya-sûtra II, 4, 3) that Srâddhas to be offered on the day before each Ashṭakâ are also intended here. See, however, note on LXXIII, 9. The same proposes two explanations of the term Mâghî: 1. It has to be separated from the following words, and refers directly to the day of full moon in the month Mâgha, and indirectly to the days of full moon in Âshâdha, Kârttika, and Vaisâkha as well, as indicated in a passage of the Brâhma-purâna. 2. It has to be connected with the clause following it. This latter interpretation, on which the rendering given above is based, is supported by Manu (III, 273, 274),

2. Thus have the regular times for a Srâddha been declared by the lord of creatures. He who fails to perform a Srâddha on those days, goes to hell.

LXXVII.

1. The sun's passage from one sign of the zodiac to another ;

2. The two equinoctial points ;

3. The two solstitial points particularly ;

4. The (Yoga) Vyatîpâta ;

5. The constellation under which (the sacrificer himself, or his wife, or his son) is born ;

6. A time of rejoicing (as, when a son has been born, or another happy event happened) :

7. These occasions for a Srâddha the lord of creatures has pronounced optional ; a Srâddha which is performed on these occasions gives infinite satisfaction (to the manes).

8. No Srâddha must be performed in the twilight or at night by an intelligent man. A Srâddha may be performed at those times also when an eclipse (of the sun or of the moon) takes place.

9. For a Srâddha which is offered them at the time of an eclipse satisfies the manes, as long as the moon and the stars exist, and procures immense advantages and the satisfaction of all his desires to the sacrificer.

Yâgñavalkya (I, 260), according to the interpretations of Kullûka and Vigñânesvara, and by the Vishnu-sûtra itself (LXXVIII, 52).

✓ LXXVII. 1-6, 9. Y. I, 217, 218. — 6. Âsv. IV, 7, 1 ; Sânkh. IV, 4. — 8. M. III, 280 ; Âpast. II, 7, 17, 23, 25.

4. This is the seventeenth among the twenty-seven Yogas or astrological divisions of the zodiac. (Nand.)

7. The meaning is, that the Srâddhas mentioned in this chapter are naimittika, 'occasional.' (Nand.)

LXXVIII.

1. By performing a Srâddha on Sunday he procures everlasting freedom from disease.
2. (By performing a Srâddha) on Monday he becomes beloved¹.
3. (By performing it) on Tuesday (he procures) success in battle.
4. (By performing it) on Wednesday (he enjoys) all his desires.
5. (By performing it) on Thursday (he acquires) such religious knowledge as he desires.
6. (By performing it) on Friday (he acquires) wealth.
7. (By performing it) on Saturday (he procures) longevity.
8. (By performing it under the Nakshatra or constellation) Kṛittikâs (he gains) heaven.

LXXVIII. 8-35. M. III, 277; Y. I, 264-267. — 36-50. M. III, 276; Y. I, 261-263; Âpast. II, 7, 16, 8-22; Gaut. XV, 4.—52, 53. M. III, 273, 274. Regarding Sûtras 1-7, see the Introduction.

1. Nand. states that the Srâddhas mentioned in this chapter are of the kâmya sort, i.e. 'offered for the gratification of a special desire.'

2. ¹ This is Nand.'s interpretation of the term saubhâgyam. It might also be taken in its usual acceptance, as meaning 'happiness.'

8-35. Those names of the twenty-eight Nakshatras or lunar asterisms, which I have included in parentheses, are from Nand.'s Commentary. Most of the objects which are said to be gained by the Srâddhas mentioned in Sûtras 8-35 are connected etymologically, or through their import, with the names of the particular Nakshatras under which they are performed. Thus the term pushî, 'prosperity,' in Sûtra 13, is etymologically connected with Pushya; the term mitra, 'friend,' in 22, is connected with Maitra; the term râgyam, 'royalty,' in 23, is connected with Sâkra, the name of that Nakshatra being derived from Sakra, a name of Indra, the king of the gods, &c.

9. (By performing it under the constellation) Rohinî (he obtains) progeny.

10. (By performing it under the constellation) Saumya (or Mrigasiras he procures) the superhuman power of a pious Brâhmaṇa.

11. (By performing it under the constellation) Raudra (or Ârdrâ he reaps) the fruit of his labours.

12. (By performing it under the constellation) Punarvasu (he procures) land.

13. (By performing it under the constellation) Pushya (or Tishya he procures) prosperity.

14. (By performing it under the constellation) Sârpa (or Âsleshâs he obtains) beauty.

15. (By performing it under the constellation) Paitrya (or Maghâ he enjoys) all his desires.

16. (By performing it under the constellation) Bhâgya (or Pûrvaphâlgunî) he becomes beloved¹.

17. (By performing it under the constellation) Âryamaṇa (or Uttaraphâlgunî he procures) wealth.

18. (By performing it under the constellation) Hasta (he acquires) superiority among his kindred.

19. (By performing it under the constellation) Tvâshtra (or Kitrâ he procures) handsome sons.

20. (By performing it under the constellation) Svâti (he procures) success in trade.

21. (By performing it under the constellation) Visâkhâs (he acquires) gold.

22. (By performing it under the constellation) Maitra (or Anurâdhâ he procures) friends.

23. (By performing it under the constellation) Sâkra (or Gyeshthâ he procures) royalty.

24. (By performing it under the constellation) Mûla (he procures good results in) agriculture.

16. ¹ See 2, note.

25. (By performing it under the constellation) Âpya (or Pûrvâshâdhâs he procures) success in sea-voyages.

26. (By performing it under the constellation) Vaisvadeva (or Uttarâshâdhâs he enjoys) all his desires.

27. (By performing it under the constellation) Abhigit (he procures) superiority.

28. (By performing it under the constellation) Sravana (he enjoys) all his desires.

29. (By performing it under the constellation) Vâsava (or Dhanishthâs he procures success in preparing) salt ¹.

30. (By performing it under the constellation) Vârûna (or Satabhishâ he obtains) freedom from disease.

31. (By performing it under the constellation) Âga (or Pûrvabhâdrapadâ he obtains) copper vessels.

32. (By performing it under the constellation) Âhîrbudhnya (or Uttarabhâdrapadâ he obtains) a house.

33. (By performing it under the constellation) Paushna (or Revati he acquires) cows.

34. (By performing it under the constellation) Âsvina (or Âsvini he obtains) a horse.

35. (By performing it under the constellation) Yâmya (or Bharani he procures) longevity.

36. (By offering it) on the first day of a lunar fortnight (he procures) a house and handsome wives.

29. ¹ Lavanam means either 'salt' or 'beauty' or 'medicinal herbs and fruits.' (Nand.)

37. (By offering it) on the second day (he procures) a beautiful daughter (and sons-in-law).

38. (By offering it) on the third day (he enjoys) all his desires.

39. (By offering it) on the fourth day (he procures) cattle.

40. (By offering it) on the fifth day (he procures) handsome sons.

41. (By offering it) on the sixth day (he obtains) success in gaming.

42. (By offering it) on the seventh day (he procures good results in) agriculture.

43. (By offering it) on the eighth day (he procures success in) trade.

44. (By offering it) on the ninth day (he procures) cattle ¹.

45. (By offering it) on the tenth day (he procures) horses.

46. (By offering it) on the eleventh day (he procures) sons endowed with the superhuman power of a pious Brâhmana.

47. (By offering it) on the twelfth day (he procures) gold and silver.

48. (By offering it) on the thirteenth day he becomes beloved.

49. (By offering it) on the fifteenth day (he enjoys) all his desires.

44. ¹Nand. infers from a passage of Yâgñavalkya (I, 266) that the term 'cattle' here refers to horses and other one-hoofed animals. See, however, the next Sûtra.

48. The term saubhâgyam is stated by Nand. (with reference to Y. I, 264) to denote 'superiority among his kindred,' in this Sûtra. But there is no cogent reason for deviating here from that interpretation of the term which he proposes in his Commentary on Sûtras 2 and 16. See above.

50. For Srâddhas for those who have been killed in battle the fourteenth day is ordained.

51. There are two stanzas on this subject recited by the manes :

52. 'May that excellent man be born to our race, whosoever he may be, who attentively offers a Srâddha in the rainy season¹ on the thirteenth of the dark half,

53. 'With milk profusely mixed with honey; and (he who offers such Srâddhas) during the whole month Kârttika and (in the afternoon) when the shadow of an elephant falls towards the east.'

LXXIX.

1. He must not perform a Srâddha with water collected at night.

2. On failure of Kusa grass he must employ Kâsa or Dûrvâ grass instead.

3. Instead of a garment (he may give) cotton thread.

4. He must avoid (giving) the fringe of cloth, though it be of cloth not yet used.

5. And (he must not give) flowers having a nasty odour, or no odour at all, the blossoms of thorny plants, and red flowers.

52. ¹ The term prâvri/kâle, 'in the rainy season,' probably refers to one month only of the rainy season, the month Bhâdrapada or Praush/âpada. See above, LXXVI, 1, and M. III, 273, 274, with Kullûka's Commentary; Y. I, 260, with Vignânesvara's Comment.

LXXIX. 8, 16. M. III, 226, 227, 235, 257; Âpast. II, 8, 19, 19-22. — 19-21. M. III, 229.

5. The use of the particle ka implies, according to Nand., who quotes a text in support of his assertion, that the leaves of the Kadamba, Bèl, Ketaka, and Bakula trees, as well as those of the Barbara plant and of the thorn-apple tree, are also included in this prohibition.

6. He may give white and sweet-smelling flowers, even though grown on thorny plants, and aquatic flowers, even though they be red.

7. He must not give marrow or fat instead of a lamp.

8. He may give clarified butter or sesamum-oil.

9. He must not give (the nails or horns) of animals instead of the incense of all kinds (prescribed for a Srâddha).

10. He may give bdellium mixed up with honey and clarified butter.

11. He may give sandal, saffron, camphor, aloe wood, or Padmaka wood instead of 'an ointment.

12. He must not salt (the dishes) publicly (after they have been cooked).

13. He must not give clarified butter, condiments, or the like (i. e. sour milk, milk, &c.) with his hands.

14. He must use metallic vessels;

15. Especially vessels made of silver.

16. He must place (on the sacrificial ground) vessels made of the horn of the rhinoceros, blankets made of the hair of the mountain-goat, the skin of a black antelope, sesamum, white mustard, unbroken grains, (silver and copper vessels and other) purificatory objects, and (a goat and other animals or objects), by which the demons are kept aloof.

7. 'Or mustard-oil or any other such substance, as ka indicates.' (Nand.)

8. 'Or the juice of plants, as mentioned by Saṅkha, on account of vâ.' (Nand.)

13. He must give those liquids with a spoon or similar implement. (Nand.)

16. According to Nand., the particle ka refers to other purificatory things, viz. the following seven, 'milk, water from the Ganges, honey, silken cloth, a grandson, blankets made of the hair of the

17. He must avoid to use pepper, (the onion called) Mukundaka, (the pot-herb called) Bhûstrina, (the leaves, blossoms, or roots of) the Sigru tree, mustard-seeds, (the plant) Nirgundî, (the fruit or leaves of) the Sâl tree, the plant Suvarkalâ, the (pumpkin-gourd called) Kûshmânda, the bottle-gourd, the egg-plant, (the plants or pot-herbs called) Pâlakyâ, Upotakt, and Tandultyaka, the herbs of the safflower, the Pindâluka (root), and the milk of female buffalos.

18. And (he must not use the bean called) Râga-mâsha, (the lentil called) Masûra, stale food, and factitious salt.

19. Let him avoid wrath.

20. He must not shed a tear.

21. He must not be in a hurry.

22. In offering the clarified butter and other (liquids, such as condiments, sour milk, milk, and the like) he must use metallic vessels, vessels made of the horn of the rhinoceros, and vessels made of the wood of the Phalgu tree.

23. There is a Sloka on this subject :

24. 'That which has been offered in vessels made of gold, or of silver, or of the horn of the rhinoceros, or of copper, or of Phalgu wood, becomes imperishable (and brings infinite reward to the sacrificer).'

mountain-goat, and sesamum.' The last two are, however, already contained in the above enumeration.

17. The term 'buffalo's milk' includes here, according to a text quoted by Nand., the milk of sheep, of antelopes, of camels, and of all one-hoofed animals.

18. 'As shown by ka, chick-peas and other grains and herbs mentioned in a Smṛiti must also be avoided.' (Nand.)

19. 'This rule applies both to the sacrificer and to the guests at a Srâddha.' (Nand.)

LXXX.

1. Sesamum, rice, barley, beans, water, roots, fruits, vegetables, Syâmâka grain, millet, wild rice, kidney-beans, and wheat satisfy (the manes) for a month;

2. The flesh of fishes (excepting those species that are forbidden), for two months;

3. The flesh of the common deer, for three months;

4. The flesh of sheep, for four months;

5. The flesh of birds (of those kinds that may be eaten), for five months;

6. The flesh of goats, for six months;

7. The flesh of the spotted deer, for seven months;

8. The flesh of the spotted antelope, for eight months;

9. Beef, for nine months;

10. Buffalo's meat, for ten months;

11. The meat of a hornless goat, for eleven months;

12. The milk of a cow, or preparations from it, for a year.

13. On this subject there exists a stanza, which the manes utter:

14. '(The pot-herb) Kâlasâka (sacred basil), (the prawn) Mahâsalka, and the flesh of the (crane called) Vârdhrîṇasa¹, (and of) a rhinoceros having no horn, is food which we always accept.'

LXXX. 1-14. M. III, 267-272; Y. I, 257-259; Âpast. II, 7, 16, 23-II, 7, 17, 3; II, 8, 18, 13; Gaut. XV, 15.

14. ¹This is the first of the two interpretations which Nand. proposes of the term Vârdhrîṇasa. It is supported by Âpastamba's

LXXXI.

1. He must not place the food upon a chair.
2. He must not touch it with his foot.
3. He must not sneeze upon it.
4. He must drive the Yâtudhânas away by means of sesamum or mustard-seeds.
5. Let him perform the Srâddha in an enclosed place.
6. He must not look at a woman in her courses ;
7. Nor at a dog ; 8. Nor at a tame pig ;
9. Nor at a tame cock.
10. Let him strive to perform the Srâddha in sight of a goat.
11. The Brâhmanas must eat in silence.
12. They must not eat with their heads covered ;
13. Nor with shoes on their feet ;
14. Nor with their feet placed upon a stool.
15. Let not men with a limb too little, or with a limb too much, look at a Srâddha ;
16. Nor Sûdras ; 17. Nor outcasts.

commentator, Haradatta, and by Âpastamba himself (I, 5, 17, 36). Nand.'s second interpretation, 'an old white goat,' is probably wrong, although it is supported by the authority of Kullûka and Vigñânesvara.

LXXXI. 2, 6-9, 11-13, 15, 16, 19. M. III, 229, 236-242. — 4, 5. Gaut. XV, 25, 26. — 7, 16, 17. Âpast. II, 7, 17, 20; Gaut. XV, 24. — 18. M. III, 243. — 20. M. III, 237. — 21-23. M. III, 244-246.

4. Nand. quotes the following Mantra, which has to be recited on this occasion, 'The Asuras, the Râkshasas, and the Pisâkas have been driven away.' A similar Mantra occurs in the Vâgasan. Samh. II, 29.

5. 'Ka indicates that it must be a place inclining to the south, as stated in a Smṛiti.' (Nand.)

6. This and the following Sûtras refer both to the host at a Srâddha and to the guests invited by him. (Nand.)

18. If at the time of a Srâddha a Brâhmaṇa or an ascetic (has come to his house), he must feed him, if (the invited) Brâhmaṇas permit it.

19. The Brâhmaṇas must not declare the qualities of the sacrificial dishes, even though asked to do so by their host.

20. As long as the dishes remain warm, as long as (the Brâhmaṇas) eat in silence, as long as the qualities of the sacrificial food are not declared by them, so long the manes enjoy it.

21. Having brought together (the remainder of) all the sorts of substantial food and (of the vegetables and) the like, he must sprinkle it with water, and place it before the Brâhmaṇas, who have taken their meal, strewing it on the ground.

22. The leavings (that have remained in the dishes) and what has been strewn (in the manner just mentioned) upon the blades of Kusa grass (spread on the ground) is the share of such (Brâhmaṇas) as have died before they were initiated, and of husbands who have deserted wives descended from good families.

23. What has dropped on the ground from the dishes, at a sacrifice addressed to the manes, they declare to be the share of servants, provided they be not dishonest or depraved.

LXXXII.

1. At a (Srâddha) offering to the Viśvedevâs let him not enquire (into the qualities or descent of) a Brâhmaṇa (whom he means to invite).

LXXXII. 1, 2. M. III, 149. — 3-29. M. III, 150-166; Y. I, 222-224; Âpast. II, 7, 17, 21; Gaut. XV, 16-18.

2. But at a (Śrāddha offering) to the manes he must enquire as closely as possible (into the qualities and descent of a Brāhmaṇa, whom he means to invite).

3. He must not invite (to a Śrāddha) such as have a limb too little, or a limb too much ;

4. Nor such as follow an occupation forbidden (by the Veda or by the traditional law)¹.

5. Nor those who act (deceitfully) like cats ;

6. Nor those wearing the insignia of some particular order, without having a claim to them ;

7. Nor astrologers ;

8. Nor Brāhmaṇas who subsist upon the offerings made to an idol which they attend ;

9. Nor physicians ;

10. Nor sons of an unmarried woman ;

11. Nor sons of the son of an unmarried woman ;

12. Nor those who sacrifice for a multitude of persons ;

13. Nor those who offer sacrifices for a whole village ;

14. Nor those who offer sacrifices for Śūdras ;

15. Nor those who offer sacrifices for those for whom it is forbidden to sacrifice (such as outcasts and others) ;

16. Nor those for whom the ceremony of initiation has not been performed ;

17. Nor those who sacrifice for such ;

4. ¹ The particle ka, according to Nand., in this Sūtra, refers to other categories, mentioned by Atri, viz. persons belonging to the same Gotra, or descended from the same R̥shi ancestors as the sacrificer, and unknown persons.

8. 'Ka indicates here that thieves and wicked persons are also intended, as stated in a Smṛiti.' (Nand.)

18. Nor those who do work on holidays ;
19. Nor malignant informers ;
20. Nor those who teach (the Veda) for a fee ;
21. Nor those who have been taught (the Veda) for a fee ;
22. Nor those who subsist on food given to them by a Sûdra ;
23. Nor those who have intercourse with an outcast ;
24. Nor those who neglect their daily study of the Veda ;
25. Nor those who neglect their morning and evening prayers ;
26. Nor those who are in the king's service ;
27. Nor 'naked' persons ;
28. Nor those who quarrel with their father ;
29. Nor those who have forsaken their father, mother, Guru, holy fire, or sacred study.
30. All those persons are said to defile a company, because they have been expelled from the community of Brâhmanas. Let a wise man avoid carefully, therefore, to entertain them at a Srâddha.

LXXXIII.

1. The following persons sanctify a company :
2. A Trinâkiketa ;

27. See LXIV, 5, note.

29. The particle ka here refers to the following further persons mentioned in a Smṛiti: a shepherd, one who lives by the prostitution of his own wife, the husband of a woman who had another husband before, and one employed to carry out dead bodies. (Nand.)

LXXXIII. 1-19. M. III, 128-148, 183-186 ; Y. I, 219-221 ; Âpast. II, 7, 17, 22 ; Gaut. XV, 28.

2. Nand. has two explanations of the term Trinâkiketa : 1. One who has thrice kindled the Nâkiketa fire. 2. One who has studied,

3. One who keeps five fires ;
4. One who can sing the Sâmans called Gye-shtha ;
5. One who has studied the whole Veda ;
6. One who has studied one Vedânga ;
7. One who has studied either the Purânas (Legends), or the Itihâsas (Epics), or grammar ;
8. One who has studied one of the Dharmasâstras (Institutes of the Sacred Law) ;
9. One purified by visiting sacred places of pilgrimage ;
10. One purified by offering sacrifices ;
11. One purified by austere devotion ;
12. One purified by veracity ;
13. One purified by (constantly muttering) Mantras ;
14. One intent upon muttering the Gâyatri ;
15. One in whose family the study and teaching of the Veda are hereditary.
16. One who knows the Trisuparna (the text which thrice contains the word Suparna).

in consequence of a vow, the portion of the Yagur-veda called Trinâkiketa. See Âpast. II, 7, 17, 22, with Dr. Bühler's note, and the Petersburg Dictionary.

4. Sâma-veda II, 209-211, &c.

7. Grammar is again mentioned here, although it forms part of the Vedângas mentioned in Sûtra 6. But there the Prâtisâkhyas are meant. (Nand.)

8. The number of the Smritis or Dharmasâstras, according to Nand., amounts to fifty-seven. The now current tradition gives thirty-six as their number ; but upwards of a hundred works of this description must have been actually in existence. See Dr. Bühler's Introduction to the Bombay Digest, p. xii seq.

16. See above, LVI, 23, and Dr. Bühler's note on Âpast. loc. cit. Nand. proposes another interpretation also of the term Trisuparna, 'one who has thrice kindled a fire in honour of Suparna.'

17. A son-in-law ;
18. And a grandson. All these persons are worthy (to be fed at a Srâddha) ;
19. And, particularly, devotees.
20. There is a stanza recited by the manes, which refers to this subject :
21. 'May that man be born to our race, who feeds a Brâhmaṇa devotee assiduously at a Srâddha, by which repast we are satisfied ourselves.'

LXXXIV.

1. He must not offer a Srâddha in a country inhabited by barbarians.
2. He must not visit a country inhabited by barbarians (excepting on a pilgrimage).
3. By (constantly) drinking water from (or bathing in) a pool situated in a foreign (barbarous) country, he becomes equal to its inhabitants.
4. Those countries are called barbarous (mleṣṭha) where the system of the four castes does not exist ; the others are denoted Âryāvarta (the abode of the Âryans).

18. According to Nand., the particles ka and iti refer to the sister's son and other relatives, as enumerated by Yâgyavalkya I, 220, 221.

19. Nand. thinks that ka here refers to ascetics.

LXXXIV. 2. Nand. quotes a stanza of Devala to the effect that one who has visited the countries of Sindh, of the Sauvîras, Surât, and the adjacent parts, Bengal proper, Kaliṅga, South Bihâr, and Malwa requires to be initiated a second time.

3. ' Ka refers to pools belonging to Kandâlas or other degraded castes.' (Nand.)

4. Âryāvarta is the name of the whole tract of land which extends from the eastern to the western ocean, and is bounded by the Himâlayas and by the Vindhya mountains in the north and south. See Manu II, 21, 22.

LXXXV.

1. A Srâddha offered at the (Tîrtha or place of pilgrimage called) Pushkaras confers eternal bliss upon the giver;

2. And so does the muttering of prayers, the offering of burnt-oblations, and the practice of austerities in that place.

3. Even by merely bathing at Pushkara he is purified from all his sins.

4. The same effect may be produced at Gayâ-sîrsha;

5. And near Vaṭa (Akshayavaṭa);

6. And on the Amarakantaka mountain;

7. And on the Varâha mountain;

LXXXV. 1. Pushkara, according to the common acceptance of the term, is the name of a celebrated place of pilgrimage near Agmîr, the modern Pokur. See Lassen, Indian Antiquities, I, 113. Nand. quotes a Smṛiti passage to the effect that there are three Pushkaras, and a passage of the Mahâbhârata, in which it is stated that one Pushkara is sacred to Brahman, another to Vishnu, and a third to Rudra.

3. Nand. asserts with regard to the use of the name Pushkara in the singular number in this Sûtra, that it means even a single bath has the consequence here mentioned.

4. Gayâ-sîrsha is the name of a mountain near Gayâ in Bihâr, a celebrated place of pilgrimage. Compare Yâgñavalkya I, 260.

5. There exists one Akshayavaṭa in Bihâr (Nand.) and another in Prayâga (Allahabad). The 'undecaying banyan-tree' (Akshay Baṭ) is an object of worship at Allahabad even now, and was so already in the times of Hwen Thsang. See Cunningham, Ancient Geography of India, p. 389; St. Julien, Voyages des Pèlerins Bouddhistes, II, 278.

6. Nand. states that both the Tîrtha called Amarakantaka on the Mekalâ mountain in the Vindhya range and the whole mountain of that name are meant.

7. 'This is a certain boar-shaped mountain.' (Nand.) It seems very probable that the Tîrtha of Bâramûla, the ancient Varâha-

8. And anywhere on the bank of the Narmadâ (Nerbudda) river;
9. And on the bank of the Yamunâ (Jumna);
10. And, particularly, on the Gaṅgâ;
11. And at Kusâvarta;
12. And at Binduka;
13. And upon the Nîlgiri hills;
14. And at Kanakhala;
15. And at Kub-gâmra;
16. And on the Bhṛigutuṅga (mountain);
17. And at Kedâra;
18. And on the Mahâlaya (mountain);
19. And on the Nadantikâ (river);
20. And on the Sugandhâ (river);
21. And at Sâkam-bharî;
22. And at Phalgutîrtha;
23. And on the mûla in Kasmîr, is meant. See Bühler, Kasmîr Report, p. 12, where a 'Varâha hill' is mentioned as adjacent to that town.

11. This Tîrtha 'is situated upon the mountain called Tryambaka, where the Godâvarî river takes its rise.' (Nand.) Tryambaka is the modern Trimbak (the name of a place of pilgrimage situated near Nâsik).

12. 'Bindûka is the name of a Tîrtha in the Dekhan. Bilvaka, as other texts read (the MS. on which the two Calcutta editions are based among the number), is the name of another Tîrtha in the Dekhan.' (Nand.)

14. There is one Kanakhala in the Himâlayas, and another near Trimbak. (Nand.)

15. There is one plain of that name in Orissa, and another in Haridvâr. (Nand.)

16. This is the name of a sacred mountain near the Amarakantaka range, according to Nand.; in the Himâlayas, according to others. See the Petersburg Dictionary.

17. Kedâra (the Kedâr mountains?) is in the Himâlayas. (Nand.)

18, 19. These two names are not defined by Nand.

20. This is a river in the vicinity of the Saugandhika mountain. (Nand.)

21. Sâkam-bharî is the modern Shâambar, which lies 'in the desert of Marudesa, on the salt lake.' (Nand.)

22. 'Phalgutîrtha is a Tîrtha in Gayâ.' (Nand.)

23. Mahâgaṅgâ, 'the great Gaṅgâ,' is the Alakânandâ river

Mahâgaṅgâ; 24. And at Trihalikâgrâma; 25. And at Kumâradhârâ; 26. And at Prabhâsa; 27. And particularly anywhere on (the bank of) the Sarasvatî;

28. At Gaṅgâdvâra (Haridvâr), at Prayâga (Allahabad), where the Gaṅgâ falls into the ocean, constantly in the Naimisha forest, and especially at Benares;

29. And at Agastyâsrama;

30. And at Kanvâsrama (on the Mâlinî river);

31. And on the Kausikî (Kosi river);

32. And on the bank of the Sarayût (Surju river) in Oudh);

33. And on the confluence of the Sona (Sone) and Gytishâ rivers;

34. And on the Sṛîparvata (mountain);

(Nand.), which takes its rise in the Himâlayas and falls into the Ganges.

24. 'Trihalikâgrâma means Sâlagrâma. There is another reading, Tanûlikâsrama.' (Nand.)

25. This is the name of a lake in Kasmîr, which the god Kumâra by a mighty stroke caused to stream forth from the Krauñka mountain (see Vâyu-purâṇa); or Kumâradhârâ is situated near the southern ocean in the plain of Ishupâta. (Nand.)

26. Prabhâsa is the name of a Tîrtha near Dvârakâ, on the western point of Kattivar. (Nand.)

27. Regarding the river Sarasvatî and its reputed holiness, see particularly Cunningham, Ancient Geography of India, I, 331 seq., and Manu II, 17.

28. The Naimisha forest is in the northern country. (Nand.)

29. 'Agastyâsrama is situated near Pushkara (Sûtra 1), on the bank of the Sarasvatî. There is another Agastyâsrama in the south, near Svâmishâna.' (Nand.)

33. The confluence of those two rivers is in the centre of the Vindhya range. For the name of the second, another reading is Gytîratha. (Nand.)

34. The Sṛîparvata or Sṛîsaila, where the Mallikârguna (symbol of Sîva) is worshipped, is in the Dekhan. (Nand.)

35. And at (the Tīrtha situated on the Yamunā, which is called) Kālodaka.
36. And at Uttaramānasa (in the Kedār mountains, in the Himālayas).
37. And at Vadvā (in the Dekhan).
38. And at Matāṅgavāpī (in the southern part of Gayā);
39. And at Saptārsha; 40. And at Vishṇupada;
41. And at Svargamārgapada (or Rathamārga);
42. And on the Godāvarī river (in the Dekhan);
43. And on the Gomatī (river);
44. And on the Vetravati (river);
45. And on the Vipāsā (river);
46. And on the Vitastā (river);
47. And on the banks of the Satadru (river);
48. And on the Kandrabhāgā (river);
49. And on the Īrāvati (river);
50. And on the banks of the Indus;
51. And on the southern Pañṇanada;
52. And at Ausaga (?);
53. And at other such Tīrthas;

39. Saptārsha, 'the Tīrtha of the seven Rishis' (Nand.), is perhaps the present Satara, in the country of the Mahrattas.

40. Nand. places this Tīrtha in the centre of Gayā. There is another of the same name, which is placed on the Kailāsa mountain.

43. The Gomatī (the Gunti, near Lucknow) rises in the Naimisha forest. (Nand.) See 28.

44. The Vetravati (the modern Betwah, near Bhilsah) is situated in Ahikhattra. (Nand.)

45-49. The Vipāsā (Beas), Vitastā (Jhelum or Behut), Satadru (Sutlej), Kandrabhāgā (Chenāb), and Īrāvati (Ravee) are the five rivers of the Pañṇāb (Pañṇanada in Sanskrit).

51. This is the name of the confluence of five rivers in the Dekhan: the Kṛishnā, Venā, Tuṅga, Bhadrā, and Kona. (Nand.)

52. 'Ausaga (v. l. Augasa; read Ausiga?) means Sūrpāraka' (Nand.), which was situated probably on the mouth of the Kṛishnā (Kistna).

54. And on the banks of (other) holy rivers ;
 55. And anywhere at the birth-place of a deity, (such as Râma, Krishna, and others) ;
 56. And on sand-banks ; 57. And near water-falls ; 58. And on mountains ; 59. And in arbours (the sporting-places of Krishna) ; 60. And in woods ; 61. And in groves ; 62. And in houses smeared with cow-dung ; 63. And in 'pleasant spots.'
 64. There are some stanzas recited by the manes, which refer to this subject :
 65. 'May that person be born to our race, who will give us libations of water, taken from streams abounding with water, especially if their floods (coming from the Himâlayas) are cool.
 66. 'May that excellent man be born to our race, who offers us a Srâddha attentively at Gayâśrsha or at Va/a.'
 67. A man must wish to have many sons, because if only one of them goes to Gayâ (and offers a Srâddha to him after his death), or if he performs a horse-sacrifice, or if he sets a dark-coloured bull at liberty¹, (he will acquire final emancipation through him.)

LXXXVI.

1. Now follows the ceremony of setting a bull at liberty, (which should take place)
2. On the days of full moon in Kârttika or Âsvina.
3. When performing this rite, he must first examine the bull.

63. The term manogña, 'a pleasant spot,' means 'a place close by the house, where sacred basil is planted,' or other such places. (Nand.)

67. ¹ See the next chapter.

LXXXVI. 1-18. Pâr. III, 9 ; Sâñkh. III, 11. Regarding the corresponding section of the Kâthaka Grîhya-sûtra, see Introduction.

4. (The bull must be) the offspring of a milch cow having young ones living.

5. He must have all marks.

6. He must be dark-coloured;

7. Or red, but having a white mouth, a white tail, and white feet and horns.

8. He must be one who protects the herd.

9. Then, after having (kindled) a blazing fire among the cows (in the cow-pen) and strewed Kusa grass around it, let him boil with milk a dish sacred to Pûshan, and offer (two oblations) in the fire with the Mantras, 'May Pûshan follow our cows¹,' and 'Here is pleasure².' And let a blacksmith mark the bull:

10. On the one flank (the right), with a discus; on the other flank (the left), with a trident.

11. After he has been marked, let him wash the bull with the four Mantras, (beginning with the words), 'The golden-coloured¹,' and with (the five Mantras, beginning with the words), 'May the divine (waters help and propitiate us)².'

12. Having washed and adorned the bull, he must bring him near, together with four young cows,

5. 'I.e. the bull must not be deficient in any limb.' (Nand.) This interpretation is supported by the Grihya-sûtras.

6. Nand. mentions two interpretations of the term nîla, 'dark-coloured': 1. a bull who is all white, and is therefore said to be of the 'Brâhmana kind'; 2. one whose body is white, whereas his tail, his hoofs, and his face are black, and his horns blue. Cf. L, 25.

8. Nand. interprets yûthasyâkâdakam by nishektâram, 'one who covers the cows.' My rendering is based upon Devapâla's comment on the corresponding passage of the Kâthaka Grihya-sûtra. See also Pâr. and Sâñkh. loc. cit.

9. ¹ Rig-veda VI, 54, 5, &c. — ² Vagas. Samh. VIII, 51; Kâth. Âsv. IV, 6, &c.

11. ¹ Taitt. Samh. V, 6, 1, 1, 2, &c. — ² Rig-veda X, 9, 4-8, &c.

which must also have been washed and decorated, and he must utter the Rudras¹, the Purushasûkta, and the Kûshmândits².

13. Then let him pronounce in the bull's right ear the Mantra, 'The father of calves;'

14. And the following (Mantras):

15. 'Holy law is a bull and is declared to have four feet¹: him I choose for the object of my worship; may he protect me wholly.

16. 'This young (bull) I give you as husband (O ye calves), roam about sportingly with him for your lover. May we not be deficient in progeny, O king Soma, and may we live long, and may we not be oppressed by our enemies.'

17. He must drive away the bull together with the calves in a north-eastern direction and give a pair of garments, gold, and a vessel made of white copper to the officiating priest.

18. The blacksmith shall receive as wages as much as he claims, and food prepared with a great deal of butter, and (three) Brâhmanas shall be fed.

19. Any pool from which the bull drinks after

12. ¹ Taitt. Samh. IV, 5, 1-11. — ² See LVI, 7.

13. Nand. states expressly that this Mantra is from the Kâṭhaka. It is found Kâṭh. XIII, 9; Taitt. Samh. III, 3, 9, 2; Kâṭh. Grîhya-sûtra XLVII.

15. ¹ This term refers perhaps to the 'four feet of a judicial proceeding.' See Nârada I, 11; 2, 9.

16. Taitt. Samh. III, 3, 9, 1, &c. The second half of this Mantra is found in the Kâṭhaka Grîhya-sûtra only.

18. The clause regarding the 'food,' which has been rendered in accordance with Nand.'s Commentary, might also be construed with 'fed,' which would bring the whole into accordance with the precepts of the Kâṭhaka Grîhya-sûtra and of the two other Grîhya-sûtras.

having been set at liberty, that entire pool will refresh the manes of him who has set the bull at liberty.

20. The earth which is anywhere dug up by the bull exulting in his strength, is converted into delicious food and drink to satisfy the manes.

LXXXVII.

1. Now on the day of full moon in the month Vaisâkha he must spread out upon a woollen blanket the skin of a black antelope (together with the horns and hoofs), after having adorned the former with gold and the latter with silver, and after having ornamented the tail with a string of pearls.

2. After that, he must cover (that part of the blanket which is not covered by the skin) with sesamum.

3. And he must adorn the navel with gold.

4. He must cover (the skin) with a couple of new garments.

5. He must place all sorts of perfumes and jewels upon it.

LXXXVII. 1. The particle atha, 'now,' indicates the beginning of a new section, treating of gifts. It comprises Chapters LXXXVII-XCIII. (Nand.) The commentator infers from a corresponding passage of the Matsya-purâna, that the following further rules are implied in this Sûtra. The ceremony may also take place on the full moon days in the months Mâgha, Kârttika, and Âshâdha, on the twelfth day after the summer solstice, and during an eclipse of the sun or moon. The silver on the hoofs must weigh five Palas, and the gold on the horns ten Suvarnas (or two Palas and a half). The place must be pure, smeared with cow-dung, and covered with Kusa grass.

3. 'The Skânda-purâna states that the eyes must be adorned with jewels.' (Nand.)

5. 'And garlands of flowers and other objects must be placed upon it, as ka indicates.' (Nand.)

6. After having placed on its four sides (beginning with the eastern side) four metallic dishes (of copper, silver, white copper, and gold respectively) filled with milk, sour milk, honey, and clarified butter respectively, (and having poured out water) he must give (the skin, seizing it by the tail), to a Brâhmaṇa, who is an Agnihotrin¹, decked with ornaments, and clad in two garments.

7. There are (the following) stanzas in regard to this subject :

8. 'He who bestows (upon a pious Brâhmaṇa) the skin of a black antelope, together with the hoofs and horns, after having covered it with seeds of sesamum and garments, and adorned it with all sorts of jewels :

9. 'That man doubtless obtains the same reward as if he were to bestow the whole earth on him, bordered as it is on every side (by the oceans), together with the oceans and caverns, and with rocks, groves, and forests.

10. 'He who places sesamum, gold, honey, and butter on the skin of a black antelope and gives the whole to a Brâhmaṇa, annihilates the consequences of all his own evil actions.'

LXXXVIII.

1. A cow in the act of bringing forth a young one is (comparable to) the earth.

2. By bestowing such a cow upon a Brâhmaṇa, after having decked her with ornaments, he obtains the same reward as if he were to bestow the earth (upon him).

6. ¹ See LXVIII, 6, note.

LXXXVIII. 1. Y. I, 207. — 4. Y. I, 206.

3. There is a stanza in regard to this subject :
4. 'One who full of faith and with intense application of mind gives away a pregnant cow, enters heaven for as many Yugas (or ages of the world) as that cow and her calf together have hairs on their bodies.'

LXXXIX.

1. The month Kârttika is sacred to the god Agni.
2. Agni is the first of all gods.
3. Therefore is that man purified from every sin committed during the past year, who persists during the month Kârttika in bathing (daily) out of the village, in muttering the Gâyatrî, and in taking a single meal each day, consisting of food fit for oblations.
4. He who bathes (at the prescribed time, early in the morning) constantly, during the whole month Kârttika, who keeps his organs of sense under control, who mutters (the Gâyatrî), who eats food fit for oblations only, and who governs his passions, is purified from every sin.

XC.

1. If on the fifteenth of the bright half of the month Mârgaśr̥ṣha the moon enters the lunar asterism Mṛ̥ḡasiras, he must give at the time when the moon rises (a vessel with) a golden centre, containing a Prastha of ground salt, to a Brâhmana.
2. By (performing) this rite he obtains beauty and good fortune in a future birth.

XC. 3, 5. Âpast. II, 8, 18, 19; II, 8, 19, 1. — 7. M. IV, 232.

1. One Prastha = sixteen Palas. (Nand.)

3. If on the full moon day of the month Pausha the moon enters the lunar asterism Pushya, he must rub over his body with a dough prepared with white mustard-seeds, anoint himself with a kumbha¹ of clarified butter made of cow-milk, wash himself with (water and with) all sorts of medicinal herbs, all sorts of perfumes, and all sorts of seeds, wash (an image of) Bhagavat Vāsudeva (Vishnu) with clarified butter, and worship him with perfumes, flowers, incense, with a lamp, with eatables, and the like², offer an oblation in the fire with Mantras tending to the praise of Vishnu (such as Rig-veda I, 22, 17, and others), Mantras tending to the praise of Indra (such as Rig-veda VI, 47, 11, and others), Mantras tending to the praise of Bṛihaspati (such as Rig-veda II, 23, 15, and others, and with one Mantra tending to the praise of Agni Svishṭakṛit), and cause three Brāhmaṇas to pronounce the benediction, after having bestowed clarified butter and gold upon them³.

4. To the priest (who has performed the burnt-oblation for him) he must give a pair of garments.

5. By (performing) this rite he obtains prosperity (pushyate)¹.

6. If on the full moon day in the month Māgha the moon enters the lunar asterism Maghâ and he performs a Śrâddha with sesamum on that day, he is purified.

3. ¹ See V, 12, note. — ² 'And the like' means 'betel.' (Nand.) —

³ The rite described in this Sūtra appears to be identical with the ceremony called Yugâdya, 'the beginning of the present age of the world,' in later works. See Wilson, On the Religious Festivals of the Hindus, in the Royal Asiatic Society's Journal, IX, 89.

5. ¹ This is a play upon words. See LXXVIII, 8, note, and below, Sūtra 9; XCII, 14, &c.

7. If on the full moon day in the month Phālguna the moon enters the lunar asterism Uttaraphālgunī, and he gives on that day a bedstead, quite complete and covered with good rugs, to a Brāhmaṇa, he obtains an amiable, handsome, and wealthy wife.

8. A woman who does the same, (obtains) a husband (possessing those qualities).

9. If on the full moon day of the month Kaitra the moon enters the lunar asterism Kītrā, and he gives a variegated (kitra) garment (to a Brāhmaṇa) on that day, he obtains good fortune.

10. If on the full moon day of the month Vaisākha the moon enters the lunar asterism Visākhā, and he feeds on that day seven Brāhmaṇas with sesamum mixed with honey, in order to please king Dharma, he is purified from his sins.

11. If on the full moon day of the month Gyaishtha the moon enters the lunar asterism Gyeshthā and he gives on that day an umbrella and a pair of shoes (to a Brāhmaṇa), he becomes possessed of many cows.

12. If on the full moon day of the month Āshādha the moon is seen in conjunction with the lunar asterism Uttarāshādhā and he gives food and drink (to a Brāhmaṇa) on that day, he renders (the satisfaction effected by) them imperishable.

13. If on the full moon day of the month Srāvana the moon is seen in conjunction with the lunar asterism Sravana and he gives a milch cow covered with two garments, together with food (to a Brāhmaṇa), he attains heaven.

14. If on the full moon day of the month Praush-

7. Susamskrīta, 'quite complete,' means 'provided with curtains and the like.' (Nand.)

thapada (or Bhâdrapada) the moon is seen in conjunction with the lunar asterism Uttarapros th |apadâ (or Uttarabhâdrapadâ), and he gives a cow (to a Brâhmana) on that day, he is cleansed from every sin.

15. If on the full moon day of the month Âsvayuga (or Âsvina) the moon is seen in conjunction with the lunar asterism Âsvinî, and he gives a vessel filled with clarified butter, and gold (to a Brâhmana) on that day, he obtains an excellent digestive faculty.

16. If on the full moon day of the month Kârttika the moon enters the lunar asterism Kritikâ, and he bestows on that day, at the time of moonrise, upon a Brâhmana, a white bull, or one of a different colour, together with all sorts of grains, all sorts of jewels, and all sorts of perfumes, after having lighted lamps on both sides (of the bull), he will meet with no danger on perilous roads.

17. If on the third day of the bright half of the month Vaisâkha he worships, after having fasted, Vâsudeva (Vishnu) with (one thousand and eight, or one hundred) unbroken grains (of barley, while muttering the Mantra, *Om namo bhagavate vâsudevâya*¹), and offers up the same in fire, and gives them (to a Brâhmana), he is purified from every sin.

18. And whatever he gives on that day becomes imperishable.

19. If on the twelfth day of the dark half following on the full moon day of the month Pausha, he washes himself, after having kept a fast, with sesamum-seeds, gives water mixed with sesamum

17. ¹ See XLIX, 1, note.

19. This is evidently the ceremony which is called Shatladâna

(to the manes), worships Vâsudeva with sesamum, offers up (part of) the same in fire, gives to Brâhmanas of it, and eats (the remainder himself) he is purified from his sins.

20. (If) on the twelfth day of the dark half following on the full moon day of the month Mâgha, (the moon enters Sravana), he must keep a fast till the moon has entered that asterism, and place two lamps with two large wicks near (an image of) Vâsudeva ;

21. Placing on the right hand (of the image of Vâsudeva, and kindling, a lamp) containing one hundred and eight Palas of clarified butter, with an entire piece of cloth (together with the fringes) dyed with saffron (as wick) in it ;

22. (And placing) on its left, (and kindling, a lamp) containing one hundred and eight Palas of sesamum oil, with an entire piece of white cloth (as wick) in it.

23. He who has performed this rite obtains exquisite happiness, in whatever kingdom, in whatever province, and in whatever race he may be born again.

24. He who gives daily during the whole month Âsvina clarified butter to Brâhmanas, in order to please the two Asvins, obtains beauty.

25. He who feeds daily during that month (three) Brâhmanas with (milk and other) bovine productions, obtains a kingdom.

26. He who feeds on the Revatî day of every month (three) Brâhmanas with rice boiled in milk in later works ; see Wilson loc. cit. The name of the latter is derived from the fact that it consists, precisely like the ceremony described in the present Sûtra, of six acts, in all of which Tila, i. e. sesamum-seeds, forms an essential ingredient.

with sugar and mixed with honey and clarified butter, in order to please (the goddess) Revati, obtains beauty.

27. He who daily throughout the month Mâgha offers sesamum-seeds in fire and feeds (three) Brâhmanas with sour rice-gruel mixed with clarified butter, obtains an excellent digestive power.

28. He who bathes in a river and worships king Dharma on the fourteenth of both halves of every month, is purified from every sin.

29. One desirous of obtaining the manifold advantages attending an eclipse of the sun or moon must constantly bathe in the mornings during the two months Mâgha and Phâlguna.

XCI.

1. The digger of a well has (the consequences of) the half of his evil acts taken from him as soon as the water comes forth from it.

2. A digger of pools is for ever freed from thirst, and attains the world of Varuṇa.

3. A giver of water shall never suffer from thirst (in heaven, for a hundred Yugas or ages of the world).

4. He who plants trees will have those trees for his sons in a future existence.

5. A giver of trees gladdens the gods by (offering up) their blossoms to them.

6. (He gladdens) his guests by (giving) their fruits to them;

7. (He gladdens) travellers with their shade;

8. (He gladdens) the manes with the water (trickling down from their leaves) when it rains.

9. A maker of dikes attains heaven.

10. A builder of temples enters the dwelling-place of that deity to whom he has erected a temple.

11. He who causes (a temple erected by another) to be whitewashed acquires brilliant fame.

12. He who causes (such a temple) to be painted with (a different) colour (such as blue, yellow, and others) attains the world of the Gandharvas.

13. By giving flowers he becomes fortunate.

14. By giving ointments he acquires renown.

15. By giving a lamp he obtains an excellent eyesight and exquisite happiness.

16. By giving food he obtains strength.

17. By removing the remains of an offering to a deity he obtains the same reward as for giving a cow.

18. The same reward is also obtained by scouring a temple, by smearing it (with cow-dung and the like), by removing the leavings of the food of a Brâhmana, by washing his feet, and by nursing him when sick.

19. He who consecrates anew a well, or a park, or a pool, or a temple (when they have been soiled) obtains the same reward as he who first made them.

XCII.

1. Protecting (one attacked by robbers, or by tigers, or otherwise in danger) is more meritorious than any (other) gift.

XCII. 1, 2. M. IV, 232; Y. I, 211. — 3. M. IV, 230. — 5. M.

2. By doing so he obtains that place of abode (after death) which he desires himself.

3. By giving land he obtains the same (heavenly reward).

4. By giving land to the extent of a bull's hide only he is purified from every sin.

5. By giving a cow he attains heaven.

6. A giver of ten milch cows (obtains) the mansion of cows (after death).

7. A giver of a hundred milch cows enters the mansions of Brahman (after death).

8. He who gives (a milch cow) with gilt horns, with hoofs covered with silver, with a tail wound with a string of pearls, with a milk-pail of white copper, and with a cover of cloth, shall reside in heaven for as many years as the cow has hairs on her body ;

9. Particularly, if it is a brown cow.

10. He who has given a tamed bull is (equal in virtue to) a giver of ten milch cows.

IV, 231; Y. I, 208. — 8, 9. Y. I, 204, 205. — 10. Y. I, 210. — 10-12. M. IV, 231. — 12, 13. Y. I, 210. — 13, 14. M. IV, 230. — 19, 20. M. IV, 232; Y. I, 211. — 21-23. M. IV, 229, 232. — 21. Y. I, 210. — 27. M. IV, 232; Y. I, 211. — 28-32. Y. I, 211. — 31. M. IV, 230.

4. Nand. defines 'a bull's hide' as a measure of surface 300 Hastas (see X, 2, note) long by ten Hastas broad. See, however, V, 183.

8. According to a Smṛiti quoted by Nand., the gold upon the horns of the cow shall weigh ten Suvarṇas, the silver on her hoofs ten Palas, the white copper of which the milk-pail is made fifty Palas, and she shall have copper on her back, which must also weigh fifty Palas.

9. 'The meaning is, that a brown cow sends even his ancestors as far as the seventh degree to heaven, as Yāgñavalkya (I, 205) says.' (Nand.)

11. The giver of a horse attains the mansion of Sûrya (the sun-god).

12. The giver of a garment (attains) the mansion of Kandra (the god of the moon).

13. By giving gold (he attains) the mansion of Agni (the god of fire).

14. By giving silver (rûpya, he obtains) beauty (rûpa).

15. By giving dishes (pâtra) made of (gold or silver or other) metal he renders himself worthy (pâtra) to obtain everything he may desire.

16. By giving clarified butter, honey, or oil (he acquires) freedom from disease;

17. The same by giving (boiled or otherwise dressed) drugs.

18. By giving salt (lavana, he obtains) personal charms (lâvanya).

19. By giving grain (produced in the rainy season, such as Syâmâka grain, he acquires) satiation;

20. The same (effect is obtained) by giving grain (produced in winter or spring, such as wild turmeric or wheat).

21. A giver of food (obtains) all the rewards (enumerated above).

22. By giving grain (of any of the kinds not mentioned before, such as Kulattha or Kodrava grain, he obtains) good fortune.

23. A giver of sesamum (obtains) such offspring as he desires.

24. A giver of fuel (obtains) an excellent digestive power;

25. And he obtains victory in every fight.

26. By giving a seat (he obtains) high rank.

27. By giving a bed (of the kind declared above,

XC, 7, he procures) a wife (possessed of the qualities mentioned above).

28. By giving a pair of shoes (he obtains) a carriage yoked with mules.

29. By giving an umbrella (he attains) heaven.

30. By giving a fan or a chowrie (he obtains) prosperity in travelling.

31. By giving a house (he receives) the post of governor of a town.

32. Whatever a man is most fond of in this world (himself) and what his family like best, all that he must bestow upon a virtuous (Brâhmaṇa), if he wishes it to become imperishable.

XCIII.

1. What is given to another than a Brâhmaṇa produces the same fruit in the world to come.

2. (What is given) to one who calls himself a Brâhmaṇa (because he was born and initiated as such, but who does not perform his daily duties) produces twice the same fruit.

3. (What is given) to one who has studied the main portions of the Veda produces a thousand times the same fruit.

XCIII. 1-4. M. VII, 85; Gaut. V, 20. — 7. M. IV, 192. — 8. M. IV, 195. — 9-13. M. IV, 196-200.

1. 'The term abrâhmaṇa (one not a Brâhmaṇa) refers to Kshatriyas and the like.' Kullûka on M. VII, 85. Dr. Bühler's rendering of Gautama V, 20 agrees with this interpretation. Nand., on the other hand, refers the term abrâhmaṇa to six kinds of Brâhmaṇas enumerated by Sâtâtapa, who have infringed the rule of their caste by taking their substance from a king, or by selling or buying forbidden articles, or by sacrificing for a multitude of persons, &c. The term 'the same fruit' means that a person shall receive in a future world what he has given in this. (Nand.)

4. (What is given) to one who has mastered the whole Veda, produces infinite fruit.

5. A domestic priest may claim gifts from his own employer (but from no one else).

6. And so may a sister, a daughter and sons-in-law (or other connections claim gifts from their brother, father, &c., but not from a stranger).

7. One who knows his duty must not give even water to a twice-born man who acts like a cat, or to a Brâhmana who acts like a crane, or to one who has not studied the Veda.

8. One who constantly hoists the flag of religion, and who is avaricious, crafty, deceitful, pitiless, and a calumniator of everybody, such a man is said to act like a cat.

9. One who hangs his head, who is bent upon injuring others and upon his own gain, artful, and falsely demure, such a man is said to act like a crane.

10. Those who act like cranes in this world, and those who act like cats, fall into (the hell called) Andhatâmisra¹ on account of their wickedness.

11. If a man has committed an offence and does penance for it, he must not do so under pretext of performing an act of piety, covering his crime under a (fictitious) vow, and imposing on women and Sûdras.

12. A Brâhmana who acts thus, is despised in the next life and in this by those who know the Veda, and the penance performed by him under such false pretence goes to the (demons called) Râkshasas.

10. ¹ See XLIII, 3.

13. One who gains his subsistence by wearing (a lock on the crown of the head or other) distinguishing marks of a caste or religious order, to which he does not belong, takes upon himself the (consequences of the) sins committed by those who have a right to those marks, and enters in a future birth the womb of an animal.

14. He must not give (to a panegyrist) from vain-glory, or from fear, or to a friend (from whom he hopes to obtain benefit), nor (must he bestow gifts), with a view to acquire religious merit, upon dancers or singers : that is a fixed rule.

XCIV.

1. A householder, when he sees his skin has become wrinkled and his hair turned grey, must go to live in a forest.

2. Or (he must do so) when he sees the son of his son.

3. Let him (before going into the forest) entrust the care of his wife to his sons, or let her accompany him.

4. Let him keep the sacred fires in his new abode as before.

5. He must not omit to perform the five sacri-

XCIV. 1, 2. M. VI, 2. — 3, 4. M. VI, 3, 4; Y. III, 45; Âpast. II, 9, 22, 8, 9. — 5. M. VI, 5, 16; Y. III, 46; Gaut. III, 29. — 6. M. VI, 8; Y. III, 48. — 7. M. VI, 26; Y. III, 45; Âpast. II, 9, 21, 19. — 8. M. VI, 6; Âpast. II, 9, 22, 1; Gaut. VI, 34. — 9, 10. M. VI, 6; Y. III, 46, 48. — 9, 11. Gaut. III, 34, 35. — 11. M. VI, 18; Y. III, 47. — 12. M. VI, 15; Y. III, 47; Âpast. II, 9, 22, 24. — 13. M. VI, 28; Y. III, 55. 'The duties of a householder having been declared, he now goes on to expound the duties of an hermit.' (Nand.)

5. See LIX, 20 seq.

fices, but (he must perform them) with (fruits, herbs, or roots) growing wild.

6. He must not relinquish the private recitation of the Veda.

7. He must preserve his chastity.

8. He must wear a dress made of skins or bark.

9. He must suffer the hairs of his head, of his beard, and of his body, and his nails to grow.

10. He must bathe at morning, noon, and evening.

11. He must either collect provisions, after the manner of the pigeon, for a month, or he must collect them for a year.

12. He who has collected provisions for a year, must throw away what he has collected on the day of full moon in the month Āsvina.

13. Or an hermit may bring food from a village, placing it in a dish made of leaves, or in a single leaf, or in his hand, or in a potsherd, and eat eight mouthfuls of it.

XCV.

1. An hermit must dry up his frame by the practice of austerities.

2. In summer he must expose himself to five fires.

6. The use of the particle ka implies, according to Nand., that the practice of distributing gifts should likewise be continued.

11. The particle vâ here refers, according to Nand., to a third alternative mentioned by Manu (VI, 18), that he should gather provisions sufficient for six months.

XCV. 1. M. VI, 24. — 2-4. M. VI, 23; Y. III, 52. — 5, 6. M. VI, 19; Y. III, 50. — 7-11. M. VI, 5, 21; Y. III, 46; Āpast. II, 9, 22, 2; Gaut. III, 26. — 12, 13. M. VI, 20; Y. III, 50. — 14, 15. M. VI, 17; Y. III, 49. — 16, 17. M. XI, 235, 239.

3. During the season of the rains he must sleep in the open air.

4. In winter he must wear wet clothes.

5. He must eat at night.

6. He may eat after having fasted entirely for one day, or for two days, or for three days.

7. He may eat flowers. 8. He may eat fruits.

9. He may eat vegetables.

10. He may eat leaves. 11. He may eat roots.

12. Or he may eat boiled barley once at the close of a half-month.

13. Or he may eat according to the rules of the Kāndrāyana.

14. He shall break his food with stones.

15. Or he shall use his teeth as a pestle.

16. This whole world of deities and of men has devotion for its root, devotion for its middle, devotion for its end, and is supported by devotion.

17. What is hard to follow¹, hard to reach, remote, or hard to do, all that may be accomplished by devotion; since there is nothing that may not be effected by devotion.

6. Nand. considers the particle vâ to refer to the precept of Yâgñavalkya (III, 50), that the fast may also extend over a half-month or an entire month.

13. The particle vâ, according to Nand., implies that he may also perform Krikkhras, as ordained by Yâgñavalkya (III, 50). Regarding the Kāndrāyana, see XLVII.

17. ¹*Duskara* has been translated according to the usual acceptation of this term. Nand. interprets it by 'hard to understand.' This proverb is also found Subhâshitârṇava 109, Vṛiddhatânakya's Proverbs XVII, 3. See Böhlingk, Ind. Sprüche, 5265.

XCVI.

1. After having passed through the first three orders and annihilated passion, he must offer an oblation to Pragâpati, in which he bestows all his wealth (upon priests) as fee for the performance of the sacrifice, and enter the order of ascetics.

2. Having repositied the fires in his own mind, he must enter the village, in order to collect alms, (but never for any other purpose).

3. He must beg food at seven houses.

4. If he does not get food (at one house), he must not grieve.

5. He must not beg of another ascetic.

6. When the servants have had their meal, when the dishes have been removed, let him beg food (consisting of the leavings).

7. (He must receive the food) in an earthen vessel, or in a wooden bowl, or in a vessel made of the bottle-gourd.

8. He must cleanse those vessels with water.

9. He must shun food obtained by humble salutation.

XCVI. 1. M. VI, 38; Y. III, 56. — 2. M. VI, 38, 43; Y. III, 56, 58. — 4. M. VI, 57. — 6. M. VI, 56; Y. III, 59; Gaut. III, 15. — 7, 8. M. VI, 54, 53; Y. III, 60. — 9. M. VI, 58. — 11. M. VI, 44. — 12. Gaut. III, 21. — 13. Gaut. III, 18. — 14-17. M. VI, 46. — 18. M. VI, 45. — 19, 20. M. VI, 47. — 23. Y. III, 53; Mahâbhârata I, 4605. — 24. M. VI, 49; Y. III, 201. — 25-42. M. VI, 61-64; Y. III, 63, 64. — 43. Y. III, 72. — 45-50. M. VI, 76, 77. — 51, 54-79. Y. III, 70, 84-90. — 80-88. Y. III, 100-104. — 89, 91. Y. III, 93-95. — 92. Y. III, 96-99. — 93-95. Y. III, 91, 92. — 96. Y. III, 179. — 97. M. XII, 12; Y. III, 178. — 97, 98. Bhagavad-gîtâ XIII, 1, 2. This chapter treats of ascetics. (Nand.)

4. 'This implies that he must not rejoice if he does get it, as Manu (VI, 57) says.' (Nand.)

10. He must live in an empty house.
11. Or (he must) live at the root of a tree.
12. He must not stay for more than one night in one village (except during the rainy season).
13. His only dress must be a small piece of cloth worn over the privities.
14. He must set down his feet purified by looking down.
15. He must drink water purified (by straining it) with a cloth.
16. He must utter speeches purified by truth.
17. He must perform acts purified by his mind.
18. He must neither wish for death nor for (a long) life.
19. He must bear abuse patiently.
20. He must treat no one with contempt.
21. He must not pronounce a benediction.
22. He must not salute any one reverentially.

10. 'Empty' means 'inhabited by no one else,' and implies that the house in question should be situated in a dark place, difficult of access. (Nand.)

11. 'The article vâ implies that he must live there alone.' (Nand.)

14, 15. Nand. assigns as the reason of both these rules, 'lest he should not kill some insect.' Kullôka (on M. VI, 46) gives the same reason for the second rule, but the looking down, according to him, is ordained in order that he may not accidentally tread upon a hair or other impure substance.

17. The sense of this Sûtra is, that in doubtful cases he must act as his mind prompts him to do. (Nand.)

21. 'The meaning is, that he must not utter a benediction when he has been reverentially saluted by any one. He must confine himself to saying, "O Nârâyana." Others explain, that he must not utter a benediction in begging food.' (Nand.)

22. 'The sense is, that he must not salute any one reverentially who has reverentially saluted him, nor return his greeting other-

23. Should one man chop his one arm with an axe, and another sprinkle his other arm with sandal, he must neither curse the one in his mind, nor bless the other.

24. He must constantly be intent upon stopping his breath, upon retention of the image formed in his mind, and upon meditation.

25. He must reflect upon the transitoriness of the passage through mundane existence ;

26. And upon the impure nature of the body ;

27. And upon the destruction of beauty by old age ;

28. And upon the pain arising from diseases bodily, mental, or due to an excess (of the bile, &c.)

29. And upon (the pain arising from) the (five) naturally inherent (affections).

30. On his having to dwell in an embryo, covered with everlasting darkness ;

wise than by saying, "O Nârâyana." Others explain, that he must not make an obeisance in begging food.' (Nand.)

24. Nand. quotes a passage of the Yogasâstra, which states that one Dhâraṇâ=three Prânâyâmas (stoppings or regulations of the breath). A passage of the Gârûḍa-purâṇa (quoted in the Petersburg Dictionary) states that one Dhâraṇâ=sixteen Prânâyâmas. I have taken the term dhâraṇâ in its ordinary acceptation of 'retention of an idea' (cf. Wilson, Vishṇu-purâṇa V, 237) with regard to an analogous passage of Yâgyavalkya (III, 201), which is also quoted by Nand.

28. According to Nand., the particle ka is used to include other diseases, love, anxiety or wrath, caused by enemies, and other mental pangs.

29. They are, ignorance, egotism, love, wrath, and dread of temporal suffering (Nand., according to Patañjali). The particle ka, according to Nand., is used in order to imply meditation upon the thousand births which man has to pass through, as stated by Yâgyavalkya (III, 64).

31. And on (his having to dwell) between urine and fæces ;

32. On his having to suffer, (as an embryo,) pain from the cold and hot (food and drink, which his mother happens to have taken) ;

33. On the dreadful pain which he has to suffer, at the time of his birth, while the embryo is coming forth from the narrowness of the womb ;

34. On his ignorance and his dependency upon his (parents and other) Gurus in childhood ;

35. On the manifold anxieties arising from the study of the Veda (and from the other obligations of a student) ;

36. And (on the anxieties arising) in youth from not obtaining the objects of pleasure, and upon the abode in hell (ordained as punishment) for enjoying them, after they have been obtained unlawfully ;

37. On the union with those whom we hate, and the separation from those whom we love ;

38. On the fearful agonies of hell ;

39. And (on the agonies) that have to be suffered in the passage of the soul through the bodies of animals (and of plants).

40. (And let him reflect thus that) there is no pleasure to be met with in this never-ceasing passage of the soul through mundane existence ;

41. (And that) even what is called pleasure, on account of the absence of pain, is of a transient nature ;

42. (And that) he who is unable to enjoy such pleasures (from sickness or some such cause), or who is unable to procure them (from poverty), suffers severe pangs.

43. He must recognise this human frame to consist of seven elements.

44. Those elements are, adeps, blood, flesh, serum of flesh, bone, marrow, and semen.

45. It is covered with skin.

46. And it has a nasty smell.

47. It is the receptacle of (the above-named) impure substances (adeps and the rest).

48. Though surrounded by a hundred pleasures, it is subject to change.

49. Though carefully supported (by elixirs and the like), it is subject to destruction.

50. It is the stay of carnal desire, wrath, greed, folly, pride, and selfishness.

51. It consists of earth, water, fire, air, and ether.

52. It is provided with bone, tubular vessels (carrying bile and phlegm through the body), tubes (conducting the vital airs), and sinews.

53. It is endowed with the quality of ragas (passion).

54. It is covered with six skins.

55. It is kept together by three hundred and sixty bones.

56. They are distributed (as follows):

57. The teeth together with their receptacles are sixty-four in number.

46. The particle ka, according to Nand., refers to the fact that the human body is defiled by the touch of impure objects.

48. 'The meaning is that, though food and drink and other sensual enjoyments abound, they may cause pain as well as pleasure by producing phlegm, &c.' (Nand.)

51. 'Earth,' i. e. the flesh and bone, &c.; 'water,' i. e. the blood; 'fire,' i. e. the digestive faculty, the eyesight, &c.; 'air,' i. e. the five vital airs; 'ether,' i. e. the space enclosed by the airs, in the mouth, in the belly, &c. (Nand.)

-
58. There are twenty nails.
 59. There are as many bones to the hands and feet (one at the root of each finger and toe).
 60. There are sixty joints to the fingers and toes.
 61. There are two (bones) to the two heels.
 62. There are four to the ancles.
 63. There are four to the elbows.
 64. There are two to the shanks.
 65. There are two to the knees and two to the cheeks.
 66. (There are two) to the thighs and (two) to the shoulders.
 67. (There are two) to the lower part of the temples, (two) to the palate, and (two) to the hips.
 68. There is one bone to the organs of generation.
 69. The backbone consists of forty-five (bones).
 70. The neck consists of fifteen (bones).
 71. The collar-bone consists of one (bone on each side).
 72. The jaw likewise.
 73. There are two (bones) at its root.
 74. There are two (bones) to the forehead, (two) to the eyes, and (two) to the cheeks.
 75. The nose has one bone, the nose-bone.
 76. The ribs together with the joints called 'arbuda,' and with the joints called 'sthânaka,' consist of seventy-two (bones).
 77. The breast contains seventeen bones.
-

76. 'There are thirteen ribs to each flank, which makes in all twenty-six ribs. There are twenty joints to them in the breast, called "arbuda," and twenty-six joints in the back, called "sthânaka," which makes a total of seventy-two bones.' (Nand.)

78. There are two temporal bones.
79. The head has four skull-bones. Thus (the bones have been enumerated).
80. There are in this human frame seven hundred tubular vessels (carrying bile and phlegm through the body, or arteries).
81. Of sinews, there are nine hundred.
82. Of tubes (conducting the vital airs, or nerves), there are two hundred.
83. Of muscles, there are five hundred.
84. Of tubular vessels (or arteries), the branches of the smaller tubular vessels, there are twenty-nine Lakshas (two millions nine hundred thousand) and nine hundred and fifty-six.'
85. Of hair-holes, of the hair of the beard and of the head, there are three hundred thousand.
86. Of sensitive parts of the body, there are one hundred and seven.
87. Of joints, there are two hundred.
88. Of (atoms of) hairs (of the body), there are fifty-four Kotis (or five hundred and forty millions) and sixty-seven Lakshas (making in all five hundred and forty-six millions and seven hundred thousand).
89. The navel, the principle of vital action (which dwells in the heart), the anus, semen, blood, the temples, the head, the throat, and the heart are the seats of the vital airs.
90. The two arms, the two legs, the belly, and the head are the six limbs.
91. Adeps, marrow, the left lung, the navel, the right lung, the liver, the spleen, the small cavity of the heart, the kidneys, the bladder, the rectum, the stomach, the heart, the large cavity (intestine), the anus, the belly, and the two bowels in it (are the inner parts of the body).

92. The pupils of the eye, the eyelashes¹, the outer parts of the ears, the ears themselves, the tragus of each ear, the cheeks, the eyebrows, the temples, the gums, the lips, the cavities of the loins, the two groins, the scrotum, the two kidneys and breasts of females, which are composed of phlegm, the uvula, the hindparts, the arms, the shanks, the thighs, the fleshy parts of the shanks and thighs, the palate, the two bones (or muscles) at the upper end of the bladder, the chin, the soft palate, and² the nape of the neck: these are the 'places' (of vital energy) in the body.

93. Sound, tangibility, form or colour, savour, and odour are the (five) objects of sense.

94. Nose, eye, skin, tongue, and ear are the (five) organs of perception.

95. Hands, feet, anus, parts of generation, and tongue are the (five) organs of action.

96. Mind, intellect, the individual Self, and the indiscrete¹ are 'that which exceeds the senses.'

97. This human frame, O Earth, is called 'field.' He who knows (how to enter and how to leave) it is denominated, by those conversant with the

92. ¹ Others interpret akshikûṭe, 'the eyelashes,' by 'the joints between the eyes and the nose.' (Nand.) See also Böhlingk's new Dictionary. — ² The use of the particle ka implies, according to Nand., that the feet, hands, and other limbs mentioned in an analogous passage of Yâgñavalkya (III, 99) have also to be included in this enumeration.

96. ¹ Nand. interprets avyaktam, 'the indiscrete,' by pradhânam, 'the chief one.' Both terms are in the Sânkhya system of philosophy synonyms of prakṛiti, 'that which evolves or produces everything else.'

subject, 'the knower of the field' (i.e. Self or Soul).

98. Know me, O illustrious one, to be the Self of all fields (whether born from the womb, or arisen from an egg, or from sweat, or from a germ or shoot). Those striving after final emancipation must constantly seek to understand the 'field' and to obtain a knowledge of the knower of the field.

XCVII.

1. Sitting with the feet stretched out and crossed so as to touch the thighs, with the right hand (stretched out and) resting upon the left, with the tongue fixed in the palate, and without bringing the one row of teeth in contact with the other, with the eyes directed to the tip of the nose, and without glancing at any of the (four) quarters of the sky, free from fear, and with composure, let him meditate upon (Purusha), who is separate from the twenty-four entities,

XCVII. 1. Y. III, 198-200. — 9. Y. III, 111, 201. This chapter treats of the means for obtaining that knowledge of the Âtman or Self, which has been declared at the end of the last chapter to be the road to final emancipation. (Nand.)

1. 'The twenty-four (it should be twenty-five) entities are stated in the Sâṅkhya to consist of the root-principle (mūlaprakṛiti), the seven productions evolved from it (vikṛitayaḥ), the sixteen productions evolved from these, and Purusha (the soul), who is neither producer nor produced. (1) The "root-principle" is composed of the three qualities in equipoise: sattva, ragas, and tamas (the most accurate rendering of these terms is perhaps that proposed by Elliot, "pure unimpassioned virtue," "passion," and "depravity inclining to evil." See Fitz-Edward Hall, Preface to Sâṅkhyapravāṇabhāṣya, p. 44). (2) The "great entity" (Mahat) is the cause of apprehension. (3) The "self-consciousness" (ahamkāra) is the cause of refer-

- ✓ 2. He who is eternal, beyond the cognisance of the senses, destitute of qualities, not concerned with sound, tangibility, form, savour, or odour, knowing everything, of immense size,
- ✓ 3. He who pervades everything, and who is devoid of form,
4. Whose hands and feet are everywhere, whose eyes, head, and face are everywhere, and who is able to apprehend everything with all the senses.
5. Thus let him meditate.
6. If he remains absorbed in such meditation for a year, he obtains the accomplishment of Yoga (concentration of the thought and union with the Supreme).
7. If he is unable to fix his mind upon the being ring all objects to self. (4-8) The "subtile elementary particles" (tan-mâtras) are identical with sound, tangibility, form, taste, and odour. (9-19) The eleven senses (i. e. the organs of perception and action enumerated in CXVI, 94, 95, and manas, "the mind"), and (20-24) the five "grosser elements" (ether, air, fire, water, and earth) are productions (from the former entities). Purusha, who is neither producer nor produced, is the twenty-fifth entity.' (Nand.)

2, 3. According to Nand., all the properties of Purusha mentioned in this Sûtra are such as distinguish him from the rest of the entities, the first two distinguishing him from 'self-consciousness' (ahamkâra), the voidness of quality distinguishing him from the 'root-principle' (mûlaprakṛiti), which is composed of three qualities, &c.

4. The properties of Pûrusha here mentioned are faculties only, so that there is no contradiction to the 'voidness of form' and the other properties enumerated in the preceding Sûtras. (Nand.)

6. The external signs of the accomplishment of Yoga, as stated by Yâgñavalkya (III, 202 seq.), are, the faculty of entering another body and of creating anything at will, and other miraculous powers and qualities. (Nand.)

destitute of form¹, he must meditate successively on earth, water, fire, air, ether, mind, intellect, self², the indiscrete³, and Purusha⁴: having fully apprehended one, he must dismiss it from his thoughts and fix his mind upon the next one in order.

8. In this way let him arrive at meditation upon Purusha.

9. If unable to follow this method also, he must meditate on Purusha¹ shining like a lamp in his heart, as in a lotus turned upside down.

10. If he cannot do that either, he must meditate upon Bhagavat Vāsudeva (Vishnu), who is adorned with a diadem, with ear-rings, and with bracelets, who has the (mystic mark) Śrīvatsa and a garland of wood-flowers on his breast, whose aspect is pleasing, who has four arms, who holds the shell, the discus, the mace, and the lotus-flower, and whose feet are supported (and worshipped) by the earth.

11. Whatever he meditates upon, that is obtained by a man (in a future existence): such is the mysterious power of meditation.

12. Therefore must he dismiss everything perish-

7. ¹The term nirākāra, 'the being destitute of form,' evidently refers to Purusha here (cf. Sūtra 3), though Nand. interprets it as an epithet of 'Brahman.' — ²'Intellect' (buddhi) and 'self' (âtman), according to Nand., mean 'the great entity' (mahat) and 'self-consciousness' (ahamkāra), cf. note on Sūtra 1. — ³'The indiscrete' (avyaktam) means 'the chief one' (pradhānam), i. e. the Sāṅkhya 'root-principle' (see XCVI, 96). — ⁴Nand. takes Purusha in this Sūtra and in 13. 15 to mean 'the twenty-sixth entity;' but it appears clearly from Sūtra 1, as from 16 also, that the Vishnu-sūtra, like the Sāṅkhya system, assumes twenty-five entities only, not twenty-six, like Yama, upon whose authority Nand.'s statement is based.

9. ¹Nand. interprets the term Purusha here by âtman, 'self.'

able from his thoughts and meditate upon what is imperishable only.

13. There is nothing imperishable except Purusha.

14. Having become united with him (through constant meditation), he obtains final liberation.

15. Because the great lord pervades the whole universe (pura), as he is lying there (sete), therefore is he denominated Puru-sha by those who reflect upon the real nature (of the Supreme Spirit).

16. In the first part and the latter part of the night must a man bent on contemplation constantly and with fixed attention meditate upon Purusha Vishnu, who is destitute of (the three) qualities (sattva, ragas, and tamas¹) and the twenty-fifth entity.

17. He (or it) is composed of the entities, beyond the cognisance of the senses, distinct from all the (other) entities, free from attachment (to the producer, &c.), supporting everything, devoid of qualities and yet enjoying (or witnessing the effect of) qualities.

18. It exists without and within created beings (as being enjoyed and as enjoyer), and in the shape both of immovable things (such as trees or stones) and of movable things (such as water or fire); it is undistinguishable on account of its subtlety; it is out of reach (imperceptible), and yet is found in the heart.

16. ¹ See Sûtra 1, note.

17. Thus according to the reading asaktam, which is mentioned and explained as a var. lect. by Nand. He himself reads asaktam, 'independent of Sakti, power, i. e. the producer, the power of creation (prakṛti), or illusion (mâyâ).'
Mâyâ and prakṛti are occasionally used as synonymous terms in the Sāṅkhya.

19. It is not distinct from creation, and yet distinct from it in outward appearance; it annihilates and produces by turns (the world), which consists of everything that has been, that will be, and that is.

20. It is termed the light of the sidereal bodies and the enemy of darkness (ignorance), it is knowledge, it should be known, it may be understood (by meditation), it dwells in every man's heart.

21. Thus the 'field,' knowledge (or meditation), and what should be known¹ have been concisely declared; that faithful adherent of mine who makes himself acquainted therewith, becomes united to me in spirit.

XCVIII.

1. When Vishṇu had finished his speech¹, the goddess of the earth inclined her knees and her head before him and said:

2. 'O Bhagavat! Four (out of the five) grosser elements¹ are receiving their support from thee, and are constantly about thee: the ether, in the form of the shell; the air, in the form of the discus; the fire, in the form of the mace; and the water, in the form of the lotus. Now I also desire to attend upon thee, in my own shape, as the ground which Bhagavat's feet tread upon.'

21. ¹ The 'field' has been discussed in XCVI, 43-97, 'knowledge' in XCVII, 1, and 'what should be known' in XCVII, 2-20. (Nand.)

XCVIII. 1. ¹ Vishṇu's speech is contained in Chapters II-XCVII. (Nand.)

2. ¹ The fifth grosser element is the earth. See XCVII, 1, note.

3. Having been addressed thus by the goddess of the earth, Bhagavat answered, 'So be it.'

4. And the goddess of the earth, her desire having been gratified, did as she had said.

5. And she praised the god of the gods (as follows):

6. 'Om. Adoration be to thee.

7. 'Thou art the god of the gods.

8. 'Thou art Vāsudeva.

9. 'Thou art the creator.

10. 'Thou art the god (who creates, preserves, and destroys) at will.

11. 'Thou art the gratifier of human desires.

12. 'Thou art the guardian of the earth.

13. 'There is neither beginning, nor middle, nor end in thee.

14. 'Thou art the lord (protector) of creatures.

15. 'Thou art the strong lord of creatures.

16. 'Thou art the exalted lord of creatures.

17. 'Thou art the lord of strength.

18. 'Thou art the lord of holy speech.

19. 'Thou art the lord (creator and preserver) of the world.

20. 'Thou art the lord of heaven.

21. 'Thou art the lord of woods (who makes the trees grow).

10. 'Or Kāmadeva means the god (or brilliant one) who is sought by those striving for religious merit, gain, love, or final liberation.' (Nand.) The same interpretation is given by Saṅkara in his Commentary on the Vishṇu-sahasranāma. The ordinary meaning of Kāmadeva is 'the god of love.'

15, 16. Nand. renders the terms supragāpati and mahāpragāpati by 'the protector of those who have a splendid progeny (such as Kasyapa)' and 'the lord of him who has a large progeny (Brahman).'

22. 'Thou art the lord (producer) of (mother's) milk.
23. 'Thou art the lord of the earth (and causest it to yield its produce)
24. 'Thou art the lord of the waters.
25. 'Thou art the lord of the (eight) quarters of the sky.
26. 'Thou art the lord of (the principle) Mahat.
27. 'Thou art the lord of the wind.
28. 'Thou art the lord of happiness.
29. 'Thou art Brahman personified.
30. 'Thou art dear to Brâhmaṇas.
31. 'Thou pervadest everything.
32. 'Thou surpassest all conception.
33. 'Thou art attainable by knowledge (meditation).
34. 'Thou art invoked at many (offerings).
35. 'Thou art praised with many (hymns of the Veda).
36. 'Thou likest everything sacred.
37. 'Thou art fond of Brahman (the Veda).
38. 'Thou belongest to the (gods called) Brahmakâyas.
39. 'Thy size is immense.
40. 'Thou belongest to the Mahârâgas.

26. See XCVII, 1, note.

28. Lakshmîpati has been translated according to Nand.'s interpretation. It usually denotes the husband of Lakshmî.

30. Or 'Brâhmaṇas are dear to thee.' Both explanations of the term brâhmaṇapriya are admissible, and mentioned by Nand. and by Saṅkara.

40, 41. Nand. interprets the two terms mahârâgika and taturmahârâgika by 'he whose series of transmigrations is immense,' and 'he whose immense series of transmigrations is fourfold,' and

41. 'Thou belongest to the four Mahârâgas.
42. 'Thou art brilliant.
43. 'Thou art most brilliant.
44. 'Thou art the seven (parts of a Sâman, or the seven divisions of the universe).
45. 'Thou art most blessed.
46. 'Thou art tone.
47. 'Thou art Tushita (or "satisfied with the honours shown to thee by faithful attendants").
48. 'Thou art Mahâtushita (or "highly satisfied even without being worshipped").
49. 'Thou art the tormentor (destroyer of the world).
50. 'Thou art wholly created.
51. 'Thou art uncreated.
52. 'Thou art obsequious (to thy followers).
53. 'Thou art sacrifice.
54. 'Thou art the (recipient of the) great sacrifice.
55. 'Thou art connected with sacrifices.
56. 'Thou art the fit recipient of offerings.
57. 'Thou art the consummation of offerings.
58. 'Thou art invincible.

he refers the latter epithet to the four parts, of which Purusha is said to consist. He quotes Rig-veda X, 90, 4, where it is said that Purusha ascended to the sky with three of his constituent parts, and that the fourth remained in this world. But both terms cannot be separated etymologically from Mahârâga, the name of a certain class of deities in the Buddhistic system of religion.

44. Thus Nand. Compare I, 56, note.

46. Nand.'s interpretation of the epithet svara, 'tone' (or 'air breathed through the nostrils'), as being a compound of the prefix su and the root ṛi in the sense of 'acquisition, insight,' and meaning 'most wise,' is inadmissible.

54. This epithet, according to Nand., refers to the sacrifice mentioned in a text of the Vâgasan. Samhitâ (XIX, 12), which begins with the words 'The gods prepared a sacrifice.'

59. 'Thou art Vaikuntha.
60. 'Thou art unbounded (both in time and space).
61. 'Thou surpassest (the organs of sense, mind, and intelligence).
62. 'Thou art of old.
63. 'Thou art friendly to the gods.
64. 'Thou art the protector of living beings.
65. 'Thou wearest radiant locks of hair.
66. 'Thou takest thy share of acts of worship.
67. 'Thou takest thy sacrificial cake.
68. 'Thou art lord over everything.
69. 'Thou art the support of all.
70. 'Thy ears are pure.
71. 'Never ceasing homage is paid to thee.
72. 'Thou art blazing fire (or "Thou art shining with clarified butter offered up to thee").
73. 'Thou cuttest (foes) to pieces with thy axe.
74. 'Thou hast a lotus springing from thy navel.
75. 'Thou holdest a lotus (in thy hand).
76. 'Thou wearest a garland of lotus-flowers.
77. 'Thou art the lord of the senses.
78. 'Thou hast one horn.

59. Nand. proposes two interpretations of this epithet: 1. the producer of Mâyâ (the power of illusion); 2. the son of Vikuntâ, the mother of Vishnu in one of his Avatâras. Vaikuntha is also the name of Vishnu's paradise.

70. 'I.e. "thou hearest the sacred revelation." Or suṁśravaḥ = "he whose names are pure." (Nand.) The same interpretation is given by Śaṅkara. See also Mahābhārata XII, 13250.

73. 'The epithet khaṇḍaparasu refers either to Vishnu's slaying the Daityas in the form of Siva, or to his wearing an axe as the slayer of the Kshatriyas in the form of Parasurâma.' (Nand.) The latter interpretation is proposed by Śaṅkara also, and khaṇḍaparasu is a very common epithet of Parasurâma.

78. The one horn is meant, by which Vishnu, in his descent as

79. 'Thou art the great boar.

80. 'Thou art the tormentor (of the Asuras, or of the righteous and the unrighteous).

81. 'Thou art eternal.

82. 'Thou art infinite. 83. Thou art Purusha.

84. Thou art the great (unbounded) Purusha. 85.

Thou art (the sage) Kapila. 86. Thou art the teacher of the Sâṅkhya. 87. Thy powers are everywhere. 88. Thou art virtue. 89. Thou art the giver of virtue. 90. Thy body is virtue (law).

91. Thou art the giver of both virtue and wealth.

92. Desires are gratified by thee. 93. Thou art

Vishṇu. 94. Thou art triumphant everywhere.

95. Thou art capable of bearing (the extremities of heat and cold and any others). 96. Thou art Kṛishṇa. 97. Thou art the lotus-eyed god.

98. Thou art Nârâyana (the son of Nara). 99. Thou art the final aim. 100. Thou art the resort of all beings. 101. Adoration, adoration (be to thee)!

102. The goddess of the earth, after her desire had been gratified, and after she had thus praised a fish, is said to have dragged the ship of Manu behind him. (Nand.)

79. This epithet refers to Vishṇu's boar-incarnation. See I, 1 seq.

85, 86. See Introduction.

101. Nand. observes that the divers epithets which are given to Vishṇu in this chapter are precisely equal in number to the ninety-six chapters, of which the law part of the Vishṇu-sûtra is composed. This coincidence is curious enough, though it is not quite perfect. For it is by a highly artificial interpretation only that Nand. makes out Sûtra 101 to contain an epithet of Vishṇu, viz. by interpreting the two separate words namo nama as a compound, meaning 'he who is worshipped by the worshipful, i.e. by Brahman and the other gods;' and Sûtra 6 contains no epithet at all.

(Vishṇu) with a cheerful mind, addressed herself to the goddess (Lakshmi).

XCIX.

1. After having seen Śrī (Lakshmi), the goddess of the earth, highly pleased, questioned (in the following manner) that goddess, who was stroking the feet of Vishṇu, the god of the gods, who was shining with the splendour of her austerities, and whose face was radiant like melted gold.

2. 'O charming lady! Thy hands are as beautiful as the expanded red lotus. Thou art holding the feet of him whose navel resembles the expanded red lotus. Thou art constantly residing in an abode resembling the expanded red lotus. Thy waist has the colour of the expanded red lotus.

3. 'Thy eyes resemble blue lotus-flowers; thy hue is radiant like gold; thy robe is white; thy body is adorned with gems; thy face is radiant like the moon; thou art resplendent like the sun; thy power is immense; thou art the sovereign (or producer) of the world.

4. 'Thou art repose (final liberation), the highest among the (four) objects of human pursuit; thou art Lakshmi; thou art a support (in danger); thou art Śrī; thou art indifference (the freedom from all worldly pursuits and appetites, which is the consequence of final emancipation); thou art victory;

4. The 'four objects of human pursuit' are, kâma, 'desire' (and its gratification), artha, 'gain,' dharma, 'religious merit,' and moksha, 'final emancipation.' The goddess is called Lakshmi, because she is the aim (lakshyate) of all beings. She is called Śrī, because she serves Purushottama (Vishṇu), or because she is the resort of all. (Nand.)

thou art beauty; thou art the splendour (of the sun and moon personified); thou art renown; thou art prosperity; thou art wisdom; thou art the power of expression; thou art the purifier.

5. 'Thou art the food of the manes; thou art forbearance; thou art the earth (or the repository of wealth); thou art fixity; thou art the basis (or stability); thou art the source of the benefit derived from sacrifices; thou art highest prudence; thou art wide-spread renown; thou art freedom from envy; thou art the food given to the gods; thou art mental power; thou art intelligence.

6. 'As the first of the gods (Vishnu) pervades the whole aggregate of the three worlds (sky, atmosphere, and earth), even so doest thou, O black-eyed bestower of gifts. Yet I inquire for the dwelling, in which thy superhuman power is residing.'

7. The goddess of the earth having thus spoken to her, Lakshmî, standing by the side of the chief of the gods, enunciated the following answer: 'I am constantly at the side of the brilliant destroyer of Madhu, O goddess, who shinest like gold.

8. 'But learn from me, where I reside (besides), O support of the world, from the instruction of him, whom I am constantly reflecting upon in my mind, and whom the virtuous call the husband of Sri, and from my own recollection.

9. 'I reside in the sun, in the moon, and in the cloudless atmosphere in which the flock of the stars is spread out. (I reside) in that cloud, from which the waters of the rain pour down, in that cloud which is adorned with Indra's bow, and in that cloud from which the rays of lightning flash forth.

6. Lakshmî is said to pervade everything, like Vishnu himself, because she is his Sakti, i.e. his energy or active power personified as his wife. (Nand.)

10. '(I reside) in bright gold and silver, and in spotless gems and clothes, O goddess of the earth. (I reside) in rows of whitewashed palaces and in temples decorated with the attributes of deities.

11. '(I reside) in fresh cow-dung, in a noble elephant in rut, in a horse exulting in his vigour, in a proud bull, and in a Brâhmaṇa who studies the Veda.

12. 'I reside in a throne, in an Âmalaka (Dhâtri) shrub, in a Bèl tree, in an umbrella, in a shell (trumpet), in a lotus-flower, in blazing fire, and in a polished sword or mirror.

13. 'I reside in jars filled with water and in painted (halls), in which there are chowries and fans; in splendid golden vessels, and in earth recently thrown up.

14. '(I reside) in milk, butter, fresh grass, honey, and sour milk; in the body of a married woman, in the frame of an unmarried damsel, and in the frame of (images of) gods, of ascetics, and of officiating priests.

15. '(I reside) in an arrow, in one who has returned (victorious) from battle, and in one who has fallen on the field of honour and proceeded to a seat in heaven; in the sound of (repeating) the Veda, in the flourish of the shell (trumpet), in the sacrificial exclamations addressed to the gods and to the manes, and in the sound of musical instruments.

16. '(I reside) in the consecration of a king, in the marriage ceremony, in a sacrifice, in a bridegroom, in one who has washed his head, in white flowers, in mountains, in fruits, in (islets in the middle of a river and other) pleasant spots, and in large streams.

17. '(I reside) in lakes filled with water, in (pure) waters, and in ground covered with fresh grass, in a wood abounding in lotuses (and fruits), in a new-born infant, in a suckling, in one exulting in joy, in a virtuous man, and in one wholly bent upon practising the law.

18. '(I reside) in a man who observes approved usages, in one who constantly acts up to the sacred law, in one modestly, and in one splendidly attired, in one who keeps his organs of sense and his mind under control, in one free from sin, in one whose food is pure, and in one who honours his guests.

19. '(I reside) in one who is satisfied with his own wife (and does not covet other men's wives), in one bent upon doing his duty, in one eminently virtuous, in one who refrains from eating too often (i. e. three or four times a day), in one constantly adorned with flowers, in one who associates with such as anoint their limbs with fragrant unguents, in one who is scented with perfumes (himself), and in one adorned (with bracelets and ear-rings).

20. '(I reside) in one habitually veracious, in one friendly towards all creatures, in a married householder, in one forbearing, in one free from wrath, in one skilled in his own business, and in one skilled in other men's business, in one who never thinks of any but propitious things, and in one constantly humble.

21. '(I reside) in women who wear proper ornaments always, who are devoted to their husbands, whose speeches are kind, who keep up saving habits, who have sons, who keep their household utensils in good order, and who are fond of offering domestic oblations.

22. '(I reside) in women who keep the house clean (by scouring it, plastering it with cow-dung, and the like), who keep their organs of sense under control, who are not quarrelsome, contented, strictly observing the law, and charitable; and I always reside in the destroyer of Madhu.

23. 'I do not remain separated from Purushotama¹ for a single moment.'

C.

1. Those among the twice-born who will act according to (the precepts promulgated in) this excellent law-code, which has been proclaimed by the god himself, shall obtain a most excellent abode in heaven.

2. It purifies from sin, it is auspicious, it leads to heaven, procures long life, knowledge (of the four objects of human pursuit) and renown, and increases wealth and prosperity.

3. It must be studied, it must be borne in mind, it must be recited, it must be listened too, and it must be constantly repeated at Srâddhas by persons desirous of prosperity.

[4. This most sublime, mysterious collection of doctrines has been proclaimed to thee, O goddess of the earth. In a kindly spirit and for the best of the world (have I promulgated) this body of eternal

23. ¹ See I, 51.

C. 2. See XCIX, 4, note.

4. This last clause I consider, for divers reasons, to be an addition made by a modern copyist. 1. It is not commented upon in laws, which is conducive to happiness, the best means of purification, destructive of bad dreams, productive of a great deal of religious merit, and the source of prosperity.]

Dr. Bühler's copy of the Vaigyanî. 2. It takes up, without any purpose, the speech of Vishnu, which had been concluded in XCVII, 21. 3. Recommendations to study and recite the laws just promulgated, like those contained in C, 1-3, form the conclusion of several other Dharmaśāstras. 4. The substantive saubhāgyam is used like an adjective. 5. The first part of the whole passage is a detached hemistich.

GENERAL INDEX.

p. refers to the pages in the Introduction and Notes.

- Adoption, xv, 3-27; xxii, 43.
 Adultery, v, 40, 41, 192; xxxvii, 9; liii, 2, 8.
 Akshay Bar, p. 256.
 Alakânandâ river, p. 257 seq.
 Allahabad, p. 256; lxxxv, 28.
 Ascetic (religious mendicant), p. 14; v, 115, 132, 152; vi, 27; viii, 2; lix, 16, 27; lx, 26; lxiii, 36; lxxxi, 18; xcix, 14; duties of, xcvi; female ascetics, p. xxiv; xxxvi, 7.
 Astrologers, iii, 75; lxxxii, 7.
 Atheism, p. xxx; ix, 31; p. 135; xxxvii, 31; liv, 15.
 Auspicious objects, p. xxx; lxiii, 29-33.
 Bâramûla, p. 256 seq.
 Barbarians (Mlekkhas), xxii, 76; lxviii, 49; lxxi, 59; lxxxiv.
 Bathing, directions for, xxviii, 5; lxiv.
 Benares, p. xxxiii; lxxxv, 28.
 Betwah river, p. 259.
 Body, twelve excretions of the human, xxii, 81; apertures, xxiii, 51; parts, p. xx; xcvi, 43-95.
 Brâhmanas, rank, duties, and livelihood of, ii; lxvii, 31; various privileges of, iii, 26, 58, 63, 72, 73, 76, 96; v, 1-8, 94; ix, 15, 23; xxiii, 47; lxvii, 34, &c.; objects of royal benevolence, iii, 79, 81-84; sanctity of, xix, 20-23; various gifts to, xlvi, 8; xlix, 2; l, 33; lxxxvii, 6, &c.
 Buddhists, pp. xxi, xxx, 202, 312.
 Bulls, set at liberty, v, 150; lxxxvi; bull's hide of land, v, 181-183; xcii, 4; bull-fights, lxxi, 29.
 Caste, the four principal castes, i, 47, 48, 61, 63; ii; iii, 4; xxxii, 18; lxxxiv, 4. Diversity of caste affects the legislation, iii, 56-63; v, 19-26, 35-41, 98-104, &c.; the legal rate of interest, vi, 2; the law of evidence, viii, 15-23; ix, 10-15; the law of inheritance, xviii, 1-40; the performance of funerals, xix, 1-4; the laws regarding impurity, xxii, 1-4, 10-24, 63-65, 73, 84; xxiii, 47, 48; the marriage laws, xxiv, 1-8, 28; xxvi; xxxii, 5; the sacraments, xxvii, 6-9, 15-26; the classification of crimes, xxxv, 1; xxxvi, 1, 3, 6; xxxvii, 13; xxxviii, 1; xl, 1; the law of penance, l, 6-14; li, 50-58; liv, 2-7, 30; lv, 2; lvii, 15, 16, &c.; the acquisition of wealth, ii, 10-15; lviii, 6-8; the sipping of water, lxii, 6-8; the reception of guests, lxvii, 34-41. Mixed castes, xvi.
 Cows, sanctity of, xxiii, 57-61.
 Crime, cause of, xxxiii, 1, 2, 6; nine degrees of, 3-5; xxxiv-xlii; consequences of, xliv, 1-10; unnatural crimes, v, 42, 44; xxxviii, 4, 5; liii, 3, 4, 7.
 Debts, recovery of, vi, 1, 18-26, 40; liability for, 27-39; the 'three debts,' xxxvii, 29.
 Dekhan, pp. xxiv, xxx, 257, 258, 259.
 Deposits, v, 169-171; xxxvi, 3; lii, 4.
 Documents, p. xxiv; iii, 82; v, 9, 10, 187; vi, 23, 25, 26; vii.

- Dowry, of a wife, XVII, 18; p. 173; LVIII, 9.
- Dvârakâ, p. 258.
- Earth, goddess of the, pp. x, xxviii; visits Karyapa, I, 19-21, 30-32; described, 22-29; visits and questions Vishnu, 33-46, 48-62; is addressed by him, 47, 63-65; v, 193; XIX, 24; XXII, 93; XXIII, 46; XLVII, 10; XCVI, 97, 98; converted into an attendant of Vishnu, XCVIII, 1-5; praises him, 6-101; addresses Lakshmi, XCVIII, 102-XCIX, 6.
- Eating, rules relating to, LXVII, 37-43; LXVIII.
- Evidence, threefold, VI, 23.
- Excrements, voiding of, LX.
- Father, v, 120; VI, 33, 35; XV, 43-47; XVI, 1, 16; XVII, 1-3, 6, 18, 20, 23; XVIII, 43; XIX, 3, 4; XXI, 12; XXII, 33, 34, 86; XXIV, 38; XXX, 44, 45; XXXI, 2-10; XXXVII, 6; XLVIII, 20; p. 232; LXXIII, 14, 17; p. 238; LXXV; LXXXII, 28, 29.
- Food, forbidden, LI.
- Gambling, v, 134, 135; VIII, 2; LVIII, 11; LXXI, 45; LXXVIII, 41.
- Ganges, p. xxx; XIX, 11, 12; XX, 23; XXIII, 61; LXIV, 17; p. 248; LXXXV, 10; pp. 257, 258.
- Gayâ, pp. 256, 257, 259; LXXXV, 67.
- Gifts, from kings to Brâhmanas, III, 81-84; to a woman from her male relatives, XVII, 18; illicit, XXXVII, 12; LVII, 2-8, 14, 15; householder to bestow, LIX, 14-18, 26-28; LXVII, 26-46; various gifts and corresponding rewards, LXXXVII, LXXXVIII, XC-XCII; persons unworthy to receive, XCIII, 7-10.
- Godâvarî river, p. 257; LXXXV, 42.
- Grants, royal, p. xxi; III, 82, 83.
- Guests, reception of, LXVII, 27-46.
- Gugarât, p. xxvii.
- Gunti river, LXXXV, 43.
- Haridvâr, LXXXV, 28.
- Hells, twenty-one, XLIII, 1-22; torments inflicted in, 23-45.
- Hermit, p. 14; v, 132; XVII, 15, 16; LI, 66; LIX, 27; p. 194; LX, 26; duties of, XCIV, XCV.
- Himâlayas, I, 35; XIII, 3; pp. 255, 257 (bis), 258; LXXXV, 65.
- Homicide and murder, v, 4, 11, 189-191; XXXV, 1; XXXVI, 1, 2; XXXVII, 13; L, 6-15; LIV, 32; LV, 2.
- Householder, p. 14; VI, 38; LI, 66; LIX, 1, 19, 27-30; LX, 26; LXI, 1; pp. 224, 228; XCIV, 1; XCIX, 20.
- Idols, v, 174; IX, 33; XIV, 2; XXII, 53; XXIII, 34; LXIII, 27; LXV, 1; LXXI, 60; LXXXII, 8; XC, 20-22; XCIX, 14.
- Inauspicious objects, p. xxx; LXIII, 34-38.
- Incest, v, 7; XXXIV, 1; XXXV, 1; XXXVI, 4-7; LIII, 1.
- Indus river, LXXXV, 50.
- Inheritance, sons legitimate and adopted, XV, 1-29; exclusion from participation, 30-39; duties incumbent upon the heirs, 39-47; partition of property, XVII, 1-3, 23; XVIII, 1-41; collateral succession, XVII, 4-17; succession to females, 18-21; indivisible property, 22; XVIII, 42-44.
- Initiation, XXVII, 15-28; LIV, 26.
- Interest, rate of, VI, 2-5, 7, 10-17; on amicable loans, 40; lending money at, II, 13; XL, 1.
- Judges, III, 73, 74; v, 180, 195; VII, 3; IX, 33; XI, 10.
- Jupiter, planet, XLIX, 9.
- Kasmîr, pp. xv, 257, 258.
- Kattivar, pp. xv, 258.
- Kings, principal duties of, III, 1-3, 44; their capital, officers, and income, 4-32, 70-75; conduct in peace and war, 33-69, 85-97; liberality enjoined in, 76-84; documents attested by, 82; VII, 2, 3; may not give evidence, VIII, 2; inherit unclaimed property, XVII, 13; are officially pure, XXII, 48, 52.
- Krishnâ (Kistna) river, p. 259 (bis).
- Kshatriyas, rank, duties, and livelihood of, II.

- Lakshmi, the consort of Vishnu, I, 43; p. 293; praise of, XCIX, 1-6; her omnipresence, 7-23.
- Law, titles of, p. xxii; four feet of, LXXXVI, 15.
- Manes, oblations to the, see Srâd-dhas.
- Marriage, necessity of, XV, 31; XXIV, 38-41; plurality of wives, XV, 41; XVIII, 1-40; XXIV, 1-4; XXVI, 1-3; intermarriage, p. xxi; XVI, 2-17; XVIII, 1-40; XXIV, 1-8; intermarriage forbidden, XXVI, 4-7; ineligible wives, XXIV, 9-16; eight forms of, 17-37; XVII, 19, 20; ceremony of, XXII, 32, 53; XXIV, 5-8; XXVII, 14; XXXVII, 18; LIV, 16; XCIX, 16; connubial intercourse, LXIX.
- Mind, XXII, 92; LXXII, 1, 2, 6, 7; XCVI, 96.
- Mother, VI, 31, 32; XVI, 2; XVII, 7; XVIII, 34; XXIV, 38; XXXI, 2-10; XXXIV, 1; XXXVII, 6; XLVIII, 20; LXXIV, 1; LXXXII, 29.
- Nîlgiri hills, LXXXV, 13.
- Oceans, I, 15; LXXXVII, 9.
- Ordeals, p. xxiv; VI, 23; general rules, IX; ordeal by balance, X; ordeal by fire, XI; ordeal by water, XII; ordeal by poison, XIII; ordeal by sacred libation, XIV.
- Orders, the four, I, 47, 63; III, 3; LIX, 27-29; LX, 26; p. 232.
- Outcasts, VIII, 2; XV, 32, 35; XVII, 22; XXII, 56, 57; XXX, 14; XXXV, 3-5; p. 136 (bis); XLVI, 25; LI, 11; LIV, 25; LVII, 3, 4, 14; LXXXI, 17; LXXXII, 15, 23.
- Pañgâb, pp. xv, 259.
- Penances, for perjury, VIII, 16, 17; LIV, 9; for impurity, XXII, 9-18, 58-80; for students, XXVIII, 48-53; XXXII, 9; LI, 43-45; for the nine principal degrees of crime, XXXIV-XLII; various forms of, XLVI-XLVIII; L, 1-5, 15-24, &c.; for homicide and murder, L, 6-14; LV, 2, 3; for taking life and cutting plants, L, 25-50; for tasting forbidden food, LI, 1-58; for theft, LII, 1-14; for illicit intercourse, LIII; for various offences, LIV; for secret sins, LV.
- Phalgu river, LXXXV, 22.
- Physicians, V, 175-177; LI, 10; LXXI, 66; LXXXII, 9.
- Pledges, V, 181-184; VI, 2, 5-8.
- Pokur (Pushkara), p. 205; LXXXV, 1-3; p. 258.
- Possession, V, 184-187.
- Priests, III, 70; XXIV, 20; XXIX, 3, 4; LXXXVI, 17; XCVI, 1; XCIX, 14.
- Property, of minors, &c., III, 65; separate property of a woman, XVII, 18; three kinds of, LVIII.
- Punishment, theory of, III, 90-96; V, 193-196; fines, IV, 14; for capital crimes, V, 1-18; for abuse and assault, 19-39, 60-76; for illicit intercourse, 40-47; for theft, &c., 48-59, 77-90; for various offences, 91-182; for unjustly accusing a creditor, VI, 18.
- Purification, of men and animals, XXII; of things, XXIII.
- Qualities (in philosophy), XCVI, 53; p. 287; XCVII, 2, 16, 17.
- Sacraments, II, 3; p. 106; XXVII, 1-17, 26.
- Sacrifices, regular, LIX, 1-13; five principal, 20-26; XCV, 5.
- Sacrificial fees, I, 8; II, 11; XXII, 4, 16; L, 31; LXXIII, 26; LXXIV, 1; LXXXVI, 17; XC, 4; XCVI, 1.
- Sales, laws of, V, 124-130, 164-166, 174; XXXVII, 14; LI, 12; LIV, 17-22; LVIII, 10.
- Satara, p. 259.
- Sattee, p. xxix seq.; XX, 39; XXV, 14.
- Self-defence, V, 188-190.
- Shâmbar, p. 101; LXXXV, 21.
- Sipping water, LXII.
- Sleep, rules relating to, LXX.
- Sone river, LXXXV, 33.
- Sons, legal position of, V, 120; VI, 32, 35, 36; XV, 28-43; XVI, 16; XVII, 1-3, 23; XVIII, 1-40; twelve kinds of, XV, 1-27; merit of having, 44-47.

- Student, p. 14; V, 132; XVII, 12, 16; XXII, 44, 85-87; LI, 43-45; LIX, 27; LX, 26; XCVI, 35; duties of, XXVIII, XXXI, XXXII; perpetual, XXV, 17; XXVIII, 46; study of the Veda, XXX.
- Suicides, XXII, 47, 56, 58-60.
- Sureties, V, 121; VI, 41-43.
- Surju river, LXXXV, 32.
- Śrāddhas, Sapindikarana, XX, 33; XXII, 12-23; Ekoddishra, XXII, 1-11; Nādimukha, p. 92; Navasrāddha, XLVIII, 21; regular Śrāddhas (Pārvaṇa, &c.), LXXIII, LXXVI; Anvashrakā, LXXIV; special, LXXVII; heavenly rewards for, LXXVIII; general rules, LXXIX-LXXXI; unfit and fit guests and places, LXXXII-LXXXV.
- Sūdras, rank, duties, and livelihood of, II; their degraded position, XVIII, 5; XIX, 1-4; XXVI, 4-7; XXVII, 9; XXVIII, 40, &c.
- Taxes, II, 12; III, 16, 22-30.
- Teeth, cleaning the, LXI.
- Theft, III, 66, 67; V, 6, 77-90, 136; XXXV, 1; XXXVI, 3; XLIV, 12-43; XLV, 5, 9-14, 25; XLVIII, 22; LII; LV, 5; LVIII, 11.
- Tolls, III, 16, 31; V, 131-133.
- Travelling, rules relating to, LXIII, 2-51; LXXI, 69.
- Treasure-trove, III, 56-64.
- Trimbak, p. 257 (bis).
- Tuṅgabhadra, p. 259.
- Vaiśyas, rank, duties, and livelihood of, II.
- Vindhyas, pp. xxvii, 256, 258.
- Week, pp. xxix, xxxii; LXXVIII, 1-7.
- Widow, 'appointment' of, pp. xxiv, 312; xv, 3; her right of inheritance, XVII, 4; self-immolation of, see Satee.
- Witnesses, V, 120; VI, 24; VII, 2-4, 13; incompetent, VIII, 2-6; competent, 7-9; p. 312; examination of, 10-39; perjury conditionally sanctioned, 15; false, V, 179; VII, 8; VIII, 37, 40; X, 9; XXXVI, 2; LIV, 9.
- Women, legal position of, VI, 15, 30-32, 37; VII, 10; VIII, 2; IX, 23; XV, 2-25; XVI, 1, 2; XVII, 4, 5, 7, 18, 22; XVIII, 34, 35; XXII, 19, 32; XXIV, 38-41; XXVI; duties of, XXV; XCIX, 21, 22.
- Yamunā (Jumna), LXXXV, 35.

SANSKRIT INDEX.

p. refers to the pages in the Introduction and Notes.

- Abhinimrukta, p. xxvii.
 Abrāhmaṇa, p. 274.
 Adharma, LXVII, 10.
 Ādityadarśana, XXVII, 10.
 Ādityas, XIV, 2; LXIII, 12.
 Aghamarshaza, 1. hymn of, XXII, 10; LV, 7; LVI, 3, &c.; 2. penance, XLVI, 2-9.
 Agni, p. 4; XXI, 7; LXVII, 3; LXXIII, 12, 15; p. 234; LXXXIX, 1, 2; XC, 3; XCII, 13.
 Agnihotra, LIX, 2; LXVII, 44; LXVIII, 6.
 Agnihotrin, LXVIII, 6; LXXXVII, 6.
 Āgrayana, LIX, 6.
 Ahīna sacrifice, p. 137; LIV, 25.
 Ākāśa, LXVII, 20.
 Aksha, IV, 8, 9.
 Akshayyodaka, p. 84.
 Akshikūṭe, p. 286.
 Ākārya, XXIX, 1.
 Ākṣbādaka, p. 261.
 Ākyuta ('eternal'), I, 60; LXVII, 2; XCVIII, 81.
 Amedhya, p. 102.
 Amṛita, I, 34, 54.
 Āmsupatta, p. 100.
 Āṅgula, p. 56.
 Aniruddha, LXVII, 2.
 Annaprāsana, XXVII, 11.
 Antya, p. 29.
 Anumati, LXVII, 3.
 Anvashrakās, LXXIII, 9; LXXIV, 1; LXXVI, 1.
 Aparārka, p. xxxii.
 Āpastamba, pp. ix, xiii, xvi, xx, xxii, xxiii, xxxi, xxxii, xxxvi.
 Arbuda, p. 284.
 Ādra, p. 177.
 Ārsha, 1. p. 106 seq.; 2. marriage, XXIV, 18, 21, 31, 35.
 Āryāvarta, p. xxx; LXXXV, 4.
 Ashrakās, LXXIII, 8; LXXIV, 1; LXXVI, 1.
 Asuras, I, 16, 60; LXXIII, 11; p. 250; XCVIII, 80; Āsura marriage, XXIV, 18, 24.
 Āsvins, LXV, 2; XC, 24.
 Atharvasiras, LVI, 22.
 Atharva-veda, pp. xi, xxxi; V, 191; XXX, 37.
 Atiguru, XXXI, 1.
 Atikrikṣbra penance, LIV, 30.
 Atipātakāni, p. xxx.
 Atisāntapana penance, XLVI, 21.
 Atithi, etymology of, LXVII, 34.
 Ātreya, Atrigotrā, p. 133 seq.
 Avakīrṇin, XXVIII, 52.
 Avyakta, pp. 286, 289.
 Āyogava caste, XVI, 4, 8.
 Bâlâtapa, p. 227.
 Bali-offerings, XLIX, 3; LIX, 24; LXVII, 4-22.
 Bandhu, XVII, 10.
 Baudhâyana, pp. ix, xiii, xvii, xix, xx, xxii, xxiii.
 Bhagavad-gîtâ, pp. xxviii, xxix, 79, 82, 132, 231, 279.
 Bhagavat ('venerable'), I, 18, 61; XLIX, 1; LXV, 1; p. 208; XC, 3; XCVII, 10; XCVIII, 2, 3.
 Bhâgavata-purâna, p. xxviii.
 Bhâgavatas, p. xxviii.
 Bhârundas, LVI, 13.
 Brahman, I, 1, 50; XX, 13-16, 23; XXIV, 33; XXVIII, 47; XXX, 31; XXXI, 7, 10; XLVII, 10; XLIX, 8; LI, 61; LV, 10, 17, 18; LX, 1; LXII, 2, 6; LXVII, 19; p. 256; XCII, 7; p. 289; XCVIII, 29, 37; pp. 292, 296; Brâhma marriage, XVII, 19; XXIV, 18, 19, 29, 33.

- Brāhmaṇapriya, p. 293.
 Brihaspati, XC, 3.
- Dadhikrāvan, LXV, 12.
 Daityas, I, 49; XX, 25; p. 295.
 Daiva marriage, XXIV, 18, 20, 30, 34.
 Daksha, XLVIII, 8.
 Darśapūrnāmāsa sacrifices, LIX, 4.
 Dattaka, XV, 18.
 Devakhāta, p. 205.
 Devapāla, pp. xii, xiii, 83, 117, 212, 213, 215, 233, 234, 261.
 Dhanvantari, LXVII, 3.
 Dharana, IV, 12.
 Dhāraṇā, p. 281.
 Dharma, X, 10; LXVII, 10; XC, 10, 28.
 Dharma-sūtra, pp. ix, xii-xiv, xvi-xx, xxv, xxix, xxxii.
 Dharmajāstra ('Institutes of the Sacred Law'), p. xxxii; III, 70; VIII, 8; xxx, 38; LXXIII, 16; LXXXIII, 8.
 Dhara, etymology of, X, 10.
 Dināra, p. xxv.
 Drona, p. 101.
 Drupadā-sāvitṛī, LXIV, 21.
 Durgā-sāvitṛī, LVI, 9.
 Dvīpas, the seven, I, 15, 16.
- Gandharvas, I, 17; XXIV, 37; LI, 63; XCI, 12; Gāndharva marriage, XXIV, 18, 23, 28, 37.
 Gaṇeśa, pp. xix, xxi.
 Garbha, p. 113.
 Gāruda-purāṇa, pp. xxix, 141, 143, 281.
 Gāthās, p. xvii.
 Gautama, pp. x, xvi, xx, xxxvi.
 Gāyatrī (Sāvitṛī), p. xi; XXII, 10, &c.; sanctity of, XXVIII, 38; LIV, 26; LV, 11-21; LXIV, 39.
 Gorokanā, p. 105.
 Gosūkta, LVI, 18.
 Gotra, p. 106 seq.
 Govinda, p. 9.
 Govrata penance, L, 16-24.
 Guru, p. 13.
- Gagannātha, i. epithet of Vishnu, I, 58; 2. jurist, pp. 62, 64.
 Gānādana, I, 19, 31.
 Gātakarman, XXVII, 4.
- Haradatta, pp. xxxiii, 16, 117, 145, 167, 250.
- Hari, I, 36.
 Hasta, p. 56.
 Hiranyakesin, pp. ix, xiii, xvii.
- Indra (Sakra, Vāsava), V, 196; XX, 23-25; XXX, 6; LXVII, 3, 15; p. 242; XC, 3; XCIX, 9.
 Ishṭakās, LXVII, 7.
 Ishji Vaisvānari, LIX, 10.
 Īśvara, p. 199.
 Itihāsa ('Epics'), p. xxxii; III, 70; XXX, 38; LXXIII, 16; LXXXIII, 7.
- Kairasa, I, 54.
 Kaiyata, p. xiv.
 Kāla, XX, 21-28.
 Kālāpaka, Kālāpas, pp. xiv, xxvi.
 Kalpa, I, 2; XX, 12, 17, 24; XLIII, 23.
 Kāmadeva, p. 292.
 Kapila, xcviii, 85.
 Karsha, Kārshāpana, IV, 13.
 Kāshāyin, pp. xxx, 202.
 Karyapa, I, 20, 21, 30-33; XX, 26; p. 292.
 Katba, Katbas, pp. ix, xiv-xvi, xxv-xxvii.
 Kaṭhai, p. xv.
 Kātbaka, pp. xi, xii, xiv-xvi, xxv-xxvii, xxxv, 85, 186, 208-210, 213, 233, 236, 261, 262.
 Kātbaka Grihya-sūtra, pp. xii-xvi, xxvi, xxxi-xxxiii, 83, 86, 117, 212, 233, 238, 261, 262.
 Kātbaka Srauta-sūtra, pp. xiii, xiv, xxvi.
 Kāyasthas ('scribes'), pp. xxiv, xxx; VII, 3.
 Kesava, I, 39; XLIX, 8.
 Kesavanāyaka (king), p. xxxiii.
 Khandaparasu, p. 295.
 Krikkbra penance, LII, 5; LIV, 25 seq.
 Krikkbrātikrikkbra penance, XLVI, 13.
 Krishna, p. 9; LXXXV, 59; XCVIII, 96.
 Krishnala, IV, 6, 7.
 Kshiroda (milk-ocean), I, 32-39.
 Kullūka, pp. xxxv, 17, 27, 51, 52, 70, 74 (passim), 75, 96, 100, 104, 118, 139, 147, 160, 166, 170, 172, 179, 184, 216, 227, 241, 246, 250, 274, 280.
 Kumbha, p. 26.
 Kundārin, p. 148.
 Kūshmāṇḍis, p. xi; VIII, 16; LVI, 7; LXXXVI, 12.

- Kandāla* (Kāndāla) caste, origin and position of, XVI, 6, 11, 14.
Kandra, XCII, 12.
Kāndrāyana penance, various forms of, XLVII.
Karakas, pp. xv, xvi, xxvi.
Karaka-sākhā. See Kātbaka.
Karavavyūha, pp. xiv, xxv.
Kārāyanīyas, p. xv. See also Karbas, Kātbaka, Kātbaka Gṛihya-sūtra.
Katuryuga, XX, 10-12; XLIII, 26.
Lakshmīpati, p. 293.
Mādhava, p. 70.
Madhu, slayer of (Vishnu), I, 40, 44, 54; XCIX, 22.
Mādhvi, Mādhūka, Mādhvika wines, XXII, 82, 83.
Madhyama, p. 17.
Madyānugata, p. 139.
Māgadha caste, XVI, 5, 10.
Mahābhārata, pp. xxviii, xxix, 9, 51, 81 (bis), 82, 131, 132, 215, 279, 295.
Mahābhāshya. See Patañgali.
Mahāpragāpati, p. 292.
Mahārāgas, xcviii, 40, 41.
Mahārāva, p. xxvii.
Mahāsāntapana penance, XLVI, 20.
Mahāvratā, 1. penance, I, 1-5; 2. Sāman, LVI, 24.
Mahīdhara, p. 209.
Maireya, xxii, 83.
Maitrāyanīyas, pp. xvi, xxvi, xxvii.
Malina, pp. xxx, 202.
Māmsa, etymology of, LI, 78.
Mānava Gṛihya-sūtra, pp. xxvi, 213.
Mānavas, pp. xxv-xxvii.
Mānava Śrauta-sūtra, p. xxvi.
Manogñā, p. 260.
Mantra, 1. epithet of Vishnu, I, 53; 2. Mantras in the Vishnu-sūtra, pp. x-xii; 3. purificatory, LVI.
Manu, 1. code of, pp. ix, xxii-xxvii, xxxi; 2. Manus, XX, 24.
Manvantara, XX, 11; XLIII, 24.
Maruts, LXVII, 13.
Māsha, IV, 7, 8.
Māshaka, IV, 9, 11, 12.
Medhātithi, pp. 139, 178.
Mitāksharā. See Vignānesvara.
Mitra, LXVII, 3.
Mitramitra, p. xxxiii.
Mṛityu, LXVII, 10.
Mūlakṛikkbra penance, XLVI, 15.
Nāgavana, p. 15.
Nagna, p. 204.
Nakshatras, twenty-eight, LXXVIII, 8-35.
Nāmadheya, xxvii, 5.
Nānaka, p. xxi.
Nandapandita, pp. xxxii-xxxvi.
Nārada-smṛiti, pp. xvi, xxii, xxv.
Nārāyana, I, 50; pp. 280, 281; xcviii, 98.
Nāstikavṛitti, p. 177.
Nirukta. See Yāska.
Nishāda caste, LI, 14.
Nishekakarman, XXVII, 1.
Nishka, IV, 10.
Niyoga, p. xxiv; xv, 3.
Om, xxx, 33; LV, 9-21; xcviii, 6.
Pākayagñas, LV, 20; LIX, 1.
Pana, IV, 14.
Pañkagavya, p. 89.
Pañtaka, LXXIII, 5-9; LXXIV, 1.
Pañtālas, p. xv seq.
Parāka penance, XLVI, 18.
Parapūrvā, p. 91.
Parnakṛikkbra penance, XLVI, 23.
Pārsvika, p. 190.
Paśubandha, LIX, 5.
Pāsupatas, pp. xxx, 202.
Patākā, p. 200.
Pātāla, I, 15.
Patañgali, 1. grammarian, p. xiv; 2. philosopher, p. 281.
Pattra, p. 74.
Pāvamānis, LVI, 8.
Pisākas, I, 17; LI, 73; p. 250; Paiśāka marriage, XXIV, 18, 26.
Pitṛitarpana, LIX, 23.
Pradyumna, LXVII, 2.
Pragāpati ('the lord of creatures'), LV, 18; LVII, 11; LXII, 1, 6; LXVII, 3; XCVI, 1, &c.; Prāgāpatya marriage, XXIV, 18, 22, 32, 36; Prāgāpatya penance, XLVI, 10.
Prakīrnaka, p. xxx.
Pratāra, p. 75.
Prānāyāma, LV, 9.
Prastha, xc, 1.
Prātirākhyas, p. 254.
Pravragita, p. xxx.
Pravragitā, p. xxx.
Pukkasa caste, XVI, 5, 9.
Pumsavana, XXVII, 2.
Punarbhū, xv, 8, 9.

- Purāṇa ('Legends'), p. xxxii; xxx, 38; LXXXIII, 16; LXXXIII, 7.
- Purusha, xx, 16, 19; LXIV, 28; LXVII, 2; pp. 287-289; XCVII, 1, 7-9, 15, 16; p. 294; XCVIII, 83, 84.
- Purushasūkta, pp. xi, 156; LV, 6; LVI, 26; LXIV, 23, 28, &c.
- Purushavrata, LVI, 15.
- Purushottama, I, 51, 58; XCIX, 23.
- Pūshan, LXXXVI, 9.
- Pustaka, p. xxii seq.; XVIII, 44; XXIII, 56.
- Putra, etymology of, xv, 44.
- Rahasya, p. 11.
- Rākshasas, I, 17; p. 250; XCIII, 12; Rākshasa marriage, XXIV, 18, 25.
- Rāmāyana, pp. xiv, 51, 79.
- Rasātala, I, 12, 45; p. 3.
- Raurava, p. 140.
- Revatī, xc, 26.
- Rig-veda, xxx, 26, 34.
- Rishis, the seven, I, 16; xx, 26; XXIV, 9; XXXVII, 29; XLVII, 10; XLVIII, 6, 17; LIX, 29; LXXI, 83; p. 259. Cf. Ārsha.
- Ritvig, XXIX, 3.
- Rudra, XLVII, 10; LXXXIII, 12; p. 256.
- Sāhasa, p. 48.
- Sakulya, XVII, 11.
- Samānārshapravarā, p. 107.
- Sāma-veda, p. x; I, 4, 6; xxx, 26, 36.
- Samyāva, LI, 37.
- Sandhinī, p. 167.
- Saṅkarshana, LXVII, 2.
- Sāṅkhya, pp. xxiv, xxviii, 286 seq.; XCVIII, 86.
- Sāntapana penance, XLVI, 19.
- Sapinda, p. 68; XXII, 5.
- Sapindīkaraṇa, xx, 33, 34; XXI, 12-23.
- Satya, LXVII, 2.
- Sāvitrī. See Gāyatrī.
- Sāyana, pp. 209, 220.
- Sharṭiladāna, p. 268 seq.
- Sīmantonayana, XXVII, 3.
- Snātaka, pp. 120, 203; duties of a, LXXI.
- Soma, I, god, XXI, 6; LXVII, 3, 18; p. 234; LXXXVI, 16; 2. Soma-sacrifice, I, 8; XXIII, 8; LI, 9, 25; LIV, 25; LIX, 8, 9, &c.;
3. Soma juice or plant, I, 6; LIV, 17; p. 178 seq.
- Sthānaka, p. 284.
- Strīdhana, XVII, 18.
- Supragāpati, p. 292.
- Suras, I, 16, 60.
- Sūrya, XCII, 11.
- Sūta caste, XVI, 6, 13.
- Suvarṇa, IV, 9, 10.
- Svāmīnārāyaṇis, p. 202.
- Svayambhū ('the self-existent'), xv, 44; LI, 61.
- Svayamihitalabdha, p. 74.
- Svayamvara, p. 110.
- Sakti, p. 298.
- Saṅkara, pp. 9, 292, 293, 295 (bis).
- Sesha, I, 39-41.
- Sīlaphalaka, p. 118.
- Siras, LV, 9.
- Sītakrikkbra penance, XLVI, 12.
- Siva, p. xxx; XXXI, 7; pp. 258, 295.
- Srī, XCIX, I, 4, 8; Srī Hiranyakeśī, LXVII, 9.
- Srīphalakrikkbra penance, XLVI, 16.
- Sulka, XVII, 18.
- Svapāta caste, p. 29; LXVII, 26.
- Svetadvīpa, XLIX, 4.
- Taksha, LXVII, 5.
- Taptakrikkbra penance, XLVI, 11.
- Tīrtha, 1. place of pilgrimage, II, 16; V, 132; XXIII, 46; XXXV, 6; XXXVI, 8; LXXXIII, 9; LXXXV; 2. parts of the hand called Tīrtha, LXII, 1-4, 6; LXIV, 30, 31.
- Trasareṇu, IV, 1.
- Tretā fires, XXXI, 7, 8; p. 191; Tretā Yuga, see Yuga.
- Trimūrti, p. xxii.
- Trināṭiketa, LXXXIII, 2.
- Trisuparna, LVI, 23; LXXXIII, 16.
- Tulāpurusha penance, XLVI, 22.
- Tushita, XCVIII, 47.
- Udakakrikkbra penance, XLVI, 14.
- Upādhyāya, XXIX, 2.
- Upākarmaṇ, xxx, 1-3, 24; p. 312.
- Upanishads, I, 9.
- Upataksa, LXVII, 5.
- Uragas, I, 17.
- Ushnīsha, p. 205.
- Utsarga, xxx, 1-3, 25; p. 312.
- Vaidehaka caste, XVI, 6, 12.

- Vaigâyantî, p. xxxii.
 Vaikuntîba, xcvi, 59.
 Vairâvana, LXVII, 14.
 Vaisvadeva sacrifice, rules relating to the, LIX, 13, 22; LXVII.
 Vaitaranî river, p. 141.
 Vâkaspatis ('the lord of holy speech'),
 I, 58; xcvi, 18.
 Vâlguda, XLIV, 30.
 Varadarâga, p. 70.
 Varâhamihira, pp. xxiii, xxxii.
 Vârdhrînasa, p. 249.
 Varuna, LXVII, 3, 11, 17; xci, 2.
 Vâsishtîba, pp. xvi-xx, xxii, xxiii, xxxi.
 Vâstoshpati, LXVII, 3, 11.
 Vasu, LXXXIII, 12; p. 235.
 Vâsudeva, I, 60; XLIX, 1; LXV, 1;
 p. 208; LXVII, 2; xc, 3, 17, 19-21; xcvi, 10; xcvi, 8.
 Vasushena, I, 59.
 Veda, or Vedas collectively, I, 16;
 III, 70; xxii, 90, &c.; three
 Vedas, p. xxxi; VIII, 8; xxxi,
 7; LV, 10, &c.; four Vedas, I,
 3; xxx, 34-37.
 Vedâṅgas, p. xxxii; I, 16, 53; xxviii,
 35; xxix, 1; xxx, 3; LXXXIII,
 6.
 Vignânesvara, pp. xxxii, 62, 70, 74,
 100, 182, 229, 241, 246, 250.
 Viṣvedevâs, LXVII, 3; LXXXIII, 27;
 offerings to the, see Vaisvadeva.
 Vratas of a student, p. 121.
 Vratin, p. 92.
 Vrâtya, xxvii, 27.
 Vyâhritis, LV, 9-21; Vyâhriti Sâ-
 mans, LVI, 12.
 Vyâkarana ('Grammar'), pp. xxxi,
 4; LXXXIII, 7.
 Vyatipâta, LXXVII, 4.
 Yâgñavalkya, pp. x, xvi, xx-xxii,
 xxv, xxx, xxxii (bis).
 Yagur-veda, pp. x, xii-xvi, xxv, xxvi;
 xxx, 26, 35.
 Yakshas, I, 17.
 Yama, xx, 39; XLIII, 32, 33, 37;
 LXIV, 42; LXVII, 16; Yama
 Âṅgiras, xxi, 8; p. 234.
 Yâska, pp. xiv, xvii, xxiii seq.
 Yatra kvaṇanotpâdita, p. 63 seq.
 Yâtudhânas, LXXXIII, 11; LXXXI, 4.
 Yoga, pp. xx, xxiv, xxviii; xcvi, 6.
 Yoga-sâstra, pp. xx, 281.
 Yuga, xx, 6-12; xci, 3.
 Yugâdya, p. 266.

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS.

I, 17 (p. 4) read Râkshasas — I, 22 (p. 5) for bow read shaft — v, 48 (p. 29) and v, 77 (p. 31) for or one read and one — VIII, 9 (p. 49) before one add and approved by both (parties) — XIV, 4 (p. 61) close before an — XVIII, 19, 22 (p. 72) for Sûdra read Vaisya — XVIII, 38 (p. 73) for two parts read eight parts — XXI, 1 (p. 83) read clothes, ornaments, and — XXI, 5 (p. 84) for added fuel to read strewed grass round — XXII, 68 (p. 94) for head read beard — XXIII, 22 (p. 100) for sesamum read mustard — XXIII, 36 (p. 101) read grain exceeding — XXIII, 38 (p. 102) read cow, trodden or sneezed — XXIV, 7 (p. 106) for whip read goad — XXX, 3 (p. 123) invert the position of Upâkarma and Utsarga — XLIX, 8 (p. 156) ditto of full and new — LI, 57, 58 (p. 169) for left read given.

Notes: page 12, after -4-9 add (14) and after -16, 17. add M. x, 63; Y. I, 122 — p. 14, note 1, before -79, 80. add 77, 78. Y. I, 308, 313. -78. M. VII, 79. — p. 25, note 1, read 140-146 . . . XLV, L. Add at the end of this note -196. M. VIII, 386 — p. 30 add 52. I have translated the reading pañkâsatam, which however is hardly so appropriate as the reading pañkâsatam, 'fifty' kârshâpanas. See M. VIII, 2, 97 — p. 32 add 88. It is perhaps more advisable to translate '(shall pay) . . . (as a fine)', than to supply the above parentheses. The reading of Nand.'s gloss is doubtful — p. 42, l. 7 from below, after 45 add ; Colebrooke, Dig. I, 5, CLXXXV. -37. Y. II, 48. — p. 54 add 20, 22. The translation of śrīṣha by 'fine' rests upon Nand.'s comment — p. 62 add Gautama (xviii, 6) speaks of the appointment of 'one who belongs to the same caste' (Bühler); but the term yonimātra is ambiguous, and may be referred to 'relatives on the mother's side' as well. — p. 123, note 1, read 34-38 and 43-47 — p. 131, 17, read The next proverb (18) — p. 132, 3, read XXXIII — p. 138, 35, read XLVII and XLVI, 18. — p. 162 add 5. Thus Nand. Taken as part of a Dvandva compound, vrātāni would mean 'and the Vratas.' See M. XI, 152 — p. 185, 3 and p. 186, 26 read x, 190 and x, 90. — p. 190 read LIX, 1. M. III, 67 — p. 198, 5 add 'ekakara, "one who has one hand only" (Nand.), may also mean "with one hand." See Āpast. I, 1, 4, 21; Gaut. IX, 11. — p. 202, 36.¹ Professor Max Müller points out to me, that the Buddhist Bhikshus do 'wear the marks of an order to which they do not belong'—na vidhiyat pravraganti. Viewed in this light, Nand.'s interpretation tends to confirm my own. Cf. Āpast. I, 6, 18, 31.

TRANSLITERATION OF ORIENTAL ALPHABETS ADOPTED FOR THE TRANSLATIONS
OF THE SACRED BOOKS OF THE EAST.

CONSONANTS.	MISSIONARY ALPHABET.				Sanskrit.	Zend.	Pehlvi.	Persian.	Arabic.	Hebrew.	Chinese.
	I Class.			II Class.								III Class.
	I Class.	II Class.	III Class.
Gutturales.
1 Tenuis	k	क	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	k
2 " aspirata	kh	ख	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	kh
3 Media	g	ग	𐬕𐬎	𐬕𐬎	𐬕𐬎	𐬕𐬎	𐬕𐬎	𐬕𐬎
4 " aspirata	gh	घ	𐬕𐬎𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬌
5 Gutturo-labialis	q	ङ	𐬕𐬎𐬍	𐬕𐬎𐬍	𐬕𐬎𐬍	𐬕𐬎𐬍	𐬕𐬎𐬍	𐬕𐬎𐬍
6 Nasalis	h (ng)	ञ	𐬕𐬎𐬍𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬍𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬍𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬍𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬍𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬍𐬌
7 Spiritus asper	h	ह	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	h, hs
8 " lenis	'h	ह	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌
9 " asper faucalis	'h	ह	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌
10 " lenis faucalis	'h	ह	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌
11 " asper fricatus	'h	ह	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌
12 " lenis fricatus	'h	ह	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌
Gutturales modificatæ (palatales, &c.)
13 Tenuis	k	क	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	k
14 " aspirata	kh	ख	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	𐬕𐬌	kh
15 Media	g	ग	𐬕𐬎	𐬕𐬎	𐬕𐬎	𐬕𐬎	𐬕𐬎	𐬕𐬎
16 " aspirata	gh	घ	𐬕𐬎𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬌
17 " Nasalis	ñ	ञ	𐬕𐬎𐬍𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬍𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬍𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬍𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬍𐬌	𐬕𐬎𐬍𐬌

CONSONANTS (continued).	MISSIONARY ALPHABET.			Sanskrit.	Zend.	Pehlevi.	Persian.	Arabic.	Hebrew.	Chinese.
	I Class.	II Class.	III Class.
18 Semivocalis	y	य	𐬨𐬀 𐬨𐬀 𐬨𐬀	𐬨	𐬨	ي	י	y
19 Spiritus asper	(y)
20 " lenis	(y)
21 " asper assibilatus	s	श	𐬰𐬀	𐬰	ش	س	ש	. . .
22 " lenis assibilatus	z	z
Dentales.
23 Tenuis	t	त	𐬢𐬀	𐬢	ت	ت	ת	t
24 " aspirata	th	थ	𐬢𐬀	𐬢	ت	ت	ת	th
25 " assibilata	TH
26 Media	d	द	𐬢𐬀	𐬢	د	د
27 " aspirata	dh
28 " assibilata	DH
29 Nasalis	n	न	𐬢𐬀	𐬢	ن	ن	נ	n
30 Semivocalis	l	l
31 " mollis 1	l
32 " mollis 2	L
33 Spiritus asper 1	s	स	𐬢𐬀	𐬢𐬀	س	س	ס	s
34 " asper 2	s
35 " lenis	z
36 " asperimus 1	z (z)	z
37 " asperimus 2	z (z)	z, zh

Dentales modificatae
(linguales, &c.)

38 Tenuis	t
39 " aspirata	th
40 Media	d
41 " aspirata	dh
42 Nasalis	n
43 Semivocalis	r
44 " fricata	f
45 " diacritica
46 Spiritus asper	sh
47 " lenis	zh

Labiales.

48 Tenuis	p
49 " aspirata	ph
50 Media	b
51 " aspirata	bh
52 Tenuissima	p
53 Nasalis	m
54 Semivocalis	w
55 " aspirata	hw
56 Spiritus asper	f
57 " lenis	v
58 Anusvāra	m
59 Visarga	h

VOWELS.	MISSIONARY ALPHABET.			Sanskrit	Zend.	Pehlevi	Persian.	Arabic.	Hebrew.	Chinese.
	I Class.	II Class.	III Class.
1 Neutralis	0									ǎ
2 Laryngo-palatalis	ě									...
3 " labialis	ö									...
4 Gutturalis brevis	a			अ	𐬀	𐬀	𐬀	ا	א	a
5 " longa	ā	(a)		आ	𐬁	𐬁	𐬁	آ	א	ā
6 Palatalis brevis	i			इ	𐬂	𐬂	𐬂	ي	י	i
7 " longa	ī	(i)		ई	𐬃	𐬃	𐬃	יי	י	ī
8 Dentalis brevis	h			ह				ه		...
9 " longa	h			ह				ه		...
10 Lingualis brevis	ri			रि				ر		...
11 " longa	rf			रि				ر		...
12 Labialis brevis	u			उ				و		u
13 " longa	ū	(u)		ऊ				وو		ū
14 Gutturo-palatalis brevis	e			ए	𐬄	𐬄	𐬄	ه		e
15 " longa	é (ai)	(e)		ऐ	𐬅	𐬅	𐬅	ه		é
16 Diphthongus gutturo-palatalis	ai	(ai)		ऐ	𐬅	𐬅	𐬅	ه		ai
17 " " " "	ei (ēi)			ई	𐬆	𐬆	𐬆	ه		ei, éi
18 " " " "	oi (ōu)			औ	𐬇	𐬇	𐬇	ه		...
19 Gutturo-labialis brevis	o			ओ	𐬈	𐬈	𐬈	و		o
20 " longa	ô (au)	(o)		औ	𐬈	𐬈	𐬈	و		...
21 Diphthongus gutturo-labialis	au	(au)		औ	𐬈	𐬈	𐬈	و		au
22 " " " "	eu (ēu)			औ	𐬈	𐬈	𐬈	و		...
23 " " " "	ou (ōu)			औ	𐬈	𐬈	𐬈	و		...
24 Gutturalis fracta	ä			अ						...
25 Palatalis fracta	ï			इ						...
26 Labialis fracta	ü			उ						...
27 Gutturo-labialis fracta	ö			ऊ						...

August, 1881.

Clarendon Press, Oxford.

BOOKS

PUBLISHED FOR THE UNIVERSITY BY

HENRY FROWDE,

AT THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS WAREHOUSE,

7 PATERNOSTER ROW, LONDON.

ALSO TO BE HAD AT THE CLARENDON PRESS DEPOSITORY, OXFORD.

LEXICONS, GRAMMARS, &c.

(See also Clarendon Press Series pp. 24, 26.)

A Greek-English Lexicon, by Henry George Liddell, D.D., and Robert Scott, D.D. Sixth Edition, Revised and Augmented. 1870. 4to. cloth, 1l. 16s.

A copious Greek-English Vocabulary, compiled from the best authorities. 1850. 24mo. bound, 3s.

A Practical Introduction to Greek Accentuation, by H. W. Chandler, M.A. 1862. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

Etymologicon Magnum. Ad Codd. MSS. recensuit et notis variorum instruxit Thomas Gaisford, S.T.P. 1848. fol. cloth, 1l. 12s.

Suidae Lexicon. Ad Codd. MSS. recensuit Thomas Gaisford, S.T.P. Tomi III. 1834. fol. cloth, 2l. 2s.

Scheller's Lexicon of the Latin Tongue, with the German explanations translated into English by J. E. Riddle, M.A. 1835. fol. cloth, 1l. 1s.

A Latin Dictionary, founded on Andrews' edition of Freund's Latin Dictionary, revised, enlarged, and in great part rewritten by Charlton T. Lewis, Ph.D., and Charles Short, LL.D., Professor of Latin in Columbia College, New York. 1879. 4to. cloth, 1l. 11s. 6d.

Scriptores Rei Metricae. Edidit Thomas Gaisford, S.T.P. Tomi III. 8vo. cloth, 15s.

Sold separately:

Hephaestion, Terentianus Maurus, Proclus, cum annotationibus, etc. Tomi II. 10s. Scriptores Latini. 5s.

[2]

B

- The Book of Hebrew Roots, by Abu 'L-Walīd Marwān ibn Janāh, otherwise called Rabbi Yōnāh. Now first edited, with an Appendix, by Ad. Neubauer. 1875. 4to. cloth, 2l. 7s. 6d.
- A Treatise on the use of the Tenses in Hebrew. By S. R. Driver, M.A. Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.
- Thesaurus Syriacus : collegerunt Quatremère, Bernstein, Lorsch, Arnoldi, Field : edidit R. Payne Smith, S.T.P.R.
Fasc. I-V. 1868-79. sm. fol. each, 1l. 1s.
Vol. I, containing Fasc. I-V. sm. fol. cloth, 5l. 5s.
- A Practical Grammar of the Sanskrit Language, arranged with reference to the Classical Languages of Europe, for the use of English Students, by Monier Williams, M.A., Boden Professor of Sanskrit. Fourth Edition, 1877. 8vo. cloth, 15s.
- A Sanskrit-English Dictionary, Etymologically and Philologically arranged, with special reference to Greek, Latin, German, Anglo-Saxon, English, and other cognate Indo-European Languages. By Monier Williams, M.A., Boden Professor of Sanskrit. 1872. 4to. cloth, 4l. 14s. 6d.
- Nalopākhyānam. Story of Nala, an Episode of the Mahā-Bhārata : the Sanskrit text, with a copious Vocabulary, and an improved version of Dean Milman's Translation, by Monier Williams, M.A. Second Edition, Revised and Improved. 1879. 8vo. cloth, 15s.
- Sakuntalā. A Sanskrit Drama, in seven Acts. Edited by Monier Williams, M.A. Second Edition, 1876. 8vo. cloth, 21s.
- An Anglo-Saxon Dictionary, by the late Joseph Bosworth, D.D., Professor of Anglo-Saxon, Oxford. New edition. In the Press.
- An Icelandic-English Dictionary, based on the MS. collections of the late Richard Cleasby. Enlarged and completed by G. Vigfússon. With an Introduction, and Life of Richard Cleasby, by G. Webbe Dasent, D.C.L. 1874. 4to. cloth, 3l. 7s.
- A List of English Words the Etymology of which is illustrated by comparison with Icelandic. Prepared in the form of an APPENDIX to the above. By W. W. Skeat, M.A., stitched, 2s.
- A Handbook of the Chinese Language. Parts I and II, Grammar and Chrestomathy. By James Summers. 1863. 8vo. half bound, 1l. 8s.
- Cornish Drama (The Ancient). Edited and translated by E. Norris, Esq., with a Sketch of Cornish Grammar, an Ancient Cornish Vocabulary, etc. 2 vols. 1859. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 1s.
The Sketch of Cornish Grammar separately, stitched, 2s. 6d.
- An Etymological Dictionary of the English Language, arranged on an Historical Basis. By W. W. Skeat, M.A., Elrington and Bosworth Professor of Anglo-Saxon in the University of Cambridge, To be completed in Four Parts. Parts I-III, 4to. 10s. 6d. each.
Part IV. In the Press.

GREEK CLASSICS, &c.

Aeschyli quae supersunt in Codice Laurentiano quoad effici potuit et ad cognitionem necesse est visum typis descripta edidit R. Merkel. 1861. Small folio, cloth, 1l. 1s.

Aeschylus: Tragoediae et Fragmenta, ex recensione Guil. Dindorfii. Second Edition, 1851. 8vo. cloth, 5s. 6d.

Aeschylus: Annotationes Guil. Dindorfii. Partes II. 1841. 8vo. cloth, 10s.

Aeschylus: Scholia Graeca, ex Codicibus aucta et emendata a Guil. Dindorfio. 1851. 8vo. cloth, 5s.

Sophocles: Tragoediae et Fragmenta, ex recensione et cum commentariis Guil. Dindorfii. Third Edition, 2 vols. 1860. fcap. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 1s.

Each Play separately, limp, 2s. 6d.

The Text alone, printed on writing paper, with large margin, royal 16mo. cloth, 8s.

The Text alone, square 16mo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

Each Play separately, limp, 6d. (See also pp. 28, 29.)

Sophocles: Tragoediae et Fragmenta cum Annotatt. Guil. Dindorfii. Tomi II. 1849. 8vo. cloth, 10s.

The Text, Vol. I. 5s. 6d. The Notes, Vol. II. 4s. 6d.

Sophocles: Scholia Graeca:

Vol. I. ed. P. Elmsley, A.M. 1825. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

Vol. II. ed. Guil. Dindorfius. 1852. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

Euripides: Tragoediae et Fragmenta, ex recensione Guil. Dindorfii. Tomi II. 1834. 8vo. cloth, 10s.

Euripides: Annotationes Guil. Dindorfii. Partes II. 1840. 8vo. cloth, 10s.

Euripides: Scholia Graeca, ex Codicibus aucta et emendata a Guil. Dindorfio. Tomi IV. 1863. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 16s.

Euripides: Alcestis, ex recensione Guil. Dindorfii. 1834. 8vo. sewed, 2s. 6d.

Aristophanes: Comoediae et Fragmenta, ex recensione Guil. Dindorfii. Tomi II. 1835. 8vo. cloth, 11s. (See page 27.)

Aristophanes: Annotationes Guil. Dindorfii. Partes II. 1837. 8vo. cloth, 11s.

Aristophanes: Scholia Graeca, ex Codicibus aucta et emendata a Guil. Dindorfio. Partes III. 1839. 8vo. cloth, 1l.

Aristophanem, Index in: J. Caravellae. 1822. 8vo. cloth, 3s.

Metra Aeschyli Sophoclis Euripidis et Aristophanis. Descripta a Guil. Dindorfio. Accedit Chronologia Scenica. 1842. 8vo. cloth, 5s.

- Anecdota Graeca Oxoniensia. Edidit J. A. Cramer, S.T.P.
Tomi IV. 1835. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 2s.
- Anecdota Graeca e Codd. MSS. Bibliothecae Regiae Parisiensis. Edidit J. A. Cramer, S.T.P. Tomi IV. 1839. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 2s.
- Apsinis et Longini Rhetorica. E Codicibus MSS. recensuit Joh. Bakius. 1849. 8vo. cloth, 3s.
- Aristoteles; ex recensione Immanuelis Bekkeri. Accedunt Indices Sylburgiani. Tomi XI. 1837. 8vo. cloth, 2l. 10s.
The volumes (except vol. IX.) may be had separately, price 5s. 6d. each.
- Aristotelis Ethica Nicomachea, ex recensione Immanuelis Bekkeri. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.
- Choerobosci Dictata in Theodosii Canones, necnon Epimerismi in Psalmos. E Codicibus MSS. edidit Thomas Gaisford, S.T.P. Tomi III. 1842. 8vo. cloth, 15s.
- Demosthenes: ex recensione Guil. Dindorfii. Tomi I. II. III. IV. 1846. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 1s.
- Demosthenes: Tomi V. VI. VII. Annotationes Interpretum. 1849. 8vo. cloth, 15s.
- Demosthenes: Tomi VIII. IX. Scholia. 1851. 8vo. cloth, 10s.
- Harpocrationis Lexicon, ex recensione G. Dindorfii. Tomi II. 1854. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.
- Heracliti Ephesii Reliquiae. Recensuit I. Bywater, M.A. Appendicis loco additae sunt Diogenis Laertii Vita Heracliti, Particulae Hippocratei De Diaeta Libri Primi, Epistolae Heracliteae. 1877. 8vo. cloth, price 6s.
- Herculanensium Voluminum Partes II. 1824. 8vo. cloth, 10s.
- Homerus: Ilias, cum brevi Annotatione C. G. Heynii. Accedunt Scholia minora. Tomi II. 1834. 8vo. cloth, 15s.
- Homerus: Ilias, ex rec. Guil. Dindorfii. 1856. 8vo. cloth, 5s. 6d.
- Homerus: Scholia Graeca in Iliadem. Edited by Prof. W. Dindorf, after a new collation of the Venetian MSS. by D. B. Monro, M.A., Fellow of Oriel College.
Vols. I. II. 1875. 8vo. cloth, 24s. Vols. III. IV. 1877. 8vo. cloth, 26s.
- Homerus: Odyssea, ex rec. Guil. Dindorfii. 1855. 8vo. cloth, 5s. 6d.
- Homerus: Scholia Graeca in Odysseam. Edidit Guil. Dindorfius. Tomi II. 1855. 8vo. cloth, 15s. 6d.
- Homerum, Index in: Seberi. 1780. 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6d.
- Homer: A Complete Concordance to the Odyssey and Hymns of Homer; to which is added a Concordance to the Parallel Passages in the Iliad, Odyssey, and Hymns. By Henry Dunbar, M.D., Member of the General Council, University of Edinburgh. 1880. 4to. cloth, 1l. 1s.

Oratores Attici ex recensione Bekkeri:

- I. Antiphon, Andocides, et Lysias. 1822. 8vo. cloth, 7s.
- II. Isocrates. 1822. 8vo. cloth, 7s.
- III. Isaeus, Aeschines, Lysurgus, Dinarchus, etc. 1823. 8vo. cloth, 7s.

Scholia Graeca in Aeschinem et Isocratem. Edidit G. Dindorfius. 1852. 8vo. cloth, 4s.

Paroemiographi Graeci, quorum pars nunc primum ex Codd. MSS. vulgatur. Edidit T. Gaisford, S.T.P. 1836. 8vo. cloth, 5s. 6d.

Plato: The Apology, with a revised Text and English Notes, and a Digest of Platonic Idioms, by James Riddell, M.A. 1878. 8vo. cloth, 8s. 6d.

Plato: Philebus, with a revised Text and English Notes, by Edward Poste, M.A. 1860. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

Plato: Sophistes and Politicus, with a revised Text and English Notes, by L. Campbell, M.A. 1866. 8vo. cloth, 18s.

Plato: Theaetetus, with a revised Text and English Notes, by L. Campbell, M.A. 1861. 8vo. cloth, 9s.

Plato: The Dialogues, translated into English, with Analyses and Introductions, by B. Jowett, M.A., Regius Professor of Greek. A new Edition in 5 volumes, medium 8vo. 1875. cloth, 3l. 10s.

Plato: The Republic, translated into English, with an Analysis and Introduction, by B. Jowett, M.A. Medium 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

Plato: Index to. Compiled for the Second Edition of Professor Jowett's Translation of the Dialogues. By Evelyn Abbott, M.A. 1875. 8vo. paper covers, 2s. 6d.

Plotinus. Edidit F. Creuzer. Tomi III. 1835. 4to. 1l. 8s.

Stobaei Florilegium. Ad MSS. fidem emendavit et supplevit T. Gaisford, S.T.P. Tomi IV. 1822. 8vo. cloth, 1l.

Stobaei Eclogarum Physicarum et Ethicarum libri duo. Accedit Hieroclis Commentarius in aurea carmina Pythagoreorum. Ad MSS. Codd. recensuit T. Gaisford, S.T.P. Tomi II. 1850. 8vo. cloth, 11s.

Thucydides: Translated into English, with Introduction, Marginal Analysis, Notes, and Indices. By B. Jowett, M.A., Regius Professor of Greek. 2 vols. 1881. Medium 8vo. cloth, 1l. 12s.

Xenophon: Historia Graeca, ex recensione et cum annotationibus L. Dindorfii. Second Edition, 1852. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

Xenophon: Expeditio Cyri, ex rec. et cum annotatt. L. Dindorfii. Second Edition, 1855. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

Xenophon: Institutio Cyri, ex rec. et cum annotatt. L. Dindorfii. 1857. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

Xenophon: Memorabilia Socratis, ex rec. et cum annotatt. L. Dindorfii. 1862. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

Xenophon: Opuscula Politica Equestria et Venatica cum Arriani Libello de Venatione, ex rec. et cum annotatt. L. Dindorfii. 1866. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

THE HOLY SCRIPTURES, &c.

The Holy Bible in the earliest English Versions, made from the Latin Vulgate by John Wycliffe and his followers: edited by the Rev. J. Forshall and Sir F. Madden. 4 vols. 1850. royal 4to. cloth, 3l. 3s. Also reprinted from the above, with Introduction and Glossary by W. W. Skeat, M.A.,

The New Testament in English, according to the Version by John Wycliffe, about A.D. 1380, and Revised by John Purvey, about A.D. 1388. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The Books of Job, Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and the Song of Solomon: according to the Wycliffite Version made by Nicholas de Hereford, about A.D. 1381, and Revised by John Purvey, about A.D. 1388. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The Holy Bible: an exact reprint, page for page, of the Authorized Version published in the year 1611. Demy 4to. half bound, 1l. 1s.

Vetus Testamentum Graece cum Variis Lectionibus. Editionem a R. Holmes, S.T.P. inchoatam continuavit J. Parsons, S.T.B. Tomi V. 1798-1827. folio, 7l.

Vetus Testamentum ex Versione Septuaginta Interpretum secundum exemplar Vaticanum Romae editum. Accedit potior varietas Codicis Alexandrini. Tomi III. Editio Altera. 18mo. cloth, 18s.

Origenis Hexaplorum quae supersunt; sive, Veterum Interpretum Graecorum in totum Vetus Testamentum Fragmenta. Edidit Fridericus Field, A.M. 2 vols. 1867-1874. 4to. cloth, 5l. 5s.

Libri Psalmorum Versio antiqua Latina, cum Paraphrasi Anglo-Saxonica. Edidit B. Thorpe, F.A.S. 1835. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

Libri Psalmorum Versio antiqua Gallica e Cod. MS. in Bibl. Bodleianâ adservato, una cum Versione Metrica aliisque Monumentis pervetustis. Nunc primum descripsit et edidit Franciscus Michel, Phil. Doct. 1860. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

The Psalms in Hebrew without points. 1879. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

Libri Prophetarum Majorum, cum Lamentationibus Jeremiae, in Dialecto Linguae Aegyptiacae Memphisitica seu Coptica. Edidit cum Versione Latina H. Tattam, S.T.P. Tomi II. 1852. 8vo. cloth, 17s.

Libri duodecim Prophetarum Minorum in Ling. Aegypt. vulgo Coptica. Edidit H. Tattam, A.M. 1836. 8vo. cloth, 8s. 6d.

Novum Testamentum Graece. Antiquissimorum Codicum Textus in ordine parallelo dispositi. Accedit collatio Codicis Sinaitici. Edidit E. H. Hansell, S.T.B. Tomi III. 1864. 8vo. half morocco, 2l. 12s. 6d.

Novum Testamentum Graece. Accedunt parallela S. Scripturae loca, necnon vetus capitulorum notatio et canones Eusebii. Edidit Carolus Lloyd, S.T.P.R., necnon Episcopus Oxoniensis. 18mo. cloth, 3s.

The same on writing paper, with large margin, cloth, 10s. 6d.

Novum Testamentum Graece juxta Exemplar Millianum. 18mo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

The same on writing paper, with large margin, cloth, 9s.

Evangelia Sacra Graece. fcap. 8vo. limp, 1s. 6d.

The Greek Testament, with the Readings adopted by the Revisers of the Authorised Version:—

(1) Pica type. Demy 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

(2) Long Primer type. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

(3) The same, on writing paper, with wide margin, cloth, 10s. 6d.

The New Testament in Greek and English. Edited by E. Cardwell, D.D. 2 vols. 1837. crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

Novum Testamentum Coptice, cura D. Wilkins. 1716. 4to. cloth, 12s. 6d.

Evangeliorum Versio Gothica, cum Interpr. et Annot. E. Benzeli. Edidit, et Gram. Goth. praemisit, E. Lye, A.M. 1759. 4to. cloth, 12s. 6d.

Diatessaron; sive Historia Jesu Christi ex ipsis Evangelistarum verbis apte dispositis confecta. Ed. J. White. 1856. 12mo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

Canon Muratorianus: the earliest Catalogue of the Books of the New Testament. Edited with Notes and a Facsimile of the MS. in the Ambrosian Library at Milan, by S.P. Tregelles, LL.D. 1868. 4to. cloth, 10s. 6d.

The Book of Wisdom: the Greek Text revised, the Latin Vulgate, and the Authorised English Version; with Prolegomena, Critical Apparatus, and a Commentary. By William J. Deane, M.A., Oriel College, Oxford, Rector of Ashen, Essex. Nearly ready.

The Five Books of Maccabees, in English, with Notes and Illustrations by Henry Cotton, D.C.L. 1833. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

Horae Hebraicae et Talmudicae, a J. Lightfoot. A new Edition, by R. Gandell, M.A. 4 vols. 1859. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 1s.

FATHERS OF THE CHURCH, &c.

Liturgies, Eastern and Western. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, and a Liturgical Glossary, by C. E. Hammond, M.A. 1878. Crown 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

An Appendix to the above. 1879. Crown 8vo. paper covers, 1s. 6d.

St. Athanasius: Orations against the Arians. With an Account of his Life by William Bright, D.D. 1873. Crown 8vo. cloth, 9s.

- St. Athanasius: Historical Writings, according to the Benedictine Text. With an Introduction by William Bright, D.D., Regius Professor of Ecclesiastical History, Oxford. 1881. Crown 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.
- St. Augustine: Select Anti-Pelagian Treatises, and the Acts of the Second Council of Orange. With an Introduction by William Bright, D.D. Crown 8vo. cloth, 9s.
- The Canons of the First Four General Councils of Nicaea, Constantinople, Ephesus, and Chalcedon. 1877. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.
- Catenae Graecorum Patrum in Novum Testamentum. Edidit J. A. Cramer, S.T.P. Tomi VIII. 1838-1844. 8vo. cloth, 2l. 4s.
- Clementis Alexandrini Opera, ex recensione Guil. Dindorfii. Tomi IV. 1869. 8vo. cloth, 3l.
- Cyrilli Archiepiscopi Alexandrini in XII Prophetas. Edidit P. E. Pusey, A.M. Tomi II. 1868. 8vo. cloth, 2l. 2s.
- Cyrilli Archiepiscopi Alexandrini in D. Joannis Evangelium. Accedunt Fragmenta Varia necnon Tractatus ad Tiberium Diaconum Duo. Edidit post Aubertum P. E. Pusey, A.M. Tomi III. 1872. 8vo. 2l. 5s.
- Cyrilli Archiepiscopi Alexandrini Commentarii in Lucae Evangelium quae supersunt Syriace. E MSS. apud Mus. Britan. edidit R. Payne Smith, A.M. 1858. 4to. cloth, 1l. 2s.
- The same, translated by R. Payne Smith, M.A. 2 vols. 1859. 8vo. cloth, 14s.
- Ephraemi Syri, Rabulae Episcopi Edesseni, Balaei, aliorumque Opera Selecta. E Codd. Syriacis MSS. in Museo Britannico et Bibliotheca Bodleiana asservatis primus edidit J. J. Overbeck. 1865. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 1s.
- Eusebii Pamphili Evangelicae Praeparationis Libri XV. Ad Codd. MSS. recensuit T. Gaisford, S.T.P. Tomi IV. 1843. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 10s.
- Eusebii Pamphili Evangelicae Demonstrationis Libri X. Recensuit T. Gaisford, S.T.P. Tomi II. 1852. 8vo. cloth, 15s.
- Eusebii Pamphili contra Hieroclem et Marcellum Libri. Recensuit T. Gaisford, S.T.P. 1852. 8vo. cloth, 7s.
- Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History, according to the text of Burton, with an Introduction by William Bright, D.D. 1872. Crown 8vo. cloth, 8s. 6d.
- Eusebii Pamphili Hist. Eccl.: Annotationes Variorum. Tomi II. 1842. 8vo. cloth, 17s.
- Evagrii Historia Ecclesiastica, ex recensione H. Valesii. 1844. 8vo. cloth, 4s.
- Irenaeus: The Third Book of St. Irenaeus, Bishop of Lyons, against Heresies. With short Notes and a Glossary by H. Deane, B.D., Fellow of St. John's College, Oxford. 1874. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s. 6d.

- Origenis Philosophumena; sive omnium Haeresium Refutatio, E Codice Parisino nunc primum edidit Emmanuel Miller. 1851. 8vo. cloth, 10s.
- Patrum Apostolicorum, S. Clementis Romani, S. Ignatii, S. Polycarpi, quae supersunt. Edidit Guil. Jacobson, S.T.P.R. Tomi II. Fourth Edition, 1863. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 1s.
- Reliquiae Sacrae secundi tertiiqae saeculi. Recensuit M. J. Routh, S.T.P. Tomi V. Second Edition, 1846-1848. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 5s.
- Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum Opuscula. Recensuit M. J. Routh, S.T.P. Tomi II. Third Edition, 1858. 8vo. cloth, 10s.
- Socratis Scholastici Historia Ecclesiastica. Gr. et Lat. Edidit R. Hussey, S.T.B. Tomi III. 1853. 8vo. cloth, 15s.
- Socrates' Ecclesiastical History, according to the Text of Hussey, with an Introduction by William Bright, D.D. 1878. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.
- Sozomeni Historia Ecclesiastica. Edidit R. Hussey, S.T.B. Tomi III. 1859. 8vo. cloth, 15s.
- Theodoretī Ecclesiasticae Historiae Libri V. Recensuit T. Gaisford, S.T.P. 1854. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.
- Theodoretī Graecarum Affectionum Curatio. Ad Codices MSS. recensuit T. Gaisford, S.T.P. 1839. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.
- Dowling (J. G.) Notitia Scriptorum SS. Patrum aliorumque vet. Eccles. Mon. quae in Collectionibus Anecdotorum post annum Christi MDCC. in lucem editis continentur. 1839. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY, BIOGRAPHY, &c.

- Baedae Historia Ecclesiastica. Edited, with English Notes, by G. H. Moberly, M.A. 1869. crown 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.
- Bingham's Antiquities of the Christian Church, and other Works. 10 vols. 1855. 8vo. cloth, 3l. 3s.
- Bright (W., D.D.). Chapters of Early English Church History. 1878. 8vo. cloth, 12s.
- Burnet's History of the Reformation of the Church of England. A new Edition. Carefully revised, and the Records collated with the originals, by N. Pocock, M.A. 7 vols. 1865. 8vo. 4l. 4s.
- Burnet's Life of Sir M. Hale, and Fell's Life of Dr. Hammond. 1856. small 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.
- Cardwell's Two Books of Common Prayer, set forth by authority in the Reign of King Edward VI, compared with each other. Third Edition, 1852. 8vo. cloth, 7s.
- Cardwell's Documentary Annals of the Reformed Church of England; being a Collection of Injunctions, Declarations, Orders, Articles of Inquiry, &c. from 1546 to 1716. 2 vols. 1843. 8vo. cloth, 18s.

- Cardwell's History of Conferences on the Book of Common Prayer from 1551 to 1690. Third Edition, 1849. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.
- Councils and Ecclesiastical Documents relating to Great Britain and Ireland. Edited, after Spelman and Wilkins, by A. W. Haddan, B.D., and W. Stubbs, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, Oxford. Vols. I. and III. 1869-71. Medium 8vo. cloth, each 1l. 1s.
- Vol. II. Part I. 1873. Medium 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.
- Vol. II. Part II. 1878. Church of Ireland; Memorials of St. Patrick. stiff covers, 3s. 6d.
- Formularies of Faith set forth by the King's Authority during the Reign of Henry VIII. 1856. 8vo. cloth, 7s.
- Fuller's Church History of Britain. Edited by J. S. Brewer, M.A. 6 vols. 1845. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 19s.
- Gibson's Synodus Anglicana. Edited by E. Cardwell, D.D. 1854. 8vo. cloth, 6s.
- Hussey's Rise of the Papal Power traced in three Lectures. Second Edition, 1863. fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.
- Inett's Origines Anglicanae (in continuation of Stillingfleet). Edited by J. Griffiths, M.A. 3 vols. 1855. 8vo. cloth, 15s.
- John, Bishop of Ephesus. The Third Part of his Ecclesiastical History. [In Syriac.] Now first edited by William Cureton, M.A. 1853. 4to. cloth, 1l. 12s.
- The same, translated by R. Payne Smith, M.A. 1860. 8vo. cloth, 10s.
- Knight's Life of Dean Colet. 1823. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.
- Le Neve's Fasti Ecclesiae Anglicanae. Corrected and continued from 1715 to 1853 by T. Duffus Hardy. 3 vols. 1854. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 1s.
- The Liturgy and Ritual of the Celtic Church. By F. E. Warren, B.D., Fellow of St. John's College, Oxford. 8vo. cloth, 14s.
- Missale Vetus Anglo-Saxonicum: the Liturgy of the Anglo-Saxon Church. By the same Editor. In Preparation.
- Noelli (A.) Catechismus sive prima institutio disciplinae Pietatis Christianae Latine explicata. Editio nova cura Guil. Jacobson, A.M. 1844. 8vo. cloth, 5s. 6d.
- Prideaux's Connection of Sacred and Profane History. 2 vols. 1851. 8vo. cloth, 10s.
- Primers put forth in the Reign of Henry VIII. 1848. 8vo. cloth, 5s.
- Records of the Reformation. The Divorce, 1527—1533. Mostly now for the first time printed from MSS. in the British Museum and other Libraries. Collected and arranged by N. Pocock, M.A. 1870. 2 vols. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 16s.

Reformatio Legum Ecclesiasticarum. The Reformation of Ecclesiastical Laws, as attempted in the reigns of Henry VIII, Edward VI, and Elizabeth. Edited by E. Cardwell, D.D. 1850. 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6d.

Shirley's (W. W.) Some Account of the Church in the Apostolic Age. Second Edition, 1874. fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

Shuckford's Sacred and Profane History connected (in continuation of Prideaux). 2 vols. 1848. 8vo. cloth, 10s.

Stillingfleet's Origines Britannicae, with Lloyd's Historical Account of Church Government. Edited by T. P. Pautin, M.A. 2 vols. 1842. 8vo. cloth, 10s.

Stubbs (W.). Registrum Sacrum Anglicanum. An attempt to exhibit the course of Episcopal Succession in England. 1858. small 4to. cloth, 8s. 6d.

Strype's Works Complete, with a General Index. 27 vols. 1821-1843. 8vo. cloth, 7l. 13s. 6d. Sold separately as follows:—

Memorials of Cranmer. 2 vols. 1840. 8vo. cloth, 11s.

Life of Parker. 3 vols. 1828. 8vo. cloth, 16s. 6d.

Life of Grindal. 1821. 8vo. cloth, 5s. 6d.

Life of Whitgift. 3 vols. 1822. 8vo. cloth, 16s. 6d.

Life of Aylmer. 1820. 8vo. cloth, 5s. 6d.

Life of Cheke. 1821. 8vo. cloth, 5s. 6d.

Life of Smith. 1820. 8vo. cloth, 5s. 6d.

Ecclesiastical Memorials. 6 vols. 1822. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 13s.

Annals of the Reformation. 7 vols. 8vo. cloth, 2l. 3s. 6d.

General Index. 2 vols. 1828. 8vo. cloth, 11s.

Sylloge Confessionum sub tempus Reformandae Ecclesiae editarum. Subjiciuntur Catechismus Heidelbergensis et Canones Synodi Dordrechtanae. 1827. 8vo. cloth, 8s.

ENGLISH THEOLOGY.

Beveridge's Discourse upon the XXXIX Articles. The third complete Edition, 1847. 8vo. cloth, 8s.

Bilson on the Perpetual Government of Christ's Church, with a Biographical Notice by R. Eden, M.A. 1842. 8vo. cloth, 4s.

Biscoe's Boyle Lectures on the Acts of the Apostles. 1840. 8vo. cloth, 9s. 6d.

Bull's Works, with Nelson's Life. Edited by E. Burton, D.D. A new Edition, 1846. 8 vols. 8vo. cloth, 2l. 9s.

Burnet's Exposition of the XXXIX Articles. 1845. 8vo. cloth, 7s.

Burton's (Edward) Testimonies of the Ante-Nicene Fathers to the Divinity of Christ. Second Edition, 1829. 8vo. cloth, 7s.

Burton's (Edward) Testimonies of the Ante-Nicene Fathers to the Doctrine of the Trinity and of the Divinity of the Holy Ghost. 1831. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

Butler's Works, with an Index to the Analogy. 2 vols. 1874. 8vo. cloth, 11s.

Butler's Sermons. 8vo. cloth, 5s. 6d.

Butler's Analogy of Religion. 8vo. cloth, 5s. 6d.

Chandler's Critical History of the Life of David. 1853. 8vo. cloth, 8s. 6d.

Chillingworth's Works. 3 vols. 1838. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 1s. 6d.

Clergyman's Instructor. Sixth Edition, 1855. 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6d.

Comber's Companion to the Temple; or a Help to Devotion in the use of the Common Prayer. 7 vols. 1841. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 11s. 6d.

Cranmer's Works. Collected and arranged by H. Jenkyns, M.A., Fellow of Oriel College. 4 vols. 1834. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 10s.

Enchiridion Theologicum Anti-Romanum.

Vol. I. Jeremy Taylor's Dissuasive from Popery, and Treatise on the Real Presence. 1852. 8vo. cloth, 8s.

Vol. II. Barrow on the Supremacy of the Pope, with his Discourse on the Unity of the Church. 1852. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

Vol. III. Tracts selected from Wake, Patrick, Stillingfleet, Clagett, and others. 1837. 8vo. cloth, 11s.

[Fell's] Paraphrase and Annotations on the Epistles of St. Paul. 1852. 8vo. cloth, 7s.

Greswell's Harmonia Evangelica. Fifth Edition, 1856. 8vo. cloth, 9s. 6d.

Greswell's Prolegomena ad Harmoniam Evangelicam. 1840. 8vo. cloth, 9s. 6d.

Greswell's Dissertations on the Principles and Arrangement of a Harmony of the Gospels. 5 vols. 1837. 8vo. cloth, 3l. 3s.

Hall's (Bp.) Works. A new Edition, by Philip Wynter, D.D. 10 vols. 1863. 8vo. cloth, 3l. 3s.

Hammond's Paraphrase and Annotations on the New Testament. 4 vols. 1845. 8vo. cloth, 1l.

Hammond's Paraphrase on the Book of Psalms. 2 vols. 1850. 8vo. cloth, 10s.

Heurtley's Collection of Creeds. 1858. 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6d.

Homilies appointed to be read in Churches. Edited by J. Griffiths, M.A. 1859. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

- Hooker's Works, with his Life by Walton, arranged by John Keble, M.A. Sixth Edition, 1874. 3 vols. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 11s. 6d.
- Hooker's Works; the text as arranged by John Keble, M.A. 2 vols. 1875. 8vo. cloth, 11s.
- Hooper's (Bp. George) Works. 2 vols. 1855. 8vo. cloth, 8s.
- Jackson's (Dr. Thomas) Works. 12 vols. 1844. 8vo. cloth, 3l. 6s.
- Jewel's Works. Edited by R. W. Jelf, D.D. 8 vols. 1847. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 10s.
- Patrick's Theological Works. 9 vols. 1859. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 11s.
- Pearson's Exposition of the Creed. Revised and corrected by E. Burton, D.D. Sixth Edition, 1877. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.
- Pearson's Minor Theological Works. Now first collected, with a Memoir of the Author, Notes, and Index, by Edward Churton, M.A. 2 vols. 1844. 8vo. cloth, 10s.
- Sanderson's Works. Edited by W. Jacobson, D.D. 6 vols. 1854. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 10s.
- Stanhope's Paraphrase and Comment upon the Epistles and Gospels. A new Edition. 2 vols. 1851. 8vo. cloth, 10s.
- Stillingfleet's Origines Sacrae. 2 vols. 1837. 8vo. cloth, 9s.
- Stillingfleet's Rational Account of the Grounds of Protestant Religion; being a vindication of Abp. Laud's Relation of a Conference, &c. 2 vols. 1844. 8vo. cloth, 10s.
- Wall's History of Infant Baptism, with Gale's Reflections, and Wall's Defence. A new Edition, by Henry Cotton, D.C.L. 2 vols. 1862. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 1s.
- Waterland's Works, with Life, by Bp. Van Mildert. A new Edition, with copious Indexes. 6 vols. 1857. 8vo. cloth, 2l. 11s.
- Waterland's Review of the Doctrine of the Eucharist, with a Preface by the present Bishop of London. 1880. crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6d.
- Wheatly's Illustration of the Book of Common Prayer. A new Edition, 1846. 8vo. cloth, 5s.
- Wyclif. A Catalogue of the Original Works of John Wyclif, by W. W. Shirley, D.D. 1865. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.
- Wyclif. Select English Works. By T. Arnold, M.A. 3 vols. 1871. 8vo. cloth, 2l. 2s.
- Wyclif. Trialogus. With the Supplement now first edited. By Gotthard Lechler. 1869. 8vo. cloth, 14s.

ENGLISH HISTORICAL AND DOCUMENTARY WORKS.

- British Barrows, a Record of the Examination of Sepulchral Mounds in various parts of England. By William Greenwell, M.A., F.S.A. Together with Description of Figures of Skulls, General Remarks on Prehistoric Crania, and an Appendix by George Rolleston, M.D., F.R.S. 1877. Medium 8vo. cloth, 25s.
- Two of the Saxon Chronicles parallel, with Supplementary Extracts from the Others. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, and a Glossarial Index, by J. Earle, M.A. 1865. 8vo. cloth, 16s.
- Magna Carta, a careful Reprint. Edited by W. Stubbs, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History. 1879. 4to. stitched, 1s.
- Britton, a Treatise upon the Common Law of England, composed by order of King Edward I. The French Text carefully revised, with an English Translation, Introduction, and Notes, by F. M. Nichols, M.A. 2 vols. 1865. royal 8vo. cloth, 1l. 16s.
- Burnet's History of His Own Time, with the suppressed Passages and Notes. 6 vols. 1833. 8vo. cloth, 2l. 10s.
- Burnet's History of James II, with additional Notes. 1852. 8vo. cloth, 9s. 6d.
- Carte's Life of James Duke of Ormond. A new Edition, carefully compared with the original MSS. 6 vols. 1851. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 5s.
- Clarendon's (Edw. Earl of) History of the Rebellion and Civil Wars in England. To which are subjoined the Notes of Bishop Warburton. 7 vols. 1849. medium 8vo. cloth, 2l. 10s.
- Clarendon's (Edw. Earl of) History of the Rebellion and Civil Wars in England. 7 vols. 1839. 18mo. cloth, 1l. 1s.
- Clarendon's (Edw. Earl of) History of the Rebellion and Civil Wars in England. Also His Life, written by Himself, in which is included a Continuation of his History of the Grand Rebellion. With copious Indexes. In one volume, royal 8vo. 1842. cloth, 1l. 2s.
- Clarendon's (Edw. Earl of) Life, including a Continuation of his History. 2 vols. 1857. medium 8vo. cloth, 1l. 2s.
- Clarendon's (Edw. Earl of) Life, and Continuation of his History. 3 vols. 1827. 8vo. cloth, 16s. 6d.
- Calendar of the Clarendon State Papers, preserved in the Bodleian Library. In three volumes. 1869-76.
 Vol. I. From 1523 to January 1649. 8vo. cloth, 18s.
 Vol. II. From 1649 to 1654. 8vo. cloth, 16s.
 Vol. III. From 1655 to 1657. 8vo. cloth, 14s.

Calendar of Charters and Rolls preserved in the Bodleian Library. 1878. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 11s. 6d.

Freeman's (E. A.) History of the Norman Conquest of England; its Causes and Results. In Six Volumes. 8vo. cloth, 5l. 9s. 6d.

Vols. I-II together, 3rd edition, 1877. 1l. 16s.

Vol. III, 2nd edition, 1874. 1l. 1s.

Vol. IV, 2nd edition, 1875. 1l. 1s.

Vol. V, 1876. 1l. 1s.

Vol. VI. Index. 1879. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

Gascoigne's Theological Dictionary ("Liber Veritatum"): Selected Passages, illustrating the condition of Church and State, 1403-1458. With an Introduction by James E. Thorold Rogers, M.P. Small 4to. cloth, 10s. 6d.

Lloyd's Prices of Corn in Oxford, 1583-1830. 8vo. sewed, 1s.

Luttrell's (Narcissus) Diary. A Brief Historical Relation of State Affairs, 1678-1714. 6 vols. 1857. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 4s.

May's History of the Long Parliament. 1854. 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6d.

Rogers's History of Agriculture and Prices in England, A.D. 1259-1793. Vols. I and II (1259-1400). 8vo. cloth, 2l. 2s.
Vols. III and IV in the Press.

Sprigg's England's Recovery; being the History of the Army under Sir Thomas Fairfax. 1854. 8vo. cloth, 6s.

Whitelock's Memorials of English Affairs from 1625 to 1660. 4 vols. 1853. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 10s.

Protests of the Lords, including those which have been expunged, from 1624 to 1874; with Historical Introductions. Edited by James E. Thorold Rogers, M.A. 1875. 3 vols. 8vo. cloth, 2l. 2s.

Enactments in Parliament, specially concerning the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. Collected and arranged by J. Griffiths, M.A. 1869. 8vo. cloth, 12s.

Ordinances and Statutes [for Colleges and Halls] framed or approved by the Oxford University Commissioners. 1863. 8vo. cloth, 12s.—Sold separately (except for Exeter, All Souls, Brasenose, and Corpus), at 1s. each.

Statuta Universitatis Oxoniensis. 1880. 8vo. cloth, 5s.

The Student's Handbook to the University and Colleges of Oxford. Fifth Edition. 1879. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Index to Wills proved in the Court of the Chancellor of the University of Oxford, &c. Compiled by J. Griffiths, M.A. 1862. royal 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

Catalogue of Oxford Graduates from 1659 to 1850. 1851. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

CHRONOLOGY, GEOGRAPHY, &c.

Clinton's Fasti Hellenici. The Civil and Literary Chronology of Greece, from the LVith to the CXXIIIrd Olympiad. Third edition, 1841. 4to. cloth, 1l. 14s. 6d.

Clinton's Fasti Hellenici. The Civil and Literary Chronology of Greece, from the CXXIVth Olympiad to the Death of Augustus. Second edition, 1851. 4to. cloth, 1l. 12s.

Clinton's Epitome of the Fasti Hellenici. 1851. 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6d.

Clinton's Fasti Romani. The Civil and Literary Chronology of Rome and Constantinople, from the Death of Augustus to the Death of Heraclius. 2 vols. 1845, 1850. 4to. cloth, 3l. 9s.

Clinton's Epitome of the Fasti Romani. 1854. 8vo. cloth, 7s.

Cramer's Geographical and Historical Description of Asia Minor. 2 vols. 1832. 8vo. cloth, 11s.

Cramer's Map of Asia Minor, 15s.

Cramer's Map of Ancient and Modern Italy, on two sheets, 15s.

Cramer's Description of Ancient Greece. 3 vols. 1828. 8vo. cloth, 16s. 6d.

Cramer's Map of Ancient and Modern Greece, on two sheets, 15s.

Greswell's Fasti Temporis Catholici. 1852. 4 vols. 8vo. cloth, 2l. 10s.

Greswell's Tables to Fasti, 4to., and Introduction to Tables, 8vo. 1852. cloth, 15s.

Greswell's Origines Kalendariae Italicæ. 1854. 4 vols. 8vo. cloth, 2l. 2s.

Greswell's Origines Kalendariae Hellenicæ. 6 vols. 1862. 8vo. cloth, 4l. 4s.

MATHEMATICS, PHYSICAL SCIENCE, &c.

Archimedis quae supersunt omnia cum Eutocii commentariis ex recensione Josephi Torelli, cum novâ versione Latinâ. 1792. fol. cloth, 1l. 5s.

Bradley's Miscellaneous Works and Correspondence. With an Account of Harriot's Astronomical Papers. 1832. 4to. cloth, 17s.

Reduction of Bradley's Observations by Dr. Busch. 1838. 4to. cloth, 3s.

Astronomical Observations made at the University Observatory, Oxford, under the direction of C. Pritchard, M.A., Savilian Professor of Astronomy. No. 1. 1878. Royal 8vo. paper covers, 3s. 6d.

Treatise on Infinitesimal Calculus. By Bartholomew Price, M.A., F.R.S., Professor of Natural Philosophy, Oxford.

Vol. I. Differential Calculus. Second Edition, 8vo. cloth, 14s. 6d.

Vol. II. Integral Calculus, Calculus of Variations, and Differential Equations. Second Edition, 1865. 8vo. cloth, 18s.

Vol. III. Statics, including Attractions; Dynamics of a Material Particle. Second Edition, 1868. 8vo. cloth, 16s.

Vol. IV. Dynamics of Material Systems; together with a Chapter on Theoretical Dynamics, by W. F. Donkin, M.A., F.R.S. 1862. 8vo. cloth, 16s.

Rigaud's Correspondence of Scientific Men of the 17th Century, with Table of Contents by A. de Morgan, and Index by the Rev. J. Rigaud, M.A., Fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford. 2 vols. 1841-1862. 8vo. cloth, 18s. 6d.

Daubeny's Introduction to the Atomic Theory. 1850. 16mo. cloth, 6s.

Vesuvius. By John Phillips, M.A., F.R.S., Professor of Geology, Oxford. 1869. Crown 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

Geology of Oxford and the Valley of the Thames. By the same Author. 1871. 8vo. cloth, 21s.

Synopsis of the Pathological Series in the Oxford Museum. By H. W. Acland, M.D., F.R.S., 1867. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Thesaurus Entomologicus Hopeianus, or a Description of the rarest Insects in the Collection given to the University by the Rev. William Hope. By J. O. Westwood, M.A., F.L.S. With 40 Plates. 1874. Small folio, half morocco, 7l. 10s.

Text-Book of Botany, Morphological and Physiological. By Dr. Julius Sachs, Professor of Botany in the University of Würzburg. Translated by S. H. Vines, M.A., and edited by W. T. Thiselton Dyer, M.A. Royal 8vo. Second Edition, in the Press.

Johannes Müller on Certain Variations in the Vocal Organs of the Passeres that have hitherto escaped notice. Translated by F. J. Bell, B.A., and edited with an Appendix, by A. H. Garrod, M.A., F.R.S. With Plates. 1878. 4to. paper covers, 7s. 6d.

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

- Ebert's Bibliographical Dictionary, translated from the German. 4 vols. 1837. 8vo. cloth, 11. 10s.
- Cotton's List of Editions of the Bible in English. Second Edition, corrected and enlarged. 1852. 8vo. cloth, 8s. 6d.
- Cotton's Typographical Gazetteer. 1831. 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.
- Cotton's Typographical Gazetteer, Second Series. 1866. 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.
- Cotton's Rhemes and Doway. An attempt to shew what has been done by Roman Catholics for the diffusion of the Holy Scriptures in English. 1855. 8vo. cloth, 9s.

MISCELLANEOUS.

- Bacon's Novum Organum. Edited, with English notes, by G. W. Kitchin, M.A. 1855. 8vo. cloth, 9s. 6d.
- Bacon's Novum Organum. Translated by G. W. Kitchin, M.A. 1855. 8vo. cloth, 9s. 6d. (See also p. 35.)
- The Works of George Berkeley, D.D., formerly Bishop of Cloyne; including many of his writings hitherto unpublished. With Prefaces, Annotations, and an Account of his Life and Philosophy. by Alexander Campbell Fraser, M.A. 4 vols. 1871. 8vo. cloth, 21. 18s.
- The Life, Letters, &c. 1 vol. cloth, 16s. See also p. 35.
- The Logic of Hegel; translated from the Encyclopaedia of the Philosophical Sciences. With Prolegomena by William Wallace, M.A. 1874. 8vo. cloth, 14s.
- Smith's Wealth of Nations. A new Edition, with Notes, by J. E. Thorold Rogers, M.A. 2 vols. 1880. cloth, 21s.
- A Course of Lectures on Art, delivered before the University of Oxford in Hilary Term, 1870, by John Ruskin, M.A., Slade Professor of Fine Art. 8vo. cloth, 6s.
- A Critical Account of the Drawings by Michel Angelo and Raffaello in the University Galleries, Oxford. By J. C. Robinson, F.S.A. 1870. Crown 8vo. cloth, 4s.
- Sturlunga Saga, including the Islendinga Saga of Lawman Sturla Thordsson and other works. Edited with Prolegomena, Appendices, Tables, Indices, and Maps, by Dr. Gudbrand Vigfusson. In 2 vols. 1878. 8vo. cloth, 21. 2s.
- Casauboni Ephemerides, cum praeafatione et notis J. Russell, S.T.P. Tomi III. 1850. 8vo. cloth, 15s.
- The Ormulum; with the Notes and Glossary of Dr. R. M. White. Edited by Rev. R. Holt, M.A. 1878. 2 vols. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 21s.

The Sacred Books of the East. Translated by various Oriental Scholars, and edited by F. Max Müller.

Vol. I. The Upanishads. Translated by F. Max Müller. Part I. The Khândogya-upanishad, The Talavakâra-upanishad, The Āitareya-âranyaka, The Kaushîtaki-brâhmana-upanishad, and The Vâgasaneyi-samhitâ-upanishad. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

Vol. II. The Sacred Laws of the Aryas, as taught in the Schools of Āpastamba, Gautama, Vâsishtha, and Baudhâya. Translated by Georg Bühler. Part I, Āpastamba and Gautama. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

Vol. III. The Sacred Books of China. The Texts of Confucianism. Translated by James Legge. Part I. The Shû King, The Religious portions of the Shih King, and The Hsiâo King. 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

Vol. IV. The Vendidad. Translated by James Darmesteter. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

Vol. V. The Bundahis, Bahman Yast, and Shâyast-lâ-Shâyast. Translated by E. W. West. 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

Vols. VI and IX. The Qur'ân. Parts I and II. Translated by Professor E. H. Palmer. 8vo. cloth, 21s.

Vol. VII. The Institutes of Vishnu. Translated by Professor Julius Jolly. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

Vol. X. The Dhammapada, translated by Professor F. Max Müller; and The Sutta Nipâta, translated by Professor Fausböll; being Canonical Books of the Buddhists. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

Vol. XI. The Mahâparinibbâna Sutta, The Teviggâ Sutta, The Mahâsudassana Sutta, The Dhamma-Kakkappa-vattana Sutta. Translated by T. W. Rhys Davids. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

The following Volumes are also in the Press, viz :—

Vol. VIII. The Bhagavadgitâ, Sanatsugâtiya, and Anugitâ. Translated by Kashinath Trimbak Telang.

Vol. XII. The Satapatha-Brâhmana, by Professor Eggeling.

Vol. XIII. The Pâtimokkha, by T. W. Rhys Davids. The Mahâvagga, by Dr. H. Oldenberg.

Vol. XIV. The Sacred Laws of the Âryas, as taught in the Schools of Vâsishtha and Baudhâya, by Professor Georg Bühler.

Clarendon Press Series.

The Delegates of the Clarendon Press having undertaken the publication of a series of works, chiefly educational, and entitled the Clarendon Press Series, have published, or have in preparation, the following.

Those to which prices are attached are already published; the others are in preparation.

I. ENGLISH.

A First Reading Book. By Marie Eichens of Berlin; and edited by Anne J. Clough. Extra fcap. 8vo. stiff covers, 4d.

Oxford Reading Book, Part I. For Little Children. Extra fcap. 8vo. stiff covers, 6d.

Oxford Reading Book, Part II. For Junior Classes. Extra fcap. 8vo. stiff covers, 6d.

An Elementary English Grammar and Exercise Book. By O. W. Tancock, M.A., Head Master of Norwich School. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d.

An English Grammar and Reading Book, for Lower Forms in Classical Schools. By O. W. Tancock, M.A., Head Master of Norwich School. Third Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

Typical Selections from the best English Writers, with Introductory Notices. Second Edition. In Two Volumes. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

Vol. I. Latimer to Berkeley. Vol. II. Pope to Macaulay.

The Philology of the English Tongue. By J. Earle, M.A., formerly Fellow of Oriel College, and Professor of Anglo-Saxon, Oxford. Third Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

A Book for the Beginner in Anglo-Saxon. By John Earle, M.A., Professor of Anglo-Saxon, Oxford. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

An Anglo-Saxon Reader. In Prose and Verse. With Grammatical Introduction, Notes, and Glossary. By Henry Sweet, M.A. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 8s. 6d.

Specimens of Early English. A New and Revised Edition. With Introduction, Notes, and Glossarial Index. By R. Morris, LL.D., and W. W. Skeat, M.A.

Part I. In the Press.

Part II. From Robert of Gloucester to Gower (A.D. 1298 to A.D. 1393). Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

Specimens of English Literature, from the 'Ploughmans Crede' to the 'Shepheardes Calender' (A.D. 1394 to A.D. 1579). With Introduction, Notes, and Glossarial Index. By W. W. Skeat, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

The Vision of William concerning Piers the Plowman, by William Langland. Edited, with Notes, by W. W. Skeat, M.A. Third Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

Chaucer. The Prioresses Tale; Sir Thopas; The Monkes Tale; The Clerkes Tale; The Squieres Tale, &c. Edited by W. W. Skeat, M.A. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

Chaucer. The Tale of the Man of Lawe; The Pardoner's Tale; The Second Nonnes Tale; The Chanouns Yemannes Tale. By the same Editor. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d. (See also p. 22.)

Old English Drama. Marlowe's Tragical History of Dr. Faustus, and Greene's Honourable History of Friar Bacon and Friar Bungay. Edited by A. W. Ward, M.A., Professor of History and English Literature in Owens College, Manchester. 1878. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 5s. 6d.

Marlowe. Edward II. With Introduction, Notes, &c. By O. W. Tancock, M.A., Head Master of Norwich School. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s.

Shakespeare. Hamlet. Edited by W. G. Clark, M.A., and W. Aldis Wright, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. stiff covers, 2s.

Shakespeare. Select Plays. Edited by W. Aldis Wright, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. stiff covers.

The Tempest, 1s. 6d.

King Lear, 1s. 6d.

As You Like It, 1s. 6d.

A Midsummer Night's Dream, 1s. 6d.

Julius Cæsar, 2s.

Coriolanus, 2s. 6d.

Richard the Third, 2s. 6d.

Henry the Fifth. In the Press.

(For other Plays, see p. 23.)

Milton. Areopagitica. With Introduction and Notes. By J. W. Hales, M.A., late Fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s.

Bunyan. Holy War, Life and Death of Mr. Badman, &c.
 Edited by E. Venables, M.A. In Preparation. (See also p. 23.)

Locke's Conduct of the Understanding. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, etc., by T. Fowler, M.A., Professor of Logic in the University of Oxford. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s.

Addison. Selections from Papers in the Spectator. With Notes. By T. Arnold, M.A., University College. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

Burke. Four Letters on the Proposals for Peace with the Regicide Directory of France. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by E. J. Payne, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 5s. (See also p. 23.)

Also the following in paper covers :—

Goldsmith. The Deserted Village. 2d.

Gray. Elegy, and Ode on Eton College. 2d.

Johnson. Vanity of Human Wishes. With Notes by E. J. Payne, M.A. 4d.

Keats. Hyperion, Book I. With Notes by W. T. Arnold, B.A. 4d.

Milton. With Notes by R. C. Browne, M.A.

Lycidas, 3d. L'Allegro, 3d. Il Penseroso, 4d. Comus, 6d.

Samson Agonistes, 6d.

Parnell. The Hermit. 2d.

A SERIES OF ENGLISH CLASSICS,

Designed to meet the wants of Students in English Literature, by the late Rev. J. S. BREWER, M.A., of Queen's College, Oxford, and Professor of English Literature at King's College, London.

1. Chaucer. The Prologue to the Canterbury Tales; The Knight's Tale; The Nonne Prestes Tale. Edited by R. Morris, Editor of Specimens of Early English, &c., &c. Sixth Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d. (See also p. 21.)

2. Spenser's Faery Queene. Books I and II. Designed chiefly for the use of Schools. With Introduction, Notes, and Glossary. By G. W. Kitchin, M.A.

Book I. Eighth Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Book II. Third Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

3. Hooker. Ecclesiastical Polity, Book I. Edited by R. W. Church, M.A., Dean of St. Paul's; formerly Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s.

4. Shakespeare. Select Plays. Edited by W. G. Clark, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge; and W. Aldis Wright, M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge. Extra fcap. 8vo. stiff covers.
 - I. The Merchant of Venice. 1s.
 - II. Richard the Second. 1s. 6d.
 - III. Macbeth. 1s. 6d. (For other Plays, see p. 21.)
5. Bacon.
 - I. Advancement of Learning. Edited by W. Aldis Wright, M.A. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo, cloth, 4s. 6d.
 - II. The Essays. With Introduction and Notes. By J. R. Thursfield, M.A., Fellow and formerly Tutor of Jesus College, Oxford.
6. Milton. Poems. Edited by R. C. Browne, M.A. 2 vols. Fourth Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6d.
Sold separately, Vol. I. 4s.; Vol. II. 3s. (See also p. 22.)
7. Dryden. Select Poems. Stanzas on the Death of Oliver Cromwell; Astræa Redux; Annus Mirabilis; Absalom and Achitophel; Religio Laici; The Hind and the Panther. Edited by W. D. Christie, M.A. Second Edition. Ext. fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.
8. Bunyan. The Pilgrim's Progress, Grace Abounding, Relation of the Imprisonment of Mr. John Bunyan. Edited, with Biographical Introduction and Notes, by E. Venables, M.A. 1879. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 5s.
9. Pope. With Introduction and Notes. By Mark Pattison, B.D., Rector of Lincoln College, Oxford.
 - I. Essay on Man. Sixth Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. 1s. 6d.
 - II. Satires and Epistles. Third Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. 2s.
10. Johnson. Rasselas; Lives of Pope and Dryden. Edited by Alfred Milnes, B.A. (London), late Scholar of Lincoln College, Oxford. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.
11. Burke. Select Works. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by E. J. Payne, M.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, and Fellow of University College, Oxford.
 - I. Thoughts on the Present Discontents; the two Speeches on America. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.
 - II. Reflections on the French Revolution. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 5s. (See also p. 22.)
12. Cowper. Edited, with Life, Introductions, and Notes, by H. T. Griffith, B.A., formerly Scholar of Pembroke College, Oxford.
 - I. The Didactic Poems of 1782, with Selections from the Minor Pieces, A.D. 1779-1783. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s.
 - II. The Task, with Tirocinium, and Selections from the Minor Poems, A.D. 1784-1799. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s.

II. LATIN.

An Elementary Latin Grammar. By John B. Allen, M.A., Head Master of Perse Grammar School, Cambridge. Third Edition, Revised and Corrected. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

A First Latin Exercise Book. By the same Author. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Anglice Reddenda, or Easy Extracts, Latin and Greek, for Unseen Translation. By C. S. Jerram, M.A. Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Passages for Translation into Latin. For the use of Passmen and others. Selected by J. Y. Sargent, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Magdalen College, Oxford. Fifth Edition. Ext. fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

First Latin Reader. By T. J. Nunns, M.A. Third Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s.

Second Latin Reader. In Preparation.

Caesar. The Commentaries (for Schools). With Notes and Maps. By Charles E. Moberly, M.A.

Part I. The Gallic War. Third Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

Part II. The Civil War. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The Civil War. Book I. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s.

Cicero. Selection of interesting and descriptive passages. With Notes. By Henry Walford, M.A. In three Parts. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d. Each Part separately, limp, 1s. 6d.

Part I. Anecdotes from Grecian and Roman History.

Part II. Omens and Dreams: Beauties of Nature.

Part III. Rome's Rule of her Provinces.

Cicero. Selected Letters (for Schools). With Notes. By the late C. E. Prichard, M.A., and E. R. Bernard, M.A. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s.

Cicero. Select Orations (for Schools). With Notes. By J. R. King, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Cornelius Nepos. With Notes. By Oscar Browning, M.A. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Livy. Selections (for Schools). With Notes and Maps. By H. Lee-Warner, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. In Parts, limp, each 1s. 6d.

Part I. The Caudine Disaster.

Part II. Hannibal's Campaign in Italy.

Part III. The Macedonian War.

- Ovid. Selections for the use of Schools. With Introductions and Notes, and an Appendix on the Roman Calendar. By W. Ramsay, M.A. Edited by G. G. Ramsay, M.A., Professor of Humanity, Glasgow. Second Edition. Ext. fcap. 8vo. cloth, 5s. 6d.
- Pliny. Selected Letters (for Schools). With Notes. By the late C. E. Prichard, M.A., and E. R. Bernard, M.A. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s.
- Virgil. Edited with Notes, etc., by T. L. Papillon, M.A., Fellow of New College, Oxford. In Preparation.
-
- Catulli Veronensis Liber. Iterum recognovit, apparatus criticum prolegomena appendices addidit, Robinson Ellis, A.M. 1878. Demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.
- A Commentary on Catullus. By Robinson Ellis, M.A. 1876. Demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.
- Catulli Veronensis Carmina Selecta, secundum recognitionem Robinson Ellis, A.M. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.
- Cicero de Oratore. With Introduction and Notes, by A. S. Wilkins, M.A., Professor of Latin, Owens College, Manchester. Book I. 1879. 8vo. cloth, 6s. Book II. 1881. 8vo. cloth, 5s.
- Cicero's Philippic Orations. With Notes. By J. R. King, M.A. Second Edition. 1879. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.
- Cicero. Select Letters. With English Introductions, Notes, and Appendices. By Albert Watson, M.A. Second Edition. 1874. Demy 8vo. cloth, 18s.
- Cicero. Select Letters. Text. By the same Editor. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s.
- Cicero pro Cluentio. With Introduction and Notes. By W. Ramsay, M.A. Edited by G. G. Ramsay, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.
- Horace. With a Commentary. Volume I. The Odes, Carmen Seculare, and Epodes. By Edward C. Wickham, M.A., Head Master of Wellington College. Second Edition. 1877. 8vo. cloth, 12s.
Also a small edition for Schools. Nearly ready.
- Livy, Books I-X. By J. R. Seeley, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, Cambridge. Book I. Second Edition. 1874. 8vo. cloth, 6s.
Also a small edition for Schools.
- Persius. The Satires. With a Translation and Commentary. By John Conington, M.A. Edited by Henry Nettleship, M.A. Second Edition. 1874. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

Selections from the less known Latin Poets. By North Pinder, M.A. 1869. Demy 8vo. cloth, 15s.

Fragments and Specimens of Early Latin. With Introductions and Notes. 1874. By John Wordsworth, M.A. 8vo. cloth, 18s.

Tacitus. The Annals. Books I–VI. With Essays and Notes. Preparing.

Vergil: Suggestions Introductory to a Study of the Aeneid. By H. Nettleship, M.A. 8vo. sewed, 1s. 6d.

Ancient Lives of Vergil; with an Essay on the Poems of Vergil, in connection with his Life and Times. By H. Nettleship, M.A. 8vo. sewed, 2s.

The Roman Satura: its original form in connection with its literary development. By H. Nettleship, M.A. 8vo. sewed, 1s.

A Manual of Comparative Philology. By T. L. Papillon, M.A., Fellow and Lecturer of New College. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The Roman Poets of the Augustan Age. By William Young Sellar, M.A., Professor of Humanity in the University of Edinburgh. VIRGIL. 1877. 8vo. cloth, 14s.

The Roman Poets of the Republic. By the same Author. New Edition, Revised and Enlarged. 1881. 8vo. cloth, 14s.

III. GREEK.

A Greek Primer, for the use of beginners in that Language. By the Right Rev. Charles Wordsworth, D.C.L., Bishop of St. Andrews. Sixth Edition, Revised and Enlarged. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d.

Graecae Grammaticae Rudimenta in usum Scholarum. Auctore Carolo Wordsworth, D.C.L. Nineteenth Edition, 1877. 12mo. cloth, 4s.

A Greek-English Lexicon, abridged from Liddell and Scott's 4to. edition, chiefly for the use of Schools. Nineteenth Edition. Carefully Revised throughout. 1880. Square 12mo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

Greek Verbs, Irregular and Defective; their forms, meaning, and quantity; embracing all the Tenses used by Greek writers, with references to the passages in which they are found. By W. Veitch. Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

The Elements of Greek Accentuation (for Schools): abridged from his larger work by H. W. Chandler, M.A., Waynflete Professor of Moral and Metaphysical Philosophy, Oxford. Ext. fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

A Series of Graduated Greek Readers;—

First Greek Reader. By W. G. Rushbrooke, M.L., formerly Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, Second Classical Master at the City of London School. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Second Greek Reader. By A. M. Bell, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

Third Greek Reader. In Preparation.

Fourth Greek Reader; being Specimens of Greek Dialects. With Introductions and Notes. By W. W. Merry, M.A., Fellow and Lecturer of Lincoln College. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

Fifth Greek Reader. Part I. Selections from Greek Epic and Dramatic Poetry, with Introductions and Notes. By Evelyn Abbott, M.A., Fellow of Balliol College. Ext. fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

Part II. By the same Editor. In Preparation.

The Golden Treasury of Ancient Greek Poetry; being a Collection of the finest passages in the Greek Classic Poets, with Introductory Notices and Notes. By R. S. Wright, M.A., Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. Ext. fcap. 8vo. cloth, 8s. 6d.

A Golden Treasury of Greek Prose, being a collection of the finest passages in the principal Greek Prose Writers, with Introductory Notices and Notes. By R. S. Wright, M.A., and J. E. L. Shadwell, M.A. Ext. fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

Aeschylus. Prometheus Bound (for Schools). With Introduction and Notes, by A. O. Prickard, M.A., Fellow of New College. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s.

Aeschylus. Agamemnon. With Introduction and Notes by Arthur Sidgwick, M.A., Tutor of Corpus Christi College, Oxford; late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, and Assistant Master of Rugby School. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. Just Published.

Aristophanes. In Single Plays, edited, with English Notes, Introductions, etc., by W. W. Merry, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo.

The Clouds, 2s.

The Acharnians, 2s.

Other Plays will follow.

Arrian. Selections (for Schools). With Notes. By J. S. Phillpotts, B.C.L., Head Master of Bedford School.

Cebes. Tabula. With Introduction and Notes by C. S. Jerram, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Euripides. Alcestis (for Schools). By C. S. Jerram, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Euripides. Helena (for Schools). By the same Editor. In the Press.

- Herodotus. Selections from. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, and a Map, by W. W. Merry, M.A., Fellow and Lecturer of Lincoln College. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.
- Homer. Odyssey, Books I—XII (for Schools). By W. W. Merry, M.A. Nineteenth Thousand. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.
Book II, separately, 1s. 6d.
- Homer. Odyssey, Books XIII—XXIV (for Schools). By the same Editor. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 5s.
- Homer. Iliad, Book I (for Schools). By D. B. Monro, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s.
- Homer. Iliad, Book XXI. Edited with Notes, etc., for the use of Schools, by Herbert Hailstone, M.A., late Scholar of St. Peter's College, Cambridge. Extr. fcap. 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d.
- Lucian. Vera Historia (for Schools). By C. S. Jerram, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d.
- Plato. Selections (for Schools). With Notes. By B. Jowett, M.A., Regius Professor of Greek; and J. Purves, M.A., Fellow and late Lecturer of Balliol College, Oxford. In the Press.
- Sophocles. In Single Plays, with English Notes, &c. By Lewis Campbell, M.A., and Evelyn Abbott, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. limp.
Oedipus Rex, Oedipus Coloneus, Antigone, 1s. 9d. each.
Ajax, Electra, Trachiniae, Philoctetes, 2s. each.
- Sophocles. Oedipus Rex : Dindorf's Text, with Notes by the present Bishop of St. David's. Ext. fcap. 8vo. limp, 1s. 6d.
- Theocritus (for Schools). With Notes. By H. Kynaston, M.A. (late Snow), Head Master of Cheltenham College. Third Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.
- Xenophon. Easy Selections (for Junior Classes). With a Vocabulary, Notes, and Map. By J. S. Phillpotts, B.C.L., and C. S. Jerram, M.A. Third Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.
- Xenophon. Selections (for Schools). With Notes and Maps. By J. S. Phillpotts, B.C.L., Head Master of Bedford School. Fourth Edition. Ext. fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.
- Xenophon. Anabasis, Book II. With Notes and Map. By C. S. Jerram, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s.
- Aristotle's Politics. By W. L. Newman, M.A., Fellow of Balliol College, Oxford.
- Aristotelian Studies. I. On the Structure of the Seventh Book of the Nicomachean Ethics. By J. C. Wilson, M.A., Fellow of Oriol College, Oxford. 1879. Medium 8vo. stiff, 5s.
- Demosthenes and Aeschines. The Oration of Demosthenes and Aeschines on the Crown. With Introductory Essays and Notes. By G. A. Simcox, M.A., and W. H. Simcox, M.A. 1872. 8vo. cloth, 12s.

Homer. Odyssey, Books I–XII. Edited with English Notes, Appendices, etc. By W. W. Merry, M.A., and the late James Riddell, M.A. 1876. Demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.

Homer. Odyssey, Books XIII–XXIV. With Introduction and Notes. By S. H. Butcher, M.A., Fellow of University College.

Homer. Iliad. With Introduction and Notes. By D. B. Monro, M.A., Vice-Provost of Oriel College, Oxford. Preparing.

A Homeric Grammar. By D. B. Monro, M.A. In the Press.

Sophocles. The Plays and Fragments. With English Notes and Introductions, by Lewis Campbell, M.A., Professor of Greek, St. Andrews, formerly Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford. 2 vols.

Vol. I. Oedipus Tyrannus. Oedipus Coloneus. Antigone. Second Edition. 1879. 8vo. cloth, 16s.

Vol. II. Ajax. Electra. Trachiniae. Philoctetes. Fragments. 1881. 8vo. cloth, 16s.

Sophocles. The Text of the Seven Plays. By the same Editor. Ext. fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

A Handbook of Greek Inscriptions, illustrative of Greek History. By E. L. Hicks, M.A., formerly Fellow of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. In the Press.

IV. FRENCH.

An Etymological Dictionary of the French Language, with a Preface on the Principles of French Etymology. By A. Brachet. Translated into English by G. W. Kitchin, M.A. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

Brachet's Historical Grammar of the French Language. Translated into English by G. W. Kitchin, M.A. Fourth Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

Historical Outlines of French Literature. By George Saintsbury, M.A. In Preparation.

A Primer of French Literature. By the same Author. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s.

French Classics, Edited by GUSTAVE MASSON, B.A.

Corneille's Cinna, and Molière's Les Femmes Savantes. With Introduction and Notes. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Racine's Andromaque, and Corneille's Le Menteur. With Louis Racine's Life of his Father. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Molière's Les Fourberies de Scapin, and Racine's Athalie. With Voltaire's Life of Molière. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Selections from the Correspondence of Madame de Sévigné and her chief Contemporaries. Intended more especially for Girls' Schools. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s.

Voyage autour de ma Chambre, by Xavier de Maistre; Ourika, by Madame de Duras; La Dot de Suzette, by Fievée; Les Jumeaux de l'Hôtel Corneille, by Edmond About; Mésaventures d'un Écolier, by Rodolphe Töpffer. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Regnard's Le Joueur, and Brueys and Palaprat's Le Grondeur. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Louis XIV and his Contemporaries; as described in Extracts from the best Memoirs of the Seventeenth Century. With English Notes, Genealogical Tables, &c. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

V. GERMAN.

LANGE'S German Course. By HERMANN LANGE, Teacher of Modern Languages, Manchester:

The Germans at Home; a Practical Introduction to German Conversation, with an Appendix containing the Essentials of German Grammar. Second Edition. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

The German Manual; a German Grammar, a Reading Book, and a Handbook of German Conversation. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

A Grammar of the German Language. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

This 'Grammar' is a reprint of the Grammar contained in 'The German Manual,' and, in this separate form, is intended for the use of students who wish to make themselves acquainted with German Grammar chiefly for the purpose of being able to read German books.

German Composition; Extracts from English and American writers for Translation into German, with Hints for Translation in foot-notes. In the Press.

Lessing's Laokoon. With Introduction, English Notes, etc. By A. HAMANN, Phil. Doc., M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

Wilhelm Tell. A Drama. By Schiller. Translated into English Verse by E. Massie, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 5s.

Also, Edited by C. A. BUCHHEIM, Phil. Doc., Professor in King's College, London:

Goethe's Egmont. With a Life of Goethe, &c. Third Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s.

Schiller's Wilhelm Tell. With a Life of Schiller; an historical and critical Introduction, Arguments, and a complete Commentary. Fourth Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

Lessing's Minna von Barnhelm. A Comedy. With a Life of Lessing, Critical Analysis, Complete Commentary, &c. Fourth Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

Schiller's Historische Skizzen; Egmonts Leben und Tod, and Belagerung von Antwerpen. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Goethe's Iphigenie auf Tauris. A Drama. With a Critical Introduction and Notes. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s.

Modern German Reader. A Graduated Collection of Prose Extracts from Modern German writers :—

Part I. With English Notes, a Grammatical Appendix, and a complete Vocabulary. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Parts II and III in preparation.

In Preparation.

Schiller's Maria Stuart. With Notes, Introduction, &c.

Schiller's Jungfrau von Orleans. With Notes, Introduction, &c.

Selections from the Poems of Schiller and Goethe.

Becker's (K. F.) Friedrich der Grosse.

Lessing's Nathan der Weise. With Introduction, Notes, etc.

VI. MATHEMATICS, &c.

Figures Made Easy: a first Arithmetic Book. (Introductory to 'The Scholar's Arithmetic.') By Lewis Hensley, M.A., formerly Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6d.

Answers to the Examples in Figures made Easy, together with two thousand additional Examples formed from the Tables in the same, with Answers. By the same Author. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s.

The Scholar's Arithmetic; with Answers to the Examples. By the same Author. Crown 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

The Scholar's Algebra. An Introductory work on Algebra. By the same Author. Crown 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

Book-keeping. By R. G. C. Hamilton, Financial Assistant Secretary to the Board of Trade, and John Ball (of the Firm of Quilter, Ball, & Co.), Co-Examiners in Book-keeping for the Society of Arts. New and enlarged Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. limp cloth, 2s.

A Course of Lectures on Pure Geometry. By Henry J. Stephen Smith, M.A., F.R.S., Fellow of Corpus Christi College, and Savilian Professor of Geometry in the University of Oxford.

Acoustics. By W. F. Donkin, M.A., F.R.S., Savilian Professor of Astronomy, Oxford. 1870. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

A Treatise on Electricity and Magnetism. By J. Clerk Maxwell, M.A., F.R.S., Professor of Experimental Physics in the University of Cambridge. A New Edition in the Press, edited by W. D. Niven, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

An Elementary Treatise on the same subject. Edited, from the materials left by Professor Clerk Maxwell, by W. Garnett, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. In the Press.

- A Treatise on Statics. By G. M. Minchin, M.A., Professor of Applied Mathematics in the Indian Engineering College, Cooper's Hill. Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged. 1879. 8vo. cloth, 14s.
- A Treatise on the Kinetic Theory of Gases. By Henry William Watson, M.A., formerly Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1876. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.
- A Treatise on the Application of Generalised Coordinates to the Kinetics of a Material System. By H. W. Watson, M.A., and S. H. Burbury, M.A., formerly Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1879. 8vo. cloth, 6s.
- Geodesy. By Colonel Alexander Ross Clarke, C.B., R.E. 1880. 8vo. cloth, 12s. 6d.

VII. PHYSICAL SCIENCE.

- A Handbook of Descriptive Astronomy. By G. F. Chambers, F.R.A.S. Third Edition. 1877. Demy 8vo. cloth, 28s.
- A Cycle of Celestial Objects. Observed, Reduced, and Discussed by Admiral W. H. Smyth, R.N. Revised, condensed, and greatly enlarged by G. F. Chambers, F.R.A.S. 1881. 8vo. cloth, 21s.
- Chemistry for Students. By A. W. Williamson, Phil. Doc., F.R.S., Professor of Chemistry, University College, London. A new Edition, with Solutions. 1873. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 8s. 6d.
- A Treatise on Heat, with numerous Woodcuts and Diagrams. By Balfour Stewart, LL.D., F.R.S., Professor of Natural Philosophy in Owens College, Manchester. Fourth Edition. 1881. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.
- Lessons on Thermodynamics. By R. E. Baynes, M.A., Senior Student of Christ Church, Oxford, and Lee's Reader in Physics. 1878. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.
- Forms of Animal Life. By G. Rolleston, M.D., F.R.S., Linacre Professor of Physiology, Oxford. Illustrated by Descriptions and Drawings of Dissections. Demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.
- Exercises in Practical Chemistry. Vol. I. Elementary Exercises. By A. G. Vernon Harcourt, M.A., F.R.S., Senior Student of Christ Church, and Lee's Reader in Chemistry; and H. G. Madan, M.A., Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford. Third Edition. Revised by H. G. Madan, M.A. Crown 8vo. cloth, 9s.
- Crystallography. By M. H. N. Story-Maskelyne, M.A., Professor of Mineralogy, Oxford; and Deputy Keeper in the Department of Minerals, British Museum. In the Press.

VIII. HISTORY.

- The Constitutional History of England, in its Origin and Development. By William Stubbs, D.D., Regius Professor of Modern History. Library Edition. Three vols. demy 8vo. cloth, 21. 8s.
Also in 3 vols. crown 8vo. price 12s. each.

- Select Charters and other Illustrations of English Constitutional History, from the Earliest Times to the Reign of Edward I. Arranged and Edited by W. Stubbs, M.A. Fourth Edition. 1881. Crown 8vo. cloth, 8s. 6d.
- A History of England, principally in the Seventeenth Century. By Leopold Von Ranke. Translated by Resident Members of the University of Oxford, under the superintendence of G. W. Kitchin, M.A., and C. W. Boase, M.A. 1875. 6 vols. 8vo. cloth, 3l. 3s.
- A Short History of the Norman Conquest of England. By E. A. Freeman, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.
- Genealogical Tables illustrative of Modern History. By H. B. George, M.A. Second Edition. Small 4to. cloth, 12s.
- A History of France. With numerous Maps, Plans, and Tables. By G. W. Kitchin, M.A. In Three Volumes. 1873-77. Crown 8vo. cloth, each 10s. 6d.
Vol. 1. Down to the Year 1453. Vol. 2. From 1453-1624.
Vol. 3. From 1624-1793.
- A History of Germany and of the Empire, down to the close of the Middle Ages. By J. Bryce, D.C.L., Regius Professor of Civil Law in the University of Oxford.
- A History of British India. By S. J. Owen, M.A., Reader in Indian History in the University of Oxford.
- A Selection from the Despatches, Treaties, and other Papers of the Marquess Wellesley, K.G., during his Government of India. Edited by S. J. Owen, M.A., formerly Professor of History in the Elphinstone College, Bombay. 1877. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 4s.
- A Selection from the Despatches, Treaties, and other Papers relating to India of Field-Marshal the Duke of Wellington, K.G. By the same Editor. 1880. 8vo. cloth, 24s.
- A History of the United States of America. By E. J. Payne, M.A., Barrister-at-Law, and Fellow of University College, Oxford. In the Press.
- A History of Greece from its Conquest by the Romans to the present time, B.C. 146 to A.D. 1864. By George Finlay, LL.D. A new Edition, revised throughout, and in part re-written, with considerable additions, by the Author, and Edited by H. F. Tozer, M.A., Tutor and late Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford. 1877. 7 vols. 8vo. cloth, 3l. 10s.
- A Manual of Ancient History. By George Rawlinson, M.A., Camden Professor of Ancient History, formerly Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford. Second Edition. Demy 8vo. cloth, 14s.
- A History of Greece. By E. A. Freeman, M.A., formerly Fellow of Trinity College, Oxford.

Italy and her Invaders, A.D. 376-476. By T. Hodgkin, Fellow of University College, London. Illustrated with Plates and Maps. 2 vols. 8vo. cloth, 1l. 12s.

IX. LAW.

The Elements of Jurisprudence. By Thomas Erskine Holland, D.C.L., Chichele Professor of International Law and Diplomacy, and Fellow of All Souls College, Oxford. 1880. Demy 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

The Institutes of Justinian, edited as a recension of the Institutes of Gaius. By the same Editor. 1873. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 5s.

Gaii Institutionum Juris Civilis Commentarii Quatuor; or, Elements of Roman Law by Gaius. With a Translation and Commentary by Edward Poste, M.A., Barrister-at-Law, and Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. Second Edition. 1875. 8vo. cloth, 18s.

Select Titles from the Digest of Justinian. By T. E. Holland, D.C.L., Chichele Professor of International Law and Diplomacy, and Fellow of All Souls' College, Oxford, and C. L. Shadwell, B.C.L., Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. 8vo. cloth, 14s.

Also sold in Parts, in paper covers, as follows:—

Part I. Introductory Titles. 2s. 6d.

Part II. Family Law. 1s.

Part III. Property Law. 2s. 6d.

Part IV. Law of Obligations (No. 1). 3s. 6d.

Part IV. Law of Obligations (No. 2). 4s. 6d.

An Introduction to the Principles of Morals and Legislation. By Jeremy Bentham. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. 6d.

Elements of Law considered with reference to Principles of General Jurisprudence. By William Markby, M.A., Judge of the High Court of Judicature, Calcutta. Second Edition, with Supplement. 1874. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d. Supplement separately, 2s.

Alberici Gentilis, I. C. D., I. C. Professoris Regii, De Iure Belli Libri Tres. Edidit Thomas Erskine Holland I. C. D., Iuris Gentium Professor Chicheleianus, Coll. Omn. Anim. Socius, necnon in Univ. Perusin. Iuris Professor Honorarius. 1877. Small 4to. half morocco, 21s.

International Law. By William Edward Hall, M.A., Barrister-at-Law. Demy 8vo. cloth, 21s.

An Introduction to the History of the Law of Real Property, with original Authorities. By Kenelm E. Digby, M.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. Second Edition. 1876. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

Principles of the English Law of Contract. By Sir William R. Anson, Bart., B.C.L., Vinerian Reader of English Law, and Fellow of All Souls College, Oxford. 1879. Crown 8vo. cloth, 9s.

X. MENTAL AND MORAL PHILOSOPHY.

Bacon. Novum Organum. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, &c., by T. Fowler, M.A., Professor of Logic in the University of Oxford. 1878. 8vo. cloth, 14s.

Locke's Conduct of the Understanding. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, etc., by T. Fowler, M.A., Professor of Logic in the University of Oxford. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s.

Selections from Berkeley, with an Introduction and Notes. For the use of Students in the Universities. By Alexander Campbell Fraser, LL.D. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d. (See also p. 18.)

The Elements of Deductive Logic, designed mainly for the use of Junior Students in the Universities. By T. Fowler, M.A., Professor of Logic in the University of Oxford. Seventh Edition, with a Collection of Examples. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The Elements of Inductive Logic, designed mainly for the use of Students in the Universities. By the same Author. Third Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 6s.

A Manual of Political Economy, for the use of Schools. By J. E. Thorold Rogers, M.A., formerly Professor of Political Economy, Oxford. Third Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

XI. ART, &c.

A Handbook of Pictorial Art. By R. St. J. Tyrwhitt, M.A., formerly Student and Tutor of Christ Church, Oxford. With coloured Illustrations, Photographs, and a chapter on Perspective by A. Macdonald. Second Edition. 1875. 8vo. half morocco, 18s.

A Music Primer for Schools. By J. Troutbeck, M.A., Music Master in Westminster School, and R. F. Dale, M.A., B. Mus., Assistant Master in Westminster School. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d.

A Treatise on Harmony. By Sir F. A. Gore Ouseley, Bart., Professor of Music in the University of Oxford. Second Edition. 4to. cloth, 10s.

A Treatise on Counterpoint, Canon, and Fugue, based upon that of Cherubini. By the same Author. Second Edition. 4to. cloth, 16s.

A Treatise on Musical Form and General Composition. By the same Author. 4to. cloth, 10s.

The Cultivation of the Speaking Voice. By John Hullah. Second Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

XII. MISCELLANEOUS.

- The Construction of Healthy Dwellings; namely Houses, Hospitals, Barracks, Asylums, etc. By Douglas Galton, late Royal Engineers, C.B., F.R.S., etc. Demy 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.
- River and Canal Engineering. By Leveson Francis Vernon Harcourt, M.A., C.E. Preparing.
- A System of Physical Education : Theoretical and Practical. By Archibald Maclaren. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.
- Specimens of Lowland Scotch and Northern English. By Dr. J. A. H. Murray. Preparing.
- English Plant Names from the Tenth to the Fifteenth Century. By J. Earle, M.A. Small fcap. 8vo. cloth, 5s.
- An Icelandic Prose Reader, with Notes, Grammar, and Glossary by Dr. Gudbrand Vigfusson and F. York Powell, M.A. 1879. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.
- Dante. Selections from the Inferno. With Introduction and Notes. By H. B. Cotterill, B.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.
- Tasso. La Gerusalemme Liberata. Cantos i, ii. With Introduction and Notes. By the same Editor. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.
- The Modern Greek Language in its relation to Ancient Greek. By E. M. Geldart, B.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.
- The Book of Tobit. A Chaldee Text, from a unique MS. in the Bodleian Library; with other Rabbinical Texts, English Translations, and the Itala. Edited by Ad. Neubauer, M.A. 1878. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.
- A Commentary on the Book of Proverbs. Attributed to Abraham Ibn Ezra. Edited from a Manuscript in the Bodleian Library by S. R. Driver, M.A. Crown 8vo. paper cover, 3s. 6d.
- Outlines of Textual Criticism applied to the New Testament. By C. E. Hammond, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Exeter College, Oxford. Third Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.
- A Handbook of Phonetics, including a Popular Exposition of the Principles of Spelling Reform. By Henry Sweet, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

LONDON: HENRY FROWDE,

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS WAREHOUSE, 7 PATERNOSTER ROW,

OXFORD: CLARENDON PRESS DEPOSITORY,

116 HIGH STREET.

The DELEGATES OF THE PRESS invite suggestions and advice from all persons interested in education; and will be thankful for hints, &c. addressed to the SECRETARY TO THE DELEGATES, Clarendon Press, Oxford.

Bibles Printed at the Clarendon Press.

THE OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS.

THREE NEW EDITIONS, ON INDIA PAPER,
EXTREMELY THIN AND LIGHT.

IS. and professions of obedience.

quicken thou me according to thy ord.	* ver. 40. Pa. 143. 11.
6 I have declared my ways, and thou ardest me: "teach me thy statutes.	* ver. 12. Pa. 25. 4. A 27. 11. A 26. 11.
7 Make me to understand the way thy precepts: so "shall I talk of y wondrous works.	* Pa. 143. 5, 6.
8 "My soul "melteth for heaviness: rengthen thou me according unto thy ord.	* Pa. 107. 26. " Heb. droppeth.
9 Remove from me the way of lying: d grant me thy law graciously.
0 I have chosen the way of truth:

No. 2A. Minion 8vo. THIN. (SUPERINTENDENT'S EDITION.)

Size, 7½ inches long, 5½ inches broad, and 1 inch thick. Weight 22 ounces.

Paste grain morocco, limp . . .	0 13 6
Persian morocco, limp . . .	0 15 6
Turkey morocco, limp . . .	0 18 0
Turkey morocco, flap edges . . .	1 1 0
Levant morocco, lined calf, flap edges . . .	1 4 0
Ditto, very flexible, silk sewed, red under gold in the round—the most durable binding extant } . . .	1 11 6
With Apocrypha, extra . . .	0 3 0
With Prayer-Book, extra . . .	0 3 0

No. 5A. Ruby 16mo. THIN. (POCKET EDITION.)

Size, 6½ inches long, 4½ inches broad, and 1 inch thick.
Weight 15 ounces including binding. 1456 pp.

Paste grain morocco, limp . . .	0 9 0
Persian morocco, limp . . .	0 11 0
Turkey morocco, limp . . .	0 12 0
Turkey morocco, flap edges . . .	0 15 0
Levant morocco, lined calf, flap edges . . .	0 18 0
Ditto, very flexible, silk sewed, red under gold in the round—the most durable binding extant } . . .	1 2 6
With Apocrypha, extra . . .	0 2 3
With Prayer-Book, extra . . .	0 2 3

PSALMS. and professions of obedience.

* quicken thou me according to thy word.	* ver. 40. Pa. 143. 11.
26 I have declared my ways, and thou heardest me: "teach me thy statutes.	* ver. 12. Pa. 25. 4. A 27. 11. A 26. 11.
27 Make me to understand the way of thy precepts: so "shall I talk of thy wondrous works.	* Pa. 143. 5, 6.
28 "My soul "melteth for heaviness: strengthen thou me according unto thy word.	* Pa. 107. 26. " Heb. droppeth.
29 Remove from me the way of lying: and grant me thy law gra- ciously.
30 I have chosen the way of

No. 6A. Pearl 16mo. THIN. (SMALLEST EDITION.)

Size, 5½ inches long, 3½ inches broad, and 1 inch thick. Weight 12½ ounces.

Paste grain morocco, limp . . .	0 7 0
Persian morocco, limp . . .	0 8 0
Turkey morocco, limp . . .	0 10 0
Turkey morocco, flap edges . . .	0 12 0
Levant morocco, lined calf, flap edges . . .	0 14 6
Ditto, very flexible, silk sewed, red under gold in the round—the most durable binding extant } . . .	0 18 0
With Apocrypha, extra . . .	0 2 3
With Prayer-Book, extra . . .	0 2 3

PSALMS. and professions of obedience.

* quicken thou me according to thy word.	* ver. 40. Pa. 143. 11.
26 I have declared my ways, and thou heardest me: "teach me thy statutes.	* ver. 12. Pa. 25. 4. A 27. 11. A 26. 11.
27 Make me to understand the way of thy precepts: so "shall I talk of thy wondrous works.	* Pa. 143. 5, 6.
28 "My soul "melteth for heaviness: strengthen thou me according unto thy word.	* Pa. 107. 26. " Heb. droppeth.
29 Remove from me the way of lying: and grant me thy law gra- ciously.
30 I have chosen the way of truth:

Specimen leaves will be sent on application.

THE OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS.

Six Editions printed on best Rag-made printing paper.

of obedience.
o thy	* ver. 40. Pa. 143. 11.
thou
ites.	* ver. 12. Pa. 25. 4.
way	* 27. 11. * 86. 11.
lk of	* Pa. 145. 5, 6.
ness:	* Pa. 107.

— Width of Margin. —

IS. and professions of obedience.

quicken thou me according to thy	* ver. 40. Pa. 143. 11.
6 I have declared my ways, and thou ardest me: * teach me thy statutes.	* ver. 12. Pa. 25. 4.
7 Make me to understand the way	* 27. 11. * 86. 11.
thy precepts: so * shall I talk of	* Pa. 145. 5, 6.
y wondrous works.	* Pa. 107.
8 * My soul * melteth for heaviness:

PSALMS. and professions of obedience.

DALETH.
d; 25 * My soul cleaveth unto the dust:	* ver. 40. Pa. 143. 11.
* quicken thou me according to thy word.
26 I have declared my ways, and	* ver. 12. Pa. 25. 4.
thou heardest me: * teach me thy	* 27. 11. * 86. 11.
statutes.	* Pa. 145. 5, 6.
27 Make me to understand the way
of thy precepts: so * shall I talk of	* Pa. 107. 26.
thy wondrous works.
28 * My soul * melteth for heaviness:

PSALMS. and professions of obedience.

d; * quicken thou me according to thy	* ver. 40. Pa. 143. 11.
word.
26 I have declared my ways, and	* ver. 12. Pa. 25. 4.
thou heardest me: * teach me thy	* 27. 11. * 86. 11.
statutes.	* Pa. 145. 5, 6.
27 Make me to understand the way
of thy precepts: so * shall I talk of	* Pa. 107. 26.
thy wondrous works.
28 * My soul * melteth for heaviness:

PSALMS. and professions of obedience.

LORD; * quicken thou me according to thy	* ver. 40. Pa. 143. 11.
endur- word.
26 I have declared my ways, and	* ver. 12. Pa. 25. 4.
thou heardest me: * teach me thy	* 27. 11. * 86. 11.
statutes.	* Pa. 145. 5, 6.
27 Make me to understand the way
of thy precepts: so * shall I talk of	* Pa. 107. 26.
thy wondrous works.
28 * My soul * melteth for heaviness:

PSALMS. and professions of obedience.

to the LORD; * quicken thou me according to thy	* ver. 40. Pa. 143. 11.
erof endureth word.
26 I have declared my ways, and	* ver. 12. Pa. 25. 4.
thou heardest me: * teach me thy	* 27. 11. * 86. 11.
statutes.	* Pa. 145. 5, 6.
27 Make me to understand the way
of thy precepts: so * shall I talk of	* Pa. 107. 26.
thy wondrous works.
28 * My soul * melteth for heaviness:

No. 1. Minion Small 4to.

(9¼ x 7 x 1½ inches.)

A Superb Edition, with Wide Margins for Manuscript Notes.

Cloth boards, red edges	0	12	0
Persian morocco, limp, red under gold edges	0	18	0
Best Turkey morocco, limp	1	4	0
Best Turkey morocco, circuit edges	1	10	0
Levant Morocco, lined calf, with flap edges	1	16	0

No. 2. Minion Crown 8vo.

(7½ x 5½ x 1½ inches.)

Cloth boards, red edges	0	12	0
French morocco, gilt edges	0	10	0
Paste Grain morocco, limp	0	10	6
French morocco, circuit edges	0	12	0
Best Turkey morocco, limp	0	15	0
Best Turkey morocco, circuit edges	0	19	6
Levant morocco, calf lined, with flap edges	1	1	0

No. 3. Nonpareil 8vo.

(7 x 4½ x 1½ inches.)

Cloth boards, red edges	0	5	6
French morocco, gilt edges	0	7	0
Paste Grain morocco, limp	0	7	6
French morocco, circuit edges	0	9	0
Best Turkey morocco, limp	0	11	0
Best Turkey morocco, circuit edges	0	13	6
Levant morocco, calf lined, with flap edges	0	18	6

No. 4. RED LINE EDITION.

Nonpareil 8vo. (7 x 4½ x 1½ inches.)

Persian morocco, red under gold edges	0	12	0
Best Turkey morocco	0	15	0
Best Turkey morocco, circuit edges	0	19	0
Levant morocco, calf lined, with flap edges	1	1	0

No. 5. Ruby 16mo.

(6½ x 4½ x 1½ inches.)

Cloth boards, red edges	0	4	6
French morocco, gilt edges	0	5	6
Paste Grain morocco, limp	0	6	6
French morocco, circuit edges	0	7	6
Best Turkey morocco, limp	0	9	0
Best Turkey morocco, circuit edges	0	12	0
Levant morocco, lined calf, with flap edges	0	16	0

No. 6. Pearl 16mo.

(5½ x 3½ x 1½ inches.)

Cloth boards, red edges	0	8	0
French morocco, gilt edges	0	4	0
Paste Grain morocco, limp	0	4	6
French morocco, circuit edges	0	5	0
Best Turkey morocco, limp	0	7	0
Best Turkey morocco, circuit edges	0	9	0
Levant morocco, lined calf, with flap edges	0	12	0

THE OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

I. NOTES ANALYTICAL, CHRONOLOGICAL, HISTORICAL, GEOGRAPHICAL, ZOOLOGICAL, BOTANICAL, AND GEOLOGICAL.

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1. NOTES ON THE OLD TESTAMENT:—
 i. Title of the Bible.
 ii. Hebrew Divisions of the Bible:—
 (a) The Law.
 (b) The Prophets.
 (c) The Scriptures.
 iii. Divisions of the English Bible:—
 (a) The Pentateuch.
 (b) The Historical Books.
 (c) The Poetical Books.
 (d) The Prophetical Books.
 Analysis and Summary of each.
 2. SUMMARY OF THE INTERVAL BETWEEN THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.
 3. FAMILY OF THE HERODS.
 4. JEWISH SECTS, PARTIES, &c.
 5. CHRONOLOGY OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
 6. CHRONOLOGY OF THE ACTS AND EPISTLES.
 7. HISTORICAL SUMMARY.
 8. MIRACLES AND PARABLES OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
 9. MIRACLES AND PARABLES OF OUR LORD.
 10. NAMES, TITLES, AND OFFICES OF CHRIST.
 11. PROPHECIES RELATING TO CHRIST.
 12. SPECIAL PRAYERS FOUND IN SCRIPTURE.
 13. NOTES ON THE NEW TESTAMENT:—
 i. Early Copies.
 ii. Divisions of the New Testament:—
 (a) Constitutional and Historical.
 (b) Didactic.
 (c) Prophetic.
 Analysis and Summary of each.
 14. HARMONY OF THE GOSPELS. | 15. PAUL'S MISSIONARY JOURNEYS.
 16. " VOYAGE TO ROME.
 17. GEOGRAPHY AND TOPOGRAPHY OF PALESTINE.
 18. MOUNTAINS OF SCRIPTURE, WITH THEIR ASSOCIATIONS.
 19. RIVERS AND LAKES OF SCRIPTURE, AND EVENTS CONNECTED WITH EACH.
 20. ETHNOLOGY OF BIBLE LANDS.
 21. QUADRUPEDS NAMED IN THE BIBLE, WITH DESCRIPTION OF EACH.
 22. SUMMARY OF MAMMALIA OF THE BIBLE.
 23. FISHERIES OF PALESTINE, WITH THEIR PRODUCTS.
 24. AQUATIC ANIMALS MENTIONED IN THE BIBLE.
 25. BIRDS FOUND IN PALESTINE.
 26. REPTILES OF SCRIPTURE.
 27. INSECTS OF PALESTINE.
 28. TREES, PLANTS, FLOWERS, &c., OF PALESTINE.
 29. GEOLOGY OF BIBLE LANDS:—
 i. Mineral Substances, &c.
 ii. Metals.
 iii. Precious Stones.
 30. MUSIC AND MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS:—
 i. Stringed Instruments.
 ii. Wind Instruments.
 iii. Instruments of Percussion.
 31. TABLES OF WEIGHTS, MEASURES, TIME, AND MONEY.
 32. THE JEWISH YEAR.
 33. WORDS OBSOLETE OR AMBIGUOUS.
 34. WORDS USED SYMBOLICALLY.
 35. BLANK LEAVES FOR MS. NOTES. |
|---|--|

II. AN INDEX TO THE HOLY BIBLE

III. THE NEW OXFORD CONCORDANCE

IV. DICTIONARY OF SCRIPTURE PROPER NAMES, WITH THEIR PRONUNCIATION, MEANINGS, AND REFERENCES.

V. SCRIPTURE ATLAS (INDEXED).

- | | |
|--|---|
| 1.—THE NATIONS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD.
 2.—ARMENIA, ASSYRIA, BABYLONIA, SYRIA, &c., IN THE PATRIARCHAL AGES.
 3.—CANAAN IN THE PATRIARCHAL AGES.
 4.—EGYPT AND THE SINAI PENINSULA, illustrating the Journeys of the Israelites to the Promised Land.
 5.—CANAAN AS DIVIDED AMONG THE TRIBES.
 6.—DOMINIONS OF DAVID AND SOLOMON. | 7.—THE KINGDOMS OF JUDAH AND ISRAEL.
 8.—ASSYRIA AND THE ADJACENT LANDS, illustrating the Captivities.
 9.—JERUSALEM AND ITS ENVIRONS.
 10.—PALESTINE IN THE TIME OF OUR SAVIOUR.
 11.—THE ROMAN EMPIRE IN THE APOSTOLIC AGE.
 12.—MAP ILLUSTRATING THE TRAVELS OF ST. PAUL. |
|--|---|

THE OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS.

Extracts from Opinions.

"The large collection of varied information which you have appended to the OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS, in a form so readily available for reference, has evidently been compiled with the greatest care; and the testimony which you have received to its accuracy is a guarantee of its high value. I cannot doubt that the volume, in its various forms, will be of great service."—THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

"The notion of including in one volume all the helps that a clergyman or teacher would be likely to want for the study of the Bible has never been realised before with the same success that you have attained in the OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS. In the small edition (Ruby 16mo. thin), by the use of paper very skilfully adapted to the purpose, there is a Bible with an Atlas, a Concordance, an Index, and several Tractates on various points of Biblical antiquity, the whole, in a very solid binding, weighing a pound and an ounce: no great weight for what is really a miniature library. The clergy will probably give the preference to the larger book, marked No. 4. This includes the Apocrypha, with all the helps to the use of the Bible that distinguish the series. Its type is excellent. Many clergymen are obliged to write sermons when travelling from place to place. This volume would serve as a small library for that purpose, and not too large for the most moderate portmanteau. I think that this work in some of its forms should be in the hands of every teacher. The atlas is very clear and well printed. The explanatory work and the indices, so far as I have been able to examine them, are very carefully done. I am glad that my own University has, by the preparation of this series of books, taken a new step for the promotion of the careful study of the Word of God. That such will be the effect of the publication I cannot doubt."—THE ARCHBISHOP OF YORK.

"It would be difficult, I think, to provide for Sunday-School Teachers, or indeed for other students of the Bible, so much valuable information in so convenient a form as is now comprised in the OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS."—THE BISHOP OF LONDON.

"The idea of a series of Bibles in different types, corresponding page for page with one another, is one which the Dean has long wished to see realised for the sake of those who find the type of their familiar copies no longer available . . . The amount of information compressed into the comparatively few pages of the Appendix is wonderful. And the Dean is glad to hear that the help of such eminent contributors has been available for its compilation. The Concordance seems to be sufficiently full for reference to any text that may be required."—THE DEAN OF ROCHESTER.

"Having by frequent use made myself acquainted with this edition of the Holy Scriptures, I have no hesitation in saying that it is a most valuable book, and that the explanatory matter collected in the various appendices cannot but prove most helpful, both to teachers and learners, in acquiring a more accurate and extensive knowledge of the Word of God."—THE BISHOP OF LICHFIELD.

"I have examined the OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS with very great care, and congratulate you upon the publication of so valuable a work. It contains within a reasonable compass a large mass of most useful information, arranged so conveniently as to be easily accessible, and its effect will be not merely to aid, but also, I think, to stimulate the studies of the reader. The book is also printed so beautifully, and is so handsome in every way, that I expect it will be greatly sought after, as a most acceptable present to any who are engaged in teaching in our Sunday Schools and elsewhere."—THE DEAN OF CANTERBURY.

THE OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS.

Extracts from Opinions (continued).

"I have examined with some care a considerable portion of the 'Helps to the Study of the Bible,' which are placed at the end of the OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS, and have been much struck with the vast amount of really useful information which has there been brought together in a small compass, as well as the accuracy with which it has been compiled. The botanical and geological notices, the account of the animals of Scripture, &c., seem to be excellent, and the maps are admirable. Altogether, the book cannot fail to be of service, not only to teachers, but to all who cannot afford a large library, or who have not time for much independent study."—THE DEAN OF PETERBOROUGH.

"I have been for some time well aware of the value of the OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS, and have been in the habit of recommending it, not only to Sunday-School Teachers, but to more advanced students, on the ground of its containing a large mass of accurate and well-digested information, useful and in many cases indispensable to the thoughtful reader of Holy Scripture; in fact, along with the Bible, a copious Index, and a Concordance complete enough for all ordinary purposes, this one volume includes a series of short but comprehensive chapters equivalent to a small library of Biblical works."—THE BISHOP OF LIMERICK.

"Having examined the OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS carefully, I am greatly pleased with it. The 'Helps to the Study of the Bible' at the end contain a great amount of most valuable information, well calculated not only to lead to a good understanding of the text, but to stimulate the student to further efforts. It differs from many publications in this, that the information is so admirably arranged, that it is well suited for reference, and is easily available for the student. The edition would be most useful to Sunday-School Teachers, a great help to those who desire that the young shall have a real knowledge of the Word of God."—THE BISHOP OF CORK.

"The OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS may, I think, without exaggeration, be described as a wonderful edition of the Holy Scriptures. The clearness and beauty of the type, and the convenient shape of the volume, leave nothing to be desired. I know nothing of the same compass which can be compared to the 'Helps to the Study of the Bible' for fulness of information and general accuracy of treatment. It is only real learning which can accomplish such a feat of compression."—THE BISHOP OF DERRY AND RAPHA.

"I consider the OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS to be simply the most valuable edition of the English Bible ever presented to the public."—THE VEN. ARCHDEACON REICHEL.

"The OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS is in every respect, as regards type, paper, binding, and general information, the most perfect volume I have ever examined."—THE REV. PREBENDARY WILSON, of the National Society's Depository.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed into the pages of the OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS."—THE REV. ANDREW THOMSON, D.D., Edinburgh.

"The latest researches are laid under contribution, and the Bible Student is furnished with the pith of them all."—DR. STROUGHTON.

"The whole combine to form a Help of the greatest value."—DR. ANGUS.

"I cannot imagine anything more complete or more helpful."—DR. W. MORLEY PUNSHON.

"I congratulate the teacher who possesses it, and knows how to turn its 'Helps' to good account."—DR. KENNEDY.

THE OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS.

Extracts from Opinions (continued).

"The OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS is the most valuable help to the study of the Holy Scriptures, within a moderate compass, which I have ever met with. I shall make constant use of it; and imagine that few who are occupied with, or interested in the close study of the Scriptures, will allow such a companion to be far from their side."—THE REV. BALDWIN BROWN.

"I do not think I shall ever leave home without the OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS, for one can scarcely miss his ordinary books of reference when this Bible is at hand. I know no other edition which contains so much valuable help to the reader."—THE REV. A. H. CHARTERIS, D.D., Dean of the Chapel Royal.

"The OXFORD BIBLES FOR TEACHERS are as good as ever we can expect to see."—THE REV. C. H. SPURGEON.

"The modest title of the work scarcely does justice to the range of subjects which it comprehends, and the quality of their treatment. As a manual of Biblical information and an auxiliary of Biblical study, it is unrivalled. It is as exhaustive as it is concise,—no irrelevant matter has been introduced, and nothing essential to Biblical study seems to have been omitted,—and in no instance, so far as I can judge, has thoroughness or accuracy been sacrificed to the necessities of condensation."—THE REV. ROBERT N. YOUNG, of Headingley College, Leeds.

"The OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS is really one of the greatest boons which in our day has been offered to the reading public. The information given is so various, and so complete, as scarcely to leave a single desideratum. To Christians, in their quiet researches at home, or in the course of extensive journeys, or in preparation for the duties of tuition, it is simply invaluable, and constitutes in itself a Biblical Library. The range of topics which it seeks to illustrate is very great, while the care and accuracy manifest in the articles deserves the highest praise. It is no exaggeration to say, that to the mass of Christian people it saves the expense of purchasing and the toil of consulting a library of volumes. At the same time, I know no book more likely to stimulate enquiry, and to give the power of appreciating further research into the history, structures, and meaning of the Sacred Oracles."—DR. GOOLD, of Edinburgh.

"I have only recently possessed one of the OXFORD BIBLES FOR TEACHERS; and after a most patient examination of it, am astonished at the immense amount of accurate and carefully digested matter it contains: and that, too, of a kind precisely adapted to the Teacher's needs. Would that such a Bible had been within my reach when I first began my teaching life; and would that I had possessed one earlier, since I began to write for Teachers. As I look at its upwards of 300 pages of 'Helps to the Study of the Bible,' I recall my toilsome pilgrimage through many volumes, at much expenditure of time, for what is here so distinctly stated and tabulated. With such a desk companion I might have done so much more, and done it so much better. All I can do now is to entreat all Teachers who need a perfectly reliable Bible for study or class purposes, to procure one of the OXFORD BIBLES FOR TEACHERS. This I do most earnestly. And I would add that as a presentation volume by a class to its Teacher, or by a School to its Superintendent, no gift would be better appreciated or more appropriate than the small quarto size with its wide margin, and magnificent type, and superb flexible binding."—THE REV. JAMES COMPER GRAY, Author of "Class and Desk," "Topics for Teachers," "Biblical Museum," &c., &c.

"These admirable Bibles must tend to extend the fame even of the Oxford Press."—THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, M.P.

THE OXFORD BIBLE FOR TEACHERS

IS RECOMMENDED BY

The ARCHBISHOP of CANTERBURY.
 The ARCHBISHOP of YORK.
 The BISHOP of LONDON.
 The BISHOP of WINCHESTER.
 The BISHOP of BANGOR.
 The BISHOP of CARLISLE.
 The BISHOP of CHICHESTER.
 The BISHOP of ELY.
 The BISHOP of GLOUCESTER and BRISTOL.
 The BISHOP of LICHFIELD.
 The BISHOP of LLANDAFF.
 The BISHOP of MANCHESTER.
 The BISHOP of OXFORD.
 The BISHOP of PETERBOROUGH.
 The BISHOP of RIPON.
 The BISHOP of ROCHESTER.
 The BISHOP of SALISBURY.
 The BISHOP of St. ALBANS.
 The BISHOP of St. ASAPH.
 The BISHOP of St. DAVID'S.
 The BISHOP of WORCESTER.
 The BISHOP of SODOR and MAN.
 The BISHOP of BEDFORD.
 The DEAN of CANTERBURY.
 The DEAN of DURHAM.
 The DEAN of BANGOR.
 The DEAN of WELLS.
 The DEAN of ELY.
 The DEAN of EXETER.
 The DEAN of HEREFORD.
 The DEAN of LICHFIELD.
 The DEAN of LLANDAFF.
 The DEAN of MANCHESTER.
 The DEAN of NORWICH.
 The DEAN of PETERBOROUGH.
 The DEAN of RIPON.
 The DEAN of ROCHESTER.
 The Late DEAN of WORCESTER.
 CANON LIDDON.
 CANON GREGORY.
 The ARCHBISHOP of ARMAGH.
 The ARCHBISHOP of DUBLIN.
 The BISHOP of MEATH.
 The BISHOP of DOWN and CONNOR.
 The BISHOP of KILLALOE.
 The BISHOP of LIMERICK.
 The BISHOP of TUAM.
 The BISHOP of DERRY and RAPHOE.
 The BISHOP of CASHEL.
 The BISHOP of KILMORE.
 The BISHOP of CORK.
 The BISHOP of OSSORY.
 The VEN. ARCHDEACON REICHEL.
 The PRINCIPAL of the THEOLOGICAL COLLEGE, GLOUCESTER.
 The PRINCIPAL of the NATIONAL SOCIETY'S TRAINING COLLEGE, BATTERSEA.
 The CANON IN CHARGE of the DIVINITY SCHOOL, TRURO.
 The PRINCIPAL of St. BEES COLLEGE.
 The PRINCIPAL of the THEOLOGICAL COLLEGE, WELLS.
 The PRINCIPAL of LICHFIELD THEOLOGICAL COLLEGE.
 The PRINCIPAL, St. DAVID'S COLLEGE.
 The RIGHT HON. WILLIAM EWART GLADSTONE, M.P., LL.D.
 The Rev. A. H. CHARTERIS, D.D., Professor of Biblical Criticism in the University of Edinburgh.
 Dr. LEE, Professor of Ecclesiastical History in the University of Glasgow.
 The RIGHT HON. JOHN INGLIS, D.C.L., LL.D., Chancellor of the University of Edinburgh.

The EARL of SHAFTESBURY.
 Dr. ANGUS.
 Dr. STOUTON.
 The Rev. C. H. SPURGEON.
 Dr. RIGG, of the Westminster Normal Institution.
 Dr. KENNEDY.
 The Rev. EDWIN PAXTON HOOD.
 The Rev. W. MORLEY PUNSHON, LL.D.
 The Rev. HORATIUS BONAR, D.D.
 Dr. GOOLD, of Edinburgh.
 PROFESSOR BINNIE, D.D.
 PROFESSOR BLAIR, D.D.
 Dr. ANDREW THOMSON, of Edinburgh.
 Dr. DAVID BROWN, Principal of Free Church College, Aberdeen.
 PROFESSOR SALMOND, of Free Church College, Aberdeen.
 Dr. W. LINDSAY ALEXANDER.
 Dr. ALEXANDER MACLAREN.
 The Rev. PRINCIPAL RAINY, D.D., of New College, Edinburgh.
 Dr. JAMES MACGREGOR, of Edinburgh.
 Dr. ANTILFF, Principal of the Theological Institute, Sunderland.
 Dr. NEWTH, of New College.
 The Rev. E. E. JENKINS, M.A., President of the Wesleyan Conference.
 The Rev. M. G. OSBORN, Secretary of the Wesleyan Conference.
 Dr. GEORGE OSBORN, of the Theological Institution, Richmond.
 The Rev. R. GREEN.
 The Rev. W. HUDSON.
 The Rev. F. GREEVES.
 Dr. W. P. POPE, Professor of Theology, Didsbury.
 Dr. GERVAASE SMITH.
 The Rev. GEORGE MARTIN.
 Dr. FALDING.
 Dr. CHARLES STANFORD.
 Dr. LANDELS.
 The Rev. JOHN H. GODWIN.
 The Rev. J. C. HARRISON.
 The Rev. JOSEPH WOOD, M.A.
 Dr. CUMMING.
 The Rev. COLIN CAMPBELL McKECHNIE.
 The Rev. R. TUCK, B.A.
 The Rev. PRINCIPAL MCALL, of Hackney College.
 The Rev. ROBERT N. YOUNG, of Headingley College, Leeds.
 The Rev. R. VAUGHAN PRYCE, M.A., LL.D., of Cheshunt College.
 The Rev. PROFESSOR REYNOLDS, B.A., D.D., of Cheshunt College.
 The Late Dr. JOSEPH MULLENS, Foreign Secretary of the London Missionary Society.
 The Rev. T. G. ROOKE, B.A., President of the Baptist College, Rawdon, Leeds.
 The Rev. CHARLES CHAPMAN, M.A., of Western College, Plymouth.
 The Rev. ALEXANDER HANNAY, Secretary of the Congregational Union of England and Wales.
 The Rev. W. H. GRIFFITH, M.A., Principal of Independent College, Taunton.
 Dr. ALEXANDER THOMSON, Professor of Hebrew in the Lancashire Independent College.
 The Rev. JAMES COMPER GRAY, Author of "Class and Desk," "Topics for Teachers," "Biblical Museum," &c., &c.
 The Rev. J. BALDWIN BROWN, B.A.
 Sir CHARLES REED, Chairman of the London School Board.
 W. H. GROSER, Chairman of the Publication Committee of the Sunday School Union.

Just Ready, Pica 16mo.

FOUR LIGHT VOLUMES, IN FINGER CASE, FROM £1 3 0.

THE HOLY BIBLE, FOR THE USE OF INVALIDS.

($7\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{4} \times 4$ inches.)

THE LORD is my shepherd;
I shall not want.

2 He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters.

4 He that hath clean and a pure heart; who not lifted up his soul in vanity, nor sworn deceit:
5 He shall receive the

IN VARIOUS BINDINGS, FROM 3s. 6d.

THE SMALLEST BIBLE IN THE WORLD.

($4\frac{1}{2} \times 2\frac{3}{4} \times \frac{1}{2}$ inches.)

Distinction of meats LEVITICUS, XI. clean and unclean.

for a wave offering before the Lord;
and it shall be thine, and thy sons' with thee, by a statute for ever; as the Lord hath commanded.

16 ¶ And Moses diligently sought the goat of the sin offering, and, behold, it was burnt; and he was angry with Eleazar and Ithamar, the sons of Aaron which were left alive, saying,

CHAPTER XI.

1 What beasts may, 4 and what may not be eaten. 9 What fishes. 13
What fowls. 20 The creeping things which are unclean.

AND the Lord spake unto Moses and to Aaron, saying unto them,
2 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, These are the beasts which ye

"The type of this dainty little volume, though necessarily very minute, is clear and legible."—The Times.

"It is printed on tough India paper of extreme thinness, and is wonderfully clear."—The Guardian.

"When bound in limp morocco leather it weighs less than $3\frac{1}{2}$ oz."—The Athenæum.

"It will pass through the post for a penny, and yet contains the whole of the Authorised Version from Genesis to Revelation."—The Graphic.

"It is not only a curiosity, but so convenient as not to encumber an ordinary waistcoat pocket."—The Globe.

"It is smaller than an ordinary Prayer-Book, and can be read easily enough. * * * * It is a curiosity of the Binder's as well as of the Printer's art."—The Spectator.

"Besides being a marvel as regards size, the little volume is a model of printing, highly creditable to the Oxford University Press."—The Standard.

LONDON: HENRY FROWDE,
OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS WAREHOUSE,
7, PATERNOSTER ROW.

Therion . p 288

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

ms. 388.7

Harvard College Library

FROM THE BEQUEST OF HENRY WARE WALES, M.D.

Class of 1838

FOR BOOKS OF INTEREST TO THE SANSKRIT DEPARTMENT

Indl 380.7

Harvard College Library

FROM THE BEQUEST OF HENRY WARE WALES, M.D.

Class of 1838

FOR BOOKS OF INTEREST TO THE SANSKRIT DEPARTMENT

THE
SACRED BOOKS OF THE EAST

HENRY FROWDE, M.A.
PUBLISHER TO THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD

LONDON, EDINBURGH, AND NEW YORK

THE
SACRED BOOKS OF THE EAST

TRANSLATED

BY VARIOUS ORIENTAL SCHOLARS

AND EDITED BY

F. MAX MÜLLER

VOL. VIII

SECOND EDITION

⊗xford

AT THE CLARENDON PRESS

1898

[All rights reserved]

Oxford

PRINTED AT THE CLARENDON PRESS

BY HORACE HART, M.A.

PRINTER TO THE UNIVERSITY

THE BHAGAVADGĪTĀ WITH THE SANATSUGĀTĪYA AND
THE ANUGĪTĀ

TRANSLATED BY THE LATE
KĀSHINĀTH TRIMBAK TELANG, M.A.

SECOND EDITION, REVISED

Oxford
AT THE CLARENDON PRESS

1898

[All rights reserved]

1/2 of fund

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
BHAGAVADGĪTĀ :—
Introduction	1
Translation	37
SANATSUGĀTĪYA :—
Introduction	135
Translation	149
ARUGĪTĀ :—
Introduction	197
Translation	229
INDEX OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS	395
SANSKRIT INDEX	439

Transliteration of Oriental Alphabets adopted for the Translations of the Sacred Books of the East	443

BHAGAVADGÎTÂ.

INTRODUCTION

TO

BHAGAVADGÎTÂ.

IT has become quite a literary commonplace, that—to borrow the words of Professor Max Müller in one of his recent lectures—history, in the ordinary sense of the word, is almost unknown in Indian literature¹. And it is certainly a remarkable irony of fate, that we should be obliged to make this remark on the very threshold of an introduction to the Bhagavadgîtâ; for according to the eminent French philosopher, Cousin², this great deficiency in Sanskrit literature is due, in no inconsiderable measure, to the doctrines propounded in the Bhagavadgîtâ itself. But however that may be, this much is certain, that the student of the Bhagavadgîtâ must, for the present, go without that reliable historical information touching the author of the work, the time at which it was composed, and even the place it occupies in literature, which one naturally desires, when entering upon the study of any work. More especially in an attempt like the present, intended as it mainly is for students of the history of religion, I should have been better pleased, if I could, in this Introduction, have concentrated to a focus, as it were, only those well ascertained historical results, on which there is something like a consensus of opinion among persons qualified to judge. But there is no exaggeration in saying, that it is almost impossible to lay down even a single proposition respecting any important matter connected with the Bhagavadgītā, about which any such consensus can be said to exist. The conclusions arrived at in this Introduction must, therefore, be distinctly understood to embody individual opinions only, and must be taken accordingly for what they are worth.

¹ Hibbert Lectures, p. 131.

² Lectures on the History of Modern Philosophy (translated by O. W. Wight), vol. i, pp. 49, 50. At p. 433 seq. of the second volume, M. Cousin gives a general view of the doctrine of the Gîtâ. See also Mr. Maurice's and Ritter's Histories of Philosophy.

The full name of the work is Bhagavadgītā. In common parlance, we often abbreviate the name into Gītā, and in Sanskrit literature the name occurs in both forms. In the works of Śaṅkarācārya, quotations from the Gītā are introduced, sometimes with the words 'In the Gītā,' or 'In the Bhagavadgītā,' and sometimes with words which may be rendered 'In the Gītās,' the plural form being used¹. In the colophons to the MSS. of the work, the form current, apparently throughout India, is, 'In the Upanishads sung (Gītās) by the Deity.' Śaṅkarācārya, indeed, sometimes calls it the Īśvara Gītā², which, I believe, is the specific title of a different work altogether. The signification, however, of the two names is identical, namely, the song sung by the Deity, or, as Wilkins translates it, the Divine Lay.

This Divine Lay forms part of the Bhishma Parvan of the Mahābhārata—one of the two well-known national epics of India. The Gītā gives its name to a subdivision of the Bhishma Parvan, which is called the Bhagavadgītā Parvan, and which includes, in addition to the eighteen chapters of which the Gītā consists, twelve other chapters. Upon this the question has naturally arisen, Is the Gītā a genuine portion of the Mahābhārata, or is it a later addition? The question is one of considerable difficulty. But I cannot help saying, that the manner in which it has been generally dealt with is not altogether satisfactory to my mind. Before going any further into that question, however, it is desirable to state some of the facts on which the decision must be based. It appears, then, that the royal family of Hastināpura was divided into two branches: the one called the Kauravas, and the other the Pāṇḍavas. The former wished to keep the latter out of the share of the kingdom claimed by them; and so, after many attempts at an amicable arrangement had proved fruitless, it was determined to decide the differences between the two parties by the arbitrament of arms. Each party accordingly collected its adherents, and the hostile armies met on the 'holy field of Kurukshetra,' mentioned in the opening lines of our poem. At this juncture, Krishna Dvaipâyana, alias Vyâsa, a relative of both parties and endowed with more than human powers, presents himself before Dhritarâshtra, the father of the Kauravas, who is stated to be altogether blind. Vyâsa asks Dhritarâshtra whether it is his wish to look with his own eyes on the course of the battle; and on Dhritarâshtra's expressing his reluctance, Vyâsa deposes one Saṅgaya to relate to Dhritarâshtra all the events of the battle, giving to Saṅgaya, by means of his own super-human powers, all necessary aids for performing the duty. Then the battle begins, and after a ten days' struggle, the first great general of the Kauravas, namely Bhishma, falls¹. At this point Saṅgaya comes up to Dhritarâshtra, and announces to him the sad result, which is of course a great blow to his party. Dhritarâshtra then makes numerous enquiries of Saṅgaya regarding the course of the conflict, all of which Saṅgaya duly answers. And among his earliest answers is the account of the conversation between Krishna and Arguna at the commencement of the battle, which constitutes the Bhagavadgītā. After relating to Dhritarâshtra that 'wonderful and holy dialogue,' and after giving an account of what occurred in the intervals of the conversation, Saṅgaya proceeds to narrate the actual events of the battle.

¹ Ex gr. Śāstraka Bhāṣya, vol. ii, p. 840. It is also often cited as a Smṛiti, ibid. vol. i, p. 152.

² See inter alia Śāstraka Bhāṣya, vol. i, p. 455, vol. ii, p. 687, and Colebrooke's Essays, vol. i, p. 353 (Madras; Lassen's edition of the Gītā, XXXV.

With this rough outline of the framework of the story before us, we are now in a position to consider the opposing arguments on the point above noted. Mr. Talboys Wheeler writes on that point as follows²: 'But there remains one

¹ The whole story is given in brief by the late Professor Goldstücker in the Westminster Review, April 1868, p. 392 seq. See now his Literary Remains, II, 114 seq.

² History of India, vol. i, p. 293.

other anomalous characteristic of the history of the great war, as it is recorded in the Mahābhārata, which cannot be passed over in silence; and that is the extraordinary abruptness and infelicity with which Brahmanical discourses, such as essays on law, on morals, sermons on divine things, and even instruction in the so-called sciences are recklessly grafted upon the main narrative. . . . Krishna and Arguna on the morning of the first day of the war, when both armies are drawn out in battle-array, and hostilities are about to begin, enter into a long and philosophical dialogue respecting the various forms of devotion which lead to the emancipation of the soul; and it cannot be denied that, however incongruous and irrelevant such a dialogue must appear on the eve of battle, the discourse of Krishna, whilst acting as the charioteer of Arguna, contains the essence of the most spiritual phases of Brahmanical teaching, and is expressed in language of such depth and sublimity, that it has become deservedly known as the Bhagavad-gītā or Divine Song. . . . Indeed no effort has been spared by the Brahmanical compilers to convert the history of the great war into a vehicle for Brahmanical teaching; and so skilfully are many of these interpolations interwoven with the story, that it is frequently impossible to narrate the one, without referring to the other, however irrelevant the matter may be to the main subject in hand.' It appears to me, I own, very difficult to accept that as a satisfactory argument, amounting, as it does, to no more than this—that 'interpolations,' which must needs be referred to in narrating the main story even to make it intelligible, are nevertheless to be regarded 'as evidently the product of a Brahmanical age¹,' and presumably also a later age, because, forsooth, they are irrelevant and incongruous according to the 'tastes and ideas¹'—not of the time, be it remembered, when the 'main story' is supposed to have been written, but—of this enlightened nineteenth century. The support, too, which may be supposed to be derived by this argument from the allegation that there has been an attempt to Brahmanize, so to say, the history of the great war, appears to me to be extremely weak, so far as the Gītā is concerned. But that is a point which will have to be considered more at large in the sequel¹.

¹ History of India, vol. i, p. 288; and compare generally upon this point the remarks in Gladstone's Homer, especially vol. i, p. 70 seq.

While, however, I am not prepared to admit the cogency of Mr. Wheeler's arguments, I am not, on the other hand, to be understood as holding that the Gītā must be accepted as a genuine part of the original Mahābhārata. I own that my feeling on the subject is something akin to that of the great historian of Greece regarding the Homeric question, a feeling of painful diffidence regarding the soundness of any conclusion whatever. While it is impossible not to feel serious doubts about the critical condition of the Mahābhārata generally; while, indeed, we may be almost certain that the work has been tampered with from time to time²; it is difficult to come to a satisfactory conclusion regarding any particular given section of it. And it must be remembered, also, that the alternatives for us to choose from in these cases are not only these two, that the section in question may be a genuine part of the work, or that it may be a later interpolation: but also this, as suggested recently, though not for the first time, by Mr. Freeman³ with reference to the Homeric question, that the section may have been in existence at the date of the original epos, and may have been worked by the author of the epos into his own production. For that absence of dread, 'either of the law or sentiment of copyright,' which Mr. Freeman relies upon with regard to a primitive Greek poet, was by no means confined to the Greek people, but may be traced amongst us also. The commentator Madhusūdana Sarasvatī likens the Gītā to those dialogues which occur in sundry Vedic works, particularly the *Upanishads*⁴. Possibly—I will not use a stronger word—possibly the Gītā may have existed as such a dialogue before the Mahābhārata, and may have been appropriated by the author of the Mahābhārata to his own purposes¹. But yet, upon the whole, having regard to the fact that those ideas of unity on which Mr. Wheeler and others set so much store are scarcely appropriate to our old literature; to the fact that the Gītā fits pretty well into the setting given to it in the Bhīshma Parvan; to the fact that the feeling of Arguna, which gives occasion to it, is not at all inconsistent, but is most consonant, with poetical justice; to the fact that there is not in the Gītā, in my judgment, any trace of a sectarian or 'Brahmanizing' spirit², such as Mr. Wheeler and also the late Professor Goldstücker³ hold to have animated the arrangers of the Mahābhārata; having regard, I say, to all these facts, I am prepared to adhere, I will not say without diffidence, to the theory of the genuineness of the Bhagavadgītā as a portion of the original Mahābhārata.

¹ Infra, p. 21 seq.

² Compare the late Professor Goldstücker's remarks in the Westminster Review for April 1868, p. 389. ³ Contemporary Review February 1879.

⁴ Madhusūdana mentions the dialogue between Ganaka and Yāgyavalkya as a specific parallel.

The next point to consider is as to the authorship of the Gītā. The popular notion on this subject is pretty well known. The whole of the Mahābhārata is, by our traditions, attributed to Vyāsa, whom we have already noticed as a relative of the Kauravas and Pāṇḍavas; and therefore the Bhagavadgītā, also, is naturally affiliated to the same author. The earliest written testimony to this authorship, that I can trace, is to be found in Śaṅkarācārya's commentary on the Gītā⁴ itself and on the *Bṛhadāraṇyakopaniṣad*⁵. To a certain extent, the mention of Vyāsa in the body of the Gītā would, from a historic standpoint, seem to militate against this tradition. But I have not seen in any of the commentaries to which I have had access, any consideration of this point, as there is of the mention in some

¹ See to this effect M. Fauriel, quoted in Grote's Greece, II, 195 (Cabinet ed.)

² Compare also Weber's History of Indian Literature English translation, p. 187. The instruction, however, as to 'the reverence due to the priesthood' from 'the military caste,' which is there spoken of, appears to me to be entirely absent from the Gītā; see p. 21 seq. infra.

³ Westminster Review, April 1868, p. 388 seq.; and Remains, I, 104, 105.

⁴ P. 6 (Calcutta ed., Samvat, 1927).

⁵ P. 841 (Bibl. Indic. ed.; also Svetāsvatara, p. 278.

Smṛitis and Sūtras of the names of those to whom those Smṛitis and Sūtras are respectively ascribed¹.

We must now leave these preliminary questions, unluckily in a state far from satisfactory, and proceed to that most important topic—the date when the Gītā was composed, and the position it occupies in Sanskrit literature. We have here to consider the external evidence bearing on these points, which is tantalizingly meagre; and the internal evidence, which is, perhaps, somewhat more full. And taking first the internal evidence, the various items falling under that head may be marshalled into four groups. Firstly, we have to consider the general character of the Gītā with reference to its mode of handling its subject. Secondly, there is the character of its style and language. Thirdly, we have to consider the nature of the versification of the Gītā. And fourthly and lastly, we must take note of sundry points of detail, such as the attitude of the Gītā towards the Vedas and towards caste, its allusions to other systems of speculation, and other matters of the like nature. On each of these groups, in the order here stated, we now proceed to make a few observations.

And first about the manner in which the Gītā deals with its subject. It appears to me, that the work bears on the face of it very plain marks indicating that it belongs to an age prior to the system-making age of Sanskrit philosophy. In 1875, I wrote as follows upon this point: ‘My view is, that in the Gītā and the Upanishads, the philosophical part has not been consistently and fully worked out. We have there the results of free thought, exercised on different subjects of great moment, unfettered by the exigencies of any foregone conclusions, or of any fully developed theory. It is afterwards, it is at a later stage of philosophical progress, that system-making arises. In that stage some thinkers interpret whole works by the light of some particular doctrines or expressions. And the result is the development of a whole multitude of philosophical sects, following the lead of those thinkers, and all professing to draw their doctrine from the Gītā or the Upanishads, yet each differing remarkably from the other¹. Since this was written, Professor Max Müller's Hibbert Lectures have been published. And I am happy to find, that as regards the Upanishads, his view coincides exactly with that which I have expressed in the words now quoted. Professor Max Müller says: 'There is not what may be called a philosophical system in these Upanishads. They are in the true sense of the word guesses at truth, frequently contradicting each other, yet all tending in one direction².' Further corroboration for the same view is also forthcoming. Professor Fitz-Edward Hall, in a passage which I had not noticed before, says³: 'In the Upanishads, the Bhagavad-gītā, and other ancient Hindu books, we encounter, in combination, the doctrines which, after having been subjected to modifications that rendered them as wholes irreconcilable, were distinguished, at an uncertain period, into what have for many ages been styled the Sāṅkhya and the Vedānta.' We have thus very weighty authority for adhering to the view already expressed on this important topic. But as Professor Weber appears to have expressed an opinion⁴ intended perhaps to throw some doubt on the correctness of that view, it is desirable to go a little more into detail to fortify it by actual reference to the contents of the Gītā, the more especially as we can thus elucidate the true character of that work. Before doing so, however, it may be pointed out, that the proposition we have laid down is one, the test of which lies more in a comprehensive review of the whole of the Gītā, than in the investigation of small details on which there is necessarily much room for difference of opinion.

¹ See, as to this, Colebrooke's Essays, vol. i, p. 328 (Madras).

And first, let us compare that indisputably systematized work, the current Yoga-sūtras⁵, with the Bhagavadgītā on ¹ See the Introductory Essay to my Bhagavadgītā, translated into English blank verse, p. lxvii. See also Goldstucker's Remains, I, 48, 77; II, 10.

² P. 317; cf. also p. 338.

³ Preface to Sāṅkhya Sāra, p. 7 (Bibl. Ind. ed.)

⁴ History of Indian Literature, p. 28.

⁵ Are we to infer from the circumstance mentioned in Weber's History of one or two topics, where they both travel over common ground. In the Gītā, chapter VI, stanzas 33, 34 (p. 71), we have Arguna putting what is, in substance, a question to Krishna, as to how the mind, which is admittedly 'fickle, boisterous, strong, and obstinate,' is to be brought under control—such control having been declared by Krishna to be necessary for attaining devotion (yoga)? Krishna answers by saying that the mind may be restrained by 'practice (abhyāsa) and indifference to worldly objects (vairāgya).' He then goes on to say, that devotion cannot be attained without self-restraint, but that one who has self-restraint, and works to achieve devotion, may succeed in acquiring it. Here the subject drops. There is no further explanation of 'practice' or 'indifference to worldly objects,' no exposition of the mode in which they work, and so forth. Contrast now the Yoga-sūtras. The topic is there discussed at the very outset of the work. As usual the author begins with 'Now therefore the Yoga is to be taught.' He then explains Yoga by the well-known definition 'Yoga is the restraint of the movements of the mind.' And then after pointing out what the movements of the mind are, he proceeds: 'Their restraint is by means of practice and indifference to worldly objects¹,'—the very terms, be it remarked in passing, which are used in the Bhagavadgītā. But having come thus far, the author of the Sūtras does not drop the subject as the author of the Gītā does. He goes on in this wise: 'Practice is the effort for keeping it steady.' 'And that becomes firmly grounded when resorted to for a long time, without interruption, and with correct conduct.' So far we have a discussion of the first requisite specified, namely, practice. Patañjali then goes on to his second requisite for mental restraint. 'Indifference to worldly objects is the consciousness of having subdued desires &c. (Vasikāra sañgīhā) which belongs to one having no longing for objects visible and those which are heard of' (from Sâstras &c., such as heaven and so forth). He next proceeds to distinguish another and higher species of 'indifference,' and then he goes on to point out the results of that self-restraint which is to be acquired in the mode he has expounded. That is one instance. Now take another. In chapter VI, stanza 10 and following stanzas, the Gîtâ sets forth elaborately the mode of practically achieving the mental abstraction called Yoga. It need not be reproduced here. The reader can readily find out how sundry directions are there given for the purpose specified, but without any attempt at systematizing. Contrast the Yoga-sûtras. In the Sâdhanapâda, the section treating of the acquisition of Yoga, Patañjali states in the twenty-ninth aphorism the well-known eight elements of Yoga. Then he subdivides these elements, and expatiates on each of them distinctly, defining them, indicating the mode of acquiring them, and hinting at the results which flow from them. 'That inordinate love of subdivision,' which Dr. F. E. Hall¹ has somewhere attributed to the Hindus, appears plainly in these aphorisms, while there is not a trace of it in the corresponding passage in the Bhagavadgîtâ. In my opinion, therefore, these comparisons strongly corroborate the proposition we have laid down regarding the unsystematic, or rather non-systematic, character of the work. In the one we have definition, classification, division, and subdivision. In the other we have a set of practical directions, without any attempt to arrange them in any very scientific order. In the one you have a set of technical terms with specific significations. In the other no such precision is yet manifest. In one word, you have in the Gîtâ the germs, and noteworthy germs too, of a system², and you have most of the raw material of a system, but you have no system ready-made.

Indian Literature (p. 223, note 235), that the author of these Sūtras was older than Buddha?

¹ Sūtra 12, Abhyāsa-vairāgyābhyāsa tannirodhaḥ.

Let us look at the matter now from a slightly different point of view. There are sundry words used in the Bhaga-vadgitā, the significations of which are not quite identical throughout the work. Take, for instance, the word 'yoga,' which we have rendered 'devotion.' At Gitā, chapter II, stanza 48 (p. 49), a definition is given of that word. In chapter VI, the signification it bears is entirely different. And again in chapter IX, stanza 5, there is still another sense in which the word is used¹. The word 'Brahman' too occurs in widely varying significations. And one of its meanings, indeed, is quite singular, namely, 'Nature' (see chapter XIV, stanza 3). Similar observations, to a greater or less extent, apply to the words Buddhi, Ātman, and Svabhāva². Now these are words which stand for ideas not unimportant in the philosophy of the Bhagavadgitā. And the absence of scientific precision about their use appears to me to be some indication of that non-systematic character of which we have already spoken.

¹ In the Preface to his Sâṅkhya Sâra, I think.

² This is all that we can infer from the few cases of division and classification which we do meet with in the Gîtâ. A subject like that treated of in this work could not well be discussed without some classifications &c.

There is one other line of argument, which leads, I think, to the same conclusion. There are several passages in the Gitā which it is not very easy to reconcile with one another; and no attempt is made to harmonise them. Thus, for example, in stanza 16 of chapter VII, Krishna divides his devotees into four classes, one of which consists of 'men of knowledge,' whom, Krishna says, he considers 'as his own self.' It would probably be difficult to imagine any expression which could indicate higher esteem. Yet in stanza 46 of chapter VI, we have it laid down, that the devotee is superior not only to the mere performer of penances, but even to the men of knowledge. The commentators betray their gnostic bias by interpreting 'men of knowledge' in this latter passage to mean those who have acquired erudition in the Sāstras and their significations. This is not an interpretation to be necessarily rejected. But there is in it a certain twisting of words, which, under the circumstances here, I am not inclined to accept. And on the other hand, it must not be forgotten, that the implication fairly derivable from chapter IV, stanza 38 (pp. 62, 63), would seem to be rather that knowledge is superior to devotion—is the higher stage to be reached by means of devotion as the stepping-stone. In another passage again at Gītā, chapter XII, stanza 12, concentration is preferred to knowledge, which also seems to me to be irreconcilable with chapter VII, stanza 16. Take still another instance. At Gītā, chapter V, stanza 15, it is said, that ‘the Lord receives the sin or merit of none.’ Yet at chapter V, stanza 29, and again at chapter IX, stanza 24, Krishna calls himself ‘the Lord and enjoyer’ of all sacrifices and penances. How, it may well be asked, can the Supreme Being ‘enjoy’ that which he does not even ‘receive?’ Once more, at chapter X, stanza 29, Krishna declares that ‘none is hateful to me, none dear.’ And yet the remarkable verses at the close of chapter XII seem to stand in point-blank contradiction to that declaration. There through a most elaborate series of stanzas, the burden of Krishna’s eloquent sermon is ‘such a one is dear to me.’ And again in those fine verses, where Krishna winds up his Divine Lay, he similarly tells Arguna, that he, Arguna, is ‘dear’ to Krishna. And Krishna also speaks of that devotee as ‘dear’ to him, who may publish the mystery of the Gītā among those who reverence the Supreme Being¹. And yet again, how are we to reconcile the same passage about none being ‘hateful or dear’ to Krishna, with his own words at chapter XVI, stanza 18 and following stanzas? The language used in describing the ‘demoniac’ people there mentioned is not remarkable for sweetness towards them, while Krishna says positively, ‘I hurl down such people into demoniac wombs, whereby they go down into misery and the vilest condition.’ These persons are scarcely characterised with accuracy ‘as neither hateful nor dear’ to Krishna. It seems to me, that all these are real inconsistencies in the Gītā, not such, perhaps, as might not be explained away, but such, I think, as indicate a mind making guesses at truth, as Professor Max

¹ In chapter X the word occurs in two different senses in the same stanza (st. 7).

² Compare the various passages, references to which are collected in the Sanskrit Index at the end of this volume.

¹ And see, too, chapter VII, stanza 17, where the man of knowledge is declared to be ‘dear’ to Krishna.

Muller puts it, rather than a mind elaborating a complete and organised system of philosophy. There is not even a trace of consciousness on the part of the author that these inconsistencies exist. And the contexts of the various passages indicate, in my judgment, that a half-truth is struck out here, and another half-truth there, with special reference to the special subject then under discussion ; but no attempt is made to organise the various half-truths, which are apparently incompatible, into a symmetrical whole, where the apparent inconsistencies might possibly vanish altogether in the higher synthesis. And having regard to these various points, and to the further point, that the sequence of ideas throughout the verses of the Gītā is not always easily followed, we are, I think, safe in adhering to the opinion expressed above, that the Gītā is a non-systematic work, and in that respect belongs to the same class as the older Upanishads.

We next come to the consideration of the style and language of the Bhagavadgītā. And that, I think, furnishes a strong argument for the proposition, that it belongs to an age considerably prior to the epoch of the artificial department of Sanskrit literature—the epoch, namely, of the dramas and poems. In its general character, the style impresses me as quite archaic in its simplicity. Compounds, properly so called, are not numerous ; such as there are, are not long ones, and very rarely, if ever, present any puzzle in analysing. The contrast there presented with what is called the classical literature, as represented by Bāna or Dandin, or even Kālidāsa, is not a little striking. In Kālidāsa, doubtless, the love for compounds is pretty well subdued, though I think his works have a perceptibly larger proportion of them than the Gītā. But after Kālidāsa the love for compounds goes through a remarkable development, till in later writings it may be said almost to have gone mad. Even in Bāna and Dandin, Subandhu and Bhavabhūti, the plethora of compounds is often wearisome. And the same remark applies to many of the copper-plate and other inscriptions which have been recently deciphered, and some of which date from the early centuries of the Christian era. Take again the exuberance of figures and tropes which is so marked in the classical style. There is little or nothing of that in the Gītā, where you have a plain and direct style of natural simplicity, and yet a style not by any means devoid of æsthetic merit like the style of the Sūtra literature. There is also an almost complete absence of involved syntactical constructions; no attempt to secure that jingle of like sounds, which seems to have proved a temptation too strong even for Kālidāsa's muse entirely to resist. But on the contrary, we have those repetitions of words and phrases, which are characteristic, and not only in Sanskrit, of the style of an archaic period¹. Adverting specially to the language as distinguished from the style of the Gītā, we find such words as Anta, Bhāshā, Brahman, some of which are collected in the Sanskrit Index in this volume, which have gone out of use in the classical literature in the significations they respectively bear in the Gītā. The word 'ha,' which occurs once, is worthy of special note. It is the equivalent of 'gha,' which occurs in the Vedic Samhitās. In the form 'ha' it occurs in the Brāhmaṇas. But it never occurs, I think, in what is properly called the classical literature. It is, indeed, found in the Purāṇas. But that is a class of works which occupies a very unique position. There is a good deal in the Purāṇas that, I think, must be admitted to be very ancient²; while undoubtedly also there is a great deal in them that is very modern. It is, therefore, impossible to treat the use of 'ha' in that class of works as negating an inference of the antiquity of any book where the word occurs; while its use in Vedic works and its total absence from modern works indicate such antiquity pretty strongly. We may, therefore, embody the result of this part of the discussion in the proposition, that the Gītā is removed by a considerable linguistic and chronological distance from classical Sanskrit literature. And so far as it goes, this proposition agrees with the result of our investigation of the first branch of internal evidence.

¹ Compare Muir, Sanskrit Texts, vol. i, p. 5. See, too, Goldstücker's Remains, I, 177.

² This opinion, which I had expressed as long ago as 1874 in the Introduction to my edition of Bhartṛhari's Satakas, is, I find, also held by Dr. Buhler; see his Introduction to Āpastamba in this series, p. xx seq., note. Purāṇas are mentioned in the Sutta Nipāta (p. 115), as to the date of which, see inter alia Swamy's Introduction, p. xvii.

The next branch of that evidence brings us to the character of the versification of the Gītā. Here, again, a survey of Sanskrit verse generally, and the verse of the Gītā in particular, leads us to a conclusion regarding the position of the Gītā in Sanskrit literature, which is in strict accord with the conclusions we have already drawn. In the verse of the Vedic Samhitās, there is almost nothing like a rigidly fixed scheme of versification, no particular collocation of long and short syllables is absolutely necessary. If we attempt to chant them in the mode in which classical Sanskrit verse is chanted, we invariably come across lines where the chanting cannot be smooth. If we come next to the versification of the Upanishads, we observe some progress made towards such fixity of scheme as we have alluded to above. Though there are still numerous lines, which cannot be smoothly chanted, there are, on the other hand, a not altogether inconsiderable number which can be smoothly chanted. In the Bhagavadgītā a still further advance, though a slight one, may, I think, be marked. A visibly larger proportion of the stanzas in the Gītā conform to the metrical schemes as laid down by the writers on prosody, though there are still sundry verses which do not so conform, and cannot, accordingly, be chanted in the regular way. Lastly, we come to the Kāvyas and Nāṭakas—the classical literature. And here in practice we find everywhere a most inflexible rigidity of scheme, while the theory is laid down in a rule which says, that 'even māsha may be changed to masha, but a break of metre should be avoided.' This survey of Sanskrit verse may, I think, be fairly treated as showing, that adhesion to the metrical schemes is one test of the chronological position of a work—the later the work, the more undeviating is such adhesion. I need not stay here to point out, how this view receives corroboration from the rules given on this subject in the standard work of Piṅgala on the Kṛandas Sāstra. I will only conclude this point by saying, that the argument from the versification of the Gītā, so far as it goes, indicates its position as being prior to the classical literature, and nearly contemporaneous with the Upanishad literature.

We now proceed to investigate the last group of facts falling under the head of internal evidence, as mentioned above. And first as regards the attitude of the Gītā towards the Vedas. If we examine all the passages in the Gītā, in which reference is made to the Vedas, the aggregate result appears to be, that the author of the Gītā does not throw the Vedas entirely overboard. He feels and expresses reverence for them, only that reverence is of a somewhat special character. He says in effect, that the precepts of the Vedas are suitable to a certain class of people, of a certain intellectual and spiritual status, so to say. So far their authority is unimpeached. But if the unwise sticklers for the authority of the Vedas claim anything more for them than this, then the author of the Gītā holds them to be wrong. He contends, on the contrary, that acting upon the ordinances of the Vedas is an obstacle to the attainment of the *summum bonum*¹. Compare this with the doctrine of the Upanishads. The coincidence appears to me to be most noteworthy. In one of his recent lectures, Professor Max Müller uses the following eloquent language regarding the *Upanishads*²: ‘Lastly come the Upanishads; and what is their object? To show the utter uselessness, nay, the mischievousness of all ritual performances (compare our Gītā, pp. 47, 48, 84³); to condemn every sacrificial act which has for its motive a desire or hope of reward (comp. Gītā, p. 119⁴); to deny, if not the existence, at least the exceptional and exalted character

¹ Compare the passages collected under the word Vedas in our Index.

² Hibbert Lectures, p. 340 seq.

³ II, 42-45; IX, 20, 21.

⁴ XVII, 12.

of the Devas (comp. Gîtâ, pp. 76-84¹); and to teach that there is no hope of salvation and deliverance except by the individual self recognising the true and universal self, and finding rest there, where alone rest can be found² (comp. our Gîtâ Translation, pp. 78-83).

The passages to which I have given references in brackets will show, that Professor Max Müller's words might all be used with strict accuracy regarding the essential teaching of the Bhagavadgîtâ. We have here, therefore, another strong circumstance in favour of grouping the Gîtâ with the Upanishads. One more point is worthy of note. Wherever the Gîtâ refers to the Vedas in the somewhat disparaging manner I have noted, no distinction is taken between the portion which relates to the ritual and the portion which relates to that higher science, viz. the science of the soul, which Sanatkumâra speaks of in his famous dialogue with Nârada³. At Gîtâ, chapter II, stanza 45, Arjuna is told that the Vedas relate only to the effects of the three qualities, which effects Arjuna is instructed to overcome. At Gîtâ, chapter VI, stanza 44, Arjuna is told that he who has acquired some little devotion, and then exerts himself for further progress, rises above the Divine word—the Vedas. And there are also one or two other passages of the like nature. They all treat the Vedas as concerned with ritual alone. They make no reference to any portion of the Vedas dealing with the higher knowledge. If the word Vedânta, at Gîtâ, chapter XV, stanza 15 (p. 113), signifies, as it seems to signify, this latter portion of the Vedas, then that is the only allusion to it. But, from all the passages in the Gîtâ which refer to the Vedas, I am inclined to draw the inference, that the Upanishads of the Vedas were composed at a time not far removed from the time of the composition of the Gîtâ, and that at that period the Upanishads had not yet risen to the position of high importance which they afterwards commanded. In the passage referred to at chapter XV, the word Vedāntas probably signifies the Āraṇyakas, which may be regarded as marking the beginning of the epoch, which the composition of the Upanishads brought to its close. And it is to the close of this epoch, that I would assign the birth of the Gītā, which is probably one of the youngest members of the group to which it belongs.

¹ VII, 21-23; IX, 23-24.

² VIII, 14-16; IX, 29-33.

³ See A'kândogya-upanishad, p. 473, or rather I ought to have referred to the Mundaka-upanishad, where the superiority and inferiority is more distinctly stated in words, pp. 266, 267.

It appears to me, that this conclusion is corroborated by the fact that a few stanzas in the Gītā are identical with some stanzas in some of the Upanishads. With regard to the epic age of Greece, Mr. E. A. Freeman has said that, in carrying ourselves back to that age, 'we must cast aside all the notions with which we are familiar in our own age about property legal or moral in literary compositions. It is plain that there were phrases, epithets, whole lines, which were the common property of the whole epic school of poetry¹.' It appears to me that we must accept this proposition as equally applicable to the early days of Sanskrit literature, having regard to the common passages which we meet with in sundry of the Vedic works, and also sometimes, I believe, in the different Purāṇas. If this view is correct, then the fact that the Gītā contains some stanzas in the very words which we meet with in some of the Upanishads, indicates, to my mind, that the conclusion already drawn from other data about the position of the Gītā with regard to the Upanishads, is not by any means unwarranted, but one to which the facts before us rather seem to point.

And here we may proceed to draw attention to another fact connected with the relation of the Gītā to the Vedas. In stanza 17 of the ninth chapter of the Gītā, only Rik, Sāman, and Yagus are mentioned. The Atharva-veda is not referred to at all. This omission does certainly seem a very noteworthy one. For it is in a passage where the Supreme Being is identifying himself with everything, and where, therefore, the fourth Veda might fairly be expected to be mentioned. I may add that in commenting on Śaṅkara's remarks on this passage, Ānandagiri (and Madhusūdana Sarasvatī also) seems evidently to have been conscious of the possible force of this omission of the Atharva-veda. He accordingly says that by force of the word 'and' in the verse in question, the Atharvāṅgirasas, or Atharva-veda, must also be included. Are we at liberty to infer from this, that the Atharva-veda did not exist in the days when the Gītā was composed? The explanation ordinarily given for the omission of that Veda, where such omission occurs, namely, that it is not of any use in ordinary sacrificial matters, is one which can scarcely have any force in the present instance; though it is adequate, perhaps, to explain the words 'those who know the three branches of knowledge,' which occur only a few lines after the verse now under consideration. The commentators render no further help than has been already stated. Upon the whole, however, while I am not yet quite prepared to say, that the priority of the Gītā, even to the recognition of the Atharva-veda as a real Veda, may be fairly inferred from the passage in question, I think that the passage is noteworthy as pointing in that direction. But further data in explanation of the omission referred to must be awaited.

¹ Contemporary Review, February 1879.

If the conclusions here indicated about the relative positions of the Gītā and certain Vedic works are correct, we can fairly take the second century B.C. as a terminus before which the Gītā must have been composed. For the Upanishads are mentioned in the Mahābhāṣya of Patañjali, which we are probably safe in assigning to the middle of that century. The epoch of the older Upanishads, therefore, to which reference has been so frequently made here, may well be placed at some period prior to the beginning of the second century B.C. The Atharva-veda is likewise mentioned by Patañjali¹, and as 'ninefold,' too, be it remembered; so that if we are entitled to draw the conclusion which has been mentioned above from chapter IX, stanza 17, we come to the same period for the date of the Gītā.

¹ See also Sutta Nipāta, p. 115.

Another point to note in this connexion is the reference to the Sâma-veda as the best of the Vedas (see p. 88). That is a fact which seems to be capable of yielding some chronological information. For the estimation in which that Veda has been held appears to have varied at different times. Thus, in the Aitareya-brâhmana¹, the glory of the Sâman is declared to be higher than that of the Rik. In the *Khândogya-upanishad*² the Sâman is said to be the essence of the Rik, which Saṅkara interprets by saying that the Sâman is more weighty. In the *Prasna-upanishad*³, too, the implication of the passage V, 5 (in which the Sâman is stated as the guide to the Brahmaloka, while the Yagus is said to guide to the lunar world, and the Rik to the human world) is to the same effect. And we may also mention as on the same side the Nṛisimha Tâpini-upanishad and the Vedic passage cited in the commentary of Saṅkara on the closing sentence of the first khandā of that *Upanishad*⁴. On the other side, we have the statement in Manu that the sound of the Sâma-veda is unholy; and the consequent direction that where the sound of it is heard, the Rik and Yagus should not be recited⁵. We have also the passages from some of the Purâṇas noted by Dr. Muir in his excellent work, Original Sanskrit Texts, which point in the same direction⁶. And we have further the direction in the Āpastamba Dharma-sûtra, that the Sâman hymns should not be recited where the other Vedas are being recited⁷, as well as the grouping of the sound of the Sâman with various classes of objectionable and unholy noises, such as those of dogs and asses. It is pretty evident that the view of Āpastamba is based on the same theory as that of Manu. Now in looking at the two classes of authorities thus marshalled, it is plain that the Gītā ranges itself with those which are unquestionably the more ancient.

¹ Haug's edition, p. 68.

² Bibl. Ind. ed., p. 12.

³ Bibl. Ind. ed., p. 11.

⁴ Vol. iii (2nd ed.), p. 11 seq. Cf. Goldstücker's Remains, I, 4, 28, 266; II, 67.

⁵ Āpastamba Buhler's ed., I, 3, 17, 18 (pp. 38, 39 in this series); see further on this point Mr. Burnell's Devatâdhyâya-brâhmana, Intro., pp. viii, ix, and notes.

⁶ Bibl. Ind. ed., p. 221 seq.

⁷ Chapter IV, stanzas 123, 124.

And among the less ancient works, prior to which we may place the Gītā on account of the facts now under consideration, are Manu and Āpastamba. Now Manu's date is not ascertained, though, I believe, he is now generally considered to belong to about the second or third century B.C.¹ But Dr. Bühler, in the Preface to his Āpastamba in the present series, has adduced good reasons for holding that Āpastamba is prior to the third century B.C.², and we therefore obtain that as a point of time prior to which the Gītā must have been composed.

The next important item of internal evidence which we have to note, is the view taken of caste in the Bhagavadgītā. Here, again, a comparison of the doctrine of the Gītā with the conception of caste in Manu and Āpastamba is interesting and instructive. The view of Manu has been already contrasted by me with the Gītā in another place³. I do not propose to dwell on that point here, as the date of Manu is far from being satisfactorily ascertained. I prefer now to take up Āpastamba only, whose date, as just now stated, is fairly well fixed by Dr. Bühler. The division of castes, then, is twice referred to in the Bhagavadgītā. In the first passage (p. 59) it is stated that the division rests on differences of qualities and duties; in the second (pp. 126, 127) the various duties are distinctly stated according to the differences of qualities. Now in the first place, noting as we pass along, that there is nothing in the Gītā to indicate whether caste was hereditary, according to its view, whereas Āpastamba distinctly states it to be such, let us compare the second passage of the Gītā with the Sūtras of Āpastamba bearing on the point. The view enunciated in the Gītā appears to me plainly to belong to an earlier age—to an age of considerably less advancement in social and religious development. In the Gītā, for instance, the duties of a Brāhmaṇa are said to be tranquillity, self-restraint, and so forth. In Āpastamba, they are the famous six duties, namely, study, imparting instruction, sacrificing, officiating at others' sacrifices, making gifts, and receiving gifts; and three others, namely, inheritance, occupancy, and gleaning ears of corn, which, it may be remarked en passant, are not stated in Manu. The former seem to my mind to point to the age when the qualities which in early times gave the Brāhmaṇas their pre-eminence in Hindu society were still a living reality¹. It will be noted, too, that there is nothing in that list of duties which has any necessary or natural connexion with any privilege as belonging to the caste. The Law lays down these duties, in the true sense of the word. In Āpastamba, on the contrary, we see an advance towards the later view on both points. You have no reference to moral and religious qualities now. You have to do with ceremonies and acts. You have under the head 'duties' not mere obligations, but rights. For the duty of receiving gifts is a right, and so is the duty of teaching others and officiating at others' sacrifices; as we know not merely from the subsequent course of events, but also from a comparison of the duties of Brāhmaṇas on the one hand, and Kshatriyas, Vaisyas, and Sūdras on the other, as laid down by Manu and Āpastamba themselves. Āpastamba's rules, therefore, appear to belong to the time when the Brāhmaṇas had long been an established power, and were assuming to themselves those valuable privileges which they have always claimed in later times. The rules of the Gītā, on the other hand, point to a time considerably prior to this—to a time when the Brāhmaṇas were by their moral and intellectual qualities laying the foundation of that pre-eminence in Hindu society which afterwards enabled them to lord it over all castes. These observations mutatis mutandis apply to the rules regarding the other castes also. Here again, while the Gītā still insists on the inner qualities, which properly constitute the military profession, for instance, the rules of Āpastamba indicate the powerful influence of the Brāhmaṇas¹. For, as stated before, officiating at others' sacrifices, instructing others, and receiving presents, are here expressly prohibited to Kshatriyas as also to Vaisyas. The result of that is, that the Brāhmaṇas become indispensable to the Kshatriyas and Vaisyas, for upon both the duty of study, of offering sacrifices, and making gifts and presents is inculcated. In his outline of the History of Ancient Religions, Professor Tiele, speaking of the 'increasing influence of the Brāhmans,' writes as follows: 'Subject at first to the princes and nobles, and dependent on them, they began by insinuating themselves into their favour, and representing it as a religious duty to show protection and liberality towards them. Meanwhile they endeavoured to make themselves indispensable to them, gradually acquired the sole right to conduct public worship, and made themselves masters of instruction².' And after pointing out the high position thus achieved by the Brāhmans, and the low position of the Kāṇḍālas and others of the inferior castes, he adds: 'Such a position could not long be endured; and this serves to explain not only the rise of Buddhism, but also its rapid diffusion, and the radical revolution which it brought about³.' To proceed, however, with our comparison of the Gītā and Āpastamba. The superiority distinctly claimed by the latter for the Brāhmaṇa is not quite clearly brought out in the Gītā. 'Holy Brāhmaṇas and devoted royal saints' are bracketed together at p. 86; while the Kshatriyas are declared to have been the channel of communication between the Deity and mankind as regards the great doctrine of devotion propounded by the Bhagavadgītā. That indicates a position for the Kshatriyas much more like what the Upanishads disclose⁴, than even that which

¹ Professor Tiele (History of Ancient Religions, p. 127) considers the 'main features' of Manu to be 'pre-Buddhistic.'

² P. xxv.

³ See the Introductory Essay to my Bhagavadgītā in English verse, published in 1875, p. cxii.

¹ The remarks in the text will show how little there is in the Gītā of that 'Brahmanizing' which has been shortly noticed on a previous page.

¹ As to the Kshatriyas the contrast with Manu's rules is even stronger than with Āpastamba's. See our Introduction to the Gītā in English verse, p. cxiii.

² P. 120.

³ Pp. 129, 130.

⁴ See p. 38 infra; and compare with this Weber's remarks on one of the classes into which he divides the whole body of Upanishads, History of Indian Literature, p. 165. See also Muir, Sanskrit Texts, vol. i, p. 508; Max Muller, Upanishads, vol. i, p. lxxv.

Āpastamba assigns to them. The fact is further noteworthy, that in the Gītā each caste has its own entirely distinct set of duties. There is no overlapping, so to say. And that is a circumstance indicating a very early stage in the development of the institution¹. Besides, as already indicated, the duties laid down by Āpastamba and Manu as common to Kshatriyas and Vaisyas are the very duties which make those castes dependent to a very great extent on the Brāhmaṇas. Lastly, it is not altogether unworthy of note, that in the elaborate specification of the best of every species which we find in chapter X, the Brāhmaṇa is not mentioned as the best of the castes, there is nothing to indicate the notion contained in the well-known later verse, 'The Brāhmaṇa is the head of the castes.' On the contrary, the ruler of men is specified as the highest among men², indicating, perhaps, a state of society such as that described at the beginning of the extract from Professor Tiele's work quoted above.

We come now to another point. What is the position of the Gītā in regard to the great reform of Sākya Muni? The question is one of much interest, having regard particularly to the remarkable coincidences between Buddhistic doctrines and the doctrines of the Gītā to which we have drawn attention in the foot-notes to our translation. But the materials for deciding the question are unhappily not forthcoming. Professor Wilson, indeed, thought that there was an allusion to Buddhism in the Gītā³. But his idea was based on a confusion between the Buddhists and the Kārvākas or materialists⁴. Failing that allusion, we have nothing very tangible but the unsatisfactory 'negative argument' based on mere non-mention of Buddhism in the Gītā. That argument is not quite satisfactory to my own mind, although, as I have elsewhere pointed out⁵, some of ¹ Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 32; and also Mr. Davids' note on that passage in his Buddhism, p. 131.

² P. 89 infra.

³ Essays on Sanskrit Literature, vol. iii, p. 150.

⁴ See our remarks on this point in the Introductory Essay to our Gītā in verse, p. li seq.

⁵ Introduction to Gītā in English verse, p. v seq.

the ground occupied by the Gîtâ is common to it with Buddhism, and although various previous thinkers are alluded to directly or indirectly in the Gîtâ. There is, however, one view of the facts of this question, which appears to me to corroborate the conclusion deducible by means of the negative argument here referred to. The main points on which Buddha's protest against Brahmanism rests, seem to be the true authority of the Vedas and the true view of the differences of caste. On most points of doctrinal speculation, Buddhism is still but one aspect of the older Brahmanism¹. The various coincidences to which we have drawn attention show that, if there is need to show it. Well now, on both these points, the Gîtâ, while it does not go the whole length which Buddha goes, itself embodies a protest against the views current about the time of its composition. The Gîtâ does not, like Buddhism, absolutely reject the Vedas, but it shelves them. The Gîtâ does not totally root out caste. It places caste on a less untenable basis. One of two hypotheses therefore presents itself as a rational theory of these facts. Either the Gîtâ and Buddhism were alike the outward manifestation of one and the same spiritual upheaval which shook to its centre the current religion, the Gîtâ being the earlier and less thorough-going form of it; or Buddhism having already begun to tell on Brahmanism, the Gîtâ was an attempt to bolster it up, so to say, at its least weak points, the weaker ones being altogether abandoned. I do not accept the latter alternative, because I cannot see any indication in the Gîtâ of an attempt to compromise with a powerful attack on the old Hindu system; while the fact that, though strictly orthodox, the author of the Gîtâ still undermines the authority, as unwisely venerated, of the Vedic revelation; and the further fact, that in doing this, he is doing what others also had done before him or about his time; go, in my opinion, a considerable way towards fortifying the results of the negative argument already set forth. To me Buddhism is perfectly intelligible as one outcome of that play of thought on high spiritual topics, which in its other, and as we may say, less thorough-going manifestations, we see in the Upanishads and the Gītā¹. But assume that Buddhism was a protest against Brahmanism prior to its purification and elevation by the theosophy of the Upanishads, and those remarkable productions of ancient Indian thought become difficult to account for. Let us compare our small modern events with those grand old occurrences. Suppose our ancestors to have been attached to the ceremonial law of the Vedas, as we are now attached to a lifeless ritualism, the Upanishads and the Gītā might be, in a way, comparable to movements like that of the late Raja Rammohun Roy. Standing, as far as possible, on the antique ways, they attempt, as Raja Rammohun attempted in these latter days, to bring into prominence and to elaborate the higher and nobler aspects of the old beliefs. Buddhism would be comparable to the further departure from old traditions which was led by Babu Keshub Chander Sen. The points of dissent in the olden times were pretty nearly the same as the points of dissent now. The ultimate motive power also was in both cases identical—a sense of dissatisfaction in its integrity with what had come down from old times encrusted with the corruptions of years. In this view the old system, the philosophy of the Upanishads and the Gītā, and the philosophy of Buddha, constitute a regular intelligible progression. But suppose the turn events took was different, as is supposed by the alternative theory indicated above. Suppose Babu Keshub's movement was chronologically prior, and had begun to tell on orthodox society. Is it likely, that then one of the orthodox party would take up the position which Rammohun Roy took? Would he still rely on old authorities, but with sundry qualifications, and yet earnestly assail the current forms of orthodoxy? I do not think so. I think the true view to be, as already stated, very different. The Upanishads, with the Gîtâ, and the precepts of Buddha appear to me to be the successive¹ embodiments of the spiritual thought of the age, as it became more and more dissatisfied with the system of mere ceremonial then dominant.

¹ Cf. Max Müller's Hibbert Lectures, p. 137; Weber's Indian Literature, pp. 288, 289; and Mr. Rhys Davids' excellent little volume on Buddhism, p. 151; and see also p. 83 of Mr. Davids' book.

¹ Cf. Weber's History of Indian Literature, p. 285. In Mr. Davids' Buddhism, p. 94, we have a noteworthy extract from a standard Buddhistic work, touching the existence of the soul. Compare that with the corresponding doctrine in the Gītā. It will be found that the two are at one in rejecting the identity of the soul with the senses &c. The Gītā then goes on to admit a soul separate from these. Buddhism rejects that also, and sees nothing but the senses.

There are several other points of much interest in the Bhagavadgîtâ, such as the reference to the Sāṅkhya and Yoga; the place assigned to the Mārgaśīrsha month; the allusion to the doctrines of materialism; the nearly entire coincidence between a stanza of the Gîtâ and one in the Manu Smṛiti. But in the present state of our knowledge, I do not think that we can extract any historical results from any of them. Without dwelling on them any further², therefore, I will only state it as my opinion, that the Sāṅkhya and Yoga of the Gîtâ are not identical with the systems known to us under those names, and that the Manu Smṛiti has probably borrowed from the Gîtâ the stanza common to the two works.

We now proceed to a discussion of some of the external evidence touching the age of the Bhagavadgîtâ. It is, of course, unnecessary to consider any evidence of a date later than the eighth century A. C., that being the date generally received, though not on very strong grounds, as the date of Saṅkarācārya, the celebrated commentator of the *Gîtâ*³. For the period prior to that limit, the first testimony to consider is that of Bāṇabhaṭṭa, the author of the Kādambari. The date of Bāṇa is now fairly well settled as the middle of the seventh century A.C. The doubt which the late Dr. Bhāu Dāji had cast upon its correctness¹, by impugning the received date of king Harshavardhana, appears to me to have been satisfactorily disposed of by the paper of my friend Professor R. G. Bhāṇḍārkar on the Kālukya dates². In the Kādambarī, then, we have testimony to the existence of the Bhagavadgītā in the middle of the seventh century A.C. For in that work, which, as is well known, abounds with equivoques, we have a passage which compares the royal palace to the Mahābhārata, both being 'Anantagītākarṇanānanditanaram³,' which, as applied to the royal palace, means 'in which the people were delighted by hearing innumerable songs;' and as applied to the Mahābhārata means 'in which Arguna was delighted at hearing the Anantagītā.' Anantagītā is evidently only another name here for Bhagavadgītā. The conclusion deducible from this fact is not merely that the Gītā existed, but that it existed as a recognised portion of the Bhārata, in the seventh century A.C. Now the Kādambarī shows, in numerous passages, in what high esteem the Mahābhārata was held in its days. The queen Vilāsavati used to attend at those readings and expositions of the Mahābhārata, which have continued down to our own times; and it was even then regarded as a sacred work of extremely high authority, in the same way as it is now. It follows, therefore, that the Gītā must have been several centuries old in the time of Bāṇabhaṭṭa.

¹ The word Brahma-nirvāṇa, which occurs so often at the close of chapter V and also at chapter II, 72, seems to me to indicate that nirvāṇa had not yet become technically pinned down, so to say, to the meaning which Buddhism subsequently gave to it, as the name of what it deemed the summum bonum. Nirvāṇa by itself occurs at VI, 15.

² See some further remarks on these points in my Introduction to the Gîtâ in verse.

³ Professor Tiele (History of Ancient Religions, p. 140) says Saṅkara was born in 788 A. D.; on the authority, I presume, of the Āryavidyāsudhākara, p. 226.

Prior in time to Bāṇa is the Indian Shakespeare, Kālidāsa, as he is referred to in Bāṇabhaṭṭa's Harsha-*karita*⁴, and also in a copperplate inscription of the early part of the seventh century, as a poet who had then already acquired a high reputation⁵. Unfortunately, it is not yet possible to fix exactly the date at which Kālidāsa flourished. Still,

¹ Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, vol. viii, p. 250; and see, too, Indian Antiquary, vol. vi, p. 61 (Dr. Buhler).

² Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, vol. xiv, p. 16 seq.

³ P. 182 (Tārānātha's ed.)

⁴ See F. E. Hall's Vāsavadattā, p. 14 note.

⁵ See Indian Antiquary, vol. v, p. 70.

I think, we have pretty satisfactory evidence to show that the middle of the fifth century A. C. is the very latest date to which he can be referred. In a small tract (written by me in 1873), discussing Professor Weber's theory about the Rāmāyana, I have pointed out¹ that the Pañkatantra quotes from Kālidāsa a passage which there is good reason to believe formed part of the Pañkatantra when it was translated for king Nushirvan of Persia about the beginning of the sixth century A.C.² Allowing for the time required to raise Kālidāsa to the position of being cited as an authority, and for the time required for the spread of the fame of an Indian work to Persia in those early days, I think, that the middle of the fifth century is a date to which Kālidāsa cannot well have been subsequent. Now in the works of Kālidāsa we have some very remarkable allusions to the Bhagavadgītā. It is not necessary to go through all these allusions. I will only mention the most remarkable, one from the Raghuvamśa, and one from the Kumārasambhava. In Raghu, canto X, stanza 67, the gods addressing Vishṇu say: 'There is nothing for you to acquire which has not been acquired. The one motive in your birth and work is the good of the worlds.' The first sentence here reminds one at once of Gītā, chapter III, stanza 22, the coincidence with which in sense as well as expression is very striking. The second sentence contains the words 'birth and work,' the precise words employed at Gītā IV, 9; and the idea of 'good of the worlds' is identical with the idea expressed in Gītā III, 20-24, the words only in which it is clothed being different. Couple this passage with the one from Kumārasambhava, canto VI, 67, where the seven Rishis say to the Himālaya mountain, 'Well hast thou been called Vishṇu in a firmly-fixed form.' The allusion there to the Gītā, chapter X, stanza 25 (p. 89), is, I venture to think, unmistakable. The word 'firmly-fixed' is identical in both passages; the idea is identical, and Mallinātha refers to the passage in the Gītā as the authority which Kālidāsa had in view. It follows, therefore, that the Gītā must be prior to Kālidāsa's time. It may be added, that Kālidāsa in his Raghu XV, 67, cites Manu as an authority for the proposition that a king must protect all castes and all orders or āśramas. Manu, therefore, must have lived considerably earlier than Kālidāsa, and the Gītā, as we have already argued, must be considerably earlier, not only than Manu, but also than his predecessor Āpastamba. The Gītā may, therefore, be safely said to belong to a period several centuries prior to the fifth century A. C.

¹ 'Was the Rāmāyana copied from Homer?' See pp. 36-59.

² Cf. Colebrooke's Essays, vol. ii, p. 166 seq. It may be remarked that this argument is not affected by the attempt to distinguish the Kālidāsa of the Akṣantālā from the Kālidāsa of the Raghuvamśa. Because the work cited in the Pañkatantra is the Kumārasambhava, which indisputably belongs to the same author as the Raghuvamśa.

The next piece of external evidence is furnished by the Vedānta-sūtras of Bādarāyaṇa. In several of those Sūtras, references are made to certain Smṛitis as authorities for the propositions laid down. Take, for instance, I, 2, 6, or I, 3, 23, and many others. Now three of these Sūtras are very useful for our present purpose. The first we have to consider is Sūtra II, 3, 45. The commentators Saṅkarācārya, Rāmānuga, Madhva, and Vallabha¹ are unanimous in understanding the passage in Gītā, chapter XV, stanza 7 (p. 112), to be the one there referred to by the words of the Sūtra, which are, 'And it is said in a Smṛiti.' Now a glance at the context of the Sūtra will, I think, satisfy us that the commentators, who are unanimous though representing different and even conflicting schools of thought, are also quite right. Sūtra 43, in the elliptical language characteristic of that branch of our literature, says, 'A part, from the statement of difference, and the reverse also; some lay down that it is a fisherman or a cheat.' Sūtra 44 runs thus, 'And also from the words of the Mantra.' And then comes Sūtra 45 as set out above. It is plain, that the Sūtra No. 45 indicates an authority for something not specified, being regarded as part of some other thing also not specified. Now the discussion in previous Sûtras has been about the soul; so we can have little difficulty in accepting the unanimous interpretation of the commentators, that the proposition here sought to be made out is that the individual soul is part of the Supreme Soul, which is the proposition laid down in the Gîtâ in the passage referred to. The next Sûtra to refer to is IV, 1, 10. I shall not set forth the other relevant Sûtras here as in the preceding case. I only state that the three commentators, Saṅkara, Rāmānuga, and Madhva, agree that the Gîtâ is here referred to, namely, chapter VI, stanza 11 seq. Vallabha, however, I am bound to add, does not agree with this, as he interprets the Sûtra in question and those which precede and follow as referring to an entirely different matter. If I may be permitted to say so, however, I consider his interpretation not so satisfactory as that of the three other and older commentators. Lastly, we come to Sûtra IV, 2-19. On this, again, all the four commentators are unanimous, and they say that Gîtâ, chapter VIII, stanza 24 seq. (p. 80), is the authority referred to. And I think there can be very little doubt that they are right. These various pieces of evidence render it, I think, historically certain, that the Gîtâ must be considerably prior to the Vedānta-sûtras; and that the word Brahma-sûtras, which occurs at Gîtâ, chapter XIII, stanza 4 (p. 102), is correctly interpreted by the commentators as not referring to the Vedānta-sûtras, which are also called Brahma-sûtras, but to a different subject altogether¹. When were the Vedānta-sûtras composed? The question must at once be admitted to be a difficult one; but I think the following considerations will show that the date of those Sûtras must, at the latest, be considerably earlier than the period which we have already reached in this part of our investigation. We may take it as fairly well settled, that Bhaṭṭa Kumārila, the celebrated commentator of the Pūrva Mīmāṃsā school, flourished not later than the end of the seventh century

¹ I am indebted to Professor M. M. Kunte for a loan of Vallabhācārya's commentary on the Sūtras noted in the text. I had not seen it in 1875, when I last discussed this question.

¹ Cf. Weber's Indian Literature, p. 242. See also Lassen's Preface to his edition of Schlegel's Gîtâ, XXXV. Rāmānuga takes the other view.

A.C.¹ A considerable time prior to him must be placed the great commentator on the Mīmāṃsā-sūtras, namely, Sabarasvāmin. If we may judge from the style of his great commentary, he cannot have flourished much later than Patañjali, who may now be taken as historically proved to have flourished about 140 B.C.² Now a considerable time must have intervened between Sabarasvāmin and another commentator on the Pūrva Mīmāṃsā, whom Sabara quotes with the highly honorific title Bhagavān, the Venerable, namely, Upavarsha. Upavarsha appears from Śaṅkara's statement to have commented on the *Vedānta-sūtras*³. We have thus a long catena of works from the seventh century A.C., indicating a pretty high antiquity for the Vedānta-sūtras, and therefore a higher one for the Bhagavadgītā. The antiquity of the Vedānta-sūtras follows also from the circumstance, which we have on the testimony of Rāmānuga, repeated by Mādhavācārya, that a commentary on the Sūtras was written by Baudhāyanācārya⁴, which commentary Rāmānuga says he followed. Baudhāyana's date is not accurately settled. But he appears to be older than Āpastamba, whose date, as suggested by Dr. Bühler, has already been mentioned⁵. The Vedānta-sūtras, then, would appear to be at least as old as the fourth century B.C.; if the information we have from Rāmānuga may be trusted. A third argument may be mentioned, bearing on the date of the Vedānta-sūtras. In Sūtra 110 of the third Pāda of the fourth Adhyāya of Pāṇini's Sūtras, a Pārāsarya is mentioned as the author of a Bhikshu-sūtra. Who is this Pārāsarya, and what the Bhikshu-sūtra? Unluckily Patañjali gives us no information on this head, nor

¹ See Burnell's Sāmavidhāna-brahmana, Introduction, p. vi note.

² The authorities are collected in our edition of Bhārtrihari (Bombay Series of Sanskrit Classics). Introd. p. xi note. See also Bühler's Āpastamba in this series, Introd. p. xxviii.

³ See Colebrooke's Essays, vol. I, p. 332. An Upavarsha is mentioned in the Kāthāsaritśāgara as living in the time of king Nanda, and having Pāṇini, Kātyāyana, and Vyāsi for his pupils.

⁴ See the Rāmānuga Bhāṣya; and the Rāmānuga Darśana in Sarvadarsana-saṅgraha.

⁵ Āpastamba, p. xvi.

does the Kārikā Vṛtti. But a note of Professor Tārānātha Tarkavāṣpati, of Calcutta, says that Pārāśarya is Vyāsa, and the Bhikshu-sūtra is the Vedānta-sūtra¹. If this is correct, the Vedānta-sūtras go very far indeed into antiquity. For Pāṇini can certainly not be assigned to a later date than the fourth century B.C., while that learned scholar, Professor Goldstücker, on grounds of considerable strength, assigned him to a much earlier date². The question thus comes to this, Is the remark of Professor Tārānātha, above set out, correct? I find then, from enquiries made of my venerable and erudite friend Yagñeśvar Sāstrin, the author of the Āryavidyāsudhākara, that the note of Tārānātha is based on the works of Bhaṭṭogī Dikshita, Nāgogī Bhaṭṭa, and Gṛānendra Sarasvatī, who all give the same interpretation of the Sūtra in question. It is certainly unfortunate that we have no older authority on this point than Bhaṭṭogī. The interpretation is in itself not improbable. Vyāsa is certainly by the current tradition³ called the author of the Vedānta-sūtras, and also the son of Parāśara. Nor is Bhikshu-sūtra a name too far removed in sense from Vedānta-sūtra, though doubtless the former name is not now in use, at all events as applied to the Sūtras attributed to Bādarāyaṇa, and though, it must also be stated, a Bhikshu-sūtra Bhāshya Vārtika is mentioned eo nomine by Professor Weber as actually in existence at the present day⁴. Taking all things together, therefore, we may provisionally understand the Bhikshu-sūtra mentioned by Pāṇini to be identical with the Vedānta-sūtras. But even apart from that identification, the other testimonies we have adduced prove, I think, the high antiquity of those Sūtras, and consequently of the Bhagavadgītā.

We have thus examined, at what, considering the importance and difficulty of the subject, will not, I trust, be regarded as unreasonable length, some of the principal pieces of internal and external evidence touching the age

¹ See Siddhānta Kaumudī, vol. i, p. 592.

² See his Pāṇini; and see also Bühler's Āpastamba in this series, Introd. p. xxxii note.

³ The correctness of this tradition is very doubtful.

⁴ Indische Studien I, 470.

of the Bhagavadgītā and its position in Sanskrit literature. Although, as stated at the very outset, the conclusions we have deduced in the course of that examination are not all such as at once to secure acceptance, I venture to think that we have now adequate grounds for saying, that the various and independent lines of investigation, which we have pursued, converge to this point, that the Gītā, on numerous and essential topics, ranges itself as a member of the Upanishad group, so to say, in Sanskrit literature. Its philosophy, its mode of treating its subject, its style, its language, its versification, its opinions on sundry subjects of the highest importance, all point to that one conclusion. We may also, I think, lay it down as more than probable, that the latest date at which the Gītā can have been composed, must be earlier than the third century B.C., though it is altogether impossible to say at present how much earlier. This proposition, too, is supported by the cumulative strength of several independent lines of testimony.

Before closing this Introduction, it is desirable to add a word concerning the text of the Bhagavadgītā. The religious care with which that text has been preserved is very worthy of note. Schlegel and Lassen¹ have both declared it as their opinion, that we have the text now almost exactly in the condition in which it was when it left the hands of the author. There are very few real various readings, and some of the very few that exist are noted by the commentators. Considering that the Mahābhārata must have been tampered with on numerous occasions, this preservation of the Gītā is most interesting. It doubtless indicates that high veneration for it which is still felt, and has for long been felt, by the Hindus, and which is embodied in the expression used in the colophons of the MSS. describing the Gītā as the 'Upanishad sung by God².' In view of the facts and deductions set forth in

¹ See the latter's edition of the Gītā, Preface, p. xxvii.

² In the edition of the Gītā published in Bombay in Saka 1782, there is a stanza which says that the Upanishads are the cows, Kṛishṇa the milkman, Arguna the calf, and the milk is the nectar-like Gītā, which indicates the tradi-this essay, that expression existing as, I believe, it does, almost universally in Indian MSS. of the Gītā, is not altogether devoid of historical value.

Schlegel draws attention to one other circumstance regarding the text of the Gītā, which is also highly interesting, namely, that the number of the stanzas is exactly 700. Schlegel concludes that the author must have fixed on that number deliberately, in order to prevent, as far as he could, all subsequent interpolations¹. This is certainly not unlikely; and if the aim of the author was such as Schlegel suggests, it has assuredly been thoroughly successful. In the chapter of the Mahābhārata immediately succeeding the eighteenth chapter of the Gītā, the extent of the work in slokas is distinctly stated. The verses in which this is stated do not exist in the Gauda or Bengal recension, and are doubtless not genuine. But, nevertheless, they are interesting, and I shall reproduce them here. 'Kṛṣṇa spoke 620 slokas, Arjuna fifty-seven, Sañjaya sixty-seven, and Dhṛitarāṣṭra one sloka; such is the extent of the Gītā.' It is very difficult to account for these figures. According to them, the total number of verses in the Gītā would be 745, whereas the number in the current MSS., and even in the Mahābhārata itself, is, as already stated, only 700². I cannot suggest any explanation whatever of this discrepancy.

In conclusion, a few words may be added regarding the general principles followed in the translation contained in this volume. My aim has been to make that translation as close and literal a rendering as possible of the Gītā, as interpreted by the commentators Śaṅkarācārya, Srīdhara-svāmin, and Madhusūdana Sarasvatī. Reference has also been frequently made to the commentary of Rāmānugācārya, and also to that of Nilakanṭha, which latter forms part of the author's general commentary on the Mahābhārata.

usual view of the Gītā—a view in consonance with that which we have been led to by the facts and arguments contained in this Introduction.

¹ P. xi (Lassen's ed.)

² Śaṅkara's commentary states in so many words that the Gītā he used contained only 700 slokas.

In some places these commentators differ among themselves, and then I have made my own choice. The foot-notes are mainly intended to make clear that which necessarily remains obscure in a literal translation. Some of the notes, however, also point out the parallelisms existing between the Gītā and other works, principally the Upanishads and the Buddhistic Dhammapada and Sutta Nipāta. Of the latter I have not been able to procure the original Pāli; I have only used Sir M. C. Swamy's translation. But I may here note, that there are some verses, especially in the Salla Sutta (see pp. 124-127 of Sir M. C. Swamy's book), the similarity of which, in doctrine and expression, to some of the verses of the Gītā is particularly striking. The analogies between the Gītā and the Upanishads have been made the basis of certain conclusions in this Introduction. Those between the Gītā and these Buddhistic works are at present, to my mind, only interesting; I am unable yet to say whether they may legitimately be made the premises for any historical deductions.

There are two indexes: the first a general index of matters, the second containing the principal words in the Gītā which may prove useful or interesting for philological, historical, or other kindred purposes.

BHAGAVADGÎTÂ.

CHAPTER I.

Dhrîtarâshtra said :

What did my (people) and the Pândavas do, O Saṅgaya ! when they assembled together on the holy field of Kurukshetra, desirous to do battle ?

Saṅgaya said :

Seeing the army of the Pândavas drawn up in battle-array¹, the prince Duryodhana approached his preceptor, and spoke (these) words : ' O preceptor ! observe this grand army of the sons of Pându, drawn up in battle-array by your talented pupil, the son of Drupada. In it are heroes (bearing) large bows, the equals of Bhîma and Arguna in battle—(namely), Yuyudhâna, Virâta, and Drupada, the master of a great car², and Dhrishâketu, Kekitâna, and the valiant king of Kâsi, Purugit and Kuntibhoga, and that eminent man Saibya ; the heroic Yudhâmanyu, the valiant Uttamaugas, the son of Subhadra, and the sons of ² This is a literal rendering ; the technical meaning is ' a warrior proficient in military science, who single-handed can fight a thousand archers.'

¹ Several of these modes of array are described in Manu VII, 187, like a staff, like a wain, like a boar, &c. That of the Pândavas, here referred to, appears to have been like the thunderbolt, as to which see Manu VII, 191.

Draupadī—all masters of great cars. And now, O best of Brāhmaṇas! learn who are most distinguished among us, and are leaders of my army. I will name them to you, in order that you may know them well. Yourself, and Bhīshma, and Karṇa, and Kṛipā the victor of (many) battles; Asvatthāman, and Vikarṇa, and also the son of Somadatta, and many other brave men, who have given up their lives for me, who fight with various weapons, (and are) all dexterous in battle. Thus our army which is protected by Bhīshma is unlimited; while this army of theirs which is protected by Bhīma is very limited. And therefore do ye all, occupying respectively the positions¹ assigned to you, protect Bhīshma² only.'

Then his powerful grandsire, Bhīshma, the oldest of the Kauravas, roaring aloud like a lion, blew his conch, (thereby) affording delight to Duryodhana. And then all at once, conchs, and kettledrums, and tabors, and trumpets were played upon; and there was a tumultuous din. Then, too, Mādhava and the son of Pāṇdu (Arguna), seated in a grand chariot to which white steeds were yoked, blew their heavenly conchs. Hṛishīkeśa³ blew the Pāñḍaganya⁴, and Dhanañjaya the Devadatta, and Bhīma, (the doer) of fearful deeds, blew the great conch Paundra. King Yudhishtīra, the son of Kuntī⁵, blew the Anan-

¹ The original word means, according to Sridhara, 'the ways of entrance into a Vyūha or phalanx.'

² Who, as generalissimo, remained in the centre of the army.

³ Literally, according to the commentators, 'lord of the senses of perception.'

⁴ Schlegel renders the names of these conchs by Gigantea, Theodotes, Arundinea, Triumphatrix, Dulcisona, and Gemmiflorea respectively.

⁵ So called, par excellence, apparently.

tavigaya, and Nakula and Sahadeva (respectively) the Sughosha and Manupushpaka. And the king of Kâsi, too, who has an excellent bow, and Sikhanḍin, the master of a great car, and Dhṛishadyumna, Virāṭa, and the unconquered Sâtyaki, and Drupada, and the sons of Draupadi, and the son of Subhadra, of mighty arms, blew conchs severally from all sides, O king of the earth! That tumultuous din rent the hearts of all (the people) of Dhṛitarâshtra's (party), causing reverberations throughout heaven and earth. Then seeing (the people of) Dhṛitarâshtra's party regularly marshalled, the son of Pându, whose standard is the ape, raised his bow¹, after the discharge of missiles had commenced, and O king of the earth! spake these words to Hṛishikesa: 'O undegraded one! station my chariot between the two armies, while I observe those, who stand here desirous to engage in battle, and with whom, in the labours of this struggle, I must do battle. I will observe those who are assembled here and who are about to engage in battle, wishing to do service in battle² to the evil-minded son of Dhṛitarâshtra.'

Saṅgaya said:

Thus addressed by Gudâkesh³, O descendant of Bharata⁴! Hṛishikesa stationed that excellent chariot between the two armies, in front of Bhīshma

¹ I.e. to join in the fight.

² In the original, several derivatives from the root yudh, meaning 'to fight,' occur with the same frequency as 'battle' here.

³ Generally interpreted 'lord of sleep,' i.e. not indolent. Nilakanṭha also suggests, that it may mean 'of thick hair.'

⁴ The son of Dushyanta and Sakuntalâ, after whom India is called 'Bhāratavarsha,' and from whom both Pāṇdavas and Kauravas were descended.

and Drona and of all the kings of the earth, and said : 'O son of Prithā! look at these assembled Kauravas.' There the son of Prithā saw in both armies, fathers and grandfathers, preceptors, maternal uncles, brothers, sons¹, grandsons, companions, fathers-in-law, as well as friends. And seeing all those kinsmen standing (there), the son of Kuntī was overcome by excessive pity, and spake thus despondingly.

Arguna said :

Seeing these kinsmen, 'O Krishna! standing (here) anxious to engage in battle, my limbs droop down; my mouth is quite dried up; a tremor comes over my body; and my hairs stand on end; the Gāndīva (bow) slips from my hand; my skin burns intensely. I am unable, too, to stand up; my mind whirls round, as it were; O Kesava! I see adverse omens²; and I do not perceive any good (likely to accrue) after killing (my) kinsmen in the battle. I do not wish for victory, O Krishna! nor sovereignty, nor pleasures: what is sovereignty to us, O Govinda! what enjoyments, and even life? Even those, for whose sake we desire sovereignty, enjoyments, and pleasures, are standing here for battle, abandoning life and wealth—preceptors, fathers, sons as well as grandfathers, maternal uncles, fathers-in-law, grandsons, brothers-in-law, as also (other) relatives. These I do not wish to kill, though they kill (me), O destroyer of Madhu³! even for the sake of sovereignty over ¹ The words in this list include all standing in similar relationships to those directly signified.

² Such as the appearance of vultures, cars moving without horses, &c., mentioned in the Bhīshma Parvan II, 17. Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 100.

³ A demon of this name.

the three worlds, how much less then for this earth (alone)? What joy shall be ours, O Ganârdana! after killing Dhṛitarâshṭra's sons? Killing these felons¹ we shall only incur sin. Therefore it is not proper for us to kill our own kinsmen, the sons of Dhṛitarâshṭra. For how, O Mâdhava! shall we be happy after killing our own relatives? Although they have their consciences corrupted by avarice, they do not see the evils flowing from the extinction of a family, and the sin in treachery to friends; still, O Ganârdana! should not we, who do see the evils flowing from the extinction of a family, learn to refrain from that sin? On the extinction of a family, the eternal rites of families are destroyed². Those rites being destroyed, impiety predominates over the whole family³. In consequence of the predominance of impiety, O Krishna! the women of the family become corrupt⁴; and the women becoming corrupt, O descendant of Vṛishni! intermingling of castes results; that intermingling necessarily leads the family and the destroyers of the family to hell; for when the ceremonies of (offering) the balls of food and water (to them) fail⁵, their ancestors fall down (to hell). By these transgressions of the destroyers of families, which occasion interminglings of castes, the eternal rites of castes and rites of families are

¹ Six classes are mentioned: an incendiary; one who administers poison; one who assaults another—weapon in hand; one who destroys property; one who robs another of his wife; or his fields.

² I.e. there being none to attend to the 'rites,' women being ineligible.

³ I.e. the surviving members.

⁴ I.e. either by the mere fact of relationship to such men, or by following their bad example.

⁵ There being no qualified person to perform them; 'their ancestors'—that is to say, of the 'destroyers of families.'

subverted. And O Ganârdana! we have heard that men whose family-rites are subverted, must necessarily live in hell. Alas! we are engaged in committing a heinous sin, seeing that we are making efforts for killing our own kinsmen out of greed of the pleasures of sovereignty. If the sons of Dhṛita-râshṭra, weapon in hand, were to kill me in battle, me being weaponless and not defending (myself), that would be better for me.

Saṅgaya said :

Having spoken thus, Arguna cast aside his bow together with the arrows, on the battle-field, and sat down in (his) chariot, with a mind agitated by grief.

CHAPTER II.

Saṅgaya said :

To him, who was thus overcome with pity, and dejected, and whose eyes were full of tears and turbid, the destroyer of Madhu spoke these words.

The Deity said :

How (comes it that) this delusion, O Arguna! which is discarded by the good, which excludes from heaven, and occasions infamy, has overtaken you in this (place of) peril? Be not effeminate, O son of Prithâ! it is not worthy of you. Cast off this base weakness of heart, and arise, O terror of (your) foes!

Arguna said :

How, O destroyer of Madhu! shall I encounter with arrows in the battle Bhīshma and Drona—both, O destroyer of enemies! entitled to reverence?

Without killing (my) preceptors—(men) of great glory—it is better to live even on alms in this world. But if killing them, though they are avaricious of worldly goods, I should only enjoy blood-tainted enjoyments. Nor do we know which of the two is better for us—whether that we should vanquish them, or that they should vanquish us. Even those, whom having killed, we do not wish to live—even those sons of Dhṛitarāshṭra stand (arrayed) against us. With a heart contaminated by the taint of helplessness¹, with a mind confounded about my duty, I ask you. Tell me what is assuredly good for me. I am your disciple; instruct me, who have thrown myself on your (indulgence). For I do not perceive what is to dispel that grief which will dry up my organs² after I shall have obtained a prosperous kingdom on earth without a foe, or even the sovereignty of the gods³.

Saṅgaya said :

Having spoken thus to Hṛishīkeśa, O terror of (your) foes! Gudākeśa said to Govinda, 'I shall not engage in battle;' and verily remained silent. To him thus desponding between the two armies, O descendant of Bharata! Hṛishīkeśa spoke these words with a slight smile.

The Deity said :

You have grieved for those who deserve no grief,

¹ The commentators say that 'heart' here signifies the dispositions which are stated in chapter XVIII infra, p. 126. The feeling of 'helplessness' is incompatible with what is there stated as the proper disposition for a Kshatriya.

² I.e. by the heat of vexation; the meaning is, 'which will cause constant vexation of spirit.'

³ I.e. if the means employed are the sinful acts referred to.

and you speak words of wisdom¹. Learned men grieve not for the living nor the dead. Never did I not exist, nor you, nor these rulers of men; nor will any one of us ever hereafter cease to be. As in this body, infancy and youth and old age (come) to the embodied (self)², so does the acquisition of another body; a sensible man is not deceived about that. The contacts of the senses³, O son of Kuntl! which produce cold and heat, pleasure and pain, are not permanent, they are for ever coming and going. Bear them, O descendant of Bharata! For, O chief of men! that sensible man whom they⁴ afflict not, (pain and pleasure being alike to him), he merits immortality. There is no existence for that which is unreal; there is no non-existence for that which is real. And the (correct) conclusion about both⁵ is perceived by those who perceive the truth. Know that to be indestructible which pervades all this; the destruction of that inexhaustible (principle) none can bring about. These bodies appertaining to the embodied (self) which is eternal, indestructible, and indefinable, are declared⁶ to be perishable; therefore do engage in battle, O descendant of Bharata! He who thinks one to be the killer and he who thinks ¹ Scil. regarding family-rites. &c., for, says Nīlakanṭha, they indicate knowledge of soul as distinct from body.

² A common word in the Gītā, that which presides over each individual body.

³ Scil. with external objects.

⁴ I.e. the 'contacts.'

⁵ The sense is this—there are two things apparently, the soul which is indestructible, and the feelings of pain &c. which 'come and go.' The true philosopher knows that the former only is real and exists; and that the latter is unreal and non-existent. He therefore does not mind the latter.

⁶ Scil. by those who are possessed of true knowledge.

one to be killed, both know nothing. He kills not, is not killed¹. He is not born, nor does he ever die, nor, having existed, does he exist no more. Unborn, everlasting, unchangeable, and very ancient, he is not killed when the body is killed². O son of Prithā! how can that man who knows the self thus to be indestructible, everlasting, unborn, and imperishable, kill any one, or cause any one to be killed? As a man, casting off old clothes, puts on others and new ones, so the embodied (self), casting off old bodies, goes to others and new ones. Weapons do not divide the self (into pieces); fire does not burn it; waters do not moisten it; the wind does not dry it up. It is not divisible; it is not combustible; it is not to be moistened; it is not to be dried up. It is everlasting, all-pervading, stable, firm, and eternal³. It is said to be unperceived, to be unthinkable, to be unchangeable. Therefore knowing it to be such, you ought not to grieve. But even if you think that the self is constantly born, and constantly dies, still, O you of mighty arms! you ought not to grieve thus. For to one that is born, death is certain; and to one that dies, birth is certain⁴. Therefore about (this) unavoidable thing, you ought not to grieve. The source of things, O descendant of Bharata! is unperceived; their middle state is perceived; and their end again is unperceived. What (occasion is there for any) lamentation regarding them¹? One looks upon it² as a wonder; another similarly speaks of it as a wonder; another too hears of it as a wonder; and even after having heard of it, no one does really know it³. This embodied (self), O descendant of Bharata! within every one's body is ever indestructible. Therefore you ought not to grieve for any being. Having regard to your own duty also, you ought not to falter, for there is nothing better for a Kshatriya⁴ than a righteous battle. Happy those Kshatriyas, O son of Prithā! who can find such a battle (to fight)—come of itself⁵—an open door to heaven! But if you will not fight this righteous battle, then you will have abandoned your own duty and your fame, and you will incur sin. All beings, too, will tell of your everlasting infamy; and to one who has been honoured, infamy is (a) greater (evil) than death. (Warriors who are) masters of great cars will think that you abstained from the battle through fear, and having been highly thought of by them, you will fall down to littleness. Your enemies, too, decrying your power, will speak much about you that should not be spoken. And what, indeed, more lamentable than that? Killed,

¹ Cf. Kaṭha-upanishad, p. 104. ² Kaṭha-upanishad, pp. 103, 104.

³ 'Eternal.' Nilakanṭha explains this by 'unlimited by time, place,' &c. Śaṅkara and others as 'uncreated,' 'without cause.' Stable = not assuming new forms; firm = not abandoning the original form. (Śrīdhara.) The latter signifies a slight change; the former a total change.

⁴ Cf. the following from the Sutta Nipāta (Sir M. C. Swamy's translation), pp. 124, 125: 'There is, indeed, no means by which those born could be prevented from dying.' 'Even thus the world is afflicted with death and decay; therefore wise men, knowing the course of things in the world, do not give way to grief.'

¹ Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 125. 'In vain do you grieve, not knowing well the two ends of him whose manner either of coming or going you know not.'

² I. e. the self spoken of above.

³ Kaṭha-upanishad, p. 96.

⁴ One of the warrior caste.

⁵ Without any effort, that is to say, of one's own.

you will obtain heaven; victorious, you will enjoy the earth. Therefore arise, O son of Kuntī! resolved to (engage in) battle. Looking on pleasure and pain, on gain and loss, on victory and defeat as the same, prepare for battle, and thus you will not incur sin. The knowledge here declared to you is that relating to the Sāṅkhya¹. Now hear that relating to the Yoga. Possessed of this knowledge, O son of Prithā! you will cast off the bonds of action. In this (path to final emancipation) nothing that is commenced becomes abortive; no obstacles exist; and even a little of this (form of) piety protects one from great danger². There is here³, O descendant of Kuru! but one state of mind consisting in firm understanding. But the states of mind of those who have no firm understanding are manifold and endless. The state of mind which consists in firm understanding regarding steady contemplation⁴ does not belong to those, O son of Prithā! who are strongly attached to (worldly) pleasures and power, and whose minds are drawn away by that flowery talk which is full of (the ordinances of) specific acts for the attainment of (those) pleasures and (that) power, and which promises birth as the fruit of acts⁵—(that flowery

¹ Sāṅkhya is explained in different modes by the different commentators, but the meaning here seems to be, that the doctrine stated is the doctrine of true knowledge and of emancipation by means of it. See infra, p. 52.

² Viz. this mortal mundane life.

³ I.e. for those who enter on this 'path.'

⁴ I.e. of the supreme Being; Yoga meaning really the dedication of all acts to that Being.

⁵ See Sutta Nipāta, p. 4.

talk) which those unwise ones utter, who are enamoured of Vedic words, who say there is nothing else, who are full of desires, and whose goal is heaven¹. The Vedas (merely) relate to the effects of the three qualities²; do you, O Arguna! rise above those effects of the three qualities, and be free from the pairs of opposites³, always preserve courage⁴, be free from anxiety for new acquisitions or protection of old acquisitions, and be self-controlled⁵. To the instructed Brāhmaṇa, there is in all the Vedas as much utility as in a reservoir of water into which waters flow from all sides⁶. Your business is with action alone; not by any means with fruit. Let not the fruit of action be your motive (to action). Let not your attachment be (fixed) on inaction⁷. Having recourse to devotion, O Dhanañjaya! perform actions, casting off (all) attachment, and being equable in success or ill-success; (such) equability is called devotion. Action,

¹ This is a merely temporary good, and not therefore deserving to be aspired to before final emancipation.

² I.e. the whole course of worldly affairs. As to qualities, see chapter XIV.

³ Heat and cold, pain and pleasure, and so forth. Cf. Manu I, 26.

⁴ Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 17 and other places.

⁵ Keeping the mind from worldly objects.

⁶ The meaning here is not easily apprehended. I suggest the following explanation:—Having said that the Vedas are concerned with actions for special benefits, Kṛishṇa compares them to a reservoir which provides water for various special purposes, drinking, bathing, &c. The Vedas similarly prescribe particular rites and ceremonies for going to heaven, or destroying an enemy, &c. But, says Kṛishṇa, man's duty is merely to perform the actions prescribed for him, and not entertain desires for the special benefits named. The stanza occurs in the Sanatsugātiya, too.

⁷ Doing nothing at all.

O Dhanañjaya! is far inferior to the devotion of the mind. In that devotion seek shelter. Wretched are those whose motive (to action) is the fruit (of action). He who has obtained devotion in this world casts off both merit and sin¹. Therefore apply yourself to devotion; devotion in (all) actions is wisdom. The wise who have obtained devotion cast off the fruit of action; and released from the shackles of (repeated) births², repair to that seat where there is no unhappiness³. When your mind shall have crossed beyond the taint of delusion, then will you become indifferent to all that you have heard or will hear⁴. When your mind, that was confounded by what you have heard⁵, will stand firm and steady in contemplation⁶, then will you acquire devotion.

Arguna said :

What are the characteristics, O Kesava! of one whose mind is steady, and who is intent on contemplation? How should one of a steady mind speak, how sit, how move?

The Deity said :

When a man, O son of Prithā! abandons all the desires of his heart, and is pleased in his self only ¹ Merit merely leads to heaven, as to which see note on last page. Cf. Sutta Nipāta, pp. 4, 136, 145 note.

² Sutta Nipāta, pp. 3-7, &c.

³ Sutta Nipāta, p. 21.

⁴ This, according to Ānandagiri, means all writings other than those on the science of the soul.

⁵ I.e. about the means for the acquisition of various desired things.

⁶ I.e. of the soul (Saṅkara), of the supreme Being (Śrīdhara). Substantially they both mean the same thing.

and by his self¹, he is then called of a steady mind. He whose heart is not agitated in the midst of calamities, who has no longing for pleasures, and from whom (the feelings of) affection, fear, and wrath² have departed, is called a sage of a steady mind. His mind is steady, who, being without attachments anywhere, feels no exultation and no aversion on encountering the various agreeable and disagreeable³ (things of this world). A man's mind is steady, when he withdraws his senses from (all) objects of sense, as the tortoise (withdraws) its limbs from all sides. Objects of sense withdraw themselves from a person who is abstinent; not so the taste (for those objects). But even the taste departs from him, when he has seen the Supreme⁴. The boisterous senses, O son of Kuntl! carry away by force the mind even of a wise man, who exerts himself (for final emancipation). Restraining them all, a man should remain engaged in devotion, making me his only resort. For his mind is steady whose senses are under his control. The man who ponders over objects of sense forms an attachment to them; from (that) attachment is produced desire; and from desire anger is produced⁵; from anger results want of discrimination⁶; from want of dis-

¹ I. e. pleased, without regard to external objects, by self-contemplation alone.

² Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 3.

³ The word subhāsubha in this sense also occurs in the Dhammapada, stanza 78, and in the Maitrī-upanishad, p. 34.

⁴ See on this, Wilson's Essays on Sanskrit Literature, vol. iii, p. 130.

⁵ I. e. when the desire is frustrated.

⁶ I. e. between right and wrong. Confusion of memory = forgetfulness of Sāstras and rules prescribed in them.

crimination, confusion of the memory ; from confusion of the memory, loss of reason ; and in consequence of loss of reason he is utterly ruined. But the self-restrained man who moves among¹ objects with senses under the control of his own self, and free from affection and aversion, obtains tranquillity². When there is tranquillity, all his miseries are destroyed, for the mind of him whose heart is tranquil soon becomes steady. He who is not self-restrained has no steadiness of mind ; nor has he who is not self-restrained perseverance³ in the pursuit of self-knowledge ; there is no tranquillity for him who does not persevere in the pursuit of self-knowledge ; and whence can there be happiness for one who is not tranquil ? For the heart which follows the rambling senses leads away his judgment, as the wind leads a boat astray upon the waters. Therefore, O you of mighty arms ! his mind is steady whose senses are restrained on all sides from objects of sense. The self-restrained man is awake, when it is night for all beings ; and when all beings are awake, that is the night of the right-seeing sage⁴. He into whom all objects of desire enter, as waters enter the ocean, which, (though) replenished, (still) keeps its position unmoved,—he only obtains tranquillity ; not he who desires (those) objects of desire. The man who,

¹ Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 45.

² Cf. Maitri-ūpanishad, p. 134, where the commentator explains it to mean freedom from desires.

³ For a somewhat similar use of the word bhāvanā in this sense, comp. Dhammapada, stanza 301.

⁴ Spiritual matters are dark as night to the common run of men, while they are wide awake in all worldly pursuits. With the sage the case is exactly the reverse.

casting off all desires, lives free from attachments, who is free from egoism¹, and from (the feeling that this or that is) mine², obtains tranquillity. This, O son of Prithâ! is the Brahmic³ state; attaining to this, one is never deluded; and remaining in it in (one's) last moments, one attains (brahma-nirvâna) the Brahmic bliss⁴.

CHAPTER III.

Arguna said :

If, O Ganârdana! devotion is deemed by you to be superior to action, then why, O Kesava! do you prompt me to (this) fearful action? You seem, indeed, to confuse my mind by equivocal words. Therefore, declare one thing determinately, by which I may attain the highest good.

The Deity said :

O sinless one! I have already declared, that in this world there is a twofold path⁵—that of the Sâṅkhyas by devotion in the shape of (true) knowledge; and that of the Yogins by devotion in the shape of action. A man does not attain freedom from action⁶ merely by not engaging in action; nor does he attain perfection⁷ by mere⁸ renunciation. For nobody ever remains even for an instant without ¹ Either pride or, better, the false notion mentioned infra, p. 55.

² An almost identical expression occurs in the Dhammapada, stanza 367, and Maitrî-upanishad, p. 37.

³ The state of identification of oneself with the Brahman, which results from a correct knowledge of the Brahman.

⁴ Infra, p. 66.

⁵ Supra, p. 47.

⁶ I.e., according to Saṅkara, identification of oneself with Brahman.

⁷ Final emancipation.

⁸ I.e. not coupled with knowledge and purity of heart.

performing some action ; since the qualities of nature constrain everybody, not having free-will (in the matter), to some action ¹. The deluded man who, restraining the organs of action ², continues to think in his mind about objects of sense, is called a hypocrite. But he, O Arguna ! who restraining his senses by his mind ³, and being free from attachments, engages in devotion (in the shape) of action, with the organs of action, is far superior. Do you perform prescribed action, for action is better than inaction, and the support of your body, too, cannot be accomplished with inaction. This world is fettered by all action other than action for the purpose of the sacrifice ⁴. Therefore, O son of Kuntl ! do you, casting off attachment, perform action for that purpose. The Creator, having in olden times created men together with the sacrifice, said : ' Propagate with this. May it be the giver to you of the things you desire. Please the gods with this, and may those gods please you. Pleasing each other, you will attain the highest good. For pleased with the sacrifices, the gods will give you the enjoyments you desire. And he who enjoys himself without giving them what they have given, is, indeed, a thief.' The good, who eat the leavings of a sacrifice, are released from all sins. But the unrighteous ones, who prepare food for themselves only, incur sin ⁵.

¹ Cf. infra, pp. 122-128.

² Hands, feet, &c.

³ By means of true discrimination keeping the senses from attachments to worldly objects, which lead to sin and evil.

⁴ Cf. infra, pp. 60, 61. Probably the 'sacrifices' spoken of in that passage must be taken to be the same as those referred to in the Creator's injunction mentioned in this passage.

⁵ Cf. Maitri-upanishad, p. 143.

From food are born (all) creatures ; from rain is the production of food ; rain is produced by sacrifices ; sacrifices are the result of action ; know that action has its source in the Vedas ; the Vedas come from the Indestructible. Therefore the all-comprehending Vedas are always concerned with sacrifices¹. He who in this world does not turn round the wheel revolving thus, is of sinful life, indulging his senses, and, O son of Prithā ! he lives in vain. But the man who is attached to his self only, who is contented in his self, and is pleased with his self², has nothing to do. He has no interest at all in what is done, and none whatever in what is not done, in this world³ ; nor is any interest of his dependent on any being. Therefore⁴ always perform action, which must be performed, without attachment. For a man, performing action without attachment, attains the Supreme. By action alone, did Ganaka and the rest work for perfection⁵. And having regard also to the keeping of people (to their duties) you should perform action. Whatever a great man does, that other men also do. And people follow whatever he receives as authority. There is nothing, O son of Prithā ! for me to do in (all) the three worlds,

¹ The commentators explain this to mean that though the Vedas elucidate all matters, their principal subject is the sacrifice.

² The distinctions here are rather nice,—an ordinary man is 'attached' to worldly objects, is 'contented' with goods &c., and is 'pleased' with special gains.

³ No good or evil accrues to him from anything he does or omits to do.

⁴ Srīdhara says that Arguna is here told to perform action, as freedom from it is only for the man of true knowledge, which Arguna is not as yet.

⁵ I. e. final emancipation ; cf. p. 59 infra, and Īsopanishad, p. 6.

nothing to acquire which has not been acquired. Still I do engage in action. For should I at any time not engage without sloth in action, men would follow in my path from all sides, O son of Prithā! If I did not perform actions, these worlds would be destroyed, I should be the cause of caste-interminglings; and I should be ruining these people. As the ignorant act, O descendant of Bharata! with attachment to action, so should a wise man act without attachment, wishing to keep the people (to their duties). A wise man should not shake the convictions of the ignorant who are attached to action, but acting with devotion (himself) should make them apply themselves to all action. He whose mind is deluded by egoism thinks himself the doer of the actions, which, in every way, are done by the qualities of nature¹. But he, O you of mighty arms! who knows the truth about the difference from qualities and the difference from actions², forms no attachments, believing that qualities deal with qualities³. But those who are deluded by the qualities of nature form attachments to the actions of the qualities⁴. A man of perfect knowledge should not shake these men of imperfect knowledge (in their convictions). Dedicating all actions to me with a mind knowing the relation of the supreme and individual self, engage in battle without ¹ The active principle is nature, the aggregate of the three qualities; the soul is only the looker-on; cf. inter alia, p. 104 infra.

² Scil. the difference of the soul from the collection of qualities, viz. the body, senses, &c., and from the actions of which they are the authors.

³ Qualities (i. e. senses) deal with qualities, i. e. objects of sense.

⁴ I. e. all mundane affairs.

desire, without (any feeling that this or that is) mine, and without any mental trouble¹. Even those men who always act on this opinion of mine, full of faith, and without carping, are released from all actions. But those who carp at my opinion and do not act upon it, know them to be devoid of discrimination, deluded as regards all knowledge², and ruined. Even a man of knowledge acts consonantly to his own nature³. All beings follow nature. What will restraint effect? Every sense has its affections and aversions towards its objects fixed. One should not become subject to them, for they are one's opponents⁴. One's own duty, though defective, is better than another's duty well performed. Death in (performing) one's own duty is preferable; the (performance of the) duty of others is dangerous.

Arguna said :

But by whom, O descendant of Vrishni! is man impelled, even though unwilling, and, as it were, constrained by force, to commit sin?

¹ About the consequences of your actions.

² Of actions, or of the Brahman in its various forms.

³ Which is the result of the virtues and vices of a preceding life. The sequence of ideas here is as follows:—The true view stated here about the 'difference from qualities and actions' is disregarded by some, owing to their 'nature' as now explained. Then the question is, If nature is so potent, what is the good of the Sāstras? The answer is, Nature only acts through our likes and dislikes. Withstand them and then you can follow the Sāstras. It is under the influence of these likes and dislikes, that some may say, we shall practise duties prescribed for others (our own being bad ones) as they are equally prescribed by the Sāstras. That, as stated in the last sentence here, is wrong.

⁴ Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 101, as to 'likings and dislikings.'

The Deity said :

It is desire, it is wrath¹, born from the quality of passion ; it is very ravenous, very sinful. Know that that is the foe in this world. As fire is enveloped by smoke, a mirror by dust, the fœtus by the womb, so is this² enveloped by desire. Knowledge, O son of Kuntī! is enveloped by this constant foe of the man of knowledge, in the shape of desire, which is like a fire³ and insatiable. The senses, the mind, and the understanding are said to be its seat⁴; with these it deludes the embodied (self) after enveloping knowledge. Therefore, O chief of the descendants of Bharata! first restrain your senses, then cast off this sinful thing which destroys knowledge and experience⁵. It has been said⁶, Great are the senses, greater than the senses is the mind, greater than the mind is the understanding. What is greater than the understanding is that⁷. Thus knowing that which is higher than the understanding, and restraining (your)self by (your)self, O you of

¹ Vide p. 50 supra.

² I.e. knowledge, mentioned in the next sentence, for which construction p. 71 and p. 98 may be compared.

³ Which becomes more powerful the more it is fed.

⁴ The mind is that which ponders over things as such or such ; the understanding is that which finally determines (cf. Lewes' History of Philosophy, II, 463-465). These and the senses are the 'seat' of desire, because the perception of an object by the sense, the pondering over it by the mind, and the determination about it by the understanding are the preliminaries to the awakening of the desire ; supra, p. 50.

⁵ Knowledge is from books or teachers, experience is the result of personal perception.

⁶ Ka/hopanishad, p. 114 ; and see also pp. 148, 149.

⁷ I. e. the supreme Being, as in the Ka/hopanishad.

mighty arms! destroy this unmanageable enemy in the shape of desire.

CHAPTER IV.

The Deity said :

This everlasting ¹ (system of) devotion I declared to the sun, the sun declared it to Manu ², and Manu communicated it to Ikshvâku. Coming thus by steps, it became known to royal sages. But, O terror of (your) foes! that devotion was lost to the world by long (lapse of) time. That same primeval devotion I have declared to you to-day, seeing that you are my devotee and friend, for it is the highest mystery.

Arguna said :

Later is your birth ; the birth of the sun is prior. How then shall I understand that you declared (this) first ?

The Deity said :

I have passed through many births, O Arguna! and you also. I know them all, but you, O terror of (your) foes! do not know them. Even though I am unborn and inexhaustible in (my) essence, even though I am lord of all beings, still I take up the control of my own nature ³, and am born by means of my delusive power. Whensoever, O descendant of Bharata! piety languishes, and impiety is in the ascendant, I create myself. I am born age after age, for the protection of the good, for the destruction of evil-doers, and the establishment of piety. Whoever truly knows thus my divine birth and work, casts off (this) body and is not born again. He comes to me, O Arguna! Many from whom affection, fear¹, and wrath have departed, who are full of me, who depend on me, and who are purified by the penance of knowledge², have come into my essence. I serve men in the way in which they approach me³. In every way, O son of Prithâ! men follow in my path⁴. Desiring the success of actions⁵, men in this world worship the divinities, for in this world of mortals, the success produced by action is soon obtained. The fourfold division of castes was created by me according to the apportionment of qualities and duties. But though I am its author, know me to be inexhaustible, and not the author. Actions defile me not. I have no attachment to the fruit of actions. He who knows me thus is not tied down by actions. Knowing this, the men of old who wished for final emancipation, performed action. Therefore do you, too, perform action as was done by men of old in olden times. Even sages are confused as to what is

¹ Because its fruit is imperishable, viz. final emancipation.

² In the Kândogya-upanishad, Manu is the channel of communication for some doctrine taught by Pragâpati, which Manu teaches the 'people,' interpreted by Sâṅkara to mean Ikshvâku, &c. (p. 178 ; see too p. 625).

³ Nature is what goes to the formation of the material form in which he is born; the 'power' includes knowledge, omnipotence, &c. It is delusive because he is still really 'unborn.'

¹ Cf. Sutta Nipâta, p. 73.

² Cf. infra, p. 61.

³ I. e. I give to each worshipper what is proper for him.

⁴ The original words used here occur before in a different sense (see p. 55). Here the meaning is that to whomsoever directly addressed, all worship is worship of me (see p. 84). In the whole passage, Krishna says that the Deity is not chargeable with partiality on account of the variety of human qualities and states.

⁵ Such as acquisition of sons, cattle, &c.

action, what inaction. Therefore I will speak to you about action, and learning that, you will be freed from (this world of) evil. One must possess knowledge about action ; one must also possess knowledge about prohibited action ; and again one must possess knowledge about inaction. The truth regarding action is abstruse. He is wise among men, he is possessed of devotion, and performs all actions ¹, who sees inaction in action, and action in inaction. The wise call him learned, whose acts are all free from desires and fancies, and whose actions are burnt down by the fire of knowledge. Forsaking all attachment to the fruit of action, always contented, dependent on none, he does nothing at all, though he engages in action. Devoid of expectations, restraining the mind and the self, and casting off all belongings ², he incurs no sin, performing actions merely for the sake of the body ³. Satisfied with earnings coming spontaneously ⁴, rising above the pairs of opposites, free from all animosity, and equable on success or ill-success, he is not fettered down, even though he performs (actions). The acts of one who is devoid of attachment, who is free ⁵, whose mind is fixed on knowledge, and who performs action for (the purpose of) the sacrifice ⁶ are all

¹ Devoted though performing all actions.

² 'Appropriating nothing,' at Sutta Nipāta, p. 101, seems to be the same idea. 'Self' just before this means senses.

³ Preferably, perhaps, 'with the body only.' But Sāṅkara rejects this.

⁴ Cf. infra, p. 101 ; and Sutta Nipāta, p. 12.

⁵ The commentators vary in their interpretations of this word (mukta), but the common point appears to be 'free from attachment to worldly concerns.' Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 8.

⁶ Sacrifice here apparently means every act for the attainment of destroyed. Brahman is the oblation ; with Brahman (as a sacrificial instrument) it is offered up ; Brahman is in the fire ; and by Brahman it is thrown ; and Brahman, too, is the goal to which he proceeds who meditates on Brahman in the action¹. Some devotees perform the sacrifice to the gods, some offer up the sacrifice by the sacrifice itself in the fire of Brahman². Others offer up the senses, such as the sense of hearing and others, in the fires of restraint³ ; others offer up the objects of sense, such as sound and so forth, into the fires of the senses⁴. Some again offer up all the operations of the senses and the operations of the life-breaths into the fire of devotion by self-restraint⁵, kindled by knowledge. Others perform the sacrifice of wealth, the sacrifice of penance, the sacrifice of concentration of mind, the sacrifice of Vedic study⁶, and of knowledge, and others are ascetics of rigid vows. Some offer up the upward life-breath into the downward life-breath, and the downward life-breath into the upper life-breath, and stopping up the motions of the upward and downward life-breaths, devote themselves to the restraint of the life-breaths⁷. Others, who (take) the supreme ; cf. supra, p. 53. In Ârvalâyana Grîhya-sûtra I, 1, 5, a text is cited meaning 'salutation verily is a sacrifice.'

¹ This thorough identification with the Brahman explains why the action is 'destroyed' and does not 'fetter' the doer.

² I. e. all acts, religious and other, offered up to the Brahman in the mode above stated.

³ Practise 'yoga' and other like exercises.

⁴ Remaining unattached to sensuous enjoyments.

⁵ Stopping the bodily operations mentioned, and engaging in contemplation.

⁶ This is called Brahmayagña, Ârvalâyana Grîhya-sûtra III, 1, 3.

⁷ Maitri-upanishad, p. 129.

limited food, offer up the life-breaths into the life-breaths. All of these, conversant with the sacrifice, have their sins destroyed by the sacrifice. Those who eat the nectar-like leavings of the sacrifice repair to the eternal Brahman¹. This world is not for those who perform no sacrifice, whence (then) the other, O best of the Kauravas! Thus sacrifices of various sorts are laid down in the Vedas. Know them all to be produced from action², and knowing this you will be released (from the fetters of this world). The sacrifice of knowledge, O terror of (your) foes! is superior to the sacrifice of wealth, for action, O son of Prithâ! is wholly and entirely comprehended in knowledge. That³ you should learn by salutation, question, and service⁴. The men of knowledge who perceive the truth will teach knowledge to you. Having learnt that, O son of Pāṇdu! you will not again fall thus into delusion; and by means of it, you will see all beings, without exception, first in yourself, and then in me⁵. Even if you are the most sinful of all sinful men, you will cross over all trespasses by means of the boat of knowledge alone. As a fire well kindled, O Arguna! reduces fuel to ashes, so the fire of knowledge reduces all actions to ashes⁶. For there is in this world no means of sanctification like knowledge⁷, and that one perfected by devotion finds

¹ Supra, p. 53.

² Operations of mind, senses, &c.; cf. supra, p. 54.

³ I. e. knowledge.

⁴ Addressed to men of knowledge. Cf. Mundakopaniṣad, p. 282.

⁵ The essential unity of the supreme and individual soul and the whole universe. Cf. Īsopaniṣad, pp. 13, 14.

⁶ Supra, p. 60.

⁷ Sutta Nipāta, p. 48.

within one's self in time. He who has faith, whose senses are restrained, and who is assiduous, obtains knowledge¹. Obtaining knowledge, he acquires, without delay, the highest tranquillity. He who is ignorant and devoid of faith, and whose self is full of misgivings, is ruined. Not this world, not the next, nor happiness, is for him whose self is full of misgivings. Actions, O Dhanañgaya! do not fetter one who is self-possessed², who has renounced action by devotion, and who has destroyed misgivings by knowledge. Therefore, O descendant of Bharata! destroy, with the sword of knowledge, these misgivings of yours which fill your mind, and which are produced from ignorance. Engage in devotion. Arise!

CHAPTER V.

Arguna said :

O Krishna! you praise renunciation of actions and also the pursuit (of them). Tell me determinately which one of these two is superior.

The Deity said :

Renunciation and pursuit of action are both instruments of happiness. But of the two, pursuit of action is superior to renunciation of action. He should be understood to be always an ascetic³, who has no aversion and no desire. For, O you of mighty arms! he who is free from the pairs of opposites is easily released from (all) bonds. Children—not wise men—talk of sāṅkhya and yoga as distinct. One who pursues either well obtains the fruit of both. The seat which the sâṅkhyas obtain is reached by the yogas¹ also. He sees (truly), who sees the sâṅkhyā and yoga as one. Renunciation, O you of mighty arms! is difficult to reach without devotion; the sage possessed of devotion attains Brahman² without delay. He who is possessed of devotion, whose self is pure, who has restrained his self³, and who has controlled his senses, and who identifies his self with every being, is not tainted though he performs (actions). The man of devotion, who knows the truth, thinks he does nothing at all, when he sees⁴, hears, touches, smells, eats, moves, sleeps, breathes, talks, throws out⁵, takes, opens or closes the eyelids; he holds that the senses deal with the objects of the senses. He who, casting off (all) attachment, performs actions dedicating them to Brahman, is not tainted by sin, as the lotus-leaf⁶ (is not tainted) by water. Devotees, casting off attachment, perform actions for attaining purity of self, with the body, the mind, the understanding, or even the senses⁷—(all) free (from ¹ Those who follow the yoga 'path.' The form is noteworthy, grammatically.

¹ Sutta Nipāta, p. 49.

² Cautious, free from heedlessness.

³ I. e. one who has performed 'renunciation.'

² I. e. 'attains true renunciation,' says Sāṅkara; Sridhara says, 'attains Brahman, after becoming a "renouncer."'

³ Here self is explained as body; in the line which goes before it is explained as heart.

⁴ These are the various operations of the organs of perception, action, &c.

⁵ Excretions, &c.

⁶ A very common simile. Cf. inter alia K'hândogya-upanishad, p. 276; Sūta Nipāta, pp. 107-134; and Dauids' Buddhism, p. 158 note.

⁷ Body=bathing, &c.; mind=meditation, &c.; understanding=ascertainment of truth; senses=hearing and celebrating God's name.

egoistic notions). He who is possessed of devotion, abandoning the fruit of actions, attains the highest tranquillity. He who is without devotion, and attached to the fruit (of action), is tied down by (reason of his) acting in consequence of (some) desire. The self-restrained, embodied (self) lies at ease within the city of nine portals¹, renouncing all actions by the mind, not doing nor causing (anything) to be done. The Lord is not the cause of actions, or of the capacity of performing actions amongst men, or of the connexion of action and fruit. But nature only works. The Lord receives no one's sin, nor merit either. Knowledge is enveloped by ignorance, hence all creatures are deluded². But to those who have destroyed that ignorance by knowledge of the self, (such) knowledge, like the sun, shows forth that supreme (principle). And those whose mind is (centred) on it, whose (very) self it is, who are thoroughly devoted to it, and whose final goal it is, go never to return, having their sins destroyed by knowledge. The wise look upon a Brāhmaṇa possessed of learning and humility, on a cow, an elephant, a dog, and a Svapāka, as alike³. Even here, those have conquered the material world, whose mind rests in equability⁴; since Brahman is free from defects and equable, therefore they rest in ¹ Cf. Prāmāṇyashad, p. 202; Svetāśvatara, p. 332; Sutta Nipāta, p. 52. The Kaṭhōpanishad has eleven portals (p. 132). The nine are the eyes, nostrils, ears, mouth, and the two for excretions.

² As regards the Lord's relation to man's merit or sin.

³ As manifestations of Brahman, though of different qualities and classes. As to Svapāka, a very low caste, see Sutta Nipāta, p. 36.

⁴ As stated in the preceding words.

Brahman. He who knows Brahman, whose mind is steady, who is not deluded, and who rests in Brahman, does not exult on finding anything agreeable, nor does he grieve on finding anything disagreeable¹. One whose self is not attached to external objects, obtains the happiness that is in (one's) self; and by means of concentration of mind, joining one's self (with the Brahman), one obtains indestructible happiness. For the enjoyments born of contact (between senses and their objects) are, indeed, sources of misery; they have a beginning as well as an end². O son of Kuntī! a wise man feels no pleasure in them. He who even in this world, before his release from the body, is able to bear the agitations produced from desire and wrath, is a devoted man, he is a happy man. The devotee whose happiness is within (himself), whose recreation is within (himself), and whose light (of knowledge) also is within (himself), becoming (one with) the Brahman³, obtains the Brahmic bliss⁴. The sages whose sins have perished, whose misgivings are destroyed, who are self-restrained, and who are intent on the welfare of all beings⁵, obtain the Brahmic bliss. To the ascetics, who are free from desire and wrath⁶, and whose minds are restrained, and who have knowledge of the self, the Brahmic bliss is on both sides (of death). The sage who excludes (from his mind)

¹ Ka/hopanishad, p. 100.

² Cf. supra, p. 44.

³ He is one with the Brahman as he is intent exclusively on the Brahman.

⁴ The bliss of assimilation with the Brahman, or, as Rāmānuga puts it, the bliss of direct knowledge of the self.

⁵ Sutta Nipāta, p. 39; also Davids' Buddhism, p. 109.

⁶ Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 3.

external objects, (concentrates) the visual power between the brows¹, and making the upward and downward life-breaths even, confines their movements within the nose, who restrains senses, mind, and understanding², whose highest goal is final emancipation, from whom desire, fear, and wrath have departed, is, indeed, for ever released (from birth and death). He knowing me to be the enjoyer of all sacrifices and penances, the great Lord of all worlds, and the friend of all beings, attains tranquillity.

CHAPTER VI.

The Deity said :

He who, regardless of the fruit of actions, performs the actions which ought to be performed, is the devotee and renouncer ; not he who discards the (sacred) fires³, nor he who performs no acts. Know, O son of Pāṇḍu ! that what is called renunciation is devotion ; for nobody becomes a devotee who has not renounced (all) fancies⁴. To the sage who wishes to rise to devotion, action is said to be a means, and, to him, when he has risen to devotion, tranquillity⁵ is said to be a means. When one does not attach oneself to objects of sense, nor to action, renouncing all fancies, then one is said to have risen to devotion. (A man) should elevate his self by his self⁶; he should not debase his self, for even (a man's) own self is his

¹ Cf. infra, p. 78.

² P. 57 and Kaṭhōpanishad, p. 157.

³ Which are required for ordinary religious rites.

⁴ Which are the cause of desires ; see supra, p. 50.

⁵ Abandonment of distracting actions ; means scil. to perfect knowledge, says Śrīdhara.

⁶ I. e. by means of a mind possessed of true discrimination.

friend, (a man's) own self is also his enemy¹. To him who has subjugated his self by his self², his self is a friend; but to him who has not restrained his self, his own self behaves inimically, like an enemy. The self of one who has subjugated his self and is tranquil, is absolutely concentrated (on itself), in the midst of cold and heat, pleasure and pain, as well as honour and dishonour. The devotee whose self is contented with knowledge and experience³, who is unmoved⁴, who has restrained his senses, and to whom a sod, a stone, and gold are alike, is said to be devoted. And he is esteemed highest, who thinks alike⁵ about well-wishers, friends, and enemies, and those who are indifferent, and those who take part with both sides, and those who are objects of hatred, and relatives, as well as about the good and the sinful. A devotee should constantly devote his self to abstraction, remaining in a secret place⁶, alone, with his mind and self⁷ restrained, without expectations, and without belongings. Fixing his seat firmly in a clean⁸ place, not too high nor too low, and covered over with a sheet of cloth, a deer-skin, and (blades of) Kusa (grass),—and there seated on (that) seat, fixing his mind exclusively on one

¹ Self is here explained as mind, the unsteadiness of which prevents the acquisition of devotion, p. 71.

² This means restraining senses by mind. See Maitrī-upanishad, p. 180.

³ Supra, p. 57.

⁴ By any of the vexations of the world.

⁵ I. e. is free from affection or aversion towards them.

⁶ 'Release from society' is insisted on at Sutta Nipāta, p. 55.

⁷ Self is here explained as senses; in the previous clause as mind.

⁸ This requisite is prescribed by many authorities. Cf. Āṅgīrśya-upanishad, p. 626; Maitrī, p. 156; Svetāśvatara, pp. 318, 319; and Āśvalāyana (Gṛhya-sūtra) III, 2, 2, for Vedic study too.

point, with the workings of the mind and senses restrained, he should practice devotion for purity of self. Holding his body, head, and neck even and unmoved, (remaining) steady, looking at the tip of his own nose¹, and not looking about in (all) directions, with a tranquil self, devoid of fear, and adhering to the rules of Brahma-kârins², he should restrain his mind, and (concentrate it) on me, and sit down engaged in devotion, regarding me as his final goal. Thus constantly devoting his self to abstraction, a devotee whose mind is restrained, attains that tranquillity which culminates in final emancipation, and assimilation with me. Devotion is not his, O Arguna ! who eats too much, nor his who eats not at all ; not his who is addicted to too much sleep, nor his who is (ever) awake. That devotion which destroys (all) misery is his, who takes due food and exercise³, who toils duly in all works, and who sleeps and awakes (in) due (time)⁴. When (a man's) mind well restrained becomes steady upon the self alone, then he being indifferent to all objects of desire, is said to be devoted. As a light standing in a windless (place) flickers not, that is declared to be the parallel for a devotee, whose mind is restrained, and who devotes his self to abstraction. That (mental condition), in which the mind restrained by practice of abstraction, ceases to work ; in which

¹ Cf. Kumârasambhava, Canto III, 47. This is done in order to prevent the sight from rambling—a total closing of the eyes being objectionable as leading to sleep.

² See these in Âpastamba (p. 7 in this series); and cf. Sutta Nipâta, pp. 159, 160; and Max Müller's Hibbert Lectures, p. 158.

³ Cf. Sutta Nipâta, pp. 28, 95.

⁴ Buddhism shows similar injunctions. Cf. Sutta Nipâta, pp. 21, 28, 95; and Dhammapada, stanza 8.

- too, one seeing the self by the self¹, is pleased in the self; in which one experiences that infinite happiness which transcends the senses, and which can be grasped by the understanding only; and adhering to which, one never swerves from the truth; acquiring which, one thinks no other acquisition higher than it; and adhering to which, one is not shaken off even by great misery; that should be understood to be called
- devotion in which there is a severance of all connexion with pain. That devotion should be practised with steadiness and with an undesponding heart. Abandoning, without exception, all desires², which are produced from fancies, and restraining the whole group of the senses on all sides by the mind only³, one should by slow steps become quiescent⁴, with a firm resolve coupled with courage⁵; and fixing the mind upon the self, should think of nothing. Wherever the active and unsteady mind breaks forth⁶, there one should ever restrain it, and fix it steadily on the self alone. The highest happiness
 - comes to such a devotee, whose mind is fully tranquil, in whom the quality of passion has been suppressed, who is free from sin, and who is become (one with) the Brahman. Thus constantly devoting his self to abstraction, a devotee, freed from sin,
 - easily obtains that supreme happiness—contact with the Brahman⁷. He who has devoted his self to abstraction, by devotion, looking alike on everything,

¹ Sees the highest principle by a mind purified by abstraction.

² Cf. Sutta Nipâta, p. 62.

³ Cf. supra, p. 53.

⁴ I. e. cease to think of objects of sense. Cf. supra, p. 69.

⁵ I. e. an undespairing and firm resolution that devotion will be achieved ultimately.

⁶ Cf. Sutta Nipâta, p. 106.

⁷ Assimilation with the Brahman.

sees the self abiding in all beings, and all beings in the self¹. To him who sees me in everything, and everything in me, I am never lost, and he is not lost to me². The devotee who worships me abiding in all beings, holding that all is one³, lives in me, however he may be living⁴. That devotee, O Arguna! is deemed to be the best, who looks alike on pleasure or pain, whatever it may be, in all (creatures), comparing all with his own (pleasure or pain)⁵.

Arguna said :

I cannot see, O destroyer of Madhu! (how) the sustained existence (is to be secured) of this devotion by means of equanimity which you have declared—in consequence of fickleness. For, O Krishna! the mind is fickle, boisterous⁶, strong, and obstinate; and I think that to restrain it is as difficult as (to restrain) the wind.

The Deity said :

Doubtless, O you of mighty arms! the mind is difficult to restrain, and fickle⁷. Still, O son of Kuntl! it may be restrained by constant practice and by indifference (to worldly objects). It is my belief, that devotion is hard to obtain for one who does not restrain his self. But by one who is self-restrained

¹ Realises the essential unity of everything.

² He has access to me, and I am kind to him.

³ Cf. Īṣopaniṣad, p. 13.

⁴ 'Even abandoning all action,' says Sṛīdhara; and cf. infra, p. 105.

⁵ Who believes that pleasure and pain are as much liked or disliked by others as by himself, and puts himself in fact in the place of others.

⁶ Troublesome to the body, senses, &c.

⁷ Cf. Dhammapada, stanza 33 seq.

and assiduous, it can be obtained through (proper) expedients.

Arguna said :

What is the end of him, O Krishna ! who does not attain the consummation of his devotion, being not assiduous¹, and having a mind shaken off from devotion, (though) full of faith? Does he, fallen from both (paths)², go to ruin like a broken cloud, being, O you of mighty arms! without support, and deluded on the path (leading) to the Brahman? Be pleased, O Krishna ! to entirely destroy this doubt of mine, for none else than you can destroy this doubt.

The Deity said :

O son of Prithā ! neither in this world nor the next, is ruin for him ; for, O dear friend ! none who performs good (deeds) comes to an evil end. He who is fallen from devotion attains the worlds of those who perform meritorious acts, dwells (there) for many a year, and is afterwards born into a family of holy and illustrious³ men. Or he is even born into a family of talented devotees ; for such a birth as that in this world is more difficult to obtain. There he comes into contact with the knowledge which belonged to him in his former body, and then again, O descendant of Kuru ! he works for perfection⁴. For even though reluctant⁵, he is led away by the

¹ Cf. p. 73 infra.

² The path to heaven, and that to final emancipation.

³ 'Kings or emperors,' says Madhusūdana.

⁴ I. e. final emancipation.

⁵ 'As Arguna himself,' says Madhusūdana, 'receives instruction in knowledge, though he comes to the battle-field without any such object ; hence it was said before, "nothing is here abortive."' See p. 47.

self-same former practice, and although he only wishes to learn devotion, he rises above the (fruits of action laid down in the) divine word. But the devotee working with great efforts¹, and cleared of his sins, attains perfection after many births, and then reaches the supreme goal. The devotee is esteemed higher than the performers of penances, higher even than the men of knowledge, and the devotee is higher than the men of action; therefore, O Arguna! become a devotee. And even among all devotees, he who, being full of faith, worships me, with his inmost self intent on me, is esteemed by me to be the most devoted.

CHAPTER VII.

The Deity said :

O son of Prithā! now hear how you can without doubt know me fully, fixing your mind on me, and resting in me, and practising devotion. I will now tell you exhaustively about knowledge together with experience; that being known, there is nothing further left in this world to know. Among thousands of men, only some² work for perfection³; and even of those who have reached perfection, and who are assiduous, only some know me truly. Earth, water, fire, air, space, mind, understanding, ¹ As distinguished from the others who work half-heartedly, so to say. See p. 72.

² 'Some one' in the original.

³ I. e. knowledge of the self. Sāṅkara says, as to the next clause, that those even who work for final emancipation must be deemed to have 'reached perfection.'

and egoism¹, thus is my nature divided eightfold. But this is a lower (form of my) nature. Know (that there is) another (form of my) nature, and higher than this, which is animate, O you of mighty arms! and by which this universe is upheld. Know that all things have these (for their) source². I am the producer and the destroyer of the whole universe. There is nothing else, O Dhanañgaya! higher than myself; all this is woven upon me, like numbers of pearls upon a thread³. I am the taste in water, O son of Kuntī! I am the light of the sun and moon. I am 'Om' in all the Vedas, sound⁴ in space, and manliness in human beings; I am the fragrant smell in the earth, refulgence in the fire; I am life in all beings, and penance⁵ in those who perform penance. Know me, O son of Prithā! to be the eternal seed of all beings; I am the discernment of the discerning ones, and I the glory of the glorious⁷. I am also the strength, unaccompanied by fondness or desire⁸, of the strong. And, O chief of the descendants of Bharata! I am love unopposed to piety⁹ among all

¹ This accords with the Sāṅkhya philosophy. See chapter I, sūtra 61 of the current aphorisms.

² Cf. infra, p. 105.

³ Cf. Mundakopaniṣad, p. 298.

⁴ Infra, p. 79. Cf. Goldstücker's Remains, I, 14, 122; Yoga-sūtras I, 27.

⁵ I. e. the occult essence which underlies all these and the other qualities of the various things mentioned.

⁶ I. e. power to bear the pairs of opposites.

⁷ Glory here seems to mean dignity, greatness.

⁸ Desire is the wish to obtain new things; fondness is the anxiety to retain what has been obtained. The strength here spoken of, therefore, is that which is applied to the performance of one's own duties only.

⁹ I. e. indulged within the bounds allowed by the rules of the Sāstras, namely, for the procreation of sons &c. only.

beings. And all entities which are of the quality of goodness, and those which are of the quality of passion and of darkness, know that they are, indeed, all from me ; I am not in them, but they are in me ¹. The whole universe deluded by these three states of mind, developed from the qualities, does not know me, who am beyond them and inexhaustible ; for this delusion of mine, developed from the qualities, is divine and difficult to transcend. Those who resort to me alone cross beyond this delusion. Wicked men, doers of evil (acts), who are deluded, who are deprived of their knowledge by (this) delusion, and who incline to the demoniac state of mind ², do not resort to me. But, O Arguna ! doers of good (acts) of four classes worship me : one who is distressed, one who is seeking after knowledge, one who wants wealth, and one, O chief of the descendants of Bharata ! who is possessed of knowledge. Of these, he who is possessed of knowledge, who is always devoted, and whose worship is (addressed) to one (Being) only, is esteemed highest. For to the man of knowledge I am dear above all things, and he is dear to me. All these are noble. But the man possessed of knowledge is deemed by me to be my own self. For he with (his) self devoted to abstraction, has taken to me as the goal than which there is nothing higher. At the end of many lives, the man possessed of knowledge approaches me, (believing) that Vāsudeva is everything. Such a high-souled man is very hard to find. Those who are deprived of knowledge by various desires approach other divinities, observing various regulations ¹, and controlled by their own natures ². Whichever form (of deity) any worshipper wishes to worship with faith, to that form I render his faith steady. Possessed of that faith, he seeks to propitiate (the deity in) that (form), and obtains from it those beneficial things which he desires, (though they are) really given by me. But the fruit thus (obtained) by them, who have little judgment, is perishable. Those who worship the divinities go to the divinities ³, and my worshippers, too, go to me. The undiscerning ones, not knowing my transcendent and inexhaustible essence, than which there is nothing higher, think me, who am unperceived, to have become perceptible ⁴. Surrounded by the delusion of my mystic power ⁵, I am not manifest to all. This deluded world knows not me unborn and inexhaustible. I know, O Arguna! the things which have been, those which are, and those which are to be. But me nobody knows. All beings, O terror of (your) foes! are deluded at the time of birth by the delusion, O descendant of Bharata! caused by the pairs of opposites arising from desire and aversion. But the men of meritorious actions, whose sins have terminated, worship me, being released from the delusion (caused) by the pairs of ¹ Fasts and so forth.

¹ They do not dominate over me, I rule them.

² Infra, p. 115.

² Which are the result of the actions done in previous lives.

³ And the divinities are not eternal, so the fruit obtained is ephemeral.

⁴ The ignorant do not know the real divinity of Vishṇu, thinking him to be no higher than as he is seen in the human form. This gives them an inadequate notion of the purity and eternity of the happiness to be obtained by worshipping him; cf. infra, p. 83.

⁵ The veil surrounding me is created by my mysterious power, and that everybody cannot pierce through; cf. Kaṭha, p. 117.

opposites, and being firm in their beliefs¹. Those who, resting on me, work for release from old age and death², know the Brahman³, the whole Adhyâtma, and all action. And those who know me with the Adhibhûta, the Adhidaiva, and the Adhiyagñā, having minds devoted to abstraction, know me at the time of departure (from this world).

CHAPTER VIII.

Arguna said :

What is that Brahman, what the Adhyâtma, and what, O best of beings ! is action ? And what is called the Adhibhûta ? And who is the Adhiyagñā, and how in this body, O destroyer of Madhu ? And how, too, are you to be known at the time of departure (from this world) by those who restrain their selfs ?

The Deity said :

The Brahman is the supreme, the indestructible. Its manifestation (as an individual self) is called the Adhyâtma. The offering (of an oblation to any divinity), which is the cause of the production and development of all things, is named action. The Adhibhûta is all perishable things. The Adhidaivata is the (primal) being. And the Adhiyagñā, O best of embodied (beings) ! is I myself in this body⁴.

¹ Concerning the supreme principle and the mode of worshipping it.

² Cf. infra, p. 109.

³ See the next chapter.

⁴ Adhyâtma where it occurs before (e.g. p. 55) has been rendered 'the relation between the supreme and individual soul.' As to

And he who leaves this body and departs (from this world) remembering me in (his) last moments, comes into my essence. There is no doubt of that. Also whichever form ¹ (of deity) he remembers when he finally leaves this body, to that he goes, O son of Kuntl! having been used to ponder on it. Therefore, at all times remember me, and engage in battle. Fixing your mind and understanding on me, you will come to me, there is no doubt. He who thinks of the supreme divine Being, O son of Prithā! with a mind not (running) to other (objects), and possessed of abstraction in the shape of continuous meditation (about the supreme), goes to him. He who, possessed of reverence (for the supreme Being) with a steady mind, and with the power of devotion, properly concentrates the life-breath between the brows ², and meditates on the ancient Seer, the ruler, more minute than the minutest atom ³, the supporter of all, who is of an unthinkable form, whose brilliance is like that of the sun, and who is beyond all darkness ⁴, he attains to that transcendent and divine Being. I ⁵ will tell you briefly about the seat, which those who know the Vedas declare to be indestructible; which is entered by ascetics from whom all desires have departed; and wishing for which, people pursue the action, cf. pp. 53, 54. Adhibhūta is apparently the whole inanimate creation, and Adhidaivata is the being supposed to dwell in the sun. Adhiyagñā is Kṛishṇa. Cf. too pp. 113, 114.

¹ Some commentators say 'whatever thing' generally. The 'form' remembered in one's last moments would be that which had been most often meditated on during life.

² Cf. supra, p. 67. ³ Kaṭha, p. 105; Svetâsvatara, p. 333.

⁴ Cf. Svetâsvatara-upanishad, p. 327.

⁵ Kaṭhupanishad, p. 102.

mode of life of Brahmatârins¹. He who leaves the body and departs (from this world), stopping up all passages², and confining the mind within the heart³, placing the life-breath in the head, and adhering to uninterrupted meditation⁴, repeating the single syllable 'Om,' (signifying) the eternal Brahman⁵, and meditating on me, he reaches the highest goal. To the devotee who constantly practises abstraction, O son of Prithâ! and who with a mind not (turned) to anything else, is ever and constantly meditating on me, I am easy of access. The high-souled ones, who achieve the highest perfection, attaining to me, do not again come to life, which is transient, a home of woes⁶. All worlds, O Arguna! up to the world of Brahman, are (destined) to return⁷. But, O son of Kuntî! after attaining to me, there is no birth again. Those who know a day of Brahman to end after one thousand ages, and the night to terminate after one thousand ages, are the persons ¹ As to Brahmatârins, see supra, p. 69.

² 'The senses,' say the commentators. Might it not refer to the 'nine portals' at p. 65 supra? See also, however, p. 108.

³ I.e. thinking of nothing, making the mind cease to work. Cf. Maitri-upanishad, p. 179.

⁴ Cf. Maitri-upanishad, p. 130, uninterrupted, like 'oil when poured out,' says the commentator.

⁵ Cf. K'ândogya-upanishad, p. 151; Mândukya, pp. 330-388 (Om is all—past, present, and future); Nṛsiṃha Tâpinī, pp. 110, 117, 171; Maitri, p. 140; Prasna, p. 220. On the opening passage of the K'ândogya, Saṅkara says, 'Om is the closest designation of the supreme Being. He is pleased when it is pronounced, as people are at the mention of a favourite name.' See also Max Müller, Hibbert Lectures, p. 84; Goldstücker's Remains, I, 122.

⁶ See infra, p. 86; and cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 125.

⁷ They are only temporary, not the everlasting seats of the soul.

who know day and night¹. On the advent of day, all perceptible things are produced from the unperceived; and on the advent of night they dissolve in that same (principle) called the unperceived. This same assemblage of entities, being produced again and again, dissolves on the advent of night, and, O son of Prithā! issues forth on the advent of day, without a will of its own². But there is another entity, unperceived and eternal, and distinct from this unperceived (principle), which is not destroyed when all entities are destroyed. It is called the unperceived, the indestructible; they call it the highest goal. Attaining to it, none returns³. That is my supreme abode. That supreme Being, O son of Prithā! he in whom all these entities dwell⁴, and by whom all this is permeated, is to be attained to by reverence not (directed) to another. I will state the times, O descendant of Bharata! at which devotees departing (from this world) go, never to return, or to return. The fire, the flame⁵, the day,

¹ Cf. Manu I, 73. Saṅkara says, that this explains why the abodes of Brahmā and others are said to be not lasting. They are limited by time. As to ages, Sṛīdhara says, a human year is a day and night of the gods. Twelve thousand years made of such days and nights make up the four ages: one thousand such 'quaternions of ages' make up a day, and another thousand a night of Brahmā. Of such days and nights Brahmā has a hundred years to live. At the close of his life, the universe is destroyed.

² Cf. p. 82 infra; also Manu-smṛiti I, 52; and Kālidāsa's Kumārasambhava II, 8.

³ Cf. Kaṭhōpanishad, p. 149; and also p. 112 infra.

⁴ I. e. by whom, as the cause of them, all these entities are supported; cf. p. 82 infra.

⁵ Sṛīdhara understands 'the time when,' in the sentence preceding this, to mean 'the path indicated by a deity presiding over the bright fortnight, the six months of the northern solstice, departing (from the world) in these, those who know the Brahman go to the Brahman. Smoke, night, the dark fortnight, the six months of the southern solstice, (dying) in these, the devotee goes to the lunar light and returns¹. These two paths, bright and dark, are deemed to be eternal in this world². By the one, (a man) goes never to return, by the other he comes back. Knowing these two paths, O son of Prithā! no devotee is deluded³. Therefore at all times be possessed of devotion, O Arguna! A devotee knowing all this⁴, obtains all the holy fruit which is prescribed for (study of) the Vedas, for sacrifices, and also for penances and gifts, and he attains to the highest and primeval seat.

CHAPTER IX.

Now I will speak to you, who are not given to carping, of that most mysterious knowledge, accompanied by experience, by knowing which you will be released from evil. It is the chief among the sciences, the chief among the mysteries. It is the best means of sanctification. It is imperishable, not time, by which;’ and the fire-flame as included in this, though having no connexion with time. Saṅkara agrees, though he also suggests that fire means a deity presiding over time. I own I have no clear notion of the meaning of these verses. Cf. Kāṇḍogya, p. 342; Bṛhad-Āraṇyaka-upanishad, p. 1057 seq.

¹ Cf. Prana-upanishad, p. 64; and Sāṅkhya Bhāṣya, p. 747 seq.

² I. e. for those who are fitted for knowledge or action.

³ I. e. does not desire heaven, but devotes himself to the supreme Being, seeing that heavenly bliss is only temporary.

⁴ All that is stated in this chapter.

opposed to the sacred law. It is to be apprehended directly¹, and is easy to practise. O terror of your foes! those men who have no faith in this holy doctrine, return to the path of this mortal world, without attaining to me. This whole universe is pervaded by me in an unperceived form. All entities live in me, but I do not live in them². Nor yet do all entities live in me. See my divine power. Supporting all entities and producing all entities, my self lives not in (those) entities. As the great and ubiquitous atmosphere always remains in space, know that similarly all entities live in me³. At the expiration of a Kalpa, O son of Kuntl! all entities enter my nature; and at the beginning of a Kalpa, I again bring them forth. Taking the control of my own nature⁴, I bring forth again and again this whole collection of entities, without a will of its own⁵, by the power of nature. But, O Arguna! these actions do not fetter⁶ me, who remain like one unconcerned, and who am unattached to those actions. Nature gives birth to movables and immovables through me, the supervisor, and by reason of that⁷, O son of Kuntl! the universe revolves. Deluded people of vain hopes, vain acts, vain know-

¹ I. e. by immediate consciousness, not mediately; 'not opposed to the sacred law,' i.e. like the Syena sacrifice for destroying a foe.

² Because he is untainted by anything. And therefore also the entities do not live in him, as said in the next sentence. See p. 80 supra.

³ As space is untainted and unaffected by the air which remains in it, so am I by the entities.

⁴ Supra, p. 58. Nature = the unperceived principle.

⁵ Cf. p. 80 supra.

⁶ I am not affected by the differences in the conditions of these entities.

⁷ Viz. the supervision.

ledge¹, whose minds are disordered, and who are inclined to the delusive nature of Asuras and Rākshasas, not knowing my highest nature as great lord of all entities, disregard me as I have assumed a human body². But the high-souled ones, O son of Prithā! who are inclined to the godlike nature, knowing me as the inexhaustible source of (all) entities, worship me with minds not (turned) elsewhere. Constantly glorifying me, and exerting themselves³, firm in their vows⁴, and saluting me with reverence, they worship me, being always devoted. And others again, offering up the sacrifice of knowledge, worship me as one, as distinct, and as all-pervading in numerous forms⁵. I am the Kratu⁶, I am the Yagñā, I am the Svadhā, I the product of the herbs. I am the sacred verse. I too am the sacrificial butter, and I the fire, I the offering⁷. I am the father of this universe, the mother, the creator, the grandsire, the thing to be known, the means of sanctification, the syllable Om⁸, the Rik, Sāman, and Yagus also; the goal, the sustainer, the lord, the supervisor, the ¹ Hope, viz. that some other deity will give them what they want; acts, vain as not offered to the supreme; knowledge, vain as abounding in foolish doubts, &c.

² Cf. p. 76 supra.

³ For a knowledge of the supreme, or for the means of such knowledge.

⁴ Vows=veracity, harmlessness, &c.

⁵ Sacrifice of knowledge, viz. the knowledge that Vāsudeva is all; as one=believing that all is one; as distinct=believing that sun, moon, &c. are different manifestations of 'me.'

⁶ Kratu is a Vedic sacrifice; Yagñā, a sacrifice laid down in Smṛiti. Svadhā=offering to the manes; 'product of the herbs'=food prepared from vegetables, or medicine.

⁷ Cf. p. 61 supra.

⁸ P. 79 supra.

residence¹, the asylum, the friend, the source, and that in which it merges, the support, the receptacle, and the inexhaustible seed. I cause heat and I send forth and stop showers. I am immortality and also death ; and I, O Arguna ! am that which is and that which is not². Those who know the three (branches of) knowledge, who drink the Soma juice, whose sins are washed away, offer sacrifices and pray to me for a passage into heaven ;, and reaching the holy world of the lord of gods, they enjoy in the celestial regions the celestial pleasures of the gods. And having enjoyed that great heavenly world, they enter the mortal world when (their) merit is exhausted³. Thus those who wish for objects of desire, and resort to the ordinances of the three (Vedas), obtain (as the fruit) going and coming. To those men who worship me, meditating on me and on no one else, and who are constantly devoted, I give new gifts and preserve what is acquired by them⁴. Even those, O son of Kuntī ! who being devotees of other divinities worship with faith, worship me only, (but) irregularly⁵. For I am the enjoyer as well as the lord⁶ of all sacrifices. But they know me not truly, therefore do they fall⁷. Those who make vows⁸ to the gods go to the gods ;

¹ I.e. the seat of enjoyment ; receptacle=where things are preserved for future use, say the commentators.

² The gross and the subtle elements, or causes and effects.

³ Cf. Mundakopanishad, p. 279 ; and Khândogya, p. 344.

⁴ Cf. Dhammapada, stanza 23. I.e. attainment to the Brahman and not returning from it.—Râmânuga.

⁵ Because in form they worship other divinities.

⁶ Giver of the fruit. As to enjoyer, cf. p. 67 supra.

⁷ I.e. return to the mortal world.

⁸ I.e. some regulation as to mode of worship. Cf. also p. 76 supra.

those who make vows to the manes go to the manes; those who worship the Bhûtas go to the Bhûtas; and those likewise who worship me go to me. Whoever with devotion offers me leaf, flower, fruit, water, that, presented with devotion, I accept from him whose self is pure. Whatever you do, O son of Kuntl! whatever you eat, whatever sacrifice you make, whatever you give, whatever penance you perform, do that as offered to me¹. Thus will you be released from the bonds of action, the fruits of which are agreeable or disagreeable. And with your self possessed of (this) devotion, (this) renunciation², you will be released (from the bonds of action) and will come to me. I am alike to all beings; to me none is hateful, none dear. But those who worship me with devotion (dwell) in me³, and I too in them. Even if a very ill-conducted man worships me, not worshipping any one else, he must certainly be deemed to be good, for he has well resolved⁴. He soon becomes devout of heart, and obtains lasting tranquillity. (You may) affirm, O son of Kuntl! that my devotee is never ruined. For, O son of Prithâ! even those who are of sinful birth⁵, women, Vaisyas, and Sûdras likewise, resorting to me, attain the supreme goal. What then (need

¹ Cf. p. 55 supra, and other passages.

² This mode of action is at once devotion and renunciation: the first, because one cares not for fruit; the second, because it is offered to the supreme.

³ 'They dwell in me' by their devotion to me; I dwell in them as giver of happiness to them.

⁴ Viz. that the supreme Being alone should be revered.

⁵ Saṅkara takes Vaisyas &c. as examples of this; not so Sṛidhara. Cf. as to women and Sûdras, Nṛsiṃha-tâpinī, p. 14. 'Of sinful birth' = of low birth (Sṛidhara) = birth resulting from sins (Saṅkara).

be said of) holy Brāhmanas and royal saints who are (my) devotees? Coming to this transient unhappy¹ world, worship me. (Place your) mind on me, become my devotee, my worshipper; reverence me, and thus making me your highest goal, and devoting your self to abstraction, you will certainly come to me.

CHAPTER X.

Yet again, O you of mighty arms! listen to my excellent² words, which, out of a wish for your welfare, I speak to you who are delighted (with them). Not the multitudes of gods, nor the great sages know my source; for I am in every way³ the origin of the gods and great sages. Of (all) mortals, he who knows me to be unborn, without beginning, the great lord of the world, being free from delusion, is released from all sins. Intelligence, knowledge, freedom from delusion, forgiveness, truth, restraint of the senses, tranquillity, pleasure, pain, birth, death, fear, and also security, harmlessness, equability, contentment, penance, (making) gifts, glory, disgrace, all these different tempers⁴ of living beings are from me alone. The seven great sages, and likewise the four ancient Manus⁵, whose descendants are (all) these people in the world, were all born from my

¹ Cf. p. 79 supra.

² As referring to the supreme soul.

³ As creator, as moving agent in workings of the intellect, &c.

⁴ The names are not always names of 'tempers,' but the corresponding 'temper' must be understood.

⁵ The words are also otherwise construed, 'The four ancients (Sanaka, Sanandana, Sanātana, Sanatkumāra) and the Manus.' According to the later mythology the Manus are fourteen.

mind ¹, (partaking) of my powers. Whoever correctly knows these powers and emanations of mine, becomes possessed of devotion free from indecision ; of this (there is) no doubt. The wise, full of love ², worship me, believing that I am the origin of all, and that all moves on through me. (Placing their) minds on me, offering (their) lives to me, instructing each other, and speaking about me, they are always contented and happy. To these, who are constantly devoted, and who worship with love, I give that knowledge by which they attain to me. And remaining in their hearts, I destroy, with the brilliant lamp of knowledge, the darkness born of ignorance in such (men) only, out of compassion for them.

Arguna said :

You are the supreme Brahman, the supreme goal, the holiest of the holy. All sages, as well as the divine sage Nārada, Asita ³, Devala, and Vyāsa, call you the eternal being, divine, the first god, the unborn, the all-pervading. And so, too, you tell me yourself, O Kesava ! I believe all this that you tell me (to be) true ; for, O lord ! neither the gods nor demons understand your manifestation ⁴. You only know your self by your self. O best of beings ! creator of all things ! lord of all things ! god of gods ! lord of the universe ! be pleased to declare without ¹ By the mere operation of my thought. As to ancients, cf. Aitareya-Āraṇyaka, p. 136.

² Śaṅkara renders the word here by perseverance in pursuit of truth.

³ Ānandagiri calls Asita father of Devala. See also Davids' Buddhism, p. 185 ; Max Müller's Anc. Sansk. Lit., p. 463.

⁴ Scil. in human form for the good of the gods and the destruction of demons.

exception your divine emanations, by which emanations you stand pervading all these worlds. How shall I know you, O you of mystic power! always meditating on you? And in what various entities¹, O lord! should I meditate on you? Again, O Ganârdana! do you yourself declare your powers and emanations; because hearing this nectar, I (still) feel no satiety.

The Deity said :

Well then, O best of Kauravas! I will state to you my own divine emanations; but (only) the chief (ones), for there is no end to the extent of my (emanations). I am the self, O Gudâkṣa! seated in the hearts of all beings². I am the beginning and the middle and the end also of all beings. I am Vishṇu among the *Âdityas*³, the beaming sun among the shining (bodies); I am Martî among the *Maruts*⁴, and the moon among the lunar mansions⁵. Among the Vedas, I am the *Sâma-veda*⁶. I am Indra among the gods. And I am mind among the senses⁷. I am consciousness in (living) beings. And I am *Śaṅkara*⁸ among the Rudras, the lord of wealth⁹ among Yakshas and Rakshases. And I am fire among the Vasus, and *Meru*¹⁰ among the high-

¹ To know you fully being impossible, what special manifestation of you should we resort to for our meditations?

² P. 129 infra. •

³ 'Âditya is used in the Veda chiefly as a general epithet for a number of solar deities.' Max Müller, Hibbert Lectures, p. 264.

⁴ The storm-gods, as Max Müller calls them.

⁵ Cf. Sutta Nipâta, p. 121.

⁶ As being, probably, full of music.

⁷ Cf. Khândogya, p. 121, where Śaṅkara says, 'Mind is the chief of man's inner activities.'

⁸ Now the third member of our Trinity.

⁹ Kubera.

¹⁰ The Golden Mount.

topped (mountains). And know me, O Arguna ! to be Bṛihaspati, the chief among domestic priests. I am Skanda among generals. I am the ocean among reservoirs of water ¹. I am Bhrigu among the great sages. I am the single syllable (Om ²) among words. Among sacrifices I am the Gapa sacrifice ³; the Himālaya among the firmly-fixed (mountains); the Asvattha ⁴ among all trees, and Nārada among divine sages; Kitraratha among the heavenly choristers, the sage Kapila among the Siddhas ⁵. Among horses know me to be Ukkaissravas ⁶, brought forth by (the labours for) the nectar; and Airāvata among the great elephants, and the ruler of men among men ⁷. I am the thunderbolt among weapons, the wish-giving (cow) among cows. And I am love which generates ⁸. Among serpents I am Vāsuki. Among Nāga ⁹ snakes I am Ananta; I am Varuṇa among aquatic beings. And I am Aryaman among the manes, and Yama ¹⁰ among rulers. Among demons, too, I am Prahlāda. I am the king of death (Kāla, time) among those that count ¹¹. Among beasts

¹ Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 121.

² Vide p. 79 supra.

³ Gapa is the silent meditation. Madhusūdana says it is superior owing to its not involving the slaughter of any animal, &c.

⁴ The fig tree. It is the symbol of 'life' in chapter XV infra.

⁵ Those who even from birth are possessed of piety, knowledge, indifference to the world, and superhuman power. Cf. Svetāsvatara-upanishad, p. 357.

⁶ This is Indra's horse, brought out at the churning of the ocean. Airāvata is Indra's elephant.

⁷ Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 121.

⁸ I.e. not the merely carnal passion. Cf. p. 74 supra.

⁹ Nāgas are without poison, says Sṛīdhara. Varuṇa is the sea-god.

¹⁰ Yama is death, and Prahlāda the virtuous demon for whom Vishnu became incarnate as the man-lion. As to manes, see Goldstücker's Remains, I, 133.

¹¹ 'Counts the number of men's sins,' Rāmānuga; Sṛīdhara says

I am the lord of beasts, and the son of Vinatā¹ among birds. I am the wind among those that blow². I am Rāma³ among those that wield weapons. Among fishes I am Makara⁴, and among streams the Gāhnavī⁵. Of created things I am the beginning and the end and the middle also, O Arguna ! Among sciences, I am the science of the Adhyātma, and I am the argument of controversialists. Among letters I am the letter A⁶, and among the group of compounds the copulative⁷ compound. I myself am time inexhaustible, and I the creator whose faces are in all directions. I am death who seizes all, and the source of what is to be. And among females, fame⁸, fortune, speech, memory, intellect, courage, forgiveness. Likewise among Sāman hymns, I am the Bṛīhat-sāman⁹, and I the Gâyatrī¹⁰ among metres. I am Mârgaśrīsha among the months, the this refers to 'time, with its divisions into years, months,' &c.; while a little further on it means 'time eternal.'

¹ I.e. the Garuḍa or eagle, who is the vehicle of Viṣṇu in Hindu mythology.

² 'Those who have the capacity of motion,' says Rāmānuja.

³ The hero of the Hindu epos, Rāmāyaṇa, translated into verse by Mr. R. T. H. Griffiths.

⁴ The dolphin.

⁵ The Ganges.

⁶ That letter is supposed to comprehend all language. Cf. Aitareya-āranyaka, p. 346, and another text there cited by Mādhava in his commentary (p. 348).

⁷ This is said to be the best, because all its members are co-ordinate with one another, not one depending on another.

⁸ I.e. the deities of fame, &c.

⁹ See, as to this, Muir, Sanskrit Texts, vol. i, p. 16. Sāṅkara says this hymn relates to final emancipation.

¹⁰ Cf. Āṅdogyā-upanishad, p. 181, where Sāṅkara says, 'Gâyatrī is the chief metre, because it is the means to a knowledge of the Brahman.' It is the metre of the celebrated verse 'Om Tatsavitur,' &c.

spring among the seasons¹; of cheats, I am the game of dice; I am the glory of the glorious; I am victory, I am industry, I am the goodness of the good. I am Vāsudeva among the descendants of *Vṛishni*², and Arguna among the Pāṇḍavas. Among sages also, I am Vyāsa³; and among the discerning ones, I am the discerning Usanas⁴. I am the rod of those that restrain, and the policy⁵ of those that desire victory. I am silence respecting secrets. I am the knowledge of those that have knowledge. And, O Arguna! I am also that which is the seed of all things. There is nothing movable or immovable which can exist without me. O terror of your foes! there is no end to my divine emanations. Here I have declared the extent of (those) emanations only in part. Whatever thing (there is) of power, or glorious, or splendid, know all that to be produced from portions of my energy. Or rather, O Arguna! what have you to do, knowing all this at large? I stand supporting all this by (but) a single portion (of myself)⁶.

¹ Cf. Āṇḍogya-upanishad, p. 126. Mārgaśīrsha is November-December. Madhusūdana says this is the best month, as being neither too hot nor too cold; but see Schlegel's Bhagavadgītā, ed. Lassen, p. 276.

² One of Kṛishṇa's ancestors.

³ The compiler of the Vedas.

⁴ The preceptor of the Dāityas or demons. A work on politics is ascribed to him.

⁵ Making peace, bribing, &c.

⁶ Cf. Purusha-sūktā (Muir, Sanskrit Texts, vol. i, p. 9).

CHAPTER XI.

Arguna said :

In consequence of the excellent and mysterious words concerning the relation of the supreme and individual soul, which you have spoken for my welfare, this delusion of mine is gone away. O you whose eyes are like lotus leaves ! I have heard from you at large about the production and dissolution of things, and also about your inexhaustible greatness. O highest lord ! what you have said about yourself is so. I wish, O best of beings ! to see your divine form. If, O lord ! you think that it is possible for me to look upon it, then, O lord of the possessors of mystic power¹ ! show your inexhaustible form to me.

The Deity said :

In hundreds and in thousands see my forms, O son of Prithā ! various, divine, and of various colours and shapes. See the Âdityas, Vasus, Rudras, the two Asvins, and Maruts likewise. And O descendant of Bharata ! see wonders, in numbers, unseen before. Within my body, O Gudâkṣa ! see to-day the whole universe, including (everything) movable and immovable, (all) in one, and whatever else you wish to see. But you will not be able to see me with merely this eye of yours. I give you an eye divine. (Now) see my divine power.

Saṅgaya said :

Having spoken thus, O king ! Hari, the great

¹ Madhu-ûdana takes power to mean capacity of becoming small or great, of obtaining what is wanted, &c. ; the so-called eight Bhûtis.

lord of the possessors of mystic power, then showed to the son of Prithā his supreme divine form, having many mouths and eyes, having (within it) many wonderful sights, having many celestial ornaments, having many celestial weapons held erect, wearing celestial flowers and vestments, having an anointment of celestial perfumes, full of every wonder, the infinite deity with faces in all directions¹. If in the heavens, the lustre of a thousand suns burst forth all at once, that would be like the lustre of that mighty one. There the son of Pāndu then observed in the body of the god of gods the whole universe (all) in one, and divided into numerous² (divisions). Then Dhanañgaya filled with amazement, and with hair standing on end, bowed his head before the god, and spoke with joined hands.

Arguna said :

O god ! I see within your body the gods, as also all the groups of various beings ; and the lord Brahman seated on (his) lotus seat, and all the sages and celestial snakes. I see you, who are of countless forms, possessed of many arms, stomachs, mouths, and eyes on all sides. And, O lord of the universe ! O you of all forms ! I do not see your end or middle or beginning. I see you bearing a coronet and a mace and a discus—a mass of glory, brilliant on all sides, difficult to look at, having on all sides the effulgence of a blazing fire or sun, and indefinable. You are indestructible, the supreme one to be known. You are the highest support¹ of this universe. You are the inexhaustible protector of everlasting piety. I believe you to be the eternal being. I see you void of beginning, middle, end—of infinite power, of unnumbered arms, having the sun and moon for eyes, having a mouth like a blazing fire, and heating the universe with your radiance. For this space between heaven and earth and all the quarters are pervaded by you alone. Looking at this wonderful and terrible form of yours, O high-souled one! the three worlds are affrighted. For here these groups of gods are entering into you. Some being afraid are praying with joined hands, and the groups of great sages and Siddhas are saying 'Welfare²!' and praising you with abundant (hymns) of praise. The Rudras, and Ādityas, the Vasus, the Sādhyas, the Visvas, the two Asvins, the Maruts, and the Ushmapas, and the groups of Gandharvas, Yakshas, demons, and Siddhas are all looking at you amazed. Seeing your mighty form, with many mouths and eyes, with many arms, thighs, and feet, with many stomachs, and fearful with many jaws, all people, and I likewise, are much alarmed, O you of mighty arms! Seeing you, O Vishṇu! touching the skies, radiant, possessed of many hues, with a gaping mouth, and with large blazing eyes, I am much alarmed in my inmost self, and feel no courage, no tranquillity. And seeing your mouths terrible by the jaws, and ¹ The words are the same as at p. 97 infra, where see the note.

¹ Cf. p. 90 supra. Sāṅkara explains it as meaning 'pervading everything.' The expression occurs in the Nṛsiṃha-tāpini-upaniṣad, p. 50, where it is said, 'as, without organs, it sees, hears, goes, takes from all sides and pervades everything, therefore it has faces on all sides.'

² Gods, manes, men, and so forth.

² Seeing signs of some great cataclysm, they say, 'May it be well with the universe,' and then proceed to pray to you.

resembling the fire of destruction, I cannot recognise the (various) directions, I feel no comfort. Be gracious, O lord of gods! who pervadest the universe. And all these sons of Dhṛitarāshṭra, together with all the bands of kings, and Bhīṣma and Droṇa, and this charioteer's son¹ likewise, together with our principal warriors also, are rapidly entering your mouths, fearful and horrific² by (reason of your) jaws. And some with their heads smashed are seen (to be) stuck in the spaces between the teeth. As the many rapid currents of a river's waters run towards the sea alone, so do these heroes of the human world enter your mouths blazing all round. As butterflies, with increased velocity, enter a blazing fire to their destruction, so too do these people enter your mouths with increased velocity (only) to their destruction. Swallowing all these people, you are licking them over and over again from all sides, with your blazing mouths. Your fierce splendours, O Vishṇu! filling the whole universe with (their) effulgence, are heating it. Tell me who you are in this fierce form. Salutations be to thee, O chief of the gods! Be gracious. I wish to know you, the primeval one, for I do not understand your actions.

The Deity said :

I am death, the destroyer of the worlds, fully developed, and I am now active about the over-

¹ I.e. Karna, who was really the eldest brother of the Pāṇḍavas, but having been immediately on birth abandoned by Kunti, was brought up by a charioteer. Karna was told of his true origin by Bhīṣma on his deathbed, and advised to join the Pāṇḍavas, but he declined.

² By reason of the ruggedness and distortion of face.

throw of the worlds. Even without you, the warriors standing in the adverse hosts, shall all cease to be. Therefore, be up, obtain glory, and vanquishing (your) foes, enjoy a prosperous kingdom. All these have been already killed by me. Be only the instrument, O Savyasâkin¹! Drona, and Bhishma, and Gayadratha, and Karna, and likewise other valiant warriors also, whom I have killed, do you kill. Be not alarmed. Do fight. And in the battle you will conquer (your) foes.

Saṅgaya said :

Hearing these words of Kesava, the wearer of the coronet², trembling, and with joined hands, bowed down; and sorely afraid, and with throat choked up, he again spoke to Krishna after saluting him.

Arguna said :

It is quite proper, O Hrishikesa! that the universe is delighted and charmed by your renown, that the demons run away affrighted in all directions, and that all the assemblages of Siddhas bow down (to you). And why, O high-souled one! should they not bow down to you (who are) greater than Brahman, and first cause? O infinite lord of gods! O you pervading the universe! you are the indestructible, that which is, that which is not, and what is beyond them³. You are the primal god, the ancient being, you are the highest support of this universe¹. You are that which has knowledge, that which is the object of knowledge, you are the highest goal. By you is this universe pervaded, O you of infinite forms! You are the wind, Yama, fire, Varuṇa, the moon, you Prajāpati, and the great grandsire². Obeisance be to thee a thousand times, and again and again obeisance to thee! In front and from behind obeisance to thee! Obeisance be to thee from all sides, O you who are all! You are of infinite power, of unmeasured glory; you pervade all, and therefore you are all! Whatever I have said contemptuously,—for instance, ‘O Kṛishṇa!’ ‘O Yādava!’ ‘O friend!’—thinking you to be (my) friend, and not knowing your greatness (as shown in) this (universal form), or through friendliness, or incautiously; and whatever disrespect I have shown you for purposes of merriment, on (occasions of) play, sleep, dinner, or sitting (together), whether alone or in the presence (of friends),—for all that, O undegraded one! I ask pardon of you who are indefinable³. You are the father of the world—movable and immovable—you its great and venerable master; there is none equal to you, whence can there be one greater, O you whose power is unparalleled in all the three worlds? Therefore I bow and prostrate myself, and would propitiate you, the praiseworthy lord. Be pleased,

¹ Arguna, as he could shoot with his left hand as well as the right.—Sridhara.

² Arguna, who had this coronet given him by Indra.—Madhusûdana.

³ The commentators interpret this to mean the perceptible, the unperceived, and the higher principle. Cf. p. 84 supra, and also pp. 103, 113 infra and notes there.

¹ See p. 94 supra. Here the commentators say the words mean ‘that in which the universe is placed at deluge-time.’

² Professor Tiele mentions great-grandfather as a name for the Creator among Kaffirs (History of Religion, p. 18). Cf. p. 83 supra.

³ I.e. of whom it is impossible to ascertain whether he is such or such. Cf. p. 94 supra.

O god! to pardon (my guilt) as a father (that of his) son, a friend (that of his) friend, or a husband (that of his) beloved. I am delighted at seeing what I had never seen before, and my heart is also alarmed by fear. Show me that same form, O god! Be gracious, O lord of gods! O you pervading the universe! I wish to see you bearing the coronet and the mace, with the discus in hand, just the same (as before)¹. O you of thousand arms! O you of all forms! assume that same four-handed form.

The Deity said :

O Arguna! being pleased (with you). I have by my own mystic power shown you this supreme form, full of glory, universal, infinite, primeval, and which has not been seen before by any one else but you, O you hero among the Kauravas! I cannot be seen in this form by any one but you, (even) by (the help of) the study of the Vedas, or of² sacrifices, nor by gifts, nor by actions, nor by fierce penances. Be not alarmed, be not perplexed, at seeing this form of mine, fearful like this. Free from fear and with delighted heart, see now again that same form of mine.

Saṅgaya said :

Having thus spoken to Arguna, Vāsudeva again showed his own form, and the high-souled one becoming again of a mild form, comforted him who had been affrighted.

¹ This is the ordinary form of Krishna.

² This is the original construction. One suspects that sacrifices and study of the Vedas are meant. Cf. the speech of Krishna on the next page.

Arguna said :

O Ganardana! seeing this mild, human form of yours, I am now in my right mind, and have come to my normal state.

The Deity said :

Even the gods are always desiring to see this form of mine, which it is difficult to get a sight of, and which you have seen. I cannot be seen, as you have seen me, by (means of) the Vedas, not by penance, not by gift, nor yet by sacrifice. But, O Arguna! by devotion to me exclusively, I can in this form be truly known, seen, and assimilated¹ with, O terror of your foes! He who performs acts for (propitiating) me, to whom I am the highest (object), who is my devotee, who is free from attachment, and who has no enmity towards any being, he, O son of Pandu! comes to me.

CHAPTER XII.

Arguna said :

Of the worshippers, who thus, constantly devoted, meditate on you, and those who (meditate) on the unperceived and indestructible, which do best know devotion ?

The Deity said :

Those who being constantly devoted, and possessed of the highest faith, worship me with a mind fixed on me, are deemed by me to be the most devoted. But those, who, restraining the (whole) group of the senses, and with a mind at all times

¹ Literally, 'entered into;' it means final emancipation. See p. 128.

equable, meditate on the indescribable, indestructible, unperceived (principle) which is all-pervading, unthinkable, indifferent ¹, immovable, and constant, they, intent on the good of all beings, necessarily attain to me. For those whose minds are attached to the unperceived, the trouble is much greater. Because the unperceived goal ² is obtained by embodied (beings) with difficulty. As to those, however, O son of Prithā! who, dedicating all their actions to me, and (holding) me as their highest (goal), worship me, meditating on me with a devotion towards none besides me, and whose minds are fixed on me, I, without delay, come forward as their deliverer from the ocean of this world of death. Place your mind on me only; fix your understanding on me. In me you will dwell ³ hereafter, (there is) no doubt. But if you are unable to fix your mind steadily on me, then, O Dhanañjaya! endeavour ⁴ to obtain me by the abstraction of mind (resulting) from continuous meditation ⁵. If you are unequal even to continuous meditation, then let acts for (propitiating) me be your highest (aim). Even performing actions for (propitiating) me, you will attain perfection. If you are unable to do even this, then resort to devotion ⁶ to me, and, with self-restraint, abandon all fruit of action. For knowledge is better than continuous meditation; concentration ⁷

¹ Passively looking on what occurs on earth; immovable = changeless; constant = eternal.

² Viz. the indestructible.

³ I.e. assimilated with me, as expressed before.

⁴ Literally, 'wish.'

⁵ Cf. p. 78 supra.

⁶ Performing actions, but dedicating them to me.

⁷ Fixing the mind with effort on the object of contemplation. Cf. Maitri-upanishad, p. 130.

is esteemed higher than knowledge; and the abandonment of fruit of action than concentration; from (that) abandonment, tranquillity soon (results). That devotee of mine, who hates no being, who is friendly and compassionate, who is free from egoism, and from (the idea that this or that is) mine, to whom happiness and misery are alike, who is forgiving, contented, constantly devoted, self-restrained, and firm in his determinations, and whose mind and understanding are devoted to me, he is dear to me. He through whom the world is not agitated¹, and who is not agitated by the world, who is free from joy and anger and fear and agitation, he too is dear to me. That devotee of mine, who is unconcerned², pure, assiduous³, impartial, free from distress⁴, who abandons all actions (for fruit⁵), he is dear to me. He who is full of devotion to me, who feels no joy and no aversion, who does not grieve and does not desire, who abandons (both what is) agreeable and (what is) disagreeable, he is dear to me. He who is alike to friend and foe, as also in honour and dishonour, who is alike in cold and heat, pleasure and pain, who is free from attachments, to whom praise and blame are alike, who is taciturn⁶, and contented with anything whatever (that comes), who is homeless⁷, and of a steady mind, and full of ¹ No disturbance results from him to other men, or from other men to him. Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 56.

² Indifferent to worldly objects.

³ Ready to do work as it arises.

⁴ Not feeling afflicted by other people's doing an injury to him.

⁵ 'For fruit' must be understood here.

⁶ I.e. governs his tongue properly. Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 55, and Dhammapada, stanza 96.

⁷ Cf. Sutta Nipāta, pp. 94, 101, 122; Âpastamba, Dharma-sûtra,

- devotion, that man is dear to me. But those devotees who, imbued with faith, and (regarding) me as their highest (goal), resort to this holy (means for attaining) immortality, as stated, they are extremely dear to me.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Deity said :

This body, O son of Kuntl! is called Kshetra¹, and the learned call him who knows it the Kshetragñā². And know me also, O descendant of Bharata! to be the Kshetragñā in all Kshetras. The knowledge of Kshetra and Kshetragñā is deemed by me (to be real) knowledge. Now hear from me in brief what that Kshetra (is), what (it is) like, what changes (it undergoes), and whence (it comes), and what is he³, and what his powers, (all which) is sung in various ways by sages in numerous hymns⁴, distinctly, and in well-settled texts full of argument, giving indications or full instruction about the Brahman. The great elements⁵, egoism, the understanding, the unperceived also, the ten senses, and the one, and the five objects of sense, desire, p. 86 (p. 152 in this series); and Dhammapada, stanzas 40-91 (where the identical word is used).

¹ I retain the original for want of a good equivalent.

² Cf. Svetārvataropaniṣad, p. 368, and Maitrī, pp. 25-72.

³ I. e. the Kshetragñā.

⁴ Hymns=scil. from the Vedas about ordinary or special actions and so forth. Argument=e. g. in texts like 'How can entity come from non-entity?' 'Who could breathe, if &c.?'

⁵ Cf. Aitareya-āraṇyaka, p. 97. The subtle elements, earth, fire, &c., are meant. The unperceived=nature; the one=mind; courage=that by which the drooping body and senses are supported; egoism=self-consciousness—the feeling 'this is I.'

aversion, pleasure, pain, body, consciousness, courage, thus in brief has been declared the Kshetra with changes¹. Absence of vanity, absence of ostentatiousness, absence of hurtfulness, forgiveness, straightforwardness, devotion to a preceptor, purity², steadiness, self-restraint, indifference towards objects of sense, and also absence of egoism; perception of the misery and evil of birth, death³, old age, and disease; absence of attachment, absence of self-identifying regard for son, wife⁴, home, and so forth; and constant equability on the approach of (both what is) agreeable and (what is) disagreeable; unswerving devotion to me, without meditation on any one else; resorting to clean places, distaste for assemblages of men⁵, constancy in knowledge of the relation of the individual self to the supreme, perception of the object⁶ of knowledge of the truth, this is called knowledge; that is ignorance which is opposed to this. I will declare that which is the object of knowledge, knowing which, one reaches immortality; the highest Brahman, having no beginning nor end, which cannot be said to be existent or non-existent⁷. It has hands and feet on all sides, it has eyes, heads, and faces on all sides, it has ears on all sides, it

¹ See the last page. Changes = development.

² Internal as well as external; as to devotion to a preceptor, cf. Āpastamba, p. 11 (p. 23 in this series); Taittiriya-upanishad, p. 38; Svetārvatara, p. 117; and Sutta Nipāta, p. 87; as to egoism, see p. 52 supra.

³ Cf. Sutta Nipāta, pp. 18-95.

⁴ Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 12.

⁵ Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 11.

⁶ Viz. removal of ignorance and acquisition of happiness.

⁷ Words indicate a class, a quality, an action, or a relation, says Saṅkara. None of these can be predicated of the Brahman; so you cannot apply either of these words to it. Cf. pp. 84, 96 supra, also Svetārvatara, p. 346.

stands pervading everything in the world. Possessed of the qualities of all the senses, (but) devoid of all senses¹, unattached, it supports all, is devoid of qualities, and the enjoyer² of qualities. It is within all things and without them; it is movable and also immovable; it is unknowable through (its) subtlety; it stands afar and near³. Not different in (different) things⁴, but standing as though different, it should be known to be the supporter of (all) things, and that which absorbs and creates (them). It is the radiance even of the radiant (bodies); it is said (to be) beyond darkness. It is knowledge, the object of knowledge, that which is to be attained to by knowledge, and placed in the heart of all⁵. Thus in brief have Kshetra, knowledge, and the object of knowledge been declared. My devotee, knowing this, becomes fit for assimilation with me. Know nature and spirit both (to be) without beginning, and know all developments and qualities⁶ (to be) produced from nature. Nature is said to be the origin of the capacity of working (residing) in the body and the senses; and spirit is said (to be) the origin of the capacity of enjoying pleasures and ¹ Cf. Svetâsvatara, p. 331. He has no ears, but has the quality of hearing, and so forth; unattached=really out of relation to everything, though seeming to be connected with other things through delusion.

² I.e. he perceives them.

³ Îsopanishad, p. 12; Mundaka, p. 313.

⁴ Everything being really one. Cf. inter alia, p. 124 infra. The various manifestations of the Brahman are really one in essence, though apparently different, like foam and water.

⁵ Cf. p. 88.

⁶ Developments=body, senses,&c. Qualities=pleasure, pain,&c.; altogether the expression means the body and feelings and so forth.

pains¹. For spirit with nature joined, enjoys the qualities born of nature. And the cause of its birth in good or evil wombs is the connexion with the qualities². The supreme spirit in this body is called supervisor, adviser³, supporter, enjoyer, the great lord, and the supreme self also. He who thus knows nature and spirit, together with the qualities, is not born again, however living⁴. Some by concentration see the self in the self by the self; others by the Sāṅkhya-yoga; and others still by the Karma-yoga⁵; others yet, not knowing this, practise concentration, after hearing from others⁶. They, too, being (thus) devoted to hearing (instruction) cross beyond death. Whatever thing movable or immovable comes into existence, know that to be from the connexion of Kshetra and Kshetragña, O chief of the descendants of Bharata! He sees (truly),

¹ Śrīdhara says that 'is said to be' means by Kapila and others. For the notion that activity is not a function of the soul, see inter alia. p. 55 supra. Enjoyment, however, is, according to this passage, the function of the soul, not of nature. See also Maitrī-upa-nishad, pp. 107, 108.

² I.e. 'the senses,' says Śrīdhara; good=gods, &c.; evil=beasts, &c.

³ Scil. concerning the operations of the body and senses. Cf. Nṛsiṃha-tāpinī, p. 224. He is adviser because, though he does not interfere, he sees and therefore may be said to sanction the operations alluded to. Supporter, i.e. of body &c. in their workings.

⁴ I.e. though he may have transgressed rules.

⁵ Concentration=fixing of the mind exclusively on the soul, the senses being quiescent. 'See the self,' i.e. the soul; 'in the self,' i.e. within themselves; 'by the self,' i.e. by the mind. Sāṅkhya-yoga=belief that qualities are distinct from the self, which is only a passive spectator of their operations. Cf. Svetāsvatara, p. 109. Karma-yoga=dedication of actions to the supreme. Cf. as to this the gloss on Śaṅkara's Bhāṣya on Vedānta-sūtra IV, 2, 21.

⁶ Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 49.

who sees the supreme lord abiding alike in all entities, and not destroyed though they are destroyed. For he who sees the lord abiding everywhere alike, does not destroy himself¹ by himself, and then reaches the highest goal. He sees (truly), who sees (all) actions (to be) in every way done by nature alone, and likewise the self (to be) not the doer. When a man sees all the variety of entities as existing in one², and (all as) emanating from that, then he becomes (one with) the Brahman. This inexhaustible supreme self, being without beginning and without qualities, does not act, and is not tainted, O son of Kuntī! though stationed in the body. As by (reason of its) subtlety the all-pervading space is not tainted, so the self stationed in every body is not tainted. As the sun singly lights up all this world, so the Kshetragñā, O descendant of Bharata! lights up the whole Kshetra. Those who, with the eye of knowledge, thus understand the difference between Kshetra and Kshetragñā, and the destruction of the nature of all entities³, go to the supreme.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Deity said :

Again I will declare (to you) the highest knowledge, the best of (all sorts of) knowledge, having ¹ Not to have true knowledge is equivalent to self-destruction. Cf. Īropanishad, pp. 9, 15, 16.

² I.e. absorbed at the time of the deluge in nature, one of the energies of the supreme; 'emanating,' i.e. at the time of creation.

³ Nature, which is the material cause from which all entities are produced; the destruction of it results from true knowledge of the soul. See the third note on p. 107 infra.

learnt which, all sages have reached perfection beyond (the bonds of) this (body). Those who, resorting to this knowledge, reach assimilation with my essence, are not born at the creation, and are not afflicted ¹ at the destruction (of the universe). The great Brahman ² is a womb for me, in which I cast the seed. From that, O descendant of Bharata! is the birth of all things. Of the bodies, O son of Kuntl! which are born from all wombs, the (main) womb is the great Brahman, and I (am) the father, the giver of the seed. Goodness, passion, darkness, these qualities ³ born from nature, O you of mighty arms! bind down the inexhaustible soul in the body. Of these, goodness, which, in consequence of being untainted, is enlightening and free from (all) misery, binds the soul, O sinless one! with the bond of pleasure and the bond of knowledge ⁴. Know that passion consists in being enamoured, and is produced from craving and attachment. That, O son of Kuntl! binds down the embodied (self) with the

¹ I.e. 'are not destroyed,' Madhusūdana; 'do not fall,' Sāṅkara; 'are not born,' Śrīdhara, and apparently Rāmānuga.

² I.e. the 'nature' spoken of before.

³ These constitute nature. We must understand nature, with Professor Bhāṇḍārkar, as the hypothetical cause of the soul's feeling itself limited and conditioned. If nature is understood, as it usually is, to mean matter, its being made up of the qualities is inexplicable. Interpreted idealistically, as suggested by Professor Bhāṇḍārkar, the destruction of it spoken of at the close of the last chapter also becomes intelligible. By means of knowledge of the soul, the unreality of these manifestations is understood and nature is destroyed.

⁴ Pleasure and knowledge appertain to the mind, not the self, hence they are described as constituting bonds, when erroneously connected with the self, Sāṅkara and Śrīdhara. They constitute 'bonds,' because the self when brought into contact with them, strives to obtain them, Rāmānuga.

bond of action. Darkness (you must) know to be born of ignorance, it deludes all embodied (selves). And that, O descendant of Bharata! binds down (the self) with heedlessness¹, indolence, and sleep. Goodness unites (the self) with pleasure; passion, O descendant of Bharata! with action; and darkness with heedlessness, after shrouding up knowledge. Passion and darkness being repressed, goodness stands, O descendant of Bharata! Passion and goodness (being repressed), darkness; and likewise darkness and goodness (being repressed), passion². When in this body at all portals³ light (that is to say) knowledge prevails, then should one know goodness to be developed. Avarice, activity⁴, performance of actions, want of tranquillity, desire, these are produced, O chief of the descendants of Bharata! when passion is developed. Want of light, want of activity⁵, heedlessness, and delusion, these are produced, O descendant of Kuru! when darkness is developed. When an embodied (self) encounters death, while goodness is developed, then he reaches the untainted worlds of those who know the highest⁶. Encountering death during (the preva-

¹ Carelessness about duty, owing to being intent on something else. Cf. Sutta Nipāta, pp. 51-91; Dhammapada, stanza 21; Ka/hopanishad, p. 152.

² The effects of each quality assert themselves, when the other two are held in check. ³ I.e. the senses of perception.

⁴ Activity=always doing something or another; performance, &c.=rearing large mansions, &c.; want of tranquillity=perpetual agitation of mind, 'this I will do now, then that, and next the other;' desire=to obtain everything that one comes across.

⁵ I.e. doing absolutely nothing.

⁶ The highest manifestations of Brahman, viz. the Hiranya-garbha, &c., say Śrīdhara and Madhusūdana. Nīlakan/ha also suggests that 'those who know the highest' means gods.

lence of) passion, he is born among those attached to action. Likewise, dying during (the prevalence of) darkness, he is born in the wombs of the ignorant¹. The fruit of meritorious action is said to be good, untainted; while the fruit of passion is misery; and the fruit of darkness ignorance. From goodness is produced knowledge, from passion avarice², and from darkness heedlessness and delusion and ignorance also. Those who adhere to (the ways of) goodness go up³; the passionate remain in the middle; while those of the qualities of darkness, adhering to the ways of the lowest quality, go down. When a right-seeing person sees none but the qualities (to be) the doers (of all action), and knows what is above the qualities⁴, he enters into my essence. The embodied (self), who transcends these three qualities, from which bodies are produced⁵, attains immortality, being freed from birth and death and old age and misery.

Arguna said :

What are the characteristics, O lord! of one who has transcended these three qualities? What is his conduct, and how does he transcend these three qualities⁶?

¹ Lower creation, such as birds, beasts, &c.

² Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 15.

³ I.e. are born as gods, &c.; 'middle,' as men, &c.; 'down,' as brutes, &c.

⁴ I.e. what has been called Kshetragña before, the supervising principle within one.

⁵ Bodies are developments of the qualities, say the commentators, which is not incompatible with the explanation of qualities given above. As to transcending qualities, cf. p. 48 supra.

⁶ Cf. as to what follows what is said in chapter II about 'one whose mind is steady.'

The Deity said :

He is said to have transcended the qualities. O son of Pāṇḍu! who is not averse to light and activity and delusion (when they) prevail, and who does not desire (them when they) cease¹; who sitting like one unconcerned is never perturbed by the qualities²; who remains steady and moves³ not, (thinking) merely that the qualities⁴ exist; who is self-contained⁵; to whom pain and pleasure are alike; to whom a sod and a stone and gold are alike; to whom what is agreeable and what is disagreeable are alike; who has discernment; to whom censure and praise of himself are alike; who is alike in honour and dishonour; who is alike towards the sides of friends and foes; and who abandons all action⁶. And he who worships me with an unswerving devotion, transcends these qualities, and becomes fit for (entrance into) the essence of the Brahman. For I am the embodiment of the Brahman⁷, of indefeasible immortality, of eternal piety, and of unbroken happiness.

¹ I.e. who does not feel troubled, for instance, thinking now I am actuated by a motive of passion or darkness, and so forth.

² So as to lose all discrimination.

³ I.e. from his determination to pursue truth, by worldly pleasures or pains.

⁴ Cf. p. 55 supra.

⁵ Intent on the self only.

⁶ For the whole passage, cf. p. 101 supra.

⁷ Nilakantha interprets this to mean 'the ultimate object of the Vedas.' I here means Krishna. Śrīdhara suggests this parallel, as light embodied is the sun, so is the Brahman embodied identical with Vāsudeva.

CHAPTER XV.

The Deity said :

They say the inexhaustible Asvattha¹ has (its) roots above, (its) branches below ; the Kāṇḍas are its leaves. He who knows it knows the Vedas. Upwards and downwards extend its branches, which are enlarged by the qualities, and the sprouts of which are sensuous objects. And downwards to this human world are continued its roots which lead on to action. Its form is not thus known here, nor (its) end, nor beginning, nor support. But having with the firm weapon of unconcern, cut this Asvattha, whose roots are firmly fixed, then should one seek for that seat from which those that go there never return, (thinking) that one rests on that same primal being from whom the ancient course (of worldly life) emanated. Those who are free from pride and delusion, who have overcome the evils of attachment, who are constant in (contemplating) the relation of the supreme and individual self, from whom desire has departed, who are free from the pairs (of opposites) called pleasure and pain, go undeluded to that imperishable seat². The sun does not light it, nor the moon, nor fire¹. That is my highest abode, going to which none returns. An eternal portion of me it is, which, becoming an individual soul in the mortal world, draws (to itself) the senses with the mind as the sixth². Whenever the ruler (of the bodily frame) obtains or quits a body, he goes taking these (with him) as the wind (takes) perfumes from (their) seats³. And presiding over the senses of hearing and seeing, and touch, and taste, and smell, and the mind, he enjoys sensuous objects. Those who are deluded do not see (him) remaining in or quitting (a body), enjoying or joined to the qualities⁴; they see, who have eyes of knowledge. Devotees making efforts perceive him abiding within their selves⁵. But those whose selves have not been refined, and who have no discernment, do not perceive him even (after) making efforts. Know that glory (to be) mine which, dwelling in the sun, lights up the whole world, or in the moon or fire⁶.

¹ Cf. Kaṭhopanishad, p. 70, and Sutta Nipāta, p. 76.

² Arvauha stands here for the course of worldly life. Its roots are above, viz. the supreme being ; its boughs are Hiranyagarbha and others of the higher beings. The Vedas are its leaves, preserving it as leaves preserve trees (another interpretation is that they are the causes of the fruit which the tree bears, i. e. salvation, &c.) Upwards and downwards, from the highest to the lowest of created things. Enlarged—the qualities manifesting themselves, as body, senses, &c. ; objects of sense are sprouts as they are attached to the senses, which are the tips of the branches above stated. The roots which extend downwards are the desires for various

enjoyments. Its form not thus known here, i.e. to those who live and move in this world, thus viz. as above described. The man who knows the tree thus is said to know the Vedas, because knowledge of it is knowledge of the substance of the Vedas, which is, that the course of worldly life springs from the supreme, is kept up by Vedic rites, and destroyed by knowledge of the supreme. As to freedom from pride, cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 4.

¹ Cf. Kāthopanishad, p. 142; Mundaka, p. 304; Nṛsiṃhātāpini, p. 106; Svetāsvatara, p. 110.

² Five senses and the mind issue from nature, in which they are absorbed during sleep or at a dissolution of the world. Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 44.

³ Cf. Kaushītaki-upanishad, pp. 86, 87.

⁴ Perceiving objects of sense, or feeling pleasure, pain, &c.

⁵ 'Selves' = bodies, Rāmānuga and Śrīdhara; 'understandings,' Śaṅkara. In the next sentence 'self' means mind.

⁶ Cf. Maitrī-upanishad, p. 142. This sentence continues what has been stated at the top of the page. The intervening

Entering the earth¹, I by my power support all things; and becoming the juicy moon, I nourish all herbs. I becoming the fire, and dwelling in the bodies of (all) creatures, and united with the upward and downward life-breaths, cause digestion of the fourfold food². And I am placed in the heart of all³; from me (come) memory, knowledge, and their removal; I alone am to be learnt from all the Vedas; I am the author of the Vedāntas⁴; and I alone know the Vedas. There are these two beings in the world, the destructible and the indestructible⁵. The destructible (includes) all things. The unconcerned one is (what is) called the indestructible. But the being supreme is yet another, called the highest self, who as the inexhaustible lord, pervading the three worlds, supports (them). And since I transcend the destructible, and since I am higher also than the indestructible⁶, therefore portion explains how souls do come back in some cases. As a general rule, 'all going ends in returning.' But the soul is an exception in some cases, as the 'going' to the Brahman is going to the fountain-head. Then the question arises, How does the severance come off at all? And that is what the lines up to this explain.

¹ 'Entering in the form of the goddess earth,' say Ânandagiri and Madhusûdana. Support, i.e. by keeping the earth from falling or crumbling away. The moon is said to nourish herbs by communicating to them some of her 'juice.' The moon, it may be noted, is called 'watery star' by Shakespeare. As to her relation to the vegetable kingdom, see Matsya-purāṇa XXIII, stanza 10 seq.

² I.e. what is drunk, what is licked, what is powdered with the teeth, and what is eaten without such powdering.

³ Cf. p. 104 supra.

⁴ See Introduction, p. 18.

⁵ Cf. Svetārvata, p. 294.

⁶ The two are the whole collection of things as they appear and their material cause. The supreme being is a third principle.

am I celebrated in the world and in the Vedas as the best of beings. He who, undeluded, thus knows me the best of beings, worships me every way¹, O descendant of Bharata! knowing everything. Thus, O sinless one! have I proclaimed this most mysterious science. He who knows this, has done all he need do, and he becomes possessed of discernment.

CHAPTER XVI.

Freedom from fear, purity of heart, perseverance in (pursuit of) knowledge and abstraction of mind, gifts², self-restraint², and sacrifice, study of the Vedas, penance, straightforwardness, harmlessness, truth², freedom from anger, renunciation³, tranquillity, freedom from the habit of backbiting⁴, compassion for (all) beings, freedom from avarice, gentleness, modesty, absence of vain activity, noble-mindedness, forgiveness, courage, purity, freedom from a desire to injure others, absence of vanity, (these), O descendant of Bharata! are his who is born to godlike endowments. Ostentatiousness, pride, vanity⁵, anger, and also harshness and ignorance (are) his, O son of Prīthā! who is born to demoniac⁶ endowments. Godlike endowments are deemed to be (means) for

¹ Cf. p. 129 infra. Here Sāṅkara paraphrases it by 'thinking me to be the soul of everything.'

² Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 49.

³ See next chapter.

⁴ Sutta Nipāta, pp. 15, 101.

⁵ Ostentatiousness=making a show of piety; pride=scil. of wealth and learning; vanity=esteeming oneself too highly; harshness=mercilessness.

⁶ Cf. Khândogya-upanishad, p. 585, and Max Müller's Hibbert Lectures, p. 322.

final emancipation, demoniac for bondage¹. Grieve not, O descendant of Bharata ! you are born to godlike endowments. (There are) two classes of created beings in this world, the godlike and the demoniac ; the godlike (class) has been described at length ; now hear from me, O son of Prithâ ! about the demoniac. Demoniac persons know not action or inaction², neither purity nor yet (correct) conduct nor veracity are in them. They say the universe is devoid of truth³, devoid of fixed principle⁴, and devoid of a ruler, produced by union (of male and female) caused by lust⁵, and nothing else. Holding this view, (these) enemies of the world, of ruined⁶ selves, of little knowledge, and of ferocious actions, are born for the destruction (of the world). Entertaining insatiable desire, full of vanity, ostentatiousness, and frenzy, they adopt false notions⁷ through delusion, and engage in unholy observances. Indulging in boundless thoughts ending with death⁸, given up to the enjoyment of objects of desire, being resolved that that is all, bound down by nets of hopes in hundreds, given up to anger and desire, they wish

¹ Scil. to birth and death in this world.

² What should be done for the attainment of real good, and what should not be done as productive of mischief. See too p. 125.

³ I.e. contains nothing that is entitled to belief, as the Vedas, &c.

⁴ No principle based on virtue and vice in the government of the world.

⁵ They do not believe in any unseen cause, but say the lust of mankind is the cause of the universe.

⁶ I.e. who have none of the means of reaching the next world.

⁷ Such as that by propitiating a certain divinity by a certain rite they may obtain treasure and so forth.

⁸ Till their last moments, thinking of making new acquisitions and preserving old ones.

to obtain heaps of wealth unfairly for enjoying objects of desire. 'This have I obtained to-day; this wish I will obtain; this wealth is mine; and this also shall be mine; this foe I have killed; others too I will destroy; I am lord, I am the enjoyer, I am perfect¹, strong, happy; I have wealth; I am of noble birth; who else is like me? I will sacrifice²; I will make gifts; I will rejoice.' Thus deluded by ignorance, tossed about by numerous thoughts, surrounded by the net of delusion, and attached to the enjoyment of objects of desire, they fall down into impure hell. Honoured (only) by themselves, void of humility, and full of the pride and frenzy of wealth, these calumniators (of the virtuous) perform sacrifices, which are sacrifices only in name, with ostentatiousness and against prescribed rules³; indulging (their) vanity, brute force, arrogance, lust, and anger; and hating me in their own bodies and in those of others⁴. These enemies⁵, ferocious, meanest of men, and unholy, I continually hurl down to these worlds⁶, only into demoniac wombs. Coming into demoniac wombs, deluded in every birth, they go down to the vilest state, O son of Kuntī! without ever coming to me. Threefold is this way to hell,—

¹ Blessed with children, &c. Śrīdhara takes it to mean, 'one who has done all he need do,' and Rāmānuga 'sufficient in himself.'

² I. e. get higher renown for sacrifices than others.

³ That is, because of indulgence in vanity, &c. Vanity = believing oneself to have virtues which one has not; arrogance = proud disdain of others.

⁴ There is trouble to oneself in sacrifices and to the animals killed for them.

⁵ I. e. of God.

⁶ The commentators render the original here by 'the paths of life and death,' or 'path to hell.'

ruinous to the self¹,—lust, anger, and likewise avarice; therefore one should abandon this triad. Released from these three ways to darkness, O son of Kuntl! a man works out his own salvation, and then proceeds to the highest goal. He² who abandoning scripture ordinances, acts under the impulse of desire, does not attain perfection³, nor happiness, nor the highest goal. Therefore in discriminating between what should be done and what should not be done, your authority (must be) scripture. And knowing what is declared by the ordinances of scripture, you should perform action in this world.

CHAPTER XVII.

Arguna said :

What is the state of those, O Kṛishna! who worship with faith, (but) abandoning scripture ordinances—goodness, passion, or darkness?

The Deity said :

Faith is of three kinds in embodied (beings), it is produced from dispositions⁴. It is of the quality of goodness, of the quality of passion, and of the quality of darkness. Hear about it. The faith of all, O descendant of Bharata! is conformable to the ¹ I.e. rendering the self unfit for any of the highest ends of man.

² Here, says Sṛīdhara, it is laid down that the triad is not to be got rid of save by following scripture rules.

³ I.e. fitness for the attainment of the summum bonum. As to acting from desire, see also p. 65.

⁴ I.e. the result of the actions in a former birth, cf. p. 56 supra.

heart¹. A being here is full of faith, and whatever is a man's faith, that is a man himself². Those of the quality of goodness worship the gods; those of the quality of passion the Yakshas and Rakshases³; and the others, the people of the quality of darkness, worship departed (spirits) and the multitudes of Bhûtas. Know those to be of demoniac convictions, who practise fierce penance⁴ not ordained by scripture; who are full of ostentatiousness and egoism, and of desire, attachment, and stubbornness; who are without discernment; and who torment the groups of organs in (their) bodies, and me also seated within (those) bodies. The food also, which is liked by all, and likewise the sacrifice, the penance, and gifts, are of three kinds. Listen to the distinctions regarding them as follows. The kinds of food which increase life, energy, strength, health, comfort, and relish, which are savoury, oleaginous, full of nutrition, and agreeable, are liked by the good. The kinds of food which are bitter, acid, saltish, too hot, sharp, rough, and burning, and which cause pain, grief, and disease, are desired by the passionate. And the food⁵ which is cold, tasteless, stinking, stale, impure, and even leavings, are liked by the dark. That sacrifice is good which, being prescribed in (scripture) ordinances, is performed by persons

¹ The hearts of gods are said to be good, those of Yakshas &c. passionate, those of men mixed, and so forth.

² Faith is the dominant principle in man, and he is good, passionate, or dark, as his faith is.

³ Goldstücker, Remains, I, 154.

⁴ Troublesome to oneself and others, as standing on heated stones, &c. 'Egoism' (Ahaṅkāra) = the feeling that one is worthy of honour, Nilakantha.

⁵ Cf. Sutta Nipāta, p. 109, and Âpastamba, p. 31 (p. 62 in this series).

not wishing for the fruit (of it), and after determining (in their) mind that the sacrifice must needs be performed. But when a sacrifice is performed, O highest of the descendants of Bharata! with an expectation of fruit (from it), and for the purpose of ostentation, know that sacrifice (to be) passionate. They call that sacrifice dark, which is against the ordinances (of scripture), in which no food is dealt out (to Brâhmanas, &c.), which is devoid of Mantras¹, devoid of Dakshinâ presents, and which is without faith. Paying reverence to gods, Brâhmanas, preceptors, and men of knowledge; purity², straightforwardness, life as Brahmatârin, and harmlessness, (this) is called the penance bodily. The speech which causes no sorrow, which is true, agreeable, and beneficial, and the study³ of the Vedas, (this) is called the penance vocal. Calmness of mind, mildness, taciturnity⁴, self-restraint, and purity of heart, this is called the penance mental. This threefold penance, practised with perfect faith, by men who do not wish for the fruit, and who are possessed of devotion, is called good. The penance which is done for respect, honour, and reverence⁵, and with ostenta-

¹ Texts from the Vedas which ought to be recited on such occasions. Presents (Dakshinâ) to Brâhmanas are insisted on in Bṛihad-Āraṇyaka-upaniṣad, p. 661; Āsvalāyana Gr̥hya I, 23, 14.

² Cleanliness of body; straightforwardness = not doing prohibited acts; harmlessness = not injuring any living beings. These are 'bodily,' because the body is the main instrument in these actions.

³ I.e. recitation of the Vedas.

⁴ This is part of the 'mental penance,' because the government of the tongue is a consequence of mental restraint; the effect being, according to Saṅkara, put here for the cause.

⁵ Respect = people rising to receive one, &c.; honour = people saying 'this is a holy man,' &c.; reverence = people washing one's feet, &c.

tiousness, and which is uncertain and transient¹, is here called passionate. And that penance is described as dark, which is performed under a misguided conviction, with pain to oneself, or for the destruction of another. That gift is said (to be) good, which is given, because it ought to be given, to one who (can) do no service (in return), at a (proper) place and time, and to a (proper) person. But that gift which is given with much difficulty, for a return of services, or even with an expectation of fruit², is said to be passionate. And that gift is described as dark, which is given to unfit persons, at an unfit place and time, without respect, and with contempt. Om, Tad, and Sat, this is said (to be) the threefold designation of the Brahman. By that³, the Brāhmaṇas and the Vedas and sacrifices were created in olden times. Hence, the performance by those who study the Brahman, of sacrifices, gifts, and penances, prescribed by the ordinances (of scripture), always commence after saying 'Om⁴.' Those who desire final emancipation perform the various acts of sacrifice and penance, and the various acts of gift, without expectation of fruit, after (saying) 'Tad⁵.' 'Sat' is employed to express existence and goodness; and likewise, O son of Prīthā! the word 'Sat' is used to express an auspicious act. Constancy in ¹ The fruit of which is uncertain or perishable.

² Heaven &c. as a reward for liberality.

³ I.e. the Brahman, according to Śrīdhara.

⁴ Cf. Āpastamba, p. 21 (p. 49 in this series). Nīlakanṭha cites texts to show that this and the other two words are used to designate the Brahman. The texts are from the Taittirīya, Aitareya, and Kāṇḍōgya-upanishads.

⁵ Nīlakanṭha says, 'after "Tad"' means considering the act and all are Brahman, and cites p. 61 supra.

(making) sacrifices, penances, and gifts, is called 'Sat;' and (all) action, too, of which that¹ is the object, is also called 'Sat.' Whatever oblation is offered, whatever is given, whatever penance is performed, and whatever is done, without faith², that, O son of Prithâ! is called 'Asat,' and that is nought, both after death and here³.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Arguna said :

O you of mighty arms ! O Hrishikesa ! O destroyer of Kesin ! I wish to know the truth about renunciation and abandonment distinctly.

The Deity said :

By renunciation the sages understand the rejection of actions done with desires. The wise call the abandonment of the fruit of all actions (by the name) abandonment. Some wise men say, that action should be abandoned as being full of evil ; and others, that the actions of sacrifice, gift, and penance

¹ I.e. either the Brahman itself, or sacrifice, penance, and gift.

² Cf. Sutta Nipâta, p. 69.

³ The meaning of this whole passage seems to be that these three words, which designate the Brahman, have distinct uses, as specified. 'Om,' says Nilakantha, is employed whether the action is done with any special desire or not. Those who study the Brahman there means 'study the Vedas.' 'Tad' is employed in case of actions without desires only. 'Sat' is employed, according to Saṅkara, in case of existence, such as the birth of a first son ; 'goodness,' the reclamation of a bad man ; 'auspicious acts,' marriage, &c. The intelligent use of these terms as here specified is said to cure any defects in the actions, the various classes of which are mentioned before.

should not be abandoned. As to that abandonment, O best of the descendants of Bharata ! listen to my decision ; for abandonment, O bravest of men ! is described (to be) threefold. The actions of sacrifice, gift, and penance should not be abandoned ; they must needs be performed ; for sacrifices, gifts, and penances are means of sanctification to the wise. But even these actions, O son of Prithā ! should be performed, abandoning attachment and fruit ; such is my excellent and decided opinion. The renunciation of prescribed action is not proper. Its abandonment through delusion ¹ is described as of the quality of darkness. When a man abandons action, merely as being troublesome, through fear of bodily affliction, he does not obtain the fruit ² of abandonment by making (such) passionate abandonment. When prescribed action is performed, O Arguna ! abandoning attachment and fruit also, merely because it ought to be performed, that is deemed (to be) a good abandonment. He who is possessed of abandonment ³, being full of goodness, and talented, and having his doubts destroyed, is not averse from unpleasant actions, is not attached to pleasant ⁴ (ones). Since no embodied (being) can abandon actions without exception ⁵, he is said to be possessed of abandonment, who abandons the fruit of action. The threefold fruit of action, agreeable, disagreeable, and mixed, accrues after death to those who are not possessed of abandonment, but never to

¹ Without delusion no such abandonment will occur.

² Namely, final emancipation, by means of purity of heart.

³ I.e. who has the frame of mind necessary for a good abandonment.

⁴ Such as bathing at midday in summer. ⁵ Cf. p. 53 supra.

renouncers¹. Learn from me, O you of mighty arms! these five causes of the completion of all actions, declared in the Sāṅkhya system². The substratum, the agent likewise, the various sorts of organs, and the various and distinct movements, and with these the deities, too, as the fifth. Whatever action, just or otherwise, a man performs with his body, speech, and mind, these five are its causes. That being so, the undiscerning man, who being of an unrefined understanding, sees the agent in the immaculate self, sees not (rightly)³. He who has no feeling of egoism⁴, and whose mind is not tainted, even though he kills (all) these people, kills not, is not fettered⁵ (by the action). Knowledge⁶, the object of knowledge, the knower—threefold is the prompting to action. The instrument, the action, the agent, thus in brief is action threefold. Knowledge and action and agent

¹ The original is sannyāsi, but Śrīdhara is probably right in taking it to mean one who has command of 'abandonment.' Sāṅkara and Madhusūdana, however, take the word in its ordinary sense of 'ascetic.' What follows explains, says Śrīdhara, why 'the fruit does not accrue to renouncers.'

² Sāṅkara and Madhusūdana say this means Vedānta-sāstra. Śrīdhara suggests also the alternative Sāṅkhya-sāstra. Substratum = the body, in which desire, aversion, &c. are manifested; agent = one who egoistically thinks himself the doer of actions; organs = senses of perception, action, &c.; movements = of the vital breaths in the body; deities = the deities which preside over the eye and other senses (as to this cf. Aitareya-upanishad, p. 45; Praṇa, pp. 216, 217; Mundaka, p. 314; Aitareya-āranyaka, pp. 88-270; and Max Müller's Hibbert Lectures, p. 204, note). ³ Cf. p. 106.

⁴ Egoism = the feeling that he is the doer of the action; taint = the feeling that the fruit of the action must accrue to him.

⁵ Cf. p. 45, and Dhammapada, stanza 294.

⁶ Knowledge, i.e. that something is a means to what is desired; object is the means; the knower is he who has this knowledge. When these co-exist we have action. The instrument = senses, &c.

are declared in the enumeration of qualities ¹ (to be) of three classes only, according to the difference of qualities. Hear about these also as they really are. Know that knowledge to be good, by which (a man) sees one entity, inexhaustible, and not different in all things (apparently) different ² (from one another). Know that knowledge to be passionate, which is (based) on distinctions ³ (between different entities), which sees in all things various entities of different kinds. And that is described as dark, which clings to one created (thing) only as everything, which is devoid of reason, devoid of real principle, and insignificant ⁴. That action is called good, which is prescribed, which is devoid of attachment, which is not done from (motives of) affection or aversion, (and which is done) by one not wishing for the fruit. That is described as passionate, which (occasions) much trouble, is performed by one who wishes for objects of desire, or one who is full of egotism ⁵. The action is called dark, which is commenced through delusion, without regard to consequences, loss, injury, or strength ⁶. That agent is called good, who has cast off attachment, who is free from egotistic talk, who is possessed of courage and energy, and unaffected by success or ill-success. That agent is called passionate, who is full of affections ⁷.

¹ The system of Kapila.

² Cf. p. 104.

³ Cf. Kāthopanishad, p. 129.

⁴ Reason=argument in support; real principle=truth, view of things as they are; insignificant, i.e. in comprehensiveness.

⁵ I.e. 'pride of learning,' &c., Sāṅkhya; 'egoism,' Rāmānuja.

⁶ Consequences=good or evil resulting; loss=of wealth or strength; injury=to others; strength=one's own capacity.

⁷ I.e. 'for children,' &c., according to Śrīdhara; 'for the action,' according to others.

who wishes for the fruit of actions, who is covetous, cruel, and impure, and feels joy and sorrow. That agent is called dark, who is without application¹, void of discernment, headstrong, crafty, malicious, lazy, melancholy, and slow. Now hear, O Dhanañgaya! the threefold division of intelligence² and courage, according to qualities, which I am about to declare exhaustively and distinctly. That intelligence, O son of Prithā! is good which understands action and inaction³, what ought to be done and what ought not to be done, danger and the absence of danger, emancipation and bondage. That intelligence, O son of Prithā! is passionate, by which one imperfectly understands piety and impiety, what ought to be done and also what ought not to be done. That intelligence, O son of Prithā! is dark, which shrouded by darkness, understands impiety (to be) piety, and all things incorrectly. That courage, O son of Prithā! is good courage, which is unswerving⁴, and by which one controls the operations of the mind, breath, and senses, through abstraction. But, O Arjuna! that courage is passionate, by which one adheres to piety, lust, and wealth⁵, and through attachment⁶ wishes,

¹ I.e. attention to work; melancholy=always desponding and wanting in energy.

² The nature of the faculty of understanding; and courage is the firmness of that faculty.

³ See p. 115. Sāṅkara takes these to mean the 'paths' of action and knowledge, and Nīlakanṭha takes the next expression to mean that which is constant and that which is not constant—nitya, anitya.

⁴ Always co-existing with mental abstraction and supporting it.

⁵ Three of the aims of mankind, the highest being final emancipation. In the view of the Gītā, piety, leading only to heaven, is of doubtful benefit.

⁶ I.e. to the action for attaining them, in the belief that one is

O son of Prithā! for the fruit. That courage is dark, O son of Prithā! by which an undiscerning man does not give up sleep, fear, sorrow, despondency, and folly. Now, O chief of the descendants of Bharata! hear from me about the three sorts of happiness. That happiness is called good, in which one is pleased after repetition¹ (of enjoyment), and reaches the close of all misery, which is like poison first and comparable to nectar in the long run, and which is produced from a clear knowledge of the self². That happiness is called passionate, which (flows) from contact between the senses and their objects, and which is at first comparable to nectar and in the long run like poison. That happiness is described as dark, which arises from sleep, laziness, heedlessness, which deludes the self, both at first and in its consequences. There is no entity either on earth or in heaven among the gods, which is free from these three qualities born of nature. The duties of Brāhmaṇas, Kshatriyas, and Vaiśyas, and of Sūdras, too, O terror of your foes! are distinguished according to the qualities born of nature³. Tranquillity⁴, restraint of the senses, penance, purity, forgiveness, straightforwardness, also knowledge, experience, and belief (in a future world), this is the natural duty of Brāhmaṇas. Valour, glory, courage, the doer of it; the 'fruit' scil. of the action performed with an eye to the three things named.

¹ Not at once, as in the case of sensuous pleasures.

² Cf. p. 51. The original has also been rendered by 'tranquillity of one's own mind.'

³ Cf. p. 59.

⁴ I.e. resulting from control of the mind, purity here is both external and internal. And see p. 119.

dexterity¹, not slinking away from battle, gifts, exercise of lordly power², this is the natural duty of Kshatriyas. Agriculture, tending cattle, trade, (this) is the natural duty of Vaisyas. And the natural duty of Sûdras, too, consists in service. (Every) man intent on his own respective duties obtains perfection³. Listen, now, how one intent on one's own duty obtains perfection. Worshipping, by (the performance of) his own duty, him from whom all things proceed, and by whom all this is permeated, a man obtains perfection. One's duty, though defective, is better than another's duty well performed⁴. Performing the duty prescribed by nature, one does not incur sin. O son of Kuntl! one should not abandon a natural duty though tainted with evil; for all actions are enveloped by evil, as fire by smoke⁵. One who is self-restrained, whose understanding is unattached everywhere, from whom affections have departed, obtains the supreme perfection of freedom from action⁶ by renunciation. Learn from me, only in brief, O son of Kuntl! how one who has obtained perfection attains the Brahman, which is the highest culmination of knowledge. A man possessed of a pure understanding, controlling his self by courage, discarding sound and other objects of sense, casting off

¹ I. e. in battle, Nīlakanṭha seems to say. Sāṅkara says it means ready resource whenever occasion arises.

² I. e. 'power to restrain people from going astray,' Nīlakanṭha.

³ Eligibility for the path of knowledge.

⁴ Cf. p. 56.

⁵ Cf. p. 121; the evil appears to be the quality of 'fettering' the soul.

⁶ Śrīdhara compares p. 65 (V, 13) and distinguishes this from p. 64 (V, 8 seq.) Sāṅkara says the perfection here spoken of is emancipation, and it is obtained by true knowledge.

affection and aversion ; who frequents clean places, who eats little, whose speech, body, and mind are restrained, who is always intent on meditation and mental abstraction¹, and has recourse to unconcern, who abandoning egoism², stubbornness, arrogance, desire, anger, and (all) belongings, has no (thought that this or that is) mine, and who is tranquil, becomes fit for assimilation with the Brahman. Thus reaching the Brahman³, and with a tranquil self, he grieves not, wishes not ; but being alike to all beings, obtains the highest devotion to me. By (that) devotion he truly understands who I am and how great. And then understanding me truly, he forthwith enters into my (essence). Even performing all actions, always depending on me, he, through my favour, obtains the imperishable and eternal seat. Dedicating in thought⁴ all actions to me, he constantly given up to me, (placing) your thoughts on me, through recourse to mental abstraction. (Placing) your thoughts on me, you will cross over all difficulties by my favour. But if you will not listen through egotism⁵, you will be ruined. If entertaining egotism, you think that you may not fight, vain, indeed, is that resolution of yours. Nature⁶ will constrain you. That, O son of Kuntl! which through delusion you do not wish to do, you will do involuntarily.

¹ Abstraction is concentrated and exclusive meditation, Saṅkara. The other commentators take dhyānayoga as meditation simply,—as treated of in chapter VI, says Nīlakantha.

² See p. 52.

³ I. e. comprehending his identity with the Brahman.

⁴ Cf. p. 55.

⁵ Pride of learning and cleverness, or of piety. See p. 124, note 5.

⁶ The nature of a Kshatriya, Saṅkara.

tied down by your own duty, flowing from your nature. The lord, O Arguna! is seated in the region of the heart¹ of all beings, turning round all beings (as though) mounted on a machine, by his delusion. With him, O descendant of Bharata! seek shelter in every way²; by his favour you will obtain the highest tranquillity, the eternal seat. Thus have I declared to you the knowledge more mysterious than any mystery. Ponder over it thoroughly, and then act as you like. Once more, listen to my excellent words—most mysterious of all. Strongly I like you, therefore I will declare what is for your welfare. On me (place) your mind, become my devotee, sacrifice to me, reverence me, and you will certainly come to me. I declare to you truly, you are dear to me. Forsaking all duties³, come to me as (your) sole refuge. I will release you from all sins. Be not grieved. This⁴ you should never declare to one who performs no penance⁵, who is not a devotee⁶, nor to one who does not wait on (some preceptor)⁷, nor yet to one who calumniates me. He who, with the highest devotion⁸ to me, will proclaim this supreme mystery among my devotees, will come to me, freed from (all) doubts. No one

¹ Svetârvatara-upanishad, pp. 333-345; Ka/âopanishad, p. 157.

² Cf. p. 114; by thought, word, and deed.

³ Of caste or order, such as Agnihotra and so forth.

⁴ All that has been taught in the Gîtâ.

⁵ Sridhara renders this to mean, 'who performs no pious acts.'

⁶ I. e. of God and a preceptor. Cf. last stanza of Svetârvatâropanishad.

⁷ Cf. p. 62. Sañkara says all these elements must co-exist to give eligibility.

⁸ I. e. belief that in disseminating it, he is serving me. Cf. Ka/âopanishad, p. 120.

amongst men is superior to him in doing what is dear to me. And there will never be another on earth dearer to me than he. And he who will study this holy dialogue of ours, will, such is my opinion, have offered to me the sacrifice of knowledge¹. And the man, also, who with faith and without carping will listen (to this), will be freed (from sin), and attain to the holy regions of those who perform pious acts². Have you listened to this, O son of Prithā ! with a mind (fixed) on (this) one point only ? Has your delusion (caused) by ignorance been destroyed, O Dhanañgaya ?

Arguna said :

Destroyed is my delusion ; by your favour, O un-degraded one ! I (now) recollect³ myself. I stand freed from doubts⁴. I will do your bidding.

Sañgaya said :

Thus did I hear this dialogue between Vāsudeva and the high-minded son of Prithā, (a dialogue) wonderful and causing the hair to stand on end. By the favour of Vyāsa, I heard this highest mystery, (this) devotion⁵, from Kṛishṇa himself, the lord of the possessors of mystic power, who proclaimed it in person. O king ! remembering and (again) remembering this wonderful and holy dialogue of Kesava and Arguna, I rejoice over and over again. And remembering and (again) remembering that ¹ Which is the best of sacrifices ; see p. 62.

² Cf. p. 72.

³ I.e. understand my real essence, what I am, &c.

⁴ As to whether the battle was right or not.

⁵ The work is so called, as it refers to devotion.

excessively wonderful form of Hari also, great is my amazement, O king! and I rejoice over and over again. Wherever (is) Kṛishṇa, the lord of the possessors of mystic power, wherever (is) the (great) archer, the son of Prithā, there in my opinion (are) fortune, victory, prosperity¹, and eternal justice.

¹ Prosperity is the greater development of fortune.

SANATSUGÂTÎYA.

INTRODUCTION

TO

S A N A T S U G Â T Î Y A.

THE Sanatsugâtîya is, like the Bhagavadgîtâ, one of the numerous episodes of the Mahâbhârata¹. It is true, that it has never commanded anything like that unbounded veneration which has always been paid in India to the Bhagavadgîtâ. Still it is sometimes studied even in our days, and it has had the high distinction of being commented on by the great leader of the modern Vedântic school—Sânkarâcârya². The Sanatsugâtîya purports to be a dialogue mainly between Sanatsugâta on the one side and Dhṛitarâshṭra on the other. Sanatsugâta, from whom it takes its name, is said to be identical with Sanatku-mâra, a name not unfamiliar to students of our Upanishad literature. And Dhṛitarâshṭra is the old father of those Kauravas who formed one of the belligerent parties in the bellum plusquam civile which is recorded in the Mahâbhârata. The connexion of this particular episode with the main current of the narrative of that epos is one of the loosest possible character—much looser, for instance, than that of the Bhagavadgîtâ. As regards the latter, it can fairly be contended that it is in accordance with poetical justice for Arguna to feel despondent and unwilling to engage in battle, after actual sight of ‘teachers, fathers, sons,’ and all the rest of them, arrayed in opposition to him; and that therefore it was necessary for the poet to adduce some specific explanation as to how Arguna was ultimately enabled to get over such natural scruples. But as regards the Sanatsugâtîya, even such a contention as this can have no place. For this is how the matter stands. In the course of the negotiations for an amicable arrangement¹ between the Pāṇḍavas and the Kauravas, Sañgaya, on one occasion, came back to Dhṛitarāshṭra with a message from the Pāṇḍavas. When he saw Dhṛitarāshṭra, however, he said that he would deliver the message in the public assembly of the Kauravas the next morning, and went away after pronouncing a severe censure on Dhṛitarāshṭra for his conduct. The suspense thus caused was a source of much vexation to the old man, and so he sent for Vidura, in order, as he expresses it, that Vidura might by his discourse assuage the fire that was raging within him. Vidura accordingly appears, and enters upon an elaborate prelection concerning matters spiritual, or, perhaps, more accurately quasi-spiritual, and at the outset of the Sanatsugâtiya he is supposed to have reached a stage where, as being born a Sûdra, he hesitates to proceed. After some discussion of this point, between Vidura and Dhṛitarāshṭra, it is determined to call in the aid of Sanatsugâta, to explain the spiritual topics which Vidura felt a delicacy in dealing with; and Sanatsugâta is accordingly introduced on the scene in a way not unusual in our epic and purāṇic literature, viz. by Vidura engaging in some mystic process of meditation, in response to which Sanatsugâta appears. He is received then with all due formalities, and after he has had some rest, as our poem takes care to note, he is catechised by Dhṛitarāshṭra; and with one or two exceptions, all the verses which constitute the Sanatsugâtiya are Sanatsugâta's answers to Dhṛitarāshṭra's questions².

¹ Mahâbhârata, Udyoga Parvan, Adhyâya 41-46.

² Mâdhavâcârya, in speaking of Sâṅkara's works, describes him as having commented on the Sanatsugâtîya, which is ‘far from evil (persons, ’ [asatsudû-rav]. Sâṅkara-vigyaṇa, chapter VI, stanza 62.

This brief statement of the scheme of this part of the Mahābhārata shows, as already pointed out, that the connexion of the Sanatsugâtiya with the central story of that epic is very loose indeed; and that it might have been entirely omitted without occasioning any æsthetical or other defect. And therefore, although there is nothing positive tending to prove the Sanatsugātiya to be a later addition to the original epos, still the misgivings which are often entertained upon such points may well, in this case, be stronger than in the case of the Bhagavadgītā. The text, too, of the Sanatsugātiya is not preserved in nearly so satisfactory a condition as that of the Gītā. I have had before me, in settling my text, the editions of the Mahābhārata respectively printed and published at Bombay¹, Calcutta, and Madras, and three MSS., one of which was most kindly and readily placed at my disposal by my friend Professor Rāmkrishna Gopāl Bhāndārkar; the second by another friend, Professor Ābāt Vishnu Kāthavate; and the third was a copy made for me at Sagar in the Central Provinces, through the good offices of a third friend, Mr. Vāman Mahādeva Kolhaṭkar. The copy lent me by Professor Bhāndārkar comes from Puṇa, and that lent by Professor Kāthavate also from Puṇa. This last, as well as the Sagar copy, and the edition printed at Madras, contains the commentary of Saṅkarācārya. And the text I have adopted is that which is indicated by the commentary as the text which its author had before him. But the several copies of the commentary differ so much from one another, that it is still a matter of some doubt with me, whether I have got accurately the text which Saṅkara commented upon. For instance, the Sagar copy entirely omits chapter V, while the other copies not only give the text of that chapter, but also a commentary upon it which calls itself Saṅkarācārya's commentary². Again, take the stanzas which stand within brackets at pp. 167, 168³ of our translation. There is in none of the copies we have, any commentary of Saṅkarācārya on them. And yet the stanzas exist in the text of the Mahābhārata as given in those copies which do contain Saṅkara's commentary. The matter is evidently one for further investigation. I have not, however, thought it absolutely necessary to make such an investigation for the purposes of the present translation. But to be on the safe side, I have retained in the translation everything which is to be found in those copies of the Sanatsugâtiya which also contain Saṅkara's commentary. As to other stanzas—and there are some of this description—which other MSS. or commentators vouch for, but of which no trace is to be found in the MSS. containing Saṅkara's commentary¹, I have simply omitted them.

¹ See p. 3 supra.

² After this dialogue is over, the dawn breaks, and Dhṛitarāshṭra and the Kaurava princes meet in general assembly.

¹ This contains Nilakanṭha's commentary, but his text avowedly includes the text of Saṅkara, and verses and readings contained in more modern copies.

² The commentary on the sixth chapter, however, takes up the thread from the end of the fourth chapter.

³ See p. 182, where one of the lines recurs.

These facts show that, in the case of the Sanatsugâtiya, the materials for a trustworthy historical account of the work are not of a very satisfactory character. The materials for ascertaining its date and position in Sanskrit literature are, indeed, so scanty, that poor as we have seen the materials for the Bhagavadgītā to be, they must be called superlatively rich as compared with those we have now to deal with. As regards external evidence on the points now alluded to, the first and almost the last fact falling under that head, is the fact of the work being quoted from and commented upon by Saṅkarākārya. In his commentary on the Svetâsvatara-upanishad², Saṅkara cites the passage about the flamingo at p. 189, introducing it with the words, 'And in the Sanatsugâta also.' In the same³ commentary some other passages from the Sanatsugâtiya are also quoted, but without naming the work except as a Smṛiti, and mixing up together verses from different parts of the work.

This is really all the external evidence, that I am aware of, touching the date of the Sanatsugâtiya. There is, however, one other point, which it is desirable to notice, though not, perhaps, so much because it is of any very great value in itself, as because it may hereafter become useful, should further research into the Mahâbhârata and other works yield the requisite information. There are, then, eight stanzas in the thirty-sixth, thirty-seventh, thirty-ninth, and fortieth chapters of the Udyoga Parvan of the Mahâbhârata (the Sanatsugāṭīya commencing at the forty-first chapter), seven of which are quoted in the *Pañkatantra*¹, and the eighth in the *Mahābhāṣya*² of Patañjali. Of course, it almost goes without saying, that neither the Pañkatantra nor the Mahābhāṣya mentions the source from which they derive the verses in question. But I do not think it unallowable to make the provisional assumption, that they were derived from the Mahābhārata, so long as we cannot produce any other, and more likely, source. It is true, that Professor Weber has, in another connexion, impugned the cogency of this argument. He seems to think, that the probability—in the case he was actually dealing with—of the Rāmāyaṇa having borrowed from the Mahābhāṣya, is quite as strong as the probability of the Mahābhāṣya having borrowed from the *Rāmāyaṇa*³. And doubtless, he would by parity of reason contend, in the case before us, that the probabilities, as between the Mahābhārata on the one hand, and the Mahābhāṣya and the Pañkatantra on the other, bear the same mutual relation. I cannot accept this view. I am not now concerned to discuss the merits of the conclusion in support of which Professor Weber has advanced this argument⁴. I am only considering, how far it affects the question now before us. And as to that question, I may say, that the Pañkatantra expressly introduces the stanzas now under consideration with some such expression as, 'For it has been said,' indicating clearly that it was there quoting the words of another⁵. And so, too, does the Mahābhāṣya, ¹ Cf. Kosegarten's Pañkatantra, p. 28 (I, 28, Bombay S. C. ed.), with Udyoga Parvan, chap. XI, st. 7 (Bombay ed.); Pañkatantra, pp. 112 and 209 (II, 10; IV, 5, Bombay ed.), with Udyoga Parvan, chap. XXXVIII, 9; p. 35 I, 37, Bombay ed.) with chap. XXXVI, st. 34; p. 140 (II, 40, Bombay ed.) with chap. XXXVII, st. 15; p. 160 (III, 62, Bombay ed.) with chap. XXXVII, st. 17, 18; p. 106 (II, 2, Bombay ed.) with chap. XXXVI, st. 59.

¹ See note 1, p. 137.

² P. 283.

³ P. 252. See, too, Sâmraka Bhâshya, p. 818.

² Udyoga Parvan, chap. XXXVIII, st. 1, and Mahābhāṣya VI, 1-4, p. 35 (Banāras ed.)

³ See Indian Antiquary IV, 247. The parallel from Mādhava which Professor Weber adduces is quite inconclusive, and as far as it goes appears to me to militate against the Professor's own view.

⁴ I may, however, admit at once, that I ought not to have expressed myself as strongly as I did in the note which Professor Weber criticises.

⁵ See p. 203 infra.

where the passage we refer to runs as follows : ‘(It is) laid down, (that there is) a sin in one of tender age not rising to receive (an elderly person), and (that there is) merit in rising to receive. How? Thus, “The life-winds of a youth depart upwards, when an elderly man approaches (him). By rising to receive (him), and salutation, he obtains them again.”’ It appears to me, that the indications of this being a quotation in the Bhāshya are very strong. But apart from that, I do demur to the proposition, that the probabilities are equal, of a work like the Mahābhārata or Rāmāyaṇa borrowing a verse from the Mahābhāshya, and vice versa. It appears to me perfectly plain, I own, that the probability of a grammatical work like the Bhāshya borrowing a verse from a standard work like the Bhārata or Rāmāyaṇa for purposes of illustration is very much the stronger of the two. And this, quite independently of any inquiry as to whether the Bhāshya does or does not show other indications of acquaintance with the Bhārata or the Rāmāyaṇa.

If these arguments are correct, it seems to me that they carry us thus far in our present investigation—namely, that we may now say, that we have reason to believe some parts, at all events, of the thirty-sixth, thirty-seventh, thirty-eighth, and fortieth chapters of the Udyoga Parvan of the Mahābhārata to have probably been in existence prior to the sixth century A.C.¹; and that some parts of the thirty-seventh chapter were probably extant in the time of Patañjali, viz. the second century B.C.² Now, internal evidence does not yield any indications tending to show that the several chapters here referred to must have been prior in time to the chapters composing the Sanatsugâtīya, which come so soon after them in the Mahābhārata. On the contrary, it is not too much to maintain, that to a certain extent the style and language of the Sanatsugâtīya is, if anything, rather indicative of its priority in time over the five chapters immediately preceding it. And, therefore, so far as this argument goes, it enables us—provisionally only, it must be remembered—to fix the second century B.C. as a terminus ad quem for the date of the Sanatsugātiya.

¹ See p. 29 supra.

² See p. 32 supra.

This is all the external evidence available for a discussion of the question—when the Sanatsugātiya was composed. We now turn to the internal evidence. Standing by itself, internal evidence is not, in my opinion, of much cogency in any case. Still in ascertaining, as best we can, the history of our ancient literature, even this species of evidence is not to be despised; it must only be used and received with caution. Under this head, then, we may note first the persons who are supposed to take part in the dialogue. Sanatsugāta¹—or Sanatkumāra—as already pointed out, is a name already familiar to the readers of one of our older Upanishads—the Khândogya. Dhṛitarāshṭra is not known in the Upanishads, but he is an important personage in the epic literature. And it is to be remarked, that his character as disclosed in the Sanatsugātiya is not at all similar to that which has attached itself to his name, alike in the later literature of our country, and in that popular opinion which was probably formed by this later literature. In the dialogue before us, he figures as an earnest inquirer after truth; he is described as the ‘talented king Dhṛitarāshṭra;’ and is addressed by Sanatsugāta as, ‘O acute sir!’ ‘O learned person!’ True it is, that Nilakanṭha in one place, as we have noticed in our note there², endeavours to bring out the later view of Dhṛitarāshṭra’s character³; but it seems to me that that endeavour, based as it is on a forced and far-fetched interpretation of a single word in our poem, is an unsuccessful one. None of the questions, which Dhṛitarāshṭra puts to Sanatsugāta in the course of their dialogue, indicates the avaricious old man who wished to deprive his innocent nephews of their just rights in the interests of his own wicked and misguided sons. They rather indicate the bona fide student of spiritual lore, and thus point to what is, perhaps, an earlier view of Dhṛitarāshṭra’s character.

¹ See Hall’s Sākhyaśāstra, preface, pp. 14, 15.

² P. 151, note 2.

³ Nilakanṭha himself, however, treats Dhṛitarāshṭra’s question later on as showing that he had attained indifference to worldly concerns. That question does not occur in Śaṅkara’s text, but is given at p. 158 infra.

If we look next to the general style of this poem, we find that it has none of that elaboration which marks what I have called the age of Kāvya and Nāṭakas. The remarks on this topic in the Introduction to the Gītā apply pretty accurately to this work also. We observe here the same paucity of long-drawn compounds, the same absence of merely ornamental adjectives, the same absence of figures and tropes¹; in one word, the same directness and simplicity of style. Furthermore, there is a somewhat greater want of finish about the syntax of our poem than there is even in the Gītā. Such constructions as we find inter alia at chapter II, stanza 2, or 25, or at chapter III, stanza 14, or chapter IV, stanza 12, or in the early verses of the last chapter, indicate a period in the history of the language, when probably the regulations of syntax were not quite thoroughly established in practice.

If we turn to the metre of the poem, an analogous phenomenon strikes us there. Similar irregularities in the collocation of long and short syllables, similar superfluities and deficiencies of syllables, meet us in the Sanatsugâtīya and the Bhagavadgītā. And in the former work, as in the latter, the irregularities are less observable in the Anuṣṭubh² than in the other metres used. Probably the explanation, apart from the great elasticity of that metre, is that the Anuṣṭubh had been more used, and had in consequence become comparatively more settled in its scheme even in practical composition.

Looking now more particularly to the language of the work before us, we find one word to be of most frequent occurrence, namely, the word vai, which we have rendered 'verily.' It is not a common word in the later literature, while in the Upanishad literature we meet with great frequency, not merely vai, but the words, which I think are cognate with it, vā and vāva. The former word, indeed, appears to me to stand in some passages of the Upanishads for vai by euphonic alterations. Thus in the passage tvam vâ aham asmi bhagavo devate, aham vai tvam asi, it is difficult not to suppose that the vâ of the first part of the sentence is the same word as the vai of the second part, only altered according to the rules of Sandhi in Sanskrit.

¹ The five similes which occur, and which are nearly all that occur, in the poem, are the very primitive ones—of the hunter, of water on grass, the tiger of straw, death eating men like a tiger, dogs eating what is vomited, a branch of a tree and the moon, and birds and their nests.

² Cf. as to this the Nṛsiṃha Tāpinī, p. 105.

A second point of similarity between the language of the Upanishads and that of the Sanatsugâtîya is to be found in the phrase, 'He who knows this becomes immortal.' This sentence, or one of like signification, is, as is well known, of common occurrence in the Upanishads and in the Brâhmanas. In the Bhagavadgîtâ, the verses towards the end, which come after Krishna's summing-up of his instruction, seem to be of a somewhat analogous, though in some respects different, nature. And in the Purânas we meet sometimes with elaborate passages extolling the merits of a particular rite, or a particular pilgrimage, and so forth. This form of the Phalaruti, as it is called, appears to have been developed in process of time from the minute germ existing in the Brâhmanas and the Upanishads. In the Sanatsugâtîya, however, we are almost at the beginning of those developments; indeed, the form before us is identically the same as that which we see in the works where it is first met with. It is a short sentence, which, though complete in itself, still appears merely at the end of another passage, and almost as a part of such other passage.

There is one other point of a kindred nature which it may be well to notice here. As in the Gîtâ, so in the Sanatsugâtîya, we meet with a considerable number of words used in senses not familiar in the later literature. They are collected in the Index of Sanskrit words in this volume; but a few remarks on some of them will not, it is thought, be entirely out of place here. The word *mârگا*¹—in the sense of 'worldly life'—is rather remarkable. Saṅkara renders it by 'the path of samsâra' or worldly life. And he quotes as a parallel the passage from the Khândogya— upanishad which speaks of returning to the 'path.' There, however, Sāṅkara explains it to mean the 'path by which the self returns to worldly life,' namely, from space to the wind and so forth into vegetables, and food, ultimately appearing as a foetus. Another remarkable word is 'varga,' which occurs twice in the Sanatsugāṭīya. Sāṅkara and Nilakantha differ in their explanations of it, and Nilakantha indeed gives two different meanings to the word in the two passages where it occurs. We may also refer here specially to utsa, ṛitvig, and matvā. In Boehtlingk and Roth's Lexicon the only passages cited under 'utsa' are from Vedic works, except two respectively from Susruta and the Dasakumāra-karita. One passage, however, there cited, viz. Vishṇoḥ pade parame madhva utsaḥ, is plainly the original of the passage we are now considering. As to ṛitvig in the sense it bears here, we see, I think, what was the earlier signification of that word before it settled down into the somewhat technical meaning in which it is now familiar. And matvā in the sense of 'meditating upon' is to be found in the Upanishads, but not, I think, in any work of the classical literature. These words, therefore, seem to indicate that the Sanatsugāṭīya was composed at a stage in the development of the Sanskrit language which is a good deal earlier than the stage which we see completely reached in the classical literature.

¹ I give no references here, as they can be found in the Index of Sanskrit words at the end of this volume.

Coming now to the matter of the Sanatsugāṭīya, it appears to me, that we there see indications pointing in a general way to the same conclusion as that which we have here arrived at. There is, in the first place, a looseness and want of rigid system in the mode of handling the subject, similar to that which we have already observed upon as characterising the Bhagavadgītā. There is no obvious bond of connexion joining together the various subjects discussed, nor are those subjects themselves treated after any very scientific or rigorous method. Again, if the fourth chapter is a genuine part of the Sanatsugāṭīya, we have an elaborate repetition in one part, of what has been said in another part of the work, with only a few variations in words, and perhaps fewer still in signification. As, however, I am not at present prepared to stand finally by the genuineness of that chapter, I do not consider it desirable to further labour this argument than to point out, that similar repetitions, on a smaller scale, perhaps, are not uncommon in our older literature¹.

Coming now to the manner in which the Vedas are spoken of in the work before us, there are, we find, one or two noteworthy circumstances proper to be considered here. In the first place, we have the reference to the four Vedas together with Ākhyānas as the fifth Veda. This is in conformity with the old tradition recorded in the various works to which we have referred in our note on the passage. The mention of the Atharva-veda, which is implied in this passage, and expressly contained in another, might be regarded as some mark of a modern age. But without dwelling upon the fact, that the Atharva-veda, though probably modern as compared with the other Vedas, is still old enough to date some centuries before the Christian era², it must suffice to draw attention here to the fact that the Kāṇḍogya-upanishad mentions that Veda, and it is not here argued that the Sanatsugātiya is older than the Kāṇḍogya-upanishad. We have next to consider the reference to the Sāman hymns as 'vimala,' or pure. The point involved in this reference has been already sufficiently discussed in the Introduction to the *Gītā*³; and it is not necessary here to say more than that, of the two classes of works we have there made, the Sanatsugātiya appears from the passage under discussion to rank itself with the class which is prior in date.

The estimate of the value of the Vedas which is implied in the Sanatsugātiya appears to coincide very nearly with that which we have shown to be the estimate implied in the Bhagavadgītā. The Vedas are not here cast aside as useless any more than they are in the Bhagavadgītā. For, I do not think the word Anṛitas which occurs in one passage of the work can be regarded really as referring to those

¹ See p. 181, note 1 infra.

[8]

² P. 19 supra.

L

³ Pp. 19, 20.

who entirely reject the Vedic revelation. But without going as far as that, the Sanatsugâtiya seems certainly to join the Bhagavadgîtâ in its protest against those men of extreme views, who could see nothing beyond the rites and ceremonies taught in the Vedas. A study of the Vedas is, indeed, insisted on in sundry passages of the Sanatsugâtiya. But it is equally maintained, that the performance of the ceremonies laid down in the Vedas is not the true means of final emancipation. It is maintained, that action done with any desire is a cause of bondage to worldly life; that the gods themselves are ordinary creatures who have reached a certain high position owing to the practice of the duties of Brahmakârins, but that they are not only not superior to, but are really under the control of, the man who has acquired the true knowledge of the universal self. On all these points, we have opinions expressed in the Sanatsugâtiya, which conclusively establish an identity of doctrine as between the Upanishads and the Bhagavadgîtâ¹ on the one hand, and the Sanatsugâtiya on the other. Lastly, we have an explicit statement, that the mere study of Vedic texts avails nothing, and that sin is not to be got rid of by one who merely 'studies the Rik and the Yagus texts, and the Sâma-veda.' It is not necessary to repeat here the chronological deductions which may be based upon this relation between the Sanatsugâtiya and the Vedas. We have already argued in the Introduction to the Bhagavadgîtâ, that such a relation points to a period of Indian religious history prior to the great movement of Gautama Buddha².

There is, however, this difference, perhaps, to be noted between the Gîtâ and the Sanatsugâtiya—namely, that the latter work seems to afford more certain indications of the recognition, at the date of its composition, of a Gñanakânda as distinguished from a Karmakânda in the Vedas, than, we have seen, are contained in the Bhagavadgîtâ³. The passage, for instance, which speaks of the Khandas as referring 'of themselves' to the Brahman, and the passage which refers to an understanding of the Brahman by means of the Vedas, according to the principle of the moon and the branch—these seem rather to point to a portion of the Vedas which was regarded as giving instruction in true knowledge, as distinguished from merely laying down various sacrifices and ceremonials for special purposes. In fact, in one passage we have the germ of the whole Vedāntic theory as afterwards settled. For there we are told, that sacrifices and penances are laid down as the preliminary steps towards the acquisition of true knowledge. By those sacrifices one is purified of one's sins, and then acquires a knowledge of the supreme self as described in the Vedas—which, I apprehend, must mean the Upanishads. .

¹ Cf. p. 16 supra.

² Cf. pp. 25, 26.

³ P. 17.

There is but one other point on which we need say anything further. And that is connected with the definition of a Brāhmaṇa. That definition appears to me, to point to an earlier stage in religious progress than is indicated in Āpastamba and Manu. The true Brāhmaṇa is he who is attached to the Brahman. Perhaps, this marks some little advance beyond the more general doctrine of the Gītā, but it is still very far short of the petrified doctrine, if I may so call it, of the later law-givers. The Brāhmaṇa has not yet degenerated into the mere receiver of fees and presents, but is still in possession of the truth.

We thus see, that the external and internal evidence bearing upon the question of the position of the Sanatsugātīya in Sanskrit literature, seems to point to nearly the same period and place for it as for the Bhagavadgītā. It is plain enough, that the evidence under both heads is extremely scanty and meagre. But such as it is, it appears to us to justify a provisional conclusion, that the Sanatsugātīya dates from a period prior to the rise of Buddhism, and forms part of that same movement in the religious history of ancient India of which the Gītā is another embodiment. More than this, we are not at present in a position to assert. To this extent, the evidence enables us, I think, to go. And we accordingly hold, that unless other and further evidence requires a reversal of this judgment, the Sanatsugâtīya may be treated as a work nearly contemporary with the Bhagavadgītā, and occupying generally the same point of view.

One word, finally, about the translation. As stated already, the text adopted is that which appears to have been before Saṅkarākārya. And the translation follows mainly his interpretations in his commentary. Sometimes we have followed Nilakantha, whose commentary has been consulted as well as a very incorrect copy of another commentary by one Sarvagña Nārāyaṇa, contained in the MS. from Puna lent me by Professor Bhāndārkar. In some places even the commentators have failed to clear up obscurities, and there we have given the best translation we could suggest, indicating the difficulties. There has been an endeavour made here, as in the case of the Bhagavadgītā, to keep the translation as close and faithful to the text as the exigencies of the English language permitted. The exegetical notes are mostly taken from the commentaries, even where the name of the commentator is not specified; while the references to parallel passages have been collected, mostly by myself, in the same way as in the case of the Bhagavadgītā.

SANATSUGÂTÎYA.

CHAPTER I.

Dhṛitarāshṭra said :

If, O Vidura ! there is anything not (yet) said by you in (your) discourse, then do impart it to me who wish to hear, for you have spoken marvellous (things).

Vidura said :

O Dhṛitarāshṭra ! the ancient youth Sanatsugâta, (otherwise called) Sanâtana¹, who declared that death exists not—he, O descendant of Bharata ! the best of all talented men, will explain all the doubts of your mind, both those (which are) secret², and those openly declared.

Dhṛitarāshṭra said :

What, do you not yourself know more about this (subject), that Sanâtana should explain (it) to me ? Explain (it) yourself, O Vidura ! if there is any remnant of intelligence (left) in you.

¹ So Nilakanṭha. Saṅkara says Sanatsugâta is Sanatkumâra, and the component parts of the name he paraphrases by 'born from Brahman.' For Sanâtana, see Bṛihadâraṇyaka, p. 506, and note 1, p. 141 supra.

² I.e. relating to subjects which may be freely discussed by all, and those which may not. Nilakanṭha adopts a different reading, which he interprets to mean 'doctrines exoteric and esoteric,' e.g. self-restraint, &c., and the acquisition of mystic power, &c., respectively. The expression 'doubts of the mind' occurs, however, further on.

Vidura said :

I am born of a Sûdra womb, and do not like to say more than what (I have said). But the intelligence of that youth, I believe to be eternal¹. He who has come of a Brâhmaṇa womb, even though he may proclaim a great mystery, does not thereby become liable to the censure of the gods. Therefore do I say this to you.

Dhṛitarâshṭra said :

Do you, O Vidura! speak to the ancient Sanâtana for me, so that there may be a meeting even here, between (myself in) this body (and him).

Vaisampâyana² said :

(Then) Vidura meditated on that sage whose vows are laudable³. And he, too, O descendant of Bharata! knowing of such meditation, made his appearance. And he⁴, too, received him with the ceremonies prescribed in the ordinances. After he had been comfortably seated, and had taken rest, Vidura then spoke to him : 'Venerable sir! there is some doubt in Dhṛitarâshṭra's mind, which cannot

¹ I.e., I suppose, never-failing, and such as can deal with all sorts of topics. Sanatkumâra, it need scarcely be stated, is the teacher of Nârada in the famous dialogue in the Khândogyaopaniṣad, p. 473.

² Vaisampâyana is the narrator of the grand story of which pieces like the present form parts.

³ The reading is sometimes different, so as to mean 'of rigid vows,' as at Gitâ, p. 61 supra.

⁴ The pronouns here are too numerous. Does 'he' here refer to Dhṛitarâshṭra? Vidura seems more likely, though the express mention of him in the next sentence might be treated as pointing the other way.

be explained by me. Do you be pleased to explain (it) to him. Hearing it (explained), this lord of men may cross beyond all misery, so that gain and loss¹, (what is) agreeable and (what is) odious, old age and death, fear and vindictiveness, hunger and thirst, frenzy and worldly greatness, disgust and also laziness, desire and wrath, ruin and prosperity, may not trouble him.'

CHAPTER II.

Vaisampāyana said :

Then the talented king, Dhṛitarāshṭra, bowed² to those words uttered by Vidura, and, in a secluded place³, interrogated Sanatsugāta regarding the highest knowledge⁴, wishing to become (a) high-souled (man)⁵.

Dhṛitarāshṭra said :

O Sanatsugāta ! which of the two is correct, your teaching⁶, about which I have heard, that death exists not, or that⁷ the gods and demons practised

¹ Comp. Gītā passim ; disgust, scil. that resulting from a general dissatisfaction with everything. As to 'ruin and prosperity,' Nīlakanṭha adds, 'and their causes, sin and merit.'

² Literally 'respected.' Nīlakanṭha says it means 'rejoiced over,' for Dhṛitarāshṭra thought, that in spite of his treachery he was safe, as death was taught by Sanatsugāta to have no existence.

³ I.e. free from the presence of ignorant and vulgar people. Cf. Gītā, p. 68 supra.

⁴ I.e. knowledge concerning the supreme Self.

⁵ Saṅkara's construction seems different, but is not quite clear. He says, 'wishing to become—Brahman—the meaning is wishing to acquire the self lost through ignorance.'

⁶ I.e. imparted to your pupils, Saṅkara adds ; 'heard,' scil. from Vidura.

⁷ The construction is imperfect, but the sense is clear. Is your the life of Brahmaċārins¹, for freedom from death?

Sanatsugāta said :

Some (say), that freedom from death (results) from action²; and others that death exists not. Hear me explain (this), O king! have no misgiving about it³. Both truths, O Kshatriya! have been current from the beginning⁴. The wise maintain what (is called) delusion (to be) death. I⁵ verily call heedlessness death, and likewise I call freedom from heedlessness immortality. Through heedlessness, verily, were the demons⁶ vanquished; and through freedom view correct, or the view involved in the practice of gods and demons?

¹ See Gītā, p. 69 supra; Kāthopanishad, p. 102; Prasna, p. 162. As to the gods being afraid of death, see Khândogya, p. 50; and Nṛsiṃha Tāpinī, p. 32; and as to gods and demons practising the life of Brahmaċārins, see Khândogya, p. 571; and cf. Bṛhad-āraṇyaka, p. 964.

² I.e. action prescribed in the Vedas.

³ I.e. as to how I shall be able to reconcile the seeming contradiction between the 'two truths.'

⁴ I.e. of creation.

⁵ Sanatsugāta says he differs from 'the wise;' delusion=thinking the not-self to be the self; heedlessness=falling off from one's natural condition as the Brahman—which is the cause of delusion (Sāṅkara). See p. 153 infra; Kāṭha, p. 152; and Taittirīya-upanishad, p. 80.

⁶ Sāṅkara suggests that demons might mean creatures attached to worldly objects; and gods those who are pleased in their own self; and he cites a stanza in support of this suggestion. The allusion, however, seems to be plainly to the story at Khândogya, p. 571 seq., where the idea and expression of 'being vanquished' also occurs (p. 583). That word Sāṅkara interprets in connexion with his suggested interpretation to mean 'are born in lower species.' See Khândogya, p. 585, and Maitrī, p. 211, about asuras or demons. It is interesting to note that in the Introduction to the Mahābhāṣya, there is an allusion to a story of the 'demons' being 'vanquished' in consequence of their grammatical blunders.

from heedlessness the gods attained to the Brahman. Death, verily, does not devour living creatures like a tiger; for, indeed, his form is not to be perceived. Some¹ say that death is different from this, (named) Yama, who dwells in the self²; the (practice of the) life of Brahmacārins (being) immortality. That god governs his kingdom in the world of the Pitr̥is, (being) good to the good, and not good to (those who are) not good. That death, (or) heedlessness, develops in men as desire, and afterwards as wrath, and in the shape of delusion³. And then travelling in devious paths⁴ through egoism, one does not attain to union⁵ with the self. Those who are deluded by it⁶, and who remain under its influence, depart from this (world), and there again fall down⁷. Then the deities⁸ gather around them. And then he undergoes death after death⁹. Being attached to the fruit of action, on action presenting itself, they follow after it¹⁰, and do not cross

¹ Those deluded by worldly objects; 'this' means 'heedlessness.'

² Sāṅkara cites a stanza from Manu, which says that king Yama Vaivasvata dwells in the heart of every one. Cf. Aitareya-upanishad, p. 187. The following clause he understands to contain two epithets of Yama, meaning 'immortal, and intent on the Brahman.' I follow Nīlakaṇṭha, but not very confidently.

³ Cf. Gītā, p. 57. Here we have the developments, the varying forms, of death or heedlessness.

⁴ I.e. paths contrary to Sr̥utis and Sm̥ritis.

⁵ Concentration of mind on the self or Brahman.

⁶ I.e. the egoism spoken of before.

⁷ I.e. to this mortal world. Cf. Gītā, p. 84, and Bṛhadāraṇyaka, pp. 855, 856. There = from the next world. Sāṅkara says, 'having lived there.'

⁸ I.e. the senses. Cf. Gītā, p. 123, and inter alia Īsopanishad, p. 10.

⁹ Cf. Kaṭha, p. 129, and Bṛhadāraṇyaka, p. 889.

¹⁰ I.e. the fruit. Cf. Kaṭha, p. 155, and Mundaka, p. 317.

beyond death. And the embodied (self), in consequence of not understanding union¹ with the real entity, proceeds on all hands² with attachment to enjoyments. That³, verily, is the great source of delusion to the senses; for by contact⁴ with unreal entities, his migrations⁵ are (rendered) inevitable; because having his inner self contaminated by contact with unreal entities, he devotes himself to objects of sense on all sides, pondering on them (only). (That) pondering, verily, first ruins⁶ him; and soon afterwards desire and wrath, after attacking him. These⁷ lead children to death. But sensible men cross beyond death by their good sense. He who pondering (on the self) destroys⁸ (the) fugitive (objects of sense), not even thinking of them through contempt (for them), and who being possessed of knowledge destroys desires in this way, becomes, as it were, the death of death (itself), and swallows (it) up⁹. The being who

¹ I.e. its identity with the Brahman.

² I.e. in various forms of life, Nīlakanṭha.

³ The going about in search of enjoyments.

⁴ The contact leads to pondering on them, and that to desire, &c., as described further on.

⁵ Through various lives. Birth and death are certain for him.

⁶ I.e. causes oblivion of his real nature, Saṅkara. Cf. the whole train of cause and effect at Gītā, p. 50 supra.

⁷ I.e. the pondering, desire, wrath, &c. As to 'children,' cf. Kaṭha, pp. 96 and 123, where bāla is contrasted with dhīra, as here. The 'good sense' is of help in withstanding the temptations of worldly objects.

⁸ Destroys=abandons; pondering, just before this, is rendered by Saṅkara to mean 'thinking of the objects as transient, impure,' &c.

⁹ Saṅkara cites on this a stanza of unknown authorship, which says, 'The learned and clever man who knows the self, and by discrimination destroys all objects of sense, is said to be the death of death.' See too p. 178 infra.

pursues desires, is destroyed (in pursuing) after the desires¹. But casting away desires, a being gets rid of all taint² whatever. This body, void of enlightenment³, seems (to be) a hell for (all) beings. Those who are avaricious run about⁴, going head-long to a ditch. A man, O Kshatriya! who contemns everything else⁵ learns nothing. To him (the body is) like a tiger made of straw⁶. And this internal self (joined to) delusion and fear⁷ in consequence of wrath and avarice, within your body,—that verily is death⁸. Understanding death⁹ to be thus produced, and adhering to knowledge, one is not afraid of death¹⁰ in this (world). In his province death is destroyed, as a mortal (is destroyed) on arriving in the province of death.

Dhṛitarāshṭra said :

The good, eternal, and most holy worlds¹¹, which

¹ On this Nilakanṭha quotes these lines, 'The antelope, elephant, butterfly, bee, and fish—these five are destroyed by the five,' i.e. the five objects of sense, sound, &c. See Sānti Parvan (Moksha Dharma), chap. 174, st. 45.

² I.e. misery, Nilakanṭha; merit or sin, Saṅkara.

³ I.e. void of discrimination between the real and unreal, Nilakanṭha; result of ignorance, Saṅkara. 'A hell, as being full of filth,' says Saṅkara, 'such as phlegm, blood, excretions.' Cf. Maitrī, p. 48.

⁴ As blind men groping about fall into a ditch, so do these, Saṅkara.

⁵ I.e. other than the sensuous objects he loves; 'learns nothing' about the supreme Self which he disregards.

⁶ Useless for any good purpose.

⁷ Cf. Taittirīya-upanishad, p. 102.

⁸ As being ruinous to oneself. Saṅkara compares Gītā, p. 68. Cf. also Taittirīya-upanishad, p. 103, and see Brhadāraṇyaka, p. 61.

⁹ I.e. heedlessness and its developments as stated.

¹⁰ Saṅkara cites on this Taittirīya-upanishad, p. 78.

¹¹ Such as Satyaloka, &c.

are mentioned (as attainable) by the twice-born by means of worship¹, those, say the Vedas, are the highest aim². How is it, then, that one who understands this does not resort to action?

Sanatsugāta said :

(Thinking) so, an ignorant man does resort to action. The Vedas likewise do lay down various benefits³ (for him). But that⁴ (man) comes not hither⁵. (Becoming) the supreme self⁶, he attains the supreme, by the (right) path destroying the wrong paths⁷.

Dhṛitarāshṭra said :

Who⁸ is it that constrains this unborn primeval (self), if it is (itself) all this severally⁹? And what ¹ Gyotish/oma, Asvamedha, and other rites.

² As leading to final emancipation.

³ I.e. objects for which various ceremonies (or 'actions') should be performed.

⁴ I.e. the man of knowledge.

⁵ I.e. into the sphere of action. Cf. Gītā, p. 48.

⁶ Knowing the supreme self is identical with becoming the supreme self, Mundaka, p. 323.

⁷ I.e. getting rid of the paths which keep one away from the Brahman by means of contemplation of the Brahman, &c. Nilakantha renders 'right path' to mean the Sushumnā passage by which the soul proceeds to final emancipation, see Khândogya, p. 570; Kaṭha, p. 157.

⁸ Śaṅkara says: 'Having shown that true death is heedlessness, and having shown that heedlessness in its forms of anger &c. is the cause of all evil, and having also shown that death is destroyed by true knowledge, and having shown further that heaven &c. are really not man's highest goal; the author has also implied the unity of the supreme and individual self. On that arises a doubt which is stated in this passage.'

⁹ All this=all the developments of the Brahman, i.e. space, wind, fire, water, earth, vegetation, food, living creatures; see Taittirīyopanishad, p. 68.

has it to do, or what is its unhappiness¹? Tell me all that accurately, O learned person!

Sanatsugâta said :

There is great danger² in attributing distinctions to it. The everlasting³ (principles) exist by connexion with the beginningless⁴ (principle). So that his greatness is not lost at all⁵, and beings exist by connexion with the beginningless⁴ (principle). That which is the real—the supreme Being⁶—is eternal. He creates the universe by means of changes⁷, for such is his power held to be; and for such connexions of things the Vedas are (authority)⁸.

¹ What is the purpose of its existence, and what misery does it undergo on entering the course of worldly life?

² 'The danger,' says Sāṅkara, 'is that of contravening Vedic texts such as "I am the Brahman," "Thou art that," &c.' May it not rather be that pointed out at Ka/hopanishad, p. 129, viz. never attaining final emancipation? Cf. also Nṛsiṃha Tāpini, p. 223.

³ The individual selfs, Sāṅkara.

⁴ Nature or mâyā.

⁵ The appearance of degradation to an inferior state being delusive.

⁶ The original word implies the possession of aiśvarya, dharma, yaśas, ṛti, vairāgya, moksha. See Svetāśvatara, p. 329 (where the list is slightly different). For another definition, see Maitrī, p. 6 (gloss).

⁷ See note 9, p. 156.

⁸ Sāṅkara says: 'The question of Dhṛitarāṣṭra having suggested a difference between two principles, one of which constrains, and the other of which is constrained, the answer is—Such a difference ought not to be alleged, as it involves "danger." Then the question arises, How is the difference, which does appear, to be explained? The reply is, It is due to the beginningless principle—delusion or ignorance. The next sentence shows that the universe as it appears is also a result of delusion.' Nilakantha says expressly, changes=delusion. He renders the original which we have translated by 'beginningless' first, to mean 'collection of objects of enjoyments.' Sāṅkara's explanation seems tautological as regards the words 'connexion with the beginningless,' which occur twice in the above. Nilā-

Dhṛitarâshṭra said :

Since some practise piety¹ in this world, and some likewise practise impiety in this world; is the piety destroyed by the sin, or else does the piety destroy sin?

Sanatsugâta said :

Whichever² he adheres to, the man of understanding always destroys both by means of knowledge; (that is) settled³. Likewise, in the other case⁴, the embodied (self) obtains merit; and to such a one sin (also) accrues; (that too is) settled⁵. Departing (from this world), he enjoys by his actions both (kinds of) fruit, which are not enduring⁶—of actions (which are) pure, and of (those which are) sinful. The man of understanding casts aside sin by piety in this (world), for know that his piety is more powerful⁷. Those Brâhmanas, in whom there is emulation⁸ about (their) piety, as there is in strong men about (their) strength, after departing from this world, become glorious in heaven⁹. And kantha's is not quite clear. May the expression on the second occasion mean, that the connexion by which beings are stated before to exist has had no beginning—has existed from eternity? The translation should then run thus: 'And beings exist by a connexion which had no beginning;' (see Sâriraka Bhâshya, p. 494.) Connexions of things=creation of universe by his power.

¹ E.g. Agnishṭoma, &c., Saṅkara.

² I.e. impiety or piety, sin or merit.

³ In Srutis and Smṛtis, which Saṅkara quotes. Aṅgândogya, p. 622; Mundaka, p. 309; Bṛhadâraṇyaka, p. 911. See, too, Maitrî, p. 131.

⁴ Of the man devoid of knowledge.

⁵ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 76, and Bṛhadâraṇyaka, p. 636.

⁶ See p. 164, note 9 infra.

⁷ The feeling of one's own superiority over others in piety.

⁸ 'In the shape of Nakshatras,' says Saṅkara, which is not quite intelligible. See Aṅgândogya, p. 258, and Anugîtâ infra, p. 240.

to those in whom there is no emulation about (their) piety, that (piety) is a means of (acquiring) knowledge¹. Such Brāhmaṇas released from this (world), go to the heaven which is free from the threefold source of pain². People who understand the Vedas call his conduct good. (But) people closely connected³, as well as strangers, do not pay much regard to him. Wherever he may believe food and drink for a Brāhmaṇa to exist in abundance, like water on grass in the autumn, there would he live and not be vexed⁴. (To him) only that person is good, and no other (as a companion), who does nothing in excess, and who occasions fear and injury to a taciturn man⁵. And his food is acceptable to the good, who does not vex the self of a taciturn man, and who does not destroy the property of a Brāhmaṇa⁶. A Brāhmaṇa should hold, that living in the midst of kinsmen, his actions should be always unknown⁷; and he should not ¹ According to the Vedāntic theory, the acts of piety purify the inner man, and are thus a stepping-stone to knowledge. See Introduction, p. 147 supra. Cf. Gītā, p. 122; and Bṛihadāraṇyaka, p. 899.

² I.e. physical, mental, and such as is caused by superhuman agency. This is Sāṅkara's explanation. It is somewhat far-fetched, but I can find none better. Cf. Gītā, p. 49. And see also Bṛihadāraṇyaka, p. 876, and the commentary of Sāṅkara there with Ānandagiri's gloss.

³ E.g. wife, children, &c.

⁴ I.e. vexed as to how his livelihood is to be earned, &c.

⁵ Excess, e.g. too much obsequiousness towards a 'taciturn man,' owing to his holiness, &c. Taciturn man = ascetic. Injury = disrespect, &c. Perhaps the protest against worldliness is here carried to an extreme. Sāṅkara cites Manu as a parallel, 'A Brāhmaṇa should be afraid of (worldly) respect as of poison.'

⁶ E.g. the Kura grass, deerskin, &c., mentioned at Gītā, p. 68.

⁷ I.e. he should not parade his actions. Sāṅkara compares Vasiṣṭha and a Vedic text. See, too, the quotation at Taitt. Āraṇ. p. 902.

think¹ (about them). What Brāhmaṇa ought to think of the inner self, which is void of symbols², immovable, pure, and free from all pairs of opposites, in this way³? What sin is not committed by that thief, who steals away his own self⁴, who regards his self as one thing, when it is a different thing. The far-seeing Brāhmaṇa, who knows the Brahman, is not wearied⁵, he receives nothing⁶; he is honoured, free from trouble⁷, and wise, but acts as if he was not wise⁸. As dogs eat what is vomited, so do they, enjoying their own bravery⁹, eat what is vomited, always with disaster (to themselves). Those twice-born persons, who are not

¹ Cf. Gitā, p. 103. Śaṅkara suggests an alternative explanation of this stanza, which will make it mean that one performing the operations of the senses, should devote oneself nevertheless to the unknown principle, and not consider the senses to be the self.

² I. e. beyond the reach of inference; 'subtle,' says Śaṅkara. Cf. Svetāśvatara, p. 364; Bṛihadāraṇyaka, p. 855; Maitrī, p. 182; and Kaṭha, p. 149, where Śaṅkara suggests a somewhat different meaning. As to immovable, cf. Īśa, p. 10, and Gitā, p. 104. Śaṅkara renders it by 'void of activity'; and pure he paraphrases by 'free from ignorance and other taints.'

³ It is difficult to say what 'in this way' refers to. Śaṅkara renders it by 'as possessing qualities appertaining to the two kinds of body.' On Śaṅkara's suggested meaning of the stanza preceding (see note 1), it would refer to the confusion of the senses with the self.

⁴ Such a person is called a destroyer of his own self at Īropanishad, p. 9.

⁵ I. e. by the troubles of worldly life.

⁶ Cf. 'without belongings' at Gitā, p. 128.

⁷ Anger and other obstacles to concentration of mind.

⁸ I. e. unintelligent. The text of Vasishṭha referred to in note 7, p. 159, says he should act like an unintelligent man. Cf. also Gaudapāda-kārikās, p. 443, and Sāṅkhya Bhāṣya, p. 1041.

⁹ I. e. singing the praises of their own greatness and worth, instead of keeping their 'conduct unknown.'

first¹ in respect of human wealth, but who are first in the Vedas², are unconquerable, not to be shaken³; they should be understood to be forms of the Brahman. Whosoever may in this (world) know all the gods⁴—doers of favours—he is not equal to a Brāhmaṇa, (nor even) he⁵ for whom he exerts himself. The man who makes no efforts⁶, and is respected, does not, being respected, think himself respected⁷, nor does he become vexed in consequence of disrespect. One who is respected⁸ should think it to be a natural operation of people, like their opening or closing of the eyelids, that the learned respect him in this world. One who is not respected should think, that the deluded people who do not understand piety, and who are devoid of (knowledge of) the world and the Sāstras, will never respect one who is worthy of respect. Respect and taciturnity⁹, verily, never dwell together; for this world is (the field) for respect, the next for taciturnity, as is understood¹⁰. For worldly wealth dwells in the ¹ Highly esteemed for or strongly attached to, Sāṅkara. Human wealth=wife, offspring, property, &c. Cf. A'ṅdogyā, p. 319; Bṛhadāraṇyaka, p. 262.

² I. e. veracity and other duties taught by the Vedas.

³ 'They need fear nought,' says Nīlakaṇṭha.

⁴ I. e. may sacrifice to them, Sāṅkara.

⁵ Not even the deity to whom the sacrifice is offered is equal to one who knows the Brahman. Cf. Taittirīya, p. 23, and Anugṛhā, p. 250.

⁶ I. e. one who is 'taciturn' and does not parade his greatness.

⁷ He does not care for the respect shown him.

⁸ Because he knows the Brahman.

⁹ I. e. restraint of all senses, not of speech only. For the contrast compare that between sreya and preya at Kaṭha, p. 92.

¹⁰ I. e. by all men of understanding. Sāṅkara's rendering is different: 'The next, which is known as Tad, is for taciturnity.' He cites for this Gītā, p. 120.

sphere of respect ¹, and that, too, is an obstacle ². While the Brahmic wealth ³, O Kshatriya! is difficult to be attained by any one devoid of knowledge. The ways (to it) are stated by the good to be of various descriptions, and difficult to reach—truth, straightforwardness, modesty ⁴, restraint (of senses), purity, knowledge, which are the six impediments (in the way) of respect and delusion.

CHAPTER III.

Dhṛitarāshṭra said :

Who possesses this taciturnity ⁵, and which of the two ⁶ is taciturnity? Describe, O learned person! the condition of taciturnity here. Does a learned man reach taciturnity ⁷ by taciturnity? And how, O sage! do they practise taciturnity in this world?

¹ I. e. they both follow on devotion to worldly life.

² I. e. in the way to final emancipation.

³ The enjoyment of supreme felicity, Brahmānanda (Saṅkara); the greatness consisting of a knowledge of Rik, Yagus, Sāman, and the substance of their teaching, which is worthy of a Brāhmaṇa (Nilakanṭha). See, too, Anugītā, p. 232.

⁴ Modesty = being ashamed of doing wrong; restraint (of senses) = mental restraint; and purity is both internal and external,—Saṅkara; knowledge is, of course, knowledge of the Brahman.

⁵ I. e. that spoken of in the last chapter.

⁶ Viz. mere silence, or the contemplation of the self after restraining all the senses. In the Bṛihadāraṇyaka-upanishad, Saṅkara (p. 605) renders the original word, mauna, to mean, 'The fruit of the destruction of the consciousness of anything other than the self.' And his commentator makes it clearer thus: 'The conviction in the mind that one is the self—the supreme Brahman—and that there is nothing else existing but oneself.'

⁷ I. e. the highest seat—the Brahman; for mind, sense, &c. are all non-existent there. Cf. Kaṭha, p. 151, and Maitrī, p. 161.

Sanatsugāta said :

Since the Vedas, together with the mind ¹, fail to attain to him, hence (is he) taciturnity ²—he about whom the words of the Vedas were uttered ³, and who, O king! shines forth as consubstantial ⁴ with them.

Dhṛitarāshṭra said :

Does ⁵ the twice-born person who studies the Rik and the Yagus texts, and the Sāma-veda, committing sinful (acts), become tainted, or does he not become tainted ?

Sanatsugāta said :

Not the Sāman texts, nor yet the Rik texts, nor the Yagus texts ⁶ save him, O acute sir! from sinful

¹ Cf. Kenopanishad, p. 39; Kaṭha, p. 152; Taittirīya, p. 119.

² 'Taciturnity is his name,' says Nīlakanṭha.

³ Or, says Saṅkara, 'who is the author of the Vedas.'

⁴ I.e. 'with the Vedas,' says Nīlakanṭha, Om, the quintessence of the Vedas, being a name of the Brahman (as to which cf. Gītā, p. 79, and Maitrī, p. 84). Saṅkara takes the whole expression to mean gyotirmaya, consisting of light. Nīlakanṭha says this stanza answers the five following questions put in the stanza preceding, viz. of what use is taciturnity? which of the two is taciturnity? &c., as above. The first four questions are answered by the first two lines of this stanza—the substance of the answer being, that the use of taciturnity is to attain the seat which is not to be grasped even by the mind, that taciturnity includes both restraint of mind and of the external senses. By means of such restraint, the external and internal worlds cease to be perceived as existing, and the highest goal is attained.

⁵ This question arises naturally enough on Nīlakanṭha's interpretation of the preceding stanza, the meaning of which is in substance that the Vedas cannot grasp the Brahman fully, but they are of use towards a rudimentary comprehension of it, as is said further on, see p. 172 infra.

⁶ Cf. Svetāśvatara-upanishad, p. 339; see, too, Nṛsiṃha Tāpinī, pp. 81-98.

action. I do not tell you an untruth. The Kṛandas do not save a sinful deceitful¹ man who behaves deceitfully². At the time of the termination (of his life), the Kṛandas abandon³ him, as birds who have got wings (abandon their) nest.

Dhṛitarāshṭra said :

If, O acute sir! the Vedas are not able to save one who understands the Vedas, then whence is this eternal talk⁴ of the Brāhmaṇas?

Sanatsugāta said :

O you of great glory! this universe becomes manifest through his special forms—names⁵ and the rest. The Vedas proclaim (his form) after describing (it) well⁶, and (they⁷ also) state his difference from the universe. For that⁸ are this penance and sacrifice prescribed. By these a learned man acquires merit, and afterwards destroying sin by merit⁹, he has his self illuminated by knowledge. By knowledge the learned man attains

¹ I. e. one who parades his piety.

² I. e. hypocritically.

³ I. e. do not rise to his memory—Nilakanṭha, citing Gītā, p. 78 supra.

⁴ Scil. about the veneration due to one who has studied the Vedas—Nilakanṭha, citing one or two passages in point.

⁵ The universe consists of 'names and forms,' the reality being the Brahman only. Cf. Kṛāṇḍogya, p. 407 seq.

⁶ Śaṅkara refers to Taittiriya-upanishad, p. 68; Kṛāṇḍogya, p. 596 seq. &c.

⁷ Śaṅkara takes this to mean 'sages,' who, according to him, state the difference. He quotes Parāśara for this.

⁸ I. e. the Brahman, that is to say, for attaining to it. Penance = tāṇḍrāyama and other observances; sacrifice = gyotishōma, &c.

⁹ Cf. p. 158 supra, and Taittiriya-āraṇyaka, p. 888.

the self¹. But, on the other hand, one who wishes for the fruit—heaven²—takes with him³ all that he has done in this (world), enjoys it in the next, and then returns to the path⁴ (of this world). Penance is performed in this world; the fruit is enjoyed elsewhere. But the penance of Brāhmaṇas is further developed⁵; that of others remains only as much (as when first performed).

Dhṛitarāshṭra said :

How does the pure penance become developed and well developed⁶? O Sanatsugāta! tell (me) how I should understand that, O Lord!

Sanatsugāta said :

This penance, free from sin⁷, is called pure⁸; and this pure penance becomes developed and well developed, not otherwise⁹. All this¹⁰, O Kshatriya!

¹ Cf. Svetāśvatara, p. 327; Mundaka, p. 323.

² So Saṅkara. Nīlakaṇṭha takes the original word to mean 'the group of the senses,' and the whole phrase to mean 'enjoyments of sense.' Nīlakaṇṭha is supported by a passage further on, p. 167. But as to 'those who wish for heaven,' cf. Gītā, pp. 48-84.

³ I. e. in the form of merit, &c.

⁴ Cf. Gītā, p. 84.

⁵ Cf. Khândogya, p. 23. Brāhmaṇas=those that know the Brahman. See p. 171 infra.

⁶ I am not quite sure about the meaning of the original here. Riddha, which I have rendered 'developed,' Nīlakaṇṭha understands to mean 'what is performed merely for show.' What has been rendered 'well developed' in the text, Nīlakaṇṭha takes to mean 'performed from some desire,' &c.

⁷ Anger, desire, &c.

⁸ The original is kevala. Nīlakaṇṭha says it is so called as being a means of kaivalya, 'final emancipation.'

⁹ I. e. not that which is not free from sin, which latter is not developed at all.

¹⁰ All objects of enjoyment, Nīlakaṇṭha.

has for its root that penance about which you question me. By penance¹, those conversant with the Vedas attained immortality, after departing from this world.

Dhṛitarāshṭra said :

I have heard about penance free from sin, O Sanatsugâta ! Tell me what is the sin (connected) with penance, so that I may understand the eternal mystery².

Sanatsugâta said :

The twelve beginning with wrath, and likewise the seven cruelties, are the defects (connected) with it; and there are (stated) in the Śāstras twelve merits (connected) with it, beginning with knowledge, which are known to the twice-born, and may be developed. Wrath, desire³, avarice, delusion⁴, craving⁵, mercilessness, censoriousness, vanity, grief⁶, attachment⁷, envy⁸, reviling others—these twelve should always be avoided by a man of high quali-

¹ Cf. Bṛihadâraṇyaka, p. 899. Tapas is variously rendered. See inter alia, Prama, pp. 162-170; Svetâsvatara, p. 307; Mundaka, pp. 270-280, 311-314; Khândogya, p. 136; Anugîtâ, pp. 247, 339.

² I. e. Brahma-vidyâ, or science of the Brahman, Nilakantha; the Brahman itself, Saṅkara.

³ I. e. lust.

⁴ Want of discrimination between right and wrong.

⁵ Desire to taste worldly objects.

⁶ For the loss of anything desired.

⁷ Desire to enjoy worldly objects. The difference between this and craving, according to Saṅkara, appears to be between merely tasting and continual enjoyment. According to Nilakantha, the former is a desire which is never contented; the latter is merely a general liking.

⁸ Impatience of other people's prosperity; censoriousness being the pointing out of flaws in other people's merits; and reviling being an ignoring of the merits and merely abusing.

fications¹. These, O king of kings! attend each and every man, wishing to find some opening², as a hunter (watches) animals. [Boastful, lustful, haughty, irascible, unsteady³, one who does not protect (those dependent⁴ on him), these six sinful acts are performed by sinful men who are not afraid (even) in the midst of great danger⁵.] One whose thoughts are (all) about enjoyments, who prospers by injuring (others), who repents of generosity, who is miserly, who is devoid of the power⁶ (of knowledge), who esteems the group⁷ (of the senses), who hates his wife⁸—these seven, different (from those previously mentioned), are the seven forms of cruelty. Knowledge, truth, self-restraint, sacred learning, freedom from animosity (towards living beings), modesty⁹, endurance¹⁰, freedom from censoriousness, sacrifice, gift, courage¹¹, quiescence¹²,—these are the twelve great observances¹³ of a Brāhmaṇa. Whoever is not devoid of these twelve can govern this whole world, and those who are

¹ Scil. for attaining to the Brahman.

² Some weak point by which they may attack a man.

³ Fickle in friendship, &c.

⁴ Such as a wife, &c.

⁵ Connected with this or the next world, Nīlakanṭha. This and a stanza further on I place within brackets, as it is not quite certain whether Śaṅkara's copy had them, though they are now in some of our copies of the text with his commentary. See Introduction.

⁶ Cf. Mundaka, p. 319; Kāṇḍogya, p. 494.

⁷ See note 2, at page 165.

⁸ The wife having no other protector.

⁹ See note 4, at page 162.

¹⁰ Of pairs of opposites, such as heat and cold, &c.

¹¹ Restraint of senses in presence of their objects.

¹² Cf. Gitā, pp. 69, 70.

¹³ Which are serviceable in attaining the highest goal.

possessed of three, two, or even one (of these) become, in (due) course, distinguished (for knowledge) and identified with the Brahman¹. [Self-restraint, abandonment², and freedom from heedlessness—on these depends immortality. And the talented Brāhmanas say that truth is chief over them.] Self-restraint has eighteen defects; if (any one of them is) committed, it is an obstacle (to self-restraint). They are thus stated. Untruthfulness, backbiting, thirst³, antipathy (to all beings), darkness⁴, repining⁵, hatred⁶ of people, haughtiness, quarrelsomeness, injuring living creatures, reviling others, garrulity, vexation⁷, want of endurance⁸, want of courage⁹, imperfection¹⁰, sinful conduct, and slaughter. That is called self-restraint by the good, which is free from these defects. Frenzy has eighteen defects¹¹; and abandonment is of six kinds. The contraries of those which have been laid down¹² are stated to be the defects of frenzy. Abandonment of six kinds is excellent. Of those six, the third is hard to achieve. With it one certainly crosses

¹ The original is the word 'taciturnity' as at p. 162 supra.

² Offering one's acts to God (Nilakantha), as to which cf. Gītā, p. 64. See also p. 182 infra for this stanza.

³ I. e. for objects of sense.

⁴ Ignorance.

⁵ Discontent even when one obtains much.

⁶ This is active; antipathy is passive only.

⁷ Of oneself, by brooding on evil. Cf. Taittirīya, p. 119. One copy of Sankara's commentary says this means 'thinking ill of others without cause.'

⁸ Of pairs of opposites.

⁹ Restraint of senses in presence of their objects.

¹⁰ I. e. of piety, knowledge, and indifference to worldly objects.

¹¹ I. e. qualities which destroy it.

¹² Scil. as defects of self-restraint, viz. untruthfulness, &c.

beyond all misery without distinction¹. That being achieved, (everything) is accomplished². The (first is the) giving away of sons and wealth to a deserving man who asks (for them); the second is gifts at Vedic ceremonies, and gifts at ceremonies laid down in the *Smṛitis*³. The abandonment of desires, O king of kings! by means of indifference (to worldly objects) is laid down as the third⁴. With these one should become free from heedlessness. That freedom from heedlessness, too, has eight characteristics, and is (a) great (merit). Truthfulness, concentration, absorbed contemplation, reflexion⁵, and also indifference (to worldly objects), not stealing⁶, living the life of a Brahmāṣṛin, and ¹ Scil. any distinction as to physical, mental, or that which is caused by superhuman agency.

² Literally, 'all is conquered.' Everything that needs to be done is done. Cf. Kaṭhopanishad, p. 155; Mundaka, p. 317.

³ Another interpretation of ish/âpūrta is 'offerings to gods, and offerings to the manes;' a third 'sacrifices, &c., and works of charity, such as digging tanks and wells;' for a fourth, see Saṅkara on Mundaka, p. 291.

⁴ Each of the three classes mentioned contains two sub-classes, and so the six are made up. It is not quite easy to see the two heads under the third class; but perhaps indifference, and the consequent abandonment of desire, may be the two intended. To indicate that, I have adopted the construction which takes the words 'by means of indifference' with abandonment, instead of with 'gifts at Vedic ceremonies,' &c. Saṅkara seems to understand 'giving away of wealth' with the words 'by means of indifference,' and thus to constitute the second head under the third class. But he is not quite clear.

⁵ Concentration=fixing the mind continuously on some object, such as the being in the sun, &c.; contemplation is that in which one identifies oneself with the Brahman; reflexion as to what one is, whence one comes, and so forth.

⁶ Saṅkara says this may refer to the 'stealing' mentioned at p. 160. The life of a Brahmāṣṛin is here taken to mean con-likewise freedom from all belongings¹. Thus have the defects of self-restraint been stated; one should avoid those defects. Freedom from (those) defects is freedom from heedlessness; and that, too, is deemed to have eight characteristics². Let truth be your (very) self, O king of kings! On truth all the worlds rest³. Truth is said to be their main (principle). Immortality depends on truth⁴. Getting rid of (these) defects, one should practise the observance of penance. This is the conduct prescribed by the Creator. Truth is the solemn vow of the good. The pure penance, which is free from these defects, and possessed of these characteristics, becomes developed, and well developed⁵. I will state to you, in brief, O king of kings! what you ask of me. This (observance)⁶ is destructive of sin, and pure, and releases (one) from birth and death and old age⁷. If one is free from the five senses, and also from the mind⁸, O descendant of Bharata! also from (thoughts regarding) the past and the future⁹, one becomes happy.

Dhṛitarāshṭra said :

Some people make great boasts in consequence of (their knowing) the Vedas with the Ākhyānas as tinence by the commentators, as also at Mundaka, p. 311 inter alia. See also Āhândogya, p. 533.

¹ Son, wife, home, &c.; as to which cf. Gītā, p. 103, and Nṛsiṃha Tāpinī, p. 198, commentary.

² The eight mentioned already. ³ Cf. Taitt. Āraṇ. p. 885.

⁴ Cf. Mundaka, p. 312; Sānti Parvan (Moksha), chap. 199, st. 64 seq. Immortality = final emancipation.

⁵ P. 165 supra.

⁶ Of penance, that is to say.

⁷ Cf. Gītā, p. 109 for the collocation.

⁸ Kaṭhōpanishad, p. 151; Maitrī, p. 161. Saṅkara seems to take the five and the senses separately; the five meaning the five classes of sensuous objects. ⁹ Past losses and future gains, Nilakantha.

the fifth¹; others, likewise, are (masters) of four Vedas; others, too, of three Vedas; others are (masters) of two Vedas, and of one Veda; and others of no Veda². Tell me which of these is the greatest, whom I may know (to be) a Brāhmaṇa.

Sanatsugāta said :

Through ignorance of the one Veda³—the one truth—O king of kings! numerous Vedas came into existence. Some⁴ only adhere to the truth. The fancies of those who have fallen away from the truth are abortive, and through ignorance of the truth, ceremonies become amplified⁵. One should understand a Brāhmaṇa, who (merely) reads much, to be a man of many words⁶. Know him only to be the (true) Brāhmaṇa, who swerves not from the truth⁷. O you who are the highest among men⁸! the Kṛṇḍas, indeed, refer of themselves⁹ to it. There-

¹ Cf., as to this, Max Müller's Ancient Sanskrit Literature, p. 38 seq.; and Kṛṇḍogya, pp. 164, 474, 493; Bṛhadāraṇyaka, pp. 456, 687, 926; Maitrī, p. 171; Nṛsiṃha Tāpinī, p. 105.

² The original is 'void of Rikṣ.' The commentators give no explanation. Does it mean those who abandon the karma-mārga? Heretics who reject all Vedas are scarcely likely to be referred to in this way. Nīlakaṇṭha's interpretation of all this is very different. See his gloss.

³ Śaṅkara gives various interpretations of this. Perhaps the best is to take it as meaning knowledge. 'The one knowledge—the one truth'—would then be like the famous text—Taittirīya, p. 56—'The Brahman is truth, knowledge,' &c.

⁴ For this phrase cf. Gītā, p. 73.

⁵ Those who do not understand the Brahman lose their natural power of obtaining what they wish, and so go in for various ceremonies for various special benefits. Cf. Kṛṇḍogya, p. 541; Gītā, p. 47; and p. 184 infra.

⁶ Cf. Bṛhadāraṇyaka, p. 893.

⁷ Ibid. p. 636.

⁸ Literally, 'highest among bipeds,' a rather unusual expression.

⁹ Nīlakaṇṭha says, 'The part of the Vedas which teaches the fore, studying them, the learned persons who understand the Kṛāṇḍas, attain to the Veda, not that which is to be known¹. Among the Vedas, there is none which understands². By the unintelligent³, one understands not the Veda, nor the object of knowledge⁴. He who knows the Veda knows the object of knowledge. He who knows the object of knowledge⁵ knows not the truth. He who understands the Vedas understands also the object of knowledge; but that⁶ is not understood by the Vedas or by those who understand the Vedas. Still the Brāhmaṇas who understand the Vedas, understand the Veda by means of the Vedas⁷. As the branch of a tree with regard to the part of a portion of the glorious⁸ one, so, they declare, are the Vedas with knowledge of the supreme is enough by itself for its purpose; it is not like the part about rites, &c., which rites must be performed before they serve any useful purpose.' The Gṛānakāṇḍa is enough by itself for understanding the Brahman. Saṅkara compares Gītā, p. 113, and Kaṭha, p. 102.

¹ The Veda=the Brahman, as above, cf. Svetāśvatara, p. 372 and commentary; that which is to be known=the material world, which is a subject for human knowledge.

² Scil. understands the Veda—the Brahman.

³ 'The mind,' says Nilakaṇṭha; literally, 'that which is to be understood.'

⁴ Because a real knowledge of it requires a knowledge of the Brahman. As to the next clause cf. inter alia Kṛāṇḍogya, p. 384; Brīhadāraṇyaka, p. 450.

⁵ This is the converse of the last sentence, as to which cf. Brīhadāraṇyaka, p. 925.

⁶ The supreme.

⁷ The apparent contradiction is explained in the next sentence.

⁸ I.e. the moon. This refers to the well-known sākṣātāndra-nyāya. As the small digit of the moon, which cannot be perceived by itself, is pointed out as being at the tip of a branch of a tree pointing towards the moon, so the Vedas are of use as pointing towards the Brahman, though inaccurately and imperfectly.

regard to the subject of understanding the supreme self. I understand him to be a Brâhmaṇa who is ingenious, and explains¹ (Vedic texts). He who apprehends (those texts) thus², does verily know that supreme (principle). One should not go in search of it among (things) antagonistic³ to it at all. Not looking (for him there) one sees that Lord by means of the Veda⁴. Remaining quiet, one should practise devotion, and should not even form a wish in the mind⁵. To him the Brahman presents⁶ itself, and directly afterwards he attains to the perfect⁷ (one). By taciturnity⁸, verily, does one become a sage; (one does) not (become) a sage by dwelling in a forest⁹. And he is called the highest sage, who understands that indestructible (principle). One is called an analyser¹⁰ (also) in consequence of

¹ Scil. in the manner just indicated.

² As giving an idea of the Brahman. The first step to a knowledge of the Brahman is to 'hear' about it from Vedic texts. Cf. Bṛhadâraṇyaka, p. 925.

³ Such as the body, the senses, &c., which must be distinguished as quite distinct from the self, though most often confounded with it.

⁴ Such passages, namely, as 'Thou art that, I am the Brahman,' &c.

⁵ About the objects of the senses.

⁶ Cf. Kaṭha, p. 155.

⁷ Cf. K'hândogya, p. 516. The Bhûman there is the same as the Bahu here, viz. the Brahman. Saṅkara says expressly in his comment on the Upanishad text, that Bahu and Bhûman, among other words, are synonyms.

⁸ Self-restraint, as explained before at p. 163.

⁹ Though this is not unimportant, as may be seen from the contrast between town and forest at K'hândogya, p. 340. See also Maitri, p. 100; Mundaka, p. 240. As to the 'highest sage,' see Bṛhadâraṇyaka, p. 899, where the passage about 'sacrifice, gift, penance' should be compared with Gitâ, p. 122.

¹⁰ The construction in the original is not quite clear. I understand the sense to be as follows: In the science of the soul, the analysing all objects. The analysis (is) from that as the root; and as he makes (such an) analysis, hence is he so (called). The man who sees the worlds directly sees everything¹. A Brâhmaṇa, verily, adhering to the truth, understands it, and becomes omniscient. I say to you, O learned man! that adhering to knowledge and the rest² in this way, one sees the Brahman, O Kshatriya! by means of a course (of study) in the Vedas³.

CHAPTER IV.

Dhṛitarâshṭra said :

O Sanatsugâta! since you have spoken these words of highest significance, relating to the Brahman, and of numerous forms⁴, give me that advice which is excellent, and difficult to obtain in the analyser (the word is the same as the word for grammarian) is he who analyses objects, not words merely. Now the true analysis of objects reduces them all to the Brahman (cf. Khândogya, p. 407; Bṛihadâraṇyaka, p. 152); and the sage understands this, and makes the analysis accordingly, so he is rightly called an analyser.

¹ This again is not clear, and the discrepancies of the MSS. make it more perplexing. The meaning, I take to be, that a man may perceive all material things, such as the worlds, Bhûr, &c. (as the commentators put it), but to be really omniscient, you must have knowledge of the truth—the Brahman. See Sabhâ Parvan, chapter V, stanza 7. And see, too, Bṛihadâraṇyaka, p. 613.

² P. 167 supra.

³ 'Hearing the Vedântas—Upanishads,' &c., says Sâṅkara. See note 2 supra, p. 173.

⁴ Does this mean referring to many aspects of the Brahman? Sâṅkara merely says nânârûpâ. Nîlakanṭha takes it differently, and as meaning that in which everything is elucidated; 'relating to the Brahman' Nîlakanṭha takes to mean 'leading to the Brahman,' or 'instrument for attaining to the Brahman.'

midst of these created objects¹. Such is my request, O youth !

Sanatsugâta said :

This Brahman, O king ! about which you question me with such perseverance, is not to be attained by anybody who is in a hurry. When the mind is absorbed in the understanding², then can that knowledge, which must be deeply pondered over, be attained by living the life of a Brahmakârin³. For you are speaking of that primordial knowledge⁴, which consists in the truth ; which is obtained by the good by living the life of Brahmakârins⁵ ; which being obtained, men cast off this mortal world ; and which knowledge, verily, is to be invariably (found) in those who have been brought up under preceptors⁶.

Dhṛitarâshṭra said :

Since that knowledge is capable of being truly acquired by living the life of a Brahmakârin, therefore tell me, O Brâhmaṇa ! of what description the life of a Brahmakârin is⁷.

Sanatsugâta said :

Those who entering (as it were) the womb⁸ of a

¹ In this material world, the highest knowledge is not to be got. Cf. Kaṭha, p. 96.

² I. e. withdrawn from objects and fixed on the self only. Cf. Gîtâ, p. 79, and Maitrî, p. 179, where, however, we have hrîd for buddhi.

³ Viroḥana and Indra do so according to the Khândogya, p. 570. See also Mundaka, p. 311.

⁴ The object of which is the primal Brahman.

⁵ Cf. Khândogya, p. 534 ; and Gîtâ, pp. 78, 79, and the passage from the Kaṭha there cited.

⁶ Khândogya, pp. 264-459.

⁷ See Khândogya, p. 553 seq.

⁸ I. e. attending closely upon him ; fœtus = pupil.

preceptor, and becoming (as it were) a foetus, practise the life of Brahmaċārins, become even in this world authors of Sâstras¹, and they repair to the highest truth² after casting off (this) body. They subjugate desires here in this world, practising forbearance in pursuit of the Brahmic state³; and with courage, they even here remove the self out of the body⁴, like the soft fibres from the Muñga. Father and mother, O descendant of Bharata! only form the body. But the birth⁵ obtained from the preceptor, that verily is true⁶, and likewise immortal. He perfects⁷ (one), giving (one) immortality. Recognising what he has done (for one), one should not injure him. The disciple should always make obeisance to the preceptor⁸; and, free from heedlessness, should always desire sacred instruction. When the pure man obtains knowledge by this same course of discipleship⁹, that is the first quarter of his life as a Brahmaċārin. As (is) his conduct

¹ Learned, men of knowledge, Saṅkara.

² The supreme, which is described as 'truth, knowledge,' &c. In our ancient works the truth often means the real.

³ The state of being absorbed in the Brahman. Cf. Gîtâ, p. 52.

⁴ Cf. Kaṭha, p. 158.

⁵ Saṅkara cites Āpastamba (p. 11) in support of this, and Prasna-upanishad, p. 256. The consciousness of being one with the Brahman is a new birth. See, too, Mundaka, p. 282.

⁶ That birth is not merely delusive, and does not result in death.

⁷ Immortality or final emancipation is not to be achieved without knowledge, which can only be got from a preceptor. And one is not perfect without that immortality; one is limited by the conditions of human existence. See Nirukta (Roth's ed.), p. 41.

⁸ Saṅkara compares Svetâsvatara, p. 374; see also p. 203 infra. The necessity of having a Guru is often insisted on even in the Upanishads. Cf. Mundaka, p. 282; Āṇḍogya, p. 264.

⁹ Stated at the beginning of this speech, Saṅkara.

always towards his preceptor, so likewise should he behave towards the preceptor's wife, and so likewise should he act towards the preceptor's son—(that) is said to be the second quarter. What one, recognising what the preceptor has done for one, and understanding the matter¹ (taught), feels with a delighted heart regarding the preceptor—believing that one has been brought into existence² by him—that is the third quarter of life as a Brahmatârin. One should do what is agreeable to the preceptor, by means of one's life and riches, and in deed, thought, and word³—that is said to be the fourth quarter. (A disciple) obtains a quarter by time⁴, so likewise a quarter by associating with the preceptor, he also obtains a quarter by means of his own energy; and then he attains to a quarter by means of the Sâstras. The life as a Brahmatârin of that man, whose beauty⁵ consists in the twelve beginning with knowledge, and whose limbs are the other (qualifications mentioned), and who has ¹ The meaning of the Vedic texts, &c., Saṅkara in one copy; the highest aim of man, according to another copy.

² See note 5 on p. 176.

³ I keep the order of the original, though I do not translate quite literally; 'thought and word' should be literally 'mind and speech.' See, on the collocation, Gîtâ, p. 123 inter alia.

⁴ Time=maturity of understanding which comes by time; energy=intellectual power; Sâstras=consultation about Sâstras with fellow-students—Saṅkara, who adds that the order is not material as stated, and quotes a stanza which may be thus rendered, 'The pupil receives a quarter from the preceptor, a quarter by his own talent; he receives a quarter by time; and a quarter through fellow-Brahmatârin.

⁵ The body being disregarded, these qualities are attributed to the self in this way. For the twelve, see p. 167; the others are abandonment, truthfulness, &c., p. 169.

strength¹, bears fruit, they say, by association with a preceptor, in (the shape of) contact with that entity—the Brahman. Whatever wealth may come to a man who lives in this way, he should even pay that over to the preceptor. He would thus be adopting the conduct of the good which is of many merits; and the same conduct is (to be adopted) towards the preceptor's son. Living thus, he prospers greatly² on all sides in this world; he obtains sons and position; the quarters³ and sub-quarters shower (benefits⁴) on him, and men pass their lives as Brahmacārins under him. By this life as a Brahmacārin, the divinities obtained their divinity. And the sages, too, became great by living the life of Brahmacārins. By this same (means), too, the Apsarasas, together with the Gandharvas, achieved for themselves beautiful forms. And by this life as a Brahmacārin, the sun illuminates (the universe). That man of knowledge, O king! who practising penance, may by penance pierce through or tear off his body, crosses beyond childhood⁵ by means of this (life as a Brahmacārin), and at the time of the termination (of life) overcomes death⁶. Those who understand this (life as a Brahmacārin) attain to a ¹ To observe the duties referred to, Sāṅkara. But see, too, p. 167, note 6.

² 'Obtains wealth, learning, and greatness,' says a commentator. For similar benefits, cf. Khândogya, p. 122.

³ Cf. Khândogya, p. 132.

⁴ 'Wealth,' says Nilakantha, as well as another commentator.

⁵ Ignorance; cf. note 7 at p. 154 supra. Nilakantha reads 'reaches' instead of 'crosses beyond,' and interprets 'bālya' to mean 'freedom from affection, aversion,' &c. Cf. Bṛihadāraṇyaka, p. 605. As to the divinity of divinities, cf. Taitt. Āraṇ. p. 886.

⁶ Nilakantha reads 'vanquishes death.' The meaning is, he reaches final emancipation. Cf. p. 154 supra.

condition like that of those who ask (for what they want) from the wish-granting stone¹, when they obtain the thing desired. By performing action, O Kshatriya! people conquer (for themselves only) perishable worlds². (But) the man of understanding attains by knowledge to the everlasting glory—for there is no other way to it³.

Dhṛitarāshṭra said:

Where a Brāhmaṇa possessed of knowledge, perceives it, does it appear as white⁴, as red, or again as black, or again as grey or tawny? What is the colour of that immortal, indestructible goal?

Sanatsugāta said:

It appears not as white, as red, nor again as black, nor again as grey, nor tawny⁵. It dwells not on earth, nor in the sky; nor does it bear a body in this ocean⁶(-like world). It is not in the stars, nor does it dwell in the lightning; nor is its form⁷ to be seen in the clouds, nor even in the air, nor in the deities; it is not to be seen in the moon, nor in the sun. It is not to be seen in Rik texts, nor in ¹ Called Kintāmani. The effect of Brahmatārya is that those who practise it can get what they desire.

² Cf. Gītā, p. 76; Khândogya, p. 538; Mundaka, p. 279.

³ Cf. Svetāśvatara, p. 327.

⁴ Cf. Bṛihadāraṇyaka, p. 877.

⁵ Cf. Kaṭha, p. 119; and Mundaka, p. 267. As to its not dwelling in earth, sky, &c., Sāṅkara refers to Khândogya, p. 518, as implying that.

⁶ Literally, 'it bears no water in the ocean.' 'Water' is said by the commentators to mean the five elements of which the body is composed. See Manu I, 5, and Khândogya, p. 330. In the Svetāśvatara it signifies mind (see p. 388). For ocean meaning world, or samsāra; cf. Aitareya-upanishad, p. 182.

⁷ Here I do not render rūpa by colour, as before.

Yagus texts; nor yet in the Atharvan texts, nor in the pure Sâman texts; nor yet, O king, in the Rathantara or *Bṛihadhratha*¹ hymns. It is seen in the self of a man of high vows². It is invincible, beyond darkness³, it comes forth from within⁴ at the time of destruction. Its form is more minute than the most minute (things), its form is larger even than the mountains⁵. That is the support⁶ (of the universe); that is immortal; (that is) all things perceptible⁷. That is the Brahman, that is glory⁸. From that all entities were produced⁹, in that they are dissolved. All this shines forth as dwelling in it in the form of light¹⁰. And it is perceived by means of knowledge¹¹ by one who understands the self; on it depends this whole universe. Those who understand this become immortal.

¹ See Muir, Sanskrit Texts, vol. i, p. 16; Tândya-brâhmana. p. 838; Gîtâ, p. 90; and Kaushîtaki, p. 21. Bṛihadhratha=Brihat-sâman (?).

² The twelve great vows—knowledge, &c., mentioned above, see p. 167. Nilakantha takes Mahâvratâ to refer to the sacrifice of that name. It is described in the Aitareya Âranyaka.

³ See Gîtâ, p. 78, note 4.

⁴ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 82, and Îsopanishad, p. 12.

⁵ See Gîtâ, p. 78, note 3.

⁶ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 113; Kaṭha, p. 99.

⁷ So Nilakantha. The original word ordinarily means 'worlds.'

⁸ Cf. Svetâsvatara, p. 347.

⁹ Cf. the famous passage in the Taittirîya, p. 123: and also Mundaka, p. 289.

¹⁰ The explanations of the commentators are not quite clear as to the word ahnâ, 'in the form of light.' Probably the meaning is: The universe depends on the Brahman, and is, as it were, the light of the Brahman. Saṅkara compares the passages referred to at Gîtâ, p. 112, note 1.

¹¹ 'Not by means of action,' says Saṅkara.

CHAPTER V¹.

Grief and wrath, and avarice, desire, delusion, laziness, want of forgiveness, vanity, craving, friendship², censoriousness, and reviling others—these twelve great enormities are destructive of a man's life. These, O king of kings! attend on each and every man. Beset by these, a man, deluded in his understanding, acts sinfully. A man full of attachments, merciless, harsh (of speech), talkative, cherishing wrath in his heart, and boastful—these are the men of cruel qualities; (such) persons, even obtaining wealth, do not always enjoy (it)³. One

¹ The whole of this chapter is wanting in one of our copies of Sāṅkara's commentary. In the copy published in the Mahābhārata (Madras edition) there is, however, this passage: 'Wrath &c. have been already explained, still there are some differences here and there, and those only are now explained.' The chapter is for the most part a repetition of what we have already had. For such repetitions cf. Bṛihadāraṇyaka, pp. 317-1016; 444-930. The same copy of Sāṅkara's commentary gives this general statement of the object of this and the next chapter: 'The course of study of the science of the Brahman, in which knowledge is the principal thing, and concentration of mind &c. are subsidiary, has been described. Now is described the course of study in which concentration of mind is principal, and knowledge subsidiary. The first mode consists in understanding the meaning of the word "you" by means of concentration of mind, and then identifying it with the Brahman by means of a study of the Upanishads; the second, in first intellectually understanding the identity of the individual self and Brahman, by such study of the Upanishads, and then realising the identity to consciousness by contemplation, &c. In both modes the fruit is the same, and the means are the same; and to show this, the merits and defects already stated are here again declared.' This explanation is verbatim the same in Nilakantha's commentary.

² The original is 'pity,' which is explained to mean 'friendship' by Sāṅkara and Nilakantha.

³ 'Owing to there being in it no enjoyment for the self,' says one whose thoughts are fixed on enjoyments, who is partial¹, proud², boastful when he makes a gift, miserly, and devoid of power³, who esteems the group (of the senses), and who hates (his) wife—thus have been stated the seven (classes of) cruel persons of sinful dispositions. Piety, and truthfulness, and penance, and self-restraint, freedom from animosity, modesty, endurance, freedom from censoriousness, liberality, sacred learning, courage, forgiveness—these are the twelve great observances of a Brāhmaṇa. Whoever does not swerve from these twelve may govern this whole world. And one who is possessed of three, two, or even one, of these, must be understood to have nothing of his own⁴. Self-restraint, abandonment, freedom from delusion, on these immortality depends⁵. These are possessed by those talented Brāhmaṇas to whom the Brahman is the principal⁶ (thing). A Brāhmaṇa's speaking ill of others, whether true or false, is not commended.

copy of Sāṅkara's commentary. Another reading, which is in the Madras edition and in Nīlakaṇṭha, may be rendered, 'even obtaining benefits, they do not respect one (from whom they obtain them).'

¹ The commentary says the meaning is the same as that of the expression used in the corresponding place before, viz. one who prospers by injuring others.

² One copy of Sāṅkara's commentary takes this to mean one who thinks the not-self to be the self. I adopt the other meaning, however, as agreeing with that of atimānī, which is the reading of some copies instead of abhimānī.

³ Nīlakaṇṭha reads durbala and does not explain it. See p. 167.

⁴ One commentator says this means that he should not be supposed to have incurred the demerit of having any attachment to this world. Nīlakaṇṭha says, he gives up everything in the pursuit of even one of these observances.

⁵ See p. 168.

⁶ I.e. the goal to be reached. The commentary takes Brahman to mean the Vedas, and the whole phrase to mean those who devote themselves to the performance of actions stated in the Vedas.

The men who act thus have their places in hell. Frenzy has eighteen defects—as already described here—hatred of men, factiousness¹, censoriousness, untruthful speech, lust, wrath, want of self-control², speaking ill of others, backbiting, mismanagement in business³, quarrelsomeness, animosity, troubling living creatures, want of forgiveness, delusion, flippancy, loss of reason⁴, censoriousness⁵; therefore a wise man should not be subject to frenzy, for it is always censured. Six characteristics should be understood as (belonging) to friendship—that one should rejoice at (anything) agreeable; and feel grieved at (anything) disagreeable; that with a pure heart one, when asked by a deserving (man), should give to him who asks what can⁶ certainly be given, (though it) may be beneficial to oneself, and even though it ought not to be asked, (namely) one's favourites, sons, wealth, and one's own wife; that one should not dwell there where one has bestowed (all one's) wealth, through a desire (to get a return for one's liberality); that one should enjoy

¹ One copy of Śaṅkara's commentary says this means 'obstructing other people's acts of piety,' &c.

² One copy of Śaṅkara's commentary says this means 'being given up to intoxicating drinks,' &c.; another copy says, 'doing another's bidding without thought.'

³ One copy says this means 'inattention to any work undertaken; another renders the original by 'destruction of property, i.e. squandering it on dancers,' &c.

⁴ I.e. discrimination between right and wrong.

⁵ This seems to be some error, for 'censoriousness' has occurred before. But neither the texts nor the commentaries give any help to correct the error. Perhaps the latter is to be distinguished as referring to the habit, and the former only to sporadic acts, of censoriousness. These qualities, I presume, constitute frenzy; they are not the 'defects.'

⁶ I.e. where the power to give exists.

(the fruit of one's¹ own) toils (only); and that one should forego one's own profit². Such a man, possessed of wealth, and possessed of merits, is a liberal man of the quality of goodness³; such a one diverts the five elements from the five⁴ (senses). This⁵ pure penance, acquired out of desire⁶ by those who are fallen off from the truth, even though developed, leads upwards⁷; since sacrifices are performed owing to a misapprehension of the truth⁸. (The

¹ Not a friend's. ² For a friend. ³ See Gîtâ, p. 120.

⁴ The commentators take this to mean objects of sense, and they interpret 'elements' before to mean senses.

⁵ 'Viz. the turning away of the senses from their objects,' says one copy of Saṅkara.

⁶ Scil. to enjoy the higher enjoyments of superior worlds.

⁷ I. e. to the higher worlds; it does not lead to emancipation here.

⁸ Cf. Mundaka, p. 277. I must own that I do not quite understand this passage, nor its explanation as given in the commentaries. I do not quite see what the penance here mentioned has to do with sacrifice, and yet the commentators seem to take the words 'since sacrifices,' &c., with what precedes them, not with what follows. Taking them, however, with what follows, it is difficult to explain the word 'since.' As far as I can understand the passage I take the sense of it to be as follows: The author having said that penance performed out of a particular motive does not lead to final emancipation, he then proceeds to point out that all 'action' or 'sacrifice' is due to an imperfect understanding of the truth (cf. p. 171 supra), being mostly due to some particular motive. Then he goes on to show the different classes of sacrifice, and finally points out that he who is free from desires is superior to one who is actuated by desires. The original for 'misapprehension' is ava-bodha, which commonly means 'apprehension,' but Saṅkara finally makes it mean moha or 'delusion.' The original for truth is rendered by Nilakantha to mean 'fancies.' Nflakantha says that the sacrifice by the mind is the highest; that by speech, viz. Brahmayagñā, Gāpā, &c., is middling; and that by deed, viz. with clarified butter and other offerings, of the lowest class. 'Perfected by fancies' = one whose fancies are always fulfilled 'through a knowledge,' says Nilakantha, 'of the Brahma as possessing qualities.'

sacrifices) of some are by the mind, of others by speech, and also by deed. The man void of fancies takes precedence over the man perfected by fancies, —especially among Brâhmanas¹. And hear this further from me. One should teach this great and glorious² (doctrine); (other doctrines) the wise call mere arrangements of words. On this concentration of mind³, all this⁴ depends. Those who know this become immortal. Not by meritorious action only, O king! does man conquer the truth⁵. One may offer offerings, or sacrifice. By that the child(-like man) does not cross beyond death; nor, O king! does he obtain happiness in his last moments⁶. One should practise devotion quietly, and should not be active even in mind⁷; and then one should avoid delight and wrath (resulting) from praise and censure⁸. I say to you, O learned person! that adhering to this⁹, one attains the Brahman and perceives it, O Kshatriya! by a course (of study) of the Vedas.

¹ This also is far from clear. Should it be, 'and a Brâhmana more especially?' This might be taken as referring to one who knows the Brahman as devoid of qualities, as Nilakantha does take it. But his construction is not quite clear.

² As serviceable in attaining to 'the glory,' the Brahman; see p. 180.

³ See note 1 at p. 181. As to 'arrangements of words,' cf. Maitri, p. 179.

⁴ 'Everything,' says one copy of Saṅkara's commentary; 'all that is good and desirable,' says another.

⁵ Cf. inter alia, Mundaka, pp. 281-314.

⁶ For he has got to undergo migration from one life to another as the result of the action. Cf. Bṛihadâraṇyaka, p. 856; Mundaka, p. 278.

⁷ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 70.

⁸ Ibid. pp. 101-110.

⁹ I.e. the yoga or concentration of mind here described. This stanza, like many others in this chapter, occurs in chapter III with slight variations.

CHAPTER VI.

That pure¹, great light², which is radiant; that great glory³; that, verily, which the gods worship⁴; that by means of which the sun shines forth⁵—that eternal divine being is perceived by devotees. From (that) pure (principle) the Brahman⁶ is produced; by (that) pure (principle) the Brahman is developed⁷; that pure (principle), not illumined among all radiant (bodies), is (itself) luminous and illuminates (them)⁸. That eternal divine being is perceived by devotees. The perfect is raised out of the perfect. It (being raised) out of the perfect is called the perfect. The perfect is withdrawn from the perfect, and the perfect only remains⁹. That eternal divine being is perceived by devotees.

¹ Free from ignorance and other taints. See Kaṭha, p. 144.

² Saṅkara compares Kaṭha, p. 142. See, too, Mundaka, p. 303; and note 4 infra.

³ Svetâsvatara, p. 347, and p. 180 supra.

⁴ Saṅkara refers to Bṛhadâraṇyaka, p. 887.

⁵ Cf. Gitâ, p. 112, note 1.

⁶ 'Named Hiranyagarbha,' Saṅkara. Cf. Gitâ, p. 107; Svetâsvatara, p. 354; Mundaka, p. 309; Maitrî, p. 130; Taitt. Âraṇ. p. 894.

⁷ 'In the form of Virâg,' says Saṅkara. As to these two, cf. Mundaka, pp. 270-272; and Saṅkara's and Ânandagiri's notes there. See also Svetâsvatara, pp. 324, 325; and Nṛsiṃha Tâpinî, pp. 233, 234; Colebrooke, Essays, pp. 344, 368 (Madras reprint). The Virâg corresponds rather to the gross material world viewed as a whole; the Hiranyagarbha to the subtle elements similarly viewed, an earlier stage in the development. Cf. the Vedântasâra.

⁸ Cf. Mundaka, p. 303, and Gitâ, p. 112.

⁹ The individual self is part of the supreme (Gitâ, p. 112); perfect = not limited by space, time, &c.; as being part of a thing perfect in its essence, the individual soul also is perfect. The individual self is withdrawn from the perfect, viz. the whole aggregate of body, senses, &c. presided over by the self, and when so withdrawn it appears to be the pure self only. Cf. Bṛhadâraṇyaka, p. 948.

(From the Brahman), the waters¹ (are produced); and then from the waters, the gross body. In the space within that², dwelt the two divine (principles). Both enveloping the quarters and sub-quarters, support earth and heaven³. That eternal divine being is perceived by devotees. The horse⁴ (-like senses) lead towards heaven him, who is possessed of knowledge and divine, (who is) free from old age, and who stands on the wheel of this chariot (-like body), which is transient, but the operations of which are imperishable⁵. That eternal divine being⁶ is perceived by devotees. His form has no parallel⁷; no one sees him with the eye⁸. Those who apprehend him by means of the understanding, and also the mind and heart, become immortal⁹. That eternal

¹ 'The five elements,' says Sāṅkara, cf. Aitareya, p. 189; and for 'gross body,' the original is literally 'water;' see supra, p. 179, note 6; and see, too, Īropanishad, p. 11, and Svetāśvatara, p. 368, for different but kindred meanings.

² Viz. the lotus-like heart. Cf. Kāṇḍogya, p. 528.

³ The two principles between them pervade the universe, the individual self being connected with the material world, the other with heaven; 'divine' is, literally, 'the brilliant,' says Sāṅkara, who quotes Kaṭha, p. 305, as a parallel for the whole passage.

⁴ Cf. Kaṭha, p. 111; Maitrī, pp. 19-34; and Mahābhārata Śrī Parvan, chap. VII, st. 13. Heaven = the Brahman here (see Brīhadāraṇyaka, p. 876); divine = not vulgar, or unrefined—Sāṅkara, who adds that though the senses generally lead one to sensuous objects, they do not do so when under the guidance of true knowledge.

⁵ The body is perishable, but action done by the self while in the body leaves its effect.

⁶ To whom, namely, the man of knowledge goes, as before stated.

⁷ Cf. Svetāśvatara, p. 347.

⁸ Cf. Kaṭha, p. 152, and comment there, where the eye is said to stand for all the senses.

⁹ Kaṭha, p. 149; Svetāśvatara, pp. 346-348, also p. 330 (should it be manśhā there instead of manviro?). The meanings of the three words are difficult to fix accurately. Sāṅkara varies in his interpre-

divine being is perceived by devotees. The currents of twelve collections¹, supported by the Deity, regulate the honey²; and those who follow after it move about in (this) dangerous (world). That eternal divine being³ is perceived by devotees. The bee⁴ drinks that accumulated honey for half a month⁵. The Lord created the oblation for all beings⁶. That eternal divine being is perceived by devotees. Those who are devoid of wings⁷, coming tations. Probably the meaning he gives here is the best. Mind and understanding have been explained at Gîtâ, p. 57. The heart is the place within, where the self is said to be, and it may be taken as indicating the self, the meaning would then be—a direct consciousness in the self of its unity with the Supreme. See, too, Taitt. Âraṇ. p. 896.

¹ The five organs of action, the five senses of perception, the mind and understanding make the twelve.

² Each current has its own honey regularly distributed to it under the supervision of the Deity, the Supreme. Honey=material enjoyment. Cf. Kaṭha, p. 126, where Saṅkara renders it by karmaphala, 'fruit of action.'

³ Who supervises the distribution as stated. Cf. Vedānta-sūtra III, 2, 28-31.

⁴ Bhramara, which the commentators interpret to mean 'one who is given to flying about—the individual self.'

⁵ I. e. in one life in respect of actions done in a previous life.

⁶ Saṅkara says this is in answer to a possible difficulty that action performed here cannot have its fruit in the next world, as the fruit is so far removed in time from the action. The answer is, The Lord, the Supreme, can effect this, and taking his existence into account there is no difficulty. Oblation=food, &c., Saṅkara. The meaning of the whole passage, which is not very clear, seems to be that the Lord has arranged things so that each being receives some of this honey, this food, which is the fruit of his own action. Then the question arises, Do these beings always continue taking the honey and 'migrating,' or are they ever released? That is answered by the following sentence.

⁷ 'The wings of knowledge,' says Saṅkara, citing a Brāhmaṇa text, 'those, verily, who have knowledge are possessed of wings, those who are not possessed of knowledge are devoid of wings.'

to the Asvattha of golden leaves¹, there become possessed of wings, and fly away happily². That eternal divine being³ is perceived by devotees. The upward life-wind swallows up the downward life-wind; the moon swallows up the upward life-wind; the sun swallows up the moon⁴; and another⁵ swallows up the sun. Moving about above the waters, the supreme self⁶ does not raise one leg⁷. (Should he raise) that, which is always performing sacrifices⁸, there will be no death, no immortality⁹. That eternal divine being¹⁰ is perceived by devotees.

¹ So, literally; Sāṅkara explains 'golden' to mean 'beneficial and pleasant,' by a somewhat fanciful derivation of the word hiranya. He refers to Gītā, p. 111, about the leaves of the Asvattha. Nilakantha takes the leaves to be son, wife, &c., which are 'golden,' attractive at first sight. 'Coming to the Asvattha,' Sāṅkara says, 'means being born as a Brāhmaṇa,' &c. 'Flying away' = obtaining final emancipation.

² The 'selves' are compared to birds in the famous passage at Mundaka, p. 306 (also Svetāśvatara, p. 337). See also Bṛihadāraṇyaka, p. 499.

³ Knowledge of whom leads to 'flying away happily.'

⁴ Cf. Kāṇḍogya, p. 441. Sāṅkara says that the author here explains the yoga by which the Supreme is to be attained. As to the life-winds, cf. Gītā, p. 61. 'The moon,' says Sāṅkara, 'means the mind, and the sun the understanding, as they are the respective deities of those organs' (cf. Bṛihadāraṇyaka, pp. 521-542, and Āitareya, p. 187, where, however, the sun is said to appertain to the eye).

⁵ I.e. the Brahman; the result is, one remains in the condition of being identified with the Brahman.

⁶ Literally, flamingo. Cf. Svetāśvatara, pp. 332, 367; see also p. 289; Maitrī, p. 99; and the commentary on Svetāśvatara, p. 283.

⁷ Viz. the individual self, Sāṅkara; that is, as it were, the bond of connexion between the Supreme and the world. Cf. Gītā, p. 112.

⁸ This is the meaning, though the word in the original is Ritvig, which in the later literature only means priest.

⁹ As the whole of the material world is dissolved, when the self is dis severed from the delusion which is the cause of it.

¹⁰ Viz. who moves about on the waters, as above stated.

The being which is the inner self, and which is of the size of a thumb¹, is always migrating in consequence of the connexion with the subtle body². The deluded ones do not perceive that praiseworthy lord, primeval and radiant, and possessed of creative power³. That eternal divine being is perceived by devotees. Leading mortals to destruction by their own action⁴, they conceal themselves like serpents in secret recesses⁵. The deluded men then become more deluded⁶. The enjoyments afforded by them cause delusion, and lead to worldly life⁷. That eternal divine being⁸ is perceived by devotees. This⁹ seems to be common to all mankind—whether possessed of resources¹⁰ or not possessed of resources—it is common to immortality and the other¹¹. Those who are possessed (of them)¹² attain there to the source of the honey¹³. That eternal divine being is perceived by devotees. They go, ¹ Svetâsvatara, pp. 330–355; Taitt. Âran. p. 858, and comments there.

² The life-winds, the ten organs or senses, mind, and understanding. See the same word similarly interpreted at Svetâsvatara, p. 306, and Sâṅkhya-sûtra III, 9.

³ According to Saṅkara, he who makes the distinct entities, after entering into them; he alludes apparently to Khândogya, p. 407.

⁴ Namely, that of giving the poison of sensuous objects.

⁵ I. e. the eye, ear, &c., like the holes of serpents.

⁶ I. e. can appreciate nought but those sensuous objects.

⁷ One reading is, 'lead to danger' = which means 'to hell,' according to Nilakantha.

⁸ Scil. delusion about whom leads to 'danger' or 'worldly life.'

⁹ The quality of being one with the Brahman in essence.

¹⁰ Self-restraint, tranquillity, &c.

¹¹ I. e. whether in the midst of worldly life, or in the state of perfect emancipation.

¹² Viz. the resources spoken of before.

¹³ Viz. the supreme Brahman. 'There' Saṅkara takes to mean 'in the supreme abode of Vishṇu.' See Introduction.

pervading both worlds by knowledge¹. Then the Agnihotra though not performed is (as good as) performed². Your (knowledge) of the Brahman, therefore, will not lead you to littleness³. Knowledge is (his)⁴ name. To that the talented ones attain. That eternal divine being is perceived by devotees. The self of this description absorbing the material cause⁵ becomes great. And the self of him who understands that being is not degraded here⁶. That eternal divine being is perceived by devotees. One should ever and always be doing good. (There is) no death, whence (can there be) immortality⁷? The real and the unreal have both the same real (entity) as their basis. The source of the existent and the non-existent is but one⁸. That eternal divine being is perceived by devotees. The ¹ Sāṅkara does not explain this. Nīlakaṇṭha says pervading = fully understanding; both worlds = the self and the not-self. Is the meaning something like that of the passage last cited by Sāṅkara under Vedānta-sūtra IV, 2, 14?

² He obtains the fruit of it, Sāṅkara. See as to Agnihotra, Khândogya, p. 381 seq.; and Vedānta-sūtra IV, 1, 16.

³ I.e. this mortal world, as action &c. would do.

⁴ I.e. of one who understands himself to be the Brahman. See Aitareya-upanishad, p. 246.

⁵ Sāṅkara says, 'the cause in which all is absorbed.' Cf. a similar, but not identical, meaning given to Vaisvānara at Khândogya, p. 264; and see Vedānta-sūtra I, 2, 24. Becomes great = becomes the Brahman, Sāṅkara.

⁶ Even in this body, Sāṅkara; degradation he takes to mean departure from the body, citing Bṛihadâraṇyaka, p. 540.

⁷ There is no worldly life with birth and death for one who does good, and thinks his self to be the Brahman; hence no emancipation from such life either.

⁸ The Brahman is the real, and on that the unreal material world is imagined. Cf. Taittirīya, p. 97, and Sāṅkara's comments there, which are of use in understanding this passage.

being who is the inner self, and who is of the size of a thumb, is not seen, being placed in the heart¹. He is unborn, is moving about day and night, without sloth. Meditating on him, a wise man remains placid². That eternal divine being is perceived by devotees. From him comes the wind³; in him, likewise, is (everything) dissolved. From him (come) the fire and the moon; and from him comes life⁴. That is the support (of the universe); that is immortal; that is all things perceptible⁵; that is the Brahman, that glory. From that all entities were produced; and in that (they) are dissolved⁶. That eternal divine being is perceived by devotees. The brilliant (Brahman) supports the two divine principles⁷ and the universe, earth and heaven, and the quarters. He from whom the rivers flow in (various) directions, from him were created the great oceans⁸. That eternal divine being is perceived by devotees. Should one fly, even after furnishing oneself with thousands upon thousands of wings, and even though one should have the velocity of thought⁹, one would never reach the end of the (great) cause¹⁰. That eternal divine

¹ Cf. Kaṭha, pp. 130, 157; and Bṛhadâraṇyaka, p. 360.

² Cf. Svetâsvatara, p. 342; Kaṭha, pp. 100, 107; Maitrî, p. 134.

³ Cf. Taittirîya, p. 67; Kaṭha, p. 146; Mundaka, p. 293.

⁴ Kaṭha, p. 298; Mundaka, p. 288.

⁵ See p. 180, note 7.

⁶ See p. 180 supra.

⁷ 'The individual soul, and God,' say the commentators, the latter being distinct from the supreme self. 'The universe,' says Nilakantha, 'means earth,' &c., by which I suppose he means earth, heaven, quarters, mentioned directly afterwards.

⁸ Kaṭha, p. 293.

⁹ This figure is implied in the Îropanishad, p. 10.

¹⁰ 'Therefore it is endless,' says Saṅkara; and as to this, cf. Taittirîya, p. 51.

being is perceived by devotees. His form dwells in the unperceived¹; and those whose understandings are very well refined² perceive him. The talented man who has got rid (of affection and aversion) perceives (him) by the mind. Those who understand him³ become immortal. When one sees this self in all beings stationed in various places⁴, what should one grieve for after that⁵? The Brāhmaṇa has (as much interest) in all beings, as in a big reservoir of water, to which waters flow from all sides⁶. I alone am your mother⁷, father;

¹ 'In a sphere beyond the reach of perception,' says Saṅkara, who also quotes Kaṭha, p. 149, or Svetāśvatara, p. 347, where the same line also occurs.

² The original for understandings is sattva, which Saṅkara renders to mean antaḥkarāṇa. 'Refined,' he says, 'by sacrifices and other sanctifying operations.' In the Kaṭha at p. 148 sattva is rendered by Saṅkara to mean buddhi—a common use of the word.

³ 'As being,' says Saṅkara, 'identical with themselves.' It will be noted that the form of expression is slightly altered here. It is not 'those who understand this.'

⁴ I.e. in different aggregates of body, senses, &c. Cf. Gītā, pp. 104 and 124; also Kāṇḍogya, pp. 475-551.

⁵ Cf. Bṛihadāraṇyaka, p. 882; Saṅkara also refers to Īśopaniṣad, p. 14.

⁶ The words are pretty nearly the same as at Gītā, p. 48. Saṅkara says, the Brāhmaṇa 'who has done all he need do' has no interest whatever in any being, as he has none in a big reservoir, and he cites Gītā, p. 54, in support of this. One copy of Saṅkara, however, differs from this; that runs thus: 'As a person who has done all he need do, has no interest in a big reservoir of water, so to a Brāhmaṇa who sees the self in all beings, there is no interest in all the actions laid down in the Vedas, &c.; as he has obtained everything by mere perception of the self.' Nīlakaṇṭha's reading is exactly the same as at Gītā, p. 48.

⁷ Saṅkara says that Sanatsugāta states here his own experiences, like Vāmadeva (about whom there is a reference at Bṛihadāraṇyaka, p. 216) and others, to corroborate what he has already said. Cf. also Gītā, p. 83, as to the whole passage.

and I too am the son. And I am the self of all this—that which exists and that which does not exist¹. (I am) the aged grandfather of this, the father, and the son, O descendant of Bharata! You dwell in my self only². You are not mine, nor I (yours). The self only is my seat³; the self too is (the source of) my birth⁴. I am woven through and through⁵ (everything). And my seat is free from (the attacks of) old age⁶. I am unborn, moving about day and night, without sloth. Knowing (me), verily, a wise man remains placid⁷. More minute than an atom⁸, possessed of a good mind⁹, I am stationed within all beings¹⁰. (The wise) know the father of all beings to be placed in the lotus¹¹ (-like heart of every one).

¹ See Gitâ, p. 84. Nilakantha takes what exists to mean 'present,' and what does not exist to mean 'past and future.' Cf. Khândogya, p. 532.

² See Gitâ, p. 82, where there is also a similar apparent contradiction.

³ Cf. Khândogya, p. 518.

⁴ That is to say he is 'unborn,' says Nilakantha. Saṅkara seems to take 'my' with 'seat' only, and not with birth; for he says, 'everything has its birth from the self.'

⁵ Cf. Mundaka, p. 298; Maitrî, p. 84, and comment there.

⁶ Cf. Gitâ, pp. 77, 109, and Khândogya, pp. 535, 550.

⁷ See p. 192, note 2.

⁸ Cf. Gitâ, p. 78, and note 3 there.

⁹ I.e. a mind free from affection and aversion, hatred, &c., Saṅkara.

¹⁰ Cf. Gitâ, p. 113, and note 3; and also Īsopanishad, p. 12.

¹¹ Khândogya, p. 528; and cf. Gitâ, p. 113.

ANUGÎTÂ.

INTRODUCTION

TO ANUGÎTÂ.

LIKE the Bhagavadgîtâ and the Sanatsugâtîya, the Anugîtâ is one of the numerous episodes of the Mahâbhârata. And like the Sanatsugâtîya, it appears here for the first time in an English, or, indeed, it is believed, in any European garb. It forms part of the Asvamedha Parvan of the Mahâbhârata, and is contained in thirty-six chapters of that Parvan. These chapters—being chapters XVI to LI—together with all the subsequent chapters of the Asvamedha Parvan, form by themselves what in some of our copies is called the Anugîtâ Parvan—a title which affords a parallel to the title Bhagavadgîtâ Parvan, which we have already referred to. The Anugîtâ is not now a work of any very great or extensive reputation. But we do find some few quotations from it in the Bhâshyas of Saṅkarâcârya, and one or two in the Sâṅkhya-sâra of Viṣṇûna Bhikshu, to which reference will be made hereafter. And it is included in the present volume, partly because it affords an interesting glimpse of sundry old passages of the Upanishad literature in a somewhat modified, and presumably later, form; and partly, perhaps I may say more especially, because it professes to be a sort of continuation, or rather recapitulation, of the Bhagavadgîtâ. At the very outset of the work, we read, that after the great fratricidal war of the Mahâbhârata was over, and the Pândavas had become sole and complete masters of their ancestral kingdom, Krishna and Arguna—the two interlocutors in the Bhagavadgîtâ—happened to take a stroll together in the great magical palace built for the Pândavas by the demon Maya. In the course of the conversation which they held on the occasion, Krishna communicated to Arguna his wish to return to his own people at Dvârakâ, now that the business which had called him away from them was happily terminated. Arguna, of course, was unable to resist the execution of this wish ; but he requested Kṛishṇa, before leaving for Dvārakā, to repeat the instruction which had been already conveyed to him on 'the holy field of Kurukshetra,' but which had gone out of his 'degenerate mind.' Kṛishṇa thereupon protests that he is not equal to a verbatim recapitulation of the Bhagavad-gītā, but agrees, in lieu of that, to impart to Arguna the same instruction in other words, through the medium of a certain 'ancient story'—or purātana itihāsa. And the instruction thus conveyed constitutes what is called the Anugītā, a name which is in itself an embodiment of this anecdote.

Now the first question which challenges investigation with reference to this work is, if we may so call it, the fundamental one—how much is properly included under the name? The question is not one quite easy of settlement, as our authorities upon it are not all reconcilable with one another. In the general list of contents of the Asvamedha Parvan, which is given at the end of that Parvan in the edition printed at Bombay, we read that the first section is the Vyāsa Vākya, and the second the Saṃvartamaruttiya. With neither of these have we aught to do here. The list then goes on thus : ' Anugītā, Vāsudevāgamana, Brāhmaṇa Gītā, Gururishyasamvāda, Uttankopākhyāna,' and so forth. With the later sections, again, we are not here concerned. Now let us compare this list with the list which may be obtained from the titles of the chapters in the body of the work itself. With the sixteenth chapter, then, of the Asvamedha Parvan, begins what is here called the Anugītā Parvan ; and that chapter and the three following chapters are described as the sixteenth, seventeenth, eighteenth, and nineteenth chapters respectively of the Anugītā Parvan, which forms part of the Asvamedha Parvan. The title of the twentieth chapter contains a small, but important, addition. It runs thus, 'Such is the twentieth chapter of the Anugītā Parvan, forming part of the Asvamedha Parvan—being the Brahma Gītā.' This form is continued down to the thirty-fourth chapter, only Brāhmaṇa

Gītā being substituted for Brahma Gītā. At the close of the thirty-fifth chapter, there is another alteration caused by the substitution of Gurusishyasamvāda for Brāhmaṇa Gītā; and this continues down to the fifty-first chapter, where the thread of the narrative is again taken up—the philosophical parenthesis, if I may so say, having come to an end. With the fifty-first chapter our present translation also ends. Now it appears from the above comparison, that the list of contents set out above is accurate, save in so far as it mentions Vāsudevāgamaṇa as a distinct section of the Asvamedha Parvan. No such section seems to be in existence. And there appears to be nothing in the Asvamedha Parvan to which that title could be appropriately allotted. The edition printed at Madras agrees in all essential particulars with the Bombay edition; with this difference, that even at the close of the twentieth chapter, the name is Brāhmaṇa Gītā, and not Brahma Gītā as it is in the Bombay edition. The Calcutta edition also agrees in these readings. Turning now to a MS. procured for me by my excellent friend Professor Ābāṅī Vishṇu Kāthavāse at Ahmedabad, and bearing date the 15th of Phālguna Vadya 1823, Sunday, we find there at the end of the Asvamedha Parvan a list of contents like that which we have seen in the printed edition. The relevant portion of that list is as follows: 'Samvartamarut-tīya, Anugītā, Gurusishyasamvāda, and Uttankopākhyāna.' Here we find neither the erroneous entry of Vāsudevāgamaṇa, nor the correct entry of Brahma Gītā, which are both contained in the other list. In another MS. which I have now before me, and which has been lent me by Professor Bhāndārkar, who purchased it in Puṇa for the Government of Bombay—in this MS., which contains the commentary of Arguna Misra, the earlier chapters are described not as chapters of the Anugītā Parvan, but of the Anugītā contained in the Asvamedha Parvan, and they are numbered there as they are numbered in our translation, not continuously with the numbering of the previous chapters of the Asvamedha Parvan. At the close of chapter IV, we have an explicit statement that the Anugītā ends there. Then the Brahma Gītā begins. And the first chapter is described as a chapter of the Brahma Gitâ in the Asvamedha Parvan. The numbering of each of these chapters of the Brahma Gitâ is not given in the copy before us—the titles and descriptions of the various chapters being throughout incomplete. Some of the later chapters are described as chapters of the Brâhma Gitâ, and some as chapters of the Brâhmaṇa Gitâ; but this discrepancy is probably to be put to the account of the particular copyist who wrote out the copy used by us. With what is chapter XX in our numbering the Gurusishyasaṃvâda begins. This MS. omits all reference to any Anugîtâ Parvan, and fails to number the various chapters. Its list of sections agrees with that in the Bombay edition. It bears no date.

So much for what may be described as our primary sources of information on this subject. Let us now glance at the secondary sources. And, first, Nilakantha in commenting on what is, according to his numbering, chapter XV, stanza 43, apparently distinguishes that chapter from what he speaks of as the Brâhmaṇa Gitâ and Gurusishyasaṃvâda, which, as he implies, follow after that chapter—thus indicating that he accepted in substance the tradition recorded in the passages we have already set forth, viz. that the first four chapters of our translation form the Anugîtâ, the next fifteen the Brâhmaṇa Gitâ, and the last seventeen the Gurusishyasaṃvâda. This is also the view of Arguna Misra. At the close of his gloss on chapter IV, he distinctly states that the Anugîtâ ends at that chapter; and again at the close of the gloss on chapter XIX, he explicitly says that the Brâhmaṇa Gitâ ends there. He also adds the following interesting observation: 'The feminine form (Gitâ, namely) is used in consequence of (the word) Upanishad being feminine.' The full title of that part of the Mahâbhârata would then be, according to this remark of Arguna Misra, 'the Upanishads sung by the Brâhmaṇa,' a title parallel to that of the Bhagavadgîtâ, 'the Upanishads sung by the Deity.' It is to be further remarked, that the last chapter of the Gurusishyasaṃvâda is called in this commentary the eighteenth chapter of the Gurusishyasaṃvâda, a fact which seems to indicate that Arguna Misra either found in the MS. which he used, or himself established, a separate numbering for the chapters in the several sections¹ of which the Asvamedha Parvan is made up.

Although the information here set out from these various sources is not easily to be harmonised in all its parts, the preponderance of testimony seems to be in favour of regarding the portion of the Asvamedha Parvan embraced in our translation as containing three distinct sections, viz. the Anugītā, the Brāhmaṇa Gītā, and the Gurusishyasamvāda. And some indirect support for this conclusion may be derived from one or two other circumstances. In the Sāṅkhya-sāra of Vigñāna Bhikshu—a work which, as we shall see in the sequel, expressly mentions the Anugītā—we have a passage cited as from the 'Bhārata'² which coincides almost precisely with a passage occurring in chapter XXVII of our translation (see p. 335). And in the Bhāṣya of Saṅkarācārya on the Bhagavadgītā, chapter XV, stanza 1, we have a citation as from a 'Purāṇa' of a passage which coincides pretty closely with one which occurs in chapter XX of our translation (see p. 313). If the discrepancies between the quotations as given by Vigñāna Bhikshu and Saṅkara, and the passages occurring in our text, may be treated merely as various readings—and there is nothing inherently improbable in this being the case—it may be fairly contended, that neither Saṅkara nor Vigñāna Bhikshu would have used the vague expressions, 'a Purāṇa,' or even 'the Bhārata,' if they could have correctly substituted in lieu of them the specific name Anugītā. And this, it may be said, is a contention of some weight, when it is remembered, that both Saṅkara and Vigñāna show, in other parts of their writings, an acquaintance with this very Anugītā. If this reasoning is correct, the conclusion to be derived from it must be, that Saṅkara and Vigñāna must have considered the chapters of the Asvamedha Parvan from which their respective quotations are taken as not forming part of the Anugītā.

¹ In the beginning of his gloss on the Anugītā he says, that he proposes to explain difficult passages in the Anugītā, &c.—Anugītādīshu. And at the outset of his gloss on the whole Parvan he says, that in the Anugītā we have a statement of the miseries of birth, &c. as a protest against worldly life; in the Brāhma Gītā we have a recommendation of Prāvāṇa, &c.; and in the Gurusishyasamvāda we have a eulogium on the perception of the self as distinct from Prakṛiti or nature, and incidentally a protest against Pravṛtti or action.

² P. 21.

The testimony we have thus collected is apparently of considerable weight. Against it, however, we have to weigh some testimony which appears to me to be entitled, upon the whole, to even greater weight. In the Sāṅkhya-sāra of Vigñāna Bhikṣu, to which we have already referred, we have two quotations¹ from the Anugītā which are distinctly stated to be taken from that work. The first occurs in our translation at p. 332, the second at p. 313. Now, if we adopt the conclusion above referred to, regarding the correct titles of the thirty-six chapters which we have translated, it is a mistake to attribute the passages in question to the Anugītā. They would, on that view, form part of the Gurusishyasamvāda. Again, in his commentary on the Sanatsugātīya, Saṅkara refers to sundry passages which he expressly says are taken from the Anugītā, but which are not contained in the Anugītā as limited by the evidence we have considered above. One of the passages referred to is taken from chapter XI of our translation, and others are contained in the comments on Sanatsugātīya I, 6, and on I, 20 and I, 41². It is difficult to resist the conclusion to which this positive evidence leads. One cannot possibly explain this evidence upon the view which we have first stated; while, on the other hand, the points which apparently support that view are capable of some explanation on the theory that the Anugītā includes all the chapters here translated. And that in this wise. The passages which we have referred to as cited by Saṅkara and Vigñāna from a Purāṇa and from the Bhārata may have been actually taken from some other work than the Anugītā. Even waiving the fact that the readings are different,—though in regard especially to the quotation given by Saṅkara it is not one to be entirely lost sight of,—there is this fact which is of great and almost conclusive weight on such a point as this, namely, that we have many instances of passages common, almost verbatim et literatim, to the Mahābhārata and other works. For one instance, take the very passage on which a chronological argument has been founded by us in the Introduction to the Sanatsugāṭīya¹. It ought to have been there pointed out, that the stanza about a young man being bound to rise to receive an elderly person, occurs in the Manu Smṛiti² also in exactly the same words. The omission to note this circumstance in its proper place in the Introduction to the Sanatsugāṭīya was due to a mere inadvertence. But the conclusion there hinted at was expressed in very cautious language, and with many qualifications, out of regard to circumstances such as those which we are now considering. Similar repetitions may be pointed out in other places. The passage about the Kshetragña and Sattva and their mutual relations (see p. 374) occurs, as pointed out in the note there, in at least two other places in the Mahābhārata. The passage likewise which occurs in Gītā, p. 103, about the 'hands, feet, &c., on all sides,' is one which may be seen, to my own knowledge, in about half a dozen places in the Mahābhārata. Such cases, I believe, may be easily multiplied; and they illustrate and are illustrated by Mr. Freeman's proposition respecting the epic age in Greece, to which we have already alluded. It follows, consequently, that the quotations from Saṅkara and Viṅṇāna, to which we have referred above, do not militate very strongly against the final conclusion at which we have arrived. The testimony of the MSS. and the commentators is of considerably greater force. But Nilakanṭha, whatever his merits as an exegete—and even these are often marred by a persistent effort to read his own foregone conclusions into the text he comments on—Nilakanṭha is but an indifferent authority in the domain of historical criticism. In his commentary on the Sanatsugāṭīya, for instance, he tells us that he has admitted into his text sundry verses which were not in the copy used by Saṅkara, and for which he had none but a very modern voucher, and he very naively adds that he has done so on the principle of collecting all good things to a focus. Arguna Misra is a very much more satisfactory commentator. But he is not likely to be a writer of a very remote date. I assume, that he must be more recent than Saṅkarākārya, though I cannot say that I have any very tenable ground for the assumption. But assuming that, I think it more satisfactory to adopt Saṅkarākārya's nomenclature, and to treat the thirty-six chapters here translated as constituting the Anugītā. It is not improbable, if our assumption is correct, that the division of the thirty-six chapters in the manner we have seen may have come into vogue after the date of Vigñāna Bhikshu, who, according to Dr. F. E. Hall, 'lived in all probability in the sixteenth or seventeenth century, and whom there is some slight reason for carrying back still further¹.'

¹ Pp. 15, 21. The latter corresponds to Saṅkara's quotation above referred to.

² See p. 206 note.

¹ P. 139, and cf. p. 176 with Vishnu XXX, 44 seq.

² See II, 120.

Do these thirty-six chapters, then, form one integral work? Are they all the work of one and the same author? These are the questions which next present themselves for consideration. The evidence bearing upon them, however, is, as might be expected, excessively scanty. Of external evidence, indeed, we have really none, barring Saṅkara's statement in his commentary on the *Bṛihadāraṇyaka-upanishad*² that the verse which he there quotes from the Anugītā has Vyāsa for its author. That statement indicates that Saṅkara accepted the current tradition of Vyāsa's authorship of the Anugītā; and such acceptance, presumably, followed from his acceptance of the tradition of Vyāsa's authorship of the entire Mahābhārata. If that tradition is incorrect, and Vyāsa is not the author of the Anugītā, we have no means of ascertaining who is the author. And as to the tradition in question, it is difficult, in the present state of our materials, to form any satisfactory judgment. We therefore proceed at once to consider whether the Anugītā is really one work. And I must admit at the outset that I find it difficult to answer this question. There are certainly some circumstances connected with the work which might be regarded as indicating a different authorship of different parts of it. Thus in an early portion of the work, we find the first personal pronoun is used, where the Supreme Being is evidently intended to be signified, and yet the passage is not put into the mouth of Krishna, but of the Brāhmaṇa. A similar passage occurs a little later on also. Now it must be taken to be a somewhat strained interpretation of the words used in the passages in question to suppose that the speaker there used the first personal pronoun, identifying himself for the nonce with the Supreme Being¹. Again, in a passage still further on, we have the vocative O Pārtha! where the person addressed is not Arguna at all, but the Brāhmaṇa's wife. Now these lapses are susceptible of two explanations—either we are to see in them so many cases of 'Homer nodding,' or we may suppose that they are errors occasioned by one writer making additions to the work of a previous writer, without a vivid recollection of the framework of the original composition into which his own work had to be set². I own, that on balancing the probabilities on the one side and the other, my mind rather leans to the hypothesis of one author making a slip in the plexus of his own story within story, rather than the hypothesis of a deliberate interpolator forgetting the actual scheme of the original work into which he was about to foist his own additions³. And this the rather, that we find a similar slip towards the very beginning of the work, where we have the Brāhmaṇa Kāryapa addressed as Parantapa, or destroyer of foes—an epithet which, I think, is exclusively reserved for Kshatriyas, and is, in any case, a very inappropriate one to apply to a humble seeker for spiritual light. This slip appears to me to be incapable of explanation on any theory of interpolation⁴. And hence the other slips above noted can hardly be regarded as supporting any such theory. Another circumstance, not indeed bearing ¹ In fact the Brāhmaṇa is not identified with the Supreme Being afterwards. But that fact has not much bearing on the question here.

¹ See Preface, Sāṅkhya-sāra, p. 37.

² P. 234.

² Cf. Wilson's Darākumāravarita, Introd. p. 22.

³ The third alternative, that a work independently written was afterwards bodily thrown into the Mahābhārata, is one which in the circumstances here seems to me improbable.

⁴ See also pp. 235, 252, 299.

out that theory, but rendering interpolations possible, deserves to be noted. The scheme of the Anugītā certainly lends itself to interpolations. A story might without much difficulty be added to the series of story joined to story which it contains. Against this, however, it must not be forgotten, that the Sānti Parvan of the Mahābhārata and the Yogavāsishṭha exhibit a precisely similar framework of contents, and that the Pañkatantra and the Kathāsaritsāgara, among other works, follow the same model. And from this fact it may be fairly argued, that while there is, doubtless, room for suspecting interpolations in such cases, there is this to be remembered, that with respect to any particular one of these cases, such suspicion can carry us but a very short way. And further, it is to be observed, valeat quantum, that the connexion of the several chapters of the Anugītā one with the other is not altogether a loose one, save at one or two points only, while they are all linked on to the main body of the narrative, only in what we have treated as the last chapter of the Anugītā, without any trace of any other connecting link anywhere else. Upon the whole, therefore, we here conclude, though not without doubt, that the whole of the Anugītā is the work of one author.

The next question to be discussed is the important one of the age of the work. The quotations already given above from Saṅkarākārya's works, and one other which is referred to in the note below¹, suffice to show that the Anugītā must have been some few centuries old in the time of Saṅkarākārya. For whether we treat the Anugītā as a part of the original Mahābhārata or not, it is not likely that such a scholar as Saṅkara would have accepted the book as a genuine part of the Mahābhārata, and as a work of Vyāsa, if it had not been in his day of some respectable antiquity, of antiquity sufficient to have thrown the real author into oblivion, and to have substituted in his place Vyāsa, who lived at the junction of the Dvāpara and Kali ages¹, upwards of thirty centuries before the Christian era. The calculation is avowedly a very rough one, but I think we may, as the result of it, safely fix the third century of the Christian era as the latest date at which the Anugītā can have been composed. Let us now endeavour to find out whether we can fix the date as lying within any better defined period. It is scarcely needful to say, that the Anugītā dates from a period considerably subsequent to the age of the Upanishads. The passages relating to the Prāsaṃvāda and so forth, which occur originally in the Upanishads, are referred to in the Anugītā as 'ancient stories'—an indication that the Upanishads had already come to be esteemed as ancient compositions at the date of the latter work. It is not necessary, therefore, to go through an elaborate examination of the versions of the ancient stories alluded to above, as contained in the Upanishads and in the Anugītā, more especially because it is possible for us to show that the Anugītā is later than the Bhagavadgītā, which latter work, as we have seen, is later than the Upanishads. And to this point we shall now address ourselves. We have already observed upon the story referred to at the opening of this Introduction, which, historically interpreted, indicates the priority of the Bhagavadgītā to the Anugītā. This conclusion is confirmed by sundry other circumstances, which we must now discuss in some detail, as they are also of use in helping to fix the position of the work in the history of Sanskrit literature and philosophy. First, then, it seems to me, that the state of society mirrored in the Anugītā indicates a greater advance in social evolution than we have already seen is disclosed in the Bhagavadgītā. Not to mention decorations of houses and so forth, which are alluded to in one passage of the Anugītā, we are here told of royal oppressions, of losses of wealth accumulated with great difficulty, and of fierce captivities; we are told, to adapt the language of a modern English poet, of laws grinding the weak, for strong men rule the law; we have references to the casting of images with liquefied iron, and to the use of elephants as vehicles¹; and we meet with protests against the amusements of music and dancing, and against the occupation of artisans². True it is, that all these indications put together, fail to constitute what, according to the standard of modern times, would be called a highly artificial state of society. But it seems to me to mark a very perceptible and distinct advance beyond the social condition when mankind was divided into four castes or classes, with such a division of duties, to put it briefly, as that of preparation for a future world, government of this world, agriculture and trade, and service respectively³. Artisans, it will be observed, are not even referred to in the Bhagavadgītā, nor is there any trace of royal oppressions, or unequal laws. Then as regards music, it may be noted, that there are references to it in the Bṛhadāraṇyaka and *Kaushītaki-upanishads*⁴, without any indications of disapprobation. The protest against music, therefore, and the sister art of dancing, is probably to be explained as evoked by some abuses of the two arts which must have come into prevalence about the time of the composition of the Anugītā. A similar protest is found recorded in the Dharmaśāstras of Manu and Āpastamba and Gautama⁵. We shall consider in the sequel the chronological positions of the Anugītā with reference to those Dharmaśāstras. But we have already pointed out that the Gītā stands prior to them both⁶.

¹ See Saṅkara, Śāstraka Bhāṣya, p. 726. That, however, may be a quotation from some other work. It may be noted that the passages quoted in the Bhāṣya on Sanatsugātīya I, 20 and I, 41 are not to be traced in our copies, though expressly stated there to have been taken from the Anugītā.

¹ Cf. Śāstraka Bhāṣya, p. 913.

Look again at the views on caste which are embodied in the Anugītā and the Bhagavadgītā respectively. The reference to the Kshatriya as representing the quality of passion, while the Brāhmaṇa represents the quality of goodness⁷, seems to place a considerably larger distance between the Brāhmaṇa and the Kshatriya than is suggested by the Bhagavadgītā, and thus marks an advance in the direction of the later doctrine on the subject. And in connexion

¹ Cf. Lalita Vistara, p. 17.

² See pp. 325-365.

³ See Gītā, p. 126.

⁴ See Bṛhadāraṇyaka, p. 454, and Kaushītaki, p. 68.

⁵ See Buhler's Āpastamba I, 1, 3, 11, Gautama II, 13, and Manu II, 178.

⁶ P. 21 seq.

⁷ P. 329.

with this, perhaps, the discrepancy between the reading of the Bhagavadgītā at p. 85, and that of the Anugītā at p. 255, is not entirely without significance, though much weight would not be due to it, if it stood alone. The expression 'devoted royal sages,' which we find in the one work, makes way for 'well-read Kshatriyas who are intent on their own duties' in the other. Again, although the passage at p. 353 is undoubtedly susceptible of a different interpretation, it seems to me, that the word 'twice-born' there employed, was meant to be interpreted as meaning the Brāhmaṇas, and not the three twice-born castes; and if this interpretation is correct, we have here the very proposition upon the absence of which in the Bhagavadgītā we have already made some observations¹. That twice-born in the passage in question means Brāhmaṇa only, is, of course, not a proved fact. But having regard to the passages noted above and to the passage at p. 320, where reference is made to disparagement of Brāhmaṇas—it is not twice-born there—and in the same clause with disparagement of gods and Vedas, it seems to me that the interpretation we have suggested must be taken to be the true one. And it is to be further noted, that this conclusion is corroborated by a comparison of the passage now under consideration with a passage occurring in the Sānti Parvan², in the Rāgadharma section of it, where we read that 'the cow is the first among quadrupeds, gold among metals, a mantra among words, and the Brāhmaṇa is the first among bipeds.' The cow and gold occur in the passage in the Anugītā also, very near the clause we are now discussing. And it is allowable to argue, that reading the two together, twice-born in the Anugītā must be interpreted to be synonymous with Brāhmaṇa in the Rāgadharma. And the same conclusion is, to my mind, confirmed indirectly by comparing the clause 'the twice-born among men' of the Anugītā with 'the ruler of men among men' of that Bhagavadgītā, the teaching of which the former work professes to recapitulate.

¹ P. 24 supra.² See note at p. 353.

A similar inference seems to be derivable from a comparison of the specific doctrines as to the duties of Brâhmanas which are enunciated in the Gîtâ and the Anugîtâ. In the latter work, the famous six duties are expressly mentioned. We have already argued in our Introduction to the Gîtâ, that a comparison of the teaching of that work upon this point with the teaching of Âpastamba and Manu shows the former to have been older than the latter. The six duties mentioned in the Anugîtâ are those also mentioned by Manu and Âpastamba. It follows, therefore, that the Gîtâ is prior to the Anugîtâ also. Whether the Anugîtâ is prior or subsequent to Manu and Âpastamba, is a question which will have to be discussed in the sequel.

The net result of the whole of this comparison appears to me to clearly show the Anugîtâ to be a work of considerably more recent date than the Bhagavadgîtâ. What interval of time lay between the two, is a most interesting, but also a most difficult, question. The differences we have noted appear to me to indicate a pretty wide interval. If I am right in regarding the Gîtâ as a work of what may be called, for practical purposes, the age of the older Upanishads, I am inclined to think that the interval between the Gîtâ and the Anugîtâ must have been one of larger extent than even three or four centuries. For as we have already pointed out, the description of the various 'Itihâsas' mentioned in the Anugîtâ as 'purâtana'—ancient—points to at least three or four centuries having elapsed between the close of the Upanishad period and the composition of the Anugîtâ. It is obvious, however, that this result is not one with which we can rest satisfied. Even if it were more precise and accurate, it would only fix the age of the Anugîtâ with reference to the age of another work itself of unknown and unascertained date. We must therefore endeavour to compare the Anugîtâ with some other work, the date of which is better known. For this purpose, it seems to be not of any great use to refer to the Sâṅkhya and Yoga-sûtras, although it is not improbable that some materials might be forthcoming for a useful comparison between them and the Anugîtâ. Neither the Sâṅkhya nor the Yoga-sûtras can be said to have their ages fixed with even any approach to accuracy. And in the case of the Sāṅkhya-sūtras, there is the further difficulty presented by the circumstance, that there is room for very serious doubts as to whether the current Sūtras are really of the authorship of Kapila, or whoever else was the original founder of the system. With regard to the Yoga, one or two observations from a different point of view may not, however, be entirely out of place. At p. 248 the Yoga Sāstra is referred to eo nomine. What Sāstra is here alluded to? Is it Patañjali's, or some other Sāstra dealing with similar topics? Or, again, is it an entirely different matter that is alluded to, and are we not to see in the expression in question an allusion to any system formally propounded? I own, as stated in the note on the passage, that my mind inclines to the last view. There is not very much to say on either side of the question, as far as I am able to understand it. But the view I incline to appears to have one small circumstance in its favour. At p. 249 we have an allusion to persons who understand the Yoga, and to a certain illustration propounded by them. Now who are these persons? My limited knowledge of Yoga literature has not enabled me to trace the illustration anywhere else than in the Kaṭhopanishad, and in the Sanatsugātiya. It seems to me very unlikely, that the illustration can have been put forward in any work older than the Kaṭhopanishad. And we may, I think, assume it as most probable that the Sanatsugātiya borrowed it from that work. If so, it is not likely that the Anugītā can have referred to any other master of the Yoga than the author of the Kaṭhopanishad. And then it would seem to follow, that the Anugītā must have been composed at a time when, although the Upanishads were looked on with reverence and as works of authority, they were not yet regarded as part and parcel of the Vedic revelation¹. It is impossible not to perceive, that the train of reasoning here is at every stage hedged round with difficulties and doubts. And the inference therefore to which we are led by it must be accepted with proportionate caution. But if the reasoning is correct, it seems to be certain, that the Anugītā belongs to some period prior to the second, and probable, that it belongs to some period prior to the third century, before Christ. For in the second century before Christ was composed the Mahābhāṣya of Patañjali, in which Rahasyas—which is another name for Upanishads—are mentioned as forming part of the Vedic literature. And in Āpastamba's Dharma-sūtras, which are older than Patañjali, Upanishads¹ are mentioned in the same way. I am aware that it may be said, that because Upanishads as a class of works are mentioned by Patañjali and Āpastamba, it does not follow that any particular Upanishad, such as the Kaṭha, for instance, also existed at that time. This is quite true. But without going now into the general question, it is sufficient to point out, that our argument here is concerned merely with the recognition of the Upanishads as a class of works forming part of the Vedic canon. Such recognition must have come later than the period at which the Anugītā could speak of a passage in the Kaṭha-upanishad as the utterance of Yogavids, or persons who understood the Yoga.

¹ This seems to be also the implication of the passage at p. 309, where the rules for final emancipation are alluded to.

Turning now to the materials available for ascertaining the relative chronological positions of the Anugītā and the rise of Buddhism, we have again to complain of their unsatisfactory character. We will briefly note the two or three circumstances which appear to have a bearing upon this question. In the first place, we have the word Nirvāṇa used in one passage of the Anugītā in the sense of the highest tranquillity, and there the simile of the extinction of the fire is expressly adduced. On this it may be argued, that if the term Nirvāṇa had become the well-understood property of Buddhism, such a use of it as we find here would probably not have occurred. Again, we have the injunction that an ascetic must dwell in a town only for one day and no more, while he may stay at one place during the rains. This is very similar to an injunction prescribed by the Buddhistic teachers also. But this fact furnishes, I think, no safe ground for a chronological inference, more especially because, as pointed out by Dr. Bühler, the Buddhistic injunction is itself only borrowed from the Brahminical rules on the subject¹. It is impossible, therefore, to say that the Anugītā borrowed its doctrine from Buddhism. It is, of course, equally impossible on the other hand to say, that Buddhism borrowed its rule from the Anugītā. And, therefore, we can build no safe inference upon this fact either. We have next the very remarkable passage at chapter XXXIV, where various contradictory and mutually exclusive views of piety are stated, or rather passingly and briefly indicated—a passage which one most devoutly wishes had been clearer than it is. In that passage I can find no reference to Buddhism. True it is that Nilakantha's commentary refers some of the doctrines there stated to Buddhistic schools². But that commentary, unsatisfactory enough in other places, is particularly unsatisfactory here. And its critical accuracy may be judged from its reference to Saugatas and Yogā-kāras apparently as two distinct schools, whereas in truth the Saugatas are Buddhists, and Yogākāras one of the four principal Buddhist sects. And it must be further remembered, that the interpretations of Nilakantha, upon which his specifications of the different schools are based, are by no means such as necessarily claim acceptance. If then we do not find any reference to Buddhism in this passage, that fact becomes certainly a remarkable one. Still, on the other hand, I am not prepared to apply the 'negative argument' here, and to say that inasmuch as Buddhism is not referred to where so many different opinions are referred to, Buddhism cannot have come into existence at the date of the Anugītā. It seems to me that the argument will here be a very hazardous one, because if the author of the Anugītā was, as we may assume he was, an orthodox Hindu, he might well have declined, although not unacquainted with Buddhism, to put into the mouths of the seven sages even as a possible view, that which was the view of a school esteemed heretical by the author and his co-religionists. This passage, therefore, also fails to furnish any tangible ground for a chronological inference, at all events in the present state of our knowledge. Lastly, we come to the allusion to those who indulge in constant talk in disparagement of Vedas and Brāhmaṇas, the two being thus bracketed together in the original. That seems, at the first blush, to be a somewhat more distinct allusion to Buddhism than any of those we have noted above. But even that is not unambiguous. If the stanzas quoted by Mādhavākārya, in his Sarvadarsanasāṅgraha in its first section, are the composition of the original founder of the Kārvāka school, or even if they correctly represent the earliest opinions of that school, it is at least quite as likely that the Kārvākas were the target for the denunciations of the Anugītā in the passage in question as that the Buddhists were so. To me, indeed, it appears to be more likely. For Buddha's opinion with regard to the Vedas is, that they are inadequate; with regard to the Brāhmaṇas, that they are in no sense the chosen of God as they claim to be. The opinion of the Kārvākas, on the other hand, is a far more aggressive one, so to say. According to Mādhavākārya, they taught that the Vedas were either simple fatuity or imposture, and that the Brāhmaṇas were impostors. It seems to me much more likely, that this, which I have called a comparatively aggressive attitude, was the one at which the remarks of the Anugītā were levelled; and more especially does this appear to be correct when we remember, that the view taught by Gautama Buddha regarding the Vedas and the Brāhmaṇas was propounded by him only in its strongest form; and that even before his time, the doctrine of the inadequacy of the Vedas for the purpose of securing the summum bonum of humanity had been taught by other teachers. It is further to be recollected, that we have evidence showing that other thinkers also than Buddha, or Bṛhaspati, had in early days attacked the authority of the Vedas. Kautsa is the name of one who was probably the most distinguished among them. It is certainly possible that his followers were the people branded as of 'the dark quality' by the Anugītā in the passage in question. We have, therefore, at least two different recognised bodies of thinkers, and one individual thinker, to whom the words under discussion may apply, and it is plainly unsafe, under these circumstances, to draw any chronological inference based on the hypothesis of one particular body out of those three being the one intended by the author. Before closing this part of the investigation, it may be interesting to note, that the phrase 'turning the wheel,' a phrase now so familiar to us as one of the household words of Buddhism, is used in the Anugītā with respect to king Ganaka. I do not think, however, that either alone, or even coupled with the word Nirvāṇa, that phrase can be made the basis of any legitimate deduction in favour of the priority of the Anugītā to Buddhism. At the outside, the only deduction admissible, if any deduction were admissible, would be, that the Anugītā was composed prior to the recognition, of Nirvāṇa and Kakrapravartana as specially Buddhistic words. But priority to such recognition is not, I apprehend, necessarily synonymous with priority to the rise of Buddhism.

¹ They are also referred to in the Buddhistic Lalita Vistara, p. 63.

¹ See Gautama, pp. lv and 191. ² See also the gloss on chap. XXXIV, st. 14.

The net result of this part of the investigation appears to be, that we have pretty strong grounds for holding the Anugītā to belong to a period very considerably removed from the period of the Upanishads and the Bhagavadgītā; but that we have no tangible grounds on which to base any deduction regarding its priority or otherwise to the Sāṅkhya and Yoga systems of philosophy, or to the great movement of Gautama Buddha. There is only one other point, which we can establish in a not entirely unsatisfactory way, and which enables us to draw closer the limits within which the Anugītā must have been composed. That point is the position of the Anugītā with reference to Āpastamba's Dharma-sūtra. I need not say again, that I accept here the proposition about the age of Āpastamba which has been laid down by Dr. Bühler, as a sufficiently satisfactory working hypothesis. And accepting that proposition, I venture to suggest the fourth century B.C. as a not unlikely date for the Anugītā. It appears to me, that a comparison of the Anugītā and the rules of Āpastamba upon one important point which they both deal with shows the priority of the former work. I allude to the rules and regulations touching the four Āśramas or orders contained in the Anugītā and in the Dharma-sūtra of Āpastamba. One circumstance strikes us at once on comparing the two works on this point. Āpastamba goes into a very great deal of minute details more than the Anugītā, although the latter work does not deal with the topic in any very summary mode. Taking all the differences between the two works together, and the fact that the Anugītā sets about the discussion of the topic in a manner which seems intended to be—not, indeed, absolutely exhaustive, but still—very full, I am very strongly inclined to attribute the differences to an actual development and progress of doctrine. I will endeavour to illustrate this view by means of a few detailed instances¹. And let us first take the order of householders to which the Anugītā gives precedence over the others. One of the injunctions laid down by the Anugītā is that the householder should always be devoted to his wife. Against this simple precept, we have a very minute series of rules prescribed by Āpastamba, which it is not necessary to refer to specifically, but which may be seen in several of the Sūtras contained in the first Khanda of the first Pāṭala of the second Prasna. Compare again the excessive minuteness of the rules regarding the Bali-offering or the reception of guests, as given by Āpastamba, with the simple statement of the Anugītā that the five great sacrifices should be performed. There again, I think, we are to see in this difference of treatment the result of a pretty long course of ceremonial progress. Proceeding to the rules regarding the Brahmacārin or student, an analogous phenomenon meets us there. Taking first the subject of food, we have a considerable number of detailed injunctions in Āpastamba, compared with the simple rule of the Anugītā, that the student should, with the leave of his preceptor, eat his food without decrying it. Again with regard to alms, whereas the Anugītā simply says that the student should take his food out of the alms received by him, Āpastamba has an elaborate catena of rules as to how the alms are to be collected, and from whom, and so forth. Take again the provisions in the two works regarding the description of the cloth, staff, and girdle of the student. Āpastamba refers to various opinions on this subject, of which there is not even a trace in the Anugītā¹. It appears that even before Āpastamba's time, distinctions had been laid down as to the description of girdle staff and cloth to be used by the different castes—distinctions of which there is no hint in the Anugītā, where all students, of whatever caste, are spoken of under the generic name. These distinctions appear to me to point very strongly to that ceremonial and doctrinal progress of which we have spoken above. The tendency is visible in them to sever the Brāhmaṇas from the other castes—by external marks. And that tendency, it seems to me, must have set in, as the merits which had given the Brāhmaṇa caste its original position at the head of Hindu society were ceasing to be a living reality, and that caste was intrenching itself, so to say, more behind the worth and work of the early founders of its greatness, than the worth and work of their degenerating representatives. These comparisons, taken together, appear to me to warrant the proposition we have already laid down with regard to the priority of the Anugītā to Āpastamba. If we have not referred to the rules relating to the two other orders of forester and ascetic, it is because the scope for a comparison of those is very limited. Those rules alone would scarcely authorise the inference drawn above; but I can perceive nothing in them to countervail the effect of the comparisons already made. And it must be remembered, that the rules as to foresters and ascetics would be less apt to undergo change than those as to students and householders.

¹ Cf. pp. 358, 360 infra with Āpastamba, pp. 9 seq., 103 seq., 114 seq.

It appears to me that the view we have now expressed may be also supported by a comparison of the doctrines of the Anugītā and Āpastamba touching the duties of Brāhmaṇas. According to Āpastamba, the occupations lawful to Brāhmaṇas are the famous six referred to in our Introduction to the Bhagavadgītā, and two others superadded, namely, inheritance and gleanings in the fields. These last are not mentioned in the Anugītā, or in Manu either, and are, even according to Āpastamba, common to Brāhmaṇas with Kshatriyas and Vaisyas. But as regards the six above referred to, it is worthy of note, that the Anugītā apparently groups them into two distinct sets of three. The first set of three consists of those which, in our Introduction to the Bhagavadgītā, we have characterised as constituting rather the rights than the duties of Brāhmaṇas, and which the Anugītā describes as 'means of livelihood for Brāhmaṇas.' The other set of three consists of real duties, and these the Anugītā speaks of as 'pious duties.' This grouping appears to me to furnish powerful corroboration of the view put forward in our Introduction to the Bhagavadgītā. It would seem, that the possession of the moral and spiritual merits which, according to the Gītā, constituted the duty of Brāhmaṇas, in the simple and archaic society there disclosed, was developed, in a more advanced and artificial state of society, into the performance of the 'pious duties' of the Anugītā and the duties which are 'the means of livelihood.' Then in the further social evolution, in the course of which the old spiritual view began to be forgotten, and the actual facts of the past began to be transmuted into the dogmatic rules of the future, the occupations of receiving presents, imparting instruction, and officiating at sacrifices, became the special occupations of the Brāhmaṇas, and the distinction between these occupations from their higher duties was thrown into the background; and accordingly we find no allusion to any such distinction in Āpastamba or Manu, or, as far as I know, in any other later embodiment of the current ideas on the subject¹. If all this has been correctly argued, the conclusion derivable from it is in entire accord with that which we have already drawn, namely, that the Bhagavadgītā, the Anugītā, and the Dharma-sūtra of Āpastamba, belong to different stages of ancient Indian history, and that the stage to which the Gîtâ belongs is the earliest, and that to which Āpastamba belongs, the latest of such stages.

¹ Cf. also Bühler's Gautama, p. 175.

¹ In Gautama X, 1 3, the 'pious duties' are called 'obligatory,' the others 'additional for Brāhmaṇas.' See the note on the passage in Bühler's edition, and cf. Gautama VIII, 9, 10.

I am unable to find anything else in the way of internal evidence bearing upon the date of the Anugîtâ. It appears to me, that the date to which the investigation we have now gone through leads us, is one which, in the present state of our information, may be fairly accepted as a provisional hypothesis. It does not appear to me to conflict with any ascertained dates, while it is pointed to as probable by the various lines of testimony which we have here considered. We now proceed to discuss one or two other points which may have a bearing upon this topic, but which at present cannot yield us any positive guidance in our search for the date of the Anugîtâ. And first among these, let us consider the various names of deities that occur in different parts of the work. We have, then, Vishṇu, Sambhu, Gishṇu, Soma, Āditya, Sūrya, Mitra, Agni, Kandra, Rudra, Siva, Varuṇa, Pragāpati, Maghavat, Purandara, Indra, Brahman, Satakratu, Dharma, Nārāyaṇa, Vāyu, Yama, Tvashṭri, Hari, Īsvara, and lastly Umā under three different names, namely, Umā, Māhesvari, and Pārvatī. Now, leaving aside for the moment the three names of Umā, which appear from the passage where they are used to be all three the names of the same goddess, there is no doubt that in the list above set out, some of the names are merely used in different passages, but still to indicate the same being. Thus, Indra, Satakratu, Purandara, and Maghavat are really the names of one and the same deity. But when Soma is mentioned as the deity presiding over the tongue, and Kandramas as the deity presiding over the mind, it becomes doubtful whether the two names do really indicate the same deity, albeit in later Sanskrit Soma and Kandramas both signify the moon. Similarly, when Arka is said to be the deity presiding over the eye, and Mitra over another organ, it seems open to question whether Arka and Mitra both signify the sun there, as they undoubtedly do in classical Sanskrit. True it is, that even in such a recent work as the Sāṅkhya-sāra, this mention of Arka and Mitra as presiding deities of two several organs does occur. But it is plain, that that circumstance can have no bearing on the inquiry before us, for the Sāṅkhya-sāra is avowedly a compilation based on older authorities, and in the particular part under consideration, really reproduces a passage from some older work. It cannot, therefore, be argued, that because Arka and Mitra were identified with one another at the time of the Sāṅkhya-sāra, and yet are mentioned as deities of two separate organs, therefore, they must have also been regarded as one in the older original work where they are also mentioned as deities of two separate organs. And it may, perhaps, be remarked here in passing, that the Vedānta Paribhāṣhā has Mṛityu instead of Mitra, which would get rid of the difficulty here altogether ; while as regards Soma and Kandra-mas, the passage in the Sāṅkhya-sāra reads Praketas instead of Soma, which would get rid of the other difficulty above pointed out. Whether these discrepancies are owing to any tampering with the lists of organs and deities, at a time when the later identifications between different deities took place, or whether they are to be explained on some other theory, it is impossible at present to say. And, therefore, it is also unnecessary to pursue the inquiry here any further. It must suffice for the present to have drawn attention to the matter.

Akin to this point, though quite distinct from it, is one which arises on a passage where the emancipated being is identified with Vishṇu, Mitra, Agni, Varuṇa, and *Prajāpati*¹. Now it is reasonable to suppose, that the deities thus specified here must have been among those held in highest repute at the time, the whole significance of the passage where they are mentioned requiring that that should be so. But in our Pantheon as disclosed by our later literature, Mitra and Agni and Varuṇa occupy but a very subordinate position. Even in *Kālidāsa*², the subordination of these deities to our celebrated Trinity seems to be quite fully established. But, on the other hand, in the Vedic theogony, they are among the most prominent deities. In the Taittiriya-upanishad, we have in the very first sentence Mitra, Varuṇa, Vishṇu, and Brahman (who may be identified with Pragāpati) all mentioned together, and their blessings invoked. This does not help in fixing a date for the Anugītā; but it lends some support to the conclusion already arrived at on that point, by showing that the theogony of the Anugītā is not yet very far removed from the theogony of the Vedic times, while it is separated by a considerable interval from the theogony disclosed in the works of even such an early writer of the classical period as Kālidāsa.

¹ See p. 345.

² See inter alia, Kumāra II, 20 seq., and VII, 44 seq., and cf. our Bhartṛhari (Bombay Sanskrit Classics), Introd. p. xix.

Another point of similar bearing on our present investigation is the mode in which the story of Parasurāma is dealt with in the Anugītā. There is in the first place no allusion to his being an incarnation of Vishṇu, nor to the encounter between him and his namesake, the son of Dasaratha and the hero of the Rāmāyana. We have, on the contrary, an explicit statement, that after the advice of the 'Pitris' he entirely abandons the slaughter of the Kshatriyas, and resorting to penance thereby achieves final emancipation. We have elsewhere argued¹, that the theory of Parasurāma being an incarnation of Vishṇu, must have probably originated prior to the time of Bhartrihari, but later than the time of Kālidāsa. The allusion to Parasurāma in the work before us does not, however, enable us to judge of its chronological position with reference to Kālidāsa. But the last point discussed renders it unnecessary to consider this question further. It may be noted, by the way, that the Anugītā represents Parasurāma, although living in the Āsrama or hermitage of his father, who was a Rishi, as mounting a chariot for the purpose of sweeping away the kinsmen of Kārtavīrya. Whence he obtained a chariot in a hermitage, the Anugītā does not explain.

In connexion with the episode of Parasurāma, may be noted the list which occurs in the course of it, of the degraded Kshatriya tribes, of Dravidas, Sabaras, &c. I am unable to see that those names can give us any further help in our present investigation than in so far as they show that, at the time of the Anugitā, there must have been some information about the south of India available in the districts where the author of the Anugitā lived. Some of the tribes mentioned appear to have been located far in the south of the Indian peninsula. But this is a point on which we shall have to say something more in discussing the next item of internal evidence to which we shall refer. Here it is enough to point out that some of the tribes mentioned in the Anugitā are also referred to in no less a work than the Aitareya-brāhmaṇa¹.

¹ See 'Was the Rāmāyana copied from Homer?' pp. 56, 57.

We come next to the enumeration of the principal mountains which is contained in one passage of the Anugitā. Those mountains are the Himālaya, the Pāriyātra, the Sahya, the Vindhya, the Trikūṭavat, the Sveta, the Nīla, the Bhāsa, the Koshīṭavat, the Mahendra, the Mālyavat, and perhaps the Guruskandha. I am not sure whether the last name is intended to be taken as a proper name, or only as an epithet of Mahendra. Now compared with the mountains mentioned in the Bhagavadgītā, this is certainly a remarkable list. The Gītā mentions only Meru² and Himālaya; while here we have in the Anugitā the Sahya, and Malaya, and Trikūṭavat, and Nīla (the same, I presume, with the modern Nilgiri, the Sanatorium of the Madras Presidency), which take us far to the west and south of the Indian peninsula; and the Mahendra and Mālyavat, which, coupled with the mention of the river Ganges, cover a considerable part of the eastern districts. The Pāriyātra and Vindhya occupy the regions of Central India. The Anugitā, therefore, seems to belong to that period in the history of India, when pretty nearly the whole, ¹ Haug's ed., p. 183. And see generally on these tribes, Wilson's Vishnu Purāṇa (Hall's ed., vol. ii, p. 170 seq., and Sānti Parvan (Moksha), chap. 207, st. 42.

² This is also mentioned in the Anugitā, but in a different passage. The Nīla is said by Professor Wilson to be a mountain in Orissa. But our suggestion has, I find, been already made by Dr. F. E. Hall also: see on this, and generally, Wilson's Vishnu Purāṇa, vol. ii, p. 141 seq. (ed. Hall). See also Indian Antiquary, VI, 133 seq.

if not absolutely the whole, of the Indian continent was known to the Sanskrit-speaking population of the country. When was this knowledge reached? It is difficult to fix the precise period; and even if it could be fixed, it would not help us to fix satisfactorily any point of time to which the Anugītā could be attributed. But it may be pointed out here, that in Patañjali's Mahābhāṣya we have evidence of such knowledge having been possessed by the Āryas in the second century B.C. In truth, the evidence available in the Mahābhāṣya is even fuller than this in the Anugītā. For Patañjali tells us of a town or city in the south named *Kāñkīpura*¹; he speaks of the dominions of the Pāṇḍya kings, and of the Kōla and Kerala districts²; he refers also to the large tanks of the south; and he makes allusions to linguistic usages current in the southern and other provinces³. Before Patañjali's time there had taken place Mahendra's invasion of Ceylon, and the invading army must have penetrated through the southern provinces. And there had been also put up the great Inscriptions of Asoka, which have attracted so much interest, and are proving such prolific sources of information in various departments of knowledge. One of these inscriptions was at Gaṅgam, which is not very far from the Mahendra mountain alluded to in the *Anugītā*⁴. All these facts support the conclusion drawn by General Cunningham from the correctness of the information given to Alexander the Great by the Hindus of his time, namely, that 'the Indians, even at that early date in their history, had a very accurate knowledge of the form and extent of their native land⁵.' And not only do they support that conclusion, they show that the knowledge covered other facts regarding

¹ Banāras ed., p. 74 (IV, 2, 2).

² P. 60 (IV, 1, 4). See also p. 65.

³ See Mahābhāṣya, p. 82 (I, 1, 5), p. 16 (I, 1, 1); and cf. Muir, Sanskrit Texts, vol. ii, pp. 152, 355.

⁴ See Cunningham's Corpus Inscriptionum, I, p. 1.

⁵ See Ancient Geography of India, p. 3. And compare also the information collected in the Periplus of the Euxine Sea (translated by Mr. McKindle), pp. 112-136, where a large number of ports is mentioned as existing on the Indian coasts. The Periplus seems to date from about 90 A.D. see ibid. p. 5).

their native land than its form and extent. It follows consequently that this enumeration of mountains does not require the date of the Anugītā to be brought down to a later period than the fourth century B.C., and leaves it open to us, therefore, to accept whatever conclusion the other evidence available may seem to justify. On the other hand, it is plain also, that it affords no positive information as to when the Anugītā was composed, and therefore we need not dwell any further upon the point on the present occasion.

There are a few other points which arise upon the contents of the Anugītā, but which are not, in the present condition of our knowledge, capable of affording any certain guidance in our present investigation. Thus we have the story of Dharma appearing before king Ganaka disguised as a Brāhmaṇa. I am not aware of any case of such disguises occurring in any of the Upanishads, although there are numerous parallel instances throughout the Purāṇik literature¹. It is, however, difficult to draw any definite chronological inference from this fact. There is further the reference to the attack of Rāhu on the sun. It is difficult, in the present state of our knowledge, to say for certain, when the theory of eclipses there implied was prevalent. In the *Khândogya-upanishad*² we have the emancipated self compared to the moon escaped from the mouth of Rāhu. And a text of the Rig-veda, quoted by Mr. Yagñesvara Sāstrin in his *Ārya-vidyāsudhākara*³, speaks of the demon Rāhu attacking the sun with darkness. Here again we have another matter of some interest; but I cannot see that any safe deduction can be derived from it, without a more ample knowledge of other relevant matters than is at present accessible. Take again the references to certain practices which look very much like the practices of the Gainas of the present day. Is the Anugītā, then, earlier or later than the rise of the Gaina system? It is not safe, I think, to found an answer to this question upon the very narrow basis afforded by the passage referred to. But it may be observed, that the precepts laid down in the passage in question are laid down as precepts for orthodox Hindus, and not as the doctrines of a heretical sect. They are also very general, and not so minute as those which the Gainas of the present day observe as binding upon them. If, therefore, any conclusion is to be drawn from these precepts, it must be that the Anugītā must have been composed prior to the rise of Gainism; and that Gainism must have appropriated and developed this doctrine which it obtained from the current *Brāhmanism*¹. If this is so, the Anugītā must be a very ancient work indeed. It is not, however, necessary to further work out this line of argument, having regard to the opinions recently expressed by Mr. Thomas², rehabilitating the views enunciated long ago by Colebrooke and others. If those views are correct, and if Gainism was a dominant system in this country prior even to the time of Gautama Buddha, and if, further, we are right in the suggestion—for it is no more, it must be remembered—that the Anugītā dates from a period prior to the rise of Gainism, then it would seem to follow that the Anugītā belongs to some period prior to the sixth century B.C. All this, however, is at present very hypothetical, and we draw attention to it only that the question may be hereafter considered when fuller materials for expressing a final judgment upon it become accessible. Meanwhile, having regard to the views above alluded to as so elaborately put forward by Mr. Thomas, it is possible for us still to hold that, in the present state of our knowledge, the third or fourth century B.C. is not too early a date to assign to the Anugītā, even on the assumption that the precepts contained in that work regarding the care to be taken of worms and insects were borrowed by it from the Gaina system. With this negative result, we must for the present rest contented.

¹ And see, too, Kālidāsa Kumāra V, st. 84.

² P. 622.

³ P. 26. In Kālidāsa's Raghuvamśa the true explanation of eclipses is alluded to. See Canto XIV, 40.

One other fact of similar nature to those we have now

¹ As the Buddhists did in sundry instances. Cf. inter alia Buhler's Gautama, pp. lv and 191. And cf. also 'Was the Kāmāyāna copied from Homer?' pp. 48, 49.

² See Mr. Thomas's very elaborate discussion of the whole subject in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society (New Series), vol. ix, p. 155 seq.

dealt with may, perhaps, be also noticed here. We allude to the stanzas which we find in the Anugītā and also in the Sānti Parvan of the Mahābhārata and in the Manusmṛiti. There is also one which the Anugītā has in common with the Parisishṭa of Yāska's Nirukta¹. It is not possible, I conceive, to say finally whether one of these works borrowed these stanzas from the other of them; while, on the other hand, it is quite possible, as already argued by us in the Introduction to the Gītā, that all these works were only reproducing from some entirely different work, or that the stanzas in question were the common property of the thinkers of the time. We have no means available for deciding between these conflicting hypotheses.

We have thus noticed all the salient points in the evidence, external and internal, which is available for determining the position of the Anugītā in our ancient literature. Nobody who has seen even a little of the history of that literature will be surprised at the quantity or quality of that evidence, or the nature of the conclusions legitimately yielded by it. We have endeavoured to express those conclusions in language which should not indicate any greater certainty attaching to them than can fairly be claimed for them. The net result appears to be this. The Anugītā may be taken with historical certainty to have been some centuries old in the time of the great Saṅkarācārya. It was very probably older than the Dharma-sūtras of Āpastamba, but by what period of time we are not in a position at present to define. It was, perhaps, older also than the rise of Buddhism and Jainism, and of the Yoga philosophy; but on this it is impossible to say anything with any approach to confidence. It is, on the other hand, almost certain that it belongs to a period very considerably removed from the older Upanishads; probably removed by a distance of some centuries, during which 'stories' not contained in the Upanishads had not only obtained currency, but also come to be regarded as belonging to antiquity². And yet the period to which the work belongs was one in which the Upanishads were only revered as the authoritative opinions of eminent men, not as the words of God himself¹. In this respect, it may be said that the Anugītā seems rather to belong to an earlier stratum of thought than even the Sanatsugātiya, in which a Gṛānakānda, as forming a part of the Vedic canon, seems to be recognised². But it is abundantly clear, that the Anugītā stands at a very considerable chronological distance from the Bhagavadgītā.

¹ Cf. Anugītā I, 36 with Yāska (ed. Roth), p. 190.

² Some of the Purātana Itihāsas, e.g. that of Nārada and Devamata, are not traceable in any Vedic work known to us. Devamata's name I do not find referred to anywhere else.

Such are the results of our investigation. We have not thought it necessary to discuss the verse or the language of the work. But it must in fairness be pointed out, that upon the whole, the verse and language are both pretty near the classical model. There are, it is true, a few instances of the metrical anomalies we have noticed elsewhere, but having regard to the extent of the work, those instances are far from being very numerous. The language and style, too, are not quite smooth and polished; though, judging from them alone, I should rather be inclined to place the Sanatsugātiya prior to the Anugītā. But that suggests a question which we cannot now stop to discuss.

One word, in conclusion, about the translation. The text used has been chiefly that adopted in the commentary of Arguna Misra, a commentary which on the whole I prefer very much to that of Nilakanṭha, which has been printed in the Bombay edition of the Mahābhārata. Arguna Misra, as a rule, affords some explanation where explanation is wanted, and does not endeavour to suit his text to any foregone conclusion. His comments have been of the greatest possible help to me; and my only regret is that the only copy of his commentary which was available to me, and the use of which I owe to the kindness of my friend Professor Bhāndārkar, was not as correct a one as could be desired. I have also looked into the Vishamasloki, a short work containing notes on difficult passages of the Mahābhārata.

¹ See p. 211 supra.

² See p. 146 supra. The Buddhists seem to have borrowed the division of Karma and Gṛānakānda. See Dr. Ragendralāla Mitra's Lalitā Vistara (transl.), p. 21. The division, therefore, was probably older than the first century B. C.

The MS. of it belonging to the Government Collection of MSS. deposited in Deccan College was lent me also by Professor Bhândārkar. The principles adopted in the translation and notes have been the same as those followed in the other pieces contained in this volume.

P. S. I take this opportunity of stating that it is not at all certain that Arguna Misra is the name of the author of the commentary which I have used. I find that in supposing Arguna Misra to be the author, I confounded that commentary, which does not mention its author's name, with the commentary on another section of the Mahābhārata which does give its author's name as Arguna Misra, and which is also among the MSS. purchased by Professor Bhândārkar for the Government of Bombay. (See with regard to these MSS. Professor Bhândārkar's Report on the Search for Sanskrit MSS. of 7th July, 1880.)

ANUGĪTĀ.

CHAPTER I.

Ganamegaya¹ said :

What conversation, O twice-born one²! took place between the high-souled Kesava and Arguna, while they dwelt in that palace³ after slaying their enemies?

Vaisampāyana said :

The son of Prithā, after becoming possessed of his kingdom (in an) undisturbed (state), enjoyed himself in the company of Kṛishṇa, full of delight in that heavenly palace. And once, O king! they happened to go, surrounded by their people, and rejoicing, to a certain portion of the palace which resembled heaven. Then Arguna, the son of Pāṇdu, having surveyed with delight that lovely palace, in the company of Kṛishṇa, spoke these words: 'O you of mighty arms! O you whose mother is Devakī⁴! when the battle was about to commence, I became aware of your greatness, and that divine

¹ This is the prince to whom the Mahābhārata, as we have it, purports to have been related.

² I. e. Vairampāyana, who relates the Mahābhārata to Ganamegaya.

³ This appears to have been situated at Indraprastha, and to have been the one built for the Pāṇdavas by the demon Maya, as related in the Sabhā Parvan.

⁴ This is a rather unusual form of address.

form of yours¹. But that, O Kesava! which through affection (for me) you explained before², has all disappeared, O tiger-like man! from my degenerate mind. Again and again, however, I feel a curiosity about those topics. But (now), O Mādhava! you will be going at no distant date to Dvārakā.'

Vaisampāyana said :

Thus addressed, that best of speakers, Kṛishṇa, possessed of great glory, replied in these words after embracing Arguna.

Vāsudeva said :

From me, O son of Prithā! you heard a mystery, and learnt about the eternal³ (principle), about piety in (its true) form, and about all the everlasting worlds⁴. It is excessively disagreeable to me, that you should not have grasped it through want of intelligence. And the recollection (of it) now again is not possible (to me). Really, O son of Pāṇḍu! you are devoid of faith and of a bad intellect. And, O Dhanañgaya! it is not possible for me to repeat in full (what I said before). For that doctrine was perfectly adequate for understanding the seat⁵ of the Brahman. It is not possible for me to state it again in full in that way. For then accompanied by my mystic power⁶, I declared to you the Supreme Brahman. But I shall relate an ancient story upon

¹ Cf. Bhagavadgītā, chapters X and XI passim.

² I.e. in the Bhagavadgītā.

This may also be taken with piety thus : 'and learnt about the eternal piety in (its true) form.'

³ As to the plural, see Saṅkara on Mundaka, p. 320.

⁴ Cf. Gītā, p. 78. For 'understanding' here we might, perhaps, substitute 'attaining.' The original word means both understanding and attaining.

⁶ Cf. Gītā, p. 82.

that subject, so that adhering to this knowledge, you may attain the highest goal. O best of the supporters of piety ! listen to all that I say. (Once), O restrainer of foes ! there came from the heavenly world and the world of Brahman¹, a Brāhmaṇa difficult to withstand², and he was (duly) honoured by us. (Now) listen, without entertaining any misgivings, O chief of the descendants of Bharata ! O son of Prithā ! to what he said on being interrogated by us according to heavenly rules³.

The Brāhmaṇa said :

O Krishna ! O destroyer of Madhu ! I will explain to you accurately what you, out of compassion for (all) beings⁴, have asked me touching the duties (to be performed) for final emancipation. It is destructive of delusion, O Lord ! Listen to me with attention⁵, as I relate it, O Mādhava ! A certain Brāhmaṇa named Kāśyapa, who had performed (much) penance, and who best understood piety, approached a certain twice-born (person) who had learnt the Scriptures relating to (all) duties⁶, having heard (of him, as one) who had over and over again gone through all knowledge and experience about coming and going⁷, who was well versed in the true nature of all worlds⁸,

¹ This seems to mean not the Supreme Brahman, but the Creator.

² Cf. Sanatsugātiya, p. 161, 'not to be shaken.'

³ I suppose this to mean according to the forms proper in the case of such a being as the one in question. Cf. Gītā, p. 62, and note there.

⁴ This is not easy to understand. Perhaps the allusion is to the doctrine at Gītā, pp. 54, 55. ⁵ Cf. Bṛhadāraṇyaka, p. 447.

⁶ I.e. all prescribed acts of piety.

⁷ As to knowledge and experience, cf. Gītā, p. 57 ; and as to coming and going, cf. ibid. p. 84.

⁸ I.e. as stated, for instance, at Gītā, p. 79, or Bṛhadāraṇyaka, p. 613.

who knew about happiness and misery¹, who knew the truth about birth and death², who was conversant with merit and sin, who perceived the migrations of embodied (souls) of high and low (degrees) in consequence of (their) actions, who moved about like an emancipated being, who had reached perfection³, who was tranquil, whose senses were restrained, who was illumined with the Brahmic splendour⁴, who moved about in every direction, who understood concealed movements⁵, who was going in company of invisible Siddhas and celestial singers⁶, and conversing and sitting together (with them) in secluded (places), who went about as he pleased, and was unattached (anywhere) like the wind. Having approached him, that talented ascetic possessed of concentration (of mind), that best of the twice-born, wishing to acquire piety, fell at his feet, after seeing that great marvel. And amazed on seeing that marvellous man, the best of the twice-born, Kāśyapa, pleased the preceptor by his great devotion. That was all appropriate⁷, (being) joined to sacred learning and correct conduct. And, O terror of your foes! he pleased that (being) by (his purity of) heart and behaviour (suitable) towards a preceptor⁸. Then being satisfied and pleased, he spoke to the pupil these words, referring to the

¹ Cf. infra, p. 245.

² Cf. Gītā, pp. 48, 103.

³ Cf. Gītā, passim.

⁴ Cf. Sanatsugātīya, p. 162.

⁵ I. e. moving about so as not to be seen by everybody.

⁶ Literally, 'holders of wheels,' which Arguna Misra interprets to mean 'Kārawas.' At Sānti Parvan (Moksha Dharma) CCXLIV, 26 Nilakantha renders Kakradhara by Kakravartin or Emperor.

⁷ I. e. as Kāśyapa was possessed of Vedic lore, and behaved as he ought to behave in his capacity of pupil, it was natural that the other should be pleased.

⁸ See p. 176 seq. supra.

highest perfection. Hear (them) from me, O Ganârdana !

The Siddha said :

Mortals, O dear friend¹ ! by their actions which are (of) mixed (character), or which are meritorious and pure, attain to this world as the goal, or to residence in the world of the gods². Nowhere is there everlasting happiness; nowhere eternal residence³. Over and over again is there a downfall from a high position attained with difficulty. Overcome by lust and anger, and deluded by desire, I fell into uncomfortable and harassing states (of life), in consequence of (my) committing sin. Again and again death, and again and again birth⁴. I ate numerous (kinds of) food, sucked at various breasts, saw various mothers, and fathers of different sorts; and, O sinless one ! (I saw) strange pleasures and miseries. Frequently (I suffered) separation from those I loved, association with those I did not love. Loss of wealth also came on me, after I had acquired that wealth with difficulty; ignominies full of affliction from princes and likewise from kinsmen; excessively poignant pain, mental and bodily. I also underwent frightful indignities, and fierce deaths and captivities; (I had a) fall into hell, and torments in the house of Yama⁵. I also suffered much from old age, continual ailments, and numerous misfortunes flowing from the pairs of opposites⁶. Then on one occasion, being much afflicted with misery, I abandoned the whole

¹ The same word as at Gîtâ, p. 72.

² Cf. Khândogya-upanishad, pp. 356-359, and Gîtâ, p. 84.

³ See Gîtâ, p. 76, and cf. Ka/ha, p. 90.

⁴ For the whole of this passage, cf. Maitri-upanishad, p. 8.

⁵ See Manu VI, 61.

⁶ See Gîtâ, p. 48.

course of worldly life, through indifference (to worldly objects), and taking refuge with the formless (principle)¹. Having learnt about this path in this world, I exercised myself (in it), and hence, through favour of the self², have I acquired this perfection³. I shall not come here again⁴; I am surveying the worlds, and the happy migrations⁵ of (my) self from the creation of beings to (my attaining) perfection. Thus, O best of the twice-born! have I obtained this highest perfection. From here I go to the next⁶ (world), and from there again to the still higher (world)—the imperceptible seat of the Brahman. Have no doubt on that, O terror of your foes⁷! I shall not come back to this mortal world. I am pleased with you, O you of great intelligence! Say, what can I do for you? The time is now come for that which you desired in coming to me. I know for what you have come to me. But I shall be going away in a short time, hence have I given

¹ Taking refuge, says Nilakanṭha, in the belief of my being identical with the Brahman, which is to be comprehended by means of the profound contemplation called Asampragñāta Samādhi.

² I.e., says Nilakanṭha, the mind, and he cites Maitrī, p. 179. Cf. Kaṭha, p. 108. The rendering at p. 192 supra will also suit (through the self becoming placid). This placidity is defined at Sānti Parvan (Moksha Dharma) CCXLVII, 11, with which cf. Gītā, p. 69. See Gītā, p. 51.

³ As above described.

⁴ Cf. Kāṇḍogya, p. 628; see also ibid. p. 282.

⁵ He calls them happy because they have ended happily, I presume. 'Surveying the worlds' Nilakanṭha takes to be an index of omniscience. Cf. Sanatsugātiya, p. 174. See also Yoga-sūtras III, 25, and commentary there.

⁶ I.e. the world of Brahman, or the Satyaloka; and the next step is assimilation into the Brahman.

⁷ So read all the copies I have seen, though Kāśyapa is the person addressed.

this hint to you. I am exceedingly pleased, O clever one! with your good conduct. Put (your) questions without uneasiness, I will tell (you) whatever you desire. I highly esteem your intelligence, and greatly respect it, inasmuch as you have made me out¹; for, O Kāsyapa! you are (a) talented (man).

CHAPTER II.

Vāsudeva² said :

Then grasping his feet, Kāsyapa asked questions very difficult to explain, and all of them that (being), the best of the supporters of piety, did explain.

Kāsyapa said :

How does the body perish, and how, too, is it produced? How does one who moves in this harassing course of worldly life become freed? And (how) does the self, getting rid of nature, abandon the body (produced) from it³? And how, being freed from the body, does he attain to the other⁴? How does this man enjoy the good and evil acts done by himself? And where do the acts of one who is released from the body remain?

The Brāhmaṇa said :

Thus addressed, O descendant of Vṛishṇi! that Siddha answered these questions in order. Hear me relate what (he said).

¹ This was difficult, as the Siddha possessed extraordinary powers, such as that of concealed movement, &c. ² Sic in MSS.

³ Cf. as to getting rid of nature, Gītā, pp. 75-106. As to the body produced from nature, cf. ibid. p. 112, and pp. 317-318 infra.

⁴ I.e. the Brahman, says Nilakantha.

The Siddha said :

When those actions, productive of long life and fame¹, which a man performs here, are entirely exhausted, after his assumption of another body, he performs (actions of an) opposite character, his self being overcome at the exhaustion of life². And his ruin being impending, his understanding goes astray. Not knowing his own constitution³, and strength, and likewise the (proper) season, the man not being self-controlled, does unseasonably what is injurious to himself. When he attaches himself to numerous very harassing (actions); eats too much⁴, or does not eat at all; when he takes bad food, or meat⁵, or drinks, or (kinds of food) incompatible with one another, or heavy food in immoderate quantities, or without (previously taken food) being properly digested; or takes too much exercise, or is incontinent; or constantly, through attachment to action, checks the regular course (of the excretions⁶); or takes juicy food⁷; or sleeps by day⁸; or (takes food) not thoroughly prepared; (such a man) himself aggravates the dis-

¹ One reading omits 'fame,' as to which cf. Taittirīya-upanishad, p. 129; Khândogya, pp. 122-227. As to long life, cf. Khândogya, p. 272; exhausted, i.e. by enjoyment of fruit in another world.

² Cf. Sârfraka Bhâshya, p. 753 seq., where we have a slightly different view.

³ Arguna Mirra renders the original, sattva, by svabhâva.

⁴ Cf. for all this, Gîtâ, pp. 62, 69, 118, which passages, however, are from a slightly different point of view. See also Khândogya, p. 526.

⁵ A various reading here excludes meat. But cf. Âpastamba I, 1, 2, 23; Gautama II, 13.

⁶ So says Nîlakantha.

⁷ I.e. which turns to juice in digestion, much juice being a cause of indigestion, say the commentators.

⁸ This is doubtful. The sense may be, 'who takes juicy or not thoroughly prepared food by day and night.' But see Ârvalâyana Grihya-sûtra, p. 90; Âpastamba I, 1, 2, 24; Gautama II, 13.

orders (in the body) when the time comes¹. By aggravating the disorders (in) his own (body), he contracts a disease which ends in death, or he even engages in unreasonable (acts), such as hanging² (oneself). From these causes, the living³ body of that creature then perishes. Learn about that correctly as I am about to state it. Heat being kindled in the body, and being urged by a sharp-wind⁴, pervades the whole frame, and, verily, checks the (movements of all the) life-winds. Know this truly, that excessively powerful heat, if kindled in the body, bursts open the vital parts—the seats of the soul⁵. Then the soul, full of torments, forthwith falls away from the perishable (body). Know, O best of the twice-born! that (every) creature leaves the body, when the vital parts are burst open, its self being overcome with torments. All beings are constantly distracted with birth and death; and, O chief of the twice-born! are seen abandoning (their) bodies, or entering the womb on the exhaustion of (their previous) actions⁶. Again, a man suffers similar torments, having his joints broken and suffering from

¹ The time of destruction, says Arguna Misra.

² Which, say the commentators, leads to death, even without any disease.

³ So I construe the original, having regard to the question, 'how does the body perish?' The other reading, which is in some respects better, is equivalent to 'the life falls away from the body of that creature.'

⁴ This is different, as the commentators point out, from the ordinary life-winds.

⁵ The original here is gīva, not ātman, which we have rendered 'self.' This refers rather to the vital principle. As to the seats, cf. Yāgyavalkya Smṛiti III, 93 seq.

⁶ I adopt the reading karmanām, which I find in one of the MSS. I consulted. I think it probable that that was the reading before the commentators. The other reading is marmanām.

cold, in consequence of water¹. As the compact association of the five elements is broken up, the wind in the body, distributed within the five elements², between the upward and downward life-winds, being aggravated by cold, and urged by a sharp wind³, goes upwards⁴, abandoning the embodied (self) in consequence of pain. Thus it⁵ leaves the body, which appears devoid of breath. Then devoid of warmth, devoid of breath, devoid of beauty, and with consciousness destroyed, the man, being abandoned by the Brahman⁶, is said to be dead. (Then) he ceases to perceive (anything) with those very currents⁷ with which the supporter of the body⁸ perceives objects of sense. In the same way, it is the eternal soul which preserves in the body the life-winds which are produced from food⁹. Whatever (part of the body) is employed in the collection¹⁰ of that, know

¹ Having spoken of heat, he now speaks of the effects of cold. I am not sure if the water here refers to the water of the 'juicy' substances before referred to.

² This means, I presume, within the dissolving body. Cf. Maitri-upanishad, p. 42.

³ See note 4, last page.

⁴ To the head, Arguna Misra.

⁵ That is, the wind, I suppose, and then the breath departs from the body, and the man is said to die. 'Devoid of beauty,' further on, means, disfigured in the state of death.

⁶ I.e. the mind, Arguna Misra.

⁷ The senses. Cf. Svetâsvatara, p. 288.

⁸ See and cf. p. 262 infra.

⁹ This, says Arguna Misra, is in answer to the possible question why this 'sharp wind' does not work with the life-winds. The answer is, that such working requires the presence of the soul, which Arguna Misra says here means 'mind.' As to 'production from food,' cf. Khândogya, p. 421 seq., and Taittiriya Âranyaka, p. 893.

¹⁰ Collection of that = turning the food into semen, says Arguna Misra, who adds, 'in those vital parts, which are useful for this purpose, the life-wind dwells.'

that to be a vital part, for thus it is seen (laid down) in the Scriptures. Those vital parts being wounded, that (wind) directly comes out therefrom, and entering the bosom of a creature obstructs the heart¹. Then the possessor of consciousness knows nothing². Having his knowledge enveloped by darkness³, while the vitals are still enveloped, the soul⁴, being without a fixed seat, is shaken about by the wind. And then he heaves a very deep and alarming gasp, and makes the unconscious body quiver as he goes out (of it). That soul, dropping out of the body, is surrounded on both sides by his own actions⁵, his own pure and meritorious, as also his sinful (ones). Brāhmaṇas, possessed of knowledge, whose convictions are correctly (formed) from sacred learning, know him by (his) marks as one who has performed meritorious actions or the reverse. As those who have eyes see a glow-worm disappear here and there in darkness, so likewise do those who have eyes of knowledge. Such a soul, the Siddhas see with a divine eye, departing (from the body), or coming to the birth, or entering into a womb⁶. Its three descriptions⁷ of seats are here learnt from the Scriptures. This world is the world of actions⁸, where

¹ Arguna Misra renders this to mean 'mind.'

² As the mind is obstructed, says Arguna Misra. The possessor of consciousness = the self, Arguna.

³ I.e. pain, Arguna Misra.

⁴ I.e. mind, Arguna Misra. ⁵ Cf. Bṛihadāraṇyaka, p. 843.

⁶ See Aitareya-upanishad, p. 222, and Śaṅkara's commentary there. The coming to the birth is the coming out of the womb into the world. Cf. also Gītā, p. 112.

⁷ As stated further on, viz. this world, the next world, and the womb. With this compare Khândogya, p. 359.

⁸ Cf. our Bhārtrihari (Bombay series), Notes (Nitirataka), p. 27.

creatures dwell. All embodied (selves), having here performed good or evil (actions), obtain (the fruit). It is here they obtain higher or lower enjoyments by their own actions. And it is those whose actions here are evil, who by their actions go to hell. Harassing is that lower place where men are tormented. Freedom from it is very difficult, and the self should be specially protected from it. Learn from me now the seats in which creatures going up ¹ dwell, and which I shall describe truly. Hearing this, you will learn the highest knowledge, and decision regarding action ². All (the worlds in) the forms of stars, and this lunar sphere ³, and also this solar sphere which shines in the world by its own lustre, know these to be the seats of men who perform meritorious actions. All these, verily, fall down again and again in consequence of the exhaustion of their actions ⁴. And there, too, in heaven, there are differences of low, high, and middling ⁵. Nor, even there, is there satisfaction, (even) after a sight of most magnificent splendour. Thus have I stated to you these seats distinctly. I will after this (proceed to) state to you the production of the foetus ⁶. And, O twice-born one! hear that attentively from me as I state it.

¹ Cf. on this and 'lower place,' Gītā, p. 109; Sāṅkhya Kārikā, 44.

² The readings here are most unsatisfactory. The meaning of the printed reading adopted above would seem to be, 'decision as to what actions should be performed,' &c.

³ Cf. Gītā, p. 81, and Sanatsugātiya, p. 158. ⁴ Cf. Gītā, p. 84.

⁵ Arguna Misra says, 'In heaven = in the next world, low = inferior (?), high = heaven, and middling = the space below the skies (antariksha).' For the three degrees of enjoyment in heaven, see Yogavāsishtha I, 35 seq.

⁶ This is the third of the three seats above referred to.

CHAPTER III.

There is no destruction here of actions good or not good¹. Coming to one body after another they become ripened in their respective ways². As a fruitful (tree) producing fruit may yield much fruit, so does merit performed with a pure mind become expanded³. Sin, too, performed with a sinful mind, is similarly (expanded). For the self engages in action, putting forward this mind⁴. And now further, hear how⁵ a man, overwhelmed with action, and enveloped in desire and anger⁶, enters a womb. Within the womb of a woman, (he) obtains as the result of action a body good or else bad⁷, made up of virile semen and blood. Owing to (his) subtlety and imperceptibility, though he obtains a body appertaining to the Brahman, he is not attached anywhere; hence is he the eternal Brahman⁸. That is the seed of all beings; by that ¹ Cf. Maitrī-ūpanishad, p. 53, and Mundaka, p. 270. And see generally as to this passage, Sārīraka Bhāṣya, pp. 751-760.

² I.e. they yield their respective fruits; cf. Maitrī, p. 43, and Āṇḍogya, p. 358.

³ This explains, say the commentators, how even a little merit or sin requires sometimes more than one birth to enjoy and exhaust.

⁴ As a king performs sacrifices 'putting forward' a priest, Arguna Mirra; and cf. Dhammapada, the first two verses.

⁵ Arguna Mirra has tathā, 'in the same way,' instead of this, and renders it to mean 'putting forward' the mind.

⁶ Hence he does not get rid of birth and death.

⁷ Good=of gods or men; bad=of the lower species of creatures, Arguna.

⁸ He, in the preceding sentences, according to Arguna Mirra, means the self, through the mind, or 'putting forward' the mind, as said above. In this sentence, he takes 'he' to mean the mind itself; Brahman=the self; and the mind, he says, is called the Brahman, as it, like the self, is the cause of the Kaitanya, intelligence, in all creatures.

all creatures exist. That soul, entering all the limbs of the foetus, part by part, and dwelling in the seat of the life-wind¹, supports (them) with the mind². Then the foetus, becoming possessed of consciousness, moves about its limbs. As liquefied iron being poured out assumes the form of the image³, such you must know is the entrance of the soul into the foetus. As fire entering a ball of iron, heats it, such too, you must understand, is the manifestation of the soul in the foetus. And as a blazing lamp shines in a house, even so does consciousness light up bodies⁴. And whatever action he performs, whether good or bad, everything done in a former body must necessarily be enjoyed (or suffered). Then⁵ that is exhausted, and again other (action) is accumulated, so long as the piety which dwells in the practice of concentration of mind for final emancipation⁶ has not been learnt. As to that, O best (of men)! I will tell you about that action by which, verily, one going the round of various births, becomes happy. Gifts, penance, life as a Brahmacārin, adherence to prescribed regulations, restraint of the senses⁷, and also

¹ I. e. the heart.

² Arguna Misra says that the soul at the beginning of the sentence means the mind, and mind here means knowledge or intelligence. Cf. p. 238 supra.

³ In the mould of which, that is to say, it is poured.

⁴ Cf. Gītā, p. 106. The three similes, says Nilakanṭha, show that the soul pervades the whole body, is yet imperceptible, and also unattached to the body. Arguna Misra's explanation is different, but I prefer Nilakanṭha's.

⁵ I. e. by the enjoyment or suffering.

⁶ I. e. while he does not possess the knowledge which leads to the piety necessary as a preliminary for final emancipation, and which ultimately destroys action. Cf. Gītā, p. 62.

⁷ I. e. keeping the senses of hearing &c. from all operations tranquillity, compassion to (all) beings, self-restraint, and absence of cruelty, refraining from the appropriation of the wealth of others, not acting dishonestly even in thought towards (any) being in this world, serving mother and father, honouring deities and guests, honouring preceptors, pity, purity, constant restraint of the organs¹, and causing good to be done; this is said to be the conduct of the good². From this is produced piety, which protects people to eternity. Thus one should look (for it) among the good, for among them it constantly abides. The practice to which the good adhere, points out (what) piety (is)³. And among them dwells that (course of) action which constitutes eternal piety. He who acquires that, never comes to an evil end⁴. By this are people held in check from making a slip in the paths of piety⁵. But the devotee who is released⁶ is esteemed higher than these. For the deliverance from the course of worldly life of the man who acts piously and well, as he should act, takes place after a long time⁷. Thus a creature always meets with (the effects of) the action performed (in a) previous (life). And that⁸ is the sole cause by which he comes here (in a) degraded (form). There is save those relating to the Brahman. Tranquillity is the same thing as regards the mind.

¹ This I take to mean restraint of the active organs, such as speech, &c. 'Self-restraint' is rendered by Nīlakanṭha to mean 'concentration of mind.'

² Cf. Maitrī, p. 57; Khândogya, p. 136; and Gītā, pp. 103, 119.

³ Cf. Āpastamba I, 1, 1, 2; I, 7, 20, 7; Sakuntalā, p. 30 (Williams).

⁴ Cf. Gītā, p. 72.

⁵ By this, i.e. by the practice of the good, Arguna Misra.

⁶ From delusion, Arguna Misra; emancipated by force of his devotion, Nīlakanṭha.

⁷ Cf. Gītā, p. 73; Khândogya, pp. 136, 137. ⁸ Scil. the action.

in the world a doubt as to what originally was the source from which he became invested with a body. And that I shall now proceed to state. Brahman, the grandfather of all people, having made a body for himself, created the whole of the three worlds, moving and fixed¹. From that he created the Pradhâna, the material cause of all embodied (selfs), by which all this is pervaded, and which is known in the world as the highest². This is what is called the destructible³; but the other⁴ is immortal and indestructible. And Pragâpati, who had been first created, created all creatures and (all) the fixed entities, (having) as regards the moving (creation), a pair separately for each⁵ (species). Such is the ancient (tradition) heard (by us). And as regards that, the grandsire fixed a limit of time, and (a rule) about migrations among (various) creatures, and about the return⁶. What I say is all correct and proper, like (what may be said by) any talented person who has in ¹ I.e. animate and inanimate. 'A body for himself' = undeveloped Âkâsa, Nilakantha. But see Sâṅkhya-sâra, p. 19, and Sâṅkhya Prav. Bhâṣhya I, 122, and III, 10.

² Cf. inter alia Gîtâ, p. 58 and note, and Sâṅkhya-sâra, p. 11. As to the words at the beginning of this sentence, 'from that,' cf. Taittirîya-upanishad, p. 67, where everything is derived from Âkâsa, mentioned in the last note, and Âkâsa from the Brahman.

³ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 113, where there are three principles distinguished from each other.

⁴ I.e. the self, Arguna Mirra.

⁵ A pair, i.e. a male and female for each species, such as man, &c., Arguna Mirra.

⁶ Pragâpati fixed the limit of life for every 'moving' creature, and the rule as to going from one species of body into another, and as to going from one world to another. As to a part of 'the ancient tradition,' the first stanza of the Mundaka-upanishad may be compared.

a former birth perceived the self¹. He who properly perceives pleasure and pain to be inconstant, the body to be an unholy aggregate², and ruin to be connected with action³, and who remembers that whatever little there is of happiness is all misery⁴, he will cross beyond the fearful ocean of worldly life, which is very difficult to cross. He who understands the Pradhâna⁵, (though) attacked by birth and death and disease, sees one (principle of) consciousness in all beings possessed of consciousness⁶. Then seeking after the supreme seat, he becomes indifferent to everything⁷. O best (of men)! I will give you accurate instruction concerning it. Learn from me exhaustively, O Brâhmana! the excellent knowledge concerning the eternal imperishable seat, which I am now about to declare.

CHAPTER IV.

He who becoming placid⁸, and thinking of nought, may become absorbed in the one receptacle⁹, abandoning each previous (element), he will cross beyond

¹ Arguna Misra says the strength of the impression in the former birth would give him this knowledge in the subsequent birth.

² Cf. Sanatsugâtîya, p. 155.

³ Cf. inter alia p. 256 infra.

⁴ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 79.

⁵ Otherwise called Prakṛti, or nature.

⁶ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 124.

⁷ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 111.

⁸ We now begin, as Nīlakanṭha points out, the answer to the question put above by Kârṣya about the emancipation of the self. Placid, Arguna Misra renders to mean 'silent, taciturn.' See p. 234 supra.

⁹ The path of knowledge, says Arguna Misra; the Brahman, says Nīlakanṭha. Abandoning each element = absorbing the gross into the subtle elements, and so forth, Nīlakanṭha; abandoning each elementary mode of worship till one reaches that of contemplating the absolute Brahman, Arguna Misra.

(all) bonds. A man who is a friend of all, who endures all, who is devoted to tranquillity¹, who has subdued his senses, and from whom fear and wrath have departed, and who is self-possessed², is released. He who moves among all beings as if they were like himself³, who is self-controlled, pure, free from vanity⁴ and egoism, he is, indeed, released from everything. And he, too, is released who is equable towards both life and death⁵, and likewise pleasure and pain, and gain and loss, and (what is) agreeable and odious⁶. He who is not attached to any one, who contemns no one, who is free from the pairs of opposites, and whose self is free from affections⁷, he is, indeed, released in every way. He who has no enemy, who has no kinsmen, who has no child, who has abandoned piety, wealth, and lust altogether, and who has no desire, is released. He who is not pious and not impious⁸, who casts off (the merit or sin) previously accumulated, whose self is tranquillised by the exhaustion of the primary elements of the body⁹, and who is free from the pairs of opposites, is released. One who does no action¹⁰, and who has no desire, looks on this universe as

¹ This, in the terminology of the Vedānta, means keeping the mind from everything save 'hearing' &c. about the Brahman.

² One who has his mind under his control. But see Gītā, p. 63.

³ Cf. Gītā, p. 71.

⁴ I.e. the desire to be honoured or respected, Arguna Misra. Cf. Sanatsugâtīya, p. 161.

⁵ Who does not care when death comes. ⁶ Cf. p. 151 supra.

⁷ Cf. Gītā for all this, pp. 101, 103, 125, &c. ⁸ Cf. Ka/ha, p. 101.

⁹ Nilakantha says this means the constituents of the body. Arguna Misra says, 'Prāṇa or life-wind,' &c. They are seven. See gloss on A'hāndogya-upanishad, p. 441, and p. 343 infra.

¹⁰ Because, says Arguna Misra, he has no desire. Nilakantha says this means an ascetic, sannyāsin. See p. 257 infra, note 1.

transient, like an Asvattha tree¹, always full of birth, death, and old age². Having his understanding always (fixed) upon indifference to worldly objects, searching for his own faults³, he procures the release of his self from bonds in no long time. Seeing the self void of smell⁴, void of taste, void of touch, void of sound, void of belongings, void of colour, and unknowable, he is released. He who sees the enjoyer of the qualities⁵, devoid of qualities, devoid of the qualities of the five elements⁶, devoid of form, and having no cause, is released. Abandoning by the understanding⁷ all fancies bodily and mental⁸, he gradually obtains tranquillity⁹, like fire devoid of fuel. He who is free from all impressions¹⁰, free from the pairs of opposites, without belongings, and who moves among the collection of organs with penance¹¹, he is indeed released. Then freed from all impressions, he attains to the eternal

¹ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 111, where Saṅkara explains the name to mean 'what will not remain even till to-morrow.'

² Cf. Gîtâ, p. 109, and other passages.

³ Arguna Misra has a different reading, which means 'particularly observing the evils of (the three kinds of) misery.'

⁴ Cf. Kaṭha, p. 119; Mundaka, p. 267; and Māndukya, p. 371.

⁵ Cf. Gîtâ, pp. 104, 105, and Kaṭha, p. 112.

⁶ Nilakantha says this refers to the gross elements, the next expression to the subtle ones, and being free from these two, he is 'devoid of qualities,' viz. the three qualities. ⁷ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 65.

⁸ I.e. those which cause bodily and mental activity.

⁹ Cf. Maitrî, p. 178. The original is the famous word 'Nirvāṇa.'

¹⁰ Scil. derived from false knowledge, says Arguna Misra. Nilakantha says all impressions from outside oneself which are destroyed by those produced from concentration of mind, &c. See p. 391 infra.

¹¹ I.e. all those operations by which the internal man is rendered pure and free from all taints; see below, p. 248, where Nilakantha renders it as 'the performance of one's duty which is called penance.' But see, too, pp. 74, 119, 166 supra. The meaning seems to be that the Supreme Brahman, tranquil, unmoving, constant, indestructible¹. After this I shall explain the science of concentration of mind, than which there is nothing higher, (and which teaches) how devotees concentrating (their minds) perceive the perfect self². I will impart instruction regarding it accurately. Learn from me the paths³ by which one directing the self within the self perceives the eternal⁴ (principle). Restraining the senses, one should fix the mind on the self; and having first performed rigorous penance⁵, he should practise concentration of mind for final emancipation. Then the talented Brāhmaṇa, who has practised penance, who is constantly practising concentration of mind, should act on (the precepts of) the science of concentration of mind⁶, seeing the self in the self by means of the mind⁷. If such a good man is able to concentrate the self on the self, then he, being habituated to exclusive meditation⁸, perceives the self in the self. Being man in question lets his senses work, but does not permit himself to be in any way identified with their operations. Cf. Gītā, p. 64.

¹ Cf. the expressions at Gītā, p. 45. 'Unmoving,' which occurs at Īśa, p. 10, is there explained by Śaṅkara to mean 'always the same.' The same sense is given by Mahidhara. Weber's Satapatha, p. 980.

² 'Perfect' would seem to mean here free from all bonds or taints, the absolute.

³ I.e. sources of knowledge, says Arguna Misra.

⁴ Cf. as to 'directing the self within the self,' Gītā, p. 69. Nilakantha says, 'paths, means of mental restraint, the self, mind; in the self, in the body.'

⁵ See p. 247, note 11. Nilakantha's note there referred to occurs on this passage. See also p. 166, note 1 supra.

⁶ It is not easy to say what this science is. Is it Patañjali's system that is meant? No details occur to enable one to identify the 'science.' But, probably, no system is alluded to.

⁷ See note 4 above.

⁸ Nilakantha has a very forced explanation of the original word.

self-restrained and self-possessed¹, and always concentrating his mind, and having his senses subjugated, he who has achieved proper concentration of mind² sees the self in the self. As a person having seen one in a dream, recognises him (afterwards), saying, 'This is he;' so does one who has achieved proper concentration of mind perceive the self³. And as one may show the soft fibres, after extracting them from the Muñga, so does a devotee see the self extracted from the body. The body is called the Muñga; the soft fibres stand⁴ for the self. This is the excellent illustration propounded by those who understand concentration of mind. When an embodied (self) properly perceives the self concentrated⁵, then there is no ruler over him, since he is the lord of the triple world⁶. He obtains various bodies as he pleases; and casting aside old age and death, he grieves not and exults not. The man who which also occurs further on; he takes the meaning to be, 'he who is habituated to that by which the One is attained, viz. meditation.'

¹ The original is the same as at Gītā, p. 63.

² That is to say, one who has got the power of concentrating his mind as he pleases; and the words 'always concentrating' &c., just before, would mean 'one who always exercises that power.'

³ I.e. having perceived the self in the state of concentration, he sees the whole universe to be the self in this state when the concentration has ceased, Nilakantha. Arguna Mirra says, 'having perceived the self at the time of concentration, he recognises it as the same at the time of direct perception,' meaning, apparently, the time of final emancipation.

⁴ I.e. the reality, which in this simile forms the substratum of what are called the fibres; the simile is in the Kaṭha-upanishad; see, too, Sanatsugātīya, p. 176.

⁵ I.e. on the supreme self, as above explained.

⁶ Cf. Sanatsugātīya, p. 161; Svetāśvatara, p. 290; and Bṛhadāraṇyaka, p. 218; Kāṇḍogya, p. 523; Aitareya, p. 26; Kaushitaki, p. 126.

has acquired concentration of mind, and who is self-restrained, creates for himself even the divinity of the gods¹; and abandoning the transient body, he attains to the inexhaustible Brahman. When (all) beings are destroyed, he has no fear; when (all) beings are afflicted, he is not afflicted by anything². He whose self is concentrated, who is free from attachment, and of a tranquil mind, is not shaken by the fearful effects of attachment and affection³, which consist in pain and grief⁴. Weapons do not pierce him⁵; there is no death for him; nothing can be seen anywhere in the world happier than he. Properly concentrating his self, he remains steady to the self; and freed from old age and grief, he sleeps at ease. Leaving this human frame, he assumes bodies at pleasure. But one who is practising concentration should never become despondent⁶. When one who has properly achieved concentration perceives the self in the self, then he forthwith ceases to feel any attachment to Indra himself⁷.

¹ I do not quite understand the original. The other reading, dehatvam for devatvam, is not more intelligible. But comparing the two, the meaning seems to be, that the divinity of the gods, i.e. their qualities and powers as gods, are within his reach, if he likes to have them.

² Cf. Gītā, p. 107.

³ Affection is the feeling that a thing is one's own; attachment is the feeling of liking one has for a thing acquired with difficulty, Arguna Misra.

⁴ Pain appears to be the feeling immediately following on hurt or evil suffered; grief is the constant state of mind which is a later result.

⁵ Cf. Yoga-sūtra Bhāṣya, p. 208.

⁶ Cf. Gītā, p. 70. Despondency is the feeling that one has not acquired 'concentration' after much practice, and that therefore the practice should be abandoned.

⁷ The other reading here may be rendered, 'Then forthwith Indra himself esteems him highly.'

Now listen how one habituated to exclusive meditation attains concentration. Thinking¹ of a quarter seen before, he should steady his mind within and not out of the city in which he dwells. Remaining within (that) city, he should place his mind both in its external and internal (operations) in that habitation in which he dwells. When, meditating in that habitation, he perceives the perfect one, his mind should not in any way wander outside. Restraining the group of the senses, in a forest² free from noises and unpeopled, he should meditate on the perfect one within his body with a mind fixed on one point. He ¹ This is all rather mystical. Nilakantha takes 'city' to mean 'body,' and 'habitation' to mean the mûlâdhâra, or other similar mystic centre within the body, where, according to the Yoga philosophy, the soul is sometimes to be kept with the life-winds, &c. 'Thinking of a quarter,' &c., he explains to mean 'meditating on the instruction he has received after studying the Upanishads.' I do not understand the passage well. 'City' for 'body' is a familiar use of the word. Cf. Gîtâ, p. 65. The original word for habitation occurs at Aitareya-upanishad, p. 199, where Saṅkara explains it to mean 'seat.' Three 'seats' are there mentioned,—the organs of sight, &c.; the mind; and the Âkāra in the heart. There, too, the body is described as a 'city,' and Anandagiri explains habitation to mean 'seat of amusement or sport.' Here, however, the meaning seems to be that one should work for concentration in the manner indicated, viz. first fix the mind on the city where one dwells, then on the particular part of it oftenest seen before, then one's own habitation, then the various parts of one's body, and finally one's own heart and the Brahman within it. Thus gradually circumscribed in its operations, the mind is better fitted for the final concentration on the Brahman. As to external and internal operations, cf. note 8, p. 247. The perfect one is the Brahman. Cf. Sanatsugâtîya, p. 171. As to âvasaṭha, which we have rendered by 'habitation,' see also Mândukya, p. 340; Br̥hadâraṇyaka, p. 751; and the alternative sense suggested by Saṅkara on the Aitareya, loc. cit.

² Cf. Maitrî-upanishad, p. 100.

should meditate on his teeth¹, palate, tongue, neck, and throat likewise, and also the heart, and likewise the seat of the heart. That talented pupil, O destroyer of Madhu! having been thus instructed by me, proceeded further to interrogate (me) about the piety (required) for final emancipation, which is difficult to explain. 'How does this food eaten from time to time become digested in the stomach? How does it turn to juice and how also to blood? And how, too, do the flesh, and marrow, and muscles, and bones—which all (form) the bodies for embodied (selves)—develop in a woman as that (self) develops? How, too, does the strength develop? (And how is it also) about the removal of non-nutritive (substances)², and of the excretions, distinctly? How, too, does he breathe inwards or outwards? And what place does the self occupy, dwelling in the self³? And how does the soul moving about carry the body? And of what colour and of what description (is it when) he leaves it? O sinless venerable sir! be pleased to state this accurately to me.' Thus questioned by that Brâhmaṇa, O Mâdhava! I replied⁴, 'O you of mighty arms! O

¹ Nīlakanṭha cites numerous passages from works of the Yoga philosophy in illustration of this. He takes 'heart' to mean the Brahman seated in the heart (cf. Āṇḍogya, p. 528), and 'the seat of the heart' to mean the one hundred and one passages of the heart. The latter expression Arguna Misra seems to render by 'mind.' See also generally on this passage, Maitrī-upanishad, p. 133, and Yoga-sūtra III, 1 and 28 seq., and commentary there.

² Literally, 'those which are void of strength.' I adopt Arguna Misra's reading. The other reading literally means 'obstructions.'

³ The self here means the body, I take it. See p. 248 supra.

⁴ The reply does not appear here. Nīlakanṭha says that the succeeding chapters contain it. Arguna Misra seems to say that the answer has been already given. The context here is obscure.

restrainer of (your) foes! according to what (I had) heard. As one placing any property in his store-room should fix his mind on the property¹, so placing one's mind in one's body, and (keeping) the passages confined, one should there look for the self and avoid heedlessness². Being thus always assiduous and pleased in the self, he attains in a short time to that Brahman, after perceiving which he understands the Pradhâna³. He is not to be grasped by the eye, nor by any of the senses. Only by the mind (used) as a lamp is the great self perceived⁴. He has hands and feet on all sides; he has eyes, heads, and faces on all sides; he has ears on all sides; he stands pervading everything in the world⁵. The soul sees the self⁶ come out from the body; and abandoning his body, he perceives the self,—holding it to be the immaculate Brahman,—with, as it were, a mental smile⁷. And then depending upon it thus, he attains final emancipation in me⁸.

¹ Nīlakanṭha says the original means household effects; Arguna Mīra says wealth, and adds, the mind is fixed on it from fear of others finding it out.

² Cf. Sanatsugâtīya, p. 152. Here, however, the sense is the ordinary one.

³ I.e. all nature, that from which the universe is developed.

⁴ Cf. Kaṭha, pp. 117–130. See Sānti Parvan (Moksha) CCXL, 16.

⁵ Cf. Gītā, p. 103. The stanza occurs often in the Bhārata. This, says Arguna Mīra, answers the question 'how the soul carries the body.' The soul can do that as it is all-pervading.

⁶ The individual soul, which has acquired true knowledge, perceives the self to be distinct from the body. See p. 249 supra.

⁷ I.e. at the false notions which he entertained. Nīlakanṭha says, 'smile, i.e. amazement that he should have been deceived by the mirage-like course of worldly life.'

⁸ I.e. final emancipation and assimilation with the supreme; 'depending upon it thus' = taking refuge with the Brahman in the way above stated.

This whole mystery I have declared to you, O best of Bráhmaṇas¹! I will now take my leave, I will go away; and do you (too) go away, O Bráhmaṇa! according to your pleasure.' Thus addressed by me, O Kṛishṇa! that pupil, possessed of great penance,—that Bráhmaṇa of rigid vows,—went away as he pleased.

Vásudeva said :

Having spoken to me, O son of Prithā! these good words relating to the piety (required) for final emancipation, that best of Bráhmaṇas disappeared then and there. Have you listened to this, O son of Prithā! with a mind (fixed) on (this) one point only²? For on that occasion, too, sitting in the chariot you heard this same (instruction). It is my belief, O son of Prithā! that this is not easily understood by a man who is confused, or who has not acquired knowledge with his inmost soul purified³. What I have spoken, O chief of the descendants of Bharata! is a great mystery (even) among the gods. And it has never yet been heard by any man in this world, O son of Prithā! For, O sinless one! there is no other man than you worthy to hear it. Nor is it easily to be understood by (one whose) internal self (is) confused. The world of the gods⁴, O son of Kuntī! is filled by those who perform

¹ Arguna Misra says, the only questions among those stated above, which are of use for final emancipation, have been here answered. The others should be looked for elsewhere.

² The original words here are identical with those at Gītā, p. 139.

³ I adopt Nilakanṭha's reading here. Arguna Misra reads 'vigagdhena,' which he explains to mean 'one who eats kinds of food incompatible with one another.' A third reading is 'kṛitagnena,' ungrateful!

⁴ See Gītā, p. 84.

actions. And the gods are not pleased with a cessation of the mortal form¹. For as to that eternal Brahman, O son of Prithā! that is the highest goal, where one, forsaking the body, reaches immortality and is ever happy. Adopting this doctrine, even those who are of sinful birth, women, Vaisyas, and Sûdras likewise, attain the supreme goal. What then (need be said of) Brâhmanas, O son of *Prithā*²! or well-read Kshatriyas, who are constantly intent on their own duties, and whose highest goal is the world of the Brahman? This has been stated with reasons; and also the means for its acquisition; and the fruit of its full accomplishment, final emancipation, and determination regarding misery³. O chief of the descendants of Bharata! there can be no other happiness beyond this. The mortal, O son of Pāndu! who, possessed of talents, full of faith, and energetic⁴, casts aside as unsubstantial the (whole) substance of this world⁵, he forthwith attains the highest goal by these means. This is all that is to be said, there is nothing further than this. Concentration of mind comes to him, O son of Prithā! who practises concentration of mind constantly throughout six months⁶.

¹ Cf. Bṛhadâraṇyaka, p. 234, where Saṅkara quotes the original stanza, but with a reading which means, 'And the gods are not pleased at mortals rising above (them).' That is a better reading.

² See Gîtâ, pp. 85, 86, where the words are nearly identical with those in the text.

³ This is not quite clear. Does 'determination regarding misery,' the original of which is duḥkhasya ka vinirṇayaḥ, mean 'conclusion of all misery?' Comp. Gîtâ, p. 79.

⁴ Arguna Mirra says this means assiduous.

⁵ I.e. wealth and so forth, says Nīlakanṭha. Cf. 'human wealth' at Sanatsugâtīya, p. 161.

⁶ Cf. Maitrī-upanishad, p. 154. The copy of Arguna Mirra's

CHAPTER V.

On this¹, too, O chief of the descendants of Bharata! they relate this ancient story, (in the form of) a dialogue, which occurred, O son of Prithā! between a husband and wife. A Brāhmaṇa's wife, seeing the Brāhmaṇa her husband, who had gone through all knowledge and experience², seated in seclusion, spoke to him (thus): 'What world, indeed, shall I go to, depending on you as (my) husband, you who live renouncing (all) action, and who are harsh and un-discerning³. We have heard that wives attain to the worlds acquired by (their) husbands. What goal, verily, shall I reach, having got you for my husband?' Thus addressed, that man of a tranquil self, spoke to her with a slight smile: 'O beautiful one! O sinless one! I am not offended at these words of yours. Whatever action there is, that can be caught (by the touch)⁴, or seen, or heard, that only do the men of action engage in as action. Those who are devoid of knowledge only lodge⁵ delusion in themselves by means of action. And freedom from action is not to be attained in this world even for an commentary which I have used, says that the Anugītā ends here. But, as we have shown, there is a verse coming further on, which Śaṅkarācārya cites as from the Anugītā. In the printed copies of the Mahābhārata the next chapter is called the Brāhmaṇagītā.

¹ I.e. the questions at p. 252, Nilakanṭha; more probably, perhaps, the 'doctrine' mentioned at p. 254 is what is alluded to.

² Cf. Gītā, p. 57 and note.

³ Nilakanṭha says this means 'ignorant that the wife has no other support.' Arguna Misra interprets kṛnāra to mean 'indigent' instead of 'harsh.'

⁴ So Arguna Misra. Nilakanṭha's reading and his interpretation of the passage are different.

⁵ I follow Arguna Misra; the original literally means 'restrain.'

instant¹. From birth to the destruction of the body, action, good or bad, by act, mind or speech², does exist among (all) beings. While the paths³ (of action), in which the materials are visible, are destroyed by demons⁴, I have perceived by means of the self the seat abiding in the self⁵—(the seat) where dwells the Brahman free from the pairs of opposites, and the moon together with the fire⁶, upholding (all) beings (as) the mover of the intellectual principle⁷; (the seat) for which⁸ Brahman and others concentrating (their minds) worship that indestructible (principle), and for which learned men have their senses restrained, and their selves tranquil, and (observe) good vows. It is not to be smelt by the nose, and not to be tasted by the tongue. It is not to be touched by the sense of touch, but is to be apprehended by the mind. It cannot be ¹ Cf. Gītā, pp. 52, 53; see also, as to freedom from action, Gītā, p. 127.

² I.e. thought, word, and deed. I have in the text kept to a more literal rendering.

³ This is Nīlakanṭha's reading and interpretation. Arguna Mirra reads 'actions visible and invisible.'

⁴ Cf. inter alia Kumāra-sambhava II, 46.

⁵ I.e. says Arguna Mirra, the safe place, within the body; and says Nīlakanṭha, the seat called Avimukta, between the nose and the brows; as to which cf. Gītā, p. 67. In the Kenopanishad (p. 220) the word āyatana is used to signify a means to the attainment of the Brahman.

⁶ The moon and fire constitute the universe, says Arguna Mirra. Cf. Gītā, p. 113. Nīlakanṭha interprets this more mystically as referring to the Idā and Pīṅgalā arteries.

⁷ So Nīlakanṭha, but he takes it to stand for 'vāyu' or wind, as a distinct principle. The sense is by no means clear. But the moon being the deity of the mind also may, perhaps, be described as she is here, on that account.

⁸ This is Arguna Mirra's interpretation of the original locative.

conquered by the eyes, and is entirely beyond the senses of hearing. It is devoid of smell, devoid of taste and touch, devoid of colour and sound, and imperishable¹. (It is that) from which (this whole) expanse² (of the universe) proceeds, and on which it rests. From this the Prâna, Apâna, Samâna, Vyâna, and Udâna also proceed, and into it they enter³. Between the Samâna and the Vyâna, the Prâna and the Apâna moved. When that⁴ is asleep, the Samâna and Vyâna also are absorbed⁵; and between the Prâna and the Apâna dwells the Udâna pervading (all). Therefore the Prâna and the Apâna do not forsake a sleeping person. That is called the Udâna, as the life-winds are controlled⁶ (by it). And therefore those who study the Brahman engage in penance⁷ of which I am the goal⁸. In

¹ Cf. note 4, p. 247 supra, and p. 253.

² Arguna Misra says this means the five great elements, the eleven organs (active and perceptive, and the mind), the life-wind, and the individual soul.

³ The Prâna is at the nose, the Apâna at the arms, the Samâna at the navel, the Vyâna pervades the whole body, and the Udâna is at all the joints; cf. Yoga-sûtra III, 38 seq. Nilakantha says this explains how the 'expanse' (meaning, he says, the operations of the creation, &c.) 'proceeds' from the Brahman. See on the life-winds, Brhadâranyaka, p. 667; Khândogya, pp. 42-188; Sânkhya-tattva-kaumudî, p. 96; Vedânta Paribhâṣā, p. 45; p. 271 infra.

⁴ The self, Arguna Misra. Nilakantha says, 'the Prâna accompanied by the Apâna.'

⁵ I. e. into the Prâna and Apâna, Arguna Misra.

⁶ Nilakantha derives the word thus, utkarṣheṇa ānayaṭi.

⁷ I. e. the subjugation of the life-winds as indicated at Gîtâ, p. 61.

⁸ The meaning of the passage as a whole is not very clear, and the commentators afford but little help. The sense appears to be this: The course of worldly life is due to the operations of the life-winds which are attached to the self and lead to its manifestations as individual souls. Of these, the Samâna and Vyâna are the interior¹, in the midst of all these (life-winds) which move about in the body and swallow up one another², blazes the Vaisvâna fire³ sevenfold. The nose, and the tongue, and the eye, and the skin, and the ear as the fifth, the mind and the understanding, these are the seven tongues⁴ of the blaze of Vaisvânara. That which is to be smelt, that which is to be drunk, that which is to be seen, that which is to be touched, and likewise that which is to be heard, and also that which is to be thought of, and that which is to be understood, those are the seven (kinds of) fuel for me⁵. That which smells, that which eats, that which sees, that which touches, and that which hears as the fifth, that which thinks, and that which understands, these are the seven great officiating priests⁶. And mark this always, controlled and held under check by the Prâna and Apâna, into which latter the former are absorbed in sleep. The latter two are held in check and controlled by the Udâna, which thus controls all. And the control of this, which is the control of all the five, and which is otherwise called penance, destroys the course of worldly life, and leads to the supreme self.

¹ I. e. within the body.

² As explained in note 8, p. 258.

³ This, says Nīlakanṭha, explains the word 'I' in the sentence preceding. Vaisvânara is a word often used to denote the self. The Vishamasloki derives it thus, 'that which saves all beings from hell'; see the Prasna-upanishad, pp. 167-188 (where seven tongues are also referred to); Mundaka, p. 292; Khândogya, p. 364; Māndukya, p. 341.

⁴ Cf. Taittirīya-Āraṇyaka, p. 802.

⁵ I. e. the Vaisvânara. Cf. Taittirīya-Āraṇyaka, p. 803 and gloss.

⁶ These I take to be the powers of hearing, &c., which are presided over by the several deities; or, better, perhaps, they may mean the soul distinguished as so many with reference to these several powers; cf. Bṛihadâraṇyaka, p. 169; Maitrī, p. 96; Prasna, pp. 214, 215; Kaushîtaki, p. 96; Aitareya, p. 187; Khândogya, p. 616. The latter sense is accepted by Arguna Misra.

O beautiful one ! The learned sacrificers throwing (in) due (form) the seven offerings into the seven fires in seven ways, produce them in their wombs¹ ; (namely), that which is to be smelt, that which is to be drunk, that which is to be seen, that which is to be touched, and likewise that which is to be heard, that which is to be thought of, and also that which is to be understood. Earth, air, space, water, and light as the fifth, mind and understanding, these seven, indeed, are named wombs. All the qualities which stand² as offerings are absorbed in the mouth of the fire³ ; and having dwelt within that dwelling are born in their respective wombs⁴. And in that very (principle), which is the generator of all entities, they remain absorbed during (the time of) deluge. From that⁵ is produced smell ; from that is produced taste ; from that is produced colour ; from that touch is produced ; from that is produced sound ; from that doubt⁶ is produced ; from that is produced determination. This (is what) they know as the sevenfold production. In this very way was it⁷ comprehended by the ancients. Becoming perfected by the perfect sacrifice⁸, they were perfectly filled with light.'

¹ The next clause explains this ; that which is to be smelt is earth, and so on throughout. The men who sacrifice all sensuous objects, get such powers that they can create the objects whenever they like. As to 'in their wombs,' see Yoga Bhāshya, p. 108.

² I. e. are so treated in the above allegory.

³ I. e. the Brahman.

⁴ I. e. when the sacrificer wishes, as stated in note 1.

⁵ That principle—viz. the Brahman.

⁶ This is the operation of the mind, see Gītā, p. 57 note.

⁷ The Brahman, Arguna Misra. Or it may be the 'sevenfold production.'

⁸ The wholesale sacrifice of all sensuous perceptions. The

CHAPTER VI.

The Brâhmaṇa said :

On this, too, they relate this ancient story. Learn now of what description is the institution of the ten sacrificial priests¹. The ear², the skin, the two eyes, the tongue, the nose, the two feet, the two hands, speech, the genital organ, and the anus, these, verily, are ten sacrificial priests, O beautiful one! Sound, touch, colour, and taste, smell, words, action, motion, and the discharge of semen, urine, and excrement, these are the ten oblations. The quarters, wind, sun, moon, earth and fire, and Vishṇu also, Indra, Prajāpati, and Mitra, these, O beautiful one! are the ten fires³. The ten organs are the makers of the offering; the offerings are ten, O beautiful one! Objects of sense, verily, are the fuel; and they are offered up into the ten fires. The mind is the ladle⁴; and the wealth is the pure, highest knowledge⁵. (Thus) we have heard, was the universe duly divided⁶. And the mind, which is the instru-root corresponding with perfect occurs three times in the original, hence the repetition of perfect above.

¹ Cf. Taittirīya-brâhmaṇa, p. 411, and Âraṇyaka, p. 281.

² Cf. Bṛihadâraṇyaka, p. 459. The reading in the printed edition of Bombay is defective here.

³ See p. 337 seq., where all this is more fully explained. And cf. the analogous Buddhistic doctrine stated at Lalita Vistara (Translation by Dr. R. Mitra), p. 11.

⁴ See Taittirīya-âraṇyaka loc. cit., and cf. Gîtâ, p. 61. 'The wealth' probably means the Dakṣhiṇâ to be given to the priests, which is mentioned at Gîtâ, p. 119.

⁵ The 'priests' here being the senses, the knowledge would accrue to them, as to which cf. Gîtâ, p. 108.

⁶ See note 3.

ment of knowledge, requires everything knowable¹ (as its offering). The mind is within the body the upholder of the frame, and the knower is the upholder of the body². That³ upholder of the body is the Gârhapatya fire; from that another is produced, and the mind which is the Âhavanīya; and into this the offering is thrown. Then the lord of speech was produced⁴; that (lord of speech) looks up to the mind. First, verily, are words produced; and the mind runs after them.

¹ Each sense can only offer up its own perceptions—the mind offers up all knowledge whatever.

² Arguna Misra says this is an implied simile, the mind is an upholder of the body as the 'knower' or self is.

³ Arguna Misra says this means 'the mind.' I think it better to take it here as the self (see p. 238 supra), to which the 'mind' and the 'other,' mentioned further on, would be subordinate; the 'other' Arguna Misra renders by the 'group of the senses.' The senses are compared to fires at Gîtâ, p. 61. The passage at Taittiriya-âraṇyaka above cited refers only to the Gârhapatya and Âhavanīya fires. Nilakanṭha's text and explanation of this passage are, to my mind, not nearly so satisfactory as Arguna Misra's.

⁴ In the Taittirīya-brāhmaṇa and Âraṇyaka loc. cit., the equivalent of the original word for 'lord of speech' here occurs, viz. Vâkpati for Vâkṣpati here; but that is there described as the Hotrī priest, and speech itself as the Vedit or altar. The commentator there interprets 'lord of speech' to mean the wind which causes vocal activity, and resides in the throat, palate, &c. As to mind and speech, see also Khândogya, pp. 285-441, and comments of Saṅkara there. The meaning of this passage, however, is not by any means clear to my mind. The Dasahotrī mantras in the Taittirīya are stated to be the mantras of the Ishī, or sacrifice, performed by Pragâpati for creation. It is possible, then, that the meaning here is, that speech which is to be learnt by the pupil, as stated further on—namely, the Vedas—was first produced from that Ishī (cf. Kullûka on Manu I, 21). But to understand that speech, mind is necessary; hence it is said to look up to the mind. The Brāhmaṇa's wife, however, seems to understand speech as ordinary speech, hence her question.

The Brāhmaṇa's wife said :

How did speech come into existence first, and how did the mind come into existence afterwards, seeing that words are uttered (after they have been) thought over by the mind? By means of what experience does intelligence come to the mind, and (though) developed, does not comprehend¹? What verily obstructs it?

The Brāhmaṇa said :

The Apāna becoming lord changes it into the state of the Apāna in consequence. That is called the movement of the mind, and hence the mind is in need (of it)². But since you ask me a question regarding speech and mind, I will relate to you a dialogue between themselves. Both speech and mind went to the self of all beings³ and spoke (to him thus), 'Say which of us is superior; destroy our doubts, O lord!' Thereupon the lord positively said to speech, 'Mind (is superior).' But speech thereupon said to him, 'I, verily, yield (you) your desires⁴.'

¹ This, again, is to my mind very hard to understand. The original word for 'intelligence' is mati, which at Khândogya, p. 514, Sāṅkara interprets thus: 'intelligence is pondering, application to (literally, respect for) the subject of thought.' The original for 'developed,' Arguna Misra renders by 'mixed or assimilated with;' and 'does not comprehend,' he takes to mean 'does not understand—speech or words.' This question appears to be suggested by the last words of the previous speech.

² These two sentences are again very obscure. Nilakanṭha, as usual, deserts his original, giving peculiar meanings to the words without producing any authority. Arguna Misra is very meagre, and besides the MS. is very incorrect. See p. 264, note 5 infra.

³ I. e. Prajāpati, says Arguna Misra, which seems to be justified by the sequel. Nilakanṭha takes it to mean the individual self, which doubtless is its meaning elsewhere, e. g. Maitrī, p. 56.

⁴ I. e. speech conveys information on all matters, Arguna Misra;

The Brâhmana¹ said :

Know, that (in) my (view), there are two minds², immovable and also movable. The immovable, verily, is with me ; the movable is in your dominion. Whatever mantra, or letter, or tone goes to your dominion, that indeed is the movable mind³. To that you are superior. But inasmuch, O beautiful one! as you came personally to speak to me (in the way you did)⁴, therefore, O Sarasvatî! you shall never speak after (hard) exhalations⁵. The goddess speech, verily, dwelt always between the Prâna and Apâna⁶. But, O noble one! going with the Apâna as the means of acquiring desired fruit, visible or invisible, is learnt by speech, Nîlakantha. Cf. as to all this, Bṛhadâraṇyaka-upanishad, pp. 50 seq. and 261.

¹ I.e. Nîlakantha says, 'the Brâhmana named mind,' alluding apparently to p. 310 infra. But the reading of some of the MSS., viz. Brahman for the Brâhmana, seems preferable, having regard to what follows. Apparently, the Brâhmana's own speech should begin at 'The goddess speech' further on.

² Nîlakantha says, immovable=to be understood by the external senses ; movable=not perceptible by senses, such as heaven, &c., which is not quite intelligible. Arguna Misra says, the immovable mind is that of the teacher, which is fixed, as it has not to learn or acquire anything, while that of the pupil is movable as acquiring new impressions and knowledge.

³ I.e. it is the movable mind which takes cognisance of the significations of all mantras (sacred texts), letters, tones, in which, I presume, sacred instruction is conveyed. To this mind, speech is superior, as that mind only works on what speech places before it ; but the mind which is 'with' Pragâpati, is superior to speech as it is not dependent on speech like the other.

⁴ I.e. proudly, about her being the giver of desires to Brahman.

⁵ I.e., says Arguna Misra, the words will not come out with the Prâna life-wind and convey any sense to the hearer, but will be absorbed down into the Apâna life-wind, and not be articulated as speech at all. Cf. Kaushîtaki, p. 41 ; Kaṭha, p. 184 (with glosses) ; and Khândogya, p. 42.

⁶ I.e., I presume, was dependent on the two life-winds named.

wind¹, though impelled, (in consequence of) being without the Prāṇa, she ran up to Pragâpati, saying, 'Be pleased², O venerable sir!' Then³ the Prāṇa appeared again nourishing speech. And therefore speech never speaks after (hard) exhalation. It is always noisy or noiseless. Of those two, the noiseless is superior to the noisy⁴ (speech). This excellent (speech), like a cow, yields milk⁵, and speaking of the Brahman it always produces the eternal (emancipation). This cow-like speech, O you of a bright smile! is divine, with divine⁶ power. Observe the difference of (its) two subtle, flowing (forms)⁷.

The Brāhmaṇa's wife said :

What did the goddess of speech say on that occasion in days of old, when, though (she was) impelled with a desire to speak, words could not be uttered?

The Brāhmaṇa said :

The (speech) which is produced in the body by

Cf. p. 353 infra. For this sense of the word 'between,' see p. 258 supra, and Khândogya-upanishad, p. 623.

¹ And not with the Prāṇa, so as to be articulated. Cf. p. 264.

² I. e. to withdraw the 'curse' pronounced, as above stated.

³ After the curse was withdrawn, says Arguna Mirra. Cf. Brīhadâraṇyaka, p. 317.

⁴ Since, says Arguna Mirra, noiseless speech is the source of all words—Vānmaya. Perhaps we may compare Aitareya-brāhmaṇa (Haug), p. 47.

⁵ Viz. Vānmaya ; milk, as a source of pleasure.

⁶ I. e. enlightening, Arguna Mirra. But, perhaps, the translation should be, 'has powers divine and not divine.' As to this, cf. Sāṅkhya Bhāṣhya on III, 41, and Sāṅkhyatattvakaumudī, p. 118, and Wilson's Sāṅkhya Kārikā, p. 37 (Sanskrit), and Svetâsvatara, p. 284 (gloss).

⁷ Arguna Mirra refers to a 'Satapatha text' in praise of the subtle speech. I cannot trace the text. But see Nirukta (Roth), pp. 167-187.

means of the Prāṇa ¹, and which then goes into the Apāna, and then becoming assimilated with the Udāna leaves the body ², and with the Vyāna envelopes all the quarters ³, then (finally) dwells in the Samāna ⁴. So speech formerly spoke. Hence the mind is distinguished by reason of its being immovable, and the goddess distinguished by reason of her being movable ⁵.

CHAPTER VII.

The Brāhmaṇa said :

On this, too, O beautiful one! they relate this ancient story, (which shows) of what description is the institution of the seven sacrificial priests ⁶. The ¹ Cf. Āhāndogya, p. 285, and the passage there quoted by Saṅkara as well as Ānandagiri's gloss. And see, too, p. 353 infra.

² Viz. the part of it which specially appertains to speech—the throat, &c.

³ All the nāḍīs or passages of the body, Arguna Misra.

⁴ I. e. at the navel in the form of sound, as the material cause of all words. There and in that condition speech dwells, after going through the body, as above stated. There, adds Arguna Misra, devotees are to meditate on speech.

⁵ This is not quite clear, but the meaning seems to be, that the merit of the immovable mind consists in its unchangeability, and that of speech in being the cause of variations in the movable mind by conveying new knowledge and new impressions. Cf. on this result, Āhāndogya-upanishad, p. 482.

⁶ Arguna Misra says, the last chapter explained Prāṇāyāma, and this explains Pratyāhāra. Prāṇāyāma is the restraint of the life-winds, Pratyāhāra that of the senses, according to the Yoga philosophy (see the quotation in the commentary at Yoga-sūtra III, 1, and see also pp. 141–145). Cf. also Gītā, p. 61. The Sapta-hotri-vidhāna as taught in the Taittirīya-brāhmaṇa and Āraṇyaka is to be found a few pages after the pages referred to for the Dasahotri-vidhāna at p. 261 supra. And the other Vidhānas also are to be found in the same parts of those books.

nose, and the eye, and the tongue, and the skin, and the ear as the fifth, mind and understanding, these are the seven sacrificial priests separately stationed. Dwelling in a minute space, they do not perceive each other. Do you, verily, O beautiful one! learn about these sacrificial priests, (which are) seven according to (their several) natures.

The Brāhmaṇa's wife said :

How (is it) these do not perceive each other, dwelling (as they do) in a minute space? What are their natures, O venerable sir? Tell me this, O lord!

The Brāhmaṇa said :

Not knowing the qualities (of anything) is ignorance (of it). Knowledge of the qualities is knowledge. And these never know the qualities of each other. The tongue, the eye, the ear likewise, the skin, the mind, and the understanding also, do not apprehend smells, the nose apprehends them. The nose, the eye, the ear likewise, the skin, the mind, and the understanding also, do not apprehend tastes, the tongue apprehends them. The nose, the tongue, the ear likewise, the skin, the mind, and the understanding also, do not apprehend colours, the eye apprehends them. The nose, the tongue, and next the eye, the ear, the understanding, the mind likewise, do not apprehend (objects of) touch, the skin apprehends them. The nose, the tongue, and the eye, the skin, the mind, and the understanding also, do not apprehend sounds, the ear apprehends them. The nose, the tongue, and the eye, the skin, the ear, and the understanding also, do not apprehend doubt, the mind apprehends it. The nose, the tongue, and the eye, the skin, the ear, and the mind also, do not apprehend final determination, the understanding apprehends it. On this, too, they relate this ancient story,—a dialogue, O beautiful one! between the senses and the mind.

The mind said :

The nose smells not without me, the tongue does not perceive taste, the eye does not take in colour, the skin does not become aware of any (object of) touch. Without me, the ear does not in any way hear sound. I am the eternal chief among all elements¹. Without me, the senses never shine, like an empty dwelling, or like fires the flames of which are extinct. Without me, all beings, like fuel half dried and half moist, fail to apprehend qualities or objects, even with the senses exerting themselves².

The senses said :

This would be true as you believe, if you, without us, enjoyed the enjoyments (derived from) our objects³. If when we are extinct, (there is) pleasure and support of life, and if you enjoy enjoyments, then what you believe is true; or if when we are absorbed⁴, and objects are standing, you enjoy objects according to their natures by the mere operation of the mind.

¹ Cf. Kaushîtaki-upanishad, p. 93; Khândogya, p. 297; Maitrî, p. 158; and Bṛihadâraṇyaka, p. 284. The passages in the last two works seem to be identical ones.

² I. e. in their respective operations.

³ The implication, of course, is, as Arguna Misra says, that this is not so, as what is not perceived by the senses cannot be the object of the mind's operations,—a proposition which reminds one of the maxim, 'Nihil est in intellectu quod non fuerit in sensu,' apparently without Leibnitz's limitation of it. Cf. Archbishop Thomson's Laws of Thought, p. 52.

⁴ As in sleep, &c.

If again you think your power over our objects is constant¹, then take in colours by the nose, take in tastes by the eye, take in smells by the ear, take in (objects of) touch by the tongue, and take in sounds by the skin, and also (objects of)² touch by the understanding. For those who are powerful have no rules (to govern them); rules are for the weak. You should accept enjoyments unenjoyed before; you ought not to enjoy what has been tasted³ (by others). As a pupil goes to a preceptor for Vedic learning, and having acquired Vedic learning from him, performs the directions of the Vedic texts, so you treat as yours⁴ objects shown⁵ by us, both past and future⁶, in sleep and likewise wakefulness. Besides, when creatures of little intelligence are distracted in mind, life is seen to be supported, when our objects⁷ perform their functions. And even after having carried on numerous mental operations, and indulged in dreams, a creature, when troubled by desire to enjoy, does run to objects of sense only. One entering upon enjoyments, resulting from mental operations (alone), and not connected with objects

¹ I.e. if you can enjoy objects independently of the senses, whenever you choose to perform your operations. This, says Arguna Mirra, meets an objection which might be made, that the mind at the time stated does not desire objects.

² Sic in original. It comes twice.

³ Eating what has been tasted by another is a cause of degradation. Cf. Khândogya, p. 81; Maitrî, p. 103; and p. 363 infra.

⁴ You incorrectly attribute to yourself the quality of apprehending them.

⁵ I.e. presented before you by us.

⁶ This is not quite clear. Arguna Mirra has, 'not past, not future;' literally, 'not come, not gone.'

⁷ Viz. smell, sound, &c.; not by the mere operations of the mind, but by obtaining the objects, is life supported.

of sense, (which is) like entering a house without a door¹, always meets death, on the exhaustion of the life-winds², as a fire which is kindled (is extinguished) on the exhaustion of fuel. Granted, that we have connexions with our (respective) qualities, and granted that we have no perception of each other's qualities; still, without us, you have no perception³, and so long no happiness can accrue to you.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Brāhmaṇa said :

On this, too, they relate an ancient story, O beautiful one! (showing) of what description is the institution of the five sacrificial priests. The learned know this to be a great principle, that the Prāṇa and the Apāna, and the Udāna, and also the Samāna and the Vyāna, are the five sacrificial priests.

The Brāhmaṇa's wife said :

My former belief was that the sacrificial priests were seven by (their) nature⁴. State how the great principle is that there are verily five sacrificial priests⁵.

¹ The senses are the doors of the house here, as they are among the doors of the city at Gītā, p. 65.

² Owing to the want of food, &c. Cf. Maitrī, p. 112, and Khândogya, p. 422.

³ Perception of pleasure, says Arguna Misra; but he takes the subsequent clause to mean this, 'and without you no pleasure accrues to us either.' The text is here in an unsatisfactory state.

⁴ As stated in the last chapter; some MSS. read 'your' for 'my' at the beginning of the sentence.

⁵ Arguna Misra says that in this Pañkahotri-vidhāna the five chief Hotris only are stated for briefly explaining the Prāṇāyāma.

The Brâhmaṇa said :

The wind prepared by the Prâṇa afterwards becomes the Apâṇa. The wind prepared in the Apâṇa then works as the Vyâṇa. The wind prepared by the Vyâṇa works as the Udâṇa. And the wind prepared in the Udâṇa is produced as Samâṇa¹. They formerly went to the grandsire, who was born first, and said to him, 'Tell us which is greatest among us. He shall be the greatest among us².'

Brahman said :

He, verily, is the greatest, who being extinct, all the life-winds in the body of living creatures become extinct; and on whose moving about, they again move about. (Now) go where (you) like.

The Prâṇa said :

When I am extinct, all the life-winds in the body

¹ Arguna Misra says, 'The wind going to the Prâṇa, and being obstructed in upward progress by the Prâṇa, goes to the Apâṇa, and then unable to go upwards or downwards, enters the passages or nâḍis of the body and becomes Vyâṇa. In the same way Udâṇa, by the collision of the two, produces sound in the throat, and depends on Prâṇa and Apâṇa; so, too, the Samâṇa dwelling in the navel and kindling the gastric fire is also dependent on those two.' The meaning seems to be that one life-wind is distributed in the different places, and gets different names, as stated, in the order mentioned. See Maitrî, p. 28.

² A similar visit on the part of the Prâṇas (who, however, are not there the life-winds only, but the Prâṇa life-wind and the active organs) to Pragâpati is mentioned at Bṛhadâraṇyaka-upanishad, p. 1016, and Khândogya, p. 297. Cf. also Prama, p. 178; Bṛhadâraṇyaka, p. 317; and Kaushîtaki, p. 63. See also, generally, as to the life-winds and their functions, Bṛhadâraṇyaka, p. 280, and Saṅkara's comment there; Yoga-sûtras III, 38, and comment; Cowell's note at Maitrî, p. 247; Sânti Parvan (Moksha Dharma), chap. 184, st. 24-25; chap. 185, st. 1 seq.; and p. 258 supra.

of living creatures become extinct; and on my moving about, they again move about. I am the greatest. See I am extinct!

The Brāhmaṇa said :

Then the Prāṇa became extinct, and again moved about. Then the Samāna and Udāna also¹, O beautiful one! spoke these words, 'You do not pervade all this here as we do. You are not the greatest among us, O Prāṇa, because the Apāna is subject to you².' The Prāṇa again moved about³, and the Apāna⁴ said to him.

The Apāna said :

When I am extinct, all the life-winds in the body of living creatures become extinct; and on my moving about, they again move about. I am the greatest. See I am extinct!

The Brāhmaṇa said :

Then the Vyāna and the Udāna addressed him who was speaking (thus): 'You are not the greatest, O Apāna! because the Prāṇa is subject to you.' Then the Apāna moved about, and the Vyāna spoke to him: 'I am the greatest among (you) all. Hear the reason why. When I am extinct, all the life-winds in the body of living creatures become extinct.

¹ Arguna Misra says, Vyāna and Apāna also by force of the two 'ands' which occur in the original; and so in other places too.

² Arguna Misra says on this, 'The Prāṇa moves upwards through the help of the Apāna. If it moved downwards, it would be simply absorbed into the Apāna.'

³ I.e. recommenced its proper operation in its proper place.

⁴ And the other life-winds also, Arguna Misra says, the name Prāṇa being merely 'indicative,' as the phrase is, of the class to which it belongs.

And on my moving about, they again move about. I am the greatest. See I am extinct!

The Brāhmaṇa said :

Then the Vyāna became extinct, and again moved about. And the Prāṇa and Apāna, and the Udāna, and the Samāna, spoke to him, 'You are not the greatest among us, O Vyāna! because the Samāna¹ is subject to you.' The Vyāna moved about again, and the Samāna spoke again. 'I am the greatest among (you) all. Hear the reason why. When I am extinct, all the life-winds in the body of living creatures become extinct; and on my moving about, they again move about. I am the greatest. See I am extinct!' Then the Samāna moved about, and the Udāna said to him: 'I am the greatest among (you) all. Hear the reason why. When I am extinct, all the life-winds in the body of living creatures become extinct; and on my moving about, they again move about. I am the greatest. See I am extinct!' Then the Udāna became extinct, and again moved about. And the Prāṇa and Apāna, and the Samāna, and the Vyāna also, spoke to him: 'O Udāna! you are not the greatest. The Vyāna² only is subject to you.'

The Brāhmaṇa said :

Then Brahman, the lord of (all) creatures, said to them who were assembled together: 'You are all greatest, and not greatest³. You are all possessed

¹ Because the Samāna helps in the digestion of the food which afterwards goes to the Vyāna for distribution through the nāḍīs.

² Because the Udāna is able to generate sound after the nāḍīs are filled up by the Vyāna.

³ 'Not greatest' because none of them is independent of the other. 'Greatest' Arguna Misra renders by 'superior to objects.'

of one another's qualities¹. All are greatest in their own spheres, and all support one another. There is one unmoving² (life-wind). There are others moving about, (which are) five, owing to (their) specific qualities. My own self is one only³, (but) accumulated in numerous (forms). Being friendly with one another, and pleasing one another, go away happily. Welfare be to you ! Support one another.'

CHAPTER IX.

The Brâhmana said :

On this, too, they relate this ancient story, a dialogue between Nârada and the sage Devamata.

Devamata said :

When a creature is about to be born, what comes into existence first, his Prâna, or Apâna, or Samâna, or Vyâna, or else Udâna ?

Nârada said :

By whichever the creature is produced, that which is other than this first comes to him. And the pairs of the life-winds should be understood, which (move) upwards, or downwards, or transversely.

¹ This is not quite clear. I presume it means that each one has the generic qualities which make the others great in their own spheres ; but the specific qualities are different.

² The one life-wind is supposed here to be generally unmoving, but its distribution among the different parts of the body as specified, for instance, in the commentary on the Yoga-sûtra III, 38, gives it the different names. The expression does not seem to be quite accurate for this, which nevertheless seems to be the true sense.

³ Another reading is, 'That one is my own self.' Cf. Maitri, pp. 28 seq., 105, and Bṛhadâraṇyaka, p. 169.

Devamata said :

By which (of the life-winds) is a creature produced? and which (of them) first comes to him? Explain to me also the pairs of the life-winds, which (move) upwards, or downwards, or transversely.

Nârada said :

Pleasure is produced from a mental operation¹, and (it) is also produced from a sound, (it) is also produced from taste, and (it) is also produced from colour, and (it) is also produced from touch, and (it) is also produced from smell. This is the effect² of the Udâna ; the pleasure is produced from union³. From desire the semen is produced ; and from the semen is produced menstrual excretion. The semen and the blood are produced by the Samâna and the Vyâna in common⁴. From the combination of the semen and the blood, the Prâna comes first into operation ; and the semen being developed by the Prâna, the Apâna then comes into operation. The pair Prâna and Apâna go upwards and downwards, and the Samâna and Vyâna are called the pair (moving) transversely. It is the teaching of the ¹ I.e. desire. 'Sound' = recollection of a woman's voice ; 'taste,' scil. of chastity ; 'colour' = the beauty of a woman, Arguna Misra. Cf. Âpastamba I, 2, 7, 8, and Lalita Vistara, p. 19.

² Literally, 'form,' which Arguna Misra interprets to mean effect, and adds, 'The Udâna causes mental activity, and by mental activity sound &c. are apprehended.'

³ I.e. of Udâna and mind, Arguna Misra ; adding, 'the result is that a creature is produced by the Udâna.'

⁴ Or, perhaps, generally, that is to say, the store of them, the specific semen being produced from desire, as before stated. The Samâna's function is the digestion of food, and that of the Vyâna is the distribution of the digested food to the whole body through the nâdis, hence the proposition in the text.

Veda, that the fire verily is all the deities¹, and knowledge (of it) arises among Brāhmaṇas, being accompanied by intelligence². The smoke of that (fire), which is of excellent glory, (appears) in the shape of (the quality of) darkness; (its) ashes, (the quality of) passion; and (the quality of) goodness is that in connexion with it³, in which the offering is thrown. Those who understand the sacrifice understand the Samāna and the Vyāna as the principal (offering). The Prāṇa and Apāna are portions⁴ of the offering of clarified butter, and between them is the fire. That is the excellent seat of the Udāna as understood by Brāhmaṇas⁵. As to that which is distinct from these pairs⁶, hear me speak about

¹ Cf. inter alia, Aitareya-brāhmaṇa (Haug's ed.), p. 1.

² Arguna Misra says intelligence means 'discussion, or argument'. The connexion of this with what has gone before, according to Arguna Misra, is this, that the author having first stated the five Hotrīs fully, now explains in what the Prāṇa and Apāna are to be offered up for acquiring the Prāṇāyama. The fire he takes to mean the self. Cf. what has been said about Vairvānara above, p. 259.

³ That is to say, the flame, I take it. He is drawing out here the figure of the fire.

⁴ These are only a subordinate part of the offering, called Āgyabhāga. They are called subordinate, I suppose, as the operations of the Samāna and Vyāna are more practically important for vitality. The fire is the self. The place of the principal offering is between the Āgyabhāgas, as stated by Arguna Misra.

⁵ The Udāna is here treated as the life-wind into which the others are to be offered up. See p. 258, and note 8 there.

⁶ The next three sentences seem to indicate what is to be destroyed in common with the life-winds. One has to get rid of all notions about day and night, good and evil, existence and non-existence, and then final emancipation is reached. The fire, which is common to all the passages, stands for the self; into that apparently all the ideas of time, and good and evil, and so forth, are to be offered as the life-winds are; and that fire stands in the place of the Udāna, for this purpose, as into the last all the other life-winds that. Day and night are a pair, between them is the fire. That is the excellent seat of the Udâna as understood by Brâhmaṇas. That which exists and that which does not exist are a pair, between them is the fire. That is the excellent seat of the Udâna as understood by Brâhmaṇas. The two—good and evil—are a pair, between them is the fire. That is the excellent seat of the Udâna as understood by Brâhmaṇas. First¹, the Samâna and Vyâna, their function² is performed: then, secondly, the Samâna comes into operation again. Then the Vâmadevya³ for tranquillity, and tranquillity is the eternal Brahman. This is the excellent seat of the Udâna as understood by Brâhmaṇas.

CHAPTER X.

On this, too, they relate an ancient story (showing) of what nature is the institution of the *Kâturhotra*⁴. The due performance of it in its entirety is now taught. Hear me, O good woman! state this won-have to be offered. As to that which exists, &c., cf. Gîtâ, p. 103, and p. 370, note 9 infra. As to good and evil and generally, cf. Kâṇḍogya, p. 60; Kaushîtaki, p. 19. They are nothing to one who knows the Brahman. Day and night Arguna Mirra takes to mean the Idâ and Pingalâ nâdis, between which is the Sushumâ, as they are connected with the sun and moon. But the sense of the whole passage is far from clear.

¹ Arguna Mirra understands these to be three Savanas.

² Of taking into the nâdis the food digested in the night, this is the morning Savana; the afternoon Savana is the kindling of the gastric fire for digesting new food.

³ The Vâmadevya is a sûkta beginning 'Kayâ narâtrâ' (Rv. IV, 31, 1). The singing of it is the third Savana, Arguna Mirra. And see Taittirîya-Âraṇyaka, p. 889.

⁴ Cf. Aitareya-brâhmaṇa (Haug), pp. 132, 133.

derful mystery. The instrument, the action, the agent, and emancipation¹, these, indeed, O you of a (pure) heart! are the four Hotris by whom this universe is enveloped. Hear also the assignment of causes exhaustively². The nose, and the tongue, and the eye, and the skin, and the ear as the fifth, mind and understanding, these seven should be understood to be the causes of (the knowledge of³) qualities. Smell, and taste, and colour, sound, and touch as the fifth, the object of the mental operation and the object of the understanding⁴, these seven are causes of action. He who smells, he who eats, he who sees, he who speaks, and he who hears as the fifth, he who thinks, and he who understands, these seven should be understood to be the causes of the agents⁵. These⁶, being possessed of qualities⁷, enjoy their own qualities, agreeable and disagreeable. And I am here devoid of qualities. Thus these seven are the causes of emancipation⁸. And among the learned who understand (everything), the ¹ Cf. as to the three first, Gitā, p. 123. They are the four categories, to one or other of which everything in the world may be referred.

² The texts here differ. Arguna Misra's reading he interprets to mean 'the subjugation of these Hotris.' The reading followed in the text seems to some extent to be supported by the sequel. But the passage altogether is not very clear.

³ So Arguna Misra—through these the knowledge of the qualities of objects of sense is acquired.

⁴ The sensations, or perceptions, referred to lead to action.

⁵ This seems to mean, that the powers of smelling, &c., when attributed to the self, make him appear as an agent, as an active principle.

⁶ I. e. action, agent, and instrument, Arguna Misra.

⁷ I. e. the three, goodness, passion, and darkness.

⁸ It is these seven from which the self is to be emancipated. 'I' must mean the self, not the Brāhmaṇa who speaks.

qualities¹ which are in the position of the deities, each in its own place, always enjoy the offering according to prescribed rules. To him who is not learned, eating various (kinds of) food, the (feeling of this or that being) mine adheres. And cooking food for himself, he, through the (feeling of this or that being) mine, is ruined². The eating of that which should not be eaten, and drinking of intoxicating drinks also destroys him. He destroys the food, and destroying that food he is destroyed in return. The learned man, being (himself) a ruler, destroying this food again produces it³. And not even a trifling obstacle⁴ arises to him from that food. Whatever is thought by the mind⁵, whatever is spoken by speech, whatever is heard by the ear, whatever is seen by the eye, whatever is touched by the sense of touch, and whatever is smelt by the nose, absorbing all these offerings from all sides, together with those (senses) which with the mind are six⁶, my fire⁷ of (high) qualifications⁸, shines dwelling within the body. My sacrifice of concentration of mind is in progress, the performance of which yields the fire⁹ of knowledge ;

¹ I.e., I presume, the senses. Cf. Gītā, p. 55. The learned do not suppose their self to have aught to do with them. Cf. Gītā, p. 64.

² Cf. Gītā, p. 53 ; Manu III, 118.

³ His knowledge gives him this power. He is not 'destroyed' by the food as the other man is. Nilakanṭha compares Bṛhadāraṇyaka, p. 884. See, too, p. 260, note 1 supra.

⁴ I.e. mischief owing to the destruction of life necessary for getting food, says Nilakanṭha quoting Bṛhadāraṇyaka, p. 913.

⁵ This includes the operation of the understanding also. Nilakanṭha says this verse explains what the word 'food' means here.

⁶ For the phrase cf. Gītā, p. 112.

⁷ That is to say, my self, Arguna Misra. See p. 259, note 3 supra.

⁸ As the objects of sense &c. are all absorbed into it.

⁹ It is called 'fire,' as it burns up all action. Cf. Gītā, p. 62.

the Stotra in which, is the upward life-wind; the Sastra, the downward life-wind; and which is very beneficial on account of the abandonment of everything¹; the Brahman priest in which, is the counsellor in all action²; the Hotri priest, the self; the Adhvaryu priest, (the self) whose hymn of praise³ is the offering; the Sastra of the Prasāstri, truth; and the Dakshinā, final emancipation. On this, too, Rik verses are recited by the men who understand Nārāyana⁴—the god Nārāyana to whom they formerly offered animal⁵ (offerings). On that Sāman hymns⁶ are sung, of which an illustration is stated⁷.

¹ Arguna Misra's commentary is not intelligible here, so I follow Nilakantha, but diffidently.

² I. e. the mind, say the commentators. 'Mantā' simply is given among the synonyms of Ahānkāra at Sāṅkhya-sāra, p. 16.

³ I. e. the actions performed for knowledge of the truth, Arguna Misra.

⁴ Nilakantha refers to a Rik 'Tapa āśīd-grihapatiḥ,' and also the famous allegory at the end of the Taittirīya-āraṇyaka. These are cited, he says, as authorities for this 'sacrifice (consisting of) concentration of mind.'

⁵ I. e. the senses, Nilakantha. Arguna Misra compares the whole passage with the Puruṣa Sūkta, which are the Rik verses alluded to, according to him. He refers for further explanations to his own commentary on that sūkta of the Rig-veda.

⁶ They sing these hymns, out of the gratification produced by knowledge of the self, says Nilakantha, and he cites Taittirīya-āraṇyaka, p. 749. See also Taittirīya-upanishad, p. 138, and Saṅkara's commentary there.

⁷ The readings of our texts here are not very satisfactory. The illustration is stated, says Nilakantha, whose reading we follow, by the Taittirīyas in the passage referred to in the last note. Arguna Misra's reading means 'such as Tāhu kāhu,' which would seem to be the words of the Sāman hymn referred to. But his commentary does not show what the words before him were. The whole figure as drawn out in this passage is not quite clear, though the general sense is pretty intelligible. Cf. the allegories at Aitareya-brāhmaṇa, pp. 132, 133, and at the close of the Taittirīya-āraṇyaka.

O modest one! understand that god Nārāyaṇa, who is the self of everything.

CHAPTER XI.

There is one director¹; there is no second director. I speak concerning him who abides in the heart. This being, the director, dwells in the heart and directs (all creatures). Impelled by that same (being), I move as I am ordered, like water on a declivity. There is one instructor; there is no second (different) from him. I speak concerning him who abides in the heart. Taught by that instructor, all snakes whatever are ever hated in the world². There is one kinsman; there is no second (different) from him. I speak concerning him who abides in the heart. Taught by him kinsmen are possessed of kinsmen³, (and) the seven Rishis. O son of *Prithā*⁴! shine in heaven⁵. There

¹ I. e. the Supreme Being, Arguna Misra. Nilakanṭha connects this with the preceding chapter by saying that this describes Nārāyaṇa, who is there mentioned. See Sānti Parvan (Moksha Dharma), chap. 226, st. 8 (Bombay ed.)

² The natural feelings of animosity are caused by the Supreme Being within. Such seems to be the meaning. Cf. Gītā, pp. 128, 129. I may remark that Arguna Misra seems to interpret the original words, which we have rendered by 'I speak concerning him,' &c., to mean 'I repeat what has been said by,' &c. This does not seem to me to be satisfactory; and it may be added, too, that Arguna Misra's interpretation appears in his gloss not on the first verse, about the 'director,' but only on the second, about the 'instructor.' Hated = full of animosity, Nilakanṭha.

³ I. e. the feeling of kinship arises from his inspiration.

⁴ The poet seems to be nodding here, as this expression cannot form part of the Brāhmaṇa's speech to his wife.

⁵ The seven sages are always mentioned together, and may well be spoken of as types of the feeling of kinship.

is one hearer¹; there is no second (different) from him. I speak concerning him who abides in the heart. Living under that instructor, (according to the proper mode of) living with an instructor, Sakra² acquired immortality in all worlds. There is one enemy; there is no second (different) from him. I speak concerning him who abides in the heart. Taught by that instructor, all snakes whatever are ever hated in the world³.

On this, too, they relate an ancient story, (about the) instruction of the snakes, and the gods, and sages, by Pragâpati. The gods, and sages, and the snakes, and the demons, approaching Pragâpati, said (to him): 'Tell us the highest good.' To them who were inquiring about the highest good, the venerable one said, 'Om⁴, the Brahman, in a single syllable.' Hearing that, they ran away in (various) directions⁵. When they were running for instruction regarding the self, the inclination of the snakes to biting had been already formed. The natural inclination of the demons towards ostentatiousness had been formed. The gods had been engaged in gifts, and the great sages in restraint of the senses. Having had one teacher,

¹ Nilakantha takes this to mean pupil, but it is difficult to reconcile that with the rest of the passage. Arguna Misra renders it by 'the destroyer of every one's doubts.' For that, it will be necessary to take the word as a form of the causative, and not the simple root śru, to hear. But see, too, p. 283, 'the instructor . . . the bearer.'

² Cf. Sauatsugâtīya, p. 152, note 1.

³ The words here are nearly the same as before; the commentators give no explanation of the repetition. But see p. 281, note 2.

⁴ Cf. Gîtā, p. 79. The full sense is that from the study of this Om the highest good is attained.

⁵ I. e. to their own dwellings, believing that they had learnt what they wanted.

and having been instructed with one word, the snakes, the gods, the sages, and the demons, all engaged in different¹ (pursuits). One hears what is said (to one) and apprehends it duly; (but even) to one who inquires and extols highly, there is no other instructor². And by his counsel does action afterwards take place. The instructor, the learner, the hearer, and the enemy, are always within the heart. Acting sinfully in the world, he becomes (a man of) sinful conduct. Acting virtuously in the world he becomes (a man of) virtuous conduct³. And he becomes a man of conduct according to his own desire⁴, who, owing to his desires, is given up to the pleasures of the senses. But he who, casting aside vows⁵ and actions, merely adheres to the Brahman, he moving about in the world identifying himself with the Brahman, becomes a Brahmacārin. To him the Brahman itself is the fuel, the Brahman the fire, the Brahman his origin, the Brahman water, the Brahman the instructor. He is raṭ in the ¹ The meaning seems to be that the original inclination was not altered by the new instruction received by them. Nīlakantha seems to understand the passage differently. What has been rendered in the text by 'when they were running for instruction,' he renders by 'when they were practically carrying out the instruction received by them;' but this rendering seems to omit all consideration of the words 'Pūrvameva tu'—already. Though, therefore, there are one or two circumstances in favour of this construction, I have adopted the other. Cf. Bṛihadāraṇyaka, p. 964.

² The meaning is that the real instructor is within oneself, 'abiding in the heart,' as said before, although instruction may in form be received from one outside, of whom one seeks to learn, and whom one respects (or extols highly, as the text has it), and although such instruction may be well apprehended.

³ Cf. Bṛihadāraṇyaka, pp. 546–853.

⁴ See Gītā, p. 117.

⁵ I. e. fasts and other like observances.

Brahman¹. Such is this subtle life as a Brahmatārin understood by the wise. Understanding it they practised it, being instructed by the Kshetragña².

CHAPTER XII.

The Brāhmaṇa said:

I have crossed beyond that very impassable place, in which fancies are the gadflies and mosquitoes³, in which grief and joy are cold and heat, in which delusion is the blinding darkness, in which avarice is the beasts of prey and reptiles, in which desire and anger are the obstructors, the way to which consists in worldly objects, and is to be crossed by one singly⁴. And I have entered the great forest⁵.

The Brāhmaṇa's wife said:

Where is that forest, O very intelligent person! what are the trees (there), and what the rivers, and the hills and mountains; and at what distance is that forest?

¹ Cf. Gītā, p. 61. The water is that required for the sacrifice. The words 'the Brahman is his origin' are not quite clear, as being not connected with the figure employed. Perhaps it might be taken otherwise thus, 'the Brahman (is) the fire produced from the Brahman,' this last standing for the arani.

² I.e. one who understands the truth, Nilakantha; God, Arguna Misra. The same sentence winds up two of the following chapters; and at p. 310 Kṛishṇa says the Kshetragña signifies the supreme self. See Gītā, p. 102 seq.

³ Cf. Lalita Vistara, p. 44.

⁴ I.e. not with the help of son, wealth, &c., says Nilakantha, as each man's salvation after having got into the course of worldly life depends on himself. Cf. Sānti Parvan (Moksha Dharma), chap. 193, st. 32, and Manu IV, 240; obstructor, thief, Arguna Misra.

⁵ I.e. the Brahman. Nilakantha compares a text from the Śruti, 'Kim svid vanam ka u sa vriksha āsa;' see Rig-veda X, 31, 7.

The Brāhmaṇa said :

There is nothing else more delightful than that, when there is no distinction from it. There is nothing more afflicting than that, when there is a distinction from it¹. There is nothing smaller than that, there is nothing larger than that². There is nothing more subtle than that; there is no other happiness equal to that. Entering it, the twice-born do not grieve, and do not exult³. They are not afraid of anybody, and nobody is afraid of them. In that forest⁴ are seven large trees⁵, seven fruits, and seven guests; seven hermitages, seven (forms of) concentration, and seven (forms of) initiation. This is the description of the forest. That forest is filled with trees producing splendid flowers and fruits of five colours⁶. That forest

¹ Cf. Khândogya, pp. 516, 517.

² Cf. Sanatsugâtīya, p. 180 and note there.

³ Cf. as to all this Gîtâ, p. 101.

⁴ This is not the forest spoken of before, but what has been before called the 'impassable place,' but which also at p. 286 is by implication called a forest, viz. the course of worldly life.

⁵ Viz. the eye, ear, tongue, skin, and nose, and the mind, and understanding—these are called trees, as being producers of the fruits, namely, the pleasures and pains derived from their several operations; the guests are the powers of each sense personified—they receive the fruits above described; the hermitages are the trees above mentioned, in which the guests take shelter; the seven forms of concentration are the exclusion from the self of the seven functions of the seven senses &c. already referred to; the seven forms of initiation refer to the initiation into the higher life, by repudiating as not one's own the actions of each member out of the group of seven. Cf. as to this Khândogya, p. 219, and commentary there.

⁶ Cf. for these different numbers of colours, Yoga-sûtra II, 19, and commentary, p. 105, and Sāṅkhya-sāra, p. 18. The trees here meant are the Tanmâtras, or subtle elements, and the theory is that the Gandha-tanmâtra, or subtle element of smell, has five qualities, its is filled with trees producing flowers and fruits of four colours. That forest is filled with trees producing flowers and fruits of three colours, and mixed. That forest is filled with trees producing flowers and fruits of two colours, and of beautiful colours. That forest is filled with trees producing flowers and fruits of one colour, and fragrant. That forest is filled with two large trees producing numerous flowers and fruits of undistinguished colours¹. There is one fire² here, connected with the Brahman³, and having a good mind⁴. And there is fuel here, (namely) the five senses. The seven (forms of) emancipation from them are the seven (forms of) initiation⁵. The qualities are the fruits, and the guests eat the fruits. There, in various places, the great sages receive hospitality. And when they have been worshipped and have disappeared⁶, another forest shines forth, in which intelligence is the tree, and emancipation the fruit, and which possesses shade (in the form of) tranown special one, so to say, and the four special ones of the others; the next is taste, the next colour, the next touch, and the last sound; each has one quality less than its predecessor. See Yoga-sūtra, p. 106, and gloss; Sāṅkhya-sūtra I, 62; and Vedānta Paribhāṣā, p. 45.

¹ These are mind and understanding; the fruits and flowers are here of 'undistinguished colours,' as the text expresses it, since they include the colours of all the fruits of all the other five sets of trees; that is to say, the subject-matter of their operations is sound, taste, &c., the subject-matters of all the senses together. 'Undistinguished colours' is, perhaps, more literally 'of colours not clear.' Arguna Misra paraphrases it by 'of variegated colours,' which is no doubt the true ultimate sense.

² The self, Nīlakanṭha. See p. 279, note 7 supra.

³ I. e., I presume, devoted to the Brahman.

⁴ I. e. true knowledge, Arguna Misra. ⁵ See note 5, p. 285.

⁶ I. e. when the senses having worked, as unconnected with the self, are finally absorbed into it. Cf. Sāṅkhya-kārikā 49 and Kaṭha, p. 151.

quillity, which depends on knowledge, which has contentment for its water, and which has the Kshetragña within for the sun. The good who attain to that, have no fear afterwards. Its end cannot be perceived upwards or downwards or horizontally¹. There always dwell seven females there², with faces (turned) downwards, full of brilliance, and causes of generation. They absorb³ all the higher delights of people, as inconstancy (absorbs) everything⁴. In that same⁵ (principle) the seven perfect sages, together with their chiefs, the richest⁶, abide, and again emerge from the same. Glory, brilliance, and greatness, enlightenment, victory, perfection, and power⁷—these seven rays follow after this same sun. Hills and mountains also are there collected together, and rivers and streams flowing with water produced from the Brahman⁸. And there is the confluence of the rivers in the secluded place⁹ for the ¹ It extends on all sides, its end cannot be perceived on any side.

² These are, according to Arguna Misra, the Mahat, Ahaikāra, and five Tanmātras. Their faces are turned downwards, as they are obstacles in the way upwards, viz. the way of final emancipation; they are brilliant, as they light up the course of worldly life; and hence, too, they are 'causes of generation.' They give birth to the universe.

³ They conceal the higher delight of final emancipation.

⁴ I follow Arguna Misra, but the text is doubtful.

⁵ Viz the Brahman.

⁶ Cf. Khândogya, pp. 295-300. The word sages here, as before, means the various organs. See Bṛihadâraṇyaka, p. 415.

⁷ Glory=renown; brilliance=Brahmic splendour (Brahmategas); perfection=obtaining what is desired; power=not being conquered by others, Arguna Misra. About the sun, see line 3 of text above.

⁸ I. e. contentment. See the second line in the text above.

⁹ I. e. the space in the heart, the sacrifice being that of 'concentration of mind,' yogayagña,—Nilakantha. A confluence of sacrifice, whence those who are contented in their own self repair to the divine grandsire himself. Those whose wishes are reduced¹, whose wishes are (fixed) on good vows, whose sins are burnt up by penance, merging the self in the self², devote themselves to Brahman. Those people who understand the forest of knowledge³, praise tranquillity. And aspiring to that forest, they are born so as not to lose courage⁴. Such, indeed, is this holy forest, as understood by Brāhmaṇas. And understanding it, they act (accordingly), being directed by the Kshetragṇa.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Brāhmaṇa said :

I do not smell smells, I perceive no tastes, I see no colour, and I do not touch, nor yet do I hear various sounds, nor even do I entertain any fancies¹. Nature desires objects which are liked; nature hates all (objects) which are hateful². Desire and hatred are born from nature³, as the upward and downward rivers is very sacred—here the meaning intended seems to be the absorption of all desires by contentment into the heart.

¹ Literally, 'lean.' ² I. e. the body in the soul, Arguna Misra.

³ Knowledge is Brahman, which is described as a forest here, Arguna Misra.

⁴ Cf. Gītā, p. 70.

⁵ This is the name for the operations of the mind.

⁶ The sense is similar to that at Gītā, p. 55. The self has nothing to do with these feelings; the qualities deal with the qualities.

⁷ Cf. Gītā, p. 65. The meaning of nature here, as in the Gītā, is in substance the result of all previous action with which the self has been associated, which result, of course, exists connected not with the self, but with the developments of nature, in the form of body, downward life-winds, after attaining to the bodies of living creatures. Apart from them, and as the constant entity underlying them, I see the individual self in the body. Dwelling in that (self), I am in no wise attached¹ (to anything) through desire or anger, or old age, or death. Not desiring any object of desire, not hating any evil, there is no taint on my natures², as there is no (taint) of a drop of water on lotuses³. They are inconstant things appertaining to this constant (principle) which looks on various natures. Although actions are performed, the net of enjoyments does not attach itself to it, as the net of the sun's rays does not attach itself to the sky⁴. On this⁵, too, they relate an ancient story, (in the shape of) a dialogue between an Adhvaryu priest and an ascetic. Understand that, O glorious one! Seeing an animal being sprinkled⁶ at a sacrificial ceremony, an ascetic who was sitting (there) spoke to the Adhvaryu, censuring (the act) as destruction of life. The Adhvaryu senses, &c. The comparison appears to mean that the feelings of desire &c. are, like the life-winds, unconnected with the self, though associated with it, and are both alike manifestations of nature.

¹ Nīlakanṭha compares Bṛhadāraṇyaka, p. 770. Arguna Misra has a different reading, meaning 'liable (to be subjugated).'

² The plural, which is in the original, is unusual. The various aspects of the 'result' stated in p. 288, note 7, being looked at separately, are described as 'natures,' like the leaves of a lotus, which in their ensemble make one lotus.

³ Lalita Vistara, p. 2, and p. 64 supra.

⁴ The figure seems to be somewhat like that at Gītā, p. 82, about the atmosphere and space, which latter remains untainted by the former. Looking on various natures, i.e. as distinct from the self.

⁵ Viz. the remaining untainted.

⁶ I.e. with water, preparatory to its being offered up for the sacrifice.

answered him (saying), this goat will not be destroyed. (This) creature will obtain welfare, since the Vedic text is such. For that part of him which is of the earth will go to the earth; whatever in him is produced from water, that will enter water. His eye (will enter) the sun, (his) ear the quarters, and his life-winds likewise the sky¹. There is no offence on my part, adhering (as I do) to the scriptures².

The Ascetic said :

If you perceive (that) good (will) result upon his life being severed (from him), then the sacrifice is for the goat, what benefit (is it) to you? Let the brother, father, mother, and friend (of the goat) give you their consent³; take him (to them) and consult (them), especially as he is dependent. You ought to inquire of those who can give their consent thus. After hearing their consent, (the matter) will be fit for consideration⁴. The life-winds⁵, too, of this goat have gone to their sources, and I think only his unmoving body remains. To those who wish to derive enjoyment from the slaughter (of a living creature), the unconscious body being comparable to fuel, that which is called an animal becomes

¹ Cf. Bṛihadâraṇyaka, p. 542, and p. 337 below.

² Cf. Khândogya-upanishad, p. 627, and also Sâṅkhya Bhâshya on Sûtra III, 1, 25, p. 774.

³ I.e. for his slaughter, which is to bring welfare to the goat. Arguna Misra says that this is a sort of reductio ad absurdum, as the sacrifice is in truth not in the interests of the goat at all.

⁴ Viz. whether the goat should be killed. Without their consent he ought not to be slaughtered; with their consent, it becomes a matter for consideration, Arguna Misra.

⁵ It may also mean the senses, as in the Khândogya, p. 297.

the fuel¹. The teaching of the elders² is, that refraining from slaughter (of living creatures) is (the duty) among all duties. We maintain that that action should be performed which involves no slaughter. (Our) proposition is no slaughter (of living creatures). If I spoke further, it would be possible to find fault with your proceedings in many ways³. Always refraining from the slaughter of all beings is what we approve. We substantiate (this) from what is actually visible⁴, we do not rely on what is not visible.

The Adhvaryu said:

You enjoy the earth's quality of fragrance, you drink watery juices, you see the colours of shining bodies, you touch the qualities of the air, you hear the sound produced in space, you think by the mind (on the objects of) mental operations. And all these entities, you believe, have life. You have not (then) abstained from taking life. You are (engaged) in the slaughter (of living creatures)⁵. There is no movement⁶ without slaughter (of living creatures). Or what do you think, O twice-born one?

¹ This is not very clear, but the meaning seems to be that the slaughter is committed for the enjoyment of the sacrificer; the sacrificer only requires fuel, and the slaughtered animal is then used for that purpose.

² Cf. Khândogya, p. 627, and next note; and Gîtâ, inter alia, p. 114, and p. 348 infra.

³ See Sāṅkhyatattvakaumudī, p. 7.

⁴ I.e. a rule expressly laid down. What is not visible means what is not expressly stated, but is to be derived by inference, and so forth (cf. Āpastamba I, 1, 4, 8). The express text is the famous one, 'Na himsyātsarvā bhūtāni.' Himsā, which is rendered slaughter here, may mean also 'giving pain' generally.

⁵ This is the tu quoque argument. The sustentation of life requires some sort of slaughter.

⁶ I.e. the support of the body, says Arguna Mirra.

The Ascetic said :

The indestructible and the destructible, such is the double manifestation of the self. Of these the indestructible is the existent¹, the manifestation as an individual² (entity) is called the destructible³. The life-winds, the tongue, the mind, and (the quality of) goodness, together with (the quality of) passion⁴, (these make up) the manifestations as individual entities. And to one who is free from these manifestations, who is free from the pairs of opposites, who is devoid of expectations, who is alike to all beings, who is free from (the thought that this or that is) mine, who has subdued his self, and who is released on all hands⁵, there is no fear anywhere⁶.

The Adhvaryu said :

O best of talented men ! one should in this (world)

¹ Arguna Misra takes it otherwise, 'the true nature of the Sat, the self.' Nīlakanṭha renders the original by sadrūpam without further explanation. This indestructible seems to correspond to that mentioned at Gītā, p. 113, which should be considered in connection with Gītā, pp. 73, 74. The note at the former page is, perhaps, not quite accurately expressed, as the word 'material cause' conveys some inadmissible associations. Perhaps 'underlying principle' might be a nearer approach to the correct idea. The existent will thus be that which really exists, as it is indestructible.

² Cf. Gītā, p. 77. ³ See Sānti Parvan (Moksha), ch. 240, st. 31.

⁴ Arguna Misra says, 'The life-winds here are indicative of the operations of the organs of action (as to which see p. 290, note 5 supra), the tongue of the perceptive senses, the mind of the internal activities, the quality of goodness of all sources of pleasure, and passion of all sources of pain,' the last two apparently covering the external world, the previous ones the human activities, internal and external.

⁵ Released scil. from piety or impiety, &c.—Arguna Misra, who says 'self' in the phrase preceding means mind.

⁶ Because, says Arguna Misra, according to the very authority which says there is sin in slaughter, all sin is destroyed by knowledge. Cf. Gītā, p. 64.

dwell in company of good men only¹. For having heard your opinion, my mind is enlightened. O venerable sir! I approach you, in the belief (that you are) the Lord; and I say (to you), O twice-born one! there is no fault (attaching) to me, performing (as I have done) the rites performed by others².

The Brāhmaṇa said:

With this explanation, the ascetic thereafter remained silent, and the Adhvaryu also proceeded with the great sacrifice, freed from delusion. Thus Brāhmaṇas understand the very subtle emancipation to be of this nature, and understanding it, they act (accordingly), being directed by the Kshetragṇā.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Brāhmaṇa said:

On this³, too, they relate an old story, (in the shape of) a dialogue, O you of a pure heart! between Kārtavīrya and the ocean. (There lived once) a king named Arguna⁴, a descendant of Kṛitavīrya, possessed of a thousand arms, who with his bow conquered the (whole) earth up to the ocean. Once

¹ Cf. Taittirīya-upanishad, p. 40.

² The readings here in the MSS. are not satisfactory. I adopt as the best that which appears to have been before Arguna Misra. The meaning seems to be this:—I have now understood the truth, but I cannot be blamed for having hitherto done that which I saw every one else do. Now I have had the benefit of conversation with a good man, and have become free from my delusion.

³ Namely, that final emancipation is not to be obtained by action, and that slaughter is sinful.

⁴ He is also called a Yogin at Raghuvamśa VI, 38. See Mallināth's commentary there.

on a time, as we have heard, he was walking about near the sea, proud of his strength, and showering hundreds of arrows on the sea. The ocean, saluting him, and with joined hands, said, 'O brave man! do not throw arrows (on me). Say, what shall I do for you? The creatures, who take shelter with me, are being destroyed, O tiger-like king! by the great arrows thrown by you. Give them security, O Lord!'

Arguna said :

If there is anywhere any wielder of the bow equal to me in battle, who might stand against me in the field, name him to me.

The ocean said :

If, O king! you have heard of the great sage Gamadagni, his son is (the) proper (person) to show you due hospitality¹.

Then the king, full of great wrath, went away, and arriving at that hermitage approached Râma only. In company with his kinsmen, he did many (acts) disagreeable to Râma, and caused much trouble to the high-souled Râma. Then the power of Râma, whose power was unbounded, blazed forth, burning the hosts of the enemy, O lotus-eyed one! And then Râma, taking up his axe, hacked away that man of the thousand arms in battle, like a tree of many branches. Seeing him killed and fallen, all (his) kinsmen assembled together, and taking swords and lances, surrounded the descendant of Bhṛigu. Râma also taking up a bow, and hurriedly mounting a chariot, shot away volleys of arrows, and blew away the army of the king. Then some of the ¹ I.e. by giving him what he desired—a 'foeman worthy of his steel' to fight with him.

Kshatriyas, often troubled by fear of the son of Gamadagni, entered mountains and inaccessible places, like antelopes troubled by a lion. And the subjects of those (Kshatriyas) who were not performing their prescribed duties¹ through fear of him, became Vrishalas, owing to the disappearance of *Brāhmaṇas*². Thus the Dravidas, Ābhīras, Paundras, together with the Sābaras, became *Vrishalas*³, owing to the abandonment of their duties by Kshatriyas. Then when the heroic (children) of Kshatriya women were destroyed again and again, the Kshatriyas, who were produced by the *Brāhmaṇas*⁴, were also destroyed by the son of Gamadagni. At the end of the twenty-first slaughter, a bodiless voice from heaven, which was heard by all people, spoke sweetly to Rāma, 'O Rāma! O Rāma! desist (from this slaughter). What good, dear friend, do you perceive, in taking away the lives of these kinsmen of Kshatriyas over and over again?' Then, too, his grandfathers⁵, with Rikṭka as their head, likewise said to the high-souled (Rāma), 'Desist, O noble one⁶!' But Rāma, not forgiving his father's

¹ Viz. the protection of their subjects.

² As the kings failed to protect the people, the Brāhmaṇas apparently were nowhere forthcoming.

³ Cf. Muir, Sanskrit Texts, vol. i, pp. 482 seq., 358, 391; vol. ii, p. 423; Sānti Parvan, ch. 65, st. 13; ch. 207, st. 42 (Rāgadharma).

⁴ As Kshatriyas were required for the protection of the people, the Brāhmaṇas procreated them on Kshatriya women. See Muir, Sanskrit Texts, vol. i, p. 451 seq. And as they were the offspring of these anomalous connexions they are described as 'kinsmen of Kshatriyas.' Cf. Khândogya, p. 317; Bṛihadāraṇyaka, p. 1037 and comments there. As to heroic, see Muir, Sanskrit Texts, vol. iv, p. 302 note.

⁵ Cf. Gītā, p. 40, note 1.

⁶ See as to the whole story, Muir, Sanskrit Texts, vol. i, p. 442.

murder, said to those sages, 'You ought not to keep me back from this.'

The Pitris said :

O best of victors! you ought not to destroy these kinsmen of Kshatriyas. It is not proper for you, being a Brāhmaṇa, to slaughter these kings.

CHAPTER XV.

The Pitris said :

On this¹, too, they relate an ancient story; hearing that (story), O best of the twice-born! you should act accordingly. There was (once) a royal sage, named Alarka, whose penance was very great, who understood duty, who was veracious, high-souled, and very firm in his vows. Having with his bow conquered this world as far as the ocean,—having performed very difficult deeds²,—he turned his mind to subtle³ (subjects). While he was sitting at the foot of a tree, O you of great intelligence! his thoughts, abandoning (those) great deeds, turned to subtle (questions).

Alarka said :

My mind is become (too) strong⁴; that conquest is constant in which the mind is conquered. (Though) surrounded by enemies, I shall direct my arrows elsewhere⁵. As by its unsteadiness, it wishes⁶ to

¹ The impropriety or sinfulness of slaughter.

² Such as the subjugation of enemies and so forth.

³ The Brahman, says Nilakantha.

⁴ I.e. too strong to be under control.

⁵ That is to say, elsewhere than towards the external foes with whom he was waging war.

⁶ The text is unsatisfactory here. I adopt Nilakantha's reading.

make all mortals perform action, I will cast very sharp-edged arrows at the mind.

The mind said :

These arrows, O Alarka! will not penetrate through me at all. They will only pierce your own vital part, and your vital part being pierced, you will die. Look out for other arrows by which you may destroy me.

Hearing that, he then spoke these words after consideration :—

Alarka said :

Smelling very many perfumes, one hankers after them only. Therefore I will cast sharp arrows at the nose.

The nose¹ said :

These arrows, O Alarka! will not penetrate through me at all. They will only pierce your own vital part, and your vital part being pierced, you will die. Look out for other arrows by which you may destroy me.

Hearing that, he then spoke these words after consideration :—

Alarka said :

Enjoying savory tastes, this (tongue) hankers after

¹ This and the other corresponding words must be understood to refer not to the physical nose and so forth, but the sense seated there. The nose here, for instance, stands for the sense of smell. Nīlakanṭha understands all these words of Alarka as indicating the so-called Ha/ka-yoga, which, he adds, invariably occasions death. As to the throwing of arrows at the mind, he says, it means, 'I will subdue the mind by the restraint of the excretive organs by means of the Ha/ka-yoga.' And finally he says, 'A man, having restrained all the senses by means of the Ha/ka-yoga, merely droops away; becoming deficient in those senses, he does not accomplish his end.'

them only. Therefore I will cast sharp arrows at the tongue.

The tongue said :

These arrows, O Alarka ! will not penetrate through me at all. They will only pierce your own vital part, and your vital part being pierced, you will die. Look out for other arrows by which you may destroy me.

Hearing that, he then spoke these words after consideration :—

Alarka said :

Touching various (objects of) touch, the skin hankers after them only. Therefore I will tear off the skin by various feathered arrows.

The skin said :

These arrows, O Alarka ! will not penetrate through me at all. They will only pierce your own vital part, and your vital part being pierced, you will die. Look out for other arrows by which you may destroy me.

Hearing that, he then said after consideration :—

Alarka said :

Hearing various sounds, the (ear) hankers after them only. Therefore I (will) cast sharp arrows at the ear.

The ear said :

These arrows, O Alarka ! will not penetrate through me at all. They will only pierce your own vital part, and then you will lose (your) life. Look out for other arrows by which you may destroy me.

Hearing that, he then said after consideration :—

Alarka said :

Seeing numerous colours, the eye hankers after them only. Therefore I will destroy the eye with sharp arrows.

The eye said :

These arrows, O Alarka! will not penetrate through me at all. They will only pierce your own vital part, and your vital part being pierced, you will die. Look out for other arrows by which you may destroy me.

Hearing that, he then said after consideration :—

Alarka said :

This (understanding) forms various determinations by its operation. Therefore I will cast sharp arrows at the understanding.

The understanding said :

These arrows, O Alarka! will not penetrate through me at all. They will only pierce your own vital part, and your vital part being pierced, you will die. Look out for other arrows by which you may destroy me.

The Brāhmaṇa¹ said :

Then Alarka even there employed himself in a fearful penance² difficult to perform; but he did not obtain any arrows for these seven by his devotions. Then that king deliberated with a mind very intent on one (subject), and after deliberating for a long time, O best of the twice-born! Alarka, the best of talented (men), could not arrive at anything better than concentration of mind¹. Then directing his mind to one point², he became steady, and applied himself to concentration of mind. And (then) the brave man forthwith destroyed the senses with one arrow; and entering the self by means of concentration of mind, he reached the highest perfection. And the royal sage, amazed, then uttered this verse, 'O! Alas! that we should have engaged in all external (matters); that being possessed of a desire for enjoyments, we should have devoted ourselves before now to sovereignty! I have now subsequently learnt that there is no higher happiness than concentration of mind.' Do you understand this too, O Râma! and do not kill Kshatriyas. Perform a fearful³ penance, thence you will obtain the highest good. Thus spoken to by (his) grandfathers, the noble son of Gamadagni engaged himself in fearful penance, and attained that perfection which is difficult to reach.

¹ Sic in our copies. It should be the Pitrīs, seeing that they are relating Alarka's story to Parasurāma.

² Meditation, or pondering, according to Nīlakaṇṭha.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Brâhmaṇa said :

There are, verily, three foes in (this) world, and they are stated to be (divided) ninefold, according to qualities. Exultation, pleasure, joy⁴, these three ¹ I.e. the rāga-yoga, says Nilakanṭha, which consists in mere control of the mind. Cf. Sāṅkhya-sāra, p. 39.

² See Yoga-sūtra, p. 45.

³ This means difficult, and occasioning many trials to one who performs it.

⁴ Nilakanṭha says exultation is when one is sure of obtaining what is desired, pleasure when it is obtained, and joy when the thing obtained is enjoyed. Arguna Misra takes a different distinction; but our copy of his commentary is not quite intelligible in are qualities appertaining to the quality of goodness. Grief, wrath, persistent hatred, these are stated to be qualities appertaining to the quality of passion. Sleep, sloth, and delusion, these three qualities are qualities appertaining to the quality of darkness. Cutting these off by multitudes of arrows¹, a courageous man, free from sloth, having a tranquil self, and senses controlled, is energetic about subjugating others². On this, people who know about ancient times celebrate verses which were sung of old by the king Ambarisha, who had become tranquil (in mind). When vices³ were in the ascendant, and good (men) were oppressed, Ambarisha, of great glory, forceably possessed him-the beginning. Pleasure he takes to mean 'pride felt in supposing oneself to possess some merit,' and joy that produced when impending danger is averted. As to the next triad, the text is again unsatisfactory. The text printed in the edition which contains Nilakantha's commentary, is 'desire, anger,' &c. There is nothing about them in the commentary. Arguna Mirra's text is the one we have adopted. He says, 'grief, pain caused by loss of what is desired; anger, the pain caused by the counteraction of one's attempts to injure another; persistent hatred, the pain caused by believing another to be doing harm to oneself.' Persistent hatred is Nilakantha's interpretation. I think his interpretation is preferable. The two triads seem to be based on one principle of gradation. The distinctive marks of the three qualities are pleasure, pain, and delusion respectively, and those characterise the three triads stated in the text. See Sānti Parvan (Moksha), chap. 194, st. 27 seq.

¹ Tranquillity and so forth, Nilakantha; practising yoga or concentration of mind, Arguna Mirra.

² I.e. external, says Arguna Mirra; external foes of one's own emancipation is, I presume, what is meant.

³ Arguna Mirra says, 'his own and those of others.' Nilakantha takes good to mean not men, but tranquillity, &c. The next sentence seems rather to militate against this view, which in itself is not a well-founded one.

self of the kingdom¹. He (then) restraining his own vices, and honouring good men, attained high perfection, and sang these verses: 'I have conquered most vices; destroyed all foes; but there is one, the greatest, vice which should be destroyed and which I have not destroyed—that (vice), being impelled by which, a creature does not attain freedom from desire, and being troubled by desire, understands (nothing) while running into ditches²; (that vice), being impelled by which, a man even does what ought not to be done. That avarice—cut (it) off, cut (it) off with sharp swords. For from avarice³ is born desire; then anxiety comes into existence; and he who desires, mostly acquires qualities appertaining to the quality of passion. Obtaining those, he mostly acquires qualities appertaining to the quality of darkness⁴. When the bodily frame is destroyed, he, owing to these qualities, is born again and again, and engages in action. And at the expiration of life, again with his body dismembered and scattered about, he meets death, and again birth. Therefore, properly perceiving this, and restraining avarice by courage, one should wish for sovereignty in the self. This is sovereignty⁵; there is no other sovereignty here. The self properly understood is itself the sovereign.' Such were

¹ For the good of the people, says Arguna Misra.

² I.e. base actions, Nilakantha.

³ Avarice, according to Arguna Misra, is the belief that one has not got that which one has, and desire is the wish for more and more. Avarice, seems, however, to be the general frame of mind, always wishing for something, never being contented, and desire is the wish for a specific object.

⁴ Which are sources of delusion. Cf. a similar doctrine at Āpāstamba II, 5, 140. ⁵ Nilakantha compares Taittirīya, p. 26.

the verses sung with regard to the great sovereignty, by the glorious Ambartsha, who destroyed the one (chief vice), avarice.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Brāhmaṇa said :

On this¹, too, they relate this ancient story (in the shape of) a dialogue, O you of a pure heart! between a Brāhmaṇa and Ganaka. King Ganaka, by way of punishment, said to a Brāhmaṇa who had fallen into some offence : 'You should not live within my dominions.' Thus spoken to, the Brāhmaṇa then replied to that best of kings : 'Tell me, O king! how far (extend) the dominions which are subject to you. I wish, O Lord! to live in the dominions of another king, and, O master of the earth! I wish to do your bidding according to the Śāstras.' Thus spoken to by that glorious Brāhmaṇa, the king then heaved frequent and warm sighs, and said nothing in reply. While that king of unbounded power was seated, engaged in meditation, a delusion suddenly came upon him, as the planet² upon the sun. Then when the delusion had gone off, the king recovered himself, and after a short while spoke these words to the Brāhmaṇa.

Ganaka said :

Though this country, which is the kingdom of my father and grandfather, is subject (to me), I cannot ¹ On getting rid of the notion that this, that, and the other thing is one's own,—Arguna Mirra. Nilakanṭha agrees, and adds also on the subject of cutting off avarice.

² That is to say, Rāhu.

find my domain¹, searching through the (whole) earth. When I did not find it on the earth, I looked for Mithilā; when I did not find it in Mithilā, I looked for my own offspring. When I did not find it among them, then came the delusion on me. Then on the expiration of the delusion, intelligence again came to me. Now I think that there is no domain (of mine), or that everything is my domain. Even this self is not mine, or the whole earth is mine. And as mine, so (is it) that of others too, I believe, O best of the twice-born! Live (here, therefore) while you desire, and enjoy while you live².

The Brāhmaṇa said :

Tell me, what belief you have resorted to, by which, though this country, which is the kingdom of your father and grandfather, is subject to you, you have got rid of (the notion that this or that is) mine. What conviction have you adopted, by which verily you consider your whole domain as not (your) domain, or all as your domain?

Ganaka said :

I understand (all) conditions here, in all affairs, to be terminable³, hence I could not find anything that should be (called) mine⁴. (Considering) whose this

¹ Meaning, apparently, that over which he and no one else has power. He contracts his vision gradually, and finds nothing at all which he can call his own to the exclusion of others. He explains, further on, how he arrives at the alternative conviction stated towards the close of this speech. In the Bṛhadâraṇyaka (p. 916) he is said to have offered his kingdom to Yāgyavalkya and himself as his slave, after learning the Brahma-vidyâ. See too Muir, Sanskrit Texts, vol. iv, p. 426 seq.

² See Sānti Parvan (Moksha) I, 13.

³ Conditions of indigence or affluence, Nilakantha. Arguna Misra's reading is different.

⁴ There is a familiar verse, ascribed to Ganaka, which says, 'If was, (I thought of) the Vedic text about anybody's property, (hence) I could not find by my intelligence anything that should be (called) mine¹. Resorting to this conviction, I have got rid of (the notion that this or that is) mine. Now hear the conviction, holding which, my domain (appears to me to be) everywhere². I do not desire for myself even smells existing in the nose³. Therefore the earth⁴ being conquered is always subject to me. I do not desire for myself tastes even dwelling in the mouth. Therefore water being conquered is always subject to me. I do not desire for myself the colour (or) light appertaining to the eye. Therefore light being conquered is always subject to me. I do not desire for myself the (feelings of touch) which exist in the skin. Therefore air being conquered is always Mithilâ is on fire, nothing of mine is burnt (in it).’ The verse occurs in the Mahâbhârata, Sânti Parvan (Moksha Dharma), chap. 178, st. 2, and also chap. 276, st. 4. See too Muir, Sanskrit Texts, vol. i, p. 429.

¹ This is not clear. I have followed Nîlakantha's text. Arguna Misra's is in the earlier part more intelligible, ‘Whose is this to-day, whose to-morrow?’ But I cannot find that there is any Vedic text to this effect. Nîlakantha cites on his text Îsopanishad, p. 5. The meaning here seems to be, ‘When I considered as to whom the things I saw in my thoughts belonged to, I remembered the Vedic text that one should not wish to obtain another's property, and so, thinking about the matter with that caution, I could not make out that there was anything which I could call my own.’

² This is the alternative conclusion he has come to.

³ The sense of smell enjoys the smell, my self has nothing to do with it. Cf. Gîtâ, p. 55, also Maitrî, pp. 112, 113.

⁴ Whenever there is any smell, it is supposed that particles of earth are there; so the meaning here is ‘all things having the quality of smell are subject to me,’ and so throughout. The objects of sense are all used for the purposes of the prescribed actions, the benefits of which accrue to gods, &c. Cf. Gîtâ, pp. 53, 54, and see also pp. 84, 85.

subject to me. I do not desire for myself sounds even though existing in the ear. Therefore sounds being conquered are always subject to me. I do not desire for myself the mind always within me. Therefore the mind being conquered is always subject to me. All these actions of mine are, verily, for this purpose, (namely) for the gods, the Pitris, the Bhūtas, together with guests. Then the Brāhmaṇa, smiling, again said to Ganaka: 'Know me to be Dharma, come here to-day to learn (something) about you¹. You are the one person to turn this wheel, the nave of which is the Brahman², the spoke the understanding, and which does not turn back³, and which is checked by the quality of goodness as its circumference⁴.'

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Brāhmaṇa said :

O modest one ! I do not move about in this world in the way which, according to your own understanding, you have guessed. I⁵ am a Brāhmaṇa, I am

¹ I.e. to put him to the test. Such examinations are often referred to in our later literature.

² I.e. Veda, says Arguna Misra.

³ I.e. says Arguna Misra, which leads to the seat from which there is no return. Cf. Gītā, p. 112.

⁴ The wheel is the yoga, says Arguna Misra. The expression is noteworthy, as being that used of Buddha's teaching. See on that David's Buddhism, p. 45.

⁵ The man who has achieved final emancipation has got that, in which the benefits to be derived from the course of life of a Brāhmaṇa, &c., are included (see p. 191 supra). Hence, says he, the emancipated, I am a forester, and I likewise perform the duties of a householder, observing vows. I am not such, O beautiful one! as you see me with the eye. I pervade every single thing that is in this world. Whatever creatures there are in the world, movable or not moving, know me to be the destroyer of them as fire is of wood¹. Sovereignty over the whole world, and even over heaven; that, or else this knowledge; (of these two) knowledge is my only wealth². This³ is the path of the Brāhmaṇas, by which those who understand that⁴ proceed, to households, or residence in forests, or, dwelling with preceptors, or among mendicants⁵. With numerous unconfused symbols only one knowledge is approached. And those who, adhering to various symbols and Āśramas, have their understanding full of tranquillity⁶, go to the single entity as rivers to the ocean. This path is traversed by the understanding, not by the body⁷. Actions have a beginning and an end, and the body is tied down by action. Hence, O beautiful one! you doubt, on which your question is based as to what world you will go to by being joined to me, is wrong. See p. 256 supra.

¹ He is speaking here on the footing of the essential identity of everything. Cf. Gītā, p. 62.

² The expression here is clumsy; the meaning is that he prefers knowledge to sovereignty, if the alternative is offered him.

³ Viz. knowledge.

⁴ I.e. the Brahman.

⁵ These are the four orders or Āśramas.

⁶ The knowledge to be acquired, by whatever symbols the attempt to acquire it is made, is but this, that all is one; and that is acquired certainly when tranquillity has been achieved.

⁷ I.e. by realising the identity of everything, not by the actions performed with the body, which, as he goes on to show, are perishable, and cannot lead to any lasting result.

(need) have no fear occasioned by the other world. With your heart intent upon the real entity, you will certainly come into my self.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Brāhmaṇa's wife said :

This is not possible to be understood by one whose self¹ is frivolous, or by one whose self is not refined ; and my intelligence is very frivolous, and narrow, and confused. Tell me the means by which this knowledge is acquired. I (wish to) learn from you the source from which that knowledge proceeds.

The Brāhmaṇa said :

Know that he who devotes himself to the Brahman is the (lower) Arāṇi, the instructor is the upper Arāṇi. Penance and sacred learning cause the attrition², and from that the fire of knowledge is produced.

The Brāhmaṇa's wife said :

As to this symbol of the Brahman which is denominated the Kshetragṛā, where, indeed, is (to be found) a description of it, by which it³ is capable of being comprehended ?

¹ I. e. mind, Arguna Misra.

² Scil. of the Arāṇis (i.e. the wood used for kindling fire) ; the sense is, that the pupil who has penance and Vedic learning goes to a teacher for knowledge. See Svetārvataṛa, pp. 307, 308.

³ I. e. the Brahman, says Arguna Misra, of which the Kshetragṛā is only a symbol. For a definition of Kshetragṛā, see Sānu Parvan (Moksha), chap. 187, st. 23.

The Brāhmaṇa said :

He is without symbols¹, and also without qualities; nothing exists that is a cause of him. I will only state the means by which he can be comprehended or not. A good means is found, namely, action² and knowledge, by which that³ (entity), which has the symbols (useful) for knowledge⁴ attributed to it through ignorance, is perceived as by bees⁵. In the (rules for) final emancipation, it is not laid down, that a certain thing should be done, and a certain thing should not⁶. But the knowledge of the things beneficial to the self is produced in one who sees and hears⁷. One should adopt as many of these things, (which are) means of direct perception, as may here be practicable—unperceived, and those whose form is perceived⁸, in hundreds and in thousands, all of various descriptions. Then one comes near to that beyond which nothing exists.

The Deity said :

Then the mind of the Brāhmaṇa's wife, after the

¹ See Sanatsugātiya, p. 160.

² Viz. that which is required as a preliminary to the acquisition of knowledge, and hence is necessary for final emancipation.

³ The Brahman.

⁴ I. e. symbols which are to convey a knowledge of the Brahman.

⁵ I. e. in a way not perfect; as bees hovering above a flower get the fragrance of it without grasping the flower itself, so these means give one an imperfect knowledge of the Brahman to be afterwards perfected by constant meditation upon it (nididhyāsa).

⁶ As it is in the prior portion of the Vedas, as to sacrifices, &c.

⁷ Sees, i. e. by contemplation; hears, i. e. from a teacher, Arguna Misra.

⁸ This seems to mean such things as hearing, reading, &c., which would be 'perceived' scil. by the senses; and all intellectual operations which would be 'unperceived.'

destruction of the Kshetragñā¹, turned to that which is beyond (all) Kshetragñās by means of a knowledge of the Kshetra².

Arguna said :

Where, indeed, O Krishna! is that Brāhmaṇa's wife, and where is that chief of Brāhmaṇas, by both of whom this perfection was attained? Tell me about them both, O undegraded one!

The Deity said :

Know my mind to be the Brāhmaṇa, and know my understanding to be the Brāhmaṇa's wife. And he, O Dhanañgaya! who has been spoken of as the Kshetragñā, is I myself³.

CHAPTER XX.

Arguna said :

Be pleased to explain to me the Brahman which is the highest object of knowledge; for by your favour my mind is much interested in (these) subtle⁴ (subjects).

Vāsudeva said :

On this, too, they relate an ancient story (in the shape of) a dialogue, connected with final emancipation, between a preceptor and a pupil. A talented

¹ I.e. after the identification of the individual self with the universal self, when the individual ceases to be perceived as such. Cf. Sānti Parvan (Moksha), chap. 187, st. 23.

² That beyond Kshetragñās=the absolute supreme self. Cf. Gītā, p. 106.

³ The substance of this speech, says Arguna Misra, is that the mind and understanding devoted to the supreme lead to final emancipation.

⁴ See p. 296 supra. The last chapter closes what in some of the MSS. is called the Brahma Gītā, or Brāhmaṇa Gītā contained in the Anugītā Parvan. See further as to this our Introduction, where the point is further dwelt on.

pupil, O terror of your foes! asked a Brāhmaṇa preceptor of rigid vows, (when he was) seated, something about the highest good. 'I' (he said), 'whose goal is the highest good, am come to you (who are) venerable; I pray of you with (bowed) head, O Brāhmaṇa! that you should explain to me what I ask.' The preceptor, O son of Prithā! said to the pupil who spoke thus: 'I will explain to you everything, O twice-born one! on which you verily have any doubt.' Thus addressed by the preceptor, O best of the Kauravas! he who was devoted to the preceptor, put (his) questions with joined hands. Listen to that, O you of great intelligence!

The pupil said:

Whence am I¹, and whence are you? Explain that which is the highest truth. From what were the movable and immovable entities born? By what do entities live, and what is the limit of their life? What is truth, what penance, O Brāhmaṇa? What are called the qualities by the good? And what paths are happy? What is pleasure, and what sin? These questions of mine, O venerable Brāhmaṇa sage! O you of excellent vows! do you be pleased to explain² correctly, truly, and accurately. There is none else here who can explain these questions. Speak, O best of those who understand piety! I feel the highest curiosity (in this matter). You are celebrated in the worlds as skilled in topics connected with the piety (required for) final emancipation. And there exists none else but you who can destroy all doubts. And we¹, likewise, are afraid of worldly life, and also desirous of final emancipation.

¹ Compare the questions at the beginning of the Svetāsvatara-upanishad.

² A similar expression to that in the Sanatsugātīya, p. 149, and elsewhere.

Vâsudeva said :

That talented preceptor, who preserved (all) vows, O son of Prithâ ! O chief of the family of the Kauravas ! O restrainer of foes ! duly explained all those questions to that pupil, who had approached him (for instruction), who put (his) questions properly, who was possessed of (the necessary) qualifications, who was tranquil, who conducted himself in an agreeable manner, who was like (his) shadow², and who was a self-restrained ascetic and a Brahmakârin.

The preceptor said :

All this, which is connected with the knowledge of the *Vedas*³ and involves a consideration of the real entity, and which is cultivated by the chief sages, was declared by Brahman. We consider knowledge only as the highest thing ; and renunciation⁴ as the best penance. And he who understands determinately the true object of knowledge which is impregnable⁵—the self abiding in all entities—and who can move about anywhere⁶, is esteemed highest. The learned man who perceives the abiding together⁷,

¹ It is not easy to account for the change here from the singular to the plural.

² I. e. always attended on the preceptor. Cf. generally, Mundaka, p. 283.

³ The question was not quite from his own imagination, says Nilakantha. Arguna Misra has a different reading, which he interprets to mean 'that on which the Vedas are all at one.'

⁴ Of the fruit of action, Arguna Misra.

⁵ I. e. not such as to require modification by any other knowledge, as knowledge of the world does.

⁶ Nilakantha compares Āhândogya, pp. 523-553.

⁷ I. e. of Āt and Gadâ, says Nilakantha ; of Brahman and its manifestations, as alluded to, inter alia, at pp. 105, 106, 191 supra.

and the severance also, and likewise unity and variety¹, is released from misery. He who does not desire anything, and has no egoism about anything, becomes eligible for assimilation with the Brahman, even while dwelling in this world². He who knows the truth about the qualities of nature, who understands the creation of all entities, who is devoid of (the thought that this or that is) mine, and who is devoid of egoism, is emancipated; there is no doubt of that. Accurately understanding the great (tree) of which the unperceived³ is the sprout from the seed, which consists of the understanding as its trunk, the branches of which are the great egoism, in the holes of which are the sprouts, namely, the senses, of which the great elements are the flower-bunches⁴, the gross elements the smaller boughs, which is always possessed of leaves, always possessed of flowers, and from which pleasant fruits are always produced, on which all entities subsist, which is eternal, and the seed of which is the Brahman; and cutting it with that excellent sword—knowledge—one attains immortality, and casts off birth and death⁵. I will state to you to-day, O highly ¹ I.e. that variety is only in this world, but that the unity of everything is the true proposition. Cf. inter alia Gîtâ, p. 104.

² Cf. Bṛihadâraṇyaka, p. 858, and Gîtâ, p. 65.

³ I.e. the Prakṛiti of the Sâṅkhyas.

⁴ The great elements are the five tanmâtras of earth, water, fire, air, and space, which afterwards produce what we have called the gross elements in the text, namely, the earth &c. which we perceive.

⁵ The tree typifies worldly life. Cf. pp. 111–189 supra. The leaves and flowers, Arguna Misra says, stand for volition and action; and Nilakantha seems to agree. The tree is called eternal, as worldly life is supposed to have had no beginning. Cf. Sâṁkhya Bhâṣya, p. 494, 'sprout from the seed,' this rendering is necessitated by Brahman being described as the seed. Cf. Mundaka, p. 288; Svetâsvatara, p. 362; Kaṭha, pp. 143, 144.

talented one! the true conclusion¹ about the past, the present, the future, and so forth, and piety, desire, and wealth², which is understood by the multitudes of Siddhas, which belongs to olden times, and is eternal, which ought to be apprehended, and understanding which talented men have here attained perfection. Formerly³, the sages, Br̥haspati, Bharadvāga, Gautama, and likewise Bhārgava, Vasishṭha, and also Kāśyapa, and Viśvāmitra, and Atri also, desiring knowledge, met each other, after having travelled over all paths⁴, and becoming wearied of their own actions. And those twice-born (sages), giving the lead to the old sage Āṅgīrasa, saw Brahman, from whom (all) sin has departed, in Brahman's mansion. Having saluted that high-souled one who was sitting at ease, the great sages, full of humility, asked him this momentous (question) concerning the highest good: 'How should one perform good action? how is one released from sin? what paths are happy for us? what is truth and what vice? By what action are the two paths southern and northern obtained⁵? (and what is) destruction⁶ and emancipation, the birth and death of entities?' What the grandsire said conformably to the scriptures⁷,

¹ I. e. the means of arriving at it, Arguna Misra.

² The triad, the acquisition of which worldly men aspire to.

³ He explains how the doctrine belongs to olden times.

⁴ I. e. paths of action, Nīlakanṭha. See Sanatsugāṭīya, p. 165.

⁵ Namely, the Pitr̥yāna and Devayāna (Arguna Misra), as to which see Aṅgīrasya, p. 341, Kaushitaki, p. 13, and Br̥hadāraṇyaka, p. 1034.

⁶ Nīlakanṭha seems to interpret this to mean the temporary and final dissolutions of the worlds, on which see, inter alia, Vedānta Paribhāṣhā, p. 48.

⁷ So Nīlakanṭha. May it not be 'according to the received tradition?'

when thus spoken to by the sages, I will state to you. Listen (to that) O pupil!

Brahman said:

From the truth were the entities movable and immovable produced. They live by penance¹. Understand that, O you of excellent vows! By their own action they remain transcending their own source². For the truth joined with the qualities is invariably of five varieties. The Brahman³ is the truth; penance is the truth; Pragâpati also is truth; the entities are born from the truth; the universe consisting of (all) creatures is the truth. Therefore Brâhmanas whose final goal is always concentration of mind, from whom anger and vexation have departed, and who are invariably devoting themselves to piety, are full of the truth. I will speak about those (Brâhmanas) who are restrained by one another⁴, who are possessed of knowledge, who are the establishers of the bridge of piety, and who are the constant creators of the people⁵. I will speak of the four (branches of) knowledge, and likewise of the castes, and of the four orders, distinctly. The wise always speak of piety as one, (but) having

¹ I.e. by action, Nilakantha. Cf. Mundaka, p. 280, and see p. 166 supra, note 1.

² I.e. they remain apart from the Brahman, being engaged in action. This answers some of the questions put by the pupil to the preceptor. As to 'the truth,' see p. 162, note 2 supra.

³ I.e. Īśvara, or god; penance=piety; Pragâpati=the individual soul, Nilakantha. Brahman='that' (but how is 'that' 'joined with qualities?'); Pragâpati=Brahman, Arguna Misra. They agree about penance and entities (which they take to mean the gross elements) and creatures. Brahman and Pragâpati=Virâg and Hiraṇyagarbha(?), p. 186 supra. Cf. Sānti Parvan (Moksha), chap. 190, st. 1.

⁴ I.e. who commit no breach of piety through fear of one another, Nilakantha.

⁵ Cf. Gītā, p. 86.

four quarters. I will speak to you, O twice-born ones! of the happy path, which is productive of pleasure, and which has been invariably travelled over by talented men in old days for (obtaining) assimilation with the Brahman. Learn, O noble ones! from me, now speaking exhaustively, of that highest path which is difficult to understand, and of the highest seat. The first step is said to be the order of Brahmaçârins; the second is that of householders; next after that is that of foresters; and next after that too, the highest step must be understood to be that relating to the Adhyâtma¹. Light², space, sun, air, Indra, Pragâpati, one sees not these, while one does not attain to the Adhyâtma³. I will subsequently state the means to that, which you should understand. The order of foresters, (the order) of the sages who dwell in forests and live on fruits, roots and air, is prescribed for the three twice-born (castes). The order of householders is prescribed for all castes. The talented ones speak of piety as having faith for its characteristic. Thus have I described to you the paths leading to the gods⁴, which are occupied by good and talented men by means of their actions, and which are bridges of piety. He who, rigid in his vows, takes up any one of these modes of piety separately, always comes in time to perceive the production and dissolution of ¹ That is to say, that of the ascetic, who specially devotes himself to the acquisition of knowledge about the relation of the supreme and individual self (Adhyâtma).

² The deity presiding over the bright fortnight, says Arguna Mîtra. The words space and sun and air must be similarly interpreted.

³ Nilakantha says 'one sees these only while one has not had a perception of the self.' He takes light &c. to mean the 'universe.'

⁴ I.e. the means of reaching the Devayâna path (mentioned at p. 314, note 5), Nilakantha. Cf. also Mundaka, p. 312.

(all) entities¹. Now I shall state with accuracy and with reasons, all the elements which abide in parts in all objects. The great self², the unperceived³ likewise, and likewise also egoism, the ten senses and the one⁴ (sense), and the five great elements, and the specific characteristics of the five elements⁵, such is the eternal creation. The number of the elements is celebrated as being twenty-four plus one. And the talented man who understands the production and dissolution of (all) elements, he, of all beings, never comes by delusion. He who accurately understands the elements, the whole of the qualities⁶, and also all the deities⁷, casting aside sin, and getting rid of (all) bonds, attains to all the spotless worlds.

CHAPTER XXI.

Brahman said :

That unperceived (principle), all-pervading, everlasting, and immutable, which is in a state of equilibrium⁸, should be understood (to become) the city of nine portals, consisting of three qualities, and five ¹ Namely, how they are all manifestations of the Brahman, and are all dissolved in it. Cf. inter alia Gîtâ, pp. 74, 92.

² See the Ka/hopanishad, p. 149. See also p. 332 infra.

³ See p. 313, note 3 supra.

⁴ I. e. the mind. Cf. Gîtâ, p. 102. ⁵ Viz. smell, sound, &c.

⁶ Tranquillity, self-restraint, &c., Arguna Misra. Are they not rather the three qualities? As to 'twenty-four plus one' above, see p. 368.

⁷ Does this mean the senses, as at Gîtâ, p. 123? An accurate understanding of the things noted requires a knowledge of their relation to the supreme, which is the means of final emancipation. And see p. 337 infra.

⁸ See Gîtâ, p. 107, and Sāṅkhya-sāra, p. 11, and note 2, p. 331 infra.

constituent principles¹, encircled by the eleven², consisting of mind³ as the distinguishing power, and of the understanding as ruler, this is (an aggregate made up of) eleven⁴. The three currents⁵ which are within this (city) support (it)⁶ again and again, and those three channels run on, being constituted by the three qualities. Darkness, passion, and goodness, these are called the three qualities, which are all coupled with one another, and likewise serve one another, which depend on one another, and attend on one another, and are joined to one another⁷. And the five constituent principles

¹ The five gross elements of which the body is composed (cf. Mahābhārata, Sānti Parvan, Moksha Dharma, chap. 183, st. 1 seq.) are developments of the unperceived principle, the Prakṛiti. Cf. Gītā, p. 112, where the words 'which remain (absorbed) in nature' have been inadvertently omitted after 'with the mind as the sixth.' As to the nine portals cf. Gītā, p. 65.

² The five active organs, the five perceptive senses, and the mind.

³ This Arguna Misra takes to mean 'egoism.' Nilakanṭha takes the usual meaning, and adds, objects are produced from mental operations; 'distinguishing,' that is, manifesting as distinct entities.

⁴ The eleven are, according to Arguna Misra, the three qualities, the five gross elements, the group of organs and senses as one, egoism, and understanding.

⁵ Viz. the nāḍīs, Idā, Piṅgalā, and Sushumnā, Arguna Misra, who adds that they are respectively of the quality of darkness, passion, and goodness.

⁶ The three nāḍīs, says Arguna Misra, support the life-winds. Nilakanṭha takes the three currents to be the threefold inclination of the mind, viz. towards a pure piety, towards injuring other living creatures, and towards that mixed piety which requires the destruction of life for its performance. Nilakanṭha also has a different reading from Arguna Misra, which means 'are replenished' instead of 'support.' And the three channels are, according to Nilakanṭha, the Samskāras, or effects of previous actions of piety or impiety.

⁷ Coupled=always existing in association with one another; serving=being necessary to the operations of one another; depending=supporting one another like three staves, says Nilakanṭha; upholding, says Arguna Misra, as the total absence of one would lead to the absence of the others also; attending=becoming subordinate to whichever of them is dominant for the time being; joined=so as to become one organic whole. Cf. as to all this, Yoga-sûtra II, 18, and commentary, p. 101; Sâṅkhya-kārikā, Kārikā 12, with Vāṭaspati Misra's comments on it.

(are made up of) the three qualities. Goodness is the match of darkness, and passion is the match of goodness; and goodness is also the match of passion, and darkness the match of goodness. Where darkness is restrained, passion there prevails. Where passion is restrained, goodness there prevails¹. Darkness should be understood to consist in obscurity. It has three qualities², and is called delusion. Its characteristic is also impiety, and it is constant in sinful actions. This is the nature of darkness; it also appears combined (with others). Passion is said to consist in activity, and is the cause of successive³ (acts). When it prevails, its characteristic, among all beings, appears to be production⁴. Light, lightness⁵, faith, such is stated to be the nature of goodness (prevailing) among all beings, as accepted by good men. The true nature of their characteristics, in aggregation and separation, will now be stated together with the reasons; learn those accurately. Delusion, ignorance,

¹ Cf. Gitā, p. 108, and the quotation in the Sâṅkhyatattvakau-mudī, p. 64.

² I.e. characteristics, viz. obscurity (which seems to stand for ignorance), delusion (which is false knowledge), and impiety (doing that which is known to be sinful and wrong).

³ The original means, according to Nilakanṭha, wrong, unlawful conduct. As to all this cf. Sānti Parvan (Moksha), chap. 194, st. 29.

⁴ I.e. apparently perpetually doing something. Cf. Gitā, p. 108.

⁵ Cf. as to this, and generally also, Sâṅkhya-kārikā 13, and commentary of Vāṭaspati Misra (p. 64). The blazing upwards of fire is said to illustrate the lightness of the quality of goodness which belongs to fire.

want of liberality, indecision about actions¹, sleep, haughtiness², fear, avarice, grief, finding fault with good acts, want of memory³, immaturity (of intellect), nihilism⁴, violation of (the rules of) conduct, want of discrimination⁵, blindness, behaviour of the lowest⁶ quality, pride of performance without (actual) performance, pride of knowledge without (actual) knowledge, unfriendliness, evil disposition, want of faith, deluded convictions, want of straightforwardness, want of knowledge⁷, sinful action, want of knowledge (of the subtle principle), stolidity⁸, lassitude, want of self-restraint, going into inferior ways; all these qualities, O Brāhmaṇas! are celebrated as being dark. And whatever other states of mind, connected with delusion, are found in various places in this world, all these are dark qualities. Constant talk in disparagement of gods, Brāhmaṇas and Vedas, want of liberality, vanity, delusion⁹, anger, want of forgiveness likewise, and also animosity

¹ According to Gītā, p. 108, doing nothing—stolid laziness—is a mark of darkness. Cf. generally on this passage Gītā, pp. 107, 118, 124 seq.; Mairī, p. 49.

² The same word as at Gītā, pp. 116, 125 (headstrong in the latter passage should have been haughty). Cf. as to the word, Khândogya, p. 383.

³ Cf. Gītā, p. 51.

⁴ The opposite of the belief mentioned at Gītā, p. 126.

⁵ The same word as at Gītā, p. 109. But the commentators render it here by himsra, i. e. destructive.

I am not sure about the original word here, and the word next but one after this. The latter Arguna Misra renders by sūkshmatattvavedanam, which I have translated above in the text. The former seems to mean general unintelligence.

⁷ Heaviness and dullness, induced by indolence, &c., Nīlakanṭha. Lassitude is drooping from despondency. Going into inferior ways, Arguna Misra says, means falling into the inferior castes; Nīlakanṭha says it means love for base actions.

⁸ Not being cognisant of one's own shortcomings, Arguna Misra.

towards people, this is considered to be dark conduct. Whatever vain¹ actions (there are), and whatever vain gifts, and vain eating, that is considered to be dark conduct. Reviling, and want of forgiveness, animosity, vanity, want of faith also, this is considered to be dark conduct. And whatever such people there are in this world, doers of sinful acts, who break through (all) regulations, they are all held to be dark. I will state the wombs appointed for these (men) of sinful actions. They go to the hell, (namely) the brute (species), to be born in the lower hell²; (or become) the immovable entities³, animals, beasts of burden, demons, and serpents, and worms, insects, birds, and also creatures born from eggs, and all quadrupeds, and idiots, deaf and dumb men, and whatever others are attacked by diseases generated by sin⁴. These dark, evil-conducted men, who are sunk in darkness, who bear the marks of their own actions, the current of whose (thoughts) is downwards⁵, sink into darkness. I will now proceed to state their improvement and ascent; how, becoming men of meritorious actions, they attain to the worlds of those who perform good acts⁶. Resorting to a contrary⁷ (course of life), and growing old in (good) actions⁸, they exert

¹ Cf. Gītā, p. 83.

² Cf. Gītā, p. 116.

³ Such as trees and so forth, which are also forms of life.

⁴ This is alluded to in some Smṛitis too. And cf. Khândogya, p. 358, and the quotation in the commentary on Sāṅkhya-sūtra V, 122.

⁵ Such, says Nīlakanṭha, as to fit them for the nether world. See Tattvakaumudī, p. 113. As to marks, cf. p. 239 supra.

⁶ Cf. Gītā, p. 130.

⁷ I.e. contrary to that already described as dark.

⁸ Nīlakanṭha renders this to mean 'destroyed for Agnihotra and such ceremonies,' like the goat referred to above at p. 290.

themselves, and through the ceremonies (performed for them) by benevolent Brâhmanas devoted to their own duties, they go upwards to the same world (as the Brâhmanas)—the heaven of the gods. Such is the Vedic text. Resorting to a contrary¹ (course of life), and growing old in their own duties, they become men in this world whose nature is to return². Coming to a sinful womb, as *Kândâlas*³, or deaf, or lisping men, they attain to higher and higher castes in order; going beyond the Sûdra womb, and (beyond) whatever other dark qualities there are which abide in the quality of darkness⁴ in the current (of this world). Attachment to objects of desire is laid down to be the great delusion. There, sages and saints and gods become deluded, wishing for pleasure. Darkness⁵, delusion, the great delusion, the great obscurity called anger, and death the blinding obscurity; anger is called the great obscurity. I have now duly described to you, O Brâhmanas! this quality of darkness, in full and accurately with reference to

¹ See note 7 on last page. The sequence of ideas seems not to be properly brought out here. In the course of transmigration after their course of conduct is altered they become men, and then proceed to heaven. This seems the real sense here.

² To return to life and death, and so on, until they fit themselves for final emancipation. Cf. Âpastamba II, 5, 11, 10-11.

³ Cf. Kândogya, p. 359.

⁴ This is not very clear, and the commentators give but little help. The meaning probably is, that they gradually, in course of improvement, cross beyond the Sûdra caste, and all those qualities or tempers of mind, and so forth, which have been stated to appertain to the quality of darkness.

⁵ Cf. Sâṅkhya-kārikā, pp. 47, 48, and Vāṭaspati's comment. There these are identified with the 'afflictions' of the Yoga-râtra—ignorance, self-consciousness, affection, aversion, persistent attachment, and they are five divisions of false knowledge, or the quality of darkness, as it is here called. See, too, Svetâsvatara (comm.), p. 284.

its nature, and also its qualities, and also its source. Who, indeed, understands this properly; who, indeed, perceives this properly? The definition of the essence of darkness is, that one sees the real in what is unreal. The qualities of darkness have been described to you in many ways. And darkness in its higher and lower¹ (forms) has been accurately stated. The man who always understands these qualities gets rid of all dark qualities.

CHAPTER XXII.

Brahman said:

O best (of men)! I will explain to you accurately the quality of passion. Learn, O noble ones! the action of the quality of passion. Injuring (others), beauty², toil, pleasure and pain, cold and heat, power³, war, peace, argument, repining³, endurance, strength, valour, frenzy, wrath, exercise and quarrel too, vindictiveness, desire, backbiting, battle, the thought (that this or that is) mine, preservation⁴, slaughter, bonds, affliction, buying and selling, touching⁵ other people's weak points, by cutting, breaking, piercing; fierceness and cruelty, vilifying, pointing out others' weaknesses, thinking of (this) world, harbouring evil thoughts, animosity, abuse,

¹ Generally and specifically, says Arguna Misra.

² Arguna Misra says these mean pride of beauty and pride of power respectively. Cf. as to this list generally, Mairi, pp. 50, 51.

³ Cf. Sanatsugâtîya, p. 168.

⁴ I presume this means solicitude for preserving what one has got. Cf. Gîtâ, p. 48.

⁵ Literally, piercing. 'Cutting, breaking piercing,' further on, seems to indicate the greater or less offensiveness of the operation of 'touching others' weak points.'

uttering falsehoods, bad¹ gifts, doubt, boasting, censure, praise, laudation², prowess, defiance, attendance (on another), obedience³, service, harbouring desire, management⁴, policy, heedlessness, contumely, belongings⁵, and the various decorations which prevail in this world, for men, for women, for living creatures, for articles, and for houses, vexation, and also want of faith, vows and regulations⁶, and actions with expectations, and the various acts of public charity⁷, the ceremony of Svâhâ, the ceremony of Svadhâ, the ceremony of Vashat⁸, salutation, both officiating at sacrifices and imparting instruction, and also sacrificing and study, gifts and acceptance of gifts, expiations, auspicious rites, the wish 'this may be mine and that may be mine,' affection generated by the qualities⁹, treachery and likewise deception, disrespect and respect, theft, slaughter, disgust, vexing (oneself), wakefulness, ostentation, haughtiness, and attachment also, devotion, pleasure and delight, gambling, common scandal, association with women,

¹ I. e. to undeserving persons, Arguna Misra. Probably it includes the other defects also pointed out at Gîtâ, p. 120. As to doubt, see Gîtâ, p. 63.

² The one is attributing merits which do not exist, the other is merely parading merits which do exist.

³ Arguna Misra takes this literally to mean 'wish to hear.'

⁴ Cleverness in worldly affairs, Nîlakantha.

⁵ Cf. Gîtâ, passim, and see also Yoga-sûtras II, 30, and commentary (pp. 127-129, Calc. ed.)

⁶ Fasts and other observances for special benefits.

⁷ E. g. digging tanks and wells, &c.

⁸ Vashat and Svâhâ indicate offerings to gods, Svadhâ to the manes. See Bṛihadâraṇyaka, p. 982, and Māṇḍukya (Gaudapāda Kārikâ), p. 443, and commentaries there.

⁹ I presume this means attachment to the operations of the qualities. Cf. Gîtâ, p. 48. As to the wish just before, see Gîtâ, pp. 115, 116.

devotion to dancing, and instrumental or vocal music, all these qualities, O Brāhmaṇas! are described as passionate. The men who meditate on past, present, and future entities in this world¹, who are always devoted to the triad—piety, wealth, and lust also²—who acting under (the impulse of) desires exult on the success of all their desires, these men, who are enveloped by passion, have (their) currents downwards³. Born again and again in this world, they rejoice⁴, and wish for the fruit appertaining to the life after death⁵ and that appertaining to this world also. They give and receive, and make Tarpaṇa⁶, and also sacrifice. The qualities of passion have been described to you in many ways, and the action of the quality has also been stated accurately. The man who always understands these qualities, gets rid of all passionate qualities.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Brahman said :

Now I shall proceed to describe the third—the best—quality, beneficial to all creatures, and unblamable, the duty of the good. Joy¹, pleasure, nobility, enlightenment and happiness also, absence of stinginess, absence of fear, contentment, faith, forgiveness, courage, harmlessness, equability, truth, straightforwardness, absence of wrath, absence of calumnia-

¹ I. e. who are always thinking of what they have done and what they have to do, and so forth. Cf. Gītā, pp. 115, 116.

² And not that which is higher than these, viz. final emancipation.

³ See p. 321 and note 5 there. ⁴ Cf. inter alia, Gītā, p. 48.

⁵ Viz. heaven. Cf. Gītā, p. 48. ⁶ I. e. offerings to the manes.

⁷ Cf. p. 300 supra, and Sānti Parvan (Moksha), chap. 194, st. 34; chap. 219, st. 36. For nobility, Arjuna Mirra has manifestation of joy.

tion, purity, dexterity, valour. He who possesses the piety of concentration of mind, (holding) knowledge to be vain¹, (good) conduct vain, service vain, and labour vain, he attains the highest in the next world. Devoid of (the notion that this or that is) mine, devoid of egoism, devoid of expectations, equable everywhere, not full of desires, (to be) such is the eternal duty of the good. Confidence, modesty², forgiveness, liberality, purity, freedom from laziness, absence of cruelty, freedom from delusion, compassion to (all) creatures, absence of backbiting, joy, contentment, joviality, humility, good behaviour, purity in all action for (acquiring) tranquillity³, righteous feelings, emancipation⁴, indifference⁵, life as a Brahma⁶ârin, abandonment on all hands, freedom from (the notion that this or that is) mine, freedom from expectations⁶, unbroken piety⁷, (holding that) gifts (are) vain, sacrifices vain, learning vain, vows vain, receipt of gifts vain, piety vain, penance vain. Those talented Brâhmanas in this world, whose conduct is of this description, who adhere to the quality of goodness, abiding in the seat of the Brahman⁸, perceive (everything) aright. Getting rid of all

¹ Such is Nilakan^{ta}'s reading, and he takes knowledge to mean mere knowledge derived from books, &c. Arguna Misra has a different reading for vain, which he interprets to mean 'wish for fruit.'

² See Sanatsugâtiya, p. 162.

³ I.e. pure and straightforward conduct in the performance of whatever is done for attaining final emancipation.

⁴ Of other people from sorrow, Arguna Misra.

⁵ The state of being unconcerned, udâsîna, Nilakan^{ta}.

⁶ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 60, inter alia.

⁷ Arguna Misra understands the original here to mean 'not being under the control of another.'

⁸ I.e. the source of the Vedas, according to Nilakan^{ta}. The supreme is called Brahmayoni, the original word here, at Svetâ-sins, and free from grief, those talented men reach heaven, and create (various) bodies¹. The power of governing, self-restraint, minuteness², these those high-souled ones make (for themselves) by (the operations of their own) minds like the gods dwelling in heaven. They are said to have their currents upwards³, and to be gods, and of the quality of goodness⁴; and having gone to heaven they verily change in various ways, by means of nature⁵. They obtain and divide⁶ whatever they desire. Thus, O chiefs of the twice-born! have I described to you the conduct of the quality of goodness. Understanding this according to rule, one obtains whatever one desires. The qualities svatara, p. 354, where Brahman is rendered to mean Prakṛiti by Śaṅkara. See Sanatsugātiya, p. 186, note 6, and Taittirīya-āraṇyaka, p. 894. As to the probable sense here, see p. 339, note 2 infra.

¹ I. e. for themselves. Cf. p. 345 infra; Yoga-sūtras, p. 227; and Bṛhadāraṇyaka, p. 849.

² These include, according to Nilakanṭha, the other qualities of the same class unnamed here, for which see Yoga-sūtra III, 44 (p. 207). The power of governing, i. e. producing, destroying, or combining worldly objects as one pleases; self-restraint, i. e. in the presence of tempting objects; minuteness = power of becoming as minute as one pleases. The other qualities are lightness, largeness, and heaviness; power of attracting everything so as to be near oneself (e. g. touching the moon with the finger), power of obtaining one's wish.

³ Cf. p. 321 supra and note 5. Arguna Mirra, and Nilakanṭha also, here render it by 'those who go upwards.' As to which, see Gītā, p. 109.

⁴ Cf. for this sense, which is given by Arguna Mirra, Sāṅkhya-sāra, p. 19.

⁵ Nilakanṭha says this means that they change their minds for purposes of enjoyment by means of the impression of previous enjoyments. The changes, however, seem to be those above referred to—minuteness, &c., and the acquisition of other bodies. As to nature, cf. Gītā, pp. 58 and 112, with the correction made at p. 318 supra.

⁶ This is not quite clear. Does it mean distribute among themselves or others?

of goodness have been specifically described, and the operation of the qualities has been accurately stated. The man who always understands these qualities, enjoys the qualities¹, but is not attached to the qualities.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Brahman said :

The qualities cannot be explained altogether distinctly (from one another). Passion, goodness, and darkness likewise are seen mixed up (with one another). They are attached to one another, they feed on one another. They all depend on one another, and likewise follow one another². There is no doubt of this, that as long³ as there is goodness so long darkness exists. And as long as goodness and darkness, so long is passion said (to exist) here. They perform their journey together, in union, and moving about collectively. For they act with cause or without cause⁴, moving in a body. Of all these acting with one another, but differing in development, the increase and diminution will now be stated. Where darkness is increased, abiding⁵ in the lower entities, there passion should be understood to be little, and goodness likewise to be less. Where

¹ Cf. Gītā inter alia, p. 104.

² Cf. p. 318 supra.

³ So Arguna Mirra. Nilakantha says on this, 'However much goodness may be increased, it is still held in check by darkness, and thus there is the continual relation of that which checks and that which is checked between the three qualities; hence they are alike. So also passion being increased, holds goodness and darkness in check. The sense seems to be that the qualities dominate all in this world and exist together though varying in strength' (Gītā, p. 73).

⁴ I. e. spontaneously, Arguna Mirra. Cf. Sānti Parvan (Moksha), chap. 194, st. 35.

⁵ It is in the lower species that darkness is predominant.

passion is developed, abiding in those of the middle current¹, there darkness should be understood to be little, and goodness likewise to be less. And where goodness is developed, abiding in those of the upward current², there darkness should be understood to be little, and passion likewise to be less³. Goodness is the cause of the modifications in the senses, and the enlightener⁴. For there is no other higher duty laid down than goodness. Those who adhere to (the ways of) goodness go up; the passionate remain in the middle; the men of the quality of darkness, being connected with the lowest quality, go down⁵. The three qualities abide in the three castes thus: darkness in the Sûdra, passion in the Kshatriya, and the highest, goodness, in the *Brâhmaṇa*⁶. Even from afar⁷, darkness, goodness, and passion also, are seen to have been together and moving about collectively. We have never heard of them (as existing) separately. Seeing the sun rising, evil-doers are alarmed, and travellers, suffering trouble from the heat, feel the warmth. The sun is goodness developed, evil-doers likewise are darkness, and the heat to the travellers is said to be a property of

¹ I. e. the human species, Arguna Mirra. Cf. Gîtâ, p. 109.

² See Gîtâ, p. 109, also p. 327 supra. In his Sāṅkhyatattva-kaumudî, Vâṭaspati Mirra applies the epithet to Yogins (see p. 13 of Târânâth's edition, and the editor's note there).

³ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 108.

⁴ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 108. The modifications of the senses constituting perception by them is an operation of the quality of goodness. This seems to be the meaning of the text; as to this, cf. Tattva-kaumudî, p. 14 (Târânâth's edition).

⁵ See Gîtâ, p. 109; the words are nearly identical.

⁶ Cf. Sānti Parvan (Moksha), chap. 188, st. 15. The Vaisya is omitted here.

⁷ I. e. Arguna Mirra says, even after much observation.

passion¹. The light in the sun is goodness ; the heat is the quality of passion ; and its eclipse on the Parvan² days must be understood to be of the quality of darkness. So in all shining bodies, there exist three qualities. And they act by turns in the several places in several ways. Among immovable entities, darkness is in the form of their belonging to the lower species ; the qualities of passion are variable ; and the oleaginous property is of the quality of goodness³. The day should be understood to be threefold, the night is stated to be threefold, and likewise months, half-months, years, seasons, and the conjunctions⁴. Threefold are the gifts given⁵, threefold the sacrifices performed, threefold are the ¹ This illustrates the existence of the qualities as one body. Even the enlightening sun, which embodies the quality of goodness, produces effects which belong to the other qualities. The fear and sorrow which evil-doers, that is thieves, feel, is an effect of the rising of the sun, which appertains to the quality of darkness, and the heat as being the cause of vexation and consequent delusion to travellers, appertains to the quality of passion.

² I.e. the days of the moon's conjunction or opposition.

³ I understand this to mean that in the 'immovable entities' the three qualities co-exist ; the birth in the lower species is an effect of darkness ; the variable qualities, viz. the heat, &c., as Arguna Misra says, are the properties of passion ; and the oleaginous properties among them appertain to goodness, as, says Arguna Misra, they are sources of pleasure (cf. Gītā, p. 118). Nilakantha says, 'Immovable entities being very unintelligent, darkness is very much developed among them,' but this last, as an interpretation of tiryagbhāvagata, appears to me to be alike unwarranted and inappropriate here.

⁴ Does this mean the period about the close of one and beginning of another yuga or age ? That is the only sense ejusdem generis with the words preceding it that I can think of ; yet the jump from years to yuga-sandhis is a long one.

⁵ Cf. Gītā, p. 120. With reference to some, at least, of the things enumerated here, the division would be rather fanciful.

worlds, threefold the gods, threefold the (departments of) knowledge, and threefold the path¹. The past, the present, and the future; piety, wealth, and lust; the Prâna, the Apâna, and the Udâna; these are the three qualities. And whatever there is in this world, all that is (made of) these three qualities². The three qualities—goodness, passion, and darkness also—are always acting unperceived. The creation of the qualities is eternal. Darkness, unperceived, holy³, constant, unborn, womb, eternal, nature, change⁴, destruction, Pradhâna, production and absorption, not developed, not small, unshaking, immovable, immutable, existent and also non-existent⁵—all these, the unperceived, (consisting) of the three qualities, is said to be. These names should be learnt by men who ponder on matters relating to the self. He who understands correctly all the names of the unperceived, and the qualities, and its pure operations, he, freed from the body, understanding the truth about (all) distinctions, and being free from all misery, is released from all qualities.

¹ See these three mentioned at Khândogya, pp. 340-359. As to departments of knowledge, cf. Gîtâ, p. 84; Arguna Mirra reads, 'threefold the Vedas.'

² The universe is all developed from the Prakṛti, which is merely the three 'qualities in equilibrium.' Cf. Sāṅkhya-sūtra I, 61.

³ Because it gives final emancipation to one who discriminates it from Purusha, Arguna Mirra. Cf. Sāṅkhya-sūtra II, 1 seq., and Sāṅkhya-kārikâ, p. 56 seq., and commentary. For another list of names of Prakṛti, see Svetâsvatara (comm.), p. 283.

⁴ Nature is not a development from anything, and hence is called avikṛti in Sāṅkhya-kārikâ 3; but 'change' here probably means the whole aggregate of Vikṛtis, 'changes' or developments, which make up Prakṛti; or by a different derivation it may, perhaps, also mean that from which all development or change takes place.

⁵ See Sāṅkhya-sūtra V, 52-56; and also I, 26, and commentary here. The Vedântins speak of Mâyâ—which answers to what the CHAPTER XXV.

Brahman said:

From the unperceived was first produced the great self¹, of great intelligence, the source of all qualities²; it is said to be the first creation. That great self is signified by these synonymous terms—the great self, intelligence, Vishṇu³, Gishṇu, Sambhu, the valiant, the understanding, means of knowledge, means of perception, and likewise cognition, courage, memory. Knowing that (great self), a learned Brāhmaṇa comes not by delusion. It has hands and feet on all sides⁴, it has eyes, heads, and faces on all sides; it stands pervading everything in the world⁵. The being of great power is stationed in the heart of all. Minuteness⁶, lightness, (the power of) obtaining (everything) (are his); he is the governor, the light, inexhaustible. Now people who comprehend the understanding, and who are always possessed of a good heart, who practise meditation, who are constant at concentration of mind, who are true to their promises, and whose senses are subdued, who are possessed of knowledge, who are not avaricious, who have subdued wrath, whose minds are clear, who are talented, who are devoid of (the thought that this or that is) mine, who are devoid of egoism,

Sāṅkhyas call Prakṛiti (see Svetāśvatara, p. 340, and Sāṅkhya-sūtra I, 69, and commentary there)—as ‘sattvāsattvābhyāmanirvāṭya.’

¹ I. e. the understanding, on which see Sāṅkhya-sūtra I, 61–64. It is called being (Purusha) further on, as it dwells in the body (Puri).

² I. e. of the effects of all qualities (namely, the universe; cf. Gītā, p. 48), Nīlakantha.

³ I. e. all-pervading, Arguna Misra. On the whole passage, see Sāṅkhya-sāra, pp. 15, 16, and note 3 on page 333 infra.

⁴ As, says Arguna Misra, it is the source of all activity.

⁵ The words are identical with those at Gītā, p. 103.

⁶ See p. 327 supra.

these being emancipated, attain greatness¹. And the talented man who understands that high and holy goal, the great self², he among all people comes not by delusion. The self-existent Vishṇu is the Lord in the primary creations³. And he who thus knows the lord lying in the cave⁴, the transcendent, ancient being, of universal form, and golden⁵, the highest goal of those possessed of understanding, that talented man, abides transcending the understanding⁶.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Brahman said :

That Mahat which was first produced, is (afterwards) called egoism ; when it is born as (the feeling itself) 'I, that is said to be the second creation. That egoism is stated to be the source of all entities⁷,

¹ I.e., says Arguna Misra, the world of the understanding. Does this mean the world of Hiranyagarbha? The understanding is said to be the 'subtle body' of Hiranyagarbha (Vedānta Paribhāṣā, p. 46). Probably the reference spiritually interpreted is to the state in which egoism and all its products are non-existent.

² Literally, 'the high and holy passage to the great self.'

³ The Mahat first manifests itself as Vishṇu before it manifests itself as Brahman or Siva (Sāṅkhya-sāra, p. 16), hence he is said to be the Lord in the primary creation. It may be added, that in the Sāṅkhya-sāra where this passage is quoted the original word rendered 'cognition' above (khyāti) does not occur, but in lieu of it occurs Brahman. The sentence 'And the talented man' &c. is also wanting there.

⁴ I.e. the understanding. See Sāṅkara on Svetārvatara, p. 329 ; Kaṭha, p. 100.

⁵ Source of enlightenment, Arguna Misra. Cf. Mundaka, pp. 303-308 (gloss).

⁶ I.e. attaching himself to the Puruṣa, as the never-changing reality, and rising above Prakṛiti and its manifestations.

⁷ I.e. when the Mahat develops into the feeling of self-consciousness—I—then it assumes the name of egoism.

⁸ See on this Sāṅkhya-sāra, Hall's Introd. p. 31, note.

that from which the changes take place¹; it is full of light, the supporter of consciousness; it is that from which the people are produced, the Pragâpati. It is a deity, the producer of the deities, and of the mind; it is the creator of the three worlds. That which feels² thus—‘I am all this’—is called (by) that (name). That eternal world is for those sages who are contented with knowledge relating to the self, who have pondered on the self, and who are perfected by sacred study and sacrifice. By³ consciousness of self one enjoys the qualities; and thus that source of all entities, the producer of the entities, creates (them); and as that from which the changes take place, it causes all this to move; and by its own light, it likewise charms the world.

¹ So Arguna Misra. Nilakantha says it means ‘born from the change, or development, viz. Mahat.’ The Sâṅkhya-sâra, p. 17, however, shows it means ‘appertaining to the quality of goodness.’ See also Sâṅkhya-kârikâ 25, and commentary there, which is of great help here. The sense is this: Egoism is of three descriptions; it appertains to the quality of goodness, and as such is the creator of the deities and mind, the deities being those presiding over the ten senses (cf. Sâṅkhya-sâra, p. 17); it is full of light, or appertains to the quality of passion (cf. ibid.), and as such imparts to the other two qualities their virtue of activity (cf. Sâṅkhya-kârikâ commentary, p. 91, Târânâth’s ed.); it is also of the quality of darkness, and as such the producer of the triple world (see ibid.). See Sâṅkhya-sûtra II, 17, 18, and comment, where a view somewhat different in one or two details is stated.

² Sâṅkhya-sâra, p. 16; Sâṅkhya-kârikâ 24, p. 89 (Târânâth’s ed.).

³ Arguna Misra says that the words Ahaṅkāra &c. are here explained; qualities here means objects, as at Gîtâ, p. 55. The meaning of the first clause is, that the feeling that the objects are for oneself, and therefore enjoying them, gives the name of Ahaṅkāra to the principle in question; its creation of all the elements gives it the name of Bhûtâdi. It is called Vaikârika, as the cause of the various activities and developments going on. The last clause seems to be an explanation of the epithet Taigasa, also applied to egoism.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Brahman said :

From egoism, verily, were the five great elements born—earth, air, space, water, and light as the fifth. In these five great elements, in the operations of (perceiving) sound, touch, colour, taste, and smell, creatures are deluded¹. When, at the termination of the destruction of the great elements, the final dissolution approaches, O talented one! a great danger for all living beings arises². Every entity is dissolved into that from which it is produced. They are born one from the other, and are dissolved in the reverse order³. Then when every entity, movable or immovable, has been dissolved, the talented men who possess a (good) memory⁴ are not dissolved at all. Sound, touch, and likewise colour, taste, and smell as the fifth; the operations (connected with these) have causes⁵, and are inconstant, and their name is delusion. Caused by the production of avarice⁶, not different from one another⁷, and insignificant⁸, connected with flesh and blood, and depending upon one another,

¹ The contact of the objects of sense with the senses is the source of delusion.

² Cf. Gītā, p. 107, and note 1 there.

³ Cf. Sāṅkhya-sūtra I, 121, and p. 387 infra.

⁴ I.e. knowledge of the truth, Arguna Misra.

⁵ Hence, as they have a beginning, they also must have an end, and hence they are inconstant.

⁶ This and following epithets expand the idea of inconstancy.

⁷ Being all in substance connected with the Prakṛiti, the material world, so to say.

⁸ Containing no reality, Nīlakanṭha.

excluded from the self¹, these are helpless and powerless. The Prāṇa and the Apāna, the Udāna, the Samāna, and the Vyāna, these five winds also are joined to the inner self², and together with speech, mind, and understanding make the eight constituents of the universe³. He whose skin, nose, ear, eye, tongue, and speech are restrained, and whose mind is pure, and understanding unswerving⁴, and whose mind is never burnt by these eight fires⁵, he attains to that holy Brahman than which nothing greater exists. And the eleven organs, which are stated as having been produced from egoism—these, O twice-born ones! I will describe specifically. The ear, the skin, the two eyes, the tongue, the nose also as the fifth, the two feet, the organ of excretion, and the organ of generation, the two hands, and speech as the tenth; such is the group of organs, the mind is the eleventh. This group one should subdue first, then the Brahman shines (before him). Five (of these) are called the organs of perception, and five the ¹ Nilakantha apparently takes the original here to mean of gross nature, not subtle, such as anything connected with the self would be. They are helpless and powerless without support from other principles, and mainly the self.

² He here states what is more closely connected with the self, and, as Nilakantha puts it, accompanies the self till final emancipation. The inner self Nilakantha takes to mean the self associated with egoism or self-consciousness.

³ Nilakantha cites certain texts to show that the perceptive senses work only through the mind, and that the objects of the senses are produced from the senses, and hence the universe, he says, is constituted of the eight enumerated above.

⁴ I. e. from the truth.

⁵ I. e. vexed by the operations of any of these.

organs of action. The five beginning with the ear are truly said to be connected with knowledge. And all the rest are without distinction connected with action. The mind should be understood to be among both¹, and the understanding is the twelfth. Thus have been stated the eleven organs in order. Understanding these², learned men think they have accomplished (everything). I will now proceed to state all the various organs. Space³ is the first entity; as connected with the self it is called the ear; likewise as connected with objects (it is) sound; and the presiding deity there is the quarters. The second entity is air; it is known as the skin as connected with the self; as connected with objects (it is) the object of touch; and the presiding deity there is lightning. The third (entity) is said to be light; as connected with the self it is called the eye; next as connected with objects (it is) colour; and the presiding deity there is the sun. The fourth (entity) should be understood to be water; as connected with the self it is called the tongue; as connected with objects it is taste; and the presiding deity there is Soma. The fifth entity is earth; as connected with the self it is the nose; as connected with objects likewise it is smell; and the presiding deity there is the wind. Thus are the five entities stated to be divided among the three⁴. I will now proceed to state all the various organs.

¹ Cf. Sāṅkhya-kārikā 27; Sāṅkhya-sāra, p. 17.

² Cf. Ka/ha, p. 148.

³ Cf. Lalita Vistara (translated by Dr. R. Mitra), p. 11.

⁴ The above sentences show the entities in the three different aspects mentioned, which correspond to each other; the ear is the sense, that which is connected with the self; sound is the object of that sense, as connected with the external world; and the

As connected with the self, the feet are mentioned by Brāhmaṇas, who perceive the truth; as connected with objects it is motion; the presiding deity there is Vishṇu. The Apāna wind, the motion of which is downward, as connected with the self, is called the organ of excretion; as connected with objects it is excretion¹; and the presiding deity there is Mitra. As connected with the self the generative organ is mentioned, the producer of all beings; as connected with objects it is the semen; and the presiding deity there is Pragāpati. Men who understand the Adhyātma speak of the two hands as connected with the self; as connected with objects it is actions; and the presiding deity there is Indra. Then first, as connected with the self, is speech which relates to all the gods; as connected with objects it is what is spoken; and the presiding deity there is fire. As connected with the self they mention the mind, which follows after the five entities²; as connected with objects it is the mental operation; the presiding deity there is the moon. Likewise (there is) egoism, the cause of the whole course of worldly life, as connected with the self; as connected with objects, self-consciousness; the presiding deity there is Rudra. As connected with the self, they mention the understanding impelling the six senses³; quarters, Dik, are the deities presiding over the senses; as to this cf. Sāṅkhya-sāra, p. 17, and Vedānta Paribhāṣhā, p. 45, which show some discrepancies. The distinctions of Adhyātma &c. are to be found in the Upanishads; cf. inter alia, Kāṇḍogya, p. 227, and cf. Gītā, p. 77.

¹ As to the original word, cf. inter alia, Svetāsvatara, pp. 197-202.

² This probably means the five senses which can perceive only when associated with the mind. See p. 268 supra.

³ The understanding is called the charioteer at Kaṭha, p. 111.

as connected with objects that which is to be understood; and the presiding deity there is Brahman. There are three seats for all entities—a fourth is not possible—land, water, and space. And the (mode of) birth is fourfold. Those born from eggs, those born from germs, those born from perspiration, and those born from wombs—such is the fourfold (mode of) birth of the group of living beings¹. Now there are the inferior beings and likewise those moving in the air. Those should be understood to be born from eggs, as also all reptiles. Insects are said to be born from perspiration; and worms of the like description. This is said to be the second (mode of) birth, and inferior. Those beings, however, which are born after the lapse of some time, bursting through the earth, are said to be born from germs, O best of the twice-born! Beings of two feet or more than two feet, and those which move crookedly, are the beings born from wombs. Understand about them also, O best of men! The eternal seat (where) the Brahman² (is to be attained) should be understood to be twofold—penance³ and meritorious action. Such is the doctrine of the learned. Action should be understood to be of various⁴

¹ Cf. Khândogya, pp. 404–406, and glosses; Aitareya, p. 243; Vedānta Paribhāṣā, p. 47; Sāṅkhya-sūtra V, 111; Manu I, 43; Max Müller's note at p. 94 of his Khândogya in this series.

² So Nīlakaṇṭha, but he also adds that this means birth as a Brāhmaṇa, which seems to be quite wrong. Arguna Misra's 'means of acquiring Brahman' is right. See p. 369 infra.

³ I. e., I presume, 'knowledge.' Sāṅkara has so interpreted the word at Mundaka, p. 270, and Kaṭha, p. 127, and elsewhere; and see Sanatsugātīya, p. 166 supra.

⁴ Another reading is 'of two kinds.' But I prefer this, as three kinds are mentioned further on.

descriptions, (namely) sacrifice, gift at a sacrifice, and sacred study¹, for (every one) who is born². Such is the teaching of the ancients. He who duly understands this, becomes possessed of concentration of mind, O chief of the twice-born! and know, too, that he is released from all sins. Space³ is the first entity; as connected with the (individual) self it is called the ear; as connected with objects likewise it is called sound; and the presiding deity there is the quarters. The second entity is air; as connected with the (individual) self it is called the skin; as connected with objects it is the object of touch; and the presiding deity there is the lightning. The third is called light; as connected with the (individual) self it is laid down to be the eye; next as connected with objects it is colour; the presiding deity there is the sun. The fourth should be understood to be water; as connected with the (individual) self it is stated to be the tongue; as connected with objects it should be understood to be taste; the presiding deity there is Soma. The fifth element is earth; as connected with the (individual) self it is called the nose; as connected with objects likewise it is called smell; the presiding deity there is Vāyu. Thus have I

¹ Cf. as to this Khândogya, p. 136, which justifies our rendering, though the commentator Arguna Misra seems to understand the passage differently.

² Arguna Misra seems to understand this to mean 'twice-born.'

³ This is a repetition of what occurs at p. 337, and apparently is spurious. But two of the MSS., both those containing commentaries, contain the passage twice. One of the other MSS. omits the passage where it occurs before, and has it here. I think that the passage is in its place before, and probably interpolated here.

accurately described to you the creation¹ as connected with the (individual) self. A knowledge of this, O ye who understand piety! is here obtained by those who possess knowledge. One should place all these together, (viz.) the senses, the objects of the senses, and the five great elements, and hold them by the mind². When everything is absorbed into the mind, the pleasures of (worldly) life³ are not esteemed. The learned (men) whose understandings are possessed of knowledge esteem the pleasure derived from that⁴. Now⁵ I shall proceed to describe that discarding of all entities by (means) gentle and hard⁶, which produces attachment to subtle⁷ (topics), and is sanctifying. The (mode of) conduct in which qualities are not (treated as) qualities⁸, which is free from attachment, in which one lives alone⁹, which is uninterrupted¹⁰, and which is full of the Brahman¹¹, is called happiness (dwelling) in one aggregate¹².

¹ I am not quite sure that this is a correct rendering. But I can think of none better, and the commentators afford no help.

² Nilakantha says, 'Thinking that the great elements are not distinct from the senses, one should hold them absorbed in the mind.' Arguna Mirra says, 'In the mind as their seat they should be placed,' as being not distinct from the mind, I presume. Cf. Kaṭha, p. 148.

³ Literally, 'birth.'

⁴ From knowledge, I presume. The commentators afford no help.

⁵ Arguna Mirra's text appears to commence a new chapter here.

⁶ Such as meditation or upāsana, and prāṇāyama or restraint of life-winds respectively, Arguna Mirra.

⁷ Cf. p. 310 supra.

⁸ I. e. bravery, learning, &c. are treated as not being merits, as they cause pride, &c., Nilakantha.

⁹ I. e. in solitude, Nilakantha; devoting oneself to the self only, Arguna Mirra. Cf. also p. 284 supra, note 4.

¹⁰ Or, says Nilakantha, free from any belief in distinctions.

¹¹ Another reading would mean 'which exists among Brāhmanas.'

¹² I. e. all collected together, I presume.

The learned man who absorbs objects of desire from all sides, as a tortoise (draws in) his limbs¹, and who is devoid of passion, and released from everything², is ever happy. Restraining objects of desire within the self³, he becomes fit for assimilation with the Brahman⁴, having his cravings destroyed, and being concentrated in mind, and friendly and affectionate⁵ to all beings. The fire of the Adhyâtma⁶ is kindled in a sage by his abandoning the country⁷, and by the restraint of all the senses which hanker after objects of sense. As fire kindled with fuel shines forth with a great blaze, so the great self⁸ shines forth through the restraint of the senses. When one with a tranquil self perceives all entities in one's own heart, then being self-illumined⁹, one attains to that which is subtler than (the most) subtle (thing)¹⁰, and than which there is nothing higher. It is settled, that the body in which the colour¹¹ is fire, the flowing¹²

¹ Cf. Gītā, pp. 50, 51, and Sānti Parvan (Moksha Dharma) I, 51, where the phrase is precisely the same as here.

² I. e. from all bonds, I suppose. See p. 292 supra.

³ Cf. Gītā, p. 51. ⁴ Cf. Gītā, p. 110. ⁵ Cf. Gītā, p. 68.

⁶ I. e. experience, Nīlakanṭha. It means direct perception of the relations between the supreme and individual self. Cf. Gītā, p. 111.

⁷ As opposed to forests. See Sanatsugâtīya, p. 159, note 9.

⁸ This must mean here the supreme self, apparently.

⁹ I. e. being devoted to the self only, Arguna Misra. The ordinary meaning of the word, however, is one who has direct experience or perception without the aid of senses, &c. Cf. Bṛihadâraṇyaka, p. 765, and Sâṁkhya Bhâṣya, pp. 648, 784, &c.

¹⁰ Nīlakanṭha says, 'The supreme Brahman which is subtler than the Brahman within the lotus-like heart.'

¹¹ I. e. that which perceives colour, viz. the sense, Arguna Misra. This applies to the analogous words coming further on.

¹² I. e. taste, says Arguna Misra, which seems to be more correct than Nīlakanṭha's blood and such other liquid elements of the body.

(element) water, and the feeling of touch is air, the hideous holder of the mud¹ is earth, and likewise the sound is space; which is pervaded by disease and sorrow; which is surrounded by the five currents²; which is made up of the five elements; which has nine passages³ and two deities⁴; which is full of passion; unfit to be seen⁵; made up of three qualities and of three constituent elements⁶; pleased with contacts⁷; and full of delusion⁸;—this same (body), which is difficult to move in this mortal world, and which rests on the real (entity)⁹, is the very wheel of time which rotates in this world¹⁰. It is a great ocean, fearful and unfathomable, and is named¹¹ delusion. The world, together with the immortals, should cast it aside, curtail it,

¹ I. e. the flesh, bone, and so forth, Nīlakantha; the mucus in the nose, Arguna Mirra.

² I. e. the senses. Cf. p. 238 supra, note 7.

³ Cf. Gītā, p. 65.

⁴ See Sanatsugātīya, p. 187 supra.

⁵ As being unholy, Nīlakantha; as the bodies of Kāṇḍālas &c. when seen are productive of sin, Arguna Mirra. See p. 155 supra.

⁶ Viz. vāta, pitta, śleshma, or wind, bile, and phlegm. The dhātus are sometimes spoken of as seven. See Yoga-sūtras, p. 192; Taitt. Ār. p. 874, commentary, and p. 246 supra. See, too, however, Svetāsvatara, commentary, p. 287.

⁷ Which is delighted only by contact with food and so forth, not otherwise, Nīlakantha.

⁸ I. e. cause of delusion. The original word for 'it is settled' at the beginning of this sentence is otherwise rendered by Arguna Mirra. He takes it to mean 'in this light (namely, as above stated) should one contemplate the body.' The other rendering is Nīlakantha's.

⁹ I. e. the self, Arguna Mirra; the understanding, Nīlakantha; difficult to move = difficult to adjust if attacked by disease, &c., Nīlakantha.

¹⁰ It is owing to this body that the self becomes limited by time, Arguna Mirra. Nīlakantha's gloss I do not follow. Cf. p. 187 supra, and p. 355 infra.

¹¹ I. e. characterised by delusion, Arguna Mirra.

and restrain it¹. Desire, wrath, fear, avarice, treachery, and falsehood also, (all these), which are difficult to get rid of, the good do get rid of by restraint of the senses². And he who in this world has vanquished the three qualities and the five constituent elements³, obtains the highest⁴—the infinite—seat in heaven. Crossing the river of which the five senses are the lofty banks, the agitation of mind⁵ the mighty waters, and delusion the reservoir⁶, one should vanquish both desire and wrath. Freed from all sins, he then perceives that highest (principle), concentrating the mind within the mind⁷, and seeing the self within the self⁸. Understanding everything, he sees the self with the self in all entities as one⁹, and also as various,

¹ I am not sure about the meaning here. Arguna Misra says, (reading visriget, 'send forth,' for vikshipet, 'cast aside,') 'send forth at the creation, curtail at the dissolution, and restrain at the final emancipation.' The commentary reads rodhayet, which we have adopted above. The text in the same copy, however, is bodhayet. Arguna Misra adds, as far as I can make out from an incorrect copy: 'as in this life everything is accomplished by these actions' (namely, I suppose, the casting aside, &c.). Nīlakanṭha says, 'This same thing is the cause of creation, destruction, and knowledge.' reading bodhayet.

² Cf. Gītā, p. 57.

³ I.e. the five great elements, as stated in Williams' Dictionary, citing Yâgñavalkya III, 145. See Sānti Parvan (Moksha), chap. 182, st. 16; chap. 184, st. 1.

⁴ I.e. the seat of the Brahman, Nīlakanṭha.

⁵ See Gītā, p. 66, where the word is the same, viz. vega.

⁶ From which, namely, the river issues. Cf. for the whole figure, Sānti Parvan (Moksha), chap. 251, st. 12.

⁷ The mind=the lotus-like heart, Nīlakanṭha. Cf. Gītā, p. 79. Concentrating=withdrawing from external objects, &c.

⁸ I.e. in the body, Nīlakanṭha. See p. 248.

⁹ Cf. Gītā, p. 83, and note 4 there. Nīlakanṭha says, 'as one, i.e.

changing from time to time¹. He can always perceive (numerous) bodies like a hundred lights from one light. He verily is Vishṇu, and Mitra, and Varuṇa, Agni, and Pragâpati. He is the supporter, and the creator. He is the lord whose faces are in all directions². (In him) the great self—the heart of all beings—is resplendent. Him, all companies of Brâhmanas, and also gods, and demons, and Yakshas, and Pisâkas, and Pitris, and birds, and the bands of Rakshases, and the bands of Bhûtas³, and also all the great sages, ever extol.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Brahman said :

Among men the royal Kshatriya is the middle⁴ quality; among vehicles the elephant⁵, and among denizens of the forest the lion; among all sacrificial animals the sheep, and among the dwellers in holes the snake; among cattle also the bull, and among by direct perception of the unity of the individual and supreme, and as various, i. e. in the all-comprehending form.'

¹ I. e. creating or acting, Arguna Misra. I think it probable that it was meant to go with the preceding words. See Gîtâ, p. 83 note; but, for this, 'changing' must be in the accusative. It is in the nominative. As the original stands, and on Arguna Misra's interpretation, the sense seems to be that when he is about to engage in the work of creation, he can obtain as many bodies as he likes. Nîlakantha compares Kṛtândogya, p. 526. And see pp. 249, 327 supra. Can always perceive = invariably obtains when he wishes.

² Cf. Gîtâ, pp. 83, 93, and note 1 there.

³ Cf. Gîtâ, pp. 85, 118.

⁴ I. e. passion—that quality is dominant in the Kshatriya, Nîlakantha. See p. 329 supra.

⁵ Commenting on Gîtâ V, 18 (p. 65) Saṅkara calls the elephant atyantatâmasa, belonging entirely to the quality of darkness.

females a male¹. The Nyagrodha, the Gambu, the Pippala, and likewise the Sālmali, the Sinsapā, and the Meshasṛiṅga, and likewise the bamboo and willow²; these are the princes among trees in this world, there is no doubt of that. The Himavat, the Pāriyātra, the Sahya, the Vindhya, the Trikūṭavat, the Sveta, the Nīla, the Bhāsa, and the Koshṭhavat mountain, the Mahendra, the Guruskandha, and likewise the Mālyavat mountain, these are the princes among mountains³. Likewise the Maruts are (the princes) among the Gaṇas; the sun is the prince among the planets, and the moon⁴ among the Nakshatras; Yama is the prince among the Pitṛis, and the ocean among rivers; Varuṇa is the king of the waters, and Indra is said to be (the king) of the Maruts. Arka is the king of hot (bodies), and Indu is said to be (the king) of shining bodies. Fire is ever the lord of the elements⁵, and Brīhaspati of Brāhmaṇas; Soma is the lord of herbs, Viṣṇu is the chief among the strong; Tvashṭri is the prince

¹ As to the constructions here, cf. generally Gītā, p. 88, and see the remarks of Rāmānuga and Sridhara on Gītā X, 21. The meaning here is, of course, the male is ruler over females.

² I do not know what distinction is intended between these two. Generally kiṭṭaka is used for the hollow bamboo, which whistles when the wind blows through it.

³ Some of these mountains are mentioned in Patañjali. See Introduction.

⁴ This list may be compared with that at Gītā, chapter X. Sometimes the same object occurs more than once with reference to more than one class; thus the moon occurs as lord of Nakshatras, of shining bodies, and of herbs—unless Soma there stands for the Soma plant. See Gītā, p. 113. Arguna Misra says expressly that the moon occurs more than once as the correlatives, the classes with reference to which she is mentioned, are different. In such cases I have kept the original names untranslated; Arka=sun; Indu=moon.

⁵ Cf. Kaṭha, p. 83.

of the Rudras, and Śiva is the ruler of (all) creatures; likewise, sacrifice of (all) initiatory ceremonies¹, and Maghavat² likewise of the gods; the north among the quarters, and among all vipras the powerful king Soma³; Kubera (is lord) of all jewels, Purandara of (all) deities. Such is the highest creation among all entities. Prajāpati (is lord) of all peoples; and of all entities whatever I, who am full of the Brahman, and great, (am lord). There is no higher being than myself or Viṣṇu. The great Viṣṇu full of the Brahman is the king of kings over all. Understand him to be the ruler, the creator, the uncreated Hari. For he is the ruler of men, Kinnaras, and Yakshas; of Gandharvas, snakes, and Rakshases; of gods, demons, and Nāgas. Among all those who are followed by (men) full of desires, (the chief) is⁴ the great goddess Māheshvarī, who has beautiful eyes. She is called Pārvatī. Know the goddess Umā⁵ to be the best and (most) holy of (all) females. Among women who are (a source⁶ of) happiness, likewise, the brilliant⁷ Apsarases (are chief). Kings desire

¹ This must mean, I presume, that the sacrifice is higher than the initiation, as male than female, see p. 346, note 1.

² This is another repetition. Indra has been mentioned before, and Purandara is mentioned further on.

³ As to king Soma, see inter alia Bṛhadāraṇyaka, p. 237; Āmāndogya, p. 342, where Śaṅkara explains 'king' by adding 'of Brāhmaṇas.' Vipras = Brāhmaṇas.

⁴ I. e. Māheshvarī is the most beautiful of womankind.

⁵ It is well known that Umā, Pārvatī, Māheshvarī are names of the consort of the third member of the Hindu Trinity; see Kena, p. 13, and Śaṅkara's comment there. See, too, Muir, Sanskrit Texts, vol. iv, p. 421, and Taittirīya-āraṇyaka, p. 839.

⁶ The idea of 'source' is supplied by Arguna Misra.

⁷ Literally, 'rich.' Arguna Misra paraphrases it by 'Gyotishmati.' Nīlakanṭha's explanation here is not quite clear.

piety; and Brāhmaṇas are the bridges¹ of piety. Therefore a king should always endeavour to protect the twice-born². Those kings in whose dominions good men lie low, lose all their qualifications³, and go into wrong paths after death. But those high-souled kings in whose dominions good men are protected, rejoice in this world, and attain the infinite (seat) after death. Understand this, O chiefs of the twice-born! I shall now proceed to state the invariable characteristics of piety. Non-destruction is the highest piety⁴, and destruction is of the nature of impiety. Enlightenment⁵ is the characteristic of gods; action⁶ the characteristic of men; sound is the characteristic of space; (the sensation of) touch is the characteristic of air; colour is the characteristic of light; taste is the characteristic of water; the characteristic of earth, the supporter of all beings, is smell; words are the characteristic of speech⁷ refined into vowels and consonants; the characteristic of mind is thought. Likewise as to what is described here as understanding, a deter-

¹ I. e. instrumental in piety, or guides to piety. Cf. Svetāsvatara, p. 370; Mundaka, p. 297.

² So literally, doubtless Brāhmaṇas only are intended here.

³ I. e., I presume, they lose all their merits, their good points are destroyed by this dereliction of duty.

⁴ Cf. p. 291 supra. Arguna Misra begins a fresh chapter with 'I shall now,' &c. ⁵ Knowledge of the truth, Arguna Misra.

⁶ I. e. action performed for the purpose of obtaining the fruit of it. The next five items refer to the five elements and their characteristic properties. Nīlakanṭha's explanation, that all these are merely parallels not stated for their own relevancy here, but as illustrations, seems to be the only available one.

⁷ I. e. the learning of other people, Nīlakanṭha. The meaning seems to be that we know speech only in its manifestation in the form of words.

mination is here formed by (that) understanding about objects which have been thought over by the mind¹. And there is no doubt of this that determination is the characteristic of the understanding. The characteristic of mind is meditation²; and the characteristic of a good man is (living) unperceived³. The characteristic of devotion is action⁴; and knowledge the characteristic of renunciation. Therefore a man of understanding should practise renunciation, giving prominence to knowledge⁵. The renouncer possessed of knowledge attains the highest goal. And crossing beyond darkness, and transcending death and old age, he repairs to that which has no second⁶. Thus have I duly spoken to you concerning the characteristic of piety. I will now proceed to explain properly the comprehension⁷ of the qualities. As to the smell of the earth, verily, that is comprehended by the nose; and the wind⁸ likewise residing in the nose is appointed⁹ to the knowledge of smell. Taste¹⁰,

¹ The text here is rather unsatisfactory; I have adopted that which I find in the copy containing Arguna Misra's commentary.

² Frequent pondering on matters learnt from Sāstras or common life, Nilakanṭha. Why mind comes twice the commentators do not explain.

³ Does this refer to what is said at Sanatsugāṭhya, p. 159?

⁴ Devotion means here, as in the Gītā, action without desire of fruits. For action the word here is the same as at Gītā, p. 115, note 2.

⁵ Cf. Gītā, p. 52, note 7.

⁶ This is Arguna Misra's interpretation, and appears to me to be correct. Nilakanṭha's is different, but seems to omit all account of abhyeti, 'repairs.'

⁷ Arguna Misra's interpretation seems to be different, but our copy is not quite intelligible.

⁸ See p. 337 supra. The wind is the presiding deity of the nasal organ.

⁹ I.e. that is its function. Arguna Misra says, 'it is pondered on,' which is not clear. ¹⁰ Cf. Gītā, p. 74, as to taste and water.

the essence of water, is always comprehended by the tongue. And the moon likewise, who resides in the tongue, is appointed to the knowledge of taste. The quality of light is colour, and that is comprehended by the eye; and the sun residing in the eye is appointed always to the knowledge of colour. The (sensation of) touch, belonging to the air, is perceived by the skin, and the wind¹ residing in the skin is always appointed to the knowledge of (the objects) of touch. The quality of space is sound, and that is comprehended by the ear. And all the quarters residing in the ear are celebrated as (being appointed) to the knowledge of sound. Thought is the quality of mind, and that is comprehended by the understanding. The supporter of consciousness² residing in the heart is appointed to the knowledge of mind³. The understanding (is comprehended in the form of) determination, and the Mahat⁴ of knowledge. To (this) positive comprehension, the unperceived⁵ (is appointed), there is no doubt of that. The Kshe-tragñā, which is in its essence devoid of qualities and eternal, is not to be comprehended by any ¹ This cannot be the presiding deity here, though one expects such deity to be mentioned; see p. 337 supra.

² The text of more than one of the lines here is rather doubtful; we follow Nilakantha, who takes this to mean the gīva, the individual soul. Cf. p. 239, note 2 supra.

³ I. e. thought, as Nilakantha points out.

⁴ Mahat is properly the same as buddhi, understanding, but as it is here mentioned separately, I suppose, it signifies Ahaṅkāra. Nilakantha takes its operation, here called knowledge, to mean 'the feeling I am,' which agrees with our interpretation, for which some support is also to be derived from p. 333 supra.

⁵ I here follow Arguna Misra, though somewhat diffidently. The knowledge 'this is I,' and the knowledge 'this is so and so and nothing else' is presided over by the unperceived—the Prakṛiti.

symbols. Therefore the characteristic of the Kshetragñā, which is void of symbols¹, is purely knowledge. The unperceived is stated to be the Kshetra² in which the qualities are produced and absorbed. And I always see, know, and hear it, (though) concealed. The Purusha knows it, therefore is he called Kshetragñā³. And the Kshetragñā likewise perceives all the operations of the qualities⁴. The qualities created again and again, do not know themselves⁵, being non-intelligent, to be created and tied down to a beginning, middle, and end⁶. Only the Kshetragñā attains, no one (else) attains, to the truth, which is great, transcendent, and beyond the qualities and the entities (produced)⁷ from the qualities. Hence a man who understands piety, abandoning qualities, and the creation⁸, in this world, and transcending the qualities, and having his sins destroyed, then enters into the Kshetragñā. One who is free from the pairs of opposites, free from the ceremony of salutations, and

¹ See Sanatsugātīya, p. 146. See also p. 309 supra.

² See Gītā, p. 102 seq. ³ I. e. he who knows the Kshetra.

⁴ Enlightenment, activity, and delusion, Nīlakanṭha.

⁵ I. e. do not know the self, Nīlakanṭha; better, I think, 'the qualities do not know themselves, only the Kshetragñā knows them.' Cf. Sānti Parvan (Moksha Dharma), chap. 194, st. 41.

⁶ I. e. production, existence, and destruction, Nīlakanṭha. This must, however, mean their manifestation, continuance, and dissolution in any particular form. For the prakṛti, which is made up of the three qualities, is beginningless. Cf. Gītā, p. 104.

⁷ I. e. the actual physical manifestations, as we may say, of the qualities.

⁸ The original, sattva, Nīlakanṭha renders by buddhi, and qualities by visible objects. In the familiar Sāṅkhya phrase sattvapuruṣānyatāpratyaya sattva means creation, or what is other than puruṣa (cf. Sāṅkhyatattvakaumudī, pp. 9-144). That is the meaning here. See too p. 371 infra, and Sānti Parvan (Moksha Dharma), chap. 194, st. 38 seq. and comments there.

from the svāhā ceremony¹, who is unmoving, and homeless², is the Kshetragnā, he is the Supreme Lord.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Brahman said :

I will state truly all about that which has a beginning, middle, and end³, and about the means for its comprehension, together with names and characteristics⁴. It is stated that day was first and then night; that months have the bright⁵ first, the Nakshatras Śravaṇa⁶ as the first (among them), and the seasons the winter as the first (among them). The earth is the source⁷ of smells, water of tastes, the light (of) the sun is the source of colours, the wind is stated to be the source of (the feelings of) touch; likewise space is the source of sound. These are the qualities of the elements. Now I shall proceed to state the highest and first of all entities. The sun is

¹ See p. 324 supra.

² See Gītā, p. 101. Unmoving probably means 'not perturbed by the qualities' (Gītā, p. 110), or perhaps the same thing as 'of steady mind' at Gītā, p. 101. The sense is pretty much the same in both places.

³ Which has birth &c., Nīlakantha, i. e. all the creation, I presume.

⁴ The names, that is to say, of the various elements, and their qualities.

⁵ This must mean fortnights.

⁶ This is specified, says Arguna Misra, as the six months of the northern solstice are caused by the sun being at this Nakshatra. As to those six months, cf. Gītā, p. 81. For the same reason, Arguna Misra adds, the winter season is mentioned as the best.

⁷ The word ādi, literally beginning, is used in the whole of this passage in different senses; it means the source, it means the best, and it means the first in order.

the first among shining bodies¹; fire is said to be the first of the elements²; Sāvitrī³ of all branches of learning; Pragāpati of deities; the syllable Om of all the Vedas; and the Prāṇa life-wind, of all words⁴; whatever is prescribed in this world, all that is called Sāvitrī⁵. The Gāyatrī is the first among metres; among (sacrificial) animals, the goat⁶ is mentioned (as the first). Cows are the first among quadrupeds, and the twice-born among men⁷. The Syena is first among birds; among sacrifices, the offering (into the fire) is the best; and among all reptiles, O best of the twice-born! the snake⁸ is the highest. Of all ages the Krīta is the first, there is no doubt of that. Among all precious things, gold (is the first), and among vegetable (products) likewise the barley seed⁹. Among all things to be eaten or swallowed food is the highest; and of ¹ This should be compared with the enumeration at p. 345 supra, and that in the Gītā there referred to.

² Cf. p. 346 supra. Nilakanṭha takes fire to mean the gastric fire, and bhūta, rendered by us elements, to mean the species of beings born from eggs and wombs.

³ The famous verse 'Tat savitur,' &c. See inter alia Br̥hadāraṇyaka, p. 999; Āpastamba I, 1, 1, 9; Manu II, 77 seq., 104-170.

⁴ See pp. 264, 265 supra.

⁵ Here he turns back to the Sāvitrī, 'looking back in the manner of the lion,' says Nilakanṭha, and for purposes of upāsanā. He does not give up the thread of his discourse entirely, but simply interjects this little clause. Nilakanṭha adds, Sāvitrī here includes every mode of worship prescribed for Brāhmanas, &c., and even for Mlecchhas. Cf. note 3, and Gautama (Bühler's ed.), p. 174 note.

⁶ Cf. Kāṇḍogya, p. 109, and Saṅkara's commentary. Arguna Mirra compares this text, Tasmādesha eteshām parunām śreshṭha-tamogāt. Where it occurs I know not.

⁷ Cf. Sānti Parvan (Rāgadharma), chap. 11, st. 11.

⁸ I.e. Vāsuki, Nilakanṭha. More probably it refers to the species.

⁹ As it is used in various ceremonies.

all liquid substances which are to be drunk, water is the best. And among all immovable entities, without distinction, the Plaksha, the ever holy field of Brahman¹, is stated to be the first. I, too, (am the first) among all the patriarchs², there is no doubt of that. And the unthinkable, self-existent Vishnu is stated to be my own self. Of all mountains, the great Meru is stated to be the first-born. And among all quarters and sub-quarters, likewise, the eastern quarter³ is the first. Likewise the Gaṅgā going in three paths is stated to be the first-born among rivers. And likewise of all wells and reservoirs of water, the ocean is the first-born. And of all gods, Dānavas, Bhūtas, Pisākas, snakes, and Rakshases, and of men, Kinnaras, and Yakshas, Īsvara⁴ is the lord. The great Vishnu, who is full of the Brahman, and than whom there is no higher being in these three worlds, is the source of all the universe. Of all orders⁵, that of householders (is the first), there is no doubt of that. The unperceived is the source of the worlds; and the same is also the end of everything. Days end with (the sun's) setting⁶; the night ends with (the sun's) rising; the end of pleasure is ever grief:

¹ I.e. the Creator; his field means, I presume, his special seat.

² Beings from whom all creatures were born. See inter alia Sānti Parvan (Moksha Dharma), chap. 208, st. 5; Manu I, 34.

³ At p. 347 the north is mentioned. Arguna Misra has 'ūrdhva,' or upward here, and yet 'north' before. Is the north the best as the seat of the higher world mentioned at Sānti Parvan (Moksha Dharma), chap. 192, st. 8 seq.?

⁴ I.e. Rudra, says Nilakantha.

⁵ Viz. Brahmaçārin, householder, forester, and Samnyāsin. Cf. Sānti Parvan (Moksha), ch. 191, st. 10; Manu VI, 89; Gautama, p. 190.

⁶ These stanzas also occur in the Sānti Parvan, chap. 27, st. 31 seq. (Rāgadharma). A part of them appears to be quoted in Sāṅkhya-sūtra V, 80. And the commentator Vigñāna Bhikshu introduces it with the expression 'iti srūyate.' But it is not a Vedic text.

the end of grief ever pleasure. All accumulations end in exhaustion ; all ascents end in falls ; all associations end in dissociations ; and life ends in death. All action ends in destruction ; death is certain for whatever is born¹ ; (everything) movable or immovable in this world is ever transient. Sacrifice, gift, penance, study, observances, and regulations, all this ends in destruction². There is no end for knowledge. Therefore one whose self is tranquil, whose senses are subjugated, who is devoid of (the idea that this or that is) mine, who is devoid of egoism, is released from all sins by pure knowledge.

CHAPTER XXX.

Brahman said :

The wheel of life³ moves on ; a wheel of which the spoke is the understanding, of which the pole⁴ is the mind, of which the bonds are the group of the senses, of which the outer rim⁵ is the five great elements, of which the environment is home⁶ ; which

¹ Cf. Ghā, p. 45.

² All this is action, the fruit of which is perishable ; the fruit of knowledge, on the other hand, is everlasting.

³ Literally, time ; it seems, however, to stand for the vicissitudes of worldly life. Cf. Svetāśvatara, p. 283. The body is called 'wheel of time' at p. 53 supra, but Arguna Misra there says 'it is the wheel which causes the rotation of the wheel of time.'

⁴ The cause of its being large in dimensions, Arguna Misra ; the supporting pillar, Nīlakanṭha. I prefer the former, and take the sense to be that worldly life is co-extensive with the operations or 'fancies' of the mind.

⁵ What is outside the elements, the physical manifestations of Prakṛiti, is beyond the domain of worldly life.

⁶ The possession of 'home' is equivalent to a dwelling in the midst of worldly life. Hence the idea of homelessness at inter alia Ghā, pp. 101-103.

abounds in old age and grief, which moves in the midst of disease and misfortune, which rotates in ¹ space and time; the noise of which is trouble and toil, the rotations ² of which (constitute) day and night; which is encircled with cold and heat; of which pleasure and pain are the joints, and hunger and thirst the nails fixed into it, of which sunshine and shade are the ruts; which staggers in the opening or closing of an eyelid, which is enveloped in the fearful waters of delusion, which is ever revolving and void of consciousness ³, which is measured by months and half months, is ever-changing ⁴, which moves through (all) the worlds ⁵; the mud ⁶ for which is penance and regulations, the mover of which is the force of the quality of passion ⁷; which is lit up ⁸ by the great egoism, which is sustained by the qualities; the fastenings in which are vexations ⁹;

¹ This means, I presume, that worldly life is conditioned, so to say, by space and time. See p. 343 supra.

² I.e. the cause of the rotation, Nīlakantha.

³ I.e. unintelligent.

⁴ Now takes the form of a man, now of an animal, and then of some other thing, Nīlakantha. I think, however, that the meaning is, that it is not alike to all; different persons are in different states in this world.

⁵ Arguna Misra says this means that it is the cause of the movements in all the worlds. That is the sense I extract from his words, which are not quite clear, lokânâm samkaraṇe hetus. The rendering in the text follows Nīlakantha.

⁶ I.e., I presume, that which retards the revolutions of the 'wheel.' Instead of 'penance,' Nīlakantha's reading is 'the quality of darkness.'

⁷ Cf. Sāṅkhya-kārikā, p. 13, and Vātsapati's commentary thereon.

⁸ 'Animated,' Nīlakantha. Egoism is the cause of the world, and of all knowledge of it. Cf. Sāṅkhya-kārikā, p. 24.

⁹ The text here is unsatisfactory. I follow Nīlakantha, who says 'vexations=those arising from not obtaining what is desired.'

which revolves in the midst of grief and destruction ¹, which is full of actions and instruments of action ², which is large, and which is extended by means of attachments ³, which is rendered unsteady by avarice and desire ⁴, which is produced by ignorance of various (matters) ⁵, which is attended upon by fear and delusion, and which is the cause of the delusion of all beings, which moves towards joy and pleasure ⁶, which has desire and wrath as its appurtenances, which is made up of (the entities) beginning with the Mahat and ending with the gross elements ⁷, which is unchecked, the imperishable source (of all) ⁸, the speed of which is like that of the mind, and which is (never) fatigued. This wheel of life, which is associated with the pairs of opposites, and which is devoid of consciousness, all the world, together with the immortals, should cast away, abridge, and check ⁹. That man, among all creatures, who always

¹ Revolves in the midst of, = lives upon, is fed by, Nīlakanṭha.

² I.e. the organs of action, I presume.

³ The more attachments one has, the more one is tied down to worldly life, and the more comprehensive such life becomes.

⁴ Avarice is coveting another's wealth when one has one's own; desire is the wish for that which one has not.

⁵ Nīlakanṭha reads 'vikītra,' which he renders to mean diversified, as being made up of the three qualities, ignorance there being the same thing as Prakṛti, which is probably a better sense altogether than that obtainable from Arguna Mirra's reading.

⁶ Which moves by attachment to external pleasures, &c., Nīlakanṭha. See p. 300 supra.

⁷ I.e. all the world developed from Prakṛti—a common phrase.

⁸ This is Nīlakanṭha's forced meaning. But the text here is doubtful. Perhaps the sense is 'in which production and dissolution are going on unchecked.'

⁹ See p. 344 note. For the last word, the variant here is sthāpayet, make steady or stop.

accurately understands the movement and stoppage¹ of the wheel of life is never deluded. (That) sage, released from all impressions², transcending all pairs of opposites, and released from all sins, attains the highest goal. The householder, and the Brahmacârin, the forester, and also the beggar³, all these four orders are stated to have the order of householder for their basis. Whatever system of rules⁴ is prescribed in this world, to follow it is good; this has been celebrated from ancient times⁵. He who has been first refined by ceremonies⁶, and who has duly observed vows, being (born) in a caste of (high) qualifications⁷, and who understands the Vedas, should return⁸ (from his preceptor's house). Always devoted to his own wife, behaving like⁹ good men, with his senses restrained, and full of faith, one should perform the five sacrifices¹⁰ in this world. The sage who eats what remains after (offerings) to deities¹¹ and guests, who is devoted to Vedic rites, who duly performs sacrifices and

¹ I.e. the causes of the revolution and stoppage, Nīlakaṇṭha.

² Impressions of previous actions, delusions, &c. And see p. 347 supra.

³ I.e. the Samnyâsin.

⁴ Sāstra. Cf. Gītā, p. 117.

⁵ 'Such is the eternal fame,' literally.

⁶ I.e. on whom the Vedic rites or Samskāras are duly performed. And see Gītā, p. 122.

⁷ I.e. one of the three higher castes.

⁸ The original is the technical word for the return of a Brahmacârin after finishing his studies. He is describing the 'householder.'

⁹ I.e. following the rule of conduct sanctioned by the good.

¹⁰ Vide Williams' Dictionary, s.v. mahāyagña; Ārvalāyana Gṛhyasūtra III, 1, 3; Manu II, 69; IV, 21.

¹¹ Cf. Gītā, p. 62; a guest must always be fed, and unless he is satisfied the host must not eat. Cf. Sānti Parvan (Moksha), chap. 192, st. 15; Manu III, 106; Āpastamba II, 3, 7, 3.

gifts according to his means, who is not thoughtlessly active¹ with the hand or foot, who is not thoughtlessly active with the eye, and who is not thoughtlessly active with his speech or any of his limbs, to such a one the (word) good applies. One should always have the sacred thread and a clean cloth, and be of pure vows, and self-restrained, and should always associate with good men, making gifts, and with one's external organs restrained; one should restrain one's lust and hunger², should be kind, should behave like the good, and keep a bamboo stick and a water-pot filled with water³. One should learn and teach, should likewise perform sacrifices and officiate at others' sacrifices, and should give and receive gifts,—(thus) one should adopt the sixfold mode of life⁴. Know that three (of these) duties are the means of livelihood for Brāhmaṇas, the two teaching and officiating at sacrifices, and also receiving untainted gifts⁵. And as to the other remaining three duties, gift, study, and sacrifice, they are pious⁶ duties. With regard to those three duties, the sage who understands piety, who is self-restrained, kind, possessed of forgiveness, and equable to all creatures, should avoid heedlessness⁷. The

¹ The same word as at Gītā, p. 114, there rendered 'vain activity.'

² Cf. Āpastamba II, 1, 1, 2 seq.

³ Cf. Manu IV, 36; Āpastamba II, 1, 1, 15.

⁴ These are the well-known six duties of Brāhmaṇas as specified by Manu and others. See the discussion of this point in the Introduction.

⁵ Another reading is 'gifts from an untainted (source).'

⁶ What is the exact meaning of this here? I suppose the meaning is that the performance of them is a pure performance of duty; the others are duties the performance of which supplies one's own wants, and is therefore interested. Cf. Gautama X, 1 and 2.

⁷ I.e. omission or mistake in performance.

Brāhmaṇa householder, who is of rigid vows, who is thus devoted, discharging all these duties as much as is in his power, conquers heaven.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Brahman said :

Thus ¹ duly studying to the best of his power, in the way above ² stated, and likewise living as a Brahmacārin, one who is devoted to his own duty and learned, who is a sage with all his senses restrained, who applies himself to what is agreeable and beneficial to the preceptor, who is pure ³, and constant in veracity and piety, should, with the permission of the preceptor, take food without decrying it ⁴, should eat (the leavings) of sacrificial offerings, and alms, and should stand, sit, and take exercise ⁵ (duly), should sacrifice twice to the fire after becoming clean and with a concentrated (mind), and should always bear a staff of the Bilva or Palāśa ⁶ (wood). The clothing of the twice-born (man) should be of linen, or of cotton, or also a deerskin, or a cloth entirely (dyed with) reddish colour. There should also be a girdle of muñga ; he should have matted hair, and likewise always (carry) water (with him), and have his sacred thread, be engaged in sacred ¹ Arguna Misra says, 'Having described first the order of householder, as that is the chief, he now describes that of Brahmacārin.' Cf. Āpastamba II, 9, 21, 1, and note.

² Where? This is obscure.

³ Both internally and externally, I presume.

⁴ Cf. Taittirīya, p. 129 ; Sānti Parvan (Moksha), chap. 192, st. 6.

⁵ Cf. Gītā, p. 69. Arguna Misra says, 'Having exercise by means of standing and sitting ; the meaning is not sleeping except at the proper time.'

⁶ Cf. Manu II, 41 seq.

study, and free from avarice, and of rigid observances. (Such) a Brahmakārin, always making offerings likewise of pure water to satisfy the deities, being restrained in mind¹, is esteemed. One who is thus devoted², who is concentrated in mind, and continent³, conquers heaven, and reaching the highest seat, does not return to birth. Refined by means of all ceremonies, and likewise living as a Brahmakārin⁴, a sage who has renounced⁵ (all) should go out of towns and dwell in forests⁶. Wearing a skin or the bark of a tree, he should bathe (every) morning and evening, and always living within the forest, should not enter a town again. He should honour guests, and should also give them shelter at (the proper) time, living on fruits and leaves, and roots and Syāmāka grain. He should without sloth feed on water, air, and all forest-products down to grass as they come, in order⁷, in accordance with the (regulations⁸ at his) initiation. He should honour a guest who comes, by (giving him) water accompanied with roots, fruits, and leaves. And he should always without sloth give alms out of whatever he has for food. He should also eat always after the deities and guests⁹.

¹ Or it may be, 'being self-restrained and with (all his) heart.' The constructions in the original vary greatly, and so they do in the translation.

² Applying himself to his duties.

³ Cf. Maitrī, p. 18, and comment there.

⁴ Cf. Manu VI, 1 seq.

⁵ I.e. who is a mendicant ascetic.

⁶ Cf. p. 173 supra, note 9. Here he gives a description of the third order of forester, as to which compare generally Manu VI.

⁷ First the jungle-products, then air, &c., Arguna Misra. The sense seems to be that the restrictions should become gradually harder. Cf. Manu VI, 24-31; Âpastamba II, 9, 22, 2 seq.; II, 9, 23, 2.

⁸ I.e. whatever restriction he put on himself when entering upon the particular mode of life.

⁹ Supra, p. 358, and cf. Taittirīya, p. 38.

(are satisfied) and with his speech restrained, having a mind free from envy¹, eating little, and depending on the deities. Restraining the external senses, kind, full of forgiveness, preserving his hair and moustache, performing sacrifices, addicted to sacred study, and devoted to veracity and piety, pure in body², always dexterous³, always in forests, and concentrated in mind,—a forester whose senses are subdued and who is thus devoted⁴ conquers the worlds.

A householder, or a Brahmatârin, or again a forester, who wishes to apply himself to final emancipation should adopt the best (line of) conduct⁵. Offering safety to all beings, the sage should become free from all action⁶, and be agreeable to all beings, kind, and restrained in all his senses. He should make a fire⁷ and feed on the alms (obtained) without asking⁸ and without trouble⁹, and which have come spontaneously¹⁰, in a place free from smoke and where people have already¹¹ eaten. One who

¹ I.e. of others for obtaining more, and so forth. Arguna Misra's reading is different, and he renders it to mean, 'one by whom the rule of life as a Brahmatârin has not been violated.'

² Arguna Misra's reading, 'one who has cast away (all attachment to) the body.' Compare as to hair and moustache, Manu VI, 6 seq.

³ See Gîtâ, p. 127. Here the meaning is probably assiduous in the performance of duties, vows, and so forth.

⁴ I.e. applies himself to his duties.

⁵ Arguna Misra says this means ânandâsramam, but there must be some bad copying here. I take the word as it stands to mean something like the 'godlike endowments' at Gîtâ, p. 114.

⁶ See Gîtâ, pp. 54, 127. The meaning here is probably that of action without egoism. See Gîtâ, p. 55.

⁷ I.e. Arguna Misra says, 'not at night.' The readings are unsatisfactory. I read krîtvâ vahnini, but diffidently. Is the allusion to the rule at Âpastamba II, 9, 21, 10? Cf. Gautama III, 27.

⁸ Cf. Kaushîtaki, p. 32. ⁹ I.e. to the giver. Cf. Gîtâ, p. 120.

¹⁰ See Gîtâ, p. 10. ¹¹ Cf. Manu VI, 56; Gautama III, 15.

understands final emancipation should seek to obtain alms after the cleaning¹ of the vessels (used for cooking), and should not rejoice if he obtains, and should not be dejected if he does not obtain (alms). Nor should he beg for too much alms², seeking merely to sustain life. Eating only a little, he should go about for alms with a concentrated mind, looking out for the (proper) time. He should not wish for earnings in common with another, nor should he eat when honoured; for an ascetic should be averse from all earnings (accompanied) with honour³. When eating, he should not taste any articles of food which have been eaten by others⁴, or which are pungent, astringent, or bitter, and likewise no sweet juices. He should eat just enough for his livelihood—for the support of life. One who understands final emancipation should seek for a livelihood without obstructing (other) creatures; and when he goes about for alms, he should not go following after another⁵. He should not parade (his) piety, he should move about in a secluded place, free from passion. He should resort for shelter to an empty house, or a forest, or the foot of a tree, or a river likewise, or the cavern of a mountain. In summer, (he should pass) but a single night⁶ in a town; and in the rains, he may dwell in one place. He should move about the ¹ I.e., I presume, in order to avoid interfering with others' comforts. And see last note.

² See Manu VI, 55. As to proper time further on, see last note.

³ Cf. Sanatsugātīya, pp. 145-147; 'without respect' at Gītā, p. 120, means probably with disrespect, otherwise that passage and this would be somewhat inconsistent. See too Manu II, 162.

⁴ Cf. Manu II, 56; Gītā, p. 118; and p. 269 supra.

⁵ As that other may get nothing if they go together, Arguna Mirra. Cf. Manu VI, 51.

⁶ Cf. Gautama III, 21.

world like a worm¹, his path being pointed out by the sun, and he should walk with circumspection over the earth out of compassion to all beings². He should not make any accumulations; and should eschew dwelling with friends³. And the man who understands final emancipation should verily do all acts which he has to do, always with clean water. A man should always bathe in clean water. And with his senses restrained, he should devote himself to these eight observances⁴,—harmlessness, life as a Brahmacārin, veracity, and also straightforwardness, freedom from anger, freedom from (the habit of) carping, restraint of the external organs, and habitual freedom from (the habit of) backbiting. He should always practise a sinless (mode of) conduct, not deceptive and not crooked; and free from attachment should always make one who comes (as a guest) take a morsel of food. He should eat just enough for livelihood—for the support of life. And he should eat (only) what has been obtained with piety⁵, and should not follow his own (mere) desire⁶. He should not accept anything at all other than food and clothing. And he should accept as much as he eats and no more. He should not receive from others, nor should he ever give to others⁷.

¹ I.e. not very fast, Arguna Misra; 'the path being pointed out by the sun'=not at night, for fear of destroying worms, &c.

² This seems to be very like the practice of the Gainas of the present day. And cf. Manu VI, 69. ³ Cf. Gītā, pp. 68-103.

⁴ Cf. Gītā, p. 114, and cf. also Sanatsugāṭhya, p. 153.

⁵ That is to say, obtained without violation of any binding obligation, or rule of the Sāstras. ⁶ Cf. Gītā, p. 117.

⁷ This is not very clear, and Arguna Misra's comments are not intelligible. The sense seems to be this, 'He should not take more than is wanted, nor should he keep any accumulations from which to give to others, but should at once share with others all that is earned.'

But owing to the helplessness of people, a wise man should always share (with others). He should not appropriate another's riches, and should not take (anything) unasked. Nor, verily, after enjoying any object should one become afterwards attached to it. One who has anything to do¹ should take earth, water, pebbles likewise, and leaves, flowers, and fruits which are not secured² (by anybody), as they come³. One should not live by the occupation of an artisan⁴, nor should one wish for gold. One should not hate, should not teach⁵, and should be void of (all) belongings⁶. One should eat what is consecrated by faith⁷, and should avoid (all) controversies, should act without a purpose⁸, should be free from attachment, and without fixed appointments with people⁹. One should not perform, or cause to be performed, any action involving expectation of fruit, or involving any destruction of life, or the assemblage of people¹⁰. Rejecting all things, ¹ Arguna Misra says that this means if he wants them for any particular purpose he should take the earth, &c.

² I.e. apparently, taken possession of and preserved as one's own by anybody.

³ Arguna Misra renders this by 'which lead to action.' Is it not rather the 'spontaneous earnings' at Gîtâ, p. 60?

⁴ Cf. Manu III, 64; Âpastamba I, 6, 18, 18; Gautama XVII, 7.

⁵ I.e. teach one who does not ask to be instructed. Cf. Manu II, 110.

⁶ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 60; the original word, however, is not the same.

⁷ See p. 360, note 3 supra; Manu II, 54-55; Gautama IX, 59. 'Controversies;' the original is nimitta, and the interpretation is what appears to be Arguna Misra's. It may also mean 'omens.' That this is the true sense appears from Manu VI, 50.

⁸ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 48.

⁹ Arguna Misra says, 'e.g. I shall come to you to-morrow for alms,' &c. Cf. Âpastamba I, 6, 19, 12.

¹⁰ The words are the same as at Gîtâ, p. 54, 'keeping people (to and being equable to all beings, moving and un-moving, one should become an ascetic with small belongings. One should not perturb any other (person), nor should one be perturbed by any other (person¹). He who is trusted by all beings is said to be the foremost among those who understand final emancipation. One should not think of what is not come², nor reflect on that which is past; one should disregard the present, being concentrated (in mind) and indifferent to time³. He should not defile⁴ anything by the eye, or the mind, or by speech, nor should he do anything wrong openly or in secret. One who draws in the senses from all sides as a tortoise (draws in) his limbs⁵, and in whom the senses, mind, and understanding are absorbed⁶, who is free from desires, who understands all truth, who is free from the pairs of opposites, and from the ceremony of svâhâ, and who is free from salutations⁷, and who is free from (the thought that this or that is) mine, who is free from egoism, who is free from anxiety for new acquisitions or protection of old acquisitions, and self-controlled⁸, who is free from their duties), but the sense seems to be different. The commentators say nothing on this.

¹ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 101.

² I.e. one should not look to the future with any aspirations or expectations, and should not look back on the past with grief, Arguna Misra. See too p. 170, note 9 supra.

³ I am not sure if this is a correct interpretation. But it does not seem likely that the other possible sense—literally ‘expecting time’—can be intended here.

⁴ This is obscure. Is the sense this, that one should not observe, or think, or speak badly of or of the bad side of things?

⁵ Cf. p. 342 supra, note 1.

⁶ Cf. Ka/ka, p. 151.

⁷ See p. 352 supra, note 1.

⁸ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 48, where the original words are the same.

expectations, who is free from attachments to any entity, and who is dependent on none¹, who is attached to the self, and who understands the truth, is emancipated, there is no doubt of that. Those who perceive the self, which is without hands, foot, or back, without a head, without a stomach, which is free from the operations of the qualities², absolute, untainted, and stable, devoid of smell, devoid of taste or touch, devoid of colour, and also devoid of sound, which is to be understood³, which is unattached, and which is also devoid of flesh, which is free from anxiety⁴, imperishable, divine, and though dwelling in a house⁵, always dwelling in all entities, they never die⁶. There the understanding reaches not, nor the senses, nor the deities, nor Vedas, sacrifices, nor worlds⁷, nor penance, nor valour⁸; the attainment to it of those who are possessed of knowledge is stated to be without comprehension of symbols⁹. Therefore the learned man who knows (the) property of being void of symbols¹⁰, being devoted to pious conduct, and

¹ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 60.

² These are effects of Prakṛiti by which the Purusha is unaffected.

³ Literally, 'pursued.'

⁴ This is obscure. Arguna Mirra's text is niskityam. Does that mean 'which should be accurately understood?' The rendering in the text of Nilakanṭha's reading may mean that the Brahman has no such thoughts (āntā) as are referred to at Gîtâ, p. 115.

⁵ Does this mean the body?

⁶ I.e. are free from birth and death. Cf. Âpastamba I, 8, 22, 4.

⁷ This, again, is not quite clear. Probably the explanation is to be found in the passage at Gîtâ, p. 79.

⁸ Nilakanṭha's reading is 'observances or vows.'

⁹ I.e. 'not to be acquired by inference,' Arguna Mirra, p. 351 supra.

¹⁰ See p. 309 supra; 'who is without symbols, and knows piety,' according to Arguna Mirra's reading.

resorting to concealed¹ piety should adopt the mode of life (necessary) for experience². Though undeluded, he should act in the manner of the deluded³, not finding fault with piety⁴. He should perform piety, behaving so that others would always disrespect him⁵, and should not find fault with the ways of the good⁶. That sage is said to be the best who has adopted this (line of) conduct. The senses, and the objects of the senses, and the five great elements, and mind, understanding, egoism, the unperceived, and the Purusha likewise⁷, by an accurate determination about the truth, after understanding all these, one attains heaven⁸, being released from all bonds. One who knows the truth, understanding these same (entities) at the time of the termination (of his life), should meditate, exclusively pondering on one point⁹; and then, depending on none¹⁰, he gets emancipation. Freed from all attachments, like the atmosphere dwelling in space¹¹, with his accumulations¹² exhausted, and free from distress¹³, he attains to the highest seat.

¹ See p. 159 supra, note 7, and cf. Manu III, 109, which is the text referred to in note 5 there.

² I.e. direct perception of the Brahman. See Gîtâ, p. 57, note 5.

³ See p. 160 supra, note 8, and cf. also Manu II, 110.

⁴ Arguna Misra compares Gîtâ, p. 55, about 'shaking convictions.'

⁵ Cf. pp. 159-161 supra.

⁶ This means, I presume, the good devoted to action and not to knowledge only.

⁷ These are the famous elements of the Sāṅkhyas; see Sūtra I, 61.

⁸ Cf. p. 159 and note 2.

⁹ Cf. p. 300 supra.

¹⁰ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 60.

¹¹ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 82, note 3.

¹² Of actions previously performed. See p. 246 supra.

¹³ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 101, where, however, the original word is different.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Brahman said :

The ancients who perceived the established (truth) call renunciation¹ penance; and the Brāhmaṇas dwelling in the seat of the Brahman² understand knowledge to be concerned with the Brahman³. The highest Brahman is very far off⁴, and (the attainment of it) depends on Vedic knowledge⁵; it is free from the pairs of opposites, devoid of qualities⁶, everlasting, of unthinkable qualities, and supreme. The men of talent, who are pure⁷, and whose minds are refined, transcending passion, and being untainted, perceive that supreme (principle) by means of knowledge and penance. Those who are constantly devoted to renunciation⁸, and understand the Brahman and wish for the supreme, go to the happy path by penance. Penance⁹ is said to be a light; (correct) conduct is the means to piety; knowledge verily should be understood to be the highest, and renunciation the best penance. He who understands determinately the self which is unperturbed, which abides in all entities, and which is the essential

¹ Abandoning of fruit, Arguna Misra. Cf. Gītā, p. 121.

² Cf. p. 339 supra, note 4, dwelling in = adhering to.

³ See Gītā, p. 104.

⁴ Cf. Sanatsugāṭhya, p. 158 seq. ⁵ Viz. the three famous ones.

⁶ Pure, refined, and untainted are not easily distinguished. Probably 'pure' refers to external cleanliness; 'untainted' to freedom from sin and such taints; and 'refined' to freedom from error.

⁷ I.e. who have no 'belongings,' Arguna Misra.

⁸ Action without desire, Arguna Misra, who adds that it is called a light, as it leads to knowledge. See too p. 166, and p. 247, note 11, and p. 340 supra.

element in knowledge, he is laid down¹ (as being able) to move everywhere. The learned man who perceives, association and dissociation, and likewise unity and diversity², is released from misery. He who desires nothing, and despises nothing³, becomes eligible, even dwelling in this world, for assimilation with the Brahman⁴. He who knows the truth about the qualities of Pradhâna⁵, and understands the Pradhâna of all entities⁶, who is free from (the thought that this or that is) mine, and free from egoism⁷, is emancipated, there is no doubt of that. One who is free from the pairs of opposites, free from the (ceremonies of) salutation, free from (the ceremony of) svadhâ⁸, attains to that everlasting (principle) which is free from the pairs of opposites, and devoid of qualities, by tranquillity only. Abandoning all action, whether agreeable or disagreeable, developed from the qualities⁹, and abandoning both truth and falsehood¹⁰, a creature is emancipated, there is no doubt of that. The great tree of Brahman¹¹ is

¹ 'Laid down' is literally 'wished.'

² I presume this means the real fact underlying the appearances of association and so forth, namely, that there is but one reality, and all appearances of difference &c. are unreal. Cf. Gîtâ, p. 124. See also p. 313 supra, note 1, and p. 374 infra.

³ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 65, and see Ka/ha, p. 155. ⁴ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 65.

⁵ The qualities, viz. the three, of Pradhâna, i.e. constituting Prakṛti, or nature. ⁶ See Gîtâ, p. 106, and note 3 there.

⁷ For this whole expression, which occurs so frequently, cf. Maitrî, p. 44, and comment there.

⁸ See p. 324 supra, note 8. ⁹ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 48; Svetâsvatara, p. 360.

¹⁰ I.e., I presume, what is real and unreal in a worldly view,—the great truth is not to be 'abandoned.' Cf. Taittirîya, pp. 97-99; p. 191 supra; Sânti Parvan (Moksha), chap. 174, st. 53; Apastamba II, 9, 21, 13.

¹¹ I.e., says Arguna Misra, the tree of worldly life produced from the Brahman. Compare chapter XII supra.

eternal; a tree which is produced from the unperceived as the seed, which consists of the understanding as its trunk, whose collection of boughs is the great egoism, the sprouts within which are the senses, the great branches of which are the great elements, and the side branches the objects of sense, which is always possessed of leaves, always possessed of flowers, in which agreeable and disagreeable fruits are always produced, and which is fed upon by all creatures. Cutting and piercing this (tree)¹ with the sword of knowledge of the truth, and abandoning the bonds in the shape of attachment, which cause birth, death, and old age², a wise man who is free from (the thought that this or that is) mine, and who is devoid of egoism, is emancipated, there is no doubt of that. There are these two birds³, (which are) unchanging, and which should also be known to be unintelligent⁴. But as to that other who is above them, he is called intelligent. (When) the inner self, devoid of knowledge of nature⁵, and (as it were) non-intelligent⁶, understands that which is

¹ Cf. Gitā, p. 111; and Mundaka, p. 307, and commentary there.

² So I render the original, though the sense at first sight appears to be 'which are caused by birth,' &c.

³ Viz. the understanding and egoism, which dwell in the 'tree,' Arguna Mirra. Nīlakantha says, 'the great and the individual self.'

⁴ Cf. Sāṅkhya-kārikā 11, and comment of Vātsaspati Mirra. The self is not unintelligent; and as the birds are so described, they must stand for some manifestation of Prakṛti, which understanding and egoism are. Otherwise 'bird' does stand for 'self.' See p. 189 supra.

⁵ The original word here is sattva, on which see p. 351 supra. Arguna Mirra renders it here by Prakṛti.

⁶ So Nīlakantha; 'the only intelligent principle,'—Arguna Mirra. On Nīlakantha's interpretation 'inner self' must be the same thing as Bhūtātman at Maitrī, p. 41.

beyond nature, then understanding the Kshetra¹, and with an understanding comprehending all, and transcending the qualities² he is released from all sins.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Brahman said :

Some (think of) the Brahman as a tree ; some (think of) the Brahman as a great forest ; and some (think of) the Brahman as unperceived ; and some as transcendent and without misery³ ; and they⁴ think all this to be produced from and absorbed into the unperceived. He who even for (the space of) a (single) exhalation, at the time of the termination (of life⁵) becomes equable⁶, attaining to the self, becomes fit for immortality. Restraining the self in the self⁷, even for (the space of) a wink, he repairs to the inexhaustible acquisition⁸ of those who have knowledge, through the tranquillity of the self⁹. And restraining the life-winds again and

¹ See p. 351 supra.

² See Gītā, p. 109.

³ As to the first two clauses comp. pp. 284-371 supra ; the last two are said by Arguna Misra to represent the Sāṅkhya and Yoga doctrines respectively.

⁴ I presume this means all teachers. But Nīlakanṭha takes it to mean the Sāṅkhyas, and he takes the preceding words as indicating two views based on Śruti texts, viz. the first, that the world is a development of the Brahman, and the other that the Brahman does not undergo any development or change. Anāmaya he takes to mean changeless, and Brahmanmaya he takes to mean developed from the Brahman.

⁵ Cf. Gītā, pp. 77, 78.

⁶ One who sees the supreme as the only real entity, Arguna Misra. Nīlakanṭha takes it to mean one who identifies himself with everything. See Gītā, p. 65, and note 4 there.

⁷ See p. 344 supra.

⁸ I. e. the goal to be acquired.

⁹ 'Tranquillity'—the original may also be rendered by 'favour,' again by control of the life-winds¹, of ten or twelve² (modes), (he repairs to) that which is beyond the twenty-four³. Thus having first a tranquil self, he obtains whatever he desires. When the quality of goodness predominates in the unperceived⁴, that fits one for immortality. The men of knowledge extol nothing else beyond goodness. By inference⁵ we understand the (attainment of the) being to depend on goodness. It is not possible otherwise⁶ to attain that being, O best of the twice-born! Forgiveness, courage, harmlessness, equability, truth, straightforwardness, knowledge, abandonment⁷, and also renunciation are laid down as (constituting) con-as to which cf. p. 234 supra, but further on the phrase 'having a tranquil self' occurs, where the latter sense is not quite suitable. See Gītā, p. 51, and Yoga-sūtra I, 33.

¹ I.e. the specific modes which are mentioned of control of life-winds, e. g. at Gītā, p. 61, or Yoga-sūtra II, 49 seq.

² Nīlakanṭha proposes two interpretations of this. He says the ten are the eight mentioned in Yoga-sūtra II, 29, and in addition tarka and vairāgya (as to which see Yoga-sūtra I, 15 and 17). To make up the twelve he substitutes for the last two the four named at Yoga-sūtra I, 33. He also suggests that 'ten or twelve' may mean twenty-two, which he makes up thus. The five modes of yama (Yoga-sūtra II, 30), five of niyama (ibid. 32), the remaining six in Yoga-sūtra II, 29, the four in Yoga-sūtra I, 33, and tarka and vairāgya as before.

³ The twenty-four are the elements according to the Sāṅkhya system. See Sāṅkhya-sāra, p. 11, and p. 368 supra. That which is beyond them is Puruṣa.

⁴ The unperceived, it should be noted, is made up of the three qualities; the predominance of goodness indicates enlightenment or knowledge. Cf. Gītā, p. 108.

⁵ The middle term in the inference being, says Arguna Misra, the enlightening effect of the quality in question.

⁶ Cf. p. 167 supra.

⁷ The original is tyāga, which Arguna Misra renders by 'abandonment of all belongings;' renunciation, scil. of fruit. Cf. Gītā, p. 121, and p. 114.

duct of the quality of goodness. By this very inference the wise verily believe in the Being and nature as one, there is no doubt of that. Some learned men, who are devoted to knowledge, assert the unity of the Kshetragñā and nature¹. But that is not correct. That they are always distinct (from one another) is also (said) without (due) consideration². Distinction and also association³ should be accurately understood. Unity and diversity⁴ are likewise laid down. Such is the doctrine of the learned. Between the gnat and the udumbara⁵ there is observed unity and diversity also. As a fish is in water distinct (from it), such is their relation; (such is) the relation of the drops of water with the leaf of the lotus.

· The preceptor said :

Then those Brāhmaṇas, who were the best of sages, having again felt doubts, interrogated the grandsire of the people who spoke to them thus.

¹ Here, says Nīlakanṭha, the author indicates an objection to the proposition stated just before. But the passage is not clear.

² This, says Nīlakanṭha, is a reply to the Sāṅkhyas, who hold the two to be distinct. Nīlakanṭha adds, that if the two are distinct, nature will, conceivably, adhere even to an emancipated creature; and if they are one, then the being or self would be really engaging in action and so forth, and that activity being really a property of the self, could not be destroyed save by the destruction of the self. Hence that view is also wrong.

³ Like that of sea and wave, Nīlakanṭha.

⁴ Unity of Brahman and diversity of manifestation of nature. Arguna Misra, who adds—by reason of the association they are spoken of as one, by reason of the unity and diversity they are distinct. The next sentence contains three parallel cases.

⁵ Cf. as to all this, Sānti Parvan, chap. 194, st. 38 seq. (Moksha Dharma); chap. 249, st. 20 seq.; chap. 285, st. 33 seq.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

The sages said :

Which (form of) piety is deemed to be the most worthy of being performed ? We observe the various modes of piety to be as it were contradictory. Some say (it¹ remains) after the body (is destroyed) ; some say that is not so. Some (say) everything² is doubtful ; and others that there is no doubt. Some say the permanent (principle) is impermanent, and others, too, that it exists, and (others) that it exists not³. Some (say it is) of one form or twofold, and others (that it is) mixed⁴. Some Brâhmaṇas, too, who know the Brahman and perceive the truth, believe it to be one ; others distinct ; and others again (that it is) manifold⁵. Some say both time and space (exist)⁶, and others that that is not so. Some have matted hair and skins ; and some (are) clean-shaven and without covering. Some people are for bathing ; some for the omission⁷ of bathing. Some are for taking food ; others are intent on fasting. Some people extol action, and

¹ I. e. the piety, Arguna Misra ; the self, Nīlakanṭha.

² I. e. such as piety, &c., Arguna Misra.

³ I follow Arguna Misra, who says 'permanent' means soul, &c. The correct expression would seem to be 'that which is called permanent by others is impermanent.'

⁴ This is the view of those who hold the theory of Parivāma, or development, says Arguna Misra.

⁵ 'To be one' = knowledge to be all of one description, 'distinct' = knowledge having various entities for its distinct objects (this is the view of the holders of the Viśiṣṭādvaita, says Arguna Misra) ; manifold = that the selfs are numberless. The words here are nearly identical with those at Gītā, p. 83, see note 4 there.

⁶ I. e. help in action, Arguna Misra.

⁷ See Āpastamba I, 1, 1, 2 (comment).

others tranquillity. Some extol final emancipation ; some various kinds of enjoyments ; some wish for riches, and others indigence. Some (say) means¹ should be resorted to ; others that that is not so. Some are devoted to harmlessness, and some given up to destruction ; some are for merit and glory ; and others say that is not so. Some are devoted to goodness ; some are in the midst of doubts ; some are for pleasure, and some for pain². Some people (say) meditation³, other Brāhmaṇas (say) sacrifice, and others, gifts ; but others extol penance, and other persons sacred study ; some knowledge, and renunciation⁴ ; and those who ponder on the elements⁵, nature⁶. Some extol everything, and others nothing⁷.

¹ I.e. for the acquisition of anything desirable, Arguna Misra, who adds, 'by those who wish for piety.' Nilakanṭha says means = 'meditation and so forth ;' as to 'that is not so' he cites what he calls a Sruti, which is however one of the Kārikās of Gaudapāda on the Māndukya ; see p. 432.

² This, too, is not quite clear, but Nilakanṭha says, 'meditation should be practised for release from pain, and for acquisition of pleasure ;' 'and others say not so, it should be done without desire.'

³ That is to say, they hold that meditation should be practised.

⁴ Arguna Misra seems to take this to mean 'renunciation of knowledge,' i.e. a blank, and says this was the view of the Mādhyamikas,—I suppose the Mādhyamika Bauddhas.

⁵ I.e. the Kārvākas, Arguna Misra.

⁶ Svetāśvatara, p. 276, and Saṅkara's commentary there.

⁷ Were there optimists and pessimists at the time of the Anugītā in India? This verse, however, does not occur in some MSS. Nilakanṭha's note on this passage may be of some interest. He says, 'Some hold that the self exists after the body is lost ; others, that is the Lokāyatas or Kārvākas, hold the contrary. Everything doubtful is the view of the Syādvādins ; nothing doubtful that of the Tairthikas, the great teachers (I presume, about their own respective doctrines). Everything impermanent, Tārikas ; permanent, Mīmāṃsakas ; nothing exists, the Sūnyavādins ; something exists, but only momentarily,

And, O best of the gods! piety being thus confused and abounding in contradictions, we are deluded, and come to no determination. People are acting, (saying) this is good, this is good. And he who is attached to a certain (form of) piety, always esteems that. Here (therefore) our understanding breaks down, and our mind is distracted. We wish, O best (of beings)! to be informed of what is good. Be pleased now to proceed to state what is (so) mysterious, and what is the cause of the connexion between the Kshetragña and nature. Thus addressed by those Brāhmanas, the venerable, holy, and talented creator of worlds told them accurately (what they asked).

Saugatas; knowledge is one, but the ego and non-ego are two different principles, the Yogātāras; mixed, Uśulomas; one, is the view of the worshippers of the Brahman as possessed of qualities; distinct, other Mīmāṃsakas, who hold that the special actions are the cause (of everything, is meant, I presume); manifold=the atomists; time and space=astrologers. Those who "say that is not so," that is to say, that what we see has no real existence at all, are the Vṛiddhas, ancient philosophers; omission to bathe=the condition of Naish/hika Brahmatārins; bathing=householder's condition; "means should be resorted to, that is not so," those who are against all meditation, &c., according to the Sruti text, which Nīlakaṇṭha quotes; "merit and glory, that is not so," some say there is no merit as the Lokāyatas or Kārvākas; "knowledge, renunciation," the former is to be gained only by means of the latter; "ponder on elements"=who are intent on the investigation of the true nature of things; nature=abundance of resources, by which alone knowledge is produced, not by mere renunciation.' It will be understood, that this commentary assumes a different syntactical construction of the original in some places from that adopted in our translation.

CHAPTER XXXV.

Brahman said :

Well then, I will declare to you what you ask of me, O best (of men)! Learn what a preceptor told a pupil who went to him. Hearing it all, deliberate on it properly. Non-destruction of all creatures, that is deemed to be the greatest duty¹. This is the highest seat², free from vexation and holy in character. The ancients who perceived the established (truth) call knowledge the highest happiness. Therefore by pure knowledge one is released from all sins. And those who are constantly engaged in destruction, and who are infidels³ in their conduct, and who entertain avarice and delusion, go verily to hell. Those who without sloth perform actions with expectations, rejoice in this world, being born again and again. But those wise and talented men, who perform actions with faith, free from any connexion with expectations, perceive correctly⁴. Now I will proceed to state how the association and dissociation of Kshetragña and nature (take place). Learn that, O best (of men)! The relation here is said to be that between the object and subject⁵. The subject

¹ See p. 291 supra, and note 3 there.

² So literally; the sense is—that which one is to aim at.

³ The original is nâstika, the contrary of that 'âstikya,' which at Gîtâ, p. 126, we have rendered by 'belief (in a future world),' following Sridhara. Râmânuga, whose commentary came to hand too late for any other than a very occasional use in the translation of the Gîtâ, renders it by 'belief in the truth of the teaching of the Vedas.'

⁴ I. e. learn the truth.

⁵ I use the terms subject and object here in the philosophical sense explained by Sir W. Hamilton, viz. the thinking agent and the object of thought respectively. And cf. also the passage referred to in note 3 on p. 379 infra.

is always the being, and nature is stated to be the object. It has been explained in the above mode, as (having the relation) of the gnat and the udumbara¹. Nature which is non-intelligent knows nothing, though it is the object of enjoyment². Who enjoys and what is enjoyed³ is learnt from the Sâstras. Nature is said always to abound in the pairs of opposites, and to be constituted of the qualities; the Kshetragña is free from the pairs of opposites, devoid of parts, and in essence free from the qualities. He abides in everything alike⁴, and is connected with (all) knowledge⁵; and he always enjoys nature as a lotus-leaf (enjoys) water. Even brought into contact with all qualities, a learned man remains untainted⁶. There is no doubt that the being is unattached just like the unsteady drop of water placed upon a lotus-leaf⁷. It is established that nature is the property⁸ of the being. And the relation of the two is like that of matter and the maker⁹. As one goes into (a) dark (place) taking a light (with him), so those who wish for the supreme go with the light of nature¹⁰. While there is oil

¹ P. 374 supra. The relation is one of close connexion, coupled with some identity of nature (because, says Nīlakanṭha, an entirely extraneous thing could not get into the inside of the fruit, and the gnat's body therefore must have come from the fruit itself), but still the elements are distinct.

² See p. 371 supra, note 4.

³ Cf. Maitrī, p. 108.

⁴ Cf. Gītā, pp. 105, 106.

⁵ Knowledge of the Kshetragña forms part of all real knowledge. Arguna Misra's reading and interpretation are different. He says, 'As he is seen coming to light everywhere alike, so,' &c.

⁶ Cf. Gītā, pp. 55-110.

⁷ Again the common simile.

⁸ The original is dravya, rendered 'matter' in the next sentence. Arguna Misra paraphrases it by 'upakarana,' paraphernalia.

⁹ So the original, the sense is not clear. But see Svetaśvatara, p. 368.

¹⁰ Knowledge, which, says Nīlakanṭha, is a manifestation of nature. Arguna Misra says the knowledge of the truth which the and wick¹, the light shines; but the flame is extinguished when the oil and wick are exhausted. Thus nature is perceived²; the being is laid down (as being) unperceived. Understand this, O Brāhmanas! Well now, I will tell you something more. One who has a bad understanding does not acquire knowledge even with a thousand (admonitions). And one who is possessed of knowledge enhances (his) happiness even with a fourth share³. Thus should one understand the accomplishment of piety by (apt) means. For the talented man who knows (these) means, attains supreme happiness⁴. As a man travelling along some way without provisions for the journey, travels with great discomfort, and may even be destroyed on the way, so should one understand, that by action⁵ the fruit is or is not produced. For a man to see within (his) self⁶ what is agreeable and what is disagreeable to him is good. And as one who is devoid of a perception of the truth rashly travels on foot by a long way unseen before⁷, while (another) goes by the same self acquires is by means of nature. Cf. Sāṅkhya-kārikā 56, and comment.

¹ So Nilakantha. Arguna Misra does not take guṇa here to mean 'wick.'

² I. e., I presume, in its manifestations; it is perceived for some time and then vanishes. Cf. Sāṅkhya-kārikā 59-61; the Puruṣa is not 'perceived' in this sense. ³ Viz. of admonition, Arguna Misra.

⁴ Cf. Gītā, p. 70, where the same phrase occurs.

⁵ The fruit of this is uncertain; knowledge which is in one's self is the thing to be worked for.

⁶ I. e. the mind, Nilakantha. The meaning is, he should not care for external pleasure and pain. Cf. Gītā, inter alia, p. 50.

⁷ This seems to be so left imperfect in the original. The construction seems to be this: the progress of the latter is as great as that of one who drives in a chariot as compared with that of one who goes on foot with much suffering. Cf. the construction on next page.

way in a carriage¹ drawn by horses, and going swiftly, such is the progress of the men of understanding. Having climbed up a mountain one should not look at the surface of the earth². One sees a man travelling in a chariot, and void of intelligence, afflicted by reason of the chariot. As far as there is a carriage-path, he goes in the carriage; where the carriage-path stops, a learned man goes on abandoning the carriage. So travels the talented man, who understands the procedure respecting (knowledge of the) truth and devotion³, and who knows about the qualities, comprehending the gradations⁴ one above the other. As one who without a boat dives into the ocean with his arms only, through delusion, undoubtedly wishes for destruction; while a wise man likewise knowing distinctions⁵, and having a boat with good oars, goes in the water without fatigue, and soon crosses the reservoir, and having crossed (it) goes to the other shore, throwing

¹ I.e. the Sāstras, says Nīlakanṭha. Cf. Gītā, p. 117.

² When one has arrived at knowledge,—the highest seat, says Nīlakanṭha,—one need not perform the dictates of the Sāstras, which are only preliminary to the acquisition of knowledge. Cf. Gītā, pp. 48, 73. Cf. as to this figure of the chariot and the next one about the boat, Bṛihadāraṇyaka, p. 695.

³ I adopt Arguna's rendering of the original here, viz. Yoga. The meaning, on that rendering, is the same as it is in the Gītā.

⁴ According to Arguna Mirra, action with desire, action without desire, and lastly, knowledge. According to Nīlakanṭha, action laid down in the Sāstras, then Yoga, and then the condition of Hamsa, Paramahamsa, &c.

⁵ Literally, one knowing divisions. I presume the meaning is distinctions between various things as to which suits which, and so forth. The boat, says Nīlakanṭha, is a preceptor, and even a preceptor is not to be sought for after a man has achieved Yoga; hence the text proceeds to speak further on of casting aside the boat. Wishes for destruction= is sure to meet destruction.

aside the boat, and devoid of (the thought that this or that is) mine. This has been already explained by the parallel of the carriage and pedestrian. One who has come by delusion through affection, adheres to that like a fisherman to his boat, being overcome by (the thought that this or that is) mine. It is not possible to move on land after embarking in a boat. And likewise one cannot move in water after entering a carriage. Thus there are various actions in regard to different objects¹. And as action is performed in this world, so does it result to them². That which sages by their understanding meditate upon, which is void of any smell whatever, void of taste, and void of colour, touch, or sound, that is called the Pradhâna³. Now that Pradhâna is unperceived; a development of the unperceived is the Mahat; and a development of the Pradhâna (when it is) become Mahat is egoism. From egoism is produced the development, namely, the great elements; and of the elements respectively, objects of sense are verily stated to be the development⁴. The unperceived is of the nature of seed⁵, and also productive in its essence. And we have heard

¹ I. e. appertaining to the various orders of householders, &c., Nilakantha. But I am not aware of any authority for this sense of vishaya.

² I. e. those who perform them.

³ Nilakantha says, 'Having stated above the means of knowledge, he now states the proper object of knowledge.'

⁴ See p. 332 supra. The original for development is guna, literally quality.

⁵ The meaning of this passage seems to be identical with that of Sânkhya-kârikâ 3. Productive (Prasavâtmakam) is probably to be explained as Prasavadharmi is at Sânkhya-kârikâ 11 (see commentary of Vâṭaspati, pp. 59, 60), viz. always undergoing development. The great elements are of course the tanmâtra:-

that the great self is of the nature of seed and a product. Egoism is of the nature of seed and a product also again and again. And the five great elements are verily of the nature of seed and products. The objects of the five elements are of the nature of seed¹, but they do not yield products. Learn about their properties. Now space has one quality, air is said to have two qualities; it is said that light has three qualities; and water, too, is of four qualities; and earth, abounding with movables and immovables, the divine source of all entities, full of examples of agreeable and disagreeable (things), should be understood to be of five qualities². Sound, touch, colour likewise, taste, and smell as the fifth—these, O best of the twice-born! should be understood to be the five qualities of earth. Smell always belongs to the earth³; and smell is stated to be (of) numerous descriptions. I will state at length the numerous qualities of smell⁴. Smell is agreeable or disagreeable, sweet, sour, and bitter likewise, diffusive and compact also, soft, and rough, and clear also⁵—thus should

¹ This is not clear, unless 'product' above means productive, and seed means a product, it being a product of the aṅkura or sprout. Nīlakanṭha says, 'seed=cause; product=effect. The unperceived is an effect, and so the contrary doctrine of the Sāṅkhya is here shown to be wrong. The objects are causes, as their enjoyment causes an impression.'

² See pp. 285, 286 supra.

³ That is to say, smell is the special property of the earth only, the other qualities are common to it with the other elements. The word in the original is guṇa or quality everywhere.

⁴ See Sānti Parvan (Moksha Dharma), chap. 184, st. 27.

⁵ Bitter, Nīlakanṭha exemplifies by the smell of the chili, apparently interpreting kaṭvi, as it may be interpreted, to mean sharp; diffusive=overcoming all other smells, like Asafoetida; compact=made up of many smells. Nīlakanṭha adds, that soft is like that of smell, which belongs to the earth, be understood to be of ten descriptions. Sound, touch, and colour likewise, and taste, are stated to be the qualities of water. I will now give (some) information about taste. Taste is stated to be of numerous descriptions. Sweet¹, sour, bitter, sharp, astringent, and saltish likewise—thus are the forms of taste, which is a development of water, said to be of six descriptions. Sound, touch, and likewise colour; thus is light said to have three qualities. The quality of light is colour, and colour is stated to be of numerous descriptions. White, black, red likewise, green, yellow, and grey likewise, short, long, narrow², broad, square, and circular—thus is the colour of light said to be of twelve forms. It should be understood³ by aged Brāhmaṇas, who speak the truth, and are conversant with piety. Sound and touch also should be understood; air is said to have (these) two qualities. And touch is the quality of air, and touch is stated to be of numerous descriptions. Rough, cold and hot likewise, tender and clear also, hard, glutinous, smooth, slippery, hurtful, and soft⁴—thus the quality of air is properly said by Brāhmaṇas who have reached perfection, who are conversant with piety and perceive the truth, to be of twelve descriptions. Now space has one quality.

liquid ghee, rough of the oil of mustard, and clear as of cooked rice. The Sānti Parvan passage omits 'sour.' ¹ Cf. Gītā, p. 118.

² Literally, lean and fat. These are rather unusual qualities to attribute to colour. The Sānti Parvan passage gives more.

³ Sic. Does it mean 'it is understood?' Cf. Pāṇini III, 3, 113.

⁴ Tender=like the touch of a son, &c.; clear=like that of an excellent cloth, Nilakanṭha; glutinous=like that of oil; smooth=like that of a gem; slippery=not really smooth, but appearing to be such, like that of saliva (?), Arguna Mīṣa. The enumeration of these in the Sānti Parvan loc. cit. is again different.

and that is stated to be sound only. I will speak at length of the numerous qualities of sound. Shadga, Rishabha, together with Gāndhāra, Madhyama, and likewise Pañkama, and beyond these should be understood to be Nishāda and Dhaivata likewise¹; agreeable and disagreeable sound also, compact, and of (many) ingredients². Thus sound, which is produced in space, should be understood to be of ten descriptions. Space is the highest element³, egoism is above that; above egoism is understanding, and above that understanding is the self⁴; above that is the unperceived, and above the unperceived is the being. One who knows which is superior and inferior among entities, and who knows the proper procedure in all actions, and who identifies himself with every being⁵, repairs to the imperishable self.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Brahman said :

Since the mind is ruler of these five elements, in (the matter of) absorbing or bringing (them) forth⁶,

¹ This is the Hindu Gamut.

² These are not in the Sānti Parvan; of many ingredients = collection of sounds, Arguna Misra.

³ Being all-pervading, Arguna Misra. Cf. its position at Taittiriya, p. 67.

⁴ Cf. Kaṭha, pp. 114, 115, 149, and Saṅkarācārya's commentary there, for an explanation of the whole passage. And see Sāṅkhyasāra, p. 16, as to what are here called self and understanding.

⁵ Cf. Gītā, p. 64, where the words are identical.

⁶ The elements are perceived or are not perceived by the senses under the direction of the mind; absorbing = destroying; bringing forth = producing, Nīlakantha. See p. 268 supra, and Sānti Parvan (Moksha), chap. 240, st. 12.

the mind itself is the individual self¹. The mind always presides over the great elements. The understanding proclaims its power², and it is called the Kshetragña. The mind yokes the senses as a charioteer (yokes) good horses. The senses, the mind, and the understanding are always joined to the Kshetragña³. That individual self, mounting the chariot to which big horses⁴ are yoked, and in which the understanding is the drag⁵, drives about on all sides. The great chariot which is pervaded by the Brahman⁶, has the group of the senses yoked (to it), has the mind for a charioteer, and the understanding for a drag. That learned and talented person verily, who always understands thus the chariot pervaded by the Brahman, comes not by delusion in the midst of all entities⁷. This forest of the Brahman⁸ begins with the unperceived, and ends with the gross objects⁹:

¹ The word is the same as at Maitrī, p. 41, the comment on which should be seen.

² I.e. the mind's power is to be perceived by itself, Nīlakantha. The meaning seems to be that the understanding can only operate on what the mind places before it.

³ The passage at Kaṭha, p. 111 seq., and Śaṅkara's commentary there, throw light on this, though the figure is not drawn out in the same way in both places. For a definition of Kshetragña, see Sānti Parvan (Moksha), chap. 187, st. 23.

⁴ I.e. the senses.

⁵ I.e. that which holds the horses in check. Nīlakantha seems to render it by 'whip,' but that is not correct, I think.

⁶ So Arguna Misra. Nīlakantha says, 'The senses, &c., when they turn towards the outer world make the self drive about, as an individual self; when turned inwards they show him that he is the Brahman.' Nīlakantha thus likens this to the Kaṭha passage. See also p. 187 and notes there.

⁷ Or it may mean, among all men.

⁸ See p. 164 supra, note 2; and p. 285, note 4.

⁹ That is to say, it includes all Samsāra, all the elements recognised by the Sāṅkhya philosophy, save the Being or Puruṣa.

and includes movables and immovables, receives light from the radiance of the sun and moon, is adorned with planets and nakshatras, and is decked on all sides with nets of rivers and mountains, and always beautified likewise by various (descriptions of) waters; it is (the means of) subsistence for all entities¹, and it is the goal of all living creatures. In this the Kshetragña always moves about. Whatever entities (there are) in this world, movable or immovable, they are the very first² to be dissolved; and next the developments produced from the elements³; and (after) these developments, all the elements. Such is the upward gradation⁴ among entities. Gods, men, Gandharvas, Pisākas, Asuras, Rākshasas, all have been created by nature⁵, not by actions, nor by a cause. These Brāhmaṇas⁶, the creators of the world, are born here again and again. And what-

¹ Cf. p. 371 supra.

² Another reading means 'they are dissolved in the waters.' As to the order, cf. Vedānta Paribhāṣā, p. 48, and p. 335 supra.

³ I take these to mean the gross elements of which things movable and immovable may be said to be made, if one may use a non-idealist phrase in the Sāṅkhya philosophy. Then the elements next spoken of are the subtle ones or tanmātras. Cf. the references in note 2. As to developments, see p. 382, note 4.

⁴ Viz. gross object, gross element, subtle element.

⁵ The original is svabhāva, which Arguna Mirra renders by Prakṛiti. 'Actions' both Nīlakanṭha and Arguna Mirra take to mean sacrifices, &c., and 'cause' the former interprets by Brahman; the latter by tanmātras or subtle elements, and adds, 'the sense is—not by sacrifice or tanmātras only.' Nīlakanṭha says, 'The gods, &c., are produced by nature, as the gods, &c., seen in a dream.' The meaning seems to be that there are energies in nature which evolve these forms of being. Cf. also Gītā, p. 65.

⁶ I presume this means that the patriarchs (Marīci and others, says Nīlakanṭha) are also born again and again—that is to say, in different kalpas, I suppose—by nature only.

ever is produced from them¹ is dissolved in due time in those very five great elements, like billows in the ocean. The great elements are in every way (beyond) the elements that make up the world². And he who is released, even from those five elements, goes to the highest goal. The Lord Praṅgā-pati created all this by the mind³ only. And in the same manner⁴ the sages attained the godhead⁵ by means of penance⁶. And in like manner, those who have achieved perfection, who have acquired concentration by a course of penance, and who likewise feed on fruits and roots, perceive the triple world⁷ here by penance. Medicines, and herbs, and the various sciences are all acquired⁸ by means of penance alone. For all acquisition⁹ has penance for its root. Whatever is difficult to obtain¹⁰, difficult to ¹ I think this must mean the elements, though it might at first sight be referred to the Brāhmanas.

² I. e. the gross elements, I take it; the others are the tanmātras.

³ I. e. the meditation which constitutes true knowledge, Arguna Misra. But see Gītā, p. 87, note 1, and Sāṅkhya-sūtra.

⁴ I. e. by the mind, as to which cf. Taittirīya, p. 89; Kaṭha, p. 164. Arguna Misra says, 'This apparent deviation from the ordinary modes of cause and effect is not altogether without parallel, so he adds this to show that.'

⁵ Literally, 'the gods,' but the meaning seems to be that given in the text, as Arguna Misra says.

⁶ This is only the concentration of mind and senses on one object, Nīlakantha. See p. 166, note 1 supra.

⁷ See p. 174 supra.

⁸ Literally, 'are accomplished,' which seems to mean that they are acquired so as to be practically at one's command when required.

⁹ The original word is derived from the same root as the subject of the last note.

¹⁰ Difficult to obtain=the seat of Indra, &c.; to learn=Vedas, &c.; to vanquish=fire, &c.; to pass through=a great deluge, &c., learn, difficult to vanquish, and difficult to pass through; all that can be accomplished by penance, for penance is difficult to overcome. One who drinks spirituous liquors, one who kills a Brāhmaṇa, one who steals, one who destroys an embryo, one who violates the bed of his preceptor¹, is released from that sin only by penance well performed. (Those) men, Pitṛis, gods, (sacrificial) animals², beasts and birds, and all other creatures movable or immovable, (who are) constantly devoted to penance, always reach perfection by penance. And in like manner the noble(-minded) gods went to heaven³. Those who without sloth perform actions with expectations, and being full of egoism, they go near Pragāpati⁴. Those high-souled ones who are devoid of (the thought that this or that is) mine, and devoid of egoism, by means of a pure concentration (of mind) on contemplation, obtain the great and highest world. Those who best understand the self, attaining concentration (of mind) on contemplation⁵, and having their minds always tranquil, enter into the unperceived accumulation of happiness⁶. Those Nīlakanṭha. Arguna Misra seems to interpret the last word, where his reading 'is doubtful, to mean 'difficult to do.'

¹ Cf. Khândogya, p. 361. Except the destruction of the embryo (see Taitt. Āraṇ. p. 870, but at Bṛihadâraṇyaka, p. 795, Kaushîtaki, p. 77, and Âpastamba I, 6, 19, 16, the commentators render Bhrûna by 'learned Brāhmaṇa'), the rest are the great sins. But note that stealing gold, not theft generally, is mentioned as a great sin.

² Or, perhaps, cattle. The original is paśu.

³ See p. 160 supra, and cf. p. 178.

⁴ I. e. Karyapa, as gods, &c. This seems to be Arguna Misra's interpretation. This condition is inferior to that described in the following sentence.

⁵ See p. 162, note 1.

⁶ Nīlakanṭha's rendering is 'that by which (worldly) happiness is who are free from (all thought that this or that is) mine, and who are free from egoism, attaining concentration (of mind) on contemplation¹, enter the highest world of the great, which is the unperceived. Born from that same unperceived² (principle), again acquiring knowledge, and getting rid of the (qualities of) passion and darkness, and resorting to the pure (quality of) goodness, a man gets rid of all sins, and abandons everything as fruitless. He should be understood to be the Kshetragnâ. He who understands him understands the Vedas³. Withdrawing from the mind the objects⁴ of mental operations, a sage should sit down self-restrained. (He) necessarily (becomes) that on which his mind⁵ (is fixed). This is the eternal mystery. That which begins with the unperceived and ends with the gross objects⁶ is stated to be of the nature of ignorance⁷. But (you should) learn that whose nature is devoid heightened.' He compares Bṛihadâraṇyaka, p. 816. See also Taittirīya, p. 112.

¹ See Gîtâ, p. 128, note 1, where dhyâna and yoga are taken separately. Here the compound is in the singular. Nīlakaṇṭha's reading is different.

² The sense here is not quite clear. It seems, however, to be this. The acquisitions mentioned in the preceding sentence take the acquirers to some temporary world from which they afterwards return; but when they get rid of the qualities, they get final emancipation. As to the unperceived, cf. inter alia Gîtâ, p. 112, note 2.

³ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 111, and note 2 there. That seems to approach the question from the opposite point of view.

⁴ So Arguna Misra. At Gîtâ XVI, 16, hitta means the operation itself. That also will do here.

⁵ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 78; Maitrī, p. 178; Praṇa, p. 194; and the quotations at Sāṅkhya-sāra, p. 3.

⁶ This phrase has occurred before; it means all the developments which make up worldly life. See Sāṅkhya-sāra, p. 5.

⁷ See p. 371 supra.

of qualities. Two syllables¹ are death; three syllables the eternal Brahman. Mine is death, and not mine is the eternal². Some men of dull understandings extol action. But as to the high-souled ancients they do not extol action³. By action a creature is born with a body and made up of the sixteen⁴. Knowledge brings forth⁵ the being, and that is acceptable and constitutes immortality. Therefore those who are far-sighted have no attachment to actions. This being is stated to be full of knowledge, not full of action⁶. The self-restrained man who thus understands the immortal, changeless, incomprehensible, and ever indestructible and unattached (principle), he dies not⁷. He who thus understands the self to which there is nothing prior, which is uncreated, changeless, unmoving⁸, which is incomprehensible (even) to those who feed on nectar, he certainly becomes immortal⁹ and not to be restrained¹⁰, in consequence of these means¹⁰.

¹ See Sānti Parvan (Rāgadharma) XIII, 4. Cf. Maitrī, p. 180. This means the two and three syllables of 'mama' and 'na mama,' mine and not mine. Cf. Bṛihadāraṇyaka, p. 970, and Khândogya, p. 118, and p. 548, for a similar conceit.

² Final emancipation follows on abandoning the idea of 'mine;' bondage on harbouring it. ³ See Mundaka, p. 279.

⁴ The eleven organs and the five great elements which go to form the body. See Sāṅkhya-kārikā 3, and comment thereon; Sānti Parvan, chap. 210, st. 32 seq.; chap. 242, st. 7 seq.; Prana, p. 230.

⁵ I. e. shows. ⁶ Cf. Gītā, p. 118; Sānti Parvan, ch. 242, st. 15.

⁷ See p. 367 supra, note 6; and cf. Kaṭha, pp. 155, 156.

⁸ I. e. which remains unconcerned, cf. Īśa, p. 10. Apūrvam (to which there is nothing prior), Arguna Mirra renders by 'not familiarly known,' and Nīlakaṇṭha by 'not understood by any other means of knowledge.' See also Bṛihadāraṇyaka, p. 502, and Saṅkara on that.

⁹ This is not very clear, but I suppose the meaning to be the same as that of 'unconquerable' at p. 161, and see p. 231.

¹⁰ I. e. the means mentioned further on, says Nīlakaṇṭha.

Expelling all impressions¹, and restraining the self in the self², he understands that holy Brahman, than which nothing greater exists. And when the understanding is clear, he attains tranquillity³. And the nature of tranquillity is as when one sees a dream⁴. This⁵ is the goal of those emancipated ones who are intent on knowledge. And they see all the movements⁶ which are produced by development. This is the goal of those who are indifferent (to the world). This is the eternal piety. This is what is acquired by men of knowledge. This is the uncensured (mode of) conduct. This goal can be reached by one who is alike to all beings⁷, who is without attachment, who is without expectations.

¹ Impressions from external causes. Cf. inter alia Sāṅkhya-sūtra III, 83; see, too, pp. 247-358 supra and notes there.

² I. e. restraining the mind in the lotus-like heart, Nilakantha. Cf. as to this, pp. 248, 372 inter alia.

³ Cf. Gîtâ, p. 51. See also Maitrî-upaniṣad, p. 176, and Mundaka, p. 314.

⁴ Arguna Misra says, 'The nature of tranquillity is this, that in that state you perceive everything to be unreal like what is seen in a dream.' Nilakantha says, 'The nature of tranquillity is this, that in that state the self abides without attachment to the body, and any external objects, but working within itself as in a dream.' But see on this Kaṣha, p. 147.

⁵ Viz. tranquillity, Nilakantha.

⁶ I. e., says Nilakantha, they see all worldly objects past and future. Arguna Misra, 'They see the actions performed for some wealth and so forth.' I am not satisfied with either meaning. Arguna Misra's is besides based on a reading different from that adopted in the text, namely, Parimāṇagâh, instead of Parivāmagâh. I think 'parivāma' is the development which, according to the Sāṅkhya philosophy, produces the universe, and the movements are the actions which that development—namely, here the activity of egoism and its products—occasions. Cf. as to some extent supporting this, Sāṅkhya-sāra, p. 16.

⁷ See inter alia Gîtâ, pp. 68-70.

and who looks alike on everything¹. I have now declared everything to you, O best of Brāhmaṇa sages! Act thus forthwith; then you will acquire perfection.

The preceptor said:

Thus instructed by the preceptor Brahman, those high-souled sages acted accordingly, and then attained to the worlds². Do you, too, O noble person, of pure self! duly act according to the words of Brahman which I have stated. Then will you attain perfection.

Vāsudeva said:

That pupil thus instructed in the highest piety by the preceptor, did everything (accordingly), O son of Kuntl! and then attained final emancipation. And the pupil, having done all he should have done, attained to that seat, O supporter of the family of the Kauravas! going to which one grieves not³.

Arguna said:

Who, indeed, was that Brāhmaṇa, O Krishna! and who the pupil, O Ganārdana! If this verily is fit to be heard by me, O Lord! then tell it me.

Vāsudeva said:

I⁴ am the preceptor, O you of mighty arms! and ¹ See inter alia Gītā, pp. 68-70.

² I. e., I presume, Bhūr and the rest. But see also Kāṇḍogya, pp. 272, 541, 620, and Bṛihadāraṇyaka, pp. 302, 608.

³ See p. 285 supra, and cf. inter alia Kāṇḍogya, p. 550.

⁴ I. e. I, the Kṣhetragṛha, am the preceptor, and the mind is that which has to be taught. This shows that one's instructor must be oneself, Nīlakantha. Arguna Misra says, 'I am the preceptor, the mind is the pupil. The meaning of this is that anybody who has not acquired knowledge is treated here as a pupil; there is no other special pupil intended.' Cf. also p. 310 supra.

know the mind to be my pupil. And, O Dhanañgaya ! I have related this mystery to you out of love for you. If you have love for me, O supporter of the family of the Kauravas ! then having heard this (instruction) relating to the self, always duly act ¹ (according to it). Then when this piety is duly practised, you will attain the absolute final emancipation, getting rid of all sins. It was this same thing I stated to you before ² when the time for battle had come, O you of mighty arms ! Therefore fix your mind on this. And now ³, O chief of the descendants of Bharata ! it is long since I saw the lord my father. I wish to see him, with your consent, O Phālguna ⁴ !

Vaisampāyana said :

When Kṛishṇa spoke these words, Dhanañgaya replied (saying), 'O Kṛishṇa ! let us verily go to-day to the city of Gāgasa ⁵. Be pleased, O you who understand piety ! to see there king Yudhishthira, who is of a devout heart, and after taking leave of him to go to your own city.'

¹ Nilakantha interprets the words without supplying anything, thus 'be devoted to yama niyama,' &c. Yama &c. are the eight requisites for Yoga or concentration of mind as taught by Patañjali.

² That is to say, in the Gītā.

³ Here he takes up the thread of the story. In the first chapter it was hinted that Kṛishṇa was anxious to go to Dvārakā.

⁴ This is a name of Arguna.

⁵ I. e. Hastināpur, the capital of the Pāṇḍavas. They were, when the dialogue was held, at Indraprastha. See p. 229 supra.

INDEX

OF PRINCIPAL MATTERS.

In this Index, Roman and Italic letters, long and short vowels have been classed together.

- A, the letter, page 90.
- Abandonment, 49, 67, 71, 101, 110, 121, 122, 123, 154, 168, 177, 182, 246, 280, 283, 326, 369, 370, 371, 373, 390. See Renunciation.
- Abhimanyu, 37, 39.
- Ābhiras, 295.
- Abiding in everything. See Within.
- Abiding together. See Unity.
- Abode of Brahman. See Identification, Seat, and Unity.
- Abortive, nothing in Yoga, 47, 72. See Action, Life, Resolution, and Vain.
- Abridging, 357.
- Absolute, 248, 310, 367, 394.
- Absolution. See Release.
- Absorbent, 84, 104, 106, 112, 191, 258, 268, 279, 286, 318. See Assimilation, Dissolution, Life-winds.
- Absorption, 331, 341, 342, 351, 366, 385. See Assimilation.
- Abstinence, 50.
- Abstraction, 10, 68, 69, 70, 75, 77, 78, 79, 86, 100, 114, 125, 128. See Concentration.
- Abuse, 166, 323.
- Acceptable, 391.
- Acceptance, 324, 325, 359, 364.
- Accessible, Supreme Being, 71, 79. See Approaching and Attainment.
- Accomplishment of all duty, 54, 114, 169, 193, 337, 344, 380, 388, 389, 393.
- Accumulation, 355, 364, 368.
- of honey, 188.
- of sin and merit. See Happiness, Merit, and Sin.
- Acid, 118.
- Acquisition, 48, 49, 55, 59, 70, 74, 84, 115, 323, 327, 332, 366, 372, 376, 388, 392. See Body.
- highest, 70, 225.
- new, for Krishna, 54.
- of anything desired. See Desire.
- Act, auspicious. See Auspicious.
- thought and word. See Body, Mind, and Speech.
- Action, 48, 49, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 59, 60, 62, 63, 65, 67, 77, 81, 82, 95, 98, 99, 102, 103, 106, 108, 109, 110, 111, 115, 117, 118, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 127, 128, 152, 153, 156, 179, 180, 182, 184, 185, 188, 191, 193, 232, 233, 238, 240, 241, 243, 244, 256, 261, 278, 279, 280, 283, 286, 289, 293, 297, 302, 306, 307, 309, 313, 314, 315, 316, 319, 320, 321, 326, 338, 339, 348, 349, 355, 357, 358, 365, 368, 369, 370, 374, 375, 377, 380, 381, 382, 385, 387, 389, 391, 393.
- abandonment of. See Abandonment and Inaction.
- bond of, 47, 53, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 82, 85, 107, 108, 115, 123, 125, 307. See Taint.
- burning of. See Burning.
- capacity for, 65, 104, 241.
- causes of, 65, 123, 278.
- dedication of, to Brahman, 55, 61, 64, 83, 85, 100, 105, 128, 168. See Renunciation.
- defect in, cured, 121.
- destruction of, 241, 242. See Destruction.
- different from soul. See Soul.
- evil, 121, 127, 235, 238, 240, 242, 257, 302, 320.
- exhaustion of, 236, 237, 240, 241, 242.
- ferocious. See Ferocious.
- freedom from. See Freedom.
- fruit of. See Fruit.
- instrument of. See Instrument.
- man of, 73, 255, 256.
- marks of, 239, 321.
- meritorious, 72, 76, 109, 130, 233, 238, 240, 242, 257, 314, 320, 321.
- motive to, 48, 49. See Duty and Fruit.

- Action, ordinary and special, 102.
 — organs of, 337. See Organs and Senses.
 — performance of, 108, 378.
 — prescribed, 53, 54, 67, 115, 117, 118, 120, 122, 124, 125, 126, 305, 309, 353, 381. See Duty.
 — prohibited, 60, 117, 119, 120, 125, 309.
 — prompting to, 123.
 — pursuit of, 59, 60, 63.
 — release from. See Freedom.
 — ripening of, 241.
 — success of, 59.
 — to propitiate Supreme. See Propitiation.
 — unnecessary, 54.
 — vain, 82. And see Destruction, Success.
 — world of, 239.
 Active mind, 70.
 — principle. See Soul, not active.
 Activity, 65, 88, 104, 108, 110, 114, 160, 185, 319, 332, 334, 351, 358, 374. See Soul, not active.
 Acute, 163, 164.
 Adhibhûta, 77, 78.
 Adhidaiva, 77, 78.
 Adhiyagña, 77, 78.
 Adhvaryu. See Priest.
 Adhyâtma, 77, 90, 316, 338, 342.
 — See Soul, science of.
 Âdityas, 88, 92, 94, 219.
 Admonition. See Advice.
 Advice, 174, 380.
 Adviser, 105.
 Æon. See Kalpa.
 Afar, 104, 369.
 Affection, 50, 51, 56, 59, 68, 103, 124, 127, 166, 178, 193, 194, 246, 250, 322, 324, 342, 382. See also Aversion, Favourite.
 Affliction, 101, 107, 122, 284, 322, 323, 381. See Trouble.
 Affluence, 304.
 Affright. See Fear.
 Age, 59, 79, 80, 330, 353. See Kalpa.
 — old, 44, 77, 103, 109, 140, 151, 170, 187, 194, 233, 247, 249, 250, 289, 349, 350, 371, 384.
 Agent, 55, 65, 123, 124, 278. See Soul.
 Agitation, 42, 50, 56, 66, 68, 108, 110, 344, 366, 369.
 — of world, 101. And see Perturbation, Vexation.
 Agni, 219, 220, 345.
 Agnihotra, 129, 191, 321.
 Agnishroma, 158.
 Agreeable, 50, 66, 85, 101, 103, 110, 118, 119, 122, 151, 177, 183, 185, 246, 278, 312, 360, 362, 370, 371, 380, 383, 385.
 Agriculture, 127.
 Agyabhâga, 276.
 Âhavanîya, 262.
 Ailment, 233, 237, 245, 321, 343, 356. See Disease.
 Aims of life, 100, 117, 125, 156, 177, 314, 331, 378.
 Air, 73, 82, 179, 260, 289, 305, 316, 339, 343, 361, 368.
 Airâvata, 89.
 Aitareya-Âranyaka, 87, 90, 102, 123, 180, 239, 249, 250, 259, 339.
 — brâhmana, 19, 221, 265, 276, 277, 280.
 — upanishad, 120, 123, 153, 179, 187, 189, 191.
 Âkhyânas, 145, 170.
 Alarka, 296, 297, 298, 299.
 Alarm at sight of universal form, 94, 96, 98.
 Alexander the Great, 223.
 Alike to all, 65, 68, 70, 71, 85, 101, 106, 110, 128, 292, 356, 379, 392, 393. See Equability.
 All-comprehending. See Universal form.
 All-pervading. See Pervading principle.
 All, supreme, 97.
 Alms, 43, 216, 360, 361, 362, 363.
 Alone. See Solitary.
 Altar, 262.
 Amazement, 93, 94, 130, 300. See Alarm.
 Ambarisha, 301, 303.
 Ambiguous. See Equivocal.
 Amusement, 97, 251. See Recreation.
 Analyser, 173.
 Analysis, 174.
 Ânandagiri, 18, 49, 87, 113, 159, 186, 251, 266.
 Ananta, 89.
 Anantagîtâ, 28.
 Anantavigaya, 38.
 Ancestors, 41. See Manes.
 Ancient being. See Primeval.
 Ancients, 59, 78, 86, 87, 260, 340, 369, 378, 391. See Elders.
 Ancient times, those who know about, 101. See Old times.

- Anger. See Wrath.
Aṅgīrasa, 314.
Animals. See Beasts and Offerings.
Animate, 74, 244, 356.
Animating new body, 45, 112.
Animosity, 60, 99, 167, 182, 183, 281, 321. See Hatred.
Anointment, 93.
Antelope, 155, 295.
Antipathy, 168. See Animosity.
Antiquary, Indian, 27, 28, 139, 222.
Anugītā, 158, 161, 162, 166, 256.
 — age of, 206 seq.
 — authorship of, 204 seq.
 — comparison of, with Āpastamba, 215 seq.; with Gītā, 207 seq.
 — divisions of, 198, 200, 201, 204.
 — extent of, 198 seq., 204.
 — geography of, 222.
 — gods mentioned in, 219, 220.
 — interpolations, 205.
 — language of, 226.
 — mountains mentioned in, 222.
 — numbering of chapters, 201.
 — Parvan of Bhārata, 197, 199, 200, 310.
 — recapitulation of Gītā, 197.
 — scheme of, 197 seq., 206.
 — state of society disclosed in, 207, 208.
 — style of. See language of.
 — substance of sections of, 201.
 — tribes in, 222.
 — upanishad, 200.
 — verse of, 226.
Anus, 258, 261.
Anushrubh, 142.
Anxiety, 48, 302, 366, 367.
Āpāna, 258, 338. See Life-winds.
Āpastamba, 14, 20, 21, 22 seq., 24, 29, 30, 32, 69, 101, 103, 118, 120, 147, 176, 177, 208, 210, 211, 215, 216, 217, 218, 225, 236, 243, 275, 291, 302, 322, 353, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 365, 367, 370, 375, 389.
Ape, 39.
Appearance. See Entity and Real.
Application. See Assiduous.
Appointment, 365.
Apportionment, 59.
Apprehension, 82, 257, 283, 314.
Approaching Brahman, 59, 75. See Accessible.
 — preceptor. See Preceptor.
Appropriating, 60, 243, 365.
Appurtenances, 357. See Belongings.
Apsarases, 178, 347.
Aquatic beings, 89.
Aravi, 284, 308.
Āraṇyakas, 17.
Argument, 90, 102, 124, 276, 323.
Arguna, 3, 4, 6, 9, 12, 17, 28, 34, 35, 37, 38, 40, 42, 47, 48, 52, 53, 54, 56, 58, 59, 62, 63, 69, 71, 72, 73, 75, 76, 77, 79, 81, 82, 84, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 96, 98, 99, 109, 117, 121, 122, 125, 128, 130, 131, 135, 197, 198, 205, 229, 230, 293, 294, 310, 393, 394. See Bhārata, Favourite, Forgetfulness, Kuntī, and Prāthā.
 — Misra, 199, 200, 201, 204, 227, 232, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 276, 277, 278, 280, 281, 282, 284, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 292, 293, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 308, 309, 310, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 318, 319, 320, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 379, 380, 381, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393.
Arka, 219, 346.
Arms, 93, 94, 381.
 — mighty, 39, 45, 51, 55, 58, 63, 64, 71, 72, 74, 86, 94, 107, 121, 123, 229, 252, 393, 394.
 — thousand, 94, 98, 293, 294.
 — unnumbered, 94.
Army, 38, 294.
Array. See Battle-array.
Arrogance, 116, 128. See Boastful, Egotism, Pride, and Vanity.
Arrows, 42, 294, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301.
Arteries, 257.
Articulation. See Speech.
Artisans, 208, 365.
Aryaman, 89.
Āryas, 222, 223.
Āryavidyāsudhākara, 27, 33, 224.
Asad, 120, 121.
Asafoetida, 383.

- Ascent, 321, 385.
 Ascertainment of truth, 64.
 Ascetics, 61, 63, 66, 78, 123, 159, 212, 217, 232, 246, 289, 290, 292, 293, 312, 316, 354, 358, 363.
 Ashes, 62, 276.
 Asita, 87.
 Asking alms, 362.
 Asoka, 223.
 Aspirations. See Expectations.
 Āsramas, 30, 216, 307, 315. See Orders.
 Ass, 20.
 Assault, 41.
 Assemblages of men. See Society.
 Assiduous, 50, 63, 72, 73, 83, 101, 112, 115, 125, 161, 253, 255, 360, 361. See Industry.
 Assimilation with Brahman, 52, 59, 66, 69, 70, 85, 99, 100, 104, 106, 107, 109, 110, 128, 156, 176, 178, 253, 308, 313, 316, 342, 370.
 Association, 233, 355, 359, 370, 374, 378. See Company, Dissociation, and Society.
 — with preceptor, 177, 178.
 — with senses, 288.
 Astrigent, 363, 384.
 Astrologers, 377.
 Asura, 83. See Demons.
 Āśvalāyana, 61, 68, 119, 236, 358.
 Āśvamedha, 156.
 — Parvan, 197.
 — Parvan, sections of, 198 seq.
 Āśvattha, 89, 111, 189, 247.
 Āśvatthāman, 38.
 Āsvins, 92, 94.
 Asylum, 84, 129, 361, 363. See Resort.
 Atharva-veda, 18, 19, 180.
 Atheism, 115.
 Atmosphere. See Air.
 Atom, 78, 194.
 Atomists, 377.
 Atri, 314.
 Attachment, 48, 50, 52, 53, 54, 55, 59, 60, 61, 64, 65, 66, 67, 82, 99, 101, 103, 104, 107, 109, 111, 116, 118, 122, 124, 125, 127, 154, 161, 166, 181, 182, 232, 236, 241, 242, 246, 250, 289, 322, 324, 328, 341, 357, 362, 364, 365, 367, 368, 371, 377, 379, 391, 392.
 Attack of vice, 167.
 Attainment to Brahman, 52, 54, 59, 60, 61, 62, 64, 71, 75, 76, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 84, 85, 86, 87, 99, 100, 104, 106, 116, 127, 129, 162, 164, 167, 173, 174, 175, 185, 189, 191, 230, 257, 287, 339, 348, 367, 369, 370, 372, 373, 385, 392. See Brahman.
 Attendance, 324. See Preceptor.
 Attention, 231. See Assiduous.
 Attraction, 327.
 Attractive, 189.
 Attrition, 308.
 Auspicious act, 120, 324.
 Austerity. See Penance.
 Author. See Creator.
 Authority, 54, 117, 243.
 Automaton. See Free-will and Machine.
 Autumn, 159.
 Avarice, 41, 43, 108, 109, 114, 117, 155, 166, 181, 284, 302, 303, 320, 332, 335, 344, 357, 361, 378. See Covetous.
 Aversion, 50, 51, 56, 62, 63, 68, 76, 101, 103, 110, 122, 123, 124, 128, 322, 363. See Affection.
 Avimukta, 257.
 Awake. See Day and Night.
 Axe, 294.
 Back, 367.
 Backbiting, 114, 168, 183, 323, 326, 364.
 Bādarāyana, 30, 33.
 Bahu. See Bhūman.
 Bali-offering, 216.
 Balls of food for ancestors, 41.
 Bamboo, 346, 359.
 Bāṇa Bhārta, 13, 27.
 Banks of rivers, 344.
 Bark, 361.
 Barley-seed, 353.
 Basis. See Real.
 Bathing, 48, 64, 122, 361, 364, 375, 377.
 Battle, Arguna directed to engage in, 44, 47, 55, 78, 96, 127, 128.
 — array, 4, 37.
 — field, 3, 4, 5, 37, 38, 42, 294, 296, 323, 394.
 — righteous, 46.
 — running away from, 127.
 Baudhāyana, 32.
 Beams. See Rays.
 Beasts, 89, 90, 105, 109, 116, 167, 284, 289, 290, 321, 345, 353, 356, 389.
 Beauty, 177, 178, 238, 256, 260, 261,

- 264, 267, 268, 270, 272, 275, 286,
307, 323, 347.
- Bed, 389.
- Bees, 155, 188, 309.
- Beggar. See Ascetic and Asking.
- Beginning and end and middle, 44,
46, 66, 88, 90, 93, 94, 111, 307,
335, 351, 352.
- void of, 44, 86, 94, 103, 104, 106,
157, 313.
- Behaviour. See Conduct.
- Being. See Spirits.
- Ancient, 96, 97. See Primal.
- Best, 77, 87, 92, 113, 114, 377.
- Divine, 78, 87, 186, 187, 188, 189,
190, 191, 192.
- Eternal, 87, 94.
- Primal, 111.
- Supreme, 54, 57, 78, 81, 83, 85,
111, 113, 157, 188, 281, 284.
- See Brahman and God.
- Beings, beginning of. See Source.
- created. See Creatures.
- embodied. See Embodied souls.
- friend of. See Friend.
- higher, 111.
- living. See Creatures.
- lord of. See Lord.
- seed of. See Seed.
- tempers of. See Tempera.
- two, 113.
- two classes of, 93, 115.
- within all, 113, 194. See Within.
- Belief. See Convictions and Faith.
- Belongings, 60, 68, 128, 160, 170,
247, 324, 365, 369, 373. See Appurtenances.
- Beloved. See Favourite, Husband.
- Belt. See Girdle.
- Beneficial speech, 119.
- Benefit, 76, 178, 182, 184, 185, 189,
309, 324, 325, 360.
- Benevolence, universal, 66, 94, 99,
100, 101, 114, 322.
- Beyond. See Highest.
- Bhagavadgītā, 135, 137, 138, 142,
143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 150,
151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 158, 159,
160, 164, 165, 167, 168, 170, 171,
172, 173, 175, 176, 177, 179, 180,
184, 185, 186, 188, 189, 193, 194,
197, 203, 207, 208, 210, 215, 218,
222, 226, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234,
235, 236, 239, 240, 242, 243, 244,
245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251,
253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 260,
261, 262, 266, 270, 277, 278, 279,
281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 288, 289,
291, 292, 295, 305, 306, 307, 310,
313, 315, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321,
323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329,
330, 331, 332, 334, 335, 338, 342,
343, 344, 345, 346, 349, 351, 352,
353, 355, 358, 359, 360, 362, 363,
364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370,
371, 372, 373, 375, 378, 380, 381,
384, 385, 387, 388, 390, 391, 392,
393, 394.
- Bhagavadgītā, appropriateness of, 4,
6, 135.
- author of, 6, 28.
- Brahmanization of, 4, 6, 21, 22.
- character of, 4, 7, 8, 10, 13, 17, 25.
- connexion of, with Bhārata. See appropriateness, supra.
- date of, 17, 19, and Introduction, passim.
- dissemination of, 129, 130.
- frame of, 2, 3.
- genuineness of, 2, 4, 5, 6.
- inconsistencies of, 11.
- language. See style, infra.
- names of, 2, 28.
- non-systematic. See character,
supra.
- Parvan of the Mahābhārata, 2.
- Phalaśruti in, 143.
- Philosophy of. See character,
supra.
- position in Sanskrit literature, 17,
34, 138.
- relation to Buddhism, 24, 34.
- relation to Vedas, 16, 17. See character, supra.
- relation to Yoga-sūtras, 8.
- responsible for want of history, 1.
- scheme of, 2, 3.
- stanzas, common with other
works, 18, 27.
- stanzas of, number of, 35.
- study of. See dissemination,
supra.
- style and language of, 4, 11, 13,
14, 15.
- teaching of, 16.
- terminology of, 11.
- text of, 34.
- upanishad, 2, 200.
- verse of, 15. See History.
- Bhagavān, meaning of, 157.
- Bhāṣārkar, Professor R. G., 28, 107,
137, 199, 227.

- Bharadvāga, 314.
 Bharata, 39, 43, 44, 46, 55, 57, 59, 63, 74, 75, 76, 79, 80, 92, 102, 105, 106, 107, 108, 111, 114, 115, 117, 119, 122, 126, 129, 149, 150, 170, 176, 194, 231, 254, 255, 256, 394.
 Bhārata. See Bharata and Mahā-bhārata.
 — varsha, 39.
 Bhārgava, 314.
 Bhartṛihari, 14, 32, 220, 221, 239.
 Bhāsa, 222, 346.
 Bhāshya. See Patañjali.
 Bhāṣogī, 33.
 Bhāu Dāji, Dr., 27.
 Bhavabhūti, 13.
 Bhikṣu-sūtra, 32, 33.
 Bhima, 37, 38.
 Bhishma, 3, 38, 39, 42, 95, 96.
 — Parvan, 2, 6, 40.
 — roaring of, 38.
 Bhramara, 188.
 Bhrigu, 89, 294. See Bhārgava.
 Bhūman, 173.
 Bhūr, 174, 393.
 Bhūtas, 85, 118, 306, 345, 354.
 Bhūtis, 92.
 Bile, 343.
 Billow, 388.
 Bilva, 360.
 Biped, 171, 209, 339.
 Birds, 90, 109, 142, 164, 189, 321, 345, 353, 371, 389.
 Birth, 45, 48, 58, 59, 76, 86, 103, 105, 109, 116, 170, 176, 177, 194, 231, 233, 237, 239, 241, 245, 247, 257, 302, 313, 339, 341, 390.
 See Death, and Meditation at time of death.
 — after lapse of time, 339.
 — as devotee, 72.
 — bond of, 49, 62, 115, 201.
 — causes of, 48, 105.
 — certainty of, 45, 154.
 — divine, 29, 59.
 — freedom from, 56, 59, 67, 79, 105, 107, 109, 188, 241.
 — in low species, 152.
 — knowledge of, 58, 72.
 — low, 85.
 — number of, 49, 58.
 — of deity, 59.
 — previous. See Life.
 — repeated, 49, 58, 59, 67, 73, 75, 79, 105, 107, 154, 185, 191, 242, 302, 325, 361, 367, 371, 378, 387.
 See Return.
 Birth, sinful, 85, 255.
 Biting, 282.
 Bitter, 118, 363, 383, 384.
 Black, 179, 384.
 Blame and praise, 101, 110, 185, 324, 392.
 Blank, 376.
 Blind man, 155.
 Blindness, 320, 322.
 Bliss, 52, 66. See Brahmic state.
 Blood, 43, 155, 241, 252, 275, 335, 342.
 Boar, 37.
 Boastful, 167, 170, 181, 324. See Arrogant.
 Boat, 31, 381, 382.
 — of knowledge, 62.
 Bodily and mental, 247, 251, 359, 362, 364.
 Bodily, mental, vocal, 119 seq.
 Body, 55, 64, 69, 71, 72, 77, 83, 92, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 111, 112, 113, 118, 123, 128, 155, 173, 176, 177, 178, 179, 186, 187, 191, 193, 235, 236, 237, 240, 242, 245, 246, 248, 249, 250, 252, 253, 257, 259, 262, 279, 288, 289, 290, 302, 307, 326, 331, 332, 342, 344, 345, 362, 367, 376, 391, 392.
 — acquisition of, 44.
 — city of nine portals, 65, 108, 317.
 — development of, 252.
 — distinct from soul, 44, 45, 375.
 — distribution of, on death, 290, 302.
 — leaving, 59, 66, 78, 79, 112, 235, 237, 238, 239, 250, 252, 253, 255, 257, 266, 331.
 — liquids in, 342. See Liquids.
 — movement of, 343.
 — of Krishna, 92, 93.
 — passages of, 79. See Passages.
 — perishable, 44, 45.
 — produced from qualities, 109.
 — release from. See leaving, supra.
 — ruler of, 112.
 — source of, 244.
 — subtle, 190, 333.
 — support of, 53, 60, 159, 291, 316, 359, 363, 366.
 — supporter of, 228, 262.
 — two kinds of, 160.
 See Bond and Deities.
 Bohtlingk, 144.
 Boisterous. See Mind and Senses.
 Bond, 66, 107, 146, 246, 247, 248,

- 317, 323, 342, 351, 355, 368, 371, 391.
 Bond, of qualities, 107. See Action and Birth.
 Bone, 252, 343.
 Books, 57, 326.
 Boon. See Present.
 Borrowing. See Common passages.
 Bosom, 239.
 Boughs, small, 313, 371. See Branches.
 Bows, 37, 39, 42, 293, 294, 296, 311. See Salutation.
 Brahmî, 79, 80, 93, 96, 219, 220, 231, 234, 244, 257, 264, 271, 312, 314, 315, 317, 323, 325, 328, 332, 333, 337, 339, 345, 352, 354, 355, 360, 372, 378, 385, 393. See Priest.
 Brahma Gîtâ, 198 seq., 255, 310. See Anugîtâ.
 Brahmâtarin, 69, 79, 119, 146, 152, 153, 169, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 216, 242, 283, 284, 312, 316, 326, 354, 358, 360, 361, 362, 364.
 — Naishubika, 377.
 Brahman, 52, 56, 61, 62, 64, 65, 66, 70, 72, 77, 79, 81, 84, 87, 90, 91, 102, 103, 106, 107, 108, 110, 113, 120, 121, 127, 128, 146, 147, 149, 151, 152, 153, 156, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 178, 180, 181, 182, 185, 186, 187, 189, 190, 191, 192, 226, 230, 234, 235, 238, 241, 243, 244, 245, 246, 248, 250, 251, 252, 253, 255, 257, 258, 260, 265, 277, 282, 283, 284, 286, 287, 288, 296, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 312, 313, 316, 317, 326, 327, 336, 339, 341, 342, 344, 347, 354, 367, 368, 369, 372, 375, 377, 386, 387, 391, 392. See God, Being-Supreme, Seat, and Vedas.
 Brahmânanda. See Felicity.
 Brahma-yagña, 61, 184.
 Brahma-loka, 20.
 Brahma-vidyâ, 166.
 Brahma-sûtras, 31.
 Brâhmava, 21, 22, 23, 24, 38, 48, 65, 86, 119, 120, 126, 147, 150, 158, 159, 160, 161, 165, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 179, 182, 185, 189, 193, 209, 210, 217, 218, 239, 245, 248, 252, 254, 255, 256, 261, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 281, 284, 285, 288, 293, 295, 296, 299, 300, 303, 304, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 315, 320, 322, 325, 326, 329, 332, 338, 339, 345, 346, 347, 348, 353, 359, 360, 369, 374, 375, 376, 377, 380, 384, 387, 389, 393.
 Brâhmava Gîtâ. See Brahma Gîtâ.
 Brâhmava's wife. See Brâhmava.
 Brâhmanas. See Vedas.
 Brâhmanical age, 4.
 Brâhmanism, 4, 6, 22, 25, 26.
 Brahmic state, 52, 66, 176.
 Branch. See Knowledge.
 Branch and moon, 142, 146, 172.
 Branches downwards, 111.
 — many, 47, 294, 313, 371.
 Brave, 122, 160, 294, 300, 341. See Valour.
 Breach. See Regulation and Duty.
 Breast, 233. See Bosom.
 Breath, 64, 67, 78, 201, 238, 252, 270, 276, 341. See Life-winds.
 Bribing, 91.
 Bridge of piety, 315, 348.
 Brîhadâraṇyakopanishad, 6, 81, 119, 149, 152, 153, 155, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 166, 171, 172, 173, 174, 178, 179, 181, 185, 186, 187, 189, 192, 193, 204, 208, 231, 239, 249, 251, 255, 258, 259, 261, 264, 268, 271, 274, 279, 283, 287, 289, 290, 295, 304, 313, 314, 324, 327, 342, 347, 353, 381, 389, 390, 391.
 Brîhadratha, 180.
 Brîhaspati, 89, 214, 314, 346.
 Brîhatsâman, 90, 180.
 Brilliant, 78, 93, 187, 192, 287, 347.
 Bringing forth. See Production.
 Broad, 384.
 Brooding on evil, 168.
 Brothers, 40, 290.
 Brothers-in-law, 40.
 Brow, 67, 78, 257. See Head.
 Brute force, 116.
 Brutes. See Beasts.
 Buddhism, 9, 20, 23, 24, 25, 26, 69, 146, 147, 212, 213, 214, 215, 224, 225, 226, 306, 376.
 Bühler, J. G., Dr., 14, 20, 21, 27, 32, 33, 208, 213, 215, 224, 353.
 Bull, 345.
 Burden, beasts of, 321.
 Burnell, Dr., 20, 31.
 Burning taste, 118.
 — of action by knowledge, 60, 62, 279.
 — of Arguna's skin, 40.

- Burning of soul, 45.
 Business, 183. See Management.
 Butter, 83, 184, 276.
 Butterflies, 95, 155.
 Buying and selling, 323.

 Calamity, 50. See Distress.
 Calmness, 119. See Tranquillity.
 Calumny, 116, 129, 325. See Carping and Censoriousness.
 Capacity of doing action. See Action and Activity.
 Capital, 394.
 Captivity, 207, 233. See Bond.
 Car, great, 37, 38, 39, 42, 46, 381, 382, 386.
 — without horse, 40.
 Carelessness. See Heedlessness.
 Carnal. See Love.
 Carping, 56, 81, 130, 320, 364, 368. See Calumny.
 Carriage. See Car.
 Caste, 21, 23, 24, 25, 30, 59, 126, 129, 208, 217, 315, 316, 320, 322, 329, 358.
 — author of, 59.
 — comminglings, 41, 55.
 — rites of, 41.
 Casting aside, 343, 344, 357.
 Cataclysm, 94.
 Cattle, 59, 127, 345, 389.
 Cause, 96, 192, 247, 278, 309, 335, 383, 387, 388, 392. See Consequence.
 — material, 58, 106, 113, 191, 244. See Action, Inconstant, Nature, and Source.
 Caution, 63, 97. See Heedlessness and Circumspection.
 Cave, 333, 363.
 Celebration of God's name. See Glorification.
 Celestial pleasures, 84.
 Censoriousness, 166, 167, 181, 182, 183.
 Censure, 150. See Blame.
 Centering. See Concentration.
 Ceremonies, 112, 169, 171, 172, 293, 321, 322, 353, 358, 361, 366, 370. See Rites.
 Ceylon, 223.
 Change, 157, 327, 331, 345, 356, 372. See Development and Unchangeable.
 Channel. See Current.
 Chanting verse, 15.

 Characteristics. See Qualities.
 Chariot, 187, 221, 294, 380. See Car.
 Charioteer, 4, 338, 386.
 Charioteer's son. See Karma.
 Charity, 169, 324.
 Charm. See Enamoured.
 Chastity, 275.
 Cheat, 91. See Crafty and Deceitful.
 Check, 243, 306, 328, 357. See Restraint.
 Childhood, 178. See Infancy.
 Children, 63, 64, 116, 124, 154, 159, 161, 185, 246, 304. See Heroes.
 Chili, 383.
 Choristers. See Gandharvas.
 Churning, 89.
 Circular, 384.
 Circumference, 306.
 Circumspection, 364. See Caution.
 City, 251, 318, 394. See Body.
 Class, 65, 103.
 Classical Sanskrit. See Kāvya.
 Cleanliness, 68, 103, 114, 119, 126, 128, 359, 360, 363, 364. See Purity.
 Clear, 383, 384, 392. See Mind and Undistinguished.
 Cleverness, 128, 324.
 Closing. See Eyelid.
 Cloth, 45, 68, 217, 359, 360, 364, 364.
 Cloud, 72, 179.
 Cognition, 332.
 Cold, 118, 238, 384.
 Cold and heat, 44, 48, 68, 88, 101, 167, 284, 323, 356.
 Colebrooke, H. T., 2, 7, 29, 32, 126, 225.
 Collections, 188.
 Colour, 92, 93, 94, 179, 247, 252, 258, 260, 285, 286, 342, 362. See Objects of sense.
 Combination. See Production.
 Combustible, 45.
 Comfort, 95, 98, 118.
 Coming and going, 44, 80, 84, 231.
 Commentators on Gītā, 11, 35.
 Commission. See Omission.
 Common earnings. See Earnings.
 — passages, 18, 27, 139, 140, 202 seq., 225, 354.
 — people, 51.
 Compact, 383, 385.
 Companion, 40, 159. See Association.
 Company, 97, 293, 359.
 Comparison of one's own with others' pleasures and pains, 71.

- Compassion, 87, 101, 114, 231, 243, 326, 359, 362, 364. See Affection and Pity.
- Compounds, 13, 90.
- Comprehension. See Understanding.
- Comprehensiveness, 124, 372.
- Compulsion. See Free-will.
- Concealed. See Nature.
- Concentration, 12, 61, 65, 66, 68, 69, 73, 78, 79, 99, 100, 101, 105, 110, 128, 153, 160, 169, 181, 185, 189, 232, 242, 243, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 254, 255, 257, 279, 280, 285, 287, 299, 300, 301, 315, 326, 332, 340, 342, 344, 360, 361, 362, 363, 366, 368, 388, 389, 390, 394. See Intent.
- of breath. See Breath.
- Conch, 38, 39.
- Conclusion. See Resolution.
- Condition. See State.
- Conditioning of soul, 107.
- Conduct, 9, 115, 159, 170, 178, 232, 243, 283, 312, 320, 324, 341, 358, 359, 362, 364, 367, 368, 369, 378, 392. See Ill-conducted, and Goodness, Darkness, Passion, and Sinful.
- of one transcending qualities. See Qualities.
- of steady-minded man. See Steady-minded.
- unknown. See Unknown.
- Confidence, 326.
- Confinement of mind, 79. See Quiescence.
- Confluence, 287.
- Confusion, 43, 49, 50, 52, 59, 160, 182, 254, 269, 308, 377. See Distraction and Soul.
- Conjunction, 330.
- Connexions. See Kinsmen.
- Conquered. See Accomplishment.
- Conquest. See Victory.
- Conscience, 41.
- Consciousness, 82, 88, 102, 103, 176, 181, 188, 238, 239, 242, 245, 290, 334, 350, 356, 359.
- Consequences, 56, 124, 126. See Effect.
- Consonants, 348.
- Constancy. See Perseverance.
- Constant, 100, 120, 125, 248, 289, 331, 332, 360, 369, 375, 376.
- Constituents, 246, 318, 336, 343, 344. See Ingredient.
- Constitution, 236.
- Constraint. See Free-will.
- Consubstantial, 163.
- Consummation of devotion, 72.
- Contact with Brahman. See Assimilation.
- with knowledge, 72.
- with objects, 44, 66, 126, 154, 335, 343.
- Contamination. See Taint.
- Contemn, 246. See Despise.
- Contemplation, 47, 49, 50, 61, 100, 111, 156, 162, 169, 181, 234, 245, 283, 309, 389, 390.
- Contemporary Review, 5, 18.
- Contempt, 97, 120, 154.
- Contentment, 54, 60, 68, 86, 87, 101, 166, 168, 240, 286, 288, 302, 325, 326, 334, 361.
- Continence, 169, 361, 389.
- Continuous meditation, 78, 79, 100, 169.
- Control of nature. See Nature.
- of senses. See Restraint, Senses.
- of tongue. See Taciturnity.
- Controversialists, 90, 365.
- Contumely, 324.
- Conversation, 87, 232.
- Convictions, 55, 239, 304, 305.
- demoniac, 118.
- wrong, 52, 120, 320. See Notion, false.
- Cooked rice, 384.
- Cooking, 53, 279, 363.
- Copulative compound. See Compounds.
- Copyright, 5, 18. See Common passages.
- Coronet, 93, 96, 98.
- Corruption of women, 41.
- Cotton, 300.
- Counsellor, 280, 283.
- Counting of sins, 89.
- Country, 342.
- Courage, 48, 70, 90, 94, 102, 103, 114, 124, 125, 126, 127, 167, 168, 176, 182, 288, 301, 302, 325, 332, 373.
- Course of life. See Life.
- Cousin, Victor, 1.
- Covering, 375.
- Covetous, 125. See Avarice.
- Cow, 65, 89, 209, 265, 353.
- Cowell. See Maitri Upanishad.
- Crafty, 125. See Cheat, Deceitful.
- Craving, 107, 166, 181, 342.

- Created things, 124, 157, 190, 234, 258, 260, 262.
- Creation, 90, 106, 107, 124, 313, 317, 332, 333, 334, 340, 344, 345, 347, 351, 352, 388. See Power, Source, and World.
- of man, 53. See Man.
- of sacrifices, 52.
- Creator, 53, 59, 83, 86, 87, 90, 97, 101, 104, 121, 170, 231, 315, 334, 338, 347, 354, 377, 387.
- Creatures, 54, 65, 69, 71, 74, 76, 86, 88, 113, 114, 115, 118, 119, 156, 167, 168, 183, 193, 241, 243, 244, 245, 246, 250, 257, 263, 268, 269, 272, 273, 274, 275, 281, 289, 290, 291, 294, 307, 315, 318, 321, 324, 325, 326, 334, 335, 339, 342, 345, 347, 354, 357, 359, 362, 363, 364, 365, 371, 374, 378, 385, 387, 389, 391, 392.
- Crooked. See Straightforward.
- movement, 339.
- Cruel, 125, 181, 182.
- Cruelties, 166, 167, 168, 243, 323, 326.
- Crumbling of earth. See Earth.
- Culmination, 69. See Knowledge.
- Cunningham, 223.
- Curiosity, 311.
- Currents, 95, 187, 238, 318, 321, 322, 325, 327, 329, 343.
- Curse. See Speech.
- Curtailing, 343, 344. See Abridging.
- Cutting. See Indivisible.
- Daityas. See Demons.
- Dakṣinā, 119, 261, 280.
- Dānavas, 354.
- Dancers, 183, 208, 325.
- Dandin, 13, 144, 205.
- Danger, 47, 56, 125, 157, 167, 188, 190, 335. See Fear.
- Darkness, 75, 78, 87, 104, 107, 108, 109, 110, 117, 118, 119, 120, 122, 124, 125, 126, 168, 180, 214, 239, 276, 278, 284, 301, 302, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 328, 329, 330, 331, 334, 345, 349, 356, 379, 390.
- Darāhotri &c., 262 seq., 266.
- Darakumārakarita. See Dandin.
- Dararatha, 221.
- Dauids, T. W. R., 23, 25, 64, 66, 87, 306.
- Day and night, 51, 79, 80, 81, 276, 277, 330, 352, 354, 356.
- Deaf, 321, 322.
- Dear to God. See Favourite, God.
- Death, 44, 45, 46, 52, 56, 66, 77, 78, 81, 84, 86, 89, 90, 95, 103, 105, 108, 109, 115, 122, 142, 150, 153, 154, 155, 156, 163, 170, 176, 178, 185, 189, 191, 232, 233, 237, 238, 249, 250, 270, 289, 290, 297, 298, 322, 348, 349, 355, 368, 371, 372, 380, 381, 391.
- according to quality, prevailing, 108.
- before and after, bliss, 66.
- before and after, faith necessary, 121.
- certainty of, 45, 154, 355.
- death of, 154.
- fear of, 152.
- in performing one's duty, 56.
- life and infancy, 44.
- meditation at time of, 78.
- non-existent, 149, 151, 152.
- release from, 77, 105, 152. See Age, old.
- time of, 52, 80.
- world of. See World, mortal.
- Debasement of self, 68.
- Deceitful, 164, 324, 364. See Crafty.
- Decision. See Action.
- Declivity, 281.
- Decoration, 207, 324, 387.
- Decrying food, 216, 360.
- Dedication. See Action.
- Deed. See Act.
- Deer-skin, 68, 159, 360.
- Defeat. See Victory.
- Defects, 56, 65, 121, 122, 127, 166, 168, 170, 182.
- Defiance, 324.
- Defiling. See Taint.
- Degradation, 157, 191, 243.
- Degrees. See Gradation.
- Deities, 123, 153, 179, 220, 243, 259, 276, 279, 317, 334, 337, 343, 347, 353, 358, 361, 362, 367. See Divinities, Organs.
- Deity, form of, 76, 78, 80. See Being-Supreme, Brahman, and Krishna.
- Dejection, 42, 50. See Despondency.
- Deliberation. See Thought.
- Delight, 41, 177, 285, 324. See Joy, Pleasure.
- Deliverance. See Emancipation.
- Deliverer, 100.
- Deluge, 97, 106, 260, 388. See Destruction, Dissolution.

- Delusion, 42, 49, 52, 53, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 62, 65, 66, 72, 75, 76, 81, 82, 83, 86, 92, 104, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 114, 115, 116, 122, 124, 126, 128, 129, 130, 152, 153, 154, 155, 157, 161, 162, 166, 176, 181, 182, 183, 184, 189, 190, 233, 243, 256, 284, 293, 301, 302, 303, 304, 317, 319, 320, 322, 326, 330, 331, 332, 333, 335, 343, 344, 351, 356, 357, 358, 368, 377, 378, 381, 382, 386.
 — net of, 116.
 — power of, 59, 75, 76.
 — release from, 75, 76.
Demerit. See Defects.
Demon, 87, 89, 91, 94, 96, 151, 152, 257, 282, 283, 321, 345, 347, 387. See Asura.
Demoniac, 75, 83, 115.
 — birth, 116.
 — convictions, 118.
 — endowments, 114, 115.
Departed spirits, 118. See Manes.
Departure from world, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 166, 191.
 — of soul. See Body-leaving and Death.
Dependence on God, 59, 66, 73, 75, 76, 77, 85, 91, 111, 128, 253, 258, 362.
 — on none, 54, 60, 367, 368.
Dependent, 167, 256, 290. See Independent.
Depreciation of Arguna's merits, 46, 47.
Descent, 321.
Description of Brahman, 164.
Desertion of man by God, 71.
Deserving man, 169, 183.
Designation of Brahman, 120.
Desire, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 56, 57, 58, 60, 63, 65, 66, 67, 69, 70, 74, 75, 76, 78, 83, 84, 101, 102, 108, 110, 111, 115, 116, 117, 118, 121, 123, 128, 151, 153, 154, 155, 165, 166, 169, 173, 176, 181, 184, 233, 241, 246, 263, 269, 275, 283, 284, 288, 289, 300, 302, 313, 314, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 342, 344, 347, 349, 356, 357, 364, 365, 366, 369, 370, 376, 381.
 — capacity of obtaining, 92, 171, 287, 327, 332, 373. See Objects of desire.
Despair. See Despondency.
Despise, 370. See Contemn.
Despondency, 40, 42, 43, 70, 125, 126, 250, 320, 363. See Dejection.
Destructible, 113, 244, 292.
Destruction, fire of. See Fire.
 — of action, 60, 61, 355. See Action, destruction of.
 — of entities, 106, 154, 180, 250, 276, 307, 335, 357, 365, 376, 378.
 — of food, 279.
 — of life. See of entities, supra, and Death.
 — of men, 190.
 — of nature, 106.
 — of others, 120, 348.
 — of self. See Self-destruction.
 — of warriors, 95, 96.
 — of worlds, 55, 107, 115, 314. See Creatures, Deluge, Dissolution, Life, Nature, Production and destruction, and Ruin.
 — time of, 237.
Determinate, 52, 63.
Determination, 255, 260, 268, 299, 348, 349, 350, 368, 377. See Resolution.
Devadatta, 38.
Devaki, 229.
Devala, 87.
Devamata, 226, 274, 275.
Devatādhyāya-brāhmaṇa, 20.
Devayāna, 314, 316.
Development, 77, 103, 104, 109, 156, 165, 166, 170, 184, 186, 288, 318, 331, 334, 370, 372, 375, 382, 387, 392.
 — of intelligence, 293.
Devotee, 58, 61, 64, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 75, 79, 81, 84, 85, 86, 87, 99, 100, 101, 102, 104, 112, 129, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 209, 243, 248, 249, 266.
 — four classes, 11, 75.
Devotion, 9, 12, 17, 23, 48, 49, 50, 52, 53, 55, 58, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 73, 78, 79, 81, 83, 84, 85, 87, 99, 100, 103, 110, 119, 128, 129, 130, 173, 185, 232, 243, 255, 299, 308, 310, 311, 324, 349, 360, 361, 362, 368, 369, 381, 389.
 — mode of, 83.
 — same as renunciation, 67, 85. See Renunciation.
 — unconsummated, 72.

- Devout, 85, 394. See Pure.
 Dexterity, 38, 127, 326, 362.
 Dhaivata, 385.
 Dhammapada, 35, 50, 51, 52, 69, 71, 84, 101, 102, 108, 110, 123, 241.
 Dhanañgaya, 38, 48, 49, 63, 74, 93, 100, 125, 130, 230, 310, 394.
 Dharma, 219, 223, 306.
 Dhātu. See Elements.
 Dhrishadyumna, 39.
 Dhrishaketu, 37.
 Dhritarāshtra, 3, 35, 37, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 95, 135, 136, 141, 149, 150, 151, 155, 156, 157, 158, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 170, 174, 175, 179.
 Dhyanayoga, 128.
 Diadem. See Coronet.
 Dialects &c. of South India, 222.
 Dialogue, 5, 130, 263. And see Itihāsa.
 Dice, 91.
 Difference, apparent, 104, 105, 124, 193. See Soul, State, Unity.
 Difficult deeds, 296.
 — penance, 300.
 Difficulty, 120, 128, 388, 389.
 — of looking at Universal form, 93, 99.
 — of worship, 100.
 Diffusive, 383.
 Digestion, 113, 236, 252, 273, 275.
 Dignity, 74.
 Din, 38, 39, 356.
 Dinner, 97.
 Directions. See Quarters.
 Direct knowledge, 82.
 Director, 281, 385.
 Disagreeable. See Agreeable.
 Disaster, 160.
 Discarding of entities. See Indifference to worldly objects.
 Discernment, 50, 53, 56, 67, 74, 76, 91, 110, 112, 114, 117, 118, 123, 125, 126, 154, 155, 166, 183, 256, 320, 331.
 Disciple. See Pupil.
 Discomfort, 380.
 Di-content. See Contentment.
 Discrimination. See Discernment.
 Discus, 93, 98.
 Discussion, 276. See Controversialists.
 Disdain. See Arrogance.
 Disease, 103, 118. See Ailment.
 Disgrace, 42, 46, 86. See Honour.
 Disguise of Dharma, 223.
 Disgust, 151, 324.
 Dishonest, 243.
 Dishonour. See Honour.
 Disorder. See Body and Mind.
 Disparagement of gods &c., 209, 214, 320.
 Disposition, 43, 117, 182.
 — evil, 320.
 Disrespect, 83, 97, 159, 324, 368.
 Dissatisfaction. See Disgust.
 Dissociation. See Association and Severance.
 Dissolution, 80, 82, 84, 92, 112, 189, 192, 317, 335, 344, 387. See Destruction and Order of dissolution.
 Distinction, 83, 124, 126, 157, 285, 331, 335, 341, 370, 374, 375, 381. See Difference.
 Distinguished, 168.
 Distinguishing power, 318. See Discernment.
 Distraction, 49, 67, 269, 377. See Confusion.
 Distress, 75, 101, 368. See Calamity.
 Distribution of food, 119, 273, 275.
 Ditch, 155, 302.
 Diversified. See Variegated.
 Diversity, 313, 344, 374.
 Dividing soul. See Indivisible.
 Divine Being. See Being.
 — form. See Form.
 — nature, 75, 83, 367, 383.
 — speech, 265.
 — state. See Brahmic state.
 Divinities, 59, 75, 76, 77, 84, 115, 123, 178. See Deities.
 Division, 327, 381.
 — of honey, 188.
 Doctrine, esoteric &c., 149.
 — holy, 82, 185, 255, 256.
 Doer. See Agent and Soul.
 Dog, 20, 65, 142, 160.
 Dolphin, 90.
 Domain. See Kingdom.
 Domination of Supreme, 75.
 Dominion. See Kingdom.
 Door, 270.
 Doubt, 72, 260, 375, 376. See Misgivings, Objects of sense.
 — secret and open, 149.
 Downfall, 233, 355. See Fall.
 Downwards. See Branches and Up.
 Drag, 386.
 Drama. See Kāvya.
 Draupadī, 37, 39.

- Dravidas, 225, 295.
Dream, 249, 269, 387, 392.
Drink, 113, 159, 183, 236, 259. See
 Objects of sense and Senses.
Drinking, 48, 279, 354, 389.
Driving. See Car.
Drowa, 37, 39, 42, 95, 96.
Drooping of Arguna's limbs, 40.
 See Despondency.
Drupada, 37, 39.
Drying up of mouth, 40.
 — of organs, 43.
 — of soul, 45.
Dulness, 320, 391. See Ignorance.
Dumb, 321.
Duryodhana, 37, 38, 39.
 — leaders of his army, 39.
Dushyanta, 39.
Dust, 57.
Duty, 21, 43, 46, 54, 55, 56, 59, 67,
 74, 108, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118,
 119, 120, 122, 125, 126, 127, 128,
 129, 157, 178, 209, 210, 231, 247,
 255, 291, 295, 296, 302, 322, 325,
 326, 329, 348, 359, 360, 361, 362,
 364, 365, 378, 393. See Accomplishment, Action, prescribed and prohibited, Right and wrong.
Dvārakā, 198, 230, 394.
Dwelling in Brahman, 71, 75, 80, 82,
 84, 85, 100, 106, 194. See Assi-milatation and Attainment.
 — of a Brāhmaṇa &c., 159. See House and Residence.
 — of a donor, 185.
Eagle, 90.
Earnings, 54, 60, 363, 364. See Gain.
Ears, 65, 103, 112, 253, 259, 261, 290.
 See Senses.
Earth, 73, 74, 94, 102, 112, 113, 126,
 156, 179, 187, 192, 260, 261, 290,
 291, 303, 304, 305, 339, 343, 352,
 364, 365, 381.
 — sovereignty of, 40.
Ease, 65, 314.
East, 354.
Easy, 82.
Eating, 61, 62, 64, 69, 85, 113, 118,
 236, 269, 279, 321, 353, 358, 362,
 363, 364, 365.
Eclipses, 224, 330.
Edge, sharp. See Arrows.
Effect, 119, 383, 388. See Cause.
Effects, household, 253.
Effeminate, 42.
Effort, personal, 46. See Assiduous.
Effulgence, 94, 95. See Radiance and Refulgence.
Eggs, 321, 339, 353.
Ego and non-ego, 377.
Egoism, 52, 55, 65, 74, 101, 102, 103,
 118, 123, 124, 128, 153, 246, 280,
 287, 313, 317, 318, 326, 332, 333,
 334, 335, 336, 338, 350, 355, 356,
 362, 366, 368, 370, 371, 382, 383,
 385, 389, 390, 392.
Egotism, 118, 124, 128, 268. See
 Arrogance, Pride, and Vanity.
Eight, 373.
Elders, 291. See Ancients.
Elements, 84, 102, 179, 184, 238, 245,
 246, 247, 334, 335, 340, 343, 346,
 348, 352, 353, 355, 357, 368, 371,
 376, 377, 382, 385, 386, 387, 388,
 391.
 — gross. See Constituents and Elements.
 — subtle, 186, 285, 287, 313, 317.
Elephant, 65, 89, 155, 208, 345.
Elevated place, 68.
Elevation of self. See Exaltation.
Eleven, 318, 336.
Emanation, 87, 88, 89, 91, 106, 111,
 127.
Emancipated. See Emancipation.
Emancipation, 48, 50, 52, 54, 58, 59,
 67, 69, 72, 73, 89, 90, 99, 111,
 115, 120, 122, 125, 127, 146, 156,
 157, 162, 163, 170, 176, 178, 184,
 189, 190, 191, 221, 231, 232, 242,
 243, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 252,
 253, 254, 255, 265, 276, 278, 280,
 284, 286, 287, 293, 301, 306, 307,
 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 317,
 322, 325, 326, 331, 333, 336, 344,
 362, 363, 364, 366, 367, 368, 370,
 371, 374, 375, 388, 390, 391, 392,
 393, 394.
 — path of, 47, 48, 54, 58, 72, 73.
Embodied soul, 44, 45, 46, 50, 51, 57,
 63, 65, 77, 100, 107, 108, 109,
 117, 122, 154, 158.
Embodiment of Brahman, 110.
Embryo, 389.
Emperor, 72, 232.
Empty. See House.
Emulation. See Superiority.
Enamoured, 96, 107, 334.
End, evil, 72, 81, 103, 243.
 — of the great cause, 192, 287.

- End of things, 46, 354, 355. See Destruction of entities.
- of worldly life, 111. See Aims, Beginning, and Wicked.
- Endowments, 114, 115, 362, 388.
- Endurance, 167, 168, 182, 246, 323.
- Enemy, 43, 46, 56, 57, 58, 67, 68, 82, 99, 101, 110, 115, 116, 246, 282, 283, 296, 300.
- destroyer of, 42.
- destruction of, 48, 302.
- restrainer of, 231, 253, 312.
- Energy, 91, 106, 118, 124, 125, 177, 255, 387.
- Engagement. See Appointment.
- Enjoyer, 105, 116, 379.
- of qualities. See Qualities.
- of sacrifices, 67, 84.
- Enjoyment, 40, 43, 53, 61, 66, 84, 105, 111, 112, 115, 116, 126, 154, 165, 166, 167, 181, 182, 184, 188, 190, 236, 240, 241, 268, 269, 283, 289, 290, 291, 300, 304, 327, 328, 334, 365, 375, 379, 383.
- capacity of, 104.
- higher and lower, 240.
- nothing beyond, 115.
- repeated, 126. See Pleasure.
- Enlightenment, 107, 155, 265, 287, 293, 325, 329, 333, 348, 351, 356, 373.
- Enmity, 99. See Benevolence.
- Enormity, 181. See Sin.
- Entities, 75, 76, 80, 82, 83, 88, 90, 106, 107, 111, 113, 126, 180, 190, 192, 244, 260, 292, 312, 313, 315, 316, 317, 318, 333, 335, 337, 338, 339, 341, 342, 347, 351, 352, 353, 357, 367, 368, 369, 370, 386, 387.
- cause of. See Source.
- distinctions between, 104, 318, 328, 352, 375.
- lord of, 83, 88.
- supporter of, 80.
- threefold division of, 337. See Creation, Destruction, Production, Source, Unity, and Within.
- Entity, real, 124, 154, 157, 176, 191, 307, 308, 309, 312, 333, 335, 343, 370, 372.
- Entrance into the Supreme, 82, 94, 95, 99, 128, 285. See Assimilation and Essence.
- Enumeration of qualities, 124.
- Environment, 355.
- Envy, 166, 362. See Superiority.
- Ephemeral. See Perishable.
- Epic Age. See Greek poetry.
- Equability, 47, 48, 49, 60, 65, 71, 86, 100, 101, 103, 110, 325, 326, 359, 366, 372, 373. See Alike and Impartial.
- Equal, 97, 116. See Power, unequalled.
- Equanimity. See Equability.
- Equilibrium, 217, 331.
- Equivocal words, 52.
- Error, 65, 369. See Conviction false.
- Esoteric. See Doctrine.
- Essence, 50, 58, 59, 74, 76, 78, 107, 109, 110, 128, 130, 370, 379, 382.
- Eternal, 62, 74, 76, 79, 80, 81, 87, 94, 100, 110, 112, 128, 157, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 230, 233, 238, 241, 245, 247, 248, 255, 265, 277, 313, 314, 317, 331, 334, 379, 380, 376, 391.
- Eternity of soul, 43, 44, 45.
- Evening, 361.
- Evenness, 67, 69.
- Everlasting, 45, 58, 79, 157, 233, 317, 353, 369, 370.
- Evil, 103, 105, 115, 121, 126, 127, 247, 276, 277, 289, 366.
- action, 121.
- cause of, 156.
- conduct. See Ill-conducted.
- doers, 59, 75. See Wicked.
- duty, 56, 127.
- end, 72.
- of attachment. See Attachment.
- perception of, 103.
- release from, 60, 81.
- speaking, 182.
- world, 60.
- Exaltation of self, 67.
- Examination. See Test.
- Example, 41, 54, 59.
- Excellent, 86, 92.
- Excess, 159.
- Exclusion. See Objects of sense.
- Exclusive. See Concentration.
- Excretions, 4, 65, 155, 236, 252, 261, 336, 338. See Organs and Senses.
- menstrual, 275.
- Excretive organs, 297.
- Exercise, 69, 236, 323, 360. See Power.
- Exertion. See Assiduous.
- Exhalation, 264, 265, 372.
- Exhaustion, 355.
- Existence, 105, 120, 176, 292, 351, 377.

- Existence and non-existence, 44, 84, 96, 103, 191, 194, 276, 277, 331, 375, 377.
 Exoteric. See Doctrine.
 Expanse, 258.
 Expectation, 60, 68, 119, 120, 292, 324, 326, 365, 366, 367, 378, 389, 392.
 Experience, 50, 57, 66, 68, 73, 81, 82, 99, 112, 126, 179, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 231, 245, 248, 249, 250, 253, 256, 263, 309, 316, 342, 344, 368.
 Expiation, 324.
 External and internal. See Bodily and Mental.
 — objects. See Objects of sense.
 — world. See World.
 Extinction. See Fire.
 Exultation and grief, 50, 65, 249, 285, 300, 325. See Joy.
 Eye, 65, 67, 69, 187, 189, 219, 253, 258, 259, 260, 290, 307, 347, 359, 366. See Senses.
 — divine, 72, 239.
 — many an, 93, 94.
 — of knowledge. See Knowledge, eye of.
 — on all sides, 93, 103, 332.
 — sun and moon, 94.
 Eyelid, opening and closing, 64, 161, 356, 372.
 Faces downwards, 287.
 — in all directions, 90, 93, 103, 253, 332, 345.
 Factiousness, 182.
 Failure. See Success.
 Faith, 56, 62, 63, 72, 73, 76, 77, 82, 84, 99, 102, 115, 117, 118, 119, 121, 126, 130, 220, 255, 316, 319, 320, 321, 324, 325, 358, 365, 366, 378.
 Fall, 84, 107, 113, 116, 240. See Downfall.
 Falsehood. See Truth.
 Faltering, 46.
 Fame, 46, 90, 116, 236, 287, 358.
 — of Krishna, 96.
 Family, destruction of, 41.
 — extinction of, 41.
 — rites of, 41, 42.
 Fancies, 60, 67, 70, 116, 171, 184, 185, 247, 284, 288, 355. See Pondering and Thought.
 Far and near. See Afar.
 Far-seeing, 160, 391.
 Fastenings, 356.
 Fasts, 76, 283, 324.
 Fat, 384.
 Father, 40, 83, 97, 107, 176, 194, 233, 243, 290, 303, 304, 394.
 — and son, 98.
 Father-in-law, 40.
 Fatigue, 357.
 Fault-finding. See Calumny and Carping.
 Faults, 247, 293, 320.
 Fauriel, M., 6.
 Favour, 71, 128, 129, 130, 161, 310, 372. See Soul.
 Favourite, 17, 75, 85, 86, 87, 101, 102, 129, 183, 230, 394.
 — name, 79.
 Favouritism, 59, 85, 182. See Impartiality.
 Fear, 46, 50, 58, 67, 69, 86, 94, 96, 98, 101, 114, 122, 126, 151, 155, 159, 161, 167, 246, 250, 285, 287, 292, 294, 295, 320, 325, 329, 330, 344, 357, 362. See Danger.
 Fearful. See Difficult and Terrible.
 Feathered arrows, 298.
 Feeling, 104, 112, 288. See Organs and Senses.
 Fees. See Gift.
 Feet, 53, 94, 103, 119, 235, 253, 261, 332, 339, 359, 367, 380.
 Felicity, 162.
 Fellow-student. See Student.
 Felons, 41.
 Females, 41, 85, 90, 241, 255, 275, 277, 287, 295, 324, 346, 347. See Corruption and Male and female.
 Ferocious, 115, 116, 323.
 Fetter, 53, 62, 64, 123, 127. See Action and Bond.
 Fibres, 176, 249.
 Fickleness, 167. See Mind.
 Field, 41, 72, 354.
 Fierce. See Ferocious.
 Fig tree, 89.
 Figure and trope. See Bhagavadgītā and Sanatsugātīya, and Simile.
 Finding fault. See Carping.
 Fire, 45, 57, 61, 62, 67, 73, 74, 80, 83, 88, 94, 95, 97, 102, 112, 113, 127, 156, 192, 242, 247, 257, 259, 260, 261, 262, 268, 270, 271, 276, 277, 279, 283, 288, 307, 308, 319, 336, 338, 342, 346, 353, 360, 362, 380, 388.
 — and smoke, 57, 127.

- Fire, discarding, 67.
 — of destruction, 95.
 — of knowledge, 60, 62.
 See Brahman and Sense.
 Firm, 45, 49, 101. See Fixed.
 Firmness in vows, 83.
 — of belief, 77.
 — of mind, 49.
 — of resolution, 70, 125. See Courage, Faith, and Understanding.
 First, 161, 345, 352 seq.
 First-born. See First.
 Fish, 90, 155, 374.
 Fisherman, 382.
 Fit donee &c. See Gift.
 Fixed firmly, 29, 89, 111.
 Fixing. See Concentration.
 Flame. See Fire.
 Flamingo, 138, 189.
 Flesh, 252, 335, 343, 367.
 Flickerings, 69.
 Flippancy, 183.
 Flower and fruit, 85, 93, 285, 286, 309, 313, 365, 371, 388.
 — bunches, 313.
 Flowery talk, 47.
 Flowing element, 342.
 Foam and water, 104.
 Foe. See Enemy.
 — terror of, 42, 43, 58, 62, 76, 82, 84, 91, 97, 99, 126, 232, 234, 311.
 Fœtus, 57, 144, 176, 240, 242.
 Following. See Imitation and Obedience.
 Folly, 126. See Frenzy.
 Fondness, 74. See Acquisition.
 Food, 83, 118, 119, 144, 156, 159, 188, 216, 233, 235, 238, 252, 254, 270, 279, 343, 353, 360, 363, 364, 388.
 See Eating.
 — cooking for oneself only, 53.
 — digestion and distribution of, 273, 277.
 — fourfold, 113.
 — moderation in. See Eating.
 — origin of creatures, 54.
 Forbearance. See Forgiveness.
 Force. See Brute force.
 Forest, 173, 259, 284, 285, 286, 288, 307, 342, 361, 362, 363, 372, 386.
 Forester, 217, 307, 316, 345, 354, 358, 362.
 Forest-products, 361.
 Forgetfulness of Arguna, 230.
 — of Krishna, 230.
 — of one's nature, 50, 152, 154.
 Forgiveness, 86, 90, 101, 103, 114, 126, 176, 181, 182, 183, 320, 321, 325, 326, 359, 362, 373.
 Form divine, 92, 93, 229.
 — divine, entry into. See Entrance.
 — divine, sight of desired by gods, 99.
 — divine, wonderful, 94.
 — fierce, 95. See Terrible.
 — human. See Human.
 — infinite, 97, 98.
 — material of Brahman, 58.
 — of Brahman. See Brahman.
 — universal, 97, 98, 99, 130. See Degradation.
 Former life. See Life, previous.
 Formless, 233, 247.
 Forms, many, 83, 92, 93, 274. See Real.
 — of all, 93.
 — of nature, 74.
 Fortnight, 81, 188, 316, 330, 352, 356.
 Fortune, 90, 131.
 Four-handed, 98.
 Fragrance, 74, 247, 257, 258, 286, 291, 309. See Objects of sense, Perfume, and Senses.
 Free, 60, 65, 243, 342.
 Freedom from action, 52, 54, 56, 127, 256, 257, 362.
 — from delusion, 75, 76.
 — of will. See Desire and Free-will.
 Freeman, E. A., 5, 18, 203.
 Free-will, 53, 56, 80, 82, 128, 156, 157.
 Frenzy, 115, 116, 131, 168, 183, 323. See Folly.
 Friend, 40, 41, 58, 67, 68, 72, 84, 97, 98, 101, 110, 167, 181, 183, 184, 233, 246, 290, 295, 364.
 Friendly, 101, 342.
 Frivolous, 308.
 Fruit, connexion of with action, 65.
 — of action, 48, 49, 58, 59, 60, 65, 67, 73, 76, 81, 84, 85, 100, 101, 109, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 153, 156, 158, 165, 188, 191, 236, 240, 243, 264, 307, 312, 325, 326, 348, 355, 365, 369, 373, 380, 382.
 — of Sāṅkhya and Yoga, 64.
 — of worship, 76, 81, 84. See Flower, Phalaśruti, and Tree.
 Frustration of desire, 50. See Desire.
 Fuel, 62, 247, 259, 261, 268, 283, 286, 290, 291, 307, 308, 342.
 Fugitive. See Perishable.
 Full of Brahman, 59.

- Funeral rites. See Balls of food.
 Future, 76, 79, 90, 170, 194, 269, 314, 325, 331, 366, 392. See Entities and World.
 Gadfly, 284.
 Gagasa, 394.
 Gāhnavi. See Ganges.
 Gain and loss, 47, 151, 170, 246. See Earnings.
 Gainas, 224, 225, 226, 364.
 Gamadagni, 294, 295, 300.
 Gambling, 324. See Game.
 Gambu, 346.
 Game, 91. See Gambling.
 Gamut, 385.
 Ganaka, 5, 54, 215, 222, 303, 304, 306.
 Ganamegaya, 229.
 Ganārdana, 41, 42, 52, 88, 99, 233, 393.
 Ganas, 346.
 Gandhāra, 385.
 Gandharvas, 89, 94, 178, 347, 387.
 Gandhiva, 40.
 Gaṅgam, 223.
 Ganges, 90, 222, 354.
 Gapa, 89, 184.
 Gārhapatya, 262.
 Garrulity, 168, 181. See Taciturnity.
 Garuda, 90.
 Gasp, 239.
 Gastric. See Fire.
 Gauḍapāda, 160, 324, 376.
 Gautama, 208, 213, 218, 224, 236, 314, 353, 354, 359, 362, 363, 365. See Buddhism.
 Gayadratha, 96.
 Gāyatri, 90, 353.
 Gem, 384.
 General, 89.
 — his position in army, 38.
 Generation, 74, 89, 260, 287, 336. See Organs and Senses.
 Generosity. See Gifts.
 Genital organ, 261, 336, 338.
 Gentle, 114, 119, 341.
 Germs, 339.
 Ghee, 384.
 Gifts, 21, 22, 23, 81, 84, 85, 86, 98, 99, 114, 116, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 127, 147, 167, 169, 173, 182, 183, 184, 218, 242, 282, 320, 321, 324, 325, 326, 330, 340, 359, 364, 376. See Dakṣiṇā.
 Girdle, 217, 360.
 Gishṇu, 219, 332.
 Gītā. See Bhagavadgītā.
 Given up to God. See Devotion.
 Gladstone, W. E., 4.
 Gleaning corn, 21, 217.
 Glorification, 64, 83.
 Glorious, 172, 289, 303.
 Glory, 43, 74, 86, 91, 93, 96, 97, 98, 112, 126, 158, 164, 179, 180, 185, 186, 192, 276, 287, 308, 376, 377.
 Glow-worm, 239.
 Glutinous, 384.
 Gṛānakāṇḍa. See Vedas.
 Gṛānendra Sarasvatī, 33.
 Gnat, 374, 379.
 Goal, 59, 61, 65, 67, 69, 73, 75, 79, 80, 81, 83, 85, 86, 87, 97, 99, 100, 102, 104, 106, 107, 117, 156, 163, 167, 182, 231, 233, 255, 256, 258, 311, 315, 333, 349, 358, 372, 387, 388, 392.
 Goat, 290, 321, 353.
 God, 98, 192, 284.
 — dear to man of knowledge, 75.
 — form of, 76, 78.
 — full of. See Full.
 — manifest, not to all, 76.
 — mover of world. See Movement.
 — not active agent, 59, 65, 106. See Soul.
 — primal, 96.
 — source unknown, 86.
 — superior none, 74. See Brahman, Deity, Dependence, Hatred, and Īsvara.
 Goddess, 347.
 Godlike. See Endowments.
 Gods, 16, 53, 61, 80, 84, 86, 87, 88, 93, 94, 95, 99, 105, 108, 109, 118, 119, 126, 146, 151, 153, 160, 169, 186, 241, 250, 254, 255, 282, 283, 305, 306, 316, 320, 322, 324, 327, 331, 338, 345, 347, 354, 377, 387, 389, 390.
 — censure of, 150.
 — disparagement of. See Disparagement.
 — first of, 87, 93, 95, 97.
 — lord of, 84, 87, 93, 95, 96, 98.
 — nature of. See Endowments.
 — sacrifice to, 61.
 — sovereignty of, 43.
 — world of, 84, 254, 322. See World.
 Going and returning. See Coming and going, and Return.

- Gold, 68, 110, 189, 209, 333, 353, 365, 389.
- Goldstücker, Prof., 3, 5, 6, 8, 14, 20, 33, 74, 79, 89, 118.
- Good, 42, 43, 52, 53, 59, 68, 85, 91, 105, 108, 109, 115, 118, 120, 124, 168, 175, 178, 191, 243, 276, 277, 282, 287, 290, 292, 293, 300, 301, 302, 311, 314, 316, 319, 320, 325, 326, 348, 349, 358, 359, 368, 377, 390.
- deeds, doers of, 72, 75, 105, 153, 243.
- Goodness, 75, 91, 106, 107, 108, 109, 117, 118, 120, 122, 124, 125, 126, 184, 276, 278, 300, 306, 318, 319, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 334, 373, 374, 376.
- Government of tongue. See Taciturnity.
- of world. See Universe.
- Governor. See Ruler of universe.
- Govinda, 40, 43.
- Gracious, 95, 98.
- Gradation, 381, 385, 387, 388.
- Gradual progress, 70. See Improvement.
- Grain, 361.
- Grammarians, 174.
- Grammatical blunders of demons, 152.
- Grandsire, 38, 40, 83, 194, 244, 271, 289, 295, 300, 303, 304, 314, 374.
- great, 97.
- Grandson, 40.
- Grass, 68, 142, 159, 360.
- Gratitude, 176, 177.
- Great, capacity of becoming, 92. See Large.
- men, 54, 72.
- Greatness, 333, 347, 354.
- Greatness of Supreme, 92, 97, 128, 157, 287, 336.
- worldly, 151, 178.
- Greek poetry, 5, 18, 203.
- Green, 384.
- Grey, 179, 384.
- Grief, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 66, 101, 115, 118, 126, 128, 166, 181, 183, 193, 250, 284, 285, 301, 320, 326, 327, 343, 354, 355, 356, 357, 366, 393. See Sorrow.
- Griffiths, R. T. H., 90.
- Grote, G., 5, 6.
- Group. See Collection.
- of senses. See Senses.
- Gudākeśa, 39, 43, 88, 92.
- Guesses at truth, 8, 12.
- Guests, 216, 243, 285, 286, 306, 353, 361, 364.
- Guide, 348.
- Guilt, 98. See Fault.
- Guru. See Preceptor.
- Gurūishyasamvāda, 199 seq. See Anugītā.
- Guruskandha, 222, 346.
- Gyotishroma, 156, 164.
- Habit of pondering, 78, 250.
- Habitation, 251. See Dwelling.
- Hair, 40, 93, 130, 362.
- matted. See Matted hair.
- thick, 39.
- Half-hearted, 73.
- Hall, F. E., 8, 10, 28, 141, 197, 201, 202, 204, 219, 221, 222, 244, 280, 285, 300, 317, 327, 332, 333, 334, 337, 338, 373, 390, 392.
- Hamilton, Sir W., 378.
- Hansa, 381.
- Hands, 53, 261, 359, 367.
- four, 98.
- joining, 93, 94, 96, 294, 311.
- on all sides, 103, 203, 253, 332.
- one thousand. See Arms.
- Hanging, 237.
- Hankering. See Craving, Desire.
- Hanumat. See Ape.
- Happiness, 51, 63, 65, 66, 70, 76, 85, 87, 101, 103, 107, 108, 110, 116, 117, 126, 170, 185, 189, 233, 242, 250, 255, 270, 285, 300, 311, 314, 325, 341, 342, 347, 348, 369, 378, 380, 389. See Enjoyment.
- Pleasure, and Unhappiness.
- Hard, 341, 384.
- Hari, 92, 130, 219, 347.
- Harmlessness, 83, 86, 101, 103, 114, 119, 124, 325, 364, 373, 376.
- Harshatarita, 28.
- Harshavardhana, 27, 28.
- Harshness, 114, 181, 256. See Mercilessness.
- Haste, 175.
- Hastināpur, 2, 394.
- Hateful to Supreme Being, 85. See Likes and dislikes.
- Haṭha-yoga, 297.
- Hatred, 68, 85, 99, 101, 116, 162, 182, 194, 281, 288, 289, 301, 320, 323, 365. See Antipathy.
- Haug, M., 19, 221, 276, 277.
- Haughty, 167, 168, 320, 324.

- Head, 69, 79, 93, 103, 238, 253, 332, 367. See Bow.
Heads smashed, 95.
Headstrong, 125, 320. See Stubborn.
Health, 118.
Heard instruction, 49, 105, 173, 283.
Hearer, 282, 283.
Hearing, 130, 246, 258, 259, 309, 351. See Heard, Instruction, Senses.
Heart, 42, 43, 50, 51, 52, 64, 69, 70, 79, 85, 87, 88, 98, 104, 113, 114, 118, 119, 122, 129, 153, 177, 183, 187, 192, 194, 232, 239, 242, 251, 252, 278, 281, 282, 283, 287, 293, 303, 308, 332, 342, 345, 350, 361, 394.
Heat, 84, 95, 237, 329, 330. See Warmth.
 — and cold. See Cold and heat.
Heaven, 42, 46, 47, 48, 49, 72, 81, 84, 93, 94, 120, 125, 126, 130, 156, 158, 159, 165, 179, 187, 192, 240, 264, 281, 289, 290, 307, 322, 325, 327, 344, 360, 361, 362, 368, 389.
 — degrees in, 240.
 — sovereignty of, 43.
 — touching, 94.
 — voice from, 295.
Heaviness, 320, 327. See Lazy.
Heedlessness, 63, 97, 108, 109, 126, 152, 153, 155, 156, 168, 169, 170, 176, 183, 253, 324, 359.
Hell, 41, 42, 116, 155, 183, 190, 233, 240, 259, 321, 378.
 — ways to, 116.
Helpless, 336, 365.
Helplessness of Arguna, 43.
Herbs, 83, 113, 346, 388. See Vegetables.
Heretics, 171.
Hermitage, 221, 285, 294.
Hero, 37, 95, 98, 295.
Hidden. See Concealed.
Hideous, 343.
Highest, 74, 99, 108, 113, 244, 309, 326, 336, 342, 344, 347, 351, 354, 368, 369, 372, 389, 390. See Supreme.
High position, 68, 178, 233.
High-souled, 75, 79, 83, 94, 96, 98, 151, 294, 295, 296, 314, 327, 348, 389, 391, 393.
Hill, 284, 287. See Mountain.
Himālaya, 29, 89, 222, 346.
Hiranyagarbha, 108, 111, 186, 315, 333.
History, 1.
Holes, dwellers in, 345.
Holiness. See Purity.
Holy, 87, 119, 331, 333, 336, 347, 354, 377, 378, 392. See Devout.
 — dialogue, 129, 130.
 — means of immortality, 102.
 — men, 72.
 — world, 84.
Home, 113, 170, 355.
 — of woes, 79.
Homeless, 101, 103, 352, 355.
Homeric question, 4, 5.
Honey, 188, 190.
Honour, 116, 118, 119, 160, 243, 246, 302, 361, 363.
 — and dishonour, 68, 101, 110.
Hope, 82, 115.
Horizontally, 287.
Horrific. See Terrible.
Horses, 89, 187, 381, 386.
 — white, of Arguna, 38.
Hospitality, 286, 294. See Guest.
Host, 358.
Hosts. See Army.
Hot, 118, 246, 384.
Hotri. See Priest.
House-decoration, 207, 324. See Habitation.
Householder, 307, 316, 354, 358, 360, 362, 377.
Hrishikesa, 38, 39, 43, 96, 121, 242, 248, 270, 363, 367.
Hue. See Colour.
Human form, 76, 83, 87.
 — world, 20. See World, human.
Humility, 65, 116, 314, 326. See also Modesty.
Hunger, 151, 356, 359.
Hunter, 142, 167.
Hurry. See Haste.
Hurtful, 384.
Hurtfulness. See Harmlessness.
Husband and wife, 98, 256.
Hymns, 94, 102, 280. See Sāman.
Hypocrite, 53, 164.
Idā, 257, 277, 318.
Idealism, 107, 387.
Identification with Brahman, 52, 61, 62, 64, 65, 69, 70, 71, 75, 83, 106, 114, 120, 128, 156, 162, 164, 167, 169, 176, 181, 188, 189, 190, 191, 193, 234, 283, 385. See Unity.
 — of self with all, 62, 64, 246, 307, 310. See Unity.

- Identification of self with wife &c., 64, 103, 248.
 Identity. See Soul.
 Idiots, 321.
 Ignominy, 233. See Disgrace.
 Ignorance, 63, 65, 76, 87, 100, 103, 109, 114, 116, 120, 151, 155, 157, 160, 168, 171, 178, 186, 267, 319, 322, 357, 390.
 — about Supreme, 75, 76, 309.
 Ignorant people, 55, 63, 76, 109, 151, 156, 158.
 Ikshvâku, 58.
 Ill-conducted, 71, 85, 105, 321.
 Ill-success. See Success.
 Illumination of world, 178, 186.
 Illustrious. See Great men.
 Image, 208, 242. See Embodiment and Representative.
 Imitation, 55.
 Immaculate. See Soul.
 Immaturity, 320.
 Immediate knowledge. See Direct.
 Immortal, 43, 44, 45, 84, 86, 102, 103, 109, 110, 143, 152, 153, 166, 168, 170, 176, 179, 180, 182, 185, 187, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 244, 255, 282, 313, 343, 357, 367, 372, 373, 391.
 Immovable, 100, 159, 266, 307, 321, 330, 331, 353, 355, 383, 387. See Movable.
 Immutable. See Unchangeable.
 Impartiality, 85, 101, 128. See Alike and Equability.
 Impassable, 284, 285, 389.
 Impatience, 166.
 Impediment. See Obstacle.
 Imperceptible, 234, 241. See Perceptible.
 Imperfect. See Knowledge.
 Imperfection, 168.
 Imperishable, 58, 81, 128, 245, 248, 357, 367, 385.
 Impermanence. See Perishable.
 Impiety, 41, 125, 158, 246, 319, 348. See Piety.
 Implement. See Instrument.
 Important. See Excellent.
 Impression, 247, 264, 266, 318, 358, 383, 392.
 Improvement, 321.
 Impure, 118, 125, 154.
 Inaccessible, 295.
 Inaction, 48, 53, 60, 67, 115, 122, 125, 320. See Freedom from action.
 Inanimate creation, 77, 244.
 Inattention. See Heedlessness.
 Incarnation, 59, 221. See Manifestation.
 Incautious, 97. See Heedlessness.
 Incendiary, 41.
 Inclination, 282, 283, 318. See Disposition.
 Incombustible, 44, 45.
 Incomprehensible, 391. See Unknowable.
 Inconstancy, 287, 289, 335.
 Incontinent, 236.
 Incorrect. See Conviction and Knowledge.
 Indecision. See Misgivings.
 Indefeasible, 110.
 Indefinable, 44, 94, 97.
 Independence, 326. See Dependent on none.
 Indescribable, 100.
 Indestructible, 44, 45, 46, 54, 66, 77, 78, 80, 94, 96, 99, 100, 113, 173, 179, 244, 248, 257, 292, 391.
 India, South. See Dialect and Tank.
 Indication of Brahman, 102.
 Indicative use of words, 272.
 Indifference, means of, 341.
 — to ordinary books, 49.
 — to worldly objects, 9, 10, 69, 71, 89, 101, 103, 111, 128, 168, 169, 233, 247, 326, 341, 365, 366, 392.
 Indifferent, 68, 82, 100, 110, 113.
 Indigent, 256, 304, 376.
 Indignities, 233. See Ignominy.
 Indische Studien, 33.
 Individual soul. See Soul.
 Indivisible, 45.
 Indolence, 108, 320. See Lazy.
 Indra, 88, 89, 96, 175, 219, 250, 261, 282, 316, 338, 346, 388.
 Indraprastha, 229, 394.
 Indu, 346.
 Indulgence of senses, 54. See Senses.
 Industry, 91. See Assiduous.
 Inexhaustible, 44, 45, 58, 59, 75, 76, 83, 84, 90, 92, 94, 106, 107, 111, 113, 124, 187, 250, 332, 372.
 Inexpugnable, 312.
 Infamy. See Disgrace.
 Infancy compared to death, 44.
 Inference, 160, 291, 367, 373, 374.
 Inferior. See Beasts, Entities, and Path.
 Infidel, 378.

- Infinite, 93, 96, 97, 98, 344, 348.
 Information. See Knowledge.
 Ingenious, 173.
 Ingredient, 385.
 Inheritance, 21, 217.
 Initiation, 285, 286, 347, 361.
 Injury, 101, 114, 119, 124, 159, 167, 168, 176, 182, 318, 323. See Harmlessness.
 Insatiable. See Desire.
 Inscriptions, 13, 28, 223.
 Insects, 225, 321, 339.
 Insignificant, 124, 335.
 Inspiration, 76, 281.
 Instruction, 21, 22, 23, 87, 102, 105, 172, 176, 177, 218, 248, 251, 254, 264, 281, 282, 283, 290, 312, 324, 359, 365, 393, 394.
 Instructor. See Preceptor.
 Instrument, 61, 123, 278, 348, 357, 365.
 Intellect, 86, 90, 257, 309, 320.
 Intelligence, 86, 125, 127, 234, 241, 242, 263, 269, 276, 284, 286, 296, 304, 305, 308, 311, 332, 371, 381.
 Intelligent. See Unintelligent.
 Intent, 66, 73, 110, 308, 392. See Concentration.
 Interest, 54, 193.
 Interminglings. See Caste.
 Interpolation in Mahābhārata, 4, 34, 340. See Anugītā.
 Interspace between earth and sky, 94.
 Intoxicating drinks, 183, 279.
 Introspection, 105.
 Invincible, 180, 389. See Unconquerable.
 Invisible, 192. See Movement, concealed, and Regulation.
 Involuntary action. See Free-will.
 Irascible, 167. See Wrath.
 Iron, 208, 242.
 Irregular worship, 84.
 Īropanishad, 54, 62, 71, 104, 106, 153, 160, 180, 187, 192, 193, 194, 248, 305, 391.
 Īvara, 219, 315, 354.
 Īvaragītā, 2.
 Itihāsa, ancient, 198, 207, 210, 226, 238, 256, 261, 268, 270, 274, 277, 282, 289, 293, 296, 303, 310.
 Jaws, 94, 95.
 Jewels, 347, 353.
 Joint, 237, 258, 356.
 — earnings. See Earnings.
 Journey, 380.
 Joviality, 326.
 Joy, 86, 96, 98, 101, 116, 131, 183, 185, 284, 300, 301, 325, 326, 357, 363, 378.
 Joy and sorrow, 125, 183.
 Judgment, 51, 76. See Discernment.
 Juice, 113, 236, 238, 252, 363.
 Jungle. See Forest.
 Just, 123.
 Justice, 131.
 Kādambārī, 27, 28.
 Kaffirs, 97.
 Kakrapravartana. See Wheel, turning of.
 Kakravartin, 232.
 Kālīdāsa, 13, 14, 28, 29, 30, 80, 220, 221, 224.
 Kalpa, 82, 387.
 Kālukyās, 28.
 Kāmadhenu. See Cow.
 Kāśāla, 23, 322, 343.
 Kandra, 219, 220.
 Kāndrāyava, 164.
 Kāśāpura, 223.
 Kapila, 89, 105, 124, 211.
 Karmakānda. See Vedas.
 Karmamārga, 171.
 Karmayoga, 105.
 Karva, 7, 38, 95, 96.
 Kārtavīrya, 221, 293.
 Kārvāka, 24, 214, 376, 377.
 Kārī, 37, 39.
 Kārikā, 32.
 Kāryapa, 205, 231, 232, 234, 235, 245, 314, 389.
 Kathāsaritsāgara, 32, 206.
 Kāthavase, A. V., Prof., 137, 199.
 Karṇopaniṣad, 45, 46, 57, 65, 66, 67, 76, 78, 79, 80, 108, 111, 112, 124, 129, 152, 153, 154, 156, 157, 158, 160, 162, 163, 169, 170, 172, 173, 175, 176, 179, 180, 186, 187, 188, 192, 193, 211, 212, 233, 234, 246, 247, 249, 253, 264, 286, 313, 317, 333, 337, 318, 339, 341, 346, 370, 385, 386, 388, 391, 392.
 Kāturhotra, 277.
 Kātyāyana, 32.
 Kaumudī. See Siddhānta-kaumudī.
 Kaunteya. See Kuntī.
 Kauravas, 2, 3, 6, 26, 38, 39, 40, 62, 88, 98, 135, 136, 311, 312, 393, 394.
 Kaushitaki-upaniṣad, 112, 180, 208, 249, 259, 264, 268, 271, 277, 314, 362, 389.

- Kautsa, 214.
 Kāvya and Nāṛakas, 13, 15, 142, 144.
 Keeping people to duty. See Duty.
 Kekitāna, 37.
 Kenopanishad, 163, 257.
 Kerala, 223.
 Kerava, 35, 40, 49, 52, 87, 96, 130, 229, 230.
 Keshub Chunder Sen, 26.
 Kesin, 121.
 Kettledrum, 38.
 Kṛandas, 16, 111, 146, 164, 171, 172.
 See Vedas.
 Kṛāṇḍogya-upanishad, 17, 20, 58, 64, 68, 79, 81, 84, 88, 90, 91, 114, 120, 141, 143, 145, 150, 152, 156, 158, 161, 164, 165, 166, 167, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 178, 179, 187, 189, 190, 191, 193, 194, 224, 233, 234, 236, 238, 239, 241, 243, 246, 249, 252, 258, 259, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 268, 269, 270, 271, 277, 285, 287, 290, 291, 295, 312, 314, 320, 321, 322, 331, 337, 339, 340, 345, 347, 353, 389, 391, 393.
 Killing, 96, 116. See Murder.
 Kind. See Compassion.
 King, 23, 30, 72, 82, 89, 90, 95, 162, 167, 169, 170, 171, 175, 178, 179, 181, 185, 233, 294, 296, 299, 303, 346, 347, 348. See Ruler.
 Kingdom, 43, 96, 302, 303, 304, 305.
 See Sovereignty.
 Kinnaras, 347, 354.
 Kinsmen, 40, 41, 42, 68, 159, 233, 246, 281, 294.
 Kintāmaṇi, 179.
 Kitraratha, 89.
 Knowable. See Knowledge, object of.
 Knower. See Knowledge, subject of.
 Knowledge, 12, 17, 44, 46, 47, 52, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 65, 67, 68, 72, 73, 75, 81, 82, 83, 84, 86, 87, 89, 91, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 106, 107, 108, 109, 113, 114, 115, 123, 124, 126, 127, 128, 129, 147, 154, 156, 158, 159, 162, 164, 166, 167, 168, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 187, 188, 189, 190, 194, 231, 239, 242, 245, 247, 253, 254, 256, 261, 262, 263, 264, 266, 267, 276, 279, 280, 286, 287, 288, 292, 307, 308, 309, 310, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 319, 320, 322, 326, 331, 332, 335, 337, 339, 341, 341, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 355, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392.
 Knowledge, boat of. See Boat.
 — branches of, 84, 315.
 — ceasing of, 239. See Perception.
 — clear, 126.
 — complete, 73.
 — constancy in. See Perseverance.
 — culmination of, 127.
 — deprivation of by desire, 75.
 — destruction of, 113.
 — devotion better than, 73.
 — direct, 82.
 — exhaustive, 73.
 — eye of, 106, 112, 339.
 — fire of. See Fire.
 — goal attainable by, 104.
 — highest, 73, 106, 151, 240, 261.
 — immediate. See Direct.
 — imperfect, 55, 125, 309.
 — incorrect, 125.
 — inexpugnable. See Inexpugnable.
 — insignificant. See Insignificant.
 — lamp of, 87.
 — light of, 66.
 — little, 115.
 — loss of, 75.
 — man of, 11, 51, 54, 56, 57, 62, 72, 73, 75, 91, 119, 146, 157, 158, 373, 392.
 — modification of, 312.
 — mysterious, 81.
 — object of, 83, 94, 97, 103, 104, 123, 172, 262, 310, 312, 382.
 — of creation, 341.
 — of everything, 114. See Universal.
 — of geography, 222 seq.
 — of God, 99.
 — of previous lives, 58.
 — of self, 46, 51, 65, 87, 126, 334.
 — of supreme, 87.
 — of truth, 103, 335, 348, 381.
 — practical, 349.
 — prompting to, 123.
 — pursuit of. See Perseverance.
 — removal of, 113.
 — seeker of, 75.
 — source of, 248, 308.
 — subject of, 97, 123, 262.
 — sword of, 63, 371.
 — three branches. See Branches, supra.
 — through faith, 63. See Faith.

- Knowledge, want of, 49, 73, 84, 162.
 See Ignorance.
 — within oneself, 62, 66, 380.
 See Progress, Sacrifice, and Understanding.
 Kola, 223.
 Kolharkar, V. M., 137.
 Kosegarten, 139.
 Koshiravata, 222, 346.
 Kratu, 83.
 Kripa, 38.
 Krishna, 3, 4, 9, 11, 12, 34, 40, 41, 48, 49, 52, 56, 58, 59, 63, 67, 71, 72, 73, 78, 88, 91, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 106, 110, 111, 117, 121, 130, 131, 197, 198, 205, 229, 230, 231, 251, 284, 310, 393, 394. See Being-Supreme and Brahman.
 — Dvaipāyana. See Vyāsa.
 — imitation of, 55.
 — nought to do, 54. See Embodiment.
 Kṛitā, 353.
 Kṛitavīrya. See Kārtavīrya.
 Kshatriyas, 22, 23, 24, 43, 46, 126, 127, 128, 152, 155, 162, 165, 174, 179, 185, 205, 209, 217, 221, 255, 295, 300, 329, 345.
 — kinsmen of, 295, 296.
 Kshetra, 102, 104, 105, 106, 310, 350, 372.
 Kshetragṇa, 102, 105, 106, 109, 253, 284, 287, 288, 293, 308, 310, 350, 351, 352, 374, 377, 378, 379, 386, 387, 390, 393.
 Kubera, 88, 347.
 Kulūka Bhāṭṭa, 262.
 Kumārasambhava, 29, 69, 80, 220, 257.
 Kumārila, 31.
 Kunte, M. M., 30.
 Kuntī, 38, 40, 44, 47, 50, 53, 57, 66, 71, 74, 78, 79, 82, 84, 85, 95, 102, 106, 107, 116, 117, 127, 128, 254, 393.
 Kuntibhoga, 37.
 Kuru, 47, 72, 108. See Kauravas.
 Kurukshetra, 3, 37, 198.
 Kusa grass, 68, 159.
 Labour, 69, 100, 184, 323, 324, 356.
 Ladle, 261.
 Lalita Vistara, 146, 183, 208, 212, 226, 261, 275, 284, 289, 337.
 Lamentation. See Grief.
 Lamp, 69, 242, 253.
 Lamp of knowledge. See Knowledge.
 Lances, 294.
 Land, 339, 382.
 Language, 90. See Bhagavadgītā, Dialects, and Style.
 Lapse of time, 58.
 Large, 285, 327, 357.
 Lassen, 2, 31, 34, 35, 91.
 Lassitude, 320.
 Last moments. See Death.
 Laudation, 324. See Praise.
 Law, 4, 207, 268, 269. See Regulations.
 — sacred, 82.
 Lazy, 125, 126, 151, 320, 326. See Indolence and Stolidity.
 Leaf, 85, 313, 361, 365, 371, 374.
 — of Arvattha, 111, 189.
 Lean, 288, 384.
 Learned, 44, 49, 50, 55, 56, 60, 63, 64, 65, 66, 87, 102, 121, 122, 152, 154, 157, 160, 161, 162, 164, 172, 174, 176, 185, 257, 260, 270, 278, 279, 284, 312, 315, 332, 337, 339, 341, 360, 367, 370, 371, 374, 378, 379, 381, 386. See Well-read.
 Learner. See Pupil.
 Learning, 65, 114, 124, 128, 178, 182, 232, 239, 269, 308, 326, 341, 348, 353, 359, 388, 389. See Instruction and Study.
 Leavings, 53, 62, 118, 358, 360.
 Left-hand, shooting, 96.
 Leg, 189. See Feet.
 Leibnitz, 268.
 Letter, single. See Om.
 Letters, 90, 264.
 Lewes, G. H., 57.
 Libation to manes, 41.
 Liberality. See Gifts.
 Licking, 95, 113.
 Life, 40, 54, 74, 89, 118, 160, 162, 177, 181, 192, 246, 268, 269, 276, 279, 289, 290, 291, 295, 302, 317, 318, 321, 325, 355, 357. See Birth and Death.
 — conditions of, 233.
 — course of, 89, 111, 190, 191, 201, 233, 235, 243, 245, 253, 258, 259, 284, 285, 287, 306, 312, 313, 338, 341, 355, 357, 359, 361, 368, 370, 386, 390.
 — exhaustion of, 236.
 — form unknown, 111.
 — forms of, 154, 321.
 — higher, 285, 322.

- Life, limit of, 244, 311.
 — long, 236.
 — many a, 58, 73, 75.
 — offering to supreme, 87.
 — previous, 56, 58, 72, 117, 188, 243, 244.
 — subtle, 284.
 — transient and miserable, 79, 86.
 — vain, 54.
 Life-winds, 61, 62, 67, 78, 79, 113, 123, 125, 140, 157, 189, 190, 237, 238, 242, 246, 257, 258, 259, 263, 264, 265, 266, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 280, 289, 290, 292, 318, 331, 336, 353, 372, 373.
 — concentration of. See Breath.
 — production and preservation of, 238.
 Light, 69, 74, 110, 163, 180, 186, 260, 305, 316, 319, 330, 332, 334, 344, 369, 379, 380, 387. See Object of sense.
 — of knowledge, 66, 108.
 — within oneself, 66. See Enlightenment.
 Lightness, 319, 327, 332.
 Lightning, 179, 337, 340.
 Likes and dislikes, 56, 71, 118, 288, 289. See Affection and Aversion.
 Limbs, 50, 177, 242, 342, 359, 366.
 Limitation. See Perfection and Time.
 Linen, 360.
 Lion, 38, 90, 295, 345.
 — manner of, 353.
 Liquid, 354. See Flowing element.
 Liquors, 389.
 Lisper, 322.
 Literature, 1, 13, 15.
 Littleness, 46, 191.
 Livelihood. See Body, support of.
 Lokāyatas. See Kārvakas.
 Long, 384.
 Longing. See Desire.
 Looker on, 55. See Activity, Soul, passive spectator.
 Looking-glass. See Mirror.
 Lord, 65, 83, 87, 88, 92, 97, 105, 109, 113, 116, 128, 165, 173, 188, 190, 231, 263, 267, 293, 294, 303, 333, 345, 347, 388, 393, 394.
 — in the bodies of all, 116, 118.
 — of all, 83.
 — of beings, 58, 273.
 — of gods. See Gods.
 Lord of sacrifices, 84.
 — of speech. See Speech.
 — of universe. See Universe, lord of.
 — of worlds. See Worlds, master of.
 — supreme, 106, 352.
 Loss, 124, 166.
 — of the Brahman, 71.
 Lotus-eye, 92, 294.
 — heart, 194, 342, 344, 392.
 — leaf, 64, 92, 289, 374, 379.
 — seat, 93.
 Love, 74, 87, 89, 394.
 Low. See High.
 Lower species, 241, 330, 339. See Beasts and Creatures.
 Lunar light, 81.
 — mansions, 88, 158, 346, 352, 387.
 — world, 20, 240.
 Lust, 115, 116, 117, 125, 166, 167, 183, 233, 246, 325, 331, 359.
 Mace, 93, 98.
 Machine, 129.
 Mādhava, 38, 40, 230, 231, 252.
 Mādhavātārya, 32, 90, 135, 139, 214.
 Madhu, 40, 42, 71, 77, 231, 252.
 Madhusūdana, 5, 19, 35, 72, 89, 41, 92, 96, 107, 108, 113, 123.
 Madhvātārya, 30, 31.
 Madhyama, 385.
 Mādhyamika Baudhdhas, 376.
 Maghavat, 219, 347.
 Mahābhārata, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 28, 34, 35, 135, 136, 137, 138, 140, 155, 160, 170, 181, 187, 197, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 209, 221, 225, 227, 229, 234, 253, 256, 271, 281, 284, 292, 295, 301, 304, 305, 308, 310, 315, 318, 319, 325, 328, 329, 342, 344, 351, 353, 354, 358, 360, 370, 374, 383, 384, 385, 386, 391. See Bhīshma Parvan.
 Mahābhīshya. See Patañjali.
 Mahat, 157. See Understanding.
 Mahāvratā, 180.
 Mahendra, 222, 223, 346.
 Māheśvarī, 219, 347.
 Mahidhara, 248.
 Maintenance. See Body, support of.
 Maitrī-upanishad, 50, 51, 52, 53, 61, 68, 79, 100, 102, 105, 112, 152, 155, 158, 160, 162, 170, 171, 173, 175, 185, 186, 187, 189, 192, 194, 233, 234, 238, 241, 243, 247, 251, 252, 255, 259, 263, 268, 269, 270,

- 271, 274, 277, 305, 320, 323, 361,
370, 371, 378, 379, 386, 390, 391,
392.
- Makara, 90.
- Maker, 379.
- Male, 346.
- and female, 115, 244.
- Malicious, 125. See Malignity.
- Malignity. See Harmlessness and Injury.
- Mallināth, 30, 293.
- Mālyavat, 222, 346.
- Man, creation of, 74. See Creation.
- descendant of Manus, 86.
- highest, 129.
- Management, 324. See Business.
- Māndukya-upanishad, 79, 247, 251,
259, 324, 376.
- Manes, 83, 85, 89, 93, 153, 169, 221,
296, 306, 324, 325, 345, 366, 389.
- Manifestation, 65, 76, 77, 83, 87, 88,
104, 107, 108, 292, 312, 317, 318,
374, 379, 380. See Form, Incarnation, and Nature.
- Manifold, 375, 377. See Forms,
many.
- Manipushpaka, 39.
- Mankind, 345, 347, 348, 353, 354,
356, 378, 386, 387, 389.
- Manliness, 74.
- Man-lion, 89.
- Mansions, 108.
- Mantras, 119, 209, 264. See Verse, sacred.
- Manu, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 27, 30, 37,
48, 58, 80, 86, 147, 153, 159, 179,
203, 208, 210, 217, 218, 225, 233,
262, 279, 284, 339, 353, 354, 358,
359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365,
368.
- Mārgaśirsha, 27, 90, 91.
- Marīci, 88, 387.
- Marriage, 121.
- Marrow, 252.
- Maruts, 88, 92, 94, 346.
- Master of world, 97. See World.
- Match. See Equal.
- Material cause. See Cause and Nature.
- Materialists, 24, 27.
- Matsya-purāṇa, 113.
- Matted hair, 360, 375.
- Matter, 379.
- Maturity, 177.
- Maurice, F. D., 1.
- Maya, 197, 229.
- Mâyâ. See Nature.
- McRindle, 223.
- Mean, 116.
- Means, 376, 377, 380, 391. See Wealth.
- Meat, 236.
- Medicine, 83, 388.
- Meditation, 64, 79, 84, 88, 100, 103,
105, 128, 192, 248, 249, 251, 252,
299, 300, 332, 341, 349, 353, 368,
376, 377, 382, 388.
- at time of death, 78, 390.
- continuous, 78, 79, 100, 309.
- exclusive, 78, 79, 84, 99.
- mystic, 136, 150.
- on Supreme, 61, 78, 88, 99, 100,
103, 128.
- See Concentration of mind and Pondering.
- Melancholy, 125.
- Memory, 90, 98, 113, 164, 320, 332,
335.
- confusion of, 50, 51.
- destruction of, 113.
- Mendicancy, 307, 361.
- Mental operation. See Mind.
- pain. See Pain.
- penance. See Penance.
- Mercilessness, 114, 166, 181. See Harshness.
- Merging in Brahman. See Absorbent and Assimilation.
- Merit, 12, 49, 65, 72, 76, 109, 151,
158, 164, 165, 166, 169, 178, 184,
185, 232, 241, 246, 341, 376, 377.
- exhaustion of, 84. See Action.
- Merriment, 97.
- Meru, 88, 222, 354.
- Meshasringa, 346.
- Metals, 209.
- Metre, 15, 90, 142, 226, 353.
- Midday bath, 122.
- Middle. See Beginning and Up.
- Migration, 153, 154, 185, 190, 232, 234, 244.
- Mild. See Gentle.
- Military. See Kshatriyas.
- Milk, 265.
- Mīmāṃsā, 31, 32, 376, 377.
- Mind, 9, 43, 47, 49, 50, 51, 53, 55,
57, 60, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68,
69, 70, 71, 73, 75, 78, 79, 83, 86,
87, 88, 99, 100, 101, 102, 105, 107,
112, 119, 122, 123, 125, 126, 128,
129, 162, 163, 169, 170, 172, 173,

- 175, 177, 181, 184, 185, 187, 188, 189, 190, 193, 194, 219, 234, 238, 239, 241, 242, 243, 246, 248, 250, 251, 252, 253, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 267, 268, 269, 275, 280, 286, 288, 292, 296, 300, 301, 308, 310, 317, 318, 320, 322, 327, 332, 334, 336, 337, 338, 341, 344, 348, 349, 350, 352, 355, 357, 361, 362, 366, 368, 369, 377, 380, 385, 386, 388, 390, 392, 393, 394.
- Mind, Arguna's, whirls round, 40.
- birth from, 87.
 - breaking out of restraint, 70.
 - ceasing to work. See Quiescence.
 - fickle, 9, 71.
 - friendly, 68.
 - movable and immovable, 264.
 - restraint by, 53, 70.
 - steady. See Steady-minded.
- Mine, 52, 56, 101, 128, 279, 292, 303, 304, 305, 313, 323, 326, 332, 355, 366, 370, 371, 381, 389, 390, 391.
- Minute, 78, 180, 194, 327, 332.
- Mirage, 253.
- Mirror, 57.
- Misapprehension, 184. See Conviction and Knowledge.
- Mischief. See Evil.
- Miserly, 167, 182.
- Misery. See Pain and Unhappiness.
- Misfortune, 356.
- Misgivings, 63, 66, 72, 83, 87, 122, 129, 130, 152, 231, 263, 282, 311, 312, 320, 324, 374.
- Mismanagement, 183. See Management.
- Missile, 39.
- Mistake, 359. See Error.
- Mithila, 304, 305.
- Mitra, 219, 220, 261, 338, 345.
- Dr. R. See Lalita Vistara.
- Mixed, 118, 122, 286, 375.
- Mleġhas, 353.
- Mode of life. See Conduct, Life.
- Moderation. See Eating.
- Modesty, 114, 162, 167, 182, 281, 306, 326. See Humility.
- Moistening, 45.
- Momentary existence, 376.
- Monism. See Unity.
- Months, 81, 90, 188, 255, 330, 352, 356.
- Moon, 74, 81, 83, 88, 97, 112, 113, 142, 172, 179, 189, 192, 219, 224, 257, 261, 277, 327, 330, 338, 346, 350, 387. See Lunar light.
- Moon, eye of divine form, 94.
- Morals, 4.
- Morning, 361.
- Morsel, 364.
- Mortal, form, 255.
- Mortals, 190, 255, 297.
- Mosquitoes, 284.
- Mother, 83, 176, 193, 233, 243, 290.
- Motion. See Moving.
- Motive. See Action.
- Mould, 242.
- Mountain, 88, 89, 180, 222, 284, 287, 295, 346, 354, 363, 381, 387. See Hill.
- Moustache, 362.
- Mouth, 65, 94, 95, 305.
- drying up of Arguna's, 40.
 - like fire, 94, 95.
- many a, 93, 94.
- Movable, 82, 91, 92, 97, 104, 105, 243, 266, 307, 311, 315, 335, 366, 387, 389. See Immovable.
- Movement, 49, 87, 123, 274, 291, 392.
- concealed, 232, 235.
 - of mind, 263. See Quiescence.
 - of world, 82, 89, 334, 340, 355, 356, 358.
- Moving, 64, 90, 110, 192, 194, 261, 338.
- among objects, 51.
 - everywhere, 232, 312, 370.
- Mrityu, 220.
- Mucus, 343.
- Mud, 343, 350.
- Muir, J., Dr., 14, 16, 20, 23, 90, 91, 180, 295, 304, 305, 347.
- Mûlâdhâra, 251.
- Müller, Max, Prof., 1, 8, 12, 16, 17, 23, 25, 69, 79, 87, 88, 114, 123, 171, 339.
- Mundâkôpanishad, 17, 62, 74, 84, 104, 112, 123, 153, 156, 158, 165, 166, 167, 169, 170, 173, 175, 176, 179, 180, 184, 185, 186, 189, 192, 194, 230, 241, 244, 259, 312, 315, 315, 316, 333, 339, 348, 371, 391, 392.
- Mundane. See World.
- Muṇḍa, 176, 249, 360.
- Murder, 45, 89, 123, 290, 291, 293, 295, 296, 323, 324, 389.
- Muscles, 252.
- Music, 88, 208, 325.

- Mustard, 384.
 Mystery, 58, 81, 92, 114, 129, 130, 150, 166, 230, 254, 278, 377, 390, 394.
 Nāgas, 89, 347.
 Nāgogi Bhārta, 33.
 Nails, 356.
 Nakshatras. See Lunar mansions.
 Nakula, 38.
 Name, 164, 352. See Favourite and Real.
 Nanda, 32.
 Nārada, 17, 87, 89, 150, 226, 274, 275.
 Nārāyaṇa, 148, 219, 280, 281.
 Narrow, 308, 384.
 Nārakas. See Kāvya.
 Nature, 53, 55, 56, 58, 65, 74, 76, 82, 102, 104, 105, 106, 107, 112, 113, 126, 127, 128, 157, 186, 201, 235, 244, 245, 253, 260, 288, 289, 313, 318, 327, 331, 333, 335, 350, 351, 355, 357, 367, 370, 371, 372, 374, 375, 377, 378, 379, 380, 382, 387, 390.
 — active principle, 65, 106.
 — control of, 58, 82.
 — destruction of, 106.
 — divine and demoniac, 83.
 — following, 157.
 — names of, 331.
 — two forms, 74.
 Nave, 306.
 Navel, 258, 266, 271.
 Near. See Afar.
 Neck, 69, 252.
 Nectar, 62, 88, 89, 126, 391.
 Negative argument, 213.
 Nest, 142, 164.
 Net, 115, 116, 289, 387.
 Nether world, 321. See Hell.
 Night, 362, 363. See Day and Night.
 — of sage and common men, 51.
 Nihilism, 320.
 Nīla, 222, 346.
 Nilakanta, 35, 39, 44, 45, 108, 110, 118, 120, 121, 125, 127, 128, 137, 141, 144, 148, 149, 151, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 170, 171, 174, 178, 180, 181, 182, 184, 189, 192, 193, 194, 200, 203, 213, 227, 231, 234, 235, 236, 242, 243, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 262, 263, 264, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 286, 287, 289, 292, 296, 297, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 305, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 318, 319, 320, 321, 326, 330, 332, 334, 335, 336, 339, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 347, 348, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 367, 371, 372, 373, 374, 376, 377, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394.
 Nilgiri. See Nīla.
 Nine portals. See Body.
 Nirukta, 144, 176, 225, 265.
 Nirvāṇa, 27, 212, 215.
 Nishāda, 385.
 Nitivataka. See Bhartṛhari.
 Noble birth, 116.
 — mind, 75, 114, 264, 295, 300, 316, 323, 325, 389, 393.
 Noise, 251. See Din.
 Noiseless. See Noisy.
 Noisy speech, 265.
 Non-destruction. See Destruction.
 Non-entity, 102.
 Non-existence. See Existence.
 Non-nutritive, 252.
 North, 347. See South path.
 Nose, 67, 69, 257, 258, 259, 267, 343, 349. See Senses.
 Nostrils, 65.
 Notion, false, 52, 65, 115, 253. See Conviction.
 Not-self, 377. See Soul.
 November, 91.
 Nṛsiṃha Tāpinī, 20, 79, 85, 93, 105, 112, 142, 152, 157, 163, 170, 171, 186.
 Numerous. See Forms, many.
 Nushirvan, 29.
 Nutrition, 118.
 Nyagrodha, 346.
 Oars, 381.
 Obedience, 324, 358. See Scripture.
 Obeisance. See Salutation.
 Object, 123, 378, 379, 382. See Subject.
 — of desire, 51, 69, 84, 115, 116, 124, 154, 157, 289. See Desire and Enjoyment.
 — of gift, 120, 324.
 — of knowledge, 83, 94. See Knowledge, object of.
 — of sense, 48, 50, 51, 53, 54, 56, 57, 61, 64, 66, 67, 69, 71, 102,

- 103, 111, 112, 121, 126, 127, 152, 154, 155, 166, 167, 168, 170, 173, 174, 175, 184, 190, 238, 247, 259, 260, 261, 267, 268, 269, 270, 273, 275, 278, 279, 284, 286, 288, 291, 297, 300, 305, 306, 313, 317, 318, 327, 334, 335, 336, 337, 340, 341, 342, 344, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 365, 367, 368, 371, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 388, 390, 392. See Destruction of entities and Enjoyment, Perceptible and Perishable.
- Oblation, 61, 77, 83, 121, 188, 261. See Offering.
- Obligation. See Duty.
- Oblivion. See Forgetfulness.
- Obscurity. See Darkness.
- Obsequies. See Balls of food.
- Obsequious, 159.
- Observances, 67, 112, 115, 143, 145, 147, 156, 164, 167, 182, 283, 324, 355, 364.
- Obstacles, 47, 162, 168, 183, 279, 363.
- Obstinate, 71. See Headstrong.
- Obstructors, 284.
- Occupancy, 22.
- Occupations. See Duties.
- Ocean, 51, 89, 95, 100, 179, 192, 245, 293, 294, 296, 307, 343, 346, 354, 374, 381, 388.
- Odious. See Agreeable.
- Offence, 256, 303. See Sin.
- Offering, 61, 77, 83, 169, 184, 185, 260, 261, 262, 276, 279, 280, 325, 353, 358, 360, 361. See Leavings.
- of action. See Action, dedication of.
- of life, 87.
- of self, 128.
- Officiating at sacrifices, 22, 23, 218, 324, 359.
- Offspring. See Children.
- Oil, 79, 379, 384.
- Old age. See Age.
- times, 314, 316, 358.
- Oleaginous, 118, 330.
- Om, 74, 79, 83, 89, 120, 121, 163, 282, 353.
- Omens, 40, 365.
- Omission and commission, 54, 359. See Action and Inaction.
- Omniscience and omnipotence, 58, 234.
- Omniscient, 174.
- One, 102, 317, 375.
- One, everything. See Mind, Unity.
- Open. See Secret.
- Opening eyelid. See Eyelid.
- Operation of mind. See Mind.
- Opinion of Krishna, 56.
- Opponent. See Enemy.
- Opposites. See Pairs.
- Opposition, 30.
- Oppression, royal, 207, 208.
- Optimists, 376.
- Order, 129, 307, 354, 358, 382. See Āśramas.
- of dissolution of entities, 335, 387.
- Ordinances, 84, 117, 118, 119, 120. See Rule and Scripture.
- Organs, 53, 64, 93, 118, 123, 189, 219, 243, 247, 257, 258, 261, 271, 287, 292, 318, 336, 337, 357, 359, 364, 391. See Bodily and mental, Drying up, and Senses.
- Origin. See Source and Species.
- Orissa, 222.
- Ornaments, 93, 326.
- Ostentation, 103, 114, 115, 116, 118, 119, 159, 160, 161, 164, 165, 282, 324, 363.
- Overcome. See Invincible.
- Oviparous. See Eggs.
- Pain, 70, 76, 110, 118, 120, 159, 169, 233, 238, 239, 245, 250, 291, 292, 301. See Pleasure and pain.
- Pairs, 48, 60, 63, 74, 76, 111, 160, 167, 168, 233, 244, 246, 247, 257, 276, 277, 292, 351, 357, 358, 366, 369, 370, 379.
- Palace, magical, 197, 229.
- Palāśa, 360.
- Palate, 252, 262.
- Pāṇḍava, 2, 6, 37, 38, 39, 62, 67, 91, 93, 95, 99, 110, 136, 197, 229, 230, 255, 394.
- Pāṇḍavas, leaders of the army of, 3.
- Pāṇḍu. See Pāṇḍavas.
- Pāṇḍya, 223.
- Pāṇini, 32, 33.
- Pāñṭaganya, 38.
- Pañṭahotri, 270.
- Pañṭama, 385.
- Pañṭatantra, 29, 139, 206.
- Parade. See Ostentation.
- Parallel, 97, 116, 187.
- Paramahansa, 381.
- Paraphernalia, 379. See Appurtenances.
- Parāśara, 33, 164.

- Pârâsarya, 32, 33.
 Parasurâma, 221, 294, 295, 299.
 Pardon, Arguna asks, 97, 98.
 Pâriyâtra, 222, 346.
 Part, 112, 379. See Soul, individual.
 Pârtha. See Prithâ.
 Partiality. See Favouritism and Impartiality.
 Pârvatî, 219, 347.
 Passages of body, 79, 253, 265, 273, 275, 277, 318, 343. See Body.
 — of heart, 252.
 Passing through, 388, 389. See Im-passable.
 Passion, 57, 70, 75, 89, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 117, 118, 119, 120, 122, 124, 125, 126, 276, 278, 292, 301, 302, 318, 319, 323, 325, 328, 329, 330, 331, 334, 342, 343, 345, 356, 363, 369, 390.
 Past. See Birth, Entities, and Future life.
 Patañjali. See Yoga-sûtras.
 — Mahâbhâshya, 19, 32, 139, 140, 152, 211, 223, 346.
 Path, 47, 59, 64, 72, 80, 81, 82, 116, 125, 127, 153, 156, 165, 248, 257, 284, 307, 311, 314, 316, 320, 331, 348, 364, 369, 380, 381. See Southern.
 Paths, three, 354.
 — of emancipation, 47, 52.
 — unfamiliar, 380.
 Patience. See Forgiveness.
 Patriarchs, 86, 354, 387.
 Paundra, 38, 295.
 Peace, 91, 323.
 Pearls, simile of, 74.
 Pebbles, 365.
 Pedestrian, 382.
 Penance, 11, 12, 59, 61, 67, 73, 74, 81, 85, 86, 98, 99, 114, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 126, 129, 147, 164, 165, 166, 170, 173, 178, 182, 184, 221, 231, 242, 247, 248, 254, 258, 259, 288, 296, 299, 300, 308, 311, 312, 315, 326, 339, 355, 356, 367, 369, 376, 388, 389.
 People. See Creatures.
 — common. See Populace.
 Perceptible, 76, 80, 96, 180, 192, 193, 257, 264, 309, 313, 377, 380, 385, 386.
 Perception of worlds, 174.
 — organs of, their operations, 57, 64, 108, 112, 123, 238, 270, 316, 329, 331, 336. See Organs and Senses.
 Perception, personal. See Experience.
 Perfect, 173, 186, 248, 251, 287.
 Perfection, 52, 54, 62, 72, 73, 79, 100, 107, 116, 117, 127, 176, 232, 233, 234, 287, 300, 302, 310, 314, 334, 384, 388, 389, 393.
 Performance. See Pride.
 Perfume, 93, 112. See Fragrance.
 Peril, 42. See Danger.
 Periplus, 223.
 Perishable, 44, 66, 76, 77, 79, 81, 120, 154, 158, 304, 307, 355, 375, 376. See Inconstantly.
 Permanent. See Constant.
 Permeating. See Pervading.
 Permission. See Preceptor.
 Perplexed, 98.
 Perseverance, 51, 60, 79, 87, 103, 111, 114, 120, 175, 255.
 Perspiration, 339.
 Perturbation, 110, 352. See Agitation.
 Pervading principle, 44, 45, 80, 82, 83, 87, 88, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 100, 104, 106, 113, 127, 187, 242, 244, 253, 258, 307, 317, 332, 385.
 Pessimists, 376.
 Phalanx, 38.
 Phalaruti, 143.
 Phâlguna, 394.
 Philanthropy. See Benevolence.
 Philosopher, 44, 377.
 Philosophy, Indian, 7, 26.
 Phlegm, 155, 343.
 Physical pain. See Pain.
 Piety, 47, 59, 74, 89, 110, 114, 125, 128, 158, 159, 161, 168, 182, 183, 230, 231, 232, 242, 243, 246, 252, 254, 311, 314, 315, 316, 318, 325, 326, 331, 341, 348, 349, 351, 359, 360, 362, 363, 364, 367, 368, 369, 375, 376, 377, 380, 384, 392, 393, 394. See Merit.
 — and impiety, 59, 125, 292.
 — protector of, 59, 89, 94, 125, 130, 231, 235.
 Pilgrimage, 143.
 Pillar. See Pole.
 Piṅgala, 16.
 Piṅgalâ, 257, 277, 318.

- Pippala, 346.
 Pivātas, 345, 354, 387.
 Pitris. See Manes.
 Pitriyāna, 314.
 Pity, 40, 42, 181, 243. See Compassion.
 Place and time. See Gift.
 Placid, 192, 194, 234, 245. See Tranquillity.
 Plaksha, 354.
 Planet, 303, 346, 387.
 Play, 97. See Recreation and Sport.
 Pleasant and unpleasant. See Agreeable.
 Pleasure, 40, 42, 47, 50, 66, 107, 108, 126, 265, 268, 270, 275, 280, 292, 300, 301, 311, 316, 322, 324, 325, 330, 341, 354, 355, 357, 389.
 — and pain, 44, 47, 48, 68, 71, 86, 101, 103, 104, 110, 111, 112, 245, 246, 285, 323, 356, 376.
 — celestial, 84.
 — higher, 287.
 — within oneself, 50, 54, 66, 69, 70, 152, 253, 288, 380. See Gods and Happiness.
 Point, one. See Concentration.
 Poison, 41, 89, 126, 159, 190.
 Pole, 355.
 Polemic. See Controversialist.
 Policy, 91, 324.
 Politics, 91.
 Pondering, 78, 175, 297, 331, 334, 349, 368.
 — objects, 50, 57, 154, 263. See Fancies.
 Poor. See Indigent.
 Populace follow great men, 54.
 — keeping of to duty, 54, 55, 127.
 Portals, nine, 79, 108. See Body.
 Position in army, 38.
 — raised. See High position.
 Possession, 365.
 Powder, 113.
 Power, 58, 88, 91, 97, 102, 113, 182, 287, 303, 323, 332, 360, 385.
 — creative, 170, 260, 279, 327.
 — delusive, 59.
 — desire for, 47.
 — divine. See mystic, infra.
 — exercise of, 127.
 — infinite, 94, 97.
 — intellectual. See Energy.
 — lordly, 127.
 — mystic, 76, 82, 86, 88, 89, 92, 93, 98, 120, 131, 149, 230.
 Power of Brahman, part in patriarchs. 87.
 — of knowledge, 167.
 — of nature, 82.
 — participation in divine, 87.
 — regard to one's own, 89, 237.
 — superhuman, 76, 89, 260.
 — unequalled, 97. See Equal.
 — worldly, 47. See Strength.
 Powerful, 269.
 Powerless, 336.
 Practicable, 82.
 Practice, 9, 71, 73, 79. See Conduct.
 Pragâpati, 58, 97, 219, 220, 244, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 271, 282, 315, 316, 334, 338, 345, 347, 353, 322.
 389. See Creator.
 Praise, 94, 280. See Blame and Laudation.
 Praiseworthy, 97, 190.
 Praketas, 220.
 Prakriti. See Nature.
 Pralhâda, 89.
 Prâna, 258. See Life-winds.
 Prânâyâma. See Breath, control of.
 Pravâstri, 280.
 Prasnopanishad, 20, 65, 79, 81, 123, 152, 166, 176, 259, 271, 390, 391.
 Pratyâhâra. See Senses.
 Prayer, 94.
 Preceptor, 37, 40, 43, 57, 91, 103, 119, 129, 175, 176, 177, 178, 252, 243, 264, 282, 283, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 358, 360, 372, 374, 376, 378, 381, 389, 393.
 Precious things, 353.
 Prescribed action. See Action and Duty.
 — by nature, 126, 127, 128.
 Presence of mind. See Courage.
 Present. See Future.
 — made by god, 59, 76.
 — to god. See Flower.
 See Dakshinâ and Gift.
 Preservation. See Acquisition.
 Previous life. See Life, previous.
 Preya. See Sreya.
 Pride, 52, 62, 111, 112, 114, 116, 124, 128, 264, 294, 301, 320, 323, 341.
 See Arrogance and Vanity.
 Priest, 89, 189, 241, 259, 261, 266, 267, 270, 276, 278, 279, 280, 284, 290, 293.
 Primal being, 77, 96, 111. See Primeval.

- Primeval, 45, 58, 81, 95, 98, 190, 333.
 Prince. See King and Ruler.
 Principle, 170.
 — none, 115, 124.
 Principles, divine, two, 187, 192.
 Prior to all, 391.
 Prithâ, 40, 42, 45, 46, 47, 49, 52, 54, 55, 59, 62, 72, 73, 74, 78, 79, 80, 81, 83, 85, 92, 93, 100, 114, 115, 120, 121, 122, 125, 126, 130, 131, 205, 229, 230, 231, 254, 255, 256, 281, 311, 312.
 Procedure, 381, 385.
 Product, 383.
 Production and destruction, 74, 79, 80, 82, 92, 106, 107, 127, 180, 192, 287, 314, 316, 317, 319, 327, 331, 351, 357, 372, 385, 388.
 See Entities.
 — and development, 77, 82.
 — sevenfold, 260.
 Productive, 382.
 Progress, 380, 381. See Improvement.
 Promises, 332.
 Prompting to action, 123. See Action.
 Propagation, 53. See Generation.
 — of truth, 129, 130.
 Property, 161, 182, 183, 255, 305, 379, 383.
 — destruction of, 41, 159.
 Propitiation, 76, 97, 98, 99, 100, 115.
 Prosperity, 43, 96, 131, 151, 166, 167, 178, 182.
 Prostration, 97, 232.
 Protection. See Acquisition, Dependents, Good, and Piety.
 Proud, 182. See Pride.
 Provisions, 380.
 Prowess, 324. See Valour.
 Publication of Gîtâ, 129, 130.
 Pungent, 363.
 Punishment, 303.
 Pupil, 37, 43, 151, 175, 176, 177, 252, 254, 262, 269, 282, 283, 308, 310, 311, 312, 315, 373, 378.
 See Student.
 Purâṇas, 14, 18, 20, 26, 143, 224.
 Purandara, 219, 347.
 Pure, 101, 103, 114, 127, 158, 159, 165, 170, 176, 183, 185, 186, 246, 247, 254, 336, 355, 359, 360, 362, 369, 390, 393. See Heart, Holy, and Sanctification.
 Purity, 52, 64, 68, 76, 85, 103, 114, 115, 119, 122, 126, 127, 162, 233, 243, 320, 326.
 Purpose, 48, 365.
 Pursuit. See Abstraction, Enjoyment, and Knowledge.
 Purugit, 37.
 Purusha. See Spirit.
 — sîkta, 91, 280.
 Purushottama. See Being, best.
 Quadrupeds, 209, 321, 339, 353.
 Qualifications, 166, 177, 279, 312, 348, 358.
 Qualities, 17, 21, 53, 55, 57, 59, 65, 70, 75, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 117, 124, 125, 126, 184, 185, 247, 260, 267, 268, 270, 274, 276, 278, 279, 285, 286, 288, 292, 300, 301, 309, 311, 313, 315, 317, 318, 319, 320, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 334, 341, 343, 344, 345, 349, 350, 351, 352, 356, 367, 369, 370, 372, 373, 374, 377, 379, 381, 383, 390, 391.
 — all-pervading, 126, 331.
 — beyond, 75, 109.
 — connexion with, 105, 111, 112.
 — dealings of, 55, 110.
 — development of, 108, 328, 329.
 — different from soul. See Soul.
 — doers of actions, 55, 109.
 — effects of, 48, 108, 332.
 — enjoyer of, 104, 105, 247, 328.
 — enumeration of, 124.
 — forms of, higher and lower, 323.
 — increase and diminution of, 328.
 — perturbation by. See Perturbation.
 — prevalence of, 108, 319, 328, 373.
 — repression of, 108.
 — ruled by supreme, 75.
 — soul above, 109.
 — transcending, 48, 75, 109, 110.
 Quarrelsomeness, 168, 183, 323.
 Quarters, 69, 94, 95, 178, 186, 192, 261, 268, 282, 290, 316, 337, 340, 347, 354.
 — of life as a Brahmatârin. See Brahmatârin.
 Question, 62, 175, 231, 235, 252, 283, 311, 312, 314, 374.
 Quiescence, 69, 70, 79, 105, 167, 173, 185, 245, 263. See Mind.
 Quitting body. See Body, leaving.
 Quiver. See Tremour.

- Radiance, 94, 104, 186, 190, 387. See Effulgence and Light.
 Rāgadharma. See Mahābhārata.
 Rāga-yoga, 300.
 Raghuvamśa, 29, 224, 293.
 Rahasyas. See Upanishads.
 Rāhu, 224, 303.
 Rain, 54, 84, 363.
 Rakshas, 83, 88, 118, 345, 347, 354, 387.
 Rāma, 90, 294, 300.
 Rāmānuga, 30, 31, 32, 35, 66, 84, 89, 90, 107, 112, 116, 124, 346, 378.
 Rāmāyana, 10, 28, 90, 139, 140, 221.
 Rambling. See Restraint and Senses.
 Rāmmohun Roy, 27.
 Rash, 380.
 Rathantara, 180.
 Ravenous, 57. See Eating.
 Rays, 287, 289.
 Readiness of resource, 127.
 Reading much, 171, 309.
 Real and unreal, 44, 154, 155, 164, 191, 323, 392. See Entity, real.
 Reason, 51, 124, 183. See Mind and Understanding.
 Receipt. See Acceptance.
 Receptacle, 84, 245.
 Reception, 119, 150. See Youth.
 Recitation. See Vedas.
 Reclamation of bad men, 121. See Improvement.
 Recognition, 249.
 Recreation, 66. See Sport.
 Red, 179, 360, 384.
 Reduced. See Desire.
 Refinement, 112, 123, 193, 308, 358, 361, 369.
 Reflexion, 169.
 Refuge. See Asylum.
 Refulgence, 74, 94. See Effulgence, Light, and Radiance.
 Regard. See Fruit.
 — for wife, child, &c., 103. See Respect.
 Regulation, 61, 76, 83, 84, 85, 150, 170, 180, 254, 257, 269, 279, 283, 288, 291, 296, 307, 311, 312, 315, 316, 320, 321, 324, 326, 355, 356, 358, 359, 360, 361, 367.
 Regulator, 89, 91.
 Rejection. See Casting aside.
 Rejoicing, 116. See Joy.
 Relation, 103, 104. See Soul.
 Relative, 68. See Kinsmen.
 Release, 63. See Birth, Body, Bond, Delusion, Free, Nature, Society.
 — from sin. See Sin.
 Relish, 118. See Taste.
 Reluctant, 72.
 Remainder of offerings. See Leavings.
 Remembrance of Deity, 78.
 Removal of knowledge, &c. See Destruction.
 Renouncer. See Renunciation.
 Renown. See Fame.
 Renunciation, 52, 63, 64, 65, 67, 85, 114, 121, 122, 123, 127, 257, 312, 349, 361, 369, 373, 376, 377. See Abandonment and Action, dedication of.
 Repeated happiness, 126.
 — thought. See Continuous meditation.
 Repentance, 167.
 Repetitions of passages, 144, 145, 181.
 — of words and phrases, 14.
 Repining, 168, 323.
 Representative of Deity for meditation, 88.
 Repression. See Qualities.
 Reptiles, 284, 339, 353.
 Reservoir, 48, 89, 193, 344, 354, 381.
 Residence, 84, 233, 240, 250, 260, 287. See Dwelling.
 Residue. See Leavings.
 Resolution, 47, 70, 101, 110, 115, 119, 314. See Determination.
 — good, 85.
 — vain, 128.
 Resort, 50, 59, 75, 85, 102, 107. See Asylum.
 Resource, 190, 377. See Readiness.
 Respect, 83, 119, 120, 159, 161, 162, 182, 246, 283, 324, 363.
 Rest, 150. See Dependence.
 Restraint, 9, 50, 53, 56, 57, 58, 60, 61, 63, 64, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 86, 91, 99, 100, 103, 114, 119, 125, 126, 127, 128, 161, 162, 163, 167, 168, 232, 242, 243, 248, 251, 257, 282, 296, 297, 301, 306, 336, 342, 344, 355, 358, 360, 361, 362, 364, 372, 391, 392.
 — mutual, 315.
 Result, 126. See Consequences.
 Retard. See Wheel.
 Retrogression. See Wheel.
 Return of service, 120, 183.
 — time of, 180, 244. See Preceptor.

- Return to birth, 65, 79, 80, 81, 82, 84, 111, 112, 113, 116, 165, 234, 306, 322, 390. See Birth.
- Revelation. See Vedas.
- Reverence, 42, 78, 80, 83, 85, 86, 119, 129.
- Reviling, 166, 168, 181, 321.
- Revolution, 356, 357. See Universe and Wheel.
- Riches. See Wealth.
- Richest, 287.
- Right and wrong, 50, 166, 183, 319, 366. See Duty.
- Righteous feeling, 326.
- Rigid. See Regulation.
- Rik*, 18, 20, 83, 146, 162, 163, 179, 224, 277, 280, 284.
- Rik̥a*, 295.
- Rim, 355.
- Rishabha*, 385.
- Rshis*. See Sages.
- Rite. See Ceremony, Family, Funeral, and Observances.
- Ritter, 1.
- River, current of, 95. See Stream.
- Roar of Bhishma, 38.
- Robber, 41. See Thief.
- Rod, 91.
- Roots, 111, 316, 361, 388.
- Rotation. See Universe and Wheel.
- Roth. See Nirukta.
- Rough, 118, 383, 384.
- Round. See Circular.
- Royal sage, 58, 86, 296, 300.
- saint, 23, 86.
- Rudra, 88, 92, 94, 219, 338, 347, 354.
- Ruin, 51, 55, 56, 63, 72, 85, 128, 151, 154.
- of soul, 115, 117, 155, 236, 245, 279. See Destruction.
- Rule. See Regulation and Scripture.
- against, 116. See Ill-conducted and Ordinances.
- heavenly, 231.
- Ruler, 249, 318, 385. See Body.
- of men, 44, 89, 95, 209, 346. See King.
- of universe, 78, 115, 167, 182, 249, 279, 332, 347. See Atheism.
- Running away. See Slinking away.
- Ruts, 356.
- Sabaras, 222, 295.
- Sabarasvāmin, 32.
- Sabbā Parvan, 174, 229.
- Sacred learning. See Learning, Study, and Vedas.
- Sacrifice, 12, 22, 23, 53, 54, 60, 61, 62, 67, 81, 83, 84, 85, 86, 89, 98, 99, 114, 116, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 129, 147, 161, 164, 167, 169, 173, 180, 184, 185, 189, 193, 218, 241, 260, 262, 276, 279, 280, 284, 287, 288, 289, 290, 293, 309, 324, 325, 326, 330, 334, 340, 347, 353, 355, 358, 359, 360, 362, 367, 376, 387.
- enjoyer of, 12, 67.
- fire, 216.
- giver of desires, 53.
- instrument, 61.
- knowledge of, 62, 83, 130.
- lord of. See Enjoyer.
- not performing, 62.
- rain from, 54.
- result of action, 54, 62.
- various classes, 61. See, too, Kratu and Yagña.
- Sad, 120, 121.
- Sādhyas, 94.
- Safety. See Fear.
- Sage, 50, 51, 59, 64, 66, 67, 86, 87, 89, 91, 93, 94, 102, 107, 162, 164, 173, 174, 178, 209, 221, 281, 282, 283, 286, 294, 296, 312, 314, 315, 316, 322, 334, 342, 345, 358, 360, 361, 362, 368, 374, 375, 382, 388, 390, 393.
- ancient, 86.
- divine, 87, 89.
- seven, 29, 213, 281, 287. See Royal sage and Royal saint.
- Sahadeva, 38.
- Sahya, 222, 346.
- Saibya, 37.
- Saint. See Sage.
- Sakra. See Indra.
- Sakuntalā, 29, 39, 243.
- Saliva, 384.
- Sālmali, 346.
- Saltish, 118, 384.
- Salutation, 61, 62, 83, 93, 95, 96, 97, 140, 176, 294, 314, 324, 351, 366, 370.
- Salvation. See Emancipation.
- Sāman, 18, 20, 83, 88, 90, 145, 146, 162, 163, 180, 280.
- Samāna, 258.
- Sāmavidhāna, 32.
- Sambhu, 219, 332.

- Samnyâsin. See Ascetic.
 Sanaka, 86.
 Sanandana, 86.
 Sanātana, 86, 149.
 Sanatkumâra, 17, 86, 135, 141, 150.
 Sanatsugāta, 125, 136, 141, 149, 150,
 151, 152, 156, 157, 163, 164,
 165, 166, 174, 175, 179, 193,
 309, 311, 314.
 Sanatsugātīya, 48, 135, 136, 138, 143,
 144, 145, 146, 197, 202, 203, 206,
 211, 226, 227, 231, 232, 234, 240,
 245, 246, 249, 251, 253, 255, 282,
 285, 323, 326, 327, 339, 342, 343,
 349, 351, 363, 364, 369.
 — age of, 140, 147, et passim.
 — character of, 141.
 — connexion with Bhārata, 135, 136.
 — genuineness of, 137.
 — language and style, 140, 142, 143.
 — metre of, 142.
 — name of, 135, 138.
 — position of, 147.
 — relation to Vedas, 145.
 — text of, 137, 138, 148, 203. See Phalārutī.
 Sanctification, 59, 62, 64, 68, 69, 81,
 83, 85, 101, 103, 122, 193, 247,
 341. See Purity.
 Saṅgaya, 3, 35, 37, 39, 42, 92, 96, 98, 136.
 Saṅkara, 88.
 Saṅkarâtārya, 2, 6, 19, 20, 27, 30,
 31, 32, 35, 45, 49, 52, 58, 59,
 60, 64, 73, 79, 80, 81, 85, 87,
 88, 90, 93, 103, 105, 107, 112,
 114, 119, 121, 123, 124, 125, 127,
 128, 129, 135, 137, 138, 141, 143,
 144, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156,
 157, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164,
 165, 166, 168, 169, 170, 171, 173,
 174, 176, 177, 179, 180, 181, 184,
 186, 187, 188, 190, 193, 197, 201,
 202, 203, 204, 206, 226, 230, 231,
 239, 241, 247, 248, 251, 255, 256,
 262, 263, 266, 271, 280, 290, 313,
 327, 333, 339, 342, 345, 347, 353,
 376, 385, 386, 391.
 Saṅkara-vigaya, 135.
 Sāṅkhya, 8, 27, 47, 52, 63, 64, 74,
 123, 210, 215, 313, 332, 368, 372,
 373, 374, 383, 386, 387, 392.
 — Kārikā, 240, 258, 265, 286, 291,
 319, 321, 322, 329, 331, 334, 337,
 351, 356, 371, 380, 382, 391.
 — Sāra. See Hall, F. E.
 Sāṅkhya Sūtra, 123, 190, 244, 265,
 286, 321, 331, 332, 334, 337, 339,
 354, 368, 392.
 — Tattvakaumudī. See Sāṅkhya
 Kārikā.
 — Yoga, 105.
 Sanskāra. See Ceremony.
 Sanskrit literature, 13, 15. See Kā-vyas.
 Sānti Parvan, 155, 160, 170. See Mahābhārata.
 Saptahotri, 266.
 Sarasvatī. See Speech.
 Sārīraka Bhāṣya. See Saṅkarâtārya.
 Sarvadarśanasāṅgraha, 32, 214.
 Sarvagña Nārāyaṇa. See Nārāyaṇa.
 Sastra, 280.
 Śāstras, 11, 50, 56, 74, 161, 166, 176,
 177, 303.
 Sat. See Asad and Sad.
 Satakratu, 219.
 Satapatha, 248, 265.
 Satiety, 88.
 Satisfaction. See Contentment.
 Sattva, 193.
 Sātyaki, 39.
 Satyaloka. See World.
 Saugatas, 213, 377.
 Savana, 277.
 Saviour. See Deliverer.
 Sāvitrī, 353.
 Savoury, 118. See Taste.
 Savyasākin, 96.
 Scandal, 324.
 Scenes, 93.
 Sceptic. See Atheism, Faith, and
 Infidel.
 Schlegel, 34, 35, 38. See Lassen.
 Science, 6, 81, 90, 114, 388.
 Scripture, 117, 118, 119, 120, 231,
 238, 242, 290, 291, 314, 349, 352,
 364, 379, 381. See Śāstras.
 Sea. See Ocean.
 Search for Brahman, 173.
 — for faults. See Fault.
 Season, 91, 236, 330, 352.
 Seat, 49, 64, 68, 78, 79, 80, 81, 111,
 112, 128, 129, 162, 163, 194, 230,
 234, 239, 240, 245, 251, 257, 304,
 316, 326, 339, 344, 348, 354, 361,
 368, 369, 378, 388, 393.
 — for practising abstraction, 68.
 — of desire and wrath, 57.
 Seclusion. See Solitary.
 Second, without, 349.
 Secrecy. See Mystery.

- Secret, 68, 91, 366.
 Sects, 7.
 Securing, 365.
 Security. See Fear.
 Seed, 74, 84, 91, 107, 241, 313, 371, 382, 383.
 Seeing, 309, 351. See Senses.
 Seeker after knowledge. See Knowledge.
 Seer, 78.
 Self, 170, 317. See Atman in the Sanskrit index and Embodied soul and Soul in this.
 Self-consciousness, 102, 322, 333, 336, 338.
 Self-contained, 110.
 Self-contemplation, 50.
 Self-control, 48, 126, 127, 183, 236, 246, 366.
 Self-destruction, 106, 279.
 Self-existent, 333, 354.
 Self-illuminated, 342.
 Self-knowledge. See Knowledge.
 Self-possessed, 63, 246, 248.
 Self-restraint, 9, 10, 21, 51, 61, 64, 65, 66, 68, 71, 77, 86, 100, 101, 103, 114, 119, 127, 149, 167, 168, 170, 173, 182, 190, 243, 249, 250, 292, 300, 312, 317, 320, 327, 332, 342, 359, 390, 391.
 Selling. See Buying.
 Semen, 238, 241, 261, 275, 338.
 Sen, Keshub Chander, 26.
 Sensation not permanent, 44.
 Sense, good. See Learned.
 Senses, 26, 44, 50, 51, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 79, 86, 88, 93, 99, 102, 104, 105, 108, 111, 112, 123, 125, 126, 153, 154, 160, 161, 162, 165, 167, 168, 170, 173, 182, 185, 186, 187, 188, 190, 193, 232, 238, 242, 246, 248, 249, 251, 253, 256, 257, 261, 262, 264, 266, 267, 268, 269, 278, 279, 280, 282, 283, 285, 286, 290, 291, 292, 297 seq., 300, 305, 306, 313, 317, 318, 329, 332, 334, 336, 337, 338, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 348, 349, 350, 355, 358, 360, 362, 364, 366, 367, 368, 371, 386, 388. See Absorbent, Contact, Organs, Soul, Bodily and mental.
 — lord of, 38.
 — objects of enumerated, 102.
 — operations of, 61, 64.
 Separation, 233, 313.
 Serpent. See Snake.
 Service, 62, 127, 243, 324, 326.
 — return of. See Return.
 Serving devotees, 59.
 Severance. See Separation and Dis-sociation.
 Shackle. See Bond.
 Shade, 286, 356. See Shadow.
 Shadga, 385.
 Shadow, 312. See Shade.
 Shaken, not to be, 161.
 Shakespeare, 113.
 Shapes, various, 92.
 Sharing with others, 364, 365.
 Sharp, 118, 383, 384.
 Shaving, 375.
 Sheep, 345.
 Shelter. See Asylum.
 Shining bodies, 88, 291, 330, 341, 353.
 Shore, 381.
 Short, 384.
 Shortcoming. See Fault.
 Show. See Ostentatiousness.
 Shower. See Rain.
 Siddhanta Kaumudi, 33.
 Siddhas, 89, 94, 96, 232, 233, 235, 236, 239, 314.
 Sides, both, 68.
 Sighs, 303.
 Sight. See Scene and Visual power.
 — of Brahman, 99.
 — of universal form, 98, 99.
 Significance, 174.
 Sikhandin, 39.
 Silence, 91, 245. See Taciturnity.
 Similes, 142.
 Sin, 12, 41, 42, 46, 47, 49, 53, 54, 56, 60, 62, 64, 65, 66, 68, 70, 71, 73, 76, 84, 86, 89, 127, 129, 130, 139, 146, 149, 151, 157, 160, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 170, 181, 182, 232, 233, 241, 246, 288, 290, 293, 296, 311, 314, 317, 319, 320, 321, 322, 327, 340, 343, 344, 351, 355, 358, 369, 372, 378, 389, 390, 394. See Counting.
 Sinful, 57, 62, 68, 85, 164, 283, 293.
 Singers, 232.
 Single, 284.
 Sinless, 52, 107, 114, 233, 252, 254, 256, 314, 364.
 Sinrapa, 346.
 Sitting, 49, 97, 232, 360, 390.
 Siva, 219, 333, 347.
 Sixteen, 371.
 Skanda, 89.

- Skin, 40, 259, 261, 267, 298, 305, 361, 375. See Senses.
 Sky. See Heaven.
 Slander. See Backbiting.
 Slaughter, 168. See Murder.
 Slave, 304.
 Sleep, 64, 67, 69, 77, 97, 108, 112, 126, 236, 258, 259, 268, 269, 301, 320, 360.
 — lord of. See Guḍākeśa.
 Slinking away from battle, 127.
 Slippery, 384.
 Sloth, 55, 192, 194, 301, 361, 378, 389.
 Slow, 125. See Gradual.
 Small, 92, 285, 331.
 Smell. See Fragrance and Senses.
 Smile, 43, 253, 256, 265.
 Smoke, 57, 81, 127, 276, 362.
 Smooth, 384.
 Smṛiti, Gītā regarded as, 2, 6, 30.
 — Sanatsugātīya regarded as, 138.
 Smṛitis, 7, 27, 30, 83, 153, 158, 169, 321.
 Snake, 89, 93, 190, 281, 282, 283, 321, 345, 347, 353, 354.
 Society, 68, 103, 364, 365.
 Sod, 68, 110.
 Soft, 383, 384. See Gentle.
 Soilure. See Dust.
 Solar world, 240.
 Solicitude. See Acquisition.
 Solitary, 68, 97, 151, 232, 251, 256, 287, 341, 363.
 Solstices, 81, 352.
 Soma, 84, 219, 220, 337, 340, 346, 347.
 Somadatta, 38.
 Son, 40, 59, 74, 103, 121, 169, 170, 178, 183, 189, 194, 284, 384.
 — of preceptor. See Preceptor.
 Sorrow, 119, 126, 330. See Grief, Joy and sorrow.
 Soul, 44, 49, 50, 51, 54, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 70, 73, 88, 105, 107, 108, 152, 154, 159, 160, 162, 180, 190, 191, 194, 224, 235, 237, 238, 239, 242, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 252, 253, 254, 256, 257, 258, 262, 263, 274, 276, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 286, 288, 292, 300, 304, 308, 309, 312, 331, 332, 333, 334, 336, 337, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 351, 354, 355, 367, 369, 371, 372, 374, 375, 376, 380, 382, 385, 389, 391, 392, 393, 394.
 Soul, all-pervading, 45, 193. See Unity.
 — association with, 288, 336.
 — beauty of, 177.
 — beginningless, 44, 45.
 — destruction of, 44 seq., 160, 374.
 — different from qualities and actions, 55, 56, 105.
 — distinct from nature, 201, 289.
 — distinct from senses, 160, 173, 285, 289, 305.
 — distinct from universe, 164.
 — embodied, 44, 45, 46, 65, 77, 232, 238, 240, 244, 249, 252.
 — eternal. See Eternity.
 — existence of, 26.
 — favour of, 234.
 — firm, 45.
 — high and low, 232.
 — highest. See Highest.
 — immaculate, 123.
 — immortal. See Immortality.
 — indefinable, 44.
 — indestructible, 44, 46.
 — individual, 77, 112, 157, 188, 192, 253, 258, 263, 289, 310, 315, 337, 340, 341, 350, 371, 366.
 — individual's relation to supreme, 31, 55, 77, 92, 97, 103, 111, 112, 153, 154, 156, 186, 189, 316, 342, 350.
 — indivisible, 45.
 — inexhaustible, 45.
 — killing and being killed, 44, 45.
 — knowledge of, 46, 66, 106, 163.
 — loss of, 151.
 — manifestation of. See Manifestation.
 — migration to new body, 44.
 — not active agent, 55, 65, 105, 106, 109, 123, 125, 285.
 — primeval, 45.
 — science of, 49, 90, 173, 181. See Adhyātma.
 — seats of, 237, 240.
 — stable, 45.
 — unchangeable, 45.
 — union. See individual's &c., supra.
 — wonder, 46.
 Soul, supreme, 82, 86, 105, 106, 112, 113, 156, 172, 173, 175, 189, 190, 248, 259, 284, 310, 342.
 — abode of. See Seat.
 — access to. See Attainment.
 — connexion of with world, 189.

- Soul, does nothing, 64, 65, 106, 123.
 — origin of all, 87.
 — origin of gods and sages, 86.
 — part of, individual, 31, 112, 186.
 — passive spectator, 100, 105.
 — relation of, to individual. See Soul, individual's &c., supra.
 — source unknown, 86.
 — union of with individual. See Union.
- Sound, 61, 74, 127, 155, 247, 258, 260, 266, 271, 273, 343. See Objects of sense.
- Sour, 383, 384.
- Source of things, 46, 74, 75, 80, 83, 84, 87, 90, 107, 112, 127, 191, 194, 283, 284, 311, 315, 323, 333, 334, 354, 357, 377, 383.
 — and end, 46, 84. See Beginning, Production, and Soul, supreme.
- South path, 314.
- Sovereignty, great, 303.
 — of earth, 40, 42, 43, 47, 96, 300.
 — of three worlds, 40, 307.
 — within, 302.
- Space, 73, 74, 82, 106, 156, 186, 244, 251, 260, 289, 316, 339, 343, 356, 368, 375, 377. See Time and place, and Objects of sense.
- Speaking ill, 182, 183.
- Species, origin of, 244. See Eggs.
- Spectator, soul is, 105.
- Speech, 49, 87, 90, 119, 123, 128, 161, 177, 184, 185, 243, 257, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 275, 295, 336, 338, 348, 359, 364, 366. See Objects of sense.
 — forms of, 265.
- Speed, 357, 364, 381. See Velocity.
- Spirit, 104, 105, 331, 333, 351, 367, 368, 373, 380, 385, 386.
 — departed. See Departed spirits.
 — supreme. See Soul, supreme.
- Spiritual topics, 51, 296, 310.
- Spirituous, 389.
- Splendour, 91, 95, 240.
 — Brahmic, 162, 232, 287.
- Spoke, 306, 355.
- Spontaneous earnings, 60, 101, 362, 365.
- Sport, 251. See Play and Recreation.
- Spring, 90.
- Sprouts, 111, 313, 371, 383.
- Square, 384.
- Śravaṇa, 352.
- Sreya and Preya, 161.
- Sridharasvāmin, 35, 38, 45, 49, 54, 64, 67, 71, 80, 85, 89, 96, 105, 107, 108, 110, 112, 116, 117, 120, 123, 124, 127, 129, 346, 378.
- Śruti. See Vedas.
- Stable, 45, 367.
- Staff, 37, 217, 359, 360.
- Staggering, 356.
- Stale, 118.
- Standard, 39.
- Standing, 360.
- Stars, 179, 240.
- State, 117, 304. See Brahmic, Mind, and Vilest state.
 — differences of, 59, 82, 356.
 — normal, 99.
- Staves, three, 318.
- Steady, 49, 70, 103, 110, 167, 357.
- Steady-minded, 49, 50, 51, 52, 66, 68, 69, 70, 78, 83, 100, 101, 103, 109, 110, 117, 250, 296, 300, 352.
- Stealing. See Thief.
- Steeds, white, 38.
- Steps. See Gradually.
- Stick. See Staff.
- Stinginess, 325. See Gifts.
- Stinking, 118.
- Stolidity, 320.
- Stomach, 93, 94, 252, 367.
- Stone, 68, 110, 179.
 — heated, standing on, 118.
- Stoppage, 357, 358.
- Store. See Provisions.
- Store-room, 253.
- Storm-gods, 88.
- Story, ancient. See Itihāsa.
- Stotra, 280.
- Straightforward, 103, 114, 119, 126, 161, 320, 325, 326, 364, 373.
- Strangers, 159.
- Straw, 142, 155.
- Stream, 90, 95, 192, 284, 287, 307, 344, 346, 354, 363, 387. See River.
- Strength, 74, 116, 118, 124, 178, 236, 252, 294, 323. See Power.
- Śrī Parvan, 187.
- Strong, 71, 116, 158, 346.
- Stubborn, 118, 128. See Head-strong and Obstinate.
- Student, 177, 216. See Pupil.
- Study, 22, 23, 61, 68, 81, 98, 99, 114, 119, 120, 121, 164, 167, 172, 174, 181, 185, 269, 324, 334, 340, 355, 358, 360, 361, 362, 376.

- Study of Gītā, 130.
 — of Vedas. See Vedas.
 Style. See Anugītā, Bhagavadgītā, and Sanatsugātīya.
 Subandhu, 13.
 Subdivision, love of, 10.
 Subduing. See Self-restraint.
 Subhadrā, 37, 39.
 Subjects, 295, 378. See Object.
 Subjugation. See Self-restraint.
 Sub-quarters. See Quarters.
 Subsistence. See Entities.
 Substratum, 123, 249, 289, 292.
 Subtle topics. See Spiritual.
 Subtlety, 104, 106, 160, 241, 285, 296, 310, 320, 336, 341, 342.
 Success, 47, 48, 49, 59, 60, 124.
 Sūdra, 22, 24, 85, 126, 127, 136, 150, 322, 329.
 Sughoshā, 39.
 Summer, 122, 363.
 Summum bonum, 117, 214. See Aim, Emancipation, Heaven.
 Sun, 58, 65, 74, 78, 83, 88, 94, 106, 110, 111, 178, 179, 186, 189, 224, 251, 277, 287, 289, 290, 303, 316, 329, 330, 337, 340, 346, 350, 352, 354, 364, 387.
 — eye of divine form, 94.
 — one thousand, 93.
 Sunrise. See Morning, Sun.
 Sunset. See Evening, Sun.
 Sunshine, 356.
 Sūnyavādins, 376.
 Superhuman cause of pain. See Pain.
 Superior to God none. See Equal.
 Superiority, feeling of, 158, 159. See Envy.
 Supervisor, 82, 83, 105, 109, 188.
 Suppliant, 169, 183.
 Support of Asvattha, 111.
 — of body. See Body.
 — without, 72.
 See Dependent.
 Supporter, 83, 84, 105, 257, 348.
 — of universe, 78, 80, 82, 91, 94, 97, 105, 113, 180, 192, 258.
 Supreme, 49, 50, 54, 64, 65, 69, 77, 79, 81, 83, 85, 93, 94, 106, 113, 176, 188, 192, 326, 369, 379.
 — belongs to none, 194.
 — form of, 193.
 — loss of, 71.
 — manifestation of, 77. See Incarnation.
 Supreme, part of, supports all, 91.
 See Being-Supreme, Brahman, and Highest.
 Surface. See Earth.
 Sūrya, 219.
 Sushumā, 156, 277, 318.
 Suspension. See Hanging.
 Susruta, 144.
 Sustainer, 83.
 Sustenance. See Body, support of.
 Sūtras, 7, 14, 30.
 Sutta Nipāta, 14, 19, 24, 36, 40, 45, 46, 48, 49, 50, 51, 56, 59, 60, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 68, 69, 70, 79, 88, 89, 101, 103, 105, 108, 109, 111, 112, 114, 118, 121.
 Svadhā, 83, 324, 370.
 Svāhā, 324, 352, 366.
 Svapāka, 65.
 Sveta, 222, 346.
 Svetāsvatāropanishad, 65, 68, 78, 89, 102, 103, 104, 105, 112, 113, 129, 138, 157, 160, 163, 165, 166, 172, 176, 179, 180, 186, 187, 189, 190, 192, 193, 238, 249, 265, 328, 311, 313, 322, 327, 331, 332, 333, 338, 343, 348, 355, 370, 376, 379.
 Swallowing, 95, 353.
 Swamy, Sir M. C. See Sutta Nipāta.
 Sweet, 363, 383, 384.
 Swerving. See Moving and Truth.
 Swift. See Speed.
 Sword, 63, 294, 302, 313.
 Syādvādin, 176.
 Syāmāka. See Grain.
 Syena, 82, 353.
 Syllable, 391. See Om.
 Symbols, 160, 307, 308, 309, 350, 367.
 Systematic arrangement, 7, 10, 13.
 See Philosophy.
 Tabor, 38.
 Taciturnity, 101, 119, 159, 161, 162, 163, 168, 173.
 Tad, 120, 161.
 Taint, 43, 49, 59, 64, 82, 106, 107, 109, 123, 127, 151, 155, 160, 163, 186, 247, 248, 289, 366. See Bond.
 Tairthikas, 376.
 Taittiriya Āraṇyaka, 150, 164, 170, 178, 186, 188, 190, 259, 261, 262, 266, 277, 280, 327, 347, 389.
 — Brāhmaṇa, 261, 262, 266.
 — Upanishad, 103, 120, 123, 127, 152, 155, 156, 161, 163, 164, 168, 171.

- 180, 191, 192, 220, 236, 238, 244,
280, 293, 302, 343, 360, 361, 378,
385, 388, 389, 390.
- Taking, 64.
- Talent, 37, 72, 120, 177, 182, 191,
193, 255, 292, 299, 310, 312, 314,
316, 317, 326, 327, 332, 335, 369,
377, 378, 380, 381, 386.
- Talk, 47, 64, 124, 164, 320.
- Tāṇḍya Brāhmaṇa, 180.
- Tanks, 222, 324.
- Tapas, 166.
- Tārānātha Tarkavāṇaspati, Prof., 28,
33, 329, 334, 342.
- Tārkikas, 376.
- Tarpava, 325.
- Taste, 74, 257, 258. See Objects of sense, Relish, and Savoury.
— by another, 269, 270.
— for objects of sense, 50, 166.
- Tasteless, 118, 247.
- Tawny, 179.
- Teacher. See Preceptor.
- Teaching. See Instruction.
- Tears, 42.
- Technical terms, 10.
- Teeth, 95, 113.
- Temperate. See Food and Sleepi- ness.
- Tempers, 86, 322.
- Temporary. See Perishable.
- Temptation, 154, 327.
- Ten, 373.
- Tender, 384.
- Terminable. See Perishable.
- Termination of Life. See Death.
- Terrible, 94, 95, 98, 343.
- Test, 306.
- Texts, 102.
— Vedic, 48, 269, 290, 305, 322. See Mantra.
- Thief, 53, 160, 169, 284, 324, 330, 389.
- Thigh, 94.
- Thirst, 151, 168, 356.
- Thomas, E., 224, 225.
- Thomson, Archbishop, 268.
- Thought, 87, 115, 116, 192, 259, 263, 321, 348, 350, 378. See Con- tinuous meditation and Mind.
— evil, 323.
- Thoughtless, 183, 359. See Rash.
- Thread, 74, 359, 360.
- Throat, 96, 252, 262, 266, 271.
- Throwing out, 64.
- Thumb, 190, 192.
- Thunderbolt, 37, 89.
- Tie. See Bond.
- Tiele, C. P., Prof., 21, 23, 24, 27, 97.
- Tiger, 142, 153, 155.
— like, 230, 294.
- Time, 62, 81, 90, 120, 176, 186, 244,
276, 316, 356, 357, 363, 366, 375,
377.
— and place, soul unlimited by, 45,
186, 343, 356.
— lapse of, 58. See Birth.
— of return, &c., 80. See Death and Gift.
— wheel of, 343, 355.
- To-day, 305.
- Toil. See Labour.
- To-morrow, 305.
- Tone, 264.
- Tongue, 219, 252, 259, 261, 292.
See Senses and Taciturnity.
- Tooth. See Teeth.
- Tortoise, 50, 342, 366.
- Torture, 118, 237, 240.
- Touching, 247, 257, 258, 343. See Senses.
- Town, 173, 212, 361, 363.
- Trade, 127.
- Tradition, 314.
- Tranquillity, 21, 51, 52, 63, 65, 67, 68,
69, 70, 85, 86, 94, 101, 108, 114,
119, 120, 126, 128, 129, 190, 232,
243, 246, 247, 248, 250, 256, 257,
277, 287, 288, 301, 307, 312, 317,
326, 342, 355, 370, 372, 373, 375,
389, 392.
- Transcendent Brahman, 76, 78, 113,
333, 351, 372.
— happiness, 70.
— nature, 76.
- Transcending. See Qualities, Source.
- Transgressing. See Ill-conducted and Sin.
- Transient, 44, 79, 86, 154, 179, 187,
246, 250, 355, 390. See Life.
— penance, 120.
- Transmigration, 322. See Life,
higher.
- Travellers, 329, 380, 381.
- Treachery, 41, 151, 324, 344.
- Treasure, 115.
- Trees, 89, 111, 112, 142, 172, 241,
284, 285, 286, 294, 296, 313, 316,
321, 346, 361, 363, 365, 370, 371,
373, 379, 388.
- Tremour, 40, 96, 239.
- Trespasses. See Sin.
- Trikūṭavat, 222, 346.

- Trinity, 88, 220, 347.
 Trouble, 56, 71, 118, 122, 124, 183, 329, 356, 362. See Agitation.
 Trumpet, 38.
 Trunk, 313, 371.
 Trust. See Faith.
 Truth, 41, 60, 62, 64, 70, 83, 86, 87, 92, 103, 110, 114, 115, 119, 124, 160, 161, 162, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 174, 175, 176, 177, 182, 184, 185, 280, 284, 293, 296, 311, 313, 314, 315, 324, 325, 326, 331, 335, 336, 338, 344, 351, 360, 362, 364, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 373, 375, 378, 380, 381, 384.
 Turbid, 42.
 Turning back. See Wheel.
 Tvashtri, 219, 346.
 Twelve, 373.
 Twenty-four, 373.
 — plus one, 317.
 Twenty-two, 373.
 Twice-born, 156, 160, 163, 166, 209, 231, 232, 285, 291, 293, 296, 299, 304, 311, 314, 316, 327, 336, 339, 340, 348, 353, 360, 373, 383.
 Twofold, 375.
 Ubiquitous, 82.
 Udâna, 258.
 Udule mas, 377.
 Udumbara, 374, 379.
 Udyoga Parvan, 135, 138, 139, 140.
 Ukkaisravas, 89.
 Umâ, 219, 347.
 Un-a-ked, 365.
 Unattached. See Attachment.
 Unavoidable, 46.
 Unborn, 45, 58, 76, 86, 87, 192, 194, 331.
 Uncertain, 120, 380.
 Unchangeable, 45, 100, 317, 331, 333, 371, 391.
 Unchecked, 357.
 Uncle, maternal, 40.
 Unconcern, 82, 110, 326, 391. See Indifference.
 Unconfused, 307.
 Unconquerable, 161, 231. See Invincible.
 Uncreated, 45, 347, 391. See Self-existent.
 Undegraded, 39, 97, 130, 310.
 Underlying principle. See Substratum.
 Understanding, 47, 57, 64, 65, 67, 70, 73, 78, 97, 100, 101, 102, 112, 123, 125, 127, 161, 175, 177, 179, 181, 187, 188, 189, 190, 193, 236, 247, 259, 260, 267, 279, 284, 287, 302, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 313, 316, 318, 332, 336, 337, 338, 341, 343, 344, 348, 349, 350, 351, 355, 357, 366, 367, 368, 370, 372, 377, 380, 381, 382, 385, 386, 391, 392. See Knowledge.
 Understanding, world of, 333.
 Undesponding. See Despondency.
 Undeveloped, 331.
 Undiscerning. See Discernment.
 Undistinguished colours, 286.
 Unfathomable, 343.
 Unfriendliness, 320. See Antipathy.
 Ungrateful, 254.
 Unhappiness, 49, 51, 53, 66, 69, 70, 78, 79, 86, 101, 103, 107, 109, 126, 151, 157, 232, 233, 245, 247, 255, 313, 331, 370, 372. See Pain.
 Unholy, 116, 343.
 Unintelligent, 160, 172, 312, 320, 330, 351, 356, 371, 379.
 Uninterrupted, 341.
 Union, 66, 70, 71, 115, 275.
 Unity of everything, 62, 71, 75, 82, 104, 105, 106, 107, 112, 116, 124, 128, 312, 313, 344, 370, 374. See Difference, Identification. And Soul, all-pervading.
 — of work, 6.
 Universal benevolence. See Benevolence.
 — form, 92, 333, 344.
 — knowledge, 76, 114.
 Universe, constituents of, 336.
 — destruction of, 80.
 — devoid of truth, 115, 315.
 — divisions of, 93, 261.
 — eternal, 158.
 — government of, 115, 327.
 — heated by universal form, 94, 95.
 — illumination of, 178, 186.
 — lord of, 83, 86, 87, 93. See Atheism and Ruler.
 — movement of, 82, 87. See Movement.
 — producer and destroyer of, 74, 95, 157, 158, 287, 354, 392.
 — support of, 74, 78, 80, 82, 91, 92, 97, 104, 112, 180, 192.
 — upholding. See Support.

- Universe, welfare of, 29, 94. See Benevolence.
 — within and without. See Within.
 See Body of Krishna and Ruler.
 Unknowable, 76, 104, 160, 247.
 Unknown, 159, 160, 349, 368. See Incomprehensible.
 Unmanageable, 57.
 Unmoved, 51, 68, 69, 110, 248, 352, 391.
 Unpeopled. See Solitary.
 Unperceived, 45, 46, 76, 80, 82, 88, 96, 99, 100, 102, 193, 313, 317, 318, 331, 332, 349, 350, 351, 354, 368, 371, 372, 373, 380, 382, 383, 385, 386, 389, 390.
 Unpleasant, 122. See Agreeable.
 Unreal, 44.
 Unreasonable, 237.
 Unrighteous, 53.
 Unseen, 115. See Unperceived.
 Unshaking, 331.
 Unsteady. See Steady.
 Unsubstantial, 255.
 Unswerving, 125, 336.
 Untainted, 367, 369, 379. See Gift, Lotus-leaf, and Worlds.
 Unthinkable, 45, 78, 100, 354, 369.
 Untruthfulness, 168, 183.
 Unwilling. See Reluctant.
 Up and down, going, 109, 240, 321, 322, 325, 327, 329.
 Upānishads, 2, 5, 7, 8, 13, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 23, 26, 27, 34, 36, 135, 141, 142, 143, 144, 147, 174, 181, 207, 210, 211, 212, 215, 223, 226, 251.
 — dialogues in, 5.
 Upāsana. See Meditation.
 Upavarsha, 32.
 Upholding. See Support.
 Upwards and downwards, branches, 111, 184, 287, 354. See Up and down.
 Urine, 261.
 Uśanas, 91.
 Uśmapas, 94.
 Uttamaugas, 37.
 Vain, 321, 327. See Life.
 Vaisampāyana, 150, 151, 229, 230, 394.
 Vaisvānara, 191, 259, 276.
 Vairya, 22, 24, 85, 126, 127, 217, 255, 329.
 Vaivasvata, 153.
 Vāṭaspati Mīra, 319, 322, 329, 356, 371, 382.
 Valiant, 332. See Valour.
 Vallabhācārya, 30, 31.
 Valour, 126, 323, 326, 367.
 Valuables. See Precious things.
 Vāmadeva, 193.
 Vāmadevya, 277.
 Vanishing of nature, 380.
 Vanity, 103, 114, 115, 116, 166, 181, 246, 320, 321. See Arrogance and Pride.
 Vanquished, 96, 152, 388, 389. See Victory.
 Variable, 330.
 Variegated colours, 286, 357.
 Variety. See Diversity.
 Varuṇa, 89, 97, 219, 220, 345, 346.
 Vāsavadattā, 28.
 Vashat, 324.
 Vasikāra saṅgṛhā, 9.
 Vasishṭha, 159, 160, 314.
 Vasu, 88, 92, 94.
 Vāsudeva, 75, 83, 91, 98, 110, 130, 230, 235, 254, 310, 312, 393.
 Vāsuki, 89, 353.
 Vāyu, 219, 340. See Wind.
 Veda, 171, 172.
 Vedānta, 8, 17, 113, 123, 147, 159, 174, 246, 331.
 — Paribhāṣā, 220, 258, 286, 314, 333, 338, 339, 387.
 — Sāra, 186.
 — Sūtras, 30, 31, 32, 33, 105, 188, 191.
 Vedas, 5, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 25, 26, 48, 54, 61, 62, 68, 74, 78, 81, 83, 84, 88, 91, 98, 99, 102, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 119, 120, 121, 143, 144, 145, 146, 152, 153, 156, 157, 158, 159, 161, 162, 163, 164, 166, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 177, 182, 185, 193, 211, 214, 226, 262, 269, 276, 306, 309, 312, 320, 322, 326, 331, 353, 354, 358, 367, 369, 378, 388, 390.
 — Atharva, 18, 19, 145.
 — consubstantial with Brahman, 163.
 — disparagement of. See Disparagement.
 — like reservoir, 48.
 — theogony of, 220.
 — three, 19, 83, 84.
 — two Kāṇḍas of, 17, 146.
 Vedic words, 48.
 Vegetables, 83, 113, 144, 156, 351.
 See Herbs.

- Vehicle, 345.
 Veil concealing Brahman, 76.
 Velocity, 192. See Speed.
 Venerable, 32, 97, 252, 267, 282, 293, 311, 377.
 Veracity. See Truth.
 Verse, sacred, 83.
 — Sanskrit, 15.
 Vessels, 363.
 Vestments, 93.
 Vexation, 43, 56, 68, 110, 159, 168, 315, 324, 330, 336, 356, 378. See Agitation.
 Vices, 301, 302, 303, 314. See Attack of vices.
 Vicissitudes. See Life, course of.
 Victory, 40, 43, 47, 91, 131, 287, 296, 305, 306, 344.
 Vidura, 136, 149, 150, 151.
 Viṅṇāna Bhikṣu, 197, 201, 202, 203, 204, 354.
 — Vāda, 375.
 Vikarma, 38.
 Vilāsavati, 28.
 Vilest state, 116.
 Vilifying, 323. See Abuse.
 Vinatā, 90.
 Vindhya, 222, 346.
 Vindictiveness, 151, 323.
 Violation. See Regulation.
 Vipra, 347.
 Virāṅ, 186, 315.
 Virāṭa, 37, 39.
 Virokṣana, 175.
 Virtue and vice, 56, 115.
 Virtuous, 116, 283.
 Vishamasloki, 227, 259.
 Vishnu, 29, 76, 88, 89, 90, 94, 95, 190, 219, 220, 221, 261, 332, 333, 338, 345, 346, 347, 354.
 — Purāṇa, 221, 222.
 Visible. See Perceptible and Regulation.
 Visual power, concentration of, 67, 69.
 Viśvāmitra, 314.
 Viśvas, 94.
 Vital parts, 237, 238, 239, 297, 298, 299. See Soul, seat of.
 Vitality. See Life.
 Vocal. See Bodily and Speech.
 Voice. See Speech.
 Volition, 313.
 Vomited, 142, 160.
 Voracity. See Eating.
 Vow. See Firmness, Regulation.
 Vowels, 348.
 Vriddhas, 377. See Elders.
 Vrikodara. See Bhīma.
 Vrishalas, 295.
 Vrishnis, 41, 46, 56, 91, 235.
 Vulgar, 151.
 Vultures, 40.
 Vyādi, 32.
 Vyāna, 258.
 Vyāsa, 3, 6, 33, 87, 91, 130, 204, 206, 207.
 — author of Gītā, 6.
 Vyūha, 38.
 Wain, 37.
 Wakefulness, 51, 69, 269, 324. See Day and night.
 War. See Battle-field.
 Warmth, 238, 329. See Heat.
 Washing, 119.
 Water, 45, 64, 73, 74, 95, 156, 159, 179, 187, 189, 193, 238, 260, 281, 283, 284, 287, 289, 290, 339, 343, 344, 346, 353, 356, 359, 360, 361, 364, 365, 374, 379, 382, 384, 387.
 — offering to Supreme, 85. See Libations and Reservoir.
 Waterpot, 359.
 Wave, 374. See Billow.
 Way. See Hell and Path.
 Weak, 269.
 — point, touching, &c., 323.
 Wealth, 40, 61, 62, 75, 88, 114, 115, 116, 124, 125, 169, 177, 178, 181, 183, 184, 233, 243, 246, 251, 284, 307, 314, 325, 331, 347, 357, 359, 365, 376, 392. See Belongings and Property.
 — Brahmic, 162.
 — human, 161, 255.
 — lord of, 88.
 Weapons, 38, 41, 42, 45, 89, 90, 93, 111, 250.
 — do not cut soul, 45, 250.
 Weary, 160, 314.
 Weaving, 74, 194.
 Weber, A., Prof., 6, 8, 23, 25, 29, 31, 33, 139, 248.
 Welfare. See Good.
 — of all. See Benevolence.
 — of Arjuna, 86, 92, 129.
 — of oneself, 117.
 Well, 324, 354.
 Well-read, 209, 255. See Learned.
 Well-wishers, 68.
 Westminster Review, 3, 5, 6.

- Wheel of the world, 54. See Discus.
 — holder of, 232.
 — turning of, 215, 306.
 See Time.
 Wheeler, T., 3, 5, 6.
 Whip, 386.
 Whirling of mind, 40.
 Whistling. See Bamboo.
 White, 179, 384.
 Wick, 380.
 Wicked, 75, 121, 153, 329, 330.
 Wife, 41, 97, 103, 159, 161, 167, 170,
 181, 183, 189, 216, 256, 307, 358.
 — of preceptor. See Preceptor.
 Wilkins, C., 2.
 Will of entities. See Free-will.
 Williams, M., Prof., 243, 344, 358.
 Willow, 346. See Bamboo.
 Wilson, H. H., Prof., 24, 50, 205,
 221, 222.
 Wind, 71, 90, 97, 156, 192, 232, 237,
 238, 239, 257, 261, 337, 343, 349,
 350.
 — carries astray boat, 51.
 — carries away perfumes, 112.
 — does not dry up soul, 45.
 — life. See Life-winds.
 — restraint of, 71.
 — upward and downward. See
 Life-winds.
 Windless place, 69.
 Wing, 164, 188, 189, 192.
 Wink. See Eyelid.
 Winter, 332.
 Wisdom, 44, 49.
 Wise. See Learned, Life, and Unhappiness.
 Wish. See Desire.
 Wish-giving cow, 89.
 — stone. See Stone.
 Within all things, 104, 112, 180, 190,
 367, 369, 379.
 Without. See Within.
 Withstand, difficult to. See Restraint and Unconquerable.
 Woe. See Home and Misery.
 Womb, 105, 107, 109, 116, 175,
 237, 239, 241, 260, 321, 322, 331,
 339, 353. See Fœtus and Preceptor.
 Women. See Female.
 Wonder, 92, 93.
 — soul, subject of, 46.
 Wood. See Fuel and Staff.
 Word. See Speech.
 — divine, 59, 73.
 Words, 89, 103, 185, 209, 261, 262,
 263, 266, 338, 348, 353.
 — man of, 171.
 — of wisdom, 44.
 Work, divine, 29, 59.
 World, 52, 54, 55, 59, 60, 62, 63,
 66, 68, 72, 79, 84, 86, 100, 106,
 116, 161, 163, 164, 170, 174, 179,
 180, 190, 230, 231, 233, 234, 236,
 239, 240, 243, 246, 249, 253, 255,
 256, 258, 278, 281, 282, 283, 287,
 292, 296, 307, 313, 314, 316, 325,
 331, 332, 334, 343, 354, 356, 362,
 364, 367, 370, 387, 388, 393.
 — affairs of, 55, 60, 304, 324.
 — agitation of and by, 101.
 — beginning of, 152. See Beginning, void of.
 — destroyer of, 95.
 — destruction of, 55, 96, 115. See Destruction.
 — external and internal, 292, 337,
 386.
 — foes of, 115.
 — future, 62, 63, 72, 115, 126, 165,
 167, 188, 308, 326, 378.
 — government of, 115.
 — higher, 354, 389.
 — holy. See Holy world.
 — human, 59, 84, 95, 111.
 — knowledge of, 161.
 — master of, 67, 86, 97.
 — material, 65, 161, 163, 172, 175,
 186, 187, 189, 191, 335.
 — mortal, 82, 84, 100, 112, 153, 175,
 191, 234, 343.
 — nether. See Hell.
 — of death, 100. See mortal, supra.
 — of meritorious men, 72, 84, 130,
 184, 321.
 — release from, 62, 159, 235.
 — spotless. See Untainted.
 — survey of, 234.
 — thought of, 323.
 — three, 40, 54, 94, 97, 113, 244,
 249, 334, 351, 388.
 — untainted, 108, 155, 317. See
 Current, Death, Destruction,
 Evil, Lord, and Transient.
 Worldliness, 51, 159, 314, 370.
 Worldly life. See Life, course of.
 Worms, 225, 321, 339, 364.
 Worship, 59, 71, 73, 75, 76, 85, 86,
 87, 99, 110, 117, 127, 156, 186,
 257, 286, 377.
 — complete, 114.

- Worship, exclusive, 73, 75, 78, 79.
 80, 83, 84, 85, 99, 100, 103, 110.
 — irregular. See Irregular.
 — mode of, 83, 114, 127, 245, 353.
 — of divinities, 59, 75, 118.
 Worshippers go to deity worshipped, 76, 84.
 — receive due fruit, 59.
 Woven. See Weaving.
 Wrath, 50, 57, 59, 66, 67, 101, 114,
 115, 116, 117, 128, 151, 154, 155,
 156, 160, 165, 166, 181, 183, 185,
 233, 241, 246, 284, 289, 294, 301,
 315, 320, 322, 323, 325, 332, 343,
 357, 364. See Irascible.
 Wretched, 49.
 Wrong. See Modesty, Right and wrong.
 Yādava, 97.
 Yagñā, 83.
 Yāgñavalkya, 5, 237, 304, 344.
 Yagñesvar Sāstrin, 33, 224.
 Yagus, 18, 20, 83, 146, 162, 163,
 180.
 Yakshas, 88, 94, 118, 345, 347, 354.
 Yama, 89, 97, 153, 219, 233, 346.
 Yāska, 225.
 Years, 330.
 Yellow, 384.
 Yoga, 9, 10, 11, 27, 47, 61, 63, 64,
 74, 297, 306.
 — Sūtras, 8, 9, 10, 74, 210, 211, 212,
 215, 226, 234, 248, 250, 251, 252,
 260, 266, 271, 274, 285, 286, 300,
 319, 322, 324, 327, 343, 372, 373,
 394.
 — Vāsishṭha, 206, 240.
 Yogātāras, 213, 377.
 Yogin, 52, 293.
 Youth, 175.
 — compared to death, 44.
 — receiving senior, 139, 203.
 Yudhāmanyu, 37.
 Yudhishṭhira, 38, 394.
 Yuyudhāna, 37.

SANSKRIT INDEX.

R. = Bhagavadgītā; S. = Sanatsugātīya; A. = Anugītā.

N.B. Only in some cases have references been given to all the passages in which a certain word occurs. In most cases, only the passages in which words are used in noteworthy senses are referred to.

- Ākāśabhūta, (A.) XXIII, 5.
Akshara, (B.) III, 15; VIII, 3, 11, 21; X, 2, 5, 33; XI, 18, 37; XII, 1, 3; XV, 16, 18. (S.) III, 18, 45; IV, 18. (A.) III, 27; IV, 14; V, 11; XIII, 22; XXVI, 33.
Āketanā, (A.) XXI, 15.
Adhishṭhāna, (B.) III, 40; XVIII, 14.
Adhyātma, (A.) XX, 40; LXI, 4.
Anādiyoga, (S.) IV, 20.
Anāmaya, (B.) II, 51; XIV, 6.
Aniketa, (B.) XII, 19; (A.) XXVIII, 42.
Anukalpa, (S.) VI, 11.
Anuritas, (S.) III, 37.
Anta, (B.) II, 16.
Antariksha, (S.) VI, 4.
Apara, (B.) IV, 4; VII, 5. (A.) XXVII, 34; XXXV, 56.
Aparaspara Sambhūta, (A.) XVI, 18.
Aparyāpta, (B.) I, 10.
Apratishṭha. See Pratishṭha.
Abhikrama, (B.) II, 40.
Abhidhyā, (S.) II, 11.
Abhyāsa, (B.) VI, 35, 44; XII, 9, 10, 12; XVIII, 36.
Ayana, (B.) I, 11.
Alolutva, (B.) XVI, 2.
Avyakta, (B.) II, 25, 28; VII, 24; VIII, 18, 20, 21; IX, 4; XII, 1, 3, 5; XIII, 5. (A.) I, 42; III, 6; XII, 1, 3, 5; XIX, 8; XX, 20, 47; XXI, 1; XXIV, 22, 24, 25; XXV, 1; XXVIII, 25, 35, 37; XXXIX, 17; XXXI, 55; XXXII, 12; XXXIII, 1, 5; XXXV, 16, 33, 34, 55; XXXVII, 7, 23 seq.
Asaṅgraha, (S.) III, 27.
Asiddhi, (S.) III, 25.
Ahaṅkāra, (B.) II, 71; III, 27, 28; VII, 4; VIII, 1, 3; XII, 13; XIII, 5, 8; XVI, 18; XVII, 5; XVIII, 24, 53, 58, 59. (A.) XX, 19, 20, 47; XXIII, 5; XXV, 9; XXVI, 1, 2, 5; XXVII, 1, 12, 30; XXIX, 22; XXX, 6; XXXI, 45, 55; XXXII, 9, 12, 15; XXXV, 33 seq., 54, 55; XXXVI, 21.
Ahaṅkṛita, (B.) XVIII, 17. (A.) XXXVI, 22.
Ahaṅgata, (S.) II, 7.
Ātman, (B.) II, 41, 43, 44, 45, 55, 64; III, 6, 13, 17, 27, 43; IV, 6, 7, 21, 27, 35, 38, 40, 41, 42; V, 7, 11, 16, 17, 21, 25, 26; VI, 5, 6, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 18, 19, 20, 25, 26, 28, 29, 32, 36, 47; VII, 18, 19; VIII, 2, 12, 15, 19; IX, 5, 26, 28, 31, 34; X, 11, 15, 16, 18, 19, 20; XI, 3, 4, 24, 47, 50; XII, 11, 14; XIII, 7, 22, 24, 28, 29, 31, 32; XIV, 24; XV, 11, 13, 17; XVI, 9, 17, 18, 21, 22; XVII, 16, 19; XVIII, 16, 27, 37, 39, 49, 51, 54. (S.) I, 6, 7; II, 10, 15, 18, 30, 32; III, 8, 9, 41, 54; IV, 22; V, 12; VI, 11, 16, 25, 26. (A.) I, 39, 40; II, 3, 7, 8, 18, 36; III, 3 seq., 30; IV, 2, 3, 5, 7, 9, 10, 15 seq., 42, 46, 51, 56, 58; V, 5, 9, 11; VIII, 23; X, 9, 15, 17; XI, 9; XII, 21, 22; XIII, 22, 24; XV, 29; XVI, 3, 12; XVII, 11, 18 seq.; XVIII, 8; XIX, 1, 7; XX, 16, 47; XXV, 1, 2, 3, 8; XXVI, 4; XXVII, 8, 9, 39, 51, 53, 54, 63, 64, 66; XXXI, 12, 22; XXXI, 45, 46, 49; XXXII, 6, 17; XXXIII, 2, 3, 5; XXXV, 20, 35 seq., 55, 56; XXXVI, 4, 23, 33 seq.
Ādadhrikī, (S.) VI, 4.
Āpas, (S.) VI, 4.
Āpomaya, (A.) XIII, 19.

- Āvasatha, (A.) IV, 34, 35.
 Āvritti, (B.) V, 17; VIII, 16, 23, 26.
 (A.) III, 29.
 Āsya, (S.) II, 7.
- Uta, (B.) I, 39; XIV, 9, 11. (S.) V, 3. (A.) XI, 14; XIV, 21; XXV, 8; XXXI, 3, 7; XXXV, 43; XXXVI, 28.
- Uttama, (B.) XIV, 14; XV, 17.
 Utsa, (S.) VI, 13.
 Uddeja, (B.) X, 40. (A.) I, 3. And see (A.) XXVIII, 37.
 Upapatti, (A.) II, 2, 30, 42; III, 10.
- Ritvig, (S.) VI, 10.
- Karmayoga, (B.) III, 3, 7; V, 2; XIII, 24.
 Kāmākāra, (B.) V, 12; XVI, 23.
 Kāmayāna, (A.) XIII, 4.
 Kāryakāraṇa, (B.) XIII, 20.
 Kuṭara, (A.) XXIV, 13, 14.
 Kūṭastha, (B.) VI, 8; XII, 3; XV, 16.
 Kṛita, (B.) XV, 11; XVIII, 16.
 Ketu, (S.) VI, 5.
 Kshara, (B.) VIII, 4; XIV, 16, 18. (A.) III, 27. See Akshara.
 Kshema, (B.) I, 46; II, 45; IX, 22. (A.) XXXI, 45; XXXII, 4.
- Gati, (B.) IV, 17; VIII, 26; XII, 5. (S.) I, 10. (A.) XXXIV, 1.
 Guṇasāṅkhyāna, (B.) XVIII, 19.
 Gṛihita, (B.) VI, 25. And see VI, 35.
 Grahaṇanika, (A.) XXX, 6.
- Kakradhara, (S.) I, 23.
 Kara, (S.) III, 17.
 Kitta, (B.) XVI, 16. (A.) XXXVI, 27.
 Koṭanā, (B.) XVIII, 18.
 Kodya, (S.) III, 27.
- Gana, (S.) II, 27.
 Gāti, (A.) I, 21; II, 18; III, 14, 33; XXXI, 8.
 Gīva, (B.) VII, 5; XV, 7. (A.) II, 16, 17, 25, 28, 30, 33; III, 7, 9, 10; IV, 43, 50.
 Gñānayoga, (B.) III, 3; XV, 1.
- Tanu, (B.) VII, 21. (S.) I, 36.
 Tyāga, (B.) XVIII, 1, 2, 4, 8, 9, 10, 12. (A.) XXXIII, 7.
 Trivishrāpa, (S.) II, 26. (A.) XVIII, 4.
- Duranvaya, (A.) XXXVI, 17.
 Deva, (S.) II, 8; VI, 4.
 Daiva, (B.) XVIII, 14.
 Dhāmāmṣa, (S.) III, 41.
 Dhāranā, (B.) VIII, 12. (A.) XXVII, 57.
 Dhārayan, (B.) V, 9. (A.) IV, 50.
 Dhishrībīta, (B.) XIII, 17.
- Niyakkābati, (A.) V, 7.
 Nirvāṇa, (B.) VI, 15. See Brahṁānirvāṇa, (A.) IV, 12.
 Nirviesha, (A.) XXI, 13.
 Nivṛitti, (B.) XVI, 7; XVIII, 30.
 Nishrībā, (B.) III, 3; V, 12, 17; XVII, 1; XVIII, 50. (A.) II, 38; V, 27; VII, 12; XV, 24.
 Nyasta, (A.) V, 3.
- Pada, (B.) VIII, 11; XIII, 4. (A.) XX, 24; XXXV, 3.
 Para. See Aparā.
 Parāsu, (S.) V, 1.
 Parināma, (A.) XXXVI, 37.
 Parīta, (A.) II, 13.
 Paryāya, (A.) XXI, 9.
 Pāvaka, (S.) VI, 16.
 Purusha, (B.) VIII, 4; XIII, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23; XV, 16, 17, 18, 19; XVII, 3.
 Pūga, (S.) VI, 7.
- Prakṛiti, (B.) III, 5, 27, 28, 29, 31; IV, 6; VII, 4, 5, 20; IX, 7, 8, 10, 12, 13; XI, 51; XIII, 19, 20, 21, 23, 29, 34; XIV, 5; XV, 7; XXVII, 40, 59. (A.) II, 3; III, 26; XXIII, 13; XXIV, 23.
 Pratishrībā, (B.) III, 15; VI, 38; XIV, 27; XV, 3. And see XVI, 8.
 Pradhāna, (A.) III, 26, 33; IV, 47; XX, 19; XXIV, 23; XXXII, 9; XXXV, 32 seq.
 Pramāda, (S.) II, 5, 7.
 Prayatamāna, (S.) II, 39.
 Pravṛitti, (B.) XI, 31; XIV, 12, 22; XV, 4; XVI, 7; XVII, 30, 46; XVIII, 30, 46. (A.) XXI, 9; XXVIII, 26; XXXIII, 3; XXXVI, 37.
 Prasāṅga, (B.) XVIII, 34.
- Bala, (B.) XVI, 18; XVII, 5; XVIII, 53.
 Bahu, (S.) III, 44.
 Buddhi, (B.) I, 23; II, 39, 41, 44, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 63, 65, 66; III, 1.

- 2, 4, 26, 40, 42, 43; IV, 18; V, 11, 17, 20, 28; VI, 9, 21, 23, 25, 43; VII, 4, 10, 24; VIII, 7; X, 4, 10; XII, 4, 8, 14; XIII, 5, 30; XV, 20; XVI, 9; XVIII, 1⁶, 17, 29 seq., 37, 49, 50, 51, 57. (S.) II, 1, 31, 35, 37, 53, 57; III, 2; IV, 11. (A.) I, 10, 14, 46; II, 7, 38; IV, 8, 12, 64; V, 19, 24; VII, 2, 6 seq., 22; IX, 10; X, 4; XIII, 26; XV, 24; XVII, 14, 16, 17; XVIII, 1, 4, 6, 7; XIX, 6, 7, 12; XX, 20; XXI, 2; XXII, 7; XXV, 2, 6, 13; XXVII, 9, 10, 15, 16, 31; XXVIII, 24 seq., 35; XXX, 1; XXXI, 44, 50, 55; XXXII, 12, 17; XXXIV, 17 seq.; XXXV, 17, 22, 32, 55; XXXVI, 2, 30.
- Buddhiyoga, (B.) II, 49; X, 10; XVIII, 57.
- Brahman, (B.) III, 15; IV, 24, 25, 31, 32; V, 6, 10, 19, 20, 21, 24; VI, 14, 20, 27, 28, 38, 44; VII, 29; VIII, 1, 3, 11, 13, 16, 17, 24; X, 12; XI, 2; XIII, 4, 12, 30; XIV, 3, 4, 26, 27; XVII, 23, 24; XVIII, 42, 50, 53, 54. (S.) II, 5, 34, 36, 37; III, 44, 47; IV, 2, 14; V, 7, 21; VI, 2. (A.) I, 12, 13, 15, 42; II, 24; III, 6; IV, 14, 26, 47, 50, 60, 62; V, 10, 17; VI, 22; IX, 17; XI, 8, 16, 17; XII, 20; XVII, 26; XIX, 4; XX, 1, 18, 22, 34, 38; XXIII, 10; XXVII, 11, 14, 38, 49, 51; XXVIII, 12, 13; XXIX, 16; XXXII, 1, 2, 4, 8, 14; XXXIII, 1; XXXIV, 4, 6; XXXVI, 5 seq., 9, 29, 35.
- Brahmanirvāṇa, (B.) II, 72; V, 24 seq.
- Bhakti, (B.) VII, 17; VIII, 10, 22; IX, 14, 26, 29; XI, 54; XII, 17, 19; XIII, 10; XIV, 26; XVIII, 54, 55, 68.
- Bhagadeva, (A.) XXVIII, 15.
- Bhāvanā, (B.) II, 66. (A.) XXI, 14.
- Bhāvayata, (B.) III, 11, 12. And see (B.) VIII, 6. (A.) VIII, 24; XXII, 15; XXVI, 4.
- Bhāshā, (B.) II, 54.
- Bhinnavṛtti, (B.) XXI, 13.
- Bhūta, (B.) II, 28, 30, 34, 69; III, 14, 18, 33; IV, 6, 35; V, 7, 25, 29; VI, 29, 31; VII, 6, 9, 11, 26, 27; VIII, 3, 19, 20, 22; IX, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 11, 13, 25, 29; X, 5, 15, 20, 22, 39; XI, 2, 15, 55; XII, 4, 13; XIII, 5, 15, 16, 27, 30, 34; XIV, 3; XV, 13, 16; XVI, 2, 6; XVII, 4, 6; XVIII, 20, 21, 46, 54, 61. (A.) I, 17; II, 22; III, 7, 16, 28, 29, 33; IV, 3, 11, 27; V, 8; VII, 15; XIII, 18, 20, 24; XIV, 5; XVII, 24; XX, 7, 8, 16, 19, 21, 22, 30, 32, 34, 47, 48, 49; XXI, 9, 10, 18, 23; XXII, 8; XXIII, 1, 6; XXV, 9, 10, 11; XXVI, 2, 5; XXVII, 1 seq., 18 seq., 32, 34, 37, 38, 41 seq., 46, 48, 51, 64, 66, 67; XXVIII, 8, 11, 12; XXIX, 4, 5, 11, 15, 16; XXX, 1, 8, 11, 24; XXXI, 18, 24, 27, 34, 40, 41, 49, 54; XXXII, 6, 9, 13, 14; XXXIV, 12; XXXV, 34, 36, 37, 39, 54, 56; XXXVI, 1, 2, 6, 9, 10, 12, 13, 19, 39.
- Bhūtātman, (B.) VI, 14; XIII, 3; XXXVI, 4.
- Bhūtādi. See Bhūta.
- Matvā, (S.) III, 17. (A.) XXXV, 32.
- Manasvin, (S.) III, 98.
- Mahat, (A.) XX, 47; XXVI, 1; XXVIII, 35; XXX, 9; XXXV, 33 seq.; XXXVI, 4.
- Mātrā, (B.) II, 14. (A.) XXXI, 21, 40.
- Mâyā, (B.) IV, 6; VII, 14, 15, 25; XVIII, 61. (A.) XXVI, 20.
- Mārga, (S.) III, 9.
- Mukta, (B.) IV, 23. (A.) III, 21.
- Mauna, (S.) II, 41; III, 1, 2, 20, 45.
- Yātrā, (A.) XXXI, 23, 32; XLVI, 23. And see (B.) III, 8.
- Yukta, (B.) II, 61, 66; III, 26; IV, 18; V, 6, 7, 8, 12, 21, 23; VI, 8, 14, 18, 29, 47; VII, 17, 30; VIII, 14; IX, 14; X, 4, 10; XII, 1, 2; XIII, 2; XVIII, 28. (A.) IV, 18 seq., 26, 66; V, 11; XI, 1; XXXI, 8, 16, 30.
- Yoga, (B.) II, 39, 45, 48, 49, 50, 53; III, 3, 7; IV, 1, 2, 3, 27, 28, 38, 41, 42; V, 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 21; VI, 2, 3, 4, 12, 16, 17, 19, 20, 23, 29, 33, 36, 37, 41, 44; VII, 1, 25; VIII, 8, 10, 12, 27; IX, 5, 22, 28; X, 7, 10, 18; XI, 1, 4, 8, 9,

- 18, 47; XII, 1, 6, 9, 11; XIII, 10, 24; XIV, 26; XVI, 1; XVIII, 33, 52, 57, 75, 78. (S.) II, 7, 9, 10, 20, 21; V, 18. (A.) I, 13, 29; III, 13; IV, 15, 17, 18, 33, 66; X, 14; XV, 28 seq., XX, 35; XXV, 6; XXVIII, 26; XXXV, 25; XXXVI, 22 seq. See Kshema.
- Yogin, (B.) III, 3; IV, 25; V, 11, 24; VI, 1, 2, 8, 10, 15, 19, 27, 28, 31, 32, 42, 45, 46, 47; VIII, 14, 23, 25, 27, 28; X, 17; XII, 14; XV, 11. (S.) VI, 1 seq. (A.) III, 21; IV, 15, 22, 23.
- Yoni, (S.) IV, 5. (A.) V, 24; XX, 32; XXIV, 8; XXVII, 38; XXXII, 1.
- Rati, (S.) V, 19. (A.) XXVIII, 16.
- Rûpa, (A.) IV, 9, 13 seq.
- Liṅga, (S.) VI, 11.
- Vadānya, (S.) V, 2.
- Varga, (S.) III, 9, 18.
- Vikarman, (B.) IV, 17.
- Vikāra, (S.) II, 21. (A.) XXIV, 23.
- Vigñāna, (B.) III, 41; VI, 8; VII, 21; IX, 1; XVIII, 42. (A.) I, 20; V, 2; VI, 11; VII, 5; XXXI, 5.
- Vinirṇaya, (A.) IV, 63.
- Vibhāga, (A.) XXXV, 27. And see XXIV, 25.
- Vimārga, (S.) II, 7.
- Vīśha, (A.) XX, 21, 48; XXX, 9; XXXII, 13; XXXV, 7; XXXVI, 7, 28.
- Vijvarûpa, (S.) IV, 1.
- Vishamedhamāna, (S.) III, 18.
- Vishûki, (S.) VI, 4.
- Visarga, (A.) XXVII, 26.
- Vismaya, (A.) XXIII, 7.
- Virā, (A.) XIV, 17.
- Vrigina, (S.) III, 5.
- Vega, (S.) II, 11. (A.) II, 11; XXVII, 62.
- Veda, (S.) III, 35, 38 seq.
- Vedya, (S.) III, 38 seq.
- Vaidya, (A.) XX, 36.
- Vyākaraṇa, (S.) III, 45.
- Vyutthāna, (A.) XXIX, 16; XXXIV, 13, 14.
- Sāstrakāra, (S.) III, 5.
- Sukra, (S.) VI, 2.
- Saṅkhyā, (A.) XXXII, 17.
- Saṅgraha, (B.) III, 20, 25; VIII, 12; XVIII, 18. (A.) XXXI, 39.
- Saṅghāta, (B.) XIII, 6.
- Saṅgñā, (B.) I, 7. (S.) V, 2, 11. (A.) XXI, 15; XXXV, 11; XXXVI, 25.
- Saṅgñāta, (B.) XI, 1. (A.) XXVII, 59.
- Sattva, (B.) II, 45; X, 36, 41; XIII, 26; XIV, 6; XVI, 1; XVII, 3, 8; XVIII, 10, 40. (A.) II, 8, 27; XIII, 23; XXVII, 58; XXVIII, 41; XXXII, 17; XXXIII, 6, 8 seq.; XXXIV, 16; XXXV, 7 seq.; XXXVI, 36.
- Samādhi, (B.) II, 44, 53, 54; IV, 24; VI, 7; XII, 9; XVII, 11.
- Samāsita, (A.) XIV, 6.
- Samāhvaya, (A.) VI, 13.
- Samudra, (S.) IV, 19.
- Sampratishṭhā. See Pratishṭhā.
- Samvid, (A.) XI, 6.
- Samsthā, (B.) VI, 15.
- Salila, (S.) IV, 19; VI, 4, 11.
- Sāvitri, (A.) XXIX, 6.
- Sûtra, (B.) XIII, 4.
- Stabdha, (B.) XVI, 17; XVIII, 28. And see (A.) XXI, 12.
- Smṛiti, (A.) XXXI, 5.
- Srotas, (A.) II, 24; XXI, 3, 31. And see XXII, 16; XXIII, 13; XXIV, 7 seq.
- Svabhāva, (B.) II, 7; V, 14; VIII, 3; XVII, 2; XVIII, 41 seq., 47, 60. (S.) II, 40. (A.) VII, 3; VIII, 3; XI, 10; XIII, 2, 4, 5, 22; XXXIV, 12; XXXVI, 11.
- Svarga, (S.) II, 26.
- Ha, (B.) II, 9. (A.) VIII, 9, 15, 18, 20; XIV, 4; XV, 4; XVIII, 3; XX, 5; XXXI, 5.
- Hitakāmyā, (B.) X, 1.
- Hina, (S.) V, 21.

CONSONANTS	MISSIONARY ALPHABET.						Sanskrit.	Zand.	Philiat.	Persian.	Arabic.	Hebrew.	Chinese.
	MISSIONARY ALPHABET.			I Class.	II Class.	III Class.
	I Class.	II Class.	III Class.
Gutturales.
1 Tenuis	k	क	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	k
2 " aspirata	kh	ख	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	kh
3 Media	g	ग	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	. . .
4 " aspirata	gh	घ	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	. . .
5 Gutturo-labialis	q	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	. . .
6 Nasalis	h (ng)	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	. . .
7 Spiritus asper	h	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	h, hs
8 " lenis	h	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	. . .
9 " asper faucalis	h	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	. . .
10 " lenis faucalis	h	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	. . .
11 " asper fricatus	h	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	. . .
12 " lenis fricatus	h	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	. . .
Gutturales modificatae (palatales, &c.)
13 Tenuis	k	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	k
14 " aspirata	kh	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	kh
15 Media	g	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	. . .
16 " aspirata	gh	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	. . .
17 " Nasalis	h	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	𐎧𐎫𐎼𐎢𐏁	. . .

CONSONANTS (continued)	MISSIONARY ALPHABET.			Sanskrit.	Zend.	Pehlvi.	Persian.	Arabic.	Hebrew.	Chinese.
	I Class.		III Class.
	II Class.
18 Semivocalis	y			य	𐬶 𐬶𐬵 init.	𐬶	ی	ی	י	י
19 Spiritus asper			(y)
20 " lenis			(y)	य	𐬶	𐬶	ی	ی	י	י
21 " asper assibilatus			s		𐬶	𐬶	س	س	ס	ס
22 " lenis assibilatus			s		𐬶	𐬶	س	س	ס	ס
Dentales.
23 Tenuis	t			त	𐬵	𐬵	ت	ت	ת	ת
24 " aspirata	th			थ	𐬵	𐬵	ت	ت	ת	ת
25 " assibilata
26 Media	d			द	𐬵	𐬵	د	د	ד	ד
27 " aspirata	dh
28 " assibilata
29 Nasalis	n			न	𐬵	𐬵	ن	ن	נ	נ
30 Semivocalis	l			ल	𐬵	𐬵	ل	ل	ל	ל
31 " mollis 1			l
32 " mollis 2
33 Spiritus asper 1	s			स	𐬵	𐬵	س	س	ס	ס
34 " asper 2
35 " lenis
36 " aspiratus 1	z			ז	𐬵	𐬵	ز	ز	ז	ז
37 " aspiratus 2

Dentales modificatae
(linguales, &c.)

38 Tenuis	t
39 " aspirata	th
40 Media	d
41 " aspirata	dh
42 Nasalis	n
43 Semivocalis	r
44 " fricata	r
45 " dincritica
46 Spiritus asper	sh
47 " lenis	sh

Labiales.

48 Tenuis	p
49 " aspirata	ph
50 Media	b
51 " aspirata	bh
52 Tenuissima	p
53 Nasalis	m
54 Semivocalis	w
55 " aspirata	hw
56 Spiritus asper	f
57 " lenis	v
58 Anusvara	m
59 Visarga	h

VOWELS.	MISSIONARY ALPHABET.			Sanskrit	Zend.	Pehlvi	Persian.	Arabic.	Hebrew.	Chinese.
	II Class.		III Class.
	I Class.
1 Neutralis	0			ā
2 Laryngo-palatalis	ē			fin.	ā
3 " labialis	ō			init.	ā
4 Gutturalis brevis	a			अ	𐬀	𐬀	ا	ا	א	i
5 " longa	ā	(a)		आ	𐬁	𐬁	آ	آ	א	i
6 Palatalis brevis	i			इ	𐬂	...	ی	ی	י	...
7 " longa	ī	(i)		ई	𐬃	...	ی	ی	י	...
8 Dentalis brevis	u			उ	𐬄
9 " longa	ū			ऊ	𐬅
10 Lingualis brevis	r			ऋ	𐬆
11 " longa	ṛ			ॠ	𐬇
12 Labialis brevis	u			उ	𐬄	u
13 " longa	ū	(u)		ऊ	𐬅	ū
14 Gutturo-palatalis brevis	o			ओ	𐬆	o
15 " longa	ō (ai)	(o)		औ	𐬇	ō
16 Diphthongus gutturo-palatalis	ai	(ai)		इ	𐬈	ei, ēi
17 " " " "	ei (ēi)			ई	𐬉
18 " " " "	oi (ōu)			औ	𐬊
19 Gutturo-labialis brevis	o			ओ	𐬋	o
20 " longa	ā (au)	(o)		औ	𐬌	āu
21 Diphthongus gutturo-labialis	au	(au)		औ	𐬍
22 " " " "	eu (ēu)			औ	𐬎
23 " " " "	ou (ōu)			औ	𐬏
24 Gutturális fracta	ū			ऊ	𐬐	ū
25 Palatalis fracta	ī			ई	𐬑	ī
26 Labialis fracta	ū			ऊ	𐬒	ū

SACRED BOOKS OF THE EAST

TRANSLATED BY VARIOUS ORIENTAL SCHOLARS

AND EDITED BY

THE RIGHT HON. F. MAX MÜLLER.

This Series is published with the sanction and co-operation of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

REPORT presented to the ACADÉMIE DES INSCRIPTIONS, May 11, 1883, by M. ERNEST RENAN.

'M. Renan présente trois nouveaux volumes de la grande collection des "Livres sacrés de l'Orient" (Sacred Books of the East), que dirige à Oxford, avec une si vaste érudition et une critique si sûre, le savant associé de l'Académie des Inscriptions, M. Max Müller. . . La première série de ce beau recueil, composée de 24 volumes, est presque achevée. M. Max Müller se propose d'en publier une seconde, dont l'intérêt historique et religieux ne sera pas moindre. M. Max Müller a su se procurer la collaboration des savans les plus éminens d'Europe et d'Asie. L'Université d'Oxford, que cette grande publication honore au plus haut degré, doit tenir à continuer dans les plus larges proportions une œuvre aussi philosophiquement conçue que savamment exécutée.'

EXTRACT from the QUARTERLY REVIEW.

'We rejoice to notice that a second series of these translations has been announced and has actually begun to appear. The stones, at least, out of which a stately edifice may hereafter arise, are here being brought together. Prof. Max Müller has deserved well of scientific history. Not a few minds owe to his enticing words their first attraction to this branch of study. But no work of his, not even the great edition of the Rig-Veda, can compare in importance or in usefulness with this English translation of the Sacred Books of the East, which has been devised by his foresight, successfully brought so far by his persuasive and organising power, and will, we trust, by the assistance of the distinguished scholars he has gathered round him, be carried in due time to a happy completion.'

Professor E. HARTY, Inaugural Lecture in the University of Freiburg, 1887.

'Die allgemeine vergleichende Religionswissenschaft datirt von jenem grossartigen, in seiner Art einzig dastehenden Unternehmen, zu welchem auf Anregung Max Müllers im Jahre 1874 auf dem internationalen Orientalistencongress in London der Grundstein gelegt worden war, die Übersetzung der heiligen Bücher des Ostens' (the Sacred Books of the East).

The Hon. ALBERT S. G. CANNING, 'Words on Existing Religions.'

'The recent publication of the "Sacred Books of the East" in English is surely a great event in the annals of theological literature.'

OXFORD

AT THE CLARENDON PRESS

LONDON: HENRY FROWDE

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS WAREHOUSE, AMEN CORNER, E.C.

FIRST SERIES.

VOL. I. The Upanishads.

Translated by F. MAX MÜLLER. Part I. The Khândogya-upanishad, The Talavakâra-upanishad, The Aitareya-âranyaka, The Kaushitaki-brâhmana-upanishad, and The Vâgasaneyi-samhitâ-upanishad. Second Edition. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

The Upanishads contain the philosophy of the Veda. They have become the foundation of the later Vedânta doctrines, and indirectly of Buddhism. Schopenhauer, speaking of the Upanishads, says: 'In the whole world there is no study so beneficial and so elevating as that of the Upanishads. It has been the solace of my life, it will be the solace of my death.'

[See also Vol. XV.]

VOL. II. The Sacred Laws of the Âryas,

As taught in the Schools of Âpastamba, Gautama, Vâsishtha, and Baudhâya. Translated by GEORG BÖHLER. Part I. Âpastamba and Gautama. Second Edition. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

The Sacred Laws of the Âryas contain the original treatises on which the Laws of Manu and other lawgivers were founded.

[See also Vol. XIV.]

VOL. III. The Sacred Books of China.

The Texts of Confucianism. Translated by JAMES LEGGE. Part I. The Shû King, The Religious Portions of the Shih King, and The Hsiâo King. Second Edition. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

Confucius was a collector of ancient traditions, not the founder of a new religion. As he lived in the sixth and fifth centuries B. C. his works are of unique interest for the study of Ethology.

[See also Vols. XVI, XXVII, XXVIII, XXXIX, and XL.]

VOL. IV. The Zend-Avesta.

Translated by JAMES DARMESTETER. Part I. The Vendidad. Second Edition. 8vo, cloth, 14s.

The Zend-Avesta contains the relics of what was the religion of Cyrus, Darius, and Xerxes. It forms to the present day the sacred book of the Parsis, the so-called fire-worshippers.

[See also Vols. XXIII and XXXI.]

VOL. V. Pahlavi Texts.

Translated by E. W. WEST. Part I. The Bundahis, Bahman Yast, and Shâyast lâ-shâyast. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

The Pahlavi Texts comprise the theological literature of the revival of Zoroaster's religion, beginning with the Sassanian dynasty. They are important for a study of Gnosticism.

[See also Vols. XVIII, XXIV, XXXVII, and XLVII.]

VOLS. VI AND IX. The Qur'ân.

Parts I and II. Translated by E. H. PALMER. Second Edition. 8vo, cloth, 21s.

This translation, carried out according to his own peculiar views of the origin of the Qur'ân, was the last great work of E. H. Palmer, before he was murdered in Egypt.

VOL. VII. The Institutes of Vishnu.

Translated by JULIUS JOLLY. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

A collection of legal aphorisms, closely connected with one of the oldest Vedic schools, the Kathas, but considerably added to in later time. Of importance for a critical study of the Laws of Manu.

VOL. VIII. The Bhagavadgîtâ, with The Sanatsugâtîya, and The Anugîtâ.

Translated by KÂSHINÂTH TRIMBAK TELANG. Second Edition. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

The earliest philosophical and religious poem of India. It has been paraphrased in Arnold's 'Song Celestial.'

VOL. X. The Dhammapada,

Translated from Pâli by F. MAX MÜLLER; and

The Sutta-Nipâta,

Translated from Pâli by V. FAUSBÖLL; being Canonical Books of the Buddhists. Second Edition. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

The Dhammapada contains the quintessence of Buddhist morality. The Sutta-Nipâta gives the authentic teaching of Buddha on some of the fundamental principles of religion.

VOL. XI. Buddhist Suttas.

Translated from Pāli by T. W. RHYS DAVIDS. 1. The Mahā-parinibbāna Suttanta; 2. The Dhamma-kakka-ppavattana Sutta. 3. The Teviggā Suttanta; 4. The Ākaṅkheyya Sutta; 5. The Ketokhila Sutta; 6. The Mahā-sudassana Suttanta; 7. The Sabbāsava Sutta. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

A collection of the most important religious, moral, and philosophical discourses taken from the sacred canon of the Buddhists.

VOL. XII. The Satapatha-Brāhmaṇa, according to the Text of the Mādhyandina School.

Translated by JULIUS EGGELING. Part I. Books I and II. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

A minute account of the sacrificial ceremonies of the Vedic age. It contains the earliest account of the Deluge in India.

[See also Vols. XXVI, XLI, XLIII, and XLIV.]

VOL. XIII. Vinaya Texts.

Translated from the Pāli by T. W. RHYS DAVIDS and HERMANN OLDENBERG. Part I. The Pātimokkha. The Mahāvagga, I-IV. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

The Vinaya Texts give for the first time a translation of the moral code of the Buddhist religion as settled in the third century B. C.

[See also Vols. XVII and XX.]

VOL. XIV. The Sacred Laws of the Āryas,

As taught in the Schools of Āpastamba, Gautama, Vāsishṭha, and Baudhāyana. Translated by GEORG BÜHLER. Part II. Vāsishṭha and Baudhāyana. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

VOL. XV. The Upanishads.

Translated by F. MAX MÜLLER. Part II. The Kaṭha-upanishad, The Mundaka-upanishad, The Taittirīyaka-upanishad, The Brihadāraṇyaka-upanishad, The Svetāsvatara-upanishad, The Prasṇa-upanishad, and The Maitrāyaṇa-brāhmaṇa-upanishad. Second Edition. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

VOL. XVI. The Sacred Books of China.

The Texts of Confucianism. Translated by JAMES LEGGE. Part II. The Yī King. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

[See also Vols. XXVII, XXVIII.]

VOL. XVII. Vinaya Texts.

Translated from the Pāli by T. W. RHYS DAVIDS and HERMANN OLDENBERG. Part II. The Mahāvagga, V-X. The Kullavagga, I-III. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

VOL. XVIII. Pahlavi Texts.

Translated by E. W. WEST. Part II. The Dādistan-i Dīnik and The Epistles of Mānuskthar. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

VOL. XIX. The Fo-sho-hing-tsan-king.

A Life of Buddha by Asvaghosha Bodhisattva, translated from Sanskrit into Chinese by Dharmaraksha, A.D. 420, and from Chinese into English by SAMUEL BEAL. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

This life of Buddha was translated from Sanskrit into Chinese, A.D. 420. It contains many legends, some of which show a certain similarity to the Evangelium infantiae, &c.

VOL. XX. Vinaya Texts.

Translated from the Pāli by T. W. RHYS DAVIDS and HERMANN OLDENBERG. Part III. The Kullavagga, IV-XII. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

VOL. XXI. The Saddharma-pundarīka; or, The Lotus of the True Law.

Translated by H. KERN. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

'The Lotus of the True Law,' a canonical book of the Northern Buddhists, translated from Sanskrit. There is a Chinese translation of this book which was finished as early as the year 286 A.D.

VOL. XXII. Gaina-Sūtras.

Translated from Prākṛit by HERMANN JACOBI. Part I. The Ātārāṅga-Sūtra and The Kalpa-Sūtra. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

The religion of the Gāinas was founded by a contemporary of Buddha. It still counts numerous adherents in India, while there are no Buddhists left in India proper.

[See Vol. XLV.]

VOL. XXIII. The Zend-Avesta.

Translated by JAMES DARMESTETER. Part II. The Sīrōzahs, Yasts, and Nyāyis. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

VOL. XXIV. Pahlavi Texts.

Translated by E. W. WEST. Part III. Dīnā-i Mainōg-Khirad, Sikand-gūmāntk Vigār, and Sad Dar. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

SECOND SERIES.

VOL. XXV. Manu.

Translated by GEORG BÜHLER. 8vo, cloth, 21s.

This translation is founded on that of Sir William Jones, which has been carefully revised and corrected with the help of seven native Commentaries. An Appendix contains all the quotations from Manu which are found in the Hindu Law-books, translated for the use of the Law Courts in India. Another Appendix gives a synopsis of parallel passages from the six Dharma-sūtras, the other Smritis, the Upanishads, the Mahābhārata, &c.

VOL. XXVI. The Satapatha-Brāhmaṇa.

Translated by JULIUS EGGELING. Part II. Books III and IV. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

VOLS. XXVII AND XXVIII. The Sacred Books of China.

The Texts of Confucianism. Translated by JAMES LEGGE. Parts III and IV. The Lǐ Kǐ, or Collection of Treatises on the Rules of Propriety, or Ceremonial Usages. 8vo, cloth, 25s.

VOL. XXIX. The Gṛhya-Sūtras, Rules of Vedic Domestic Ceremonies.

Part I. Sāṅkhāyana, Āśvalāyana, Pāraskara, Khādīra. Translated by HERMANN OLDENBERG. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

VOL. XXX. The Gṛhya-Sūtras, Rules of Vedic Domestic Ceremonies.

Part II. Gobhila, Hiranyakesin, Āpastamba. Translated by HERMANN OLDENBERG. Āpastamba, Yagnī-paribhāṣā-sūtras. Translated by F. MAX MÜLLER. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

These rules of Domestic Ceremonies describe the home life of the ancient Āryas with a completeness and accuracy unmatched in any other literature. Some of these rules have been incorporated in the ancient Law-books.

VOL. XXXI. The Zend-Avesta.

Part III. The Yasna, Visparad, Āfrīnagān, Gāhs, and Miscellaneous Fragments. Translated by L. H. MILLS. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

VOL. XXXII. Vedic Hymns.

Translated by F. MAX MÜLLER. Part I. 8vo, cloth, 18s. 6d.

[See also Vol. XLVI.]

VOL. XXXIII. The Minor Law-books.

Translated by JULIUS JOLLY. Part I. Nārada, Brīhaspati. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

- VOL. XXXIV. The Vedānta-Sûtras, with the Commentary by Saṅkarācārya. Part I.
Translated by G. THIBAUT. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.
[See also Vols. XXXVIII and XLVIII.]
- VOLS. XXXV AND XXXVI. The Questions of King Milinda.
Translated from the Pāli by T. W. RHYS DAVIDS. Part I. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d. Part II. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.
- VOL. XXXVII. Pahlavi Texts.
Translated by E. W. WEST. Part IV. The Contents of the Nasks, as stated in the Eighth and Ninth Books of the Dñkard. 15s.
- VOL. XXXVIII. The Vedānta-Sûtras. Part II. 8vo, cloth, with full Index to both Parts, 12s. 6d.
- VOLS. XXXIX AND XL. The Sacred Books of China. The Texts of Taoism. Translated by JAMES LEGGE. 8vo, cloth, 21s.
- VOL. XLI. The Satapatha - Brāhmaṇa. Part III.
Translated by JULIUS EGGELING. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.
- VOL. XLII. Hymns of the Atharva-veda.
Translated by M. BLOOMFIELD. 8vo, cloth, 21s.
- VOL. XLIII. The Satapatha-Brāhmaṇa.
Translated by JULIUS EGGELING. Part IV. Books VIII, IX, and X. 12s. 6d.
- VOL. XLIV. The Satapatha-Brāhmaṇa.
Translated by JULIUS EGGELING. Part V. Books XI, XII, XIII, and XIV. 18s. 6d.
- VOL. XLV. The Gaina-Sûtras.
Translated from Prakṛit, by HERMANN JACOBI. Part II. The Uttarādhyayana Sûtra, The Sûtrakṛitāṅga Sûtra. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.
- VOL. XLVI. Vedic Hymns. Part II. 8vo, cloth, 14s.
- VOL. XLVII. Pahlavi Texts.
Translated by E. W. WEST. Part V. Marvels of Zoroastrianism. 8s. 6d.
- VOL. XLVIII. The Vedānta-Sûtras, Part III, with Rāmānuga's Sribhāshya.
Translated by G. THIBAUT. 8vo, cloth, 25s.
- VOL. XLIX. Buddhist Mahāyāna Texts. Buddhacarita, translated by E. B. COWELL. Sukhāvastī-vyūha, Vagrathek-dikā, &c., translated by F. MAX MÜLLER. Amitāyur-Dhyāna-Sûtra, translated by J. TAKAKUSU. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

ANECDOTA OXONIENSIA.

ARYAN SERIES.

Buddhist Texts from Japan. I. Vagrakkhedikā; The Diamond-Cutter.

Edited by F. MAX MÜLLER, M.A. Small 4to, 3s. 6d.

One of the most famous metaphysical treatises of the Mahāyāna Buddhists.

Buddhist Texts from Japan. II. Sukhāvati-Vyūha: Description of Sukhāvati, the Land of Bliss.

Edited by F. MAX MÜLLER, M.A., and BUNYIU NANJIO. With two Appendices: (1) Text and Translation of Saṅghavarman's Chinese Version of the Poetical Portions of the Sukhāvati-Vyūha; (2) Sanskrit Text of the Smaller Sukhāvati-Vyūha. Small 4to, 7s. 6d.

The editio princeps of the Sacred Book of one of the largest and most influential sects of Buddhism, numbering more than ten millions of followers in Japan alone.

Buddhist Texts from Japan. III. The Ancient Palm-Leaves containing the Praṇā-Pāramitā-Hridaya-Sūtra and the Uśnisha-Viṣaya-Dhāraṇī.

Edited by F. MAX MÜLLER, M.A., and BUNYIU NANJIO, M.A. With an Appendix by G. BÜHLER, C.I.E. With many Plates. Small 4to, 10s.

Contains facsimiles of the oldest Sanskrit MS. at present known.

Dharma-Saṃgraha, an Ancient Collection of Buddhist Technical Terms.

Prepared for publication by KENJIU KASAWARA, a Buddhist Priest from Japan, and, after his death, edited by F. MAX MÜLLER and H. WENZEL. Small 4to, 7s. 6d.

Kātyāyana's Sarvānukramanī of the Rīgveda.

With Extracts from Śaṅkara's Commentary entitled Vedārthadīpikā. Edited by A. A. MACDONELL, M.A., Ph.D. 10s.

The Buddha-Karita of Asvaghosha.

Edited, from three MSS., by E. B. COWELL, M.A. 12s. 6d.

The Mantrapāṭha, or the Prayer Book of the Āpa-stambins.

Edited, together with the Commentary of Haradatta, and translated by M. WINTERITZ, Ph.D. First Part. Introduction, Sanskrit Text, Varietas Lectionis, and Appendices. Small quarto, 10s. 6d.

OXFORD

AT THE CLARENDON PRESS

LONDON: HENRY FROWDE

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS WAREHOUSE, AMEN CORNER, E.C.

3 2044 024 453 532

A FINE IS INCURRED IF THIS BOOK IS NOT RETURNED TO THE LIBRARY ON OR BEFORE THE LAST DATE STAMPED BELOW.

CANCELLED
APR 28 1978

WIDENER
MAY 30 1995
CANCELLED

CANCELLED
MAR 8 1978

32

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

REESE LIBRARY
OF THE
UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA.

Received July 1881.

Accessions No. 15358

Shelf No. 685
M765
v. 7

THE SACRED BOOKS OF THE EAST

London

HENRY FROWDE

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS WAREHOUSE

7 PATERNOSTER ROW

THE
SACRED BOOKS OF THE EAST

TRANSLATED

BY VARIOUS ORIENTAL SCHOLARS

AND EDITED BY

F. MAX MÜLLER

VOL. IX

Orford

AT THE CLARENDON PRESS

1880

[All rights reserved]

15358

6

THE QUR'ÂN

TRANSLATED BY

E. H. PALMER

PART II

CHAPTERS XVII TO CXIV

Oxford

AT THE CLARENDON PRESS

1880

[All rights reserved]

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
XVII. The Chapter of the Night Journey (Mecca) . . .	1
XVIII. The Chapter of the Cave (Mecca) . . .	13
XIX. The Chapter of Mary (Mecca) . . .	27
XX. The Chapter of T. H. (Mecca) . . .	34
XXI. The Chapter of the Prophets (Mecca) . . .	46
XXII. The Chapter of the Pilgrimage (Mecca) . . .	56
XXIII. The Chapter of Believers (Mecca) . . .	65
XXIV. The Chapter of Light (Medinah) . . .	73
XXV. The Chapter of the Discrimination (Mecca) . . .	83
XXVI. The Chapter of the Poets (Mecca) . . .	90
XXVII. The Chapter of the Ant (Mecca) . . .	99
XXVIII. The Chapter of the Story (Mecca) . . .	107
XXIX. The Chapter of the Spider (Mecca) . . .	117
XXX. The Chapter of the Greeks (Mecca) . . .	124
XXXI. The Chapter of Loqmân (Mecca) . . .	131
XXXII. The Chapter of Adoration (Mecca) . . .	135
XXXIII. The Chapter of the Confederates (Medinah) . . .	138
XXXIV. The Chapter of Sheba (Mecca) . . .	150
XXXV. The Chapter of the Angels, or, the Creator (Mecca)	157
XXXVI. The Chapter of Y. S. (Mecca) . . .	162
XXXVII. The Chapter of the Ranged (Mecca) . . .	168
XXXVIII. The Chapter of S. (Mecca) . . .	175
XXXIX. The Chapter of the Troops (Mecca) . . .	182
XL. The Chapter of the Believer (Mecca) . . .	190
XLI. The Chapter 'Detailed' (Mecca) . . .	199
XLII. The Chapter of Counsel (Mecca) . . .	205

	PAGE
XLIII. The Chapter of Gilding (Mecca) . . .	211
XLIV. The Chapter of Smoke (Mecca) . . .	218
XLV. The Chapter of the Kneeling (Mecca) . . .	220
XLVI. The Chapter of El A'hqâf (Mecca) . . .	224
XLVII. The Chapter of Mohammed, also called 'Fight' (Medînah)	229
XLVIII. The Chapter of Victory (Medînah) . . .	233
XLIX. The Chapter of the Inner Chambers (Medînah)	238
L. The Chapter of Q. (Mecca)	241
LI. The Chapter of the Scatterers (Mecca) . . .	245
LII. The Chapter of the Mount (Mecca)	248
LIII. The Chapter of the Star (Mecca)	251
LIV. The Chapter of the Moon (Mecca)	254
LV. The Chapter of the Merciful (Mecca) . . .	258
LVI. The Chapter of the Inevitable (Mecca) . . .	262
LVII. The Chapter of Iron (Medînah)	266
LVIII. The Chapter of the Wrangler (Medînah) . . .	270
LIX. The Chapter of the Emigration (Medînah) . . .	273
LX. The Chapter of the Tried (Medînah)	277
LXI. The Chapter of the Ranks (Mecca)	280
LXII. The Chapter of the Congregation (Medînah) . . .	282
LXIII. The Chapter of the Hypocrites (Medînah) . . .	284
LXIV. The Chapter of Cheating (place of origin doubtful)	286
LXV. The Chapter of Divorce (Medînah)	288
LXVI. The Chapter of Prohibition (Medînah) . . .	290
LXVII. The Chapter of the Kingdom (Mecca)	292
LXVIII. The Chapter of the Pen, also called Nûn (Mecca)	295
LXIX. The Chapter of the Infallible (Mecca) . . .	298
LXX. The Chapter of the Ascents (Mecca)	300
LXXI. The Chapter of Noah (Mecca)	302
LXXII. The Chapter of the Ginn (Mecca)	304
LXXIII. The Chapter of the Enwrapped (Mecca) . . .	306
LXXIV. The Chapter of the Covered (Mecca) . . .	308
LXXV. The Chapter of the Resurrection (Mecca) . . .	310

	PAGE
LXXVI. The Chapter of Man (Mecca) . . .	312
LXXVII. The Chapter of those Sent (Mecca) . . .	314
LXXVIII. The Chapter of the Information (Mecca) . . .	316
LXXIX. The Chapter of those who Tear Out (Mecca) . . .	318
LXXX. The Chapter 'He Frowned' (Mecca) . . .	320
LXXXI. The Chapter of the Folding up (Mecca) . . .	321
LXXXII. The Chapter of the Cleaving asunder (Mecca) . . .	323
LXXXIII. The Chapter of those who give short Weight (Mecca)	323
LXXXIV. The Chapter of the Rending asunder (Mecca) . . .	325
LXXXV. The Chapter of the Zodiacal Signs (Mecca) . . .	326
LXXXVI. The Chapter of the Night Star (Mecca) . . .	327
LXXXVII. The Chapter of the Most High (Mecca) . . .	328
LXXXVIII. The Chapter of the Overwhelming (Mecca) . . .	329
LXXXIX. The Chapter of the Dawn (Mecca) . . .	330
XC. The Chapter of the Land (Mecca) . . .	332
XCI. The Chapter of the Sun (Mecca) . . .	333
XCII. The Chapter of the Night (Mecca) . . .	333
XCIII. The Chapter of the Forenoon (Mecca) . . .	334
XCIV. The Chapter of 'Have we not expanded?' (Mecca)	335
XCV. The Chapter of the Fig (place of origin doubtful)	335
XCVI. The Chapter of Congealed Blood (Mecca) . . .	336
XCVII. The Chapter of 'Power' (place of origin doubtful)	337
XCVIII. The Chapter of the Manifest Sign (place of origin doubtful)	337
XCIX. The Chapter of the Earthquake (place of origin doubtful)	338
C. The Chapter of the Chargers (Mecca) . . .	339
CI. The Chapter of the Smiting (Mecca) . . .	339
CII. The Chapter of the Contention about Numbers (place of origin doubtful)	340

	PAGE
CIII. The Chapter of the Afternoon (Mecca) . . .	340
CIV. The Chapter of the Backbiter (Mecca) . . .	341
CV. The Chapter of the Elephant (Mecca) . . .	341
CVI. The Chapter of the Qurâis (Mecca) . . .	342
CVII. The Chapter of 'Necessaries' (place of origin doubtful)	342
CVIII. The Chapter of El Kâurhar (Mecca) . . .	342
CIX. The Chapter of the Misbelievers (Mecca) . . .	343
CX. The Chapter of Help (Mecca)	343
CXI. The Chapter of Abu Laheb (Mecca)	343
CXII. The Chapter of Unity (place of origin doubtful) .	344
CXIII. The Chapter of the Daybreak (place of origin doubtful)	344
CXIV. The Chapter of Men (place of origin doubtful) .	345
Index	347

Transliteration of Oriental Alphabets adopted for the Trans- lations of the Sacred Books of the East	359
---	-----

THE QUR'ÂN.

THE CHAPTER OF THE NIGHT JOURNEY¹.

(XVII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Celebrated be the praises of Him who took His servant a journey by night from the Sacred Mosque² to the Remote Mosque³, the precinct of which we have blessed, to show him of our signs! verily, He both hears and looks.

And we gave Moses the Book and made it a guidance to the children of Israel: 'Take ye to no guardian but me.'

Seed of those we bore with Noah (in the ark)! verily, he was a thankful servant!

And we decreed to the children of Israel in the Book, 'Ye shall verily do evil in the earth twice⁴, and ye shall rise to a great height (of pride).'

¹ Also called 'The Children of Israel.' The subject of Mohammed's miraculous journey in one night from Mecca to Jerusalem, and his ascent into heaven, will be found discussed in the Introduction.

² The Kaabah at Mecca.

³ The Temple at Jerusalem.

⁴ The Mohammedan commentators interpret this as referring the first to either Goliath, Sennacherib, or Nebuchadnezzar, and the latter to a second Persian invasion. The two sins committed by the Jews, and for which these punishments were threatened and executed, were, first, the murder of Isaiah and the imprisonment of Jeremiah, and the second, the murder of John the Baptist. Mohammedan views of ancient history are, however, vague.

[5] And when the threat for the first (sin) of the two came, we sent over them servants of ours, endued with violence, and they searched inside your houses; and it was an accomplished threat.

Then we rallied you once more against them, and aided you with wealth and sons, and made you a numerous band.

'If ye do well, ye will do well to your own souls; and if ye do ill, it is against them!

'And when the threat for the last came¹—to harm your faces and to enter the mosque as they entered it the first time, and to destroy what they had got the upper-hand over with utter destruction.'

It may be that thy Lord will have mercy on you;—but if ye return we will return, and we have made hell a prison for the misbelievers.

Verily, this Qur'ân guides to the straightest path, and gives the glad tidings to the believers [10] who do aright that for them is a great hire; and that for those who believe not in the hereafter, we have prepared a mighty woe.

Man prays for evil as he prays for good; and man was ever hasty.

We made the night and the day two signs; and we blot out the sign of the night and make the sign of the day visible, that ye may seek after plenty from your Lord, and that ye may number the years and the reckoning; and we have detailed everything in detail.

And every man's augury² have we fastened on his neck; and we will bring forth for him on the resurrection day a book offered to him wide open. [15] 'Read thy book, thou art accountant enough against thyself to-day!'

¹ Supply, 'we sent foes.'

² I. e. 'fortune' or 'fate,' literally, 'bird;' the Arabs, like the ancient Romans, having been used to practise divination from the flight of birds.

He who accepts guidance, accepts it only for his own soul: and he who errs, errs only against it; nor shall one burdened soul bear the burden of another.

Nor would we punish until we had sent an apostle. And when we desired to destroy a city we bade¹ the opulent ones thereof; and they wrought abomination therein; and its due sentence was pronounced; and we destroyed it with utter destruction.

How many generations have we destroyed after Noah! but thy Lord of the sins of his servant is well aware, and sees enough.

Whoso is desirous of this life that hastens away, we will hasten on for him therein what we please,—for whom we please. Then we will make hell for him to broil in—despised and outcast.

[20] But whoso desires the next life, and strives for it and is a believer—these, their striving shall be gratefully received.

To all—these and those—will we extend the gifts of thy Lord; for the gifts of thy Lord are not restricted.

See how we have preferred some of them over others, but in the next life are greater degrees and greater preference.

Put not with God other gods, or thou wilt sit despised and forsaken.

Thy Lord has decreed that ye shall not serve other than Him; and kindness to one's parents, whether one or both of them reach old age with thee; and say not to them, 'Fie!' and do not grumble at them, but speak to them a generous speech. [25] And lower to them the wing of humility out of compassion, and say, 'O Lord! have compassion on them as they brought me up when I was little!' Your Lord knows best what is in your souls if ye be righteous, and, verily, He is forgiving unto those who come back penitent.

¹ Bade them obey the Apostle.

And give thy kinsman his due and the poor and the son of the road; and waste not wastefully, for the wasteful were ever the devil's brothers; and the devil is ever ungrateful to his Lord.

[30] But if thou dost turn away from them to seek after mercy from thy Lord¹, which thou hopest for, then speak to them an easy speech.

Make not thy hand fettered to thy neck, nor yet spread it out quite open, lest thou shouldst have to sit down blamed and straitened in means. Verily, thy Lord spreads out provision to whomsoever He will or He doles it out. Verily, He is ever well aware of and sees his servants.

And slay not your children² for fear of poverty; we will provide for them; beware! for to slay them is ever a great sin!

And draw not near to fornication; verily, it is ever an abomination, and evil is the way thereof.

[35] And slay not the soul that God has forbidden you, except for just cause; for he who is slain unjustly we have given his next of kin authority; yet let him not exceed in slaying; verily, he is ever helped.

¹ I. e. if you are compelled to leave them in order to seek your livelihood; or if your present means are insufficient to enable you to relieve others.

² See Part I, p. 256, note 2.

And draw not near to the wealth of the orphan, save to improve it, until he reaches the age of puberty, and fulfil your compacts; verily, a compact is ever enquired of.

And give full measure when ye measure out, and weigh with a right balance; that is better and a fairer determination.

And do not pursue that of which thou hast no knowledge; verily, the hearing, the sight, and the heart, all of these shall be enquired of.

And walk not on the earth proudly; verily, thou canst not cleave the earth, and thou shalt not reach the mountains in height.

[40] All this is ever evil in the sight of your Lord and abhorred.

That is something of what thy Lord has inspired thee with of wisdom; do not then put with God other gods, or thou wilt be thrown into hell reproached and outcast. What! has your Lord chosen to give you sons, and shall He take for Himself females from among the angels? verily, ye are speaking a mighty speech.

Now have we turned it in various ways in this Qur'ân, so let them bear in mind; but it will only increase them in aversion.

Say, 'Were there with Him other gods, as ye say, then would they seek a way against the Lord of the throne.'

[45] Celebrated be His praises, and exalted be He above what they say with a great exaltation!

The seven heavens and the earth celebrate His praises, and all who therein are; nor is there aught but what celebrates His praise: but ye cannot understand their celebration;—verily, He is clement and forgiving.

And when thou readest the Qur'ân we place between thee and those who believe not in the hereafter a covering veil. And we place covers upon their hearts, lest they should understand, and dulness in their ears.

And when thou dost mention in the Qur'ân thy Lord by Himself they turn their backs in aversion.

[50] We know best for what they listen when they listen to thee; and when they whisper apart—when the wrong-doers say, 'Ye only follow a man enchanted.'

Behold, how they strike out for you parables, and err, and cannot find the way!

They say, 'What! when we have become bones and rubbish are we to be raised up a new creature?' Say, 'Be ye stones, or iron, or a creature, the greatest your breasts can conceive—!' Then they shall say, 'Who is to restore us?' Say, 'He who originated you at first;' and they will wag their heads and say, 'When will that be?' Say, 'It may, perhaps, be nigh.'

The day when He shall call on you and ye shall answer with praise to Him, and they will think that they have tarried but a little.

[55] And say to my servants that they speak in a kind way¹; verily, Satan makes ill-will between them; verily, Satan was ever unto man an open foe.

Your Lord knows you best; if He please He will have mercy upon you, or if He please He will ¹ I.e. they are not to provoke the idolaters by speaking too roughly to them so as to exasperate them.

torment you: but we have not sent thee to take charge of them.

And thy Lord best knows who is in the heavens and the earth; we did prefer some of the prophets over the others, and to David did we give the Psalms.

Say, 'Call on those whom ye pretend other than God;' but they shall not have the power to remove distress from you, nor to turn it off.

Those on whom they call¹, seek themselves for a means of approaching their Lord, (to see) which of them is nearest: and they hope for His mercy and they fear His torment; verily, the torment of thy Lord is a thing to beware of.

[60] There is no city but we will destroy it before the day of judgment, or torment it with keen torment;—that is in the Book inscribed.

Naught hindered us from sending thee with signs, save that those of yore said they were lies; so we gave Thamûd the visible she-camel, but they treated her unjustly! for we do not send (any one) with signs save to make men fear.

And when we said to thee, 'Verily, thy Lord encompasses men!' and we made the vision which we showed thee only a cause of sedition unto men, and the cursed tree² as well; for we will frighten them, but it will only increase them in great rebellion.

¹ Sale interprets this to mean 'the angels and prophets.' Rodwell remarks that it is an 'obvious allusion to the saint worship of the Christians.' As, however, precisely the same expression is used elsewhere in the Qur'ân for the false gods of the Arabs, and the existence of those ginn and angels whom they associated with God is constantly recognised, their divinity only being denied, I prefer to follow the Moslem commentators, and refer the passage to the gods of the Arabian pantheon at Mecca; cf. Part I, p. 127, note 2.

² The Zaqqûm; see Chapter XXXVII, verse 60. The vision

And when we said to the angels, 'Adore Adam; and they adored, save Iblîs, who said, 'Am I to adore one whom Thou hast created out of clay?'

Said he, 'Dost thou see now? this one whom Thou hast honoured above me, verily, if Thou shouldst respite me until the resurrection day, I will of a surety utterly destroy his seed except a few.'

[65] Said He, 'Begone! and whoso of them follows thee—verily, hell is your recompense, an ample recompense. Entice away whomsoever of them thou canst with thy voice; and bear down upon them with thy horse and with thy foot; and share with them in their wealth and their children; and promise them,—but Satan promises them naught but deceit. Verily, my servants, thou hast no authority over them; thy Lord is guardian enough over them!'

It is your Lord who drives the ships for you in the sea that ye may seek after plenty from Him; verily, He is ever merciful to you. And when distress touches you in the sea, those whom ye call on, except Him, stray away from you; but when He has brought you safe to shore, ye turn away; for man is ever ungrateful.

[70] Are ye sure that He will not cleave with you the side of the shore, or send against you a heavy sand-storm? then ye will find no guardian for yourselves.

Or are ye sure that He will not send you back therein another time, and send against you a violent wind, and drown you for your misbelief? then ye will find for yourselves no protector against us.

referred to is the night journey to heaven, although those commentators who believe this to have been an actual fact suppose another vision to account for this passage.

But we have been gracious to the children of Adam, and we have borne them by land and sea, and have provided them with good things, and have preferred them over many that we have created.

┐ The day when we will call all men by their high priest; and he whose book is given in his right hand—these shall read their book, nor shall they be wronged a straw. But he who in this life is blind shall be blind in the next too, and err farther from the way. ┘

[75] They had well-nigh beguiled thee from what we inspired thee with, that thou shouldst forge against us something else, and then they would have taken thee for a friend; and had it not been that we stablished thee, thou wouldst have well-nigh leant towards them a little: then would we have made thee taste of torment both of life and death, then thou wouldst not have found against us any helper¹.

And they well-nigh enticed thee away from the land, to turn thee out therefrom; but then—they should not have tarried after thee except a little.

[This is] the course of those of our prophets whom we have sent before thee; and thou shalt find no change in our course.

[80] Be thou steadfast in prayer from the declining of the sun until the dusk of the night, and the reading of the dawn; verily, the reading of the dawn is ever testified to.

¹ The commentators say that this refers to a treaty proposed by the tribe of THaqîf, who insisted, as a condition of their submission, that they should be exempt from the more irksome duties of Muslims, and should be allowed to retain their idol Allât for a certain time, and that their territory should be considered sacred, like that of Mecca.

And for the night, watch thou therein as an extra service. It may be that thy Lord will raise thee to a laudable station.

And say, 'O my Lord! make me enter with a just entry; and make me come forth with a just coming forth; and grant me from Thee authority to aid.'

And say, 'Truth has come, and falsehood has vanished! verily, falsehood is transient.'

And we will send down of the Qur'ân that which is a healing and a mercy to the believers, but it will only increase the wrong-doers in loss.

[85] And when we favour man he turns away and retires aside, but when evil touches him he is ever in despair. Say, 'Every one acts after his own manner, but your Lord knows best who is most guided in the way.'

They will ask thee of the spirit¹. Say, 'The spirit comes at the bidding of my Lord, and ye are given but a little knowledge thereof.'

If we had wished we would have taken away that with which we have inspired thee; then thou wouldst have found no guardian against us, unless by a mercy from thy Lord; verily, His grace towards thee is great!

[90] Say, 'If mankind and ginns united together to bring the like of this Qur'ân, they could not bring the like, though they should back each other up!'

We have turned about for men in this Qur'ân every parable; but most men refuse to accept it, save ungratefully.

¹ According to some, the soul generally; but according to others, and more probably, the angel Gabriel as the agent of revelation.

And they say, 'We will by no means believe in thee, until there gush forth for thee a fountain from the earth ; or there be made for thee a garden of palms and grapes, and rivers come gushing out amidst them ; or thou make the sky to fall down upon us in pieces ; or thou bring us God and the angels before us ; [95] or there be made for thee a house of gold ; or thou climb up into the heaven ; and even then we will not believe in thy climbing there, until thou send down on us a book that we may read !'

Say, 'Celebrated be the praises of my Lord ! was I aught but a mortal apostle ?'

Naught prohibited men from believing when the guidance came to them, save their saying, 'God has sent a mortal for an apostle.'

Say, 'Were there angels on the earth walking in quiet, we had surely sent them an angel as an apostle.'

Say, 'God is witness enough between me and you ; verily, He is ever of His servants well aware, and sees.'

He whom God guides, he is guided indeed ; and he whom God leads astray, thou shalt never find patrons for them beside Him ; and we will gather them upon the resurrection day upon their faces, blind, and dumb, and deaf ; their resort is hell ; whenever it grows dull we will give them another blaze !

[100] That is their reward for that they disbelieved in our signs, and said, 'What ! when we are bones and rubbish, shall we then be raised up a new creation ?'

Could they not see that God who created the heavens and the earth is able to create the like of them, and to set for them an appointed time ; there is no doubt therein, yet the wrong-doers refuse to accept it, save ungratefully !

Say, 'Did ye control the treasures of the mercy of my Lord, then ye would hold them through fear of expending ; for man is ever niggardly !'

And we did bring Moses nine manifest signs ; then ask the children of Israel (about) when he came to them, and Pharaoh said to him, 'Verily, I think thee, O Moses ! enchanted.'

He said, 'Well didst thou know that none sent down these save the Lord of the heavens and the earth as visible signs ; and, verily, I think thee, O Pharaoh ! ruined.'

[105] And he desired to drive them out of the land ; but we drowned him and those with him, one and all.

And after him we said to the children of Israel, 'Dwell ye in the land ; and when the promise of the hereafter comes to pass, we will bring you in a mixed crowd (to judgment).

'In truth have we sent it down, and in truth has it come down ; and we have not sent thee as aught but a herald of glad tidings and a warner.

'And a Qur'ân which we have divided, that thou mayst read it to mankind leisurely, and we sent it down, sending it down ¹.

Say, 'Believe ye therein, or believe not ; verily, those who were given the knowledge before it, when it is read to them fall down upon their beards adoring ! and they say, "Celebrated be the praises of our Lord! verily, the promise of our Lord is ever fulfilled"—they fall down upon their beards weeping, and it increases their humility.'

¹ As occasion required.

[110] Say, 'Call on God, or call on the Merciful One, whichever ye may call on Him by; for His are the best of names¹.'

And do not say thy prayers openly, nor yet murmur them, but seek a way between these.

And say, 'Praise belongs to God, who has not taken to Himself a son, and has not had a partner in His kingdom, nor had a patron against (such) abasement.' And magnify Him greatly²!

THE CHAPTER OF THE CAVE
(XVIII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Praise belongs to God, who sent down to His servant the Book, and put no crookedness therein,—straight, to give warning of keen violence from Him; and to give the glad tidings to the believers, who do what is right, that for them is a goodly reward wherein they shall abide for ever and for ¹ The Arabs whom Mohammed addressed seem to have imagined that he meant by Allâh and Ar-ra'hmân (the Merciful One) two separate deities. The various epithets which are applied to God in the Qur'ân, such as 'kind,' 'seeing,' 'knowing,' &c., are called by the Muslims al 'asmâ'u 'Thusnâ, 'the best of names,' and are repeated in telling the beads of their rosary.

² This command is obeyed by the Muslims frequently pronouncing the phrase Allâhu akbar, especially as an expression of astonishment. It is the same expression as that used by the Egyptian women concerning Joseph, in Chapter XII, verse 31.

aye; and to give warning to those who say, 'God hath taken to Himself a son.'

They have no knowledge thereof, nor their fathers; a serious word it is that comes forth from their mouths! verily, they only speak a lie!

[5] Haply thou wilt grieve thyself to death for sorrow after them, if they believe not in this new revelation. Verily, we have made what is on the earth an ornament thereof, to try them, which of them is best in works; but, verily, we are going to make what is thereon bare soil.

Hast thou reckoned that the Fellows of the Cave and Er-raqm were a wonder amongst our signs¹?

When the youths resorted to the cave and said, 'O our Lord! bring us mercy from Thee, and dispose for us our affair aright!'

[10] And we struck their ears (with deafness) in the cave for a number of years. Then we raised them up again, that we might know which of the two crews² could best calculate the time of their tarrying. We will narrate to thee their story in truth. Verily, they were youths who believed in their Lord, and we added to their guidance, and we braced up their hearts, when they stood up and said, 'Our Lord is the Lord of the heavens and the earth, we will not call upon any god beside Him, for then we should have said an extravagant thing.

¹ This is the well-known story of the Seven Sleepers of Ephesus. What is meant by Er-raqm no one knows. The most generally accepted Mohammedan theory is that it was a dog belonging to the party; though some commentators take it to be the name of the valley or mountain in which the cave was situated; others again say that it was a metal plate inscribed with the name of the Sleepers.

² That is, the youths themselves or the people they met on their awakening.

These people of ours have taken to other gods beside Him. Though they do not bring any manifest authority for them. And who is more unjust than he who forges against God a lie?

[15] 'So when ye have gone apart from them and what they serve other than God, then resort ye to the cave. Our Lord will unfold His mercy to you, and will dispose for you your affair advantageously.'

And thou mightst have seen the sun when it rose decline from their cave towards the right hand, and when it set leave them on the left hand, while they were in the spacious part thereof. That is one of the signs of God. Whom God guides he is guided indeed, and whom He leads astray thou shalt surely find for him no patron to guide aright. Thou mightst have reckoned them waking though they were sleeping, as we turned them towards the right and towards the left; and their dog spreading out his fore-paws on the threshold. Hadst thou come suddenly upon them thou wouldst surely have turned and fled away from them, and wouldst surely have been filled by them with dread.

Thus did we raise them up that they might question each other. Spake a speaker amongst them, 'How long have ye tarried?' They said, 'We have tarried a day or part of a day.' They said, 'Your Lord knows best your tarrying; so send one of you with this coin of yours to the city, and let him look which of them has purest food, and let him bring you provision thereof; and let him be subtle and not let any one perceive you. Verily, they—should they perceive you—would stone you, or would force you back again unto their faith, and ye would never prosper then.'

[20] Thus did we make their people acquainted with their story, that they might know that God's promise is true; and that the Hour, there is no doubt concerning it. When they disputed amongst themselves concerning their affair, and said, 'Build a building over them, their Lord knows best about them;' and those who prevailed in their affair said, 'We will surely make a mosque over them.'

They will say, 'Three, and the fourth of them was their dog:' and they will say, 'Five, and the sixth of them was their dog:' guessing at the unseen: and they will say, 'Seven, and the eighth of them was their dog.' Say, 'My Lord knows best the number of them; none knows them but a few.'

Dispute not therefore concerning them save with a plain disputation, and ask not any one of them¹ concerning them.

And never say of anything, 'Verily, I am going to do that to-morrow,' except 'if God please;' and remember thy Lord when thou hast forgotten, and say, 'It may be that my Lord will guide me to what is nearer to the right than this².'

They tarried in their cave three hundred years and nine more. [25] Say, 'God knows best of their tarrying. His are the unseen things of the heavens and the earth—He can see! and hear³!'

¹ That is, the Christians.

² Mohammed being asked by the Jews concerning the number of the Seven Sleepers, had promised to bring them a revelation upon the subject on the morrow: this verse is a rebuke for his presumption.

³ This expression Sale takes to be ironical, and translates, 'make thou him to see and hear;' Rodwell renders it, 'look thou and hearken unto him:' both translators having missed both the force

They have no patron beside Him, nor does He let any one share in His judgment. So, recite what thou art inspired with of the Book of thy Lord; there is no changing His words; nor shalt thou ever find a refuge beside Him; and keep thyself patient, with those who call upon their Lord morning and evening, desiring His face; nor let thine eyes be turned from them, desiring the adornment of the life of this world; and obey not him¹ whose heart we have made heedless of remembrance of us, and who follows his lusts, for his affair is ever in advance (of the truth).

But say, 'The truth is from your Lord, so let him who will, believe; and let him who will, disbelieve.' Verily, we have prepared for the evildoers a fire, sheets of which shall encompass them; and if they cry for help, they shall be helped with water like molten brass, which shall roast their faces:—an ill drink and an evil couch!

Verily, those who believe and act aright,—verily, we will not waste the hire of him who does good works.

[30] These, for them are gardens of Eden; beneath them rivers flow; they shall be adorned therein with bracelets of gold, and shall wear green robes of silk, and of brocade; reclining therein on of the idiom and the explanation given by the commentators Al Bâidhâvî and Jalâlâin, to whom Sale refers. The meaning is that which I have given, and the idiom is equivalent to that which occurs in a passage of Harîrî, Maqâmah 3 (p. 30, De Sacy's first edition), akrim bihi, 'how noble it is!' abzar bihi being equivalent to mâ abzarahu, 'how observant He is!'

¹ Said to refer to Ommâiyet ibn 'Zâlf, who had requested Mohammed to give up his poorer followers to please the Qurâis; see Chapter VI, verse 52.

thrones;—pleasant is the reward, and goodly the couch!

Strike out for them a parable: Two men, for one of whom we made two gardens of grapes, and surrounded them with palms, and put corn between the two. Each of the two gardens brought forth its food and did not fail in aught. And we caused a river to gush forth amidst them; and he had fruit, and said unto his fellow, who was his next-door neighbour, 'I am more wealthy than thee, and mightier of household.'

And he went in unto his garden, having wronged himself: said he, 'I do not think that this will ever disappear; and I do not think that the hour is imminent; and if even I be sent back unto my Lord, I shall find a better one than it in exchange.'

[35] Said unto him his fellow, who was his next-door neighbour, 'Thou hast disbelieved in Him who created thee from earth, and then from a clot, then fashioned thee a man; but God, He is my Lord; nor will I associate any one with my Lord. Why couldst thou not have said, when thou didst go into thy garden, "What God pleases!¹ there is no power save in God,"—to look at, I am less than thee in wealth and children; but haply my Lord will give me something better than thy garden, and will send upon it thunder-claps from the sky, and it shall be on the morrow bare slippery soil; or on the morrow its water may be deeply sunk, so that thou canst not get thereat!'

[40] And his fruits were encompassed, and on the morrow he turned down the palms of his hands¹ for what he had spent thereon, for it was fallen down upon its trellises. And he said, 'Would that I had never associated any one with my Lord!' And he had not any party to help him beside God, nor was he helped. In such a case the patronage is God's, the true; He is best at rewarding and best at bringing to an issue.

¹ In the original Mâ sâ' allâh; this is the usual formula for expressing admiration among Muslims.

Strike out for them, too, a parable of the life of this world; like water which we send down from the sky, and the vegetation of the earth is mingled therewith;—and on the morrow it is dried up, and the winds scatter it; for God is powerful over all.

Wealth and children are an adornment of the life of this world; but enduring good works are better with thy Lord, as a recompense, and better as a hope.

┐ [45] And the day when we will move the mountains, and thou shalt see the (whole) earth stalking forth; and we will gather them, and will not leave one of them behind. Then shall they be presented to thy Lord in ranks.—Now have ye come to us as we created you at first! nay, but ye thought that we would never make our promise good┐

And the Book shall be placed², and thou shalt see the sinners in fear of what is in it; and they will say, 'Alas, for us! what ails this Book, it leaves neither small nor great things alone, without numbering them?' and they shall find present what they have done; and thy Lord will not wrong any one.

And when we said to the angels, 'Adore Adam,'

¹ I. e. wrung his hands.

² In the hand of each.

they adored him, save only Iblîs, who was of the ginn, who revolted from the bidding of his Lord. 'What! will ye then take him and his seed as patrons, rather than me, when they are foes of yours? bad for the wrong-doers is the exchange!'

I did not make them witnesses of the creation of the heavens and the earth, nor of the creation of themselves, nor did I take those who lead astray for my supporters.

[50] On the day when He shall say, 'Call ye my partners whom ye pretend:' and they shall call on them, but they shall not answer them; and we will set the vale of perdition between them; and the sinners shall see the fire, and shall think that they are going to fall therein, and shall find no escape therefrom. We have turned about in this Qur'ân for men every parable; but man is ever at most things a caviller.

Naught prevented men from believing when the guidance came to them, or from asking pardon of their Lord, except the coming on them of the course of those of yore, or the coming of the torment before their eyes¹.

We sent not prophets save as heralds of glad tidings and as warners; but those who misbelieve wrangle with vain speech to make void the truth therewith; and they take my signs and the warnings given them as a jest.

[55] Who is more unjust than he who, being reminded of the signs of his Lord, turns away therefrom, and forgets what his hands have done before? verily, we will place veils upon their hearts lest they should understand, and dulness in their ears!

¹ This passage is aimed at the Qurâis. The 'course of those of yore' is the punishment inflicted on the 'people of Noah, Lot,' &c. for similar acts of misbelief, and 'the torment' is said to refer to their losses at the battle of Bedr.

And if thou shouldst call them to the guidance, they will not be guided then for ever.

But thy Lord is forgiving, endowed with mercy; were He to punish them for what they have earned He would have hastened for them the torment. Nay rather, they have their appointed time, and shall never find a refuge beside Him.

These cities, we destroyed them when they were unjust; and for their destruction we set an appointed time.

And when Moses said to his servant, 'I will not cease until I reach the confluence of the two seas, or else I will go on for years¹.'

[60] But when they reached the confluence of the two² they forgot their fish, and it took its way in the sea with a free course.

And when they had passed by, he said to his servant, 'Bring us our dinners, for we have met with toil from this journey of ours.' Said he, 'What thinkest thou? when we resorted to the rock, then, verily, I forgot the fish, but it was only Satan who made me forget it, lest I should remember it; and it took its way in the sea wondrously!'

Said he, 'This is what we were searching for³.' So they turned back upon their footsteps, following them up.

¹ The word used signifies a space of eighty years and upwards.

² Literally, 'of their intermediate space.'

³ See Part II, note 3, p. 23.

Then they found a servant of our servants, to whom we had given mercy from ourselves, and had taught him knowledge from before us. [65] Said Moses to him, 'Shall I follow thee, so that thou mayest teach me, from what thou hast been taught, the right way?' said he, 'Verily, thou canst never have patience with me. How canst thou be patient in what thou comprehendest no knowledge of?' He said, 'Thou wilt find me, if God will, patient; nor will I rebel against thy bidding.' He said, 'Then, if thou followest me, ask me not about anything until I begin for them the mention of it.'

[70] So they set out until when they rode¹ in the bark, he scuttled it.

Said he, 'Hast thou scuttled it to drown its crew? Thou hast produced a strange thing.'

Said he, 'Did I not tell thee, verily, thou canst never have patience with me?'

Said he, 'Rebuke me not for forgetting, and impose not on me a difficult command.' So they set out until they met a boy, and he killed him. And he (Moses) said, 'Hast thou killed a pure person without (his killing) a person? thou hast produced an unheard-of thing.'

Said he, 'Did I not tell thee, verily, thou canst not have patience with me?'

[75] Said he, 'If I ask thee about anything after it, then do not accompany me. Now hast thou arrived at my excuse.' So they set out until when they came to the people of a city; and they asked the people thereof for food; but they refused to entertain them. And they found therein a wall which wanted¹ to fall to pieces, and he set it upright. Said (Moses), 'Hadst thou pleased thou mightst certainly have had a hire for this.'

¹ That is, embarked. All nautical metaphors in Arabic being taken from camel riding. The Arabs do not call the camel 'the ship of the desert,' but they call a ship 'the riding camel of the sea.'

Said he, 'This is the parting between me and thee. I will give thee the interpretation of that with which thou couldst not have patience. As for the bark it belonged to poor people, who toiled on the sea, and I wished to damage it, for behind it was a king who seized on every bark² by force. And as for the youth, his parents were believers, and we feared lest he should impose upon them rebellion and misbelief. [80] So we desired that their Lord would give them in exchange a better one than him in purity, and nearer in filial affection. And as for the wall, it belonged to two orphan youths in the city, and beneath it was a treasure belonging to them both, and their father was a righteous man, and their Lord desired that they should reach puberty, and then take out their treasure as a mercy from thy Lord; and I did it not on my own bidding. That is the interpretation of what thou couldst not have patience with³.'

¹ The expression wanted to fall is colloquial in Arabic as well as in English. Bâidhâvî says, 'the expression wanting to is in this case figuratively used for being on the point of.'

² That is, every whole or sound ship.

³ For this legend there appears to be no ancient authority whatever; the Mohammedan commentators merely expand it, and say that El 'Hidhr (a mythical personage, who is identified with the prophet Elias, St. George, and the prime minister of Alexander the Great) had disappeared in search of the water of immortality. Moses was inspired to search for him, and told that he would find him by a rock where two seas met, and where he should lose a fish

And they will ask thee about Dhu 'l Qarnâin¹, say, 'I will recite to you a mention of him; verily, we stablished for him in the earth, and we gave him a way to everything; and he followed a way until when he reached the setting of the sun, he found it setting in a black muddy spring², and he found thereat a people.'

[85] We said, 'O Dhu 'l Qarnâin! thou mayest either torment these people, or treat them well.' Said he, 'As for him who does wrong, I will torment him, then shall he be sent back to his Lord, and He will torment him with an unheard-of torment; but as for him who believes and acts aright, for him is an excellent reward, and we will tell him our easy bidding.'

Then he followed a way until when he reached the rising of the sun, he found it rise upon a people to whom we had given no shelter therefrom.

[90] So! And we comprehended the knowledge of what (forces) he had with him.

Then he followed a way until when he reached the point between the two mountains, he found below them both a people who could scarcely under-which he was directed to take with him. Moses' servant in the legend is Joshua, and the mysterious young man who guided him is generally supposed to be El 'Hidhr himself, rendered immortal and supernaturally wise by having found and drunk of the water of life.

¹ Literally, 'the two horned;' this personage is generally supposed to be Alexander the Great, who is so represented on his coins. The Mohammedan histories of him, however, contain so many gross anachronisms, making him, for instance, a contemporary with Moses, Abraham, &c., that it is probable they may have confused him with some much more ancient traditional conqueror.

² Probably, as Bâidhâvî suggests, the ocean, which, with its dark waters, would remind an Arab of such a pool.

stand speech. They said, 'O Dhu 'l Qarnâin ! verily, Yâgûg and Mâgûg¹ are doing evil in the land. Shall we then pay thee tribute, on condition that thou set between us and them a rampart ?' He said, 'What my Lord hath established me in is better ; so help me with strength, and I will set between you and them a barrier.

[95] 'Bring me pigs of iron until they fill up the space between the two mountain sides.' Said he, 'Blow until it makes it a fire.' Said he, 'Bring me, that I may pour over it, molten brass².'

So they³ could not scale it, and they could not tunnel it.

Said he, 'This is a mercy from my Lord ; but when the promise of my Lord comes to pass, He will make it as dust, for the promise of my Lord is true.'

And we left some of them to surge on that day⁴ over others, and the trumpet will be blown, and we will gather them together.

¹ Gog and Magog. The people referred to appear to be tribes of the Turkomans, and the rampart itself has been identified with some ancient fortifications extending from the west coast of the Caspian to the Pontus Euxinus. The word translated mountains is the same as that translated rampart a little further on. I have, in rendering it mountains, followed the Mohammedan commentators, whose view is borne out by the subsequent mention of mountain sides.

² The process here described for repressing the incursions of Gog and Magog is the building of a wall of pig iron across the opening between the two mountains, fusing this into a compact mass of metal, and strengthening it by pouring molten brass over the whole.

³ Gog and Magog.

⁴ On the day of judgment, or, as some think, a little before it.

[100] And we will set forth hell on that day before the misbelievers, whose eyes were veiled from my Reminder, and who were unable to hear. What! did those who misbelieve reckon that they could take my servants for patrons beside me? Verily, we have prepared hell for the misbelievers to alight in!

Say, 'Shall we inform you of those who lose most by their works? those who erred in their endeavours after the life of this world, and who think they are doing good deeds.'

[105] Those who misbelieve in the signs of their Lord and in meeting Him, vain are their works; and we will not give them right weight on the resurrection day. That is their reward,—hell! for that they misbelieved and took my signs and my apostles as a mockery.

Verily, those who believe and act aright, for them are gardens of Paradise¹ to alight in, to dwell therein for aye, and they shall crave no change therefrom.

Say, 'Were the sea ink for the words of my Lord, the sea would surely fail before the words of my Lord fail; aye, though we brought as much ink again!'

[110] Say, 'I am only a mortal like yourselves; I am inspired that your God is only one God. Then let him who hopes to meet his Lord act righteous acts, and join none in the service of his Lord.'

¹ Here the Persian word Firdâus is used, which has supplied the name to the abode of the blessed in so many languages.

THE CHAPTER OF MARY.

(XIX. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

K. H. Y. 'H. Z. The mention of thy Lord's mercy to His servant Zachariah, when he called on his Lord with a secret calling. Said he, 'My Lord! verily, my bones are weak, and my head flares with hoariness;—and I never was unfortunate in my prayers to Thee, my Lord! [5] But I fear my heirs after me, and my wife is barren; then grant me from Thee a successor, to be my heir and the heir of the family of Jacob, and make him, my Lord! acceptable.'

'O Zachariah! verily, we give thee glad tidings of a son, whose name shall be John. We never made a namesake of his before¹.'

Said he, 'My Lord! how can I have a son, when my wife is barren, and I have reached through old age to decrepitude?'

[10] He said, 'Thus says thy Lord, It is easy for Me, for I created thee at first when yet thou wast nothing.'

Said he, 'O my Lord! make for me a sign.' He said, 'Thy sign is that thou shalt not speak to men for three nights (though) sound.'

Then he went forth unto his people from the chamber, and he made signs to them: 'Celebrate (God's) praises morning and evening!'

¹ Cf. Luke i. 61, where, however, it is said that none of Zachariah's kindred was ever before called by that name. Some commentators avoid the difficulty by interpreting the word saṁīyyun to mean 'deserving of the name.'

'O John! take the Book with strength;' and we gave him judgment when a boy, and grace from us, and purity; and he was pious and righteous to his parents, and was not a rebellious tyrant.

[15] So peace upon him the day he was born, and the day he died, and the day he shall be raised up alive.

And mention, in the Book, Mary; when she retired from her family into an eastern place; and she took a veil (to screen herself) from them; and we sent unto her our spirit; and he took for her the semblance of a well-made man. Said she, 'Verily, I take refuge in the Merciful One from thee, if thou art pious.' Said he, 'I am only a messenger of thy Lord to bestow on thee a pure boy.'

[20] Said she, 'How can I have a boy when no man has touched me, and when I am no harlot?' He said, 'Thus says thy Lord, It is easy for Me! and we will make him a sign unto man, and a mercy from us; for it is a decided matter.'

So she conceived him, and she retired with him into a remote place. And the labour pains came upon her at the trunk of a palm tree, and she said, 'O that I had died before this, and been forgotten out of mind!' and he called¹ to her from beneath her, 'Grieve not, for thy Lord has placed a stream beneath thy feet; [25] and shake towards thee the trunk of the palm tree, it will drop upon thee fresh dates fit to gather ; so eat, and drink, and cheer thine eye ; and if thou shouldst see any mortal say, "Verily, I have vowed to the Merciful One a fast, and I will not speak to-day with a human being." "

¹ Either the infant himself or the angel Gabriel; or the expression 'beneath her' may be rendered 'beneath it,' and may refer to the palm tree.

Then she brought it to her people, carrying it ; said they, ' O Mary ! thou hast done an extraordinary thing ! O sister of Aaron ¹ ! thy father was not a bad man, nor was thy mother a harlot !'

[30] And she pointed to him, and they said, ' How are we to speak with one who is in the cradle a child ?' He said, ' Verily, I am a servant of God ; He has brought me the Book, and He has made me a prophet, and He has made me blessed wherever I be ; and He has required of me prayer and almsgiving so long as I live, and piety towards my mother, and has not made me a miserable tyrant ; and peace upon me the day I was born, and the day I die, and the day I shall be raised up alive.' "

[35] That is, Jesus the son of Mary,—by the word of truth whereon ye do dispute !

God could not take to himself any son ! celebrated be His praise ! when He decrees a matter He only says to it, ' BE,' and it is ; and, verily, God is my Lord and your Lord, so worship Him ; this is the right way.

And the parties have disagreed amongst themselves, but woe to those who disbelieve, from the witnessing of the mighty day ! they can hear and they can see ², on the day when they shall come to us ; but the evildoers are to-day in obvious error !

[40] And warn them of the day of sighing, when the matter is decreed while they are heedless, and while they do not believe.

¹ See Part I, note 1, p. 50.

² See Part II, note 3, p. 16.

Verily, we will inherit the earth and all who are upon it, and unto us shall they return!

And mention, in the Book, Abraham; verily, he was a confessor,—a prophet. When he said to his father, 'O my sire! why dost thou worship what can neither hear nor see nor avail thee aught? O my sire! verily, to me has come knowledge which has not come to thee; then follow me, and I will guide thee to a level way.

[45] 'O my sire! serve not Satan; verily, Satan is ever a rebel against the Merciful. O my sire! verily, I fear that there may touch thee torment from the Merciful, and that thou mayest be a client of Satan.'

Said he, 'What! art thou averse from my gods, O Abraham? verily, if thou dost not desist I will certainly stone thee; but get thee gone from me for a time!'

Said he, 'Peace be upon thee! I will ask forgiveness for thee from my Lord; verily, He is very gracious to me: but I will part from you and what ye call on beside God, and will pray my Lord that I be not unfortunate in my prayer to my Lord.'

[50] And when he had parted from them and what they served beside God, we granted him Isaac and Jacob, and each of them we made a prophet; and we granted them of our mercy, and we made the tongue of truth lofty for them¹.

And mention, in the Book, Moses; verily, he was sincere, and was an apostle,—a prophet. We called him from the right side of the mountain; and we made him draw nigh unto us to commune with him, and we granted him, of our mercy, his brother Aaron as a prophet.

¹ That is, 'gave them great renown.'

[55] And mention, in the Book, Ishmael; verily, he was true to his promise, and was an apostle,—a prophet; and he used to bid his people prayers and almsgiving, and was acceptable in the sight of his Lord.

And mention, in the Book, Idrîs¹; verily, he was a confessor,—a prophet; and we raised him to a lofty place.

These are those to whom God has been gracious, of the prophets of the seed of Adam, and of those whom we bore with Noah, and of the seed of Abraham and Israel, and of those we guided and elected; when the signs of the Merciful are read to them, they fall down adoring and weeping.

[60] And successors succeeded them, who lost sight of prayer and followed lusts, but they shall at length find themselves going wrong, except such as repent and believe and act aright; for these shall enter Paradise, and shall not be wronged at all,—gardens of Eden, which the Merciful has promised to His servants in the unseen; verily, His promise ever comes to pass!

They shall hear no empty talk therein, but only 'peace;' and they shall have their provision therein, morning and evening; that is Paradise which we will give for an inheritance to those of our servants who are pious!

[65] We do not descend² save at the bidding

¹ Generally identified with Enoch.

² Amongst various conjectures the one most usually accepted of thy Lord; His is what is before us, and what is behind us, and what is between those; for thy Lord is never forgetful,—the Lord of the heavens and the earth, and of what is between the two; then serve Him and persevere in His service. Dost thou know a namesake of His?

Man will say, 'What! when I have died shall I then come forth alive? Does not man then remember that we created him before when he was naught?'

And by thy Lord! we will surely gather them together, and the devils too; then we will surely bring them forward around hell, on their knees!

[70] Then we will drag off from every sect whichever of them has been most bold against the Merciful.

Then we know best which of them deserves most to be broiled therein.

There is not one of you who will not go down to it,—that is settled and decided by thy Lord¹.

Then we will save those who fear us; but we will leave the evildoers therein on their knees.

And when our signs are recited to them manifest, those who misbelieve say to those who believe, 'Which of the two parties is best placed and in the best company?'

[75] And how many generations before them by the Mohammedan commentators is, that these are the words of the angel Gabriel, in answer to Mohammed's complaint of long intervals elapsing between the periods of revelation.

¹ This is interpreted by some to mean that all souls, good and bad, must pass through hell, but that the good will not be harmed. Others think it merely refers to the passage of the bridge of el Aarâf.

have we destroyed who were better off in property and appearance ?

Say, 'Whosoever is in error, let the Merciful extend to him length of days!—until they see what they are threatened with, whether it be the torment or whether it be the Hour, then they shall know who is worse placed and weakest in forces!'

And those who are guided God will increase in guidance.

And enduring good works are best with thy Lord for a reward, and best for restoration.

[80] Hast thou seen him who disbelieves in our signs, and says, 'I shall surely be given wealth and children¹ ?'

Has he become acquainted with the unseen, or has he taken a compact with the Merciful? Not so! We will write down what he says, and we will extend to him a length of torment, and we will make him inherit what he says, and he shall come to us alone. They take other gods besides God to be their glory. [85] Not so! They² shall deny their worship and shall be opponents of theirs!

Dost thou not see that we have sent the devils against the misbelievers, to drive them on to sin? but, be not thou hasty with them. Verily, we will number them a number (of days),—the day when we will gather the pious to the Merciful as ambassadors, and we will drive the sinners to hell like

¹ 'Hâsîy ibn Wâil, being indebted to 'Habbâb, refused to pay him unless he renounced Mohammed. This 'Habbâb said he would never do alive or dead, or when raised again at the last day. El 'Hâsîy told him to call for his money on the last day, as he should have wealth and children then.

² That is, the false gods.

(herds) to water! [90] They shall not possess intercession, save he who has taken a compact with the Merciful.

They say, 'The Merciful has taken to Himself a son:—ye have brought a monstrous thing! The heavens well-nigh burst asunder thereat, and the earth is riven, and the mountains fall down broken, that they attribute to the Merciful a son! but it becomes not the Merciful to take to Himself a son! there is none in the heavens or the earth but comes to the Merciful as a servant; He counts them and numbers them by number, [95] and they are all coming to Him on the resurrection day singly.

Verily, those who believe and act aright, to them the Merciful will give love.

We have only made it easy for thy tongue that thou mayest thereby give glad tidings to the pious, and warn thereby a contentious people.

How many a generation before them have we destroyed? Canst thou find any one of them, or hear a whisper of them?

THE CHAPTER OF T. H.

(XX. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

T. H. We have not sent down this Qur'ân to thee that thou shouldst be wretched; only as a reminder to him who fears—descending from Him who created the earth and the high heavens, the Merciful settled on the throne! [5] His are what is in the heavens, and what is in the earth, and what is between the two, and what is beneath the ground! And if thou art public in thy speech—yet, verily, he knows the secret, and more hidden still.

God, there is no god but He! His are the excellent names.

Has the story of Moses come to thee? When he saw the fire and said to his family, 'Tarry ye; verily, I perceive a fire! [10] Haply I may bring you therefrom a brand, or may find guidance by the fire¹.' And when he came to it he was called to, 'O Moses! verily, I am thy Lord, so take off thy sandals; verily, thou art in the holy valley Tuvâ, and I have chosen thee. So listen to what is inspired thee; verily, I am God, there is no god but Me! then serve Me, and be steadfast in prayer to remember Me.

[15] 'Verily, the hour is coming, I almost make it appear², that every soul may be recompensed for its efforts.

'Let not then him who believes not therein and follows his lusts ever turn thee away therefrom, and thou be ruined.

'What is that in thy right hand, O Moses?'

Said he, 'It is my staff on which I lean, and

¹ The Arabs used to light fires to guide travellers to shelter and entertainment. These fires, 'the fire of hospitality,' 'the fire of war,' &c. are constantly referred to in the ancient Arabic poetry. No less than thirteen fires are enumerated by them.

² This may be also rendered, 'I almost conceal it (from myself);' i'ẓfâ'un having, like many words in Arabic, two meanings directly opposite to each other. This probably arose from words being adopted into the Qurâis idiom from other dialects.

wherewith I beat down leaves for my flocks, and for which I have other uses.'

[20] Said He, 'Throw it down, O Moses!' and he threw it down, and behold! it was a snake that moved about.

Said He, 'Take hold of it and fear not; we will restore it to its first state.

'But press thy hand to thy side, it shall come forth white without harm,—another sign! to show thee of our great signs!

[25] 'Go unto Pharaoh, verily, he is outrageous!'

Said he, 'My Lord! expand for me my breast; and make what I am bidden easy to me; and loose the knot from my tongue¹, that they may understand my speech; [30] and make for me a minister² from my people,—Aaron my brother; gird up my loins through him³, and join him with me in the affair; that we may celebrate Thy praises much and remember Thee much.

[35] 'Verily, Thou dost ever behold us!'

He said, 'Thou art granted thy request, O Moses! and we have already shown favours unto thee at another time. When we inspired thy mother with what we inspired her, "Hurl him into the ark, and hurl him into the sea; and the sea shall cast him on the shore, and an enemy of mine and of his shall take him;"—for on thee have I cast my love, [40] that thou mayest be formed under my eye. When thy sister walked on and said, "Shall I guide you to one who will take charge of him?" And we restored thee to thy mother, that her eye might be cheered and that she should not grieve. And thou didst slay a person and we saved thee from the trouble, and we tried thee with various trials. And thou didst tarry for years amongst the people of Midian; then thou didst come (hither) at (our) decree, O Moses! And I have chosen thee for myself. Go, thou and thy brother, with my signs, and be not remiss in remembering me. [45] Go ye both to Pharaoh; verily, he is outrageous! and speak to him a gentle speech, haply he may be mindful or may fear.'

¹ The Muslim legend is that Moses burnt his tongue with a live coal when a child. This incident is related at length, together with other Mohammedan legends connected with Moses and the Exodus, in my 'Desert of the Exodus,' Appendix C. p. 533. Transl.

² Literally, vizîr, 'vizier,' 'one who bears the burden' of office.

³ I.e. 'strengthen me.' The idiom is still in common use amongst the desert Arabs.

They two said, 'Our Lord! verily, we fear that he may trespass against us, or that he may be outrageous.'

He said, 'Fear not; verily, I am with you twain. I hear and see!

'So come ye to him and say, "Verily, we are the apostles of thy Lord; send then the children of Israel with us; and do not torment them. We have brought thee a sign from thy Lord, and peace be upon him who follows the guidance!

[50] "'Verily, we are inspired that the torment will surely come upon him who calls us liars and turns his back.'"

Said he, 'And who is your Lord, O Moses?'

He said, 'Our Lord is He who gave everything its creation, then guided it.'

Said he, 'And what of the former generations?'

He said, 'The knowledge of them is with my Lord in a book; my Lord misleads not, nor forgets!

[55] Who made for you the earth a bed; and has traced for you paths therein; and has sent down from the sky water,—and we have brought forth thereby divers sorts of different vegetables. Eat and pasture your cattle therefrom; verily, in that are signs to those endued with intelligence. From it have we created you and into it will we send you back, and from it will we bring you forth another time.'

We did show him our signs, all of them, but he called them lies and did refuse.

Said he, 'Hast thou come to us, to turn us out of our land with thy magic, O Moses? [60] Then we will bring you magic like it; and we will make between us and thee an appointment; we will not break it, nor do thou either;—a fair place.'

Said he, 'Let your appointment be for the day of adornment¹, and let the people assemble in the forenoon².'

But Pharaoh turned his back, and collected his tricks, and then he came.

Said Moses to them, 'Woe to you! do not forge against God a lie; lest He destroy you by torment; for disappointed has ever been he who has forged.'

[65] And they argued their matter among themselves; and secretly talked it over.

Said they, 'These twain are certainly two magicians, who wish to turn you out of your land by their magic, and to remove your most exemplary doctrine³. Collect therefore your tricks, and then

¹ I. e. the festival.

² In order that they might all see.

³ Or, 'your most eminent men,' as some commentators interpret it, i. e. the children of Israel.

form a row; for he is prosperous to-day who has the upper hand.'

Said they, 'O Moses! either thou must throw, or we must be the first to throw.'

He said, 'Nay, throw ye!' and lo! their ropes and their staves appeared to move along. [70] And Moses felt a secret fear within his soul.

Said we, 'Fear not! thou shalt have the upper hand. Throw down what is in thy right hand; and it shall devour what they have made. Verily, what they have made is but a magician's trick; and no magician shall prosper wherever he comes.'

And the magicians were cast down in adoration; said they, 'We believe in the Lord of Aaron and of Moses!'

Said he¹, 'Do ye believe in Him before I give you leave? Verily, he is your master who taught you magic! Therefore will I surely cut off your hands and feet on alternate sides, and I will surely crucify you on the trunks of palm trees; and ye shall surely know which of us is keenest at torment and more lasting.'

[75] Said they, 'We will never prefer thee to what has come to us of manifest signs, and to Him who originated us. Decide then what thou canst decide; thou canst only decide in the life of this world! Verily, we believe in our Lord, that He may pardon us our sins, and the magic thou hast forced us to use; and God is better and more lasting!'

Verily, he who comes to his Lord a sinner,—verily, for him is hell; he shall not die therein, and shall not live.

¹ Pharaoh.

But he who comes to Him a believer who has done aright—these, for them are the highest ranks,—gardens of Eden beneath which rivers flow, to dwell therein for aye; for that is the reward of him who keeps pure.

And we inspired Moses, 'Journey by night with my servants, and strike out for them a dry road in the sea. [80] Fear not pursuit, nor be afraid!' Then Pharaoh followed them with his armies, and there overwhelmed them of the sea that which overwhelmed them. And Pharaoh and his people went astray and were not guided.

O children of Israel! We have saved you from your enemy; and we made an appointment with you on the right side of the mount; and we sent down upon you the manna and the quails. 'Eat of the good things we have provided you with, and do not exceed therein, lest my wrath light upon you; for whomsoever my wrath lights upon he falls!

'Yet am I forgiving unto him who repents and believes and does right, and then is guided.

[85] 'But what has hastened thee on away from thy people, O Moses?'

He said, 'They were here upon my track and I hastened on to Thee, my Lord! that thou mightest be pleased.'

Said He, 'Verily, we have tried thy people, since thou didst leave, and es Sâmart¹ has led them astray.'

And Moses returned to his people, wrathful, grieving!

¹ I.e. the Samaritan; some take it to mean a proper name, in order to avoid the anachronism.

Said he, 'O my people! did not your Lord promise you a good promise? Has the time seemed too long for you, or do you desire that wrath should light on you from your Lord, that ye have broken your promise to me?'

[90] They said, 'We have not broken our promise to thee of our own accord. But we were made to carry loads of the ornaments of the people, and we hurled them down, and so did es Sâmartý cast; and he brought forth for the people a corporeal calf which lowed.' And they said, 'This is your god and the god of Moses, but he has forgotten!' What! do they not see that it does not return them any speech, and cannot control for them harm or profit? Aaron too told them before, 'O my people! ye are only being tried thereby; and, verily, your Lord is the Merciful, so follow me and obey my bidding.'

They said, 'We will not cease to pay devotion to it until Moses come back to us.'

Said he, 'O Aaron! what prevented thee, when thou didst see them go astray, from following me? Hast thou then rebelled against my bidding?'

[95] Said he, 'O son of my mother! seize me not by my beard, or my head! Verily, I feared lest thou shouldst say, "Thou hast made a division amongst the children of Israel, and hast not observed my word."'

Said he, 'What was thy design, O Sâmartý?' Said he, 'I beheld what they beheld not, and I grasped a handful from the footprint of the messenger¹ and cast it; for thus my soul induced me.'

¹ A handful of dust from the footprint of the angel Gabriel's

Said he, 'Then get thee gone; verily, it shall be thine in life to say, "Touch me not!" and, verily, for thee there is a threat which thou shalt surely never alter. But look at thy god to which thou wert just now devout; we will surely burn it, and then we will scatter it in scattered pieces in the sea.

'Your God is only God who,—there is no god but He,—He embraceth everything in His knowledge.'

Thus do we narrate to thee the history of what has gone before, and we have brought thee a reminder from us.

[100] Whoso turns therefrom, verily, he shall bear on the resurrection day a burden:—for them to bear for aye, and evil for them on the resurrection day will it be to bear.

On the day when the trumpet shall be blown, and we will gather the sinners in that day blue-eyed².

They shall whisper to each other, 'Ye have only tarried ten days.' We know best what they say, when the most exemplary of them in his way shall say, 'Ye have only tarried a day.'

[105] They will ask thee about the mountains;

horse, which, being cast into the calf, caused it to become animated and to low.

¹ The idea conveyed seems to be that he should be regarded as a leper, and obliged to warn people from coming near him. The reference is no doubt to the light in which the Samaritans (see Part II, p. 40, note 1) were regarded by the Jews.

² Because 'blue eyes' were especially detested by the Arabs as being characteristic of their greatest enemies, the Greeks. So they speak of an enemy as 'black-livered,' 'red-whiskered,' and 'blue-eyed.' The word in the text may also mean 'blear-eyed,' or 'blind.'

say, 'My Lord will scatter them in scattered pieces, and He will leave them a level plain, thou wilt see therein no crookedness or inequality.'

On that day they shall follow the caller in whom is no crookedness¹; and the voices shall be hushed before the Merciful, and thou shalt hear naught but a shuffling.

On that day shall no intercession be of any avail, save from such as the Merciful permits, and who is acceptable to Him in speech.

He knows what is before them and what is behind them, but they do not comprehend knowledge of Him.

[110] Faces shall be humbled before the Living, the Self-subsistent; and he who bears injustice is ever lost.

But he who does righteous acts and is a believer, he shall fear neither wrong nor diminution.

Thus have we sent it down an Arabic Qur'ân; and we have turned about in it the threat,—haply they may fear, or it may cause them to remember.

Exalted then be God, the king, the truth! Hasten not the Qur'ân before its inspiration is decided for thee; but say, 'O Lord! increase me in knowledge².'

We did make a covenant with Adam of yore, but he forgot it, and we found no firm purpose in him.

[115] And when we said to the angels, 'Adore

¹ That is, the angel who is to summon them to judgment, and from whom none can escape, or who marches straight on.

² Cf. Part II, p. 16, note 2.

Adam,' they adored, save Iblîs, who refused. And we said, 'O Adam! verily, this is a foe to thee and to thy wife; never then let him drive you twain forth from the garden or thou wilt be wretched. Verily, thou hast not to be hungry there, nor naked! and, verily, thou shalt not thirst therein, nor feel the noonday heat!'

But the devil whispered to him. Said he, 'O Adam! shall I guide thee to the tree of immortality, and a kingdom that shall not wane?'

And they eat therefrom, and their shame became apparent to them; and they began to stitch upon themselves some leaves of the garden; and Adam rebelled against his Lord, and went astray.

[120] Then his Lord chose him, and relented towards him, and guided him. Said he, 'Go down, ye twain, therefrom altogether, some of you foes to the other. And if there should come to you from me a guidance; then whoso follows my guidance shall neither err nor be wretched. But he who turns away from my reminder, verily, for him shall be a straitened livelihood; and we will gather him on the resurrection day blind!'

[125] He shall say, 'My Lord! wherefore hast Thou gathered me blind when I used to see?' He shall say, 'Our signs came to thee, and thou didst forget them; thus to-day art thou forgotten!'

Thus do we recompense him who is extravagant and believes not in the signs of his Lord; and the torment of the hereafter is keener and more lasting!

Does it not occur to them¹ how many generations

¹ The Meccans.

we have destroyed before them?—they walk in their very dwelling-places; verily, in that are signs to those endued with intelligence.

And had it not been for thy Lord's word already passed (the punishment) would have been inevitable and (at) an appointed time.

[130] Bear patiently then what they say, and celebrate the praises of thy Lord before the rising of the sun, and before its setting, and at times in the night celebrate them; and at the ends of the day; haply thou mayest please (Him).

And do not strain after what we have provided a few¹ of them with—the flourish of the life of this world, to try them by; but the provision of thy Lord is better and more lasting.

Bid thy people prayer, and persevere in it; we do not ask thee to provide. We will provide, and the issue shall be to piety.

They say, 'Unless he bring us a sign from his Lord—What! has there not come to them the manifest sign of what was in the pages of yore?'

But had we destroyed them with torment before it, they would have said, 'Unless Thou hadst sent to us an apostle, that we might follow Thy signs before we were abased and put to shame.'

[135] Say, 'Each one has to wait, so wait ye! but in the end ye shall know who are the fellows of the level way, and who are guided!'

¹ Literally, 'pairs.'

THE CHAPTER OF THE PROPHETS.

(XXI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Their reckoning draws nigh to men, yet in heedlessness they turn aside.

No reminder comes to them from their Lord of late, but they listen while they mock, and their hearts make sport thereof! And those who do wrong discourse secretly (saying), 'Is this man aught but a mortal like yourselves? will ye accede to magic, while ye can see?'

Say, 'My Lord knows what is said in the heavens and the earth, He hears and knows!'

[5] 'Nay!' they say, '— a jumble of dreams; nay! he has forged it; nay! he is a poet; but let him bring us a sign as those of yore were sent.'

No city before them which we destroyed believed—how will they believe? Nor did we send before them any but men whom we inspired? Ask ye the people of the Scriptures if ye do not know. Nor did we make them bodies not to eat food, nor were they immortal. Yet we made our promise to them good, and we saved them and whom we pleased; but we destroyed those who committed excesses.

[10] We have sent down to you a book in which is a reminder for you; have ye then no sense?

How many a city which had done wrong have we broken up, and raised up after it another people! And when they perceived our violence they ran away from it. 'Run not away, but return to what ye delighted in, and to your dwellings! haply ye will be questioned.' Said they, 'O woe is us! verily, we were wrong-doers.'

[15] And that ceased not to be their cry until we made them mown down,—smouldering out!

We did not create the heaven and the earth and what is between the two in play. Had we wished to take to a sport, we would have taken to one from before ourselves; had we been bent on doing so. Nay, we hurl the truth against falsehood and it crashes into it, and lo! it vanishes, but woe to you for what ye attribute (to God)!

His are whosoever are in the heavens and the earth, and those who are with Him are not too big with pride for His service, nor do they weary. [20] They celebrate His praises by night and day without intermission. Or have they taken gods from the earth who can raise up (the dead)?

Were there in both (heaven and earth) gods beside God, both would surely have been corrupted. Celebrated then be the praise of God, the Lord of the throne, above what they ascribe!

He shall not be questioned concerning what He does, but they shall be questioned.

Have they taken gods beside Him? Say, 'Bring your proofs. This is the reminder of those who are with me, and of those who were before me.' Nay, most of them know not the truth, and they do turn aside.

[25] We have not sent any prophet before thee, but we inspired him that, 'There is no god but Me, so serve ye Me.'

And they say, 'The Merciful has taken a son¹;

¹ Or, child, since the passage refers both to the Christian celebrated be His praise!'—Nay, honoured servants; they do not speak until He speaks; but at His bidding do they act. He knows what is before them, and what is behind them, and they shall not intercede except for him whom He is pleased with; and they shrink through fear.

[30] And whoso of them should say, 'Verily, I am god instead of Him,' such a one we recompense with hell; thus do we recompense the wrong-doers.

Do not those who misbelieve see that the heavens and the earth were both solid, and we burst them asunder; and we made from water every living thing—will they then not believe?

And we placed on the earth firm mountains lest it should move with them, and He made therein open roads for paths, haply they may be guided! and we made the heaven a guarded roof; yet from our signs they turn aside!

He it is who created the night and the day, and the sun and the moon, each floating in a sky.

[35] We never made for any mortal before thee immortality; what, if thou shouldst die, will they live on for aye?

Every soul shall taste of death! we will test them with evil and with good, as a trial; and unto us shall they return!

And when those who misbelieve see thee¹, they only take thee for a jest, 'Is this he who mentions your gods?' Yet they at the mention of the Merciful do disbelieve.

doctrine and to the Arab notion that the angels are daughters of God.

¹ Mohammed.

Man is created out of haste. I will show you my signs ; but do not hurry Me.

And they say, 'When will this threat (come to pass), if ye tell the truth ?'

[40] Did those who misbelieve but know when the fire shall not be warded off from their faces nor from their backs, and they shall not be helped ! Nay, it shall come on them suddenly, and shall dumbfounder them, and they shall not be able to repel it, nor shall they be respited.

Prophets before thee have been mocked at, but that whereat they jested encompassed those who mocked.

Say, 'Who shall guard you by night and by day from the Merciful ?' Nay, but they from the mention of their Lord do turn aside.

Have they gods to defend them against us ? These cannot help themselves, nor shall they be abetted against us.

[45] Nay, but we have granted enjoyment to these men and to their fathers whilst life was prolonged. Do they not see that we come to the land and shorten its borders ? Shall they then prevail ?

Say, 'I only warn you by inspiration ;' but the deaf hear not the call when they are warned. But if a blast of the torment of thy Lord touches them, they will surely say, 'O, woe is us ! verily, we were wrong-doers !'

We will place just balances upon the resurrection day, and no soul shall be wronged at all, even though it be the weight of a grain of mustard seed, we will bring it ; for we are good enough at reckoning up.

We did give to Moses and Aaron the Discrimination, and a light and a reminder to those who fear; [50] who are afraid of their Lord in secret; and who at the Hour do shrink.

This is a blessed reminder which we have sent down, will ye then deny it?

And we gave Abraham a right direction before; for about him we knew. When he said to his father and to his people, 'What are these images to which ye pay devotion?' Said they, 'We found our fathers serving them.' [55] Said he, 'Both you and your fathers have been in obvious error.' They said, 'Dost thou come to us with the truth, or art thou but of those who play?'

He said, 'Nay, but your Lord is Lord of the heavens and the earth, which He originated; and I am of those who testify to this; and, by God! I will plot against your idols after ye have turned and shown me your backs!'

So he brake them all in pieces, except a large one they had; that haply they might refer it to that.

[60] Said they, 'Who has done this with our gods? verily, he is of the wrong-doers!' They said, 'We heard a youth mention them who is called Abraham.'

Said they, 'Then bring him before the eyes of men; haply they will bear witness.'

Said they, 'Was it thou who did this to our gods, O Abraham?' Said he, 'Nay, it was this largest of them; but ask them, if they can speak.'

[65] Then they came to themselves and said, 'Verily, ye are the wrong-doers.' Then they turned upside down again¹: 'Thou knewest that these cannot speak.'

Said he, 'Will ye then serve, beside God, what cannot profit you at all, nor harm you? fie upon you, and what ye serve beside God! have ye then no sense?'

Said they, 'Burn him, and help your gods, if ye are going to do so!'

We said, 'O fire! be thou cool and a safety for Abraham!'

[70] They desired to plot against him, but we made them the losers.

And we brought him and Lot safely to the land which we have blessed for the world, and we bestowed upon him Isaac and Jacob as a fresh gift, and each of them we made righteous persons; and we made them high priests² to guide (men) by our bidding, and we inspired them to do good works, and to be steadfast in prayer, and to give alms; and they did serve us.

And Lot, to him we gave judgment and knowledge, and we brought him safely out of the city which had done vile acts; verily, they were a people who wrought abominations! [75] And we made him enter into our mercy; verily, he was of the righteous!

And Noah, when he cried aforetime, and we answered him and saved him and his people from the mighty trouble, and we helped him against the people who said our signs were lies; verily, they were a bad people, so we drowned them all together.

¹ Literally, 'they turned upside down upon their heads,' the metaphor implying that they suddenly changed their opinion and relapsed into belief in their idols.

² See Part I, p. 17, note 1.

And David and Solomon, when they gave judgment concerning the field, when some people's sheep had strayed therein at night; and we testified to their judgment¹; and this we gave Solomon to understand. To each of them we gave judgment and knowledge; and to David we subjected the mountains to celebrate our praises, and the birds too,—it was we who did it².

[80] And we taught him the art of making coats of mail for you, to shield you from each other's violence; are ye then grateful?

And to Solomon (we subjected) the wind blowing stormily, to run on at his bidding to the land³ which we have blessed,—for all things did we know,—and some devils to dive for him, and to do other works beside that; and we kept guard over them.

And Job, when he cried to his Lord, 'As for me, harm has touched me, but Thou art the most merciful of the merciful ones.' And we answered him, and removed from him the distress that was upon him; and we gave his family, and the like of them with them, as a mercy from us, and a remembrance to those who serve us.

¹ This case, say the commentators, being brought before David and Solomon, David said that the owner of the field should take the sheep in compensation for the damage; but Solomon, who was only eleven years old at the time, gave judgment that the owner of the field should enjoy the produce of the sheep—that is, their milk, wool, and lambs—until the shepherd had restored the field to its former state of cultivation, and this judgment was approved by David.

² This legend, adopted from the Talmud, arises from a too literal interpretation of Psalm cxlviii.

³ The legend of Solomon, his seal inscribed with the holy name by which he could control all the powers of nature, his carpet or throne that used to be transported with him on the wind wherever he pleased, his power over the jinns, and his knowledge of the language of birds and beasts are commonplaces in Arabic writings.

[85] And Ishmael, and Idrîs, and DHU 'l Kifl¹, all of these were of the patient: and we made them enter into our mercy; verily, they were among the righteous.

And DHU 'nnûn², when he went away in wrath and thought that we had no power over him; and he cried out in the darkness, 'There is no god but Thou, celebrated be Thy praise! Verily, I was of the evildoers!' And we answered him, and saved him from the trouble. Thus do we save believers!

And Zachariah, when he cried unto his Lord, 'O Lord! leave me not alone; for thou art the best of heirs³.' [90] And we answered him, and bestowed upon him John; and we made his wife right for him; verily, these vied in good works, and called on us with longing and dread, and were humble before us.

And she who guarded her private parts, and we breathed into her of our Spirit, and we made her and her son a sign unto the worlds. Verily, this your nation⁴ is one nation; and I am your Lord, so serve me.

¹ That is, Elias, or, as some say, Joshua, and some say Zachariah, so called because he had a portion from God Most High, and guaranteed his people, or because he had double the work of the prophets of his time and their reward; the word Kifl being used in the various senses of 'portion,' 'sponsorship,' and 'double.' —Bâidhâvî.

² Literally, 'he of the fish,' that is, Jonah.

³ See Part II, p. 27.

⁴ The word 'ummatun' is here used in the sense rather of

But they cut up their affair amongst themselves; they all shall return to us; and he who acts aright, and he who is a believer, there is no denial of his efforts, for, verily, we will write them down for him.

[95] There is a ban upon a city which we have destroyed that they shall not return, until Yâgûg and Mâgûg are let out¹, and they from every hummock² shall glide forth.

And the true promise draws nigh, and lo! they are staring—the eyes of those who misbelieve! O, woe is us! we were heedless of this, nay, we were wrong-doers!

Verily, ye, and what ye serve beside God, shall be the pebbles of hell³, to it shall ye go down!

Had these been God's they would not have gone down thereto: but all shall dwell therein for aye; [100] for them therein is groaning, but they therein shall not be heard.

Verily, those for whom the good (reward) from us was fore-ordained, they from it shall be kept far away; they shall not hear the slightest sound thereof, and they in what their souls desire shall dwell for aye. The greatest terror shall not grieve them; and the angels shall meet them, (saying), 'This is your day which ye were promised!'

'religion,' regarding the various nations and generations as each professing and representing a particular faith, and means that the religion preached to the Meccans was the same as that preached to their followers by the various prophets who are mentioned in this chapter.

¹ See Part II, p. 25.

² 'Hadab, some read gadath, 'grave.'

³ See Part I, p. 4, l. 1.

The day when we will roll up the heavens as es-Sigill rolls up the books¹; as we produced it at its first creation will we bring it back again—a promise binding upon us; verily, we are going to do it. And already have we written in the Psalms [105] after the reminder that ‘the earth shall my righteous servants inherit’².

Verily, in this is preaching for a’ people who serve me!

We have only sent thee as a mercy to the worlds.

Say, ‘I am only inspired that your God is one God; are ye then resigned?’ But if they turn their backs say, ‘I have proclaimed (war) against all alike, but I know not if what ye are threatened with be near or far!’

[110] Verily, He knows what is spoken openly, and He knows what ye hide.

I know not, haply it is a trial for you and a provision for a season.

Say, ‘My Lord! judge thou with truth! and our Lord is the Merciful whom we ask for aid against what they ascribe!’

¹ Es-Sigill is the name of the angel who has charge of the book on which each human being’s fate is written, which book he rolls up at a person’s death. The word, however, may mean a scroll or register, and the passage may be rendered, ‘like the rolling up of a scroll for writings.’

² Psalm xxxvii. 29.

THE CHAPTER OF THE PILGRIMAGE.

(XXII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

O ye folk! fear your Lord. Verily, the earthquake of the Hour is a mighty thing.

On the day ye shall see it, every suckling woman shall be scared away from that to which she gave suck; and every pregnant woman shall lay down her load; and thou shalt see men drunken, though they be not drunken: but the torment of God is severe.

And amongst men is one who wrangles about God without knowledge, and follows every rebellious devil; against whom it is written down that whoso takes him for a patron, verily, he will lead him astray, and will guide him towards the torment of the blaze!

[5] O ye folk! if ye are in doubt about the raising (of the dead),—verily, we created you from earth, then from a clot, then from congealed blood, then from a morsel, shaped or shapeless, that we may explain to you. And we make what we please rest in the womb until an appointed time; then we bring you forth babes; then let you reach your full age; and of you are some who die; and of you are some who are kept back till the most decrepit age, till he knows no longer aught of knowledge. And ye see the earth parched, and when we send down water on it, it stirs and swells, and brings forth herbs of every beauteous kind.

That is because God, He is the truth, and because

He quickens the dead, and because He is mighty over all; and because the Hour is coming, there is no doubt therein, and because God raises up those who are in the tombs.

And amongst men is one who wrangles about God without knowledge or guidance or an illuminating book; twisting his neck from the way of God; for him is disgrace in this world, and we will make him taste, upon the resurrection day, the torment of burning.

[10] That is for what thy hands have done before, and for that God is not unjust unto His servants.

And amongst men is one who serves God (wavering) on a brink; and if there befall him good, he is comforted; but if there befall him a trial, he turns round again, and loses this world and the next—that is an obvious loss. He calls, besides God, on what can neither harm him nor profit him;—that is a wide error.

He calls on him whose harm is nigher than his profit,—a bad lord and a bad comrade.

Verily, God makes those who believe and do aright enter into gardens beneath which rivers flow; verily, God does what He will.

[15] He who thinks that God will never help him in this world or the next—let him stretch a cord to the roof¹ and put an end to himself; and let him cut it and see if his stratagem will remove what he is enraged at.

Thus have we sent down manifest signs; for, verily, God guides whom He will.

Verily, those who believe, and those who are

¹ The word may also be rendered 'sky.'

Jews, and the Sabæans, and the Christians, and the Magians, and those who join other gods with God, verily, God will decide between them on the resurrection day; verily, God is witness over all.

Do they not see that God, whosoever is in the heavens adores Him, and whosoever is in the earth, and the sun, and the moon, and the stars, and the mountains, and the beasts, and many among men, though many a one deserves the torments?

Whomsoever God abases there is none to honour him; verily, God does what He pleases.

[20] These are two disputants¹ who dispute about their Lord, but those who misbelieve, for them are cut out garments of fire, there shall be poured over their heads boiling water, wherewith what is in their bellies shall be dissolved and their skins too, and for them are maces of iron. Whenever they desire to come forth therefrom through pain, they are sent back into it: 'And taste ye the torment of the burning!'

Verily, God will make those who believe and do right enter into gardens beneath which rivers flow; they shall be bedecked therein with bracelets of gold and with pearls, and their garments therein shall be of silk, and they shall be guided to the goodly speech, and they shall be guided to the laudable way.

[25] Verily, those who misbelieve and who turn men away from God's path and the Sacred Mosque, which we have made for all men alike, the dweller therein, and the stranger, and he who desires therein profanation with injustice, we will make him taste grievous woe.

¹ Namely, the believers and the misbelievers.

And when we established for Abraham the place of the House, (saying), 'Associate naught with me, but cleanse my House for those who make the circuits, for those who stand to pray, for those who bow, and for those too who adore.

'And proclaim amongst men the Pilgrimage; let them come to you on foot and on every slim camel, from every deep pass, that they may witness advantages for them, and may mention the name of God for the stated days¹ over what God has provided them with of brute beasts, then eat thereof and feed the badly off, the poor.

[30] 'Then let them finish the neglect of their persons², and let them pay their vows and make the circuit round the old House.

'That do. And whoso magnifies the sacred things of God it is better for him with his Lord.

'Cattle are lawful for you, except what is recited to you; and avoid the abomination of idols, and avoid speaking falsely, being 'Hantfs to God, not associating aught with Him; for he who associates aught with God, it is as though he had fallen from heaven, and the birds snatch him up, or the wind blows him away into a far distant place.

'That—and he who makes grand the symbols³ of God, they come from piety of heart.

¹ The first ten days of Dhu 'l 'Higgeh, or the tenth day of that month, when the sacrifices were offered in the vale of Minâ, and the three following days.

² Such as not shaving their heads and other parts of their bodies, or cutting their beards and nails, which are forbidden the pilgrim from the moment he has put on the I'hrâm, or pilgrim garb, until the offering of the sacrifice at Minâ.

³ This means by presenting fine and comely offerings.

'Therein have ye advantages for an appointed time, then the place for sacrificing them is at the old House.'

[35] To every nation have we appointed rites, to mention the name of God over what He has provided them with of brute beasts; and your God is one God, to Him then be resigned, and give glad tidings to the lowly, whose hearts when God is mentioned are afraid, and to those who are patient of what befalls them, and to those who are steadfast in prayer and of what we have given them expend in alms.

The bulky (camels) we have made for you one of the symbols of God, therein have ye good; so mention the name of God over them as they stand in a row¹, and when they fall down (dead) eat of them, and feed the easily contented and him who begs.

Thus have we subjected them to you; haply, ye may give thanks!

Their meat will never reach to God, nor yet their blood, but the piety from you will reach to Him.

Thus hath He subjected them to you that ye may magnify God for guiding you: and give thou glad tidings to those who do good.

Verily, God will defend those who believe; verily, God loves not any misbelieving traitor.

[40] Permission is given to those who fight because they have been wronged,—and, verily, God to help them has the might,—who have been driven forth from their homes undeservedly, only for that they said, 'Our Lord is God;' and were it not for God's repelling some men with others, cloisters and churches and synagogues and mosques, wherein God's name is mentioned much, would be destroyed. But God will surely help him who helps Him; verily, God is powerful, mighty.

¹ Waiting to be sacrificed.

Who, if we stablish them in the earth, are steadfast in prayer, and give alms, and bid what is right, and forbid what is wrong; and God's is the future of affairs.

But if they call thee liar, the people of Noah called him liar before them, as did 'Âd and Thamûd, and the people of Abraham, and the people of Lot, and the fellows of Midian; and Moses was called a liar too: but I let the misbelievers range at large, and then I seized on them, and how great was the change!

And how many a city have we destroyed while it yet did wrong, and it was turned over on its roofs, and (how many) a deserted well and lofty palace!

[45] Have they not travelled on through the land? and have they not hearts to understand with, or ears to hear with? for it is not their eyes which are blind, but blind are the hearts which are within their breasts.

They will bid thee hasten on the torment, but God will never fail in his promise; for, verily, a day with thy Lord is as a thousand years of what ye number.

And to how many a city have I given full range while it yet did wrong! then I seized on it, and unto me was the return.

Say, 'O ye folk! I am naught but a plain warner to you, but those who believe and do right, for them is forgiveness and a generous provision; [50] but those who strive to discredit our signs, they are the fellows of hell!'

We have not sent before thee any apostle or prophet, but that when he wished, Satan threw not something into his wish¹; but God annuls what Satan throws; then does God confirm his signs, and God is knowing, wise—to make what Satan throws a trial unto those in whose hearts is sickness, and those whose hearts are hard; and, verily, the wrong-doers are in a wide schism—and that those who have been given 'the knowledge' may know that it is the truth from thy Lord, and may believe therein, and that their hearts may be lowly; for, verily, God surely will guide those who believe into a right way.

But those who misbelieve will not cease to be in doubt thereof until the Hour comes on them suddenly, or there comes on them the torment of the barren day².

[55] The kingdom on that day shall be God's, He shall judge between them; and those who believe

¹ Some say that the word tamannâ means 'reading,' and the passage should then be translated, 'but that when he read Satan threw something into his reading;' the occasion on which the verse was produced being that when Mohammed was reciting the words of the Qur'ân, Chapter LIII, verses 19, 20, 'Have ye considered Allât and Al 'Huzzâ and Manât the other third?' Satan put it into his mouth to add, 'they are the two high-soaring cranes, and, verily, their intercession may be hoped for;' at this praise of their favourite idols the Qurâirs were much pleased, and at the end of the recitation joined the prophet and his followers in adoration. Mohammed, being informed by the angel Gabriel of the reason for their doing so, was much concerned until this verse was revealed for his consolation. The objectionable passage was of course annulled, and the verse made to read as it now stands.

² Either 'the day of resurrection,' as giving birth to no day after it, or, 'a day of battle and defeat,' that makes mothers childless, such as the infidels experienced at Bedr.

and do aright shall be in gardens of pleasure, but those who misbelieve and say our signs are lies, these—for them is shameful woe.

And those who flee in God's way, and then are slain or die, God will provide them with a goodly provision; for, verily, God is the best of providers.

He shall surely make them enter by an entrance that they like; for, verily, God is knowing, clement.

That (is so). Whoever punishes with the like of what he has been injured with, and shall then be outraged again, God shall surely help him; verily, God pardons, forgives.

[60] That for that God joins on the night to the day, and joins on the day to the night, and that God is hearing, seeing; that is for that God is the truth, and for that what ye call on beside Him is falsehood, and that God is the high, the great.

Hast thou not seen that God sends down from the sky water, and on the morrow the earth is green? verily, God is kind and well aware.

His is what is in the heavens and what is in the earth; and, verily, God is rich and to be praised.

Hast thou not seen that God has subjected for you what is in the earth, and the ship that runs on in the sea at His bidding, and He holds back the sky from falling on the earth save at His bidding¹? verily, God to men is gracious, merciful.

[65] He it is who quickens you, then makes you die, then will He quicken you again—verily, man is indeed ungrateful.

¹ As it will do at the last day. The words of the text might also be rendered 'withholds the rain,' though the commentators do not seem to notice this sense.

For every nation have we made rites which they observe ; let them not then dispute about the matter, but call upon thy Lord ; verily, thou art surely in a right guidance !

But if they wrangle with thee, say, 'God best knows what ye do.'

God shall judge between them on the resurrection day concerning that whereon they disagreed.

Didst thou not know that God knows what is in the heavens and the earth ? verily, that is in a book ; verily, that for God is easy.

[70] And they serve beside God what He has sent down no power for, and what they have no knowledge of ; but the wrong-doers shall have none to help them.

When our signs are read to them manifest, thou mayest recognise in the faces of those who misbelieve disdain ; they well-nigh rush at those who recite to them our signs. Say, 'Shall I inform you of something worse than that for you, the Fire which God has promised to those who misbelieve ? an evil journey shall it be !'

O ye folk ! a parable is struck out for you, so listen to it. Verily, those on whom ye call beside God could never create a fly if they all united together to do it, and if the fly should despoil them of aught they could not snatch it away from it—weak is both the seeker and the sought.

They do not value God at His true value ; verily, God is powerful, mighty.

God chooses apostles of the angels and of men ; verily, God hears and sees. [75] He knows what is before them and what is behind them; and unto God affairs return.

O ye who believe! bow down and adore, and serve your Lord, and do well, haply ye may prosper; and fight strenuously for God, as is His due. He has elected you, and has not put upon you any hindrance by your religion,—the faith of your father Abraham. He has named you Muslims before and in this (book), that the Apostle may be a witness against you, and that ye may be witnesses against men.

Be ye then steadfast in prayer, and give alms, and hold fast by God; He is your sovereign, and an excellent sovereign, and an excellent help!

THE CHAPTER OF BELIEVERS.

(XXIII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Prosperous are the believers who in their prayers are humble, and who from vain talk turn aside, and who in almsgiving are active. [5] And who guard their private parts—except for their wives or what their right hands possess for then, verily, they are not to be blamed;—but whoso craves aught beyond that, they are the transgressors—and who observe their trusts and covenants, and who guard well their prayers: [10] these are the heirs who shall inherit Paradise; they shall dwell therein for aye!

We have created man from an extract of clay; then we made him a clot in a sure depository; then we created the clot congealed blood, and we created the congealed blood a morsel; then we created the morsel bone, and we clothed the bone with flesh; then we produced it another creation; and blessed be God, the best of creators¹!

[15] Then shall ye after that surely die; then shall ye on the day of resurrection be raised

And we have created above you seven roads²; nor are we heedless of the creation.

And we send down from the heaven water by measure, and we make it rest in the earth; but, verily, we are able to take it away; and we produce for you thereby gardens of palms and grapes wherein ye have many fruits, and whence ye eat.

[20] And a tree growing out of Mount Sinai which produces oil, and a condiment for those who eat.

And, verily, ye have a lesson in the cattle; we give you to drink of what is in their bellies; and ye have therein many advantages, and of them ye eat, and on them and on ships ye are borne!

We sent Noah unto his people, and he said, 'O my people! worship God, ye have no god but Him; do ye then not fear?'

Said the chiefs of those who misbelieved among his people, 'This is nothing but a mortal like yourselves who wishes to have preference over you, and had God pleased He would have sent angels; we have not heard of this amongst our fathers of yore: [25] he is nothing but a man possessed; let him bide then for a season.'

Said he, 'Help me, for they call me liar!'

And we inspired him, 'Make the ark under

¹ See Part I, p. 126, note 2.

² That is, 'seven heavens.'

our eyes and inspiration ; and when the oven boils over, conduct into it of every kind two, with thy family, except him of them against whom the word has passed ; and do not address me for those who do wrong, verily, they are to be drowned !

‘ But when thou art settled, thou and those with thee in the ark, say, “ Praise belongs to God, who saved us from the unjust people ! ”

[30] ‘ And say, “ My Lord ! make me to alight in a blessed alighting-place, for Thou art the best of those who cause men to alight ! ” ’ Verily, in that is a sign, and, verily, we were trying them.

Then we raised up after them another generation ; and we sent amongst them a prophet of themselves (saying), ‘ Serve God, ye have no god but He ; will ye then not fear ? ’

Said the chiefs of his people who misbelieved, and called the meeting of the last day a lie, and to whom we gave enjoyment in the life of this world, ‘ This is only a mortal like yourselves, who eats of what ye eat, [35] and drinks of what ye drink ; and if ye obey a mortal like yourselves, verily, ye will then be surely losers ! Does he promise you that when ye are dead, and have become dust and bones, that then ye will be brought forth ?

‘ Away, away with what ye are threatened,—there is only our life in the world ! We die and we live, and we shall not be raised ! [40] He is only a man who forges against God a lie. And we believe not in him ! ’

Said he, ‘ My Lord ! help me, for they call me liar ! ’ He said, ‘ Within a little they will surely awake repenting ! ’

And the noise seized them deservedly ; and we made them as rubbish borne by a torrent ; so, away with the unjust people !

Then we raised up after them other generations.

[45] No nation can anticipate its appointed time, nor keep it back.

Then we sent our apostles one after another. Whenever its apostle came to any nation they called him a liar ; and we made some to follow others ; and we made them legends ; away then with a people who do not believe !

Then we sent Moses and his brother Aaron with our signs, and with plain authority to Pharaoh and his chiefs, but they were too big with pride, and were a haughty people.

And they said, ' Shall we believe two mortals like ourselves, when their people are servants of ours ?'

[50] So they called them liars, and were of those who perished.

And we gave Moses the Book, that haply they might be guided.

And we made the son of Mary and his mother a sign ; and we lodged them both on a high place, furnished with security and a spring.

O ye apostles ! eat of the good things and do right ; verily, what ye do I know !

And, verily, this nation¹ of yours is one nation, and I am your Lord ; so fear me.

[55] And they have become divided as to their affair amongst themselves into sects², each party rejoicing in what they have themselves. So leave them in their flood (of error) for a time.

¹ Or, 'religion.'

² Literally, 'into Scriptures,' i.e. into sects, each appealing to a particular book.

Do they reckon that that of which we grant them such an extent, of wealth and children, we hasten to them as good things — nay, but they do not perceive!

Verily, those who shrink with terror at their Lord, [60] and those who in the signs of their Lord believe, and those who with their Lord join none, and those who give what they do give while their hearts are afraid that they unto their Lord will return,—these hasten to good things and are first to gain the same. But we will not oblige a soul beyond its capacity; for with us is a book that utters the truth, and they shall not be wronged.

[65] Nay, their hearts are in a flood (of error) at this, and they have works beside this which they do¹. Until we catch the affluent ones amongst them with the torment; then lo! they cry for aid.

Cry not for aid to-day! verily, against us ye will not be helped. My signs were recited to you, but upon your heels did ye turn back, big with pride at it², in vain discourse by night.

[70] Is it that they did not ponder over the words, whether that has come to them which came not to their fathers of yore? Or did they not know their apostle, that they thus deny him? Or do they say, 'He is possessed by a ginn?' Nay, he came to them with the truth, and most of them are averse from the truth.

But if the truth were to follow their lusts, the heavens and the earth would be corrupted with all who in them are!—Nay, we brought them their reminder, but they from their reminder turn aside.

¹ I.e. their works are far different to the good works just described.

² At their possession of the Kaabah. The Qurâis are meant.

Or dost thou ask them for a tribute? but the tribute of thy Lord is better, for He is the best of those who provide.

[75] And, verily, thou dost call them to a right way; but, verily, those who believe not in the hereafter from the way do veer.

But if we had mercy on them, and removed the distress¹ they have, they would persist in their rebellion, blindly wandering on!

And we caught them with the torment², but they did not abase themselves before their Lord, nor did they humble themselves; until we opened for them a door with grievous torment, then lo! they are in despair.

[80] He it is who produced for you hearing, and sight, and minds,—little is it that ye thank. And He it is who created you in the earth, and unto Him shall ye be gathered. And He it is who gives you life and death; and His is the alternation of the night and the day; have ye then no sense?

Nay, but they said like that which those of yore did say.

They said, 'What! when we have become earth and bones, are we then going to be raised? [85] We have been promised this, and our fathers too, before;—this is naught but old folks' tales!'

Say, 'Whose is the earth and those who are therein, if ye but know?'

¹ The famine which the Meccans suffered; and which was attributed to Mohammed's denunciations.

² Their defeat at Bedr.

They will say, 'God's.' Say, 'Do ye not then mind?'

Say, 'Who is Lord of the seven heavens, and Lord of the mighty throne?'

They will say, 'God.' Say, 'Do ye not then fear?'

[90] Say, 'In whose hand is the dominion of everything; He succours but is not succoured,—if ye did but know?'

They will say, 'God's.' Say, 'Then how can ye be so infatuated?'

Nay, we have brought them the truth, but, verily, they are liars!

God never took a son, nor was there ever any god with Him;—then each god would have gone off with what he had created, and some would have exalted themselves over others,—celebrated be His praises above what they attribute (to Him)!

He who knows the unseen and the visible, exalted be He above what they join with Him!

[95] Say, 'My Lord! if Thou shouldst show me what they are threatened,—my Lord! then place me not amongst the unjust people.'

Repel evil by what is better¹. We know best what they attribute (to thee). And say, 'My Lord! I seek refuge in Thee from the incitings of the devils; [100] and I seek refuge in Thee from their presence!'

Until when death comes to any one of them he says, 'My Lord! send ye me back², haply I may do right in that which I have left!'

¹ I. e. by doing good for evil, provided that the cause of Islâm suffers nothing from it.

² I. e. back to life. The plural is used 'by way of respect,' say the commentators.

Not so!—a mere word he speaks!—but behind them is a bar until the day they shall be raised.

And when the trumpet shall be blown, and there shall be no relation between them on that day, nor shall they beg of each other then!

[105] And he whose scales are heavy,—they are the prosperous. But he whose scales are light,—these are they who lose themselves, in hell to dwell for aye! The fire shall scorch their faces, and they shall curl their lips therein! 'Were not my signs recited to you? and ye said that they were lies!' They say, 'Our Lord! our misery overcame us, and we were a people who did err! Our Lord! take us out therefrom, and if we return¹, then shall we be unjust.'

[110] He will say, 'Go ye away into it and speak not to me!'

Verily, there was a sect of my servants who said, 'Our Lord! we believe, so pardon us, and have mercy upon us, for Thou art the best of the merciful ones.'

And ye took them for a jest until ye forgot my reminder and did laugh thereat. Verily, I have recompensed them this day for their patience; verily, they are happy now.

He will say, 'How long a number of years did ye tarry on earth?' [115] They will say, 'We tarried a day or part of a day, but ask the Numberers².'

He will say, 'Ye have only tarried a little, were ye but to know it. Did ye then reckon that we created you for sport, and that to us ye would not return?' But exalted be God, the true; there is no god but He, the Lord of the noble throne! and ¹ To our evil ways.

² That is, the recording angels.

whoso calls upon another god with God has no proof of it, but, verily, his account is with his Lord; verily, the misbelievers shall not prosper. And say, 'Lord, pardon and be merciful, for Thou art the best of the merciful ones!'

THE CHAPTER OF LIGHT.

(XXIV. Medīnah.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

A chapter which we have sent down and determined, and have sent down therein manifest signs; haply ye may be mindful.

The whore and the whoremonger. Scourge each of them with a hundred stripes, and do not let pity for them take hold of you in God's religion, if ye believe in God and the last day; and let a party of the believers witness their torment. And the whoremonger shall marry none but a whore or an idolatress; and the whore shall none marry but an adulterer or an idolater; God has prohibited this to the believers; but those who cast (imputations) on chaste women and then do not bring four witnesses, scourge them with eighty stripes, and do not receive any testimony of theirs ever, for these are the workers of abomination. [5] Except such as repent after that and act aright, for, verily, God is forgiving and compassionate.

And those who cast (imputation) on their wives and have no witnesses except themselves, then the testimony of one of them shall be to testify four times that, by God, he is of those who speak the truth; and the fifth testimony shall be that the curse of God shall be on him if he be of those who lie. And it shall avert the punishment from her if she bears testimony four times that, by God, he is of those who lie; and the fifth that the wrath of God shall be on her if he be of those who speak the truth.

[10] And were it not for God's grace upon you and His mercy, and that God is relenting, wise . . .¹

Verily, those who bring forward the lie, a band of you,—reckon it not as an evil for you, nay, it is good for you; every man of them shall have what he has earned of sin; and he of them who managed to aggravate it, for him is mighty woe².

Why did not, when ye heard it, the believing men and believing women think good in themselves, and say, 'This is an obvious lie?' Why did they not bring four witnesses to it? but since they did not bring the witnesses, then they in God's eyes are the liars. And but for God's grace upon you, and His mercy in this world and the next, there would have touched you, for that which ye spread abroad, mighty woe. When ye reported it with your tongues, and spake with your mouths what ye had no knowledge of, and reckoned it a light thing, while in God's eyes it was grave.

¹ He would punish you.

² This passage and what follows refers to the scandal about Mohammed's favourite wife Ayesha, who, having been accidentally left behind when the prophet and his followers were starting at night on an expedition, in the sixth year of the Hîgrah, was brought on to the camp in the morning by Zafwân ibn de Mu'ha'al: this gave rise to rumours derogatory to Ayesha's character, which these verses are intended to refute. Ayesha never forgave those who credited the reports against her innocence, and 'Ali, who had spoken in a disparaging manner of her on the occasion, so seriously incurred her displeasure that she contrived to bring about the ruin of his family, and the murder of his two sons Hasan and Husein; the principal parties concerned in the actual spread of the calumny were punished with the fourscore stripes above ordained, with the exception of the ringleader, Abdallah ibn Ubbâi, who was too important a person to be so treated.

[15] And why did ye not say when ye heard it, 'It is not for us to speak of this? Celebrated be His praises, this is a mighty calumny!'

God admonishes you that ye return not to the like of it ever, if ye be believers; and God manifests to you the signs, for God is knowing, wise.

Verily, those who love that scandal should go abroad amongst those who believe, for them is grievous woe in this world and the next; for God knows, but ye do not know.

[20] And but for God's grace upon you, and His mercy, and that God is kind and compassionate . . . !

O ye who believe! follow not the footsteps of Satan, for he who follows the footsteps of Satan, verily, he bids you sin and do wrong; and but for God's grace upon you and His mercy, not one of you would be ever pure; but God purifies whom He will, for God both hears and knows. And let not those amongst you who have plenty and ample means swear that they will not give aught to their kinsman and the poor¹ and those who have fled their homes in God's way, but let them pardon and pass it over. Do ye not like God to forgive you? and God is forgiving, compassionate.

¹ Abu bekr had sworn not to do anything more for a relation of his, named Mis'a'h, who had taken part in spreading the reports against Ayesha.

Verily, those who cast imputations on chaste women who are negligent but believing shall be cursed in this world and the next; and for them is mighty woe. The day when their tongues and hands and feet shall bear witness against them of what they did, on [25] that day God will pay them their just due; and they shall know that God, He is the plain truth.

The vile women to the vile men, and the vile men to the vile women; and the good women to the good men, and the good men to the good women: these are clear of what they say to them—forgiveness and a noble provision!

O ye who believe! enter not into houses which are not your own houses, until ye have asked leave and saluted the people thereof, that is better for you; haply ye may be mindful. And if ye find no one therein, then do not enter them until permission is given you, and if it be said to you, 'Go back!' then go back, it is purer for you; for God of what ye do doth know. It is no crime against you that ye enter uninhabited houses,—a convenience for you;—and God knows what ye show and what ye hide.

[30] Say to the believers that they cast down their looks and guard their private parts; that is purer for them; verily, God is well aware of what they do.

And say to the believing women that they cast down their looks and guard their private parts, and display not their ornaments, except those which are outside; and let them pull their kerchiefs over their bosoms and not display their ornaments save to their husbands and fathers, or the fathers of their husbands, or their sons, or the sons of their husbands, or their brothers, or their brothers' sons, or their sisters' sons, or their women, or what their right hands possess, or their male attendants who are incapable¹, or to children who do not note women's nakedness; and that they beat not with their feet that their hidden ornaments may be known²;—but turn ye all repentant to God, O ye believers! haply ye may prosper.

And marry the single amongst you, and the righteous among your servants and your hand-maidens. If they be poor, God will enrich them of His grace, for God both comprehends and knows. And let those who cannot find a match, until God enriches them of His grace, keep chaste.

And such of those whom your right hands possess as crave a writing³, write it for them, if ye know any good in them, and give them of the wealth of God which He has given you. And do not compel your slave girls to prostitution, if they desire to keep continent, in order to crave the goods of the life of this world; but he who does compel them, then, verily, God after they are compelled is forgiving, compassionate⁴.

Now have we sent down to you manifest signs, and the like of those who have passed away before you⁵, and as an admonition to those who fear.

¹ Or, according to some, of deficient intellect.

² I. e. they are not to tinkle their bangles or ankle-rings.

³ I. e. a document allowing them to redeem themselves on payment of a certain sum.

⁴ Abdallah ibn Ubbâi, mentioned in Part II, p. 74, note 2, had six slave girls whom he compelled to live by prostitution. One of them complained to Mohammed, whence this passage.

⁵ I. e. like the stories of Joseph, Part I, p. 221, and the Virgin

[35] God is the light of the heavens and the earth; His light is as a niche in which is a lamp, and the lamp is in a glass, the glass is as though it were a glittering star; it is lit from a blessed tree, an olive neither of the east nor of the west, the oil of which would well-nigh give light though no fire touched it,—light upon light!—God guides to His light whom He pleases; and God strikes out parables for men, and God all things doth know.

In the houses God has permitted to be reared and His name to be mentioned therein—His praises are celebrated therein mornings and evenings.

Men whom neither merchandize nor selling divert from the remembrance of God and steadfastness in prayer and giving alms, who fear a day when hearts and eyes shall be upset;—that God may recompense them for the best that they have done, and give them increase of His grace; for God provides whom He pleases without count.

But those who misbelieve, their works are like the mirage in a plain, the thirsty counts it water till when he comes to it he finds nothing, but he finds that God is with him; and He will pay him his account, for God is quick to take account.

[40] Or like darkness on a deep sea, there covers it a wave above which is a wave, above which is a cloud,—darknesses one above the other,—when one puts out his hand he can scarcely see it; for he to whom God has given no light, he has no light.

Mary, Part II, p. 29, both of whom, like Ayesha, were accused of incontinence, and miraculously proved innocent.

Hast thou not seen that God,—all who are in the heavens and the earth celebrate His praises, and the birds too spreading out their wings; each one knows its prayer and its praise, and God knows what they do?

Hast thou not seen that God drives the clouds, and then re-unites them, and then accumulates them, and thou mayest see the rain coming forth from their midst; and He sends down from the sky mountains¹ with hail therein, and He makes it fall on whom He pleases, and He turns it from whom He pleases; the flashing of His lightning well-nigh goes off with their sight?

God interchanges the night and the day; verily, in that is a lesson to those endowed with sight.

And God created every beast from water, and of them is one that walks upon its belly, and of them one that walks upon two feet, and of them one that walks upon four. God creates what He pleases; verily, God is mighty over all!

[45] Now have we sent down manifest signs, and God guides whom He pleases unto the right way.

They will say, 'We believe in God and in the Apostle, and we obey.' Then a sect of them turned their backs after that, and they are not believers.

And when they are called to God and His Apostle to judge between them, lo! a sect of them do turn aside. But had the right been on their side they would have come to him submissively enough.

Is there a sickness in their hearts, or do they doubt, or do they fear lest God and His Apostle should deal unfairly by them?—Nay, it is they who are unjust.

¹ I. e. masses of cloud as large as mountains.

[50] The speech of the believers, when they are called to God and His Apostle to judge between them, is only to say, 'We hear and we obey;' and these it is who are the prosperous, for whoso obeys God and His Apostle and dreads God and fears Him, these it is who are the happy.

They swear by God with their most strenuous oath that hadst Thou ordered them they would surely go forth. Say, 'Do not swear—reasonable obedience¹; verily, God knows what ye do.'

Say, 'Obey God and obey the Apostle; but if ye turn your backs he has only his burden to bear, and ye have only your burden to bear. But if ye obey him, ye are guided; but the Apostle has only his plain message to deliver.'

God promises those of you who believe and do right that He will give them the succession in the earth as He gave the succession to those before them, and He will establish for them their religion which He has chosen for them, and to give them, after their fear, safety in exchange;—they shall worship me, they shall not associate aught with me: but whoso disbelieves after that, those it is who are the sinners.

[55] And be steadfast in prayer and give alms and obey the Apostle, haply ye may obtain mercy.

Do not reckon that those who misbelieve can frustrate (God) in the earth, for their resort is the Fire, and an ill journey shall it be.

¹ The construction of the original is vague, and the commentators themselves make but little of it. The most approved rendering, however, seems to be either that obedience is the reasonable course to pursue, and not the mere swearing to obey.

O ye who believe! let those whom your right hands possess, and those amongst you who have not reached puberty, ask leave of you three times: before the prayer of dawn, and when ye put off your clothes at noon, and after the evening prayer;—three times of privacy for you¹: there is no crime on either you or them after these while ye are continually going one about the other. Thus does God explain to you His signs, for God is knowing, wise.

And when your children reach puberty let them ask leave as those before them asked leave. Thus does God explain to you His signs, for God is knowing, wise.

And those women who have stopped (child-bearing), who do not hope for a match, it is no crime on them that they put off their clothes so as not to display their ornaments; but that they abstain is better for them, for God both hears and knows.

[60] There is no hindrance to the blind, and no hindrance to the lame, and no hindrance to the sick, and none upon yourselves that you eat from your houses, or the houses of your fathers, or the houses of your mothers, or the houses of your brothers, or the houses of your sisters, or the houses of your paternal uncles, or the houses of your paternal aunts, or the houses of your maternal uncles, or the houses of your maternal aunts, or what ye possess the keys of, or of your friend, there is no crime on you that ye eat all together or separately¹.

¹ I. e. at the times when persons are undressed, namely, to rise in the morning, to sleep at noon, and to retire for the night, their attendants and children must not come in without first asking permission.

And when ye enter houses then greet each other with a salutation from God, blessed and good. Thus does God explain to you His signs, haply ye may understand.

Only those are believers who believe in God and His Apostle, and when they are with Him upon public business go not away until they have asked his leave; verily, those who ask thy leave they it is who believe in God and His Apostle.

But when they ask thy leave for any of their own concerns, then give leave to whomsoever thou wilt of them, and ask pardon for them of God; verily, God is forgiving and merciful.

Make not the calling of the Apostle amongst yourselves like your calling one to the other²; God knows those of you who withdraw themselves covertly. And let those who disobey his order beware lest there befall them some trial or there befall them grievous woe. Ay, God's is what is in the heavens and the earth, He knows what ye are at; and the day ye shall be sent back to Him then He will inform you of what ye have done, for God all things doth know.

¹ The Arabs in Mohammed's time were superstitiously scrupulous about eating in any one's house but their own.

² That is, do not address the prophet without some respectful title.

THE CHAPTER OF THE DISCRIMINATION¹

(XXV. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Blessed be He who sent down the Discrimination to His servant that he might be unto the world a warner; whose is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth, and who has not taken to Himself a son, and who has no partner in His kingdom, and created everything, and then decreed it determinately! And they take beside Him gods who create not aught, but are themselves created, and cannot control for themselves harm or profit, and cannot control death, or life, or resurrection.

[5] And those who misbelieve say, 'This is nothing but a lie which he has forged, and another people hath helped him at it;' but they have wrought an injustice and a falsehood.

And they say, 'Old folks' tales, which he has got written down while they are dictated to him morning and evening.'

Say, 'He sent it down who knows the secret in the heavens and the earth; verily, He is ever forgiving, merciful!'

And they say, 'What ails this prophet that he eats food and walks in the markets?—unless there be sent down to him an angel and be a warner with him Or there be thrown to him a treasury, or he have a garden to eat therefrom . . . !' and the unjust say, 'Ye only follow an infatuated man.'

¹ In Arabic Al Furqân, which is one of the names of the Qur'ân.

[10] See how they strike out for thee parables, and err, and cannot find a way.

Blessed be He who, if He please, can make for thee better than that, gardens beneath which rivers flow, and can make for thee castles!

Nay, but they call the Hour a lie; but we have prepared for those who call the Hour a lie a blaze: when it seizes them from a far-off place they shall hear its raging and roaring; and when they are thrown into a narrow place thereof, fastened together, they shall call there for destruction.

[15] Call not to-day for one destruction, but call for many destructions!

Say, 'Is that better or the garden of eternity which was promised to those who fear—which is ever for them a recompense and a retreat?' They shall have therein what they please, to dwell therein for aye: that is of thy Lord a promise to be demanded.

And the day He shall gather them and what they served beside God, and He shall say, 'Was it ye who led my servants here astray, or did they err from the way?'

They shall say, 'Celebrated be Thy praise, it was not befitting for us to take any patrons but Thee; but Thou didst give them and their fathers enjoyment until they forgot the Reminder and were a lost people!'

[20] And now have they proved you liars for what ye say, and they¹ cannot ward off or help.

¹ Another reading of the text is, 'ye cannot.'

And he of you who does wrong we will make him taste great torment.

We have not sent before thee any messengers but that they ate food and walked in the markets; but we have made some of you a trial to others: will ye be patient? thy Lord doth ever look.

And those who do not hope to meet us say, 'Unless the angels be sent down to us, or we see our Lord . . . !' They are too big with pride in their souls and they have exceeded with a great excess!

— The day they shall see the angels,—no glad tidings on that day for the sinners, and they shall say, 'It is rigorously forbidden¹!'

[25] And we will go on to the works which they have done, and make them like motes in a sun-beam scattered! The fellows of Paradise on that day shall be in a better abiding-place and a better noonday rest.

The day the heavens shall be cleft asunder with the clouds, and the angels shall be sent down descending.

The true kingdom on that day shall belong to the Merciful, and it shall be a hard day for the misbelievers.

And the day when the unjust shall bite his hands² and say, 'O, would that I had taken a way with the Apostle³! [30] O, woe is me! would that I had ¹ The ancient Arabs used this formula when they met an enemy during a sacred month, and the person addressed would then abstain from hostilities. The sinners in this passage are supposed to use it to the angels, but without effect. Some commentators take it to mean that the 'glad tidings' are 'rigorously forbidden,' and that the angels are the speakers.

² See Chapter III, verse 115.

³ That is, followed him.

not taken such a one for a friend now, for he did lead me astray from the Reminder after it had come to me, for Satan leaves man in the lurch!

The Apostle said, 'O my Lord! verily, my people have taken this Qur'ân to be obsolete!'

Thus have we made for every prophet an enemy from among the sinners; but thy Lord is good guide and helper enough.

Those who misbelieve said, 'Unless the Qur'ân be sent down to him all at once¹ . . . !'—thus—that we may stablish thy heart therewith, did we reveal it piecemeal². [35] Nor shall they come to thee with a parable without our bringing thee the truth and the best interpretation.

They who shall be gathered upon their faces to hell,—these are in the worst place, and err most from the path.

And we did give to Moses the Book, and place with him his brother Aaron as a minister; and we said, 'Go ye to the people who say our signs are lies, for we will destroy them with utter destruction.'

And the people of Noah, when they said the apostles were liars, we drowned them, and we made them a sign for men; and we prepared for the unjust a grievous woe.

[40] And 'Âd and Thamûd and the people of ar Rass³, and many generations between them.

¹ Like the Pentateuch and Gospels, which were revealed all at once, according to the Mohammedan tradition.

² Or it may be rendered, 'slowly and distinctly;' the whole revelation of the Qur'ân extends over a period of twenty-three years.

³ The commentators do not know where to place ar Rass; some say it was a city in Yamâmah, others that it was a well near Midian, and others again that it was in 'Hadhramaut.

For each one have we struck out parables, and each one have we ruined with utter ruin.

Why, they¹ have come past the cities which were rained on with an evil rain; have they not seen them?—nay, they do not hope to be raised up again.

And when they saw thee they only took thee for a jest, 'Is this he whom God has sent as an apostle? he well-nigh leads us astray from our gods, had we not been patient about them.' But they shall know, when they see the torment, who errs most from the path. [45] Dost thou consider him who takes his lusts for his god? wilt thou then be in charge over him? or dost thou reckon that most of them will hear or understand? they are only like the cattle, nay, they err more from the way.

Hast thou not looked to thy Lord how He prolongs the shadow? but had He willed He would have made it stationary; then we make the sun a guide thereto, then we contract it towards us with an easy contraction.

And He it is who made the night for a garment; and sleep for repose, and made the day for men to rise up again. [50] And He it is who sent the winds with glad tidings before His mercy; and we send down from the heavens pure water, to quicken therewith the dead country, and to give it for drink to what we have created,—the cattle and many folk.

We have turned it² in various ways amongst them that they may remember; though most men refuse aught but to misbelieve. But, had we pleased, we would have sent in every city a warner. So obey not the unbelievers and fight strenuously with them in many a strenuous fight.

¹ That is, the idolatrous Meccans; see Part I, p. 249, note 2.

² That is, either the Qur'ân, cf. Part II, p. 5, line 25; or the words may be rendered, 'We distribute it' (the rain), &c.

[55] He it is who has let loose the two seas, this one sweet and fresh, that one bitter and pungent, and has made between them a rigorous prohibition.

And He it is who has created man from water, and has made for him blood relationship and marriage relationship; for thy Lord is mighty.

Yet they worship beside God what can neither profit them nor harm them; but he who misbelieves in his Lord backs up (the devil).

We have only sent thee to give glad tidings and to warn. Say, 'I ask you not for it a hire unless one please to take unto his Lord a way¹.' [60] And rely thou upon the Living One who dies not; and celebrate His praise, for He knows well enough about the thoughts of His servants. He who created the heavens and the earth, and what is between them, in six days, and then made for the throne; the Merciful One, ask concerning Him of One who is aware.

And when it is said, 'Adore ye the Merciful!' they say, 'What is the Merciful? shall we adore what thou dost order us?' and it only increases their aversion.

Blessed be He who placed in the heavens zodiacal signs, and placed therein the lamp and an illuminating moon!

And He it is who made the night and the day

¹ That is, that if a man chose to expend anything for the cause of God he can do so.

alternating for him who desires to remember or who wishes to be thankful.

And the servants of the Merciful are those who walk upon the earth lowly, and when the ignorant address them, say, 'Peace!' [65] And those who pass the night adoring their Lord and standing¹; and those who say, 'O our Lord! turn from us the torment of hell; verily, its torments are persistent; verily, they are evil as an abode and a station.'

And those who when they spend are neither extravagant nor miserly, but who ever take their stand between the two; and who call not upon another god with God; and kill not the soul which God has prohibited save deservedly²; and do not commit fornication: for he who does that shall meet with a penalty; doubled for him shall be the torment on the resurrection day, and he shall be therein for aye despised. [70] Save he who turns again and believes and does a righteous work; for, as to those, God will change their evil deeds to good, for God is ever forgiving, merciful.

And he who turns again and does right, verily, he turns again to God repentant.

And those who do not testify falsely; and when they pass by frivolous discourse, pass by it honourably; and those who when they are reminded of the signs of their Lord do not fall down thereat deaf and blind; and those who say, 'Our Lord! grant us from our wives and seed that which may cheer our eyes, and make us models to the pious!'

[75] These shall be rewarded with a high place³ for that they were patient: and they shall meet

¹ For prayer.

² See Part I, p. 135, note 1.

³ In Paradise.

therein with salutation and peace,—to dwell therein for aye; a good abode and station shall it be!

Say, 'My Lord cares not for you though you should not call (on Him); and ye have called (the Apostle) a liar, but it shall be (a punishment) which ye cannot shake off.'

THE CHAPTER OF THE POETS.

(XXVI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

T. S. M. Those are the signs of the perspicuous Book; haply thou art vexing thyself to death that they will not be believers!

If we please we will send down upon them from the heaven a sign, and their necks shall be humbled thereto. But there comes not to them any recent Reminder from the Merciful One that they do not turn away from. [5] They have called (thee) liar! but there shall come to them a message of that at which they mocked.

Have they not looked to the earth, how we caused to grow therein of every noble kind? verily, in that is a sign; but most of them will never be believers! but, verily, thy Lord He is mighty and merciful.

And when thy Lord called Moses (saying), 'Come to the unjust people, [10] to the people of Pharaoh, will they not fear?' Said he, 'My Lord! verily, I fear that they will call me liar; and my breast is straitened, and my tongue is not fluent; send then unto Aaron¹, for they have a crime against me, and I fear that they may kill me².' Said He, 'Not so; but go with our signs, verily, we are with you listening.

[15] 'And go to Pharaoh and say, "Verily, we are the apostles of the Lord of the worlds (to tell thee to) send with us the children of Israel."'

And he said, 'Did we not bring thee up amongst us as a child? and thou didst dwell amongst us for years of thy life; and thou didst do thy deed which thou hast done, and thou art of the ungrateful!'

Said he, 'I did commit this, and I was of those who erred.

[20] 'And I fled from you when I feared you, and my Lord granted me judgment, and made me one of His messengers; and this is the favour thou hast obliged me with, that thou hast enslaved the children of Israel!'

Said Pharaoh, 'Who is the Lord of the worlds?' Said he, 'The Lord of the heavens and the earth and what is between the two, if ye are but sure.'

Said he to those about him, 'Do ye not listen?' [25] Said he, 'Your Lord and the Lord of your fathers of yore!'

Said he, 'Verily, your apostle who is sent to you is surely mad!'

Said he, 'The Lord of the east and of the west, and of what is between the two, if ye had but sense!'

Said he, 'If thou dost take a god besides Me I will surely make thee one of the imprisoned!'

Said he, 'What, if I come to thee with something obvious?'

¹ That he may be my minister.

² The slaying of the Egyptian.

[30] Said he, 'Bring it, if thou art of those who tell the truth!'

And he threw down his rod, and, behold, it was an obvious serpent! and he plucked out his hand, and, behold, it was white to the spectators!

He¹ said to the chiefs around him, 'Verily, this is a knowing sorcerer, he desires to turn you out of your land! what is it then ye bid?'

[35] They said, 'Give him and his brother some hope, and send into the cities to collect and bring to thee every knowing sorcerer.'

And the sorcerers assembled at the appointed time on a stated day, and it was said to the people, 'Are ye assembled? haply we may follow the sorcerers if we gain the upper hand.'

[40] And when the sorcerers came they said to Pharaoh, 'Shall we, verily, have a hire if we gain the upper hand?' Said he, 'Yes; and, verily, ye shall then be of those who are nigh (my throne).' And Moses said to them, 'Throw down what ye have to throw down.' So they threw down their ropes and their rods and said, 'By Pharaoh's might, verily, we it is who shall gain the upper hand!'

And Moses threw down his rod, and, lo, it swallowed up what they falsely devised!

[45] And the sorcerers threw themselves down, adoring. Said they, 'We believe in the Lord of the worlds, the Lord of Moses and Aaron!' Said he, 'Do ye believe in Him ere I give you leave? Verily, he is your chief who has taught you sorcery, but soon ye shall know. I will surely cut off your hands and your feet from opposite sides, and I will crucify you all together!'

¹ Pharaoh.

[50] They said, 'No harm; verily, unto our Lord do we return! verily, we hope that our Lord will forgive us our sins, for we are the first of believers!'

And we inspired Moses, 'Journey by night with my servants; verily, ye are pursued.'

And Pharaoh sent into the cities to collect; 'Verily, these are a small company. [55] And, verily, they are enraged with us; but we are a multitude, wary!

'Turn them out of gardens and springs, and treasures, and a noble station!'—thus,—and we made the children of Israel to inherit them.

[60] And they followed them at dawn; and when the two hosts saw each other, Moses' companions said, 'Verily, we are overtaken!' Said he, 'Not so; verily, with me is my Lord, He will guide me.'

And we inspired Moses, 'Strike with thy rod the sea;' and it was cleft asunder, and each part was like a mighty mountain. And then we brought the others. [65] And we saved Moses and those with him all together; then we drowned the others; and that is a sign: but most of them will never be believers! And, verily, thy Lord He is mighty, merciful.

And recite to them the story of Abraham; [70] when he said to his father and his people, 'What do ye serve?' They said, 'We serve idols, and we are still devoted to them.' He said, 'Can they hear you when ye call, or profit you, or harm?'

They said, 'No; but we found our fathers doing thus.' [75] He said, 'Have ye considered what ye have been serving, ye and your fathers before you? Verily, they are foes to me, save only the Lord of the worlds, who created me and guides me, and who gives me food and drink. [80] And when I am sick He heals me; He who will kill me, and then bring me to life; and who I hope will forgive me my sins on the day of judgment! Lord, grant me judgment, and let me reach the righteous; and give me a tongue of good report amongst posterity; [85] and make me of the heirs of the paradise of pleasure; and pardon my father, verily, he is of those who err; and disgrace me not on the day when they are raised up again; the day when wealth shall profit not, nor sons, but only he who comes to God with a sound heart. [90] And paradise shall be brought near to the pious; and hell shall be brought forth to those who go astray, and it shall be said to them, "Where is what ye used to worship beside God? can they help you, or get help themselves?" And they shall fall headlong into it, they and those who have gone astray, [95] and the hosts of Iblîs all together!

'They shall say, while they quarrel therein, "By God! we were surely in an obvious error, when we made you equal to the Lord of the worlds! but it was only sinners who led us astray. [100] But we have no intercessors and no warm friend; but had we a turn we would be of the believers."—Verily, in that is a sign, but most of them will never be believers; and, verily, thy Lord He is mighty and merciful.

[105] The people of Noah said the apostles were liars, when their brother Noah said to them, 'Will ye not fear? verily, I am a faithful apostle to you; then fear God and obey me. I do not ask you for it any hire; my hire is only with the Lord of the worlds. [110] So fear God and obey me.' They said, 'Shall we believe in thee, when the reprobates follow thee?' He said, 'I did not know what they were doing; their account is only with my Lord, if ye but perceive. And I am not one to drive away the believers, [115] I am only a plain warner.'

They said, 'Verily, if thou desist not, O Noah! thou shalt surely be of those who are stoned!' Said he, 'My Lord! verily, my people call me liar; open between me and between them an opening, and save me and those of the believers who are with me!'

So we saved him and those with him in the laden ark, [120] then we drowned the rest; verily, in that is a sign, but most of them will never be believers; and, verily, thy Lord He is mighty and merciful.

And 'Âd called the apostles liars; when their brother Hûd said to them, 'Will ye not fear? [125] Verily, I am to you a faithful apostle; then fear God and obey me. I do not ask you for it any hire; my hire is only with the Lord of the worlds. Do ye build on every height a landmark in sport, and take to works that haply ye may be immortal?'

[130] 'And when ye assault ye assault like tyrants; but fear God and obey me; and fear Him who hath given you an extent of cattle and sons, and gardens and springs. [135] Verily, I fear for you the torment of a mighty day!'

They said, 'It is the same to us if thou admonish or art not of those who do admonish; this is nothing but old folks' fictions, for we shall not be tormented!'

And they called him liar! but we destroyed them. Verily, in that is a sign, but most of them will never be believers. [140] And, verily, thy Lord is mighty, merciful.

Thamûd called the apostles liars; when their brother Zâli'h said to them, 'Do ye not fear? verily, I am to you a faithful apostle; so fear God and obey me. [145] I do not ask you for it any hire; my hire is only with the Lord of the worlds. Shall ye be left here in safety with gardens and springs, and corn-fields and palms, the spathes whereof are fine? and ye hew out of the mountains houses skilfully. [150] But fear God and obey me; and obey not the bidding of the extravagant, who do evil in the earth and do not act aright!'

They said, 'Thou art only of the infatuated; thou art but mortal like ourselves; so bring us a sign, if thou be of those who speak the truth!'

[155] He said, 'This she-camel shall have her drink and you your drink on a certain day; but touch her not with evil, or there will seize you the torment of a mighty day!'

But they hamstrung her, and on the morrow they repented; and the torment seized them; verily, in that is a sign; but most of them will never be believers: but verily, thy Lord He is mighty, merciful.

[160] The people of Lot called the apostles liars; when their brother Lot said to them, 'Do ye not fear? verily, I am to you a faithful apostle; then fear God and obey me. I do not ask you for it any hire; my hire is only with the Lord of the worlds. [165] Do ye approach males of all the world and leave what God your Lord has created for you of your wives? nay, but ye are people who transgress!'

They said, 'Surely, if thou dost not desist, O Lot! thou shalt be of those who are expelled!'

Said he, 'Verily, I am of those who hate your deed; my Lord! save me and my people from what they do.'

[170] And we saved him and his people all together, except an old woman amongst those who lingered. Then we destroyed the others; and we rained down upon them a rain; and evil was the rain of those who were warned. Verily, in that is a sign; but most of them will never be believers. [175] And, verily, thy Lord He is mighty, merciful, compassionate.

The fellows of the Grove¹ called the apostles liars; Sho'hâib said to them, 'Will ye not fear? verily, I am to you a faithful apostle, then fear God and obey me. [180] I do not ask you for it any hire; my hire is only with the Lord of the worlds. Give good measure, and be not of those who diminish; and weigh with a fair balance, and do not cheat men of their goods; and waste not the land, despoiling it; and fear Him who created you and the races of yore!' [185] Said they, 'Thou art only of the infatuated; and thou art only a mortal like ourselves; and, verily, we think that thou art surely of the liars; so make a portion of the heaven to fall down upon us, if thou art of those who tell the truth!'

Said he, 'My Lord knows best what ye do!' but they called him liar, and the torment of the day of the shadow seized them; for it was the torment of a mighty day: [190] verily, in that is a sign; but most of them will never be believers ; but, verily, thy Lord He is mighty, merciful !

¹ See Part I, p. 249, note 3.

And, verily, it¹ is a revelation from the Lord of the worlds ; the Faithful Spirit came down with it² upon thy heart, that thou shouldst be of those who warn ;—[195] in plain Arabic language, and, verily, it is (foretold) in the scriptures of yore ! Have they not a sign, that the learned men of the children of Israel recognise it³ ? Had we sent it down to any barbarian, and he had read it to them, they would not have believed therein. [200] Thus have we made for it⁴ a way into the hearts of the sinners ; they will not believe therein until they see the grievous woe ! and it shall come to them suddenly while they do not perceive ! They will say, ‘ Shall we be respited ?—What ! do they wish to hasten on our torment ? ’

[205] What thinkest thou ? if we let them enjoy themselves for years, and then there come to them what they are threatened, that will not avail them which they had to enjoy ! But we do not destroy any city without its having warners as a reminder, for we are never unjust.

[210] The devils did not descend therewith ; it is not fit work for them ; nor are they able to do it. Verily, they are deposed from listening⁵ ; call not then with God upon other gods, or thou wilt be of the tormented ; but warn thy clansmen who are near of kin. [215] And lower⁶ thy wing to those of the believers who follow thee ; but if they rebel against thee, say, ‘ Verily, I am clear of what ye

¹ The Qur'ân.

² The angel Gabriel.

³ The Qur'ân.

⁴ Infidelity.

⁵ See Part I, p. 50.

⁶ See Part I, p. 250, note 2.

do,' and rely thou upon the mighty, merciful One, who sees thee when thou dost stand up, and thy posturing amongst those who adore¹. [220] Verily, He both hears and knows!

Shall I inform you upon whom the devils descend? they descend upon every sinful liar, and impart what they have heard²; but most of them are liars.

And the poets do those follow who go astray! [225] Dost thou not see that they wander distraught in every vale? and that they say that which they do not do? save those who believe, and do right, and remember God much, and defend themselves after they are wronged; but those who do wrong shall know with what a turn they shall be turned³.

THE CHAPTER OF THE ANT.

(XXVII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

T. S. Those are the signs of the Qur'ân and the perspicuous Book; a guidance and glad tidings to the believers, who are steadfast at prayer, and give alms, and of the hereafter are sure; verily, those who believe not in the hereafter we have made seemly for them their works, and they shall wander blindly on! [5] These are they who shall have an evil torment, and they in the hereafter shall be those who most lose! Verily, thou dost meet with this Qur'ân from the wise, the knowing One!

¹ Or, it may be thy going to and fro amongst believers, as Mohammed is reported to have done one night, to see what they were about, and he found the whole settlement 'buzzing like a hornet's nest with the sound of the recitation of the Qur'ân and of their prayers.'

² That is, by listening at the door of heaven; see Part I, p. 50, note 2.

³ That is, in what condition they shall be brought before God.

When Moses said to his people, 'Verily, I perceive a fire, I will bring you therefrom news; or I will bring you a burning brand; haply ye may be warmed.' But when he came to it he was called to, 'Blessed be He who is in the fire, and he who is about it! and celebrated be the praises of God, the Lord of the worlds! O Moses! verily, I am God, the mighty, wise; [10] throw down thy staff!' and when he saw it quivering, as though it were a snake, he turned back fleeing, and did not return. 'O Moses! fear not; verily, as for me—apostles fear not with me; save only those who have done wrong and then substitute good for evil; for, verily, I am forgiving, merciful! but put thy hand in thy bosom, it shall come forth white without hurt;—one of nine signs to Pharaoh and his people; verily, they are a people who act abominably.'

And when our signs came to them visibly, they said, 'This is obvious sorcery!' and they gainsaid them—though their souls made sure of them—unjustly, haughtily; but, behold what was the end of the evildoers!

[15] And we gave David and Solomon knowledge; and they both said, 'Praise belongs to God, who hath preferred us over many of His servants who believe!'

And Solomon was David's heir; and said, 'O ye folk! we have been taught the speech of birds, and we have been given everything; verily, this is an obvious grace!'

And assembled for Solomon were his hosts of the gins, and men, and birds, and they were marshalled; until they came upon the valley of the ants. Said an ant, 'O ye ants! go into your dwellings, that Solomon and his hosts crush you not while they do not perceive.'

And he smiled, laughing at her speech, and said, 'O Lord! excite me to be thankful for Thy favour, wherewith Thou hast favoured me and my parents, and to do righteousness which may please Thee; and make me enter into Thy mercy amongst Thy righteous servants!'

[20] And he reviewed the birds, and said, 'How is it I see not the hoopoe? is he then amongst the absent? I will surely torment him with a severe torment; or I will surely slaughter him; or he shall bring me obvious authority.'

And he tarried not long, and said, 'I have compassed what ye compassed not; for I bring you from Sebâ¹ a sure information: verily, I found a woman ruling over them, and she was given all things, and she had a mighty throne; and I found her and her people adoring the sun instead of God, for Satan had made seemly to them their works, and turned them from the path, so that they are not guided. [25] Will they not adore God who brings forth the secrets in the heavens, and knows what they hide and what they manifest?—God, there is no god but He, the Lord of the mighty throne!'

Said he, 'We will see whether thou hast told the truth, or whether thou art of those who lie. Go with this my letter and throw it before them, then turn back away from them, and see what they return.'

¹ The Sheba of the Bible, in the south of the Arabian peninsula.

Said she, 'O ye chiefs! verily, a noble letter has been thrown before me. [30] It is from Solomon, and, verily, it is, "In the name of the merciful and compassionate God. Do not rise up against me, but come to me resigned!"' She said, 'O ye chiefs! pronounce sentence for me in my affair. I never decide an affair until ye testify for me.'

They said, 'We are endowed with strength, and endowed with keen violence; but the bidding is thine, see then what it is that thou wilt bid.'

She said, 'Verily, kings when they enter a city despoil it, and make the mighty ones of its people the meanest; thus it is they do! [35] So, verily, I am going to send to them a gift, and will wait to see with what the messengers return.'

And when he came to Solomon, he said, 'Do ye proffer me wealth, when what God has given me is better than what He has given you? nay, ye in your gifts rejoice! return to them, for we will surely come to them with hosts which they cannot confront; and we will surely drive them out therefrom mean and made small!'

Said he, 'O ye chiefs! which of you will bring me her throne before they come to me resigned?'

Said a demon of the ginns, 'I will bring thee it before thou canst rise up from thy place, for I therein am strong and faithful.'

[40] He who had the knowledge of the Book¹ said, 'I will bring it to thee before thy glance can turn.' And when he saw it settled down beside him, he said, 'This is of my Lord's grace, that He may try me whether I am grateful or ungrateful, and he who is grateful is only grateful for his own soul, and he who is ungrateful,—verily, my Lord is rich and generous.'

¹ The commentators are uncertain as to whether this was 'Âzaf, Solomon's prime minister, or whether it was the prophet 'Hidhr, or the angel Gabriel, or, indeed, Solomon himself.

Said he, 'Disguise for her her throne; let us see whether she is guided, or whether she is of those who are not guided.' And when she came it was said, 'Was thy throne like this?' She said, 'It might be it;' and we were given knowledge before her, but we were resigned¹.

But that which she served beside God turned her away; verily, she was of the unbelieving people. And it was said to her, 'Enter the court;' and when she saw it, she reckoned it to be an abyss of water, and she uncovered her legs. Said he, 'Verily, it is a court paved with glass!' [45] Said she, 'My Lord! verily, I have wronged myself, but I am resigned with Solomon to God the Lord of the worlds!'

And we sent unto Thamûd their brother Zâli'h, 'Serve God;' but behold, they were two parties who contended!

Said he, 'O my people! why do ye hasten on evil acts before good deeds? why do ye not ask forgiveness of God? haply ye may obtain mercy.' They said, 'We have taken an augury concerning thee and those who are with thee.' Said he, 'Your augury is in God's hands; nay, but ye are a people who are tried!'

¹ Commentators differ as to whether the last words are to be taken as the conclusion of the Queen of Sheba's speech, or as Solomon's comment upon it.

And there were in the city nine persons who despoiled the land and did not right. [50] Said they, 'Swear to each other by God, we will surely fall on him by night and on his people; then we will surely say unto his next of kin, "We witnessed not the destruction of his people, and we do surely tell the truth!"' And they plotted a plot, and we plotted a plot, but they did not perceive. Behold, how was the end of their plot, that we destroyed them and their people all together!

Thus are their houses overturned, for that they were unjust; verily, in that is a sign to people who do know!

But we saved those who believed and who did fear.

[55] And Lot when he said to his people, 'Do ye approach an abominable sin while ye can see? do ye indeed approach men lustfully rather than women? nay! ye are a people who are ignorant.' But the answer of his people was only to say, 'Drive out Lot's family from your city! verily, they are a folk who would keep pure.'

But we saved him and his family except his wife, her we destined to be of those who lingered; and we rained down upon them rain, and evil was the rain of those who were warned.

[60] Say, 'Praise belongs to God; and peace be upon His servants whom He has chosen! Is God best, or what they associate with Him?' He who created the heavens and the earth; and sends down upon you from the heaven water; and we cause to grow therewith gardens fraught with beauty; ye could not cause the trees thereof to grow! Is there a god with God? nay, but they are a people who make peers with Him! He who made the earth, settled, and placed amongst it rivers; and placed upon it firm mountains; and placed between the two seas a barrier; is there a god with God? nay, but most of them know not! He who answers the distressed when he calls upon Him and removes the evil; and makes you successors in the earth; is there a god with God? little is it that ye are mindful. He who guides you in the darkness, of the land and of the sea; and who sends winds as glad tidings before His mercy; is there a god with God? exalted be God above what they associate with Him! [65] He who began the creation and then will make it return again; and who provides you from the heaven and the earth; is there a god with God? so bring your proofs if ye do speak the truth!

Say, 'None in the heavens or the earth know the unseen save only God; but they perceive not when they shall be raised!'—nay, but their knowledge attains to somewhat of the hereafter; nay, but they are in doubt concerning it! nay, but they are blind!

And those who disbelieved said, 'What! when we have become dust and our fathers too, shall we indeed be brought forth? [70] We were promised this, we and our fathers before us, this is nothing but old folks' tales!'

Say, 'Journey on through the land and see how was the end of the sinners! and grieve not for them, and be not straitened at what they plot.'

They say, 'When shall this threat be if ye do tell the truth?' Say, 'It may be that there is pressing close behind you a part of what ye would hasten on!' [75] But, verily, thy Lord is full of grace to men, but most of them will not be thankful ; and, verily, thy Lord knows what their breasts conceal and what they manifest ; and there is no secret thing in the heaven or the earth, save that it is in the perspicuous Book !

Verily, this Qur'ân relates to the people of Israel most of that whereon they do dispute ; and, verily, it is a guidance and a mercy to the believers. [80] Verily, thy Lord decides between them by His judgment, for He is mighty, knowing. Rely thou then upon God, verily, thou art standing on obvious truth. Verily, thou canst not make the dead to hear, and thou canst not make the deaf to hear the call when they turn their backs on thee ; nor art thou a guide to the blind, out of their error : thou canst only make to hear such as believe in our signs, and such as are resigned.

And when the sentence falls upon them we will bring forth a beast out of the earth that shall speak to them, (and say) that, 'Men of our signs would not be sure.'

[85] And the day when we will gather from every nation a troop of those who said our signs were lies ; and they shall be marshalled ; until they come, and He will say, 'Did ye say my signs were lies, when ye had compassed no knowledge thereof ? or what is it that ye were doing ?' and the sentence shall fall upon them for that they did wrong, and they shall not have speech.

Did they not see that we have made the night for them to rest in, and the day to see by ? verily, in that are signs to people who believe.

And the day when the trumpet shall be blown and all who are in the heavens and the earth shall be startled, save whom God pleases! and all shall come abjectly to Him. [90] And thou shalt see the mountains, which thou dost deem solid, pass away like the passing of the clouds;—the work of God who orders all things; verily, He is well aware of what ye do!

He who brings a good deed shall have better than it; and from the alarm of that day they shall be safe: but those who bring an evil deed shall be thrown down upon their faces in the fire. Shall ye be rewarded save for what ye have done?

I am bidden to serve the Lord of this country who has made it sacred, and whose are all things; and I am bidden to be of those who are resigned, and to recite the Qur'ân; and he who is guided he is only guided for himself; and he who errs,—say, 'I am only of those who warn!'

[95] And say, 'Praise be to God, He will show you His signs, and ye shall recognise them; for thy Lord is not heedless of what ye do!'

THE CHAPTER OF THE STORY.

(XXVIII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

T. S. M. Those are the signs of the perspicuous Book; we recite to thee from the history of Moses and Pharaoh in truth unto a people who believe.

Verily, Pharaoh was lofty in the land and made the people thereof sects; one party of them he weakened, slaughtering their sons and letting their women live. Verily, he was of the despoilers.

And we wished to be gracious to those who were weakened in the earth, and to make them models, and to make them the heirs; [5] and to establish for them in the earth; and to show Pharaoh and Hâmân¹ and their hosts what they had to beware of from them.

And we inspired the mother of Moses, 'Suckle him; and when thou art afraid for him then throw him into the river, and fear not and grieve not; verily, we are going to restore him to thee, and to make him of the apostles!'

And Pharaoh's family picked him up that he might be for them a foe and a grief; verily, Pharaoh and Hâmân and their hosts were sinners.

And Pharaoh's wife said, 'He is a cheering of the eye to me, and to thee. Kill him not; it may be that he will profit us, or that we may take him for a son;' for they did not perceive.

And the heart of Moses' mother was void on the morrow²; she well-nigh disclosed him, had it not been that we bound up her heart that she might be of the believers.

[10] And she said to his sister, 'Follow him up.' And she looked after him from afar, and they did not perceive. And we made unlawful for him the wet-nurses³. And she said, 'Shall I guide you to the people of a house who will take care of him for you, and who will be sincere respecting him?’

¹ Hâmân, according to the Qur'ân, is made out to be the prime minister of Pharaoh.

² Either devoid of patience, according to some, or of anxiety, according to others, or it may be to everything but the thought of Moses.

³ That is, Moses was made to refuse the breast of the Egyptian woman before his sister came to offer her services, and point out a nurse who would rear him.

So we restored him to his mother that her eye might be cheered, and that she might not grieve, and that she might know that the promise of God is true, though most of them know not.

And when he reached puberty, and was settled, we gave him judgment and knowledge; for thus do we reward those who do well. And he entered into the city at the time the people thereof were heedless, and he found therein two men fighting; the one of his sect and the other of his foes. And he who was of his sect asked his aid against him who was of his foes; and Moses smote him with his fist and finished him. Said he, ‘This is of the work of Satan, verily, he is a misleading obvious foe.’

[15] Said he, ‘My Lord! verily, I have wronged my soul, but forgive me.’ So He forgave him; for He is forgiving and merciful.

Said he, ‘My Lord! for that Thou hast been gracious to me, I will surely not back up the sinners.’

And on the morrow he was afraid in the city, expectant. And behold, he whom he had helped the day before cried (again) to him for aid. Said Moses to him, ‘Verily, thou art obviously quarrelsome.’ And when he wished to assault him who was the enemy to them both, he said, ‘O Moses! dost thou desire to kill me as thou didst kill a person yesterday? thou dost only desire to be a tyrant in the earth; and thou dost not desire to be of those who do right!’ And a man came from the remote parts of the city running, said he, ‘O Moses! verily, the chiefs are deliberating concerning thee to kill thee ; go then forth ; verily, I am to you a sincere adviser !'

[20] So he went forth therefrom, afraid and expectant. Said he, 'Lord, save me from the unjust people !'

And when he turned his face in the direction of Midian, he said, 'It may be that my Lord will guide me to a level path !' And when he went down to the water of Midian he found thereat a nation of people watering their flocks.

And he found beside them two women keeping back their flocks. Said he, 'What is your design ?' They said, 'We cannot water our flocks until the herdsmen have finished ; for our father is a very old man.' So he watered for them ; then he turned back towards the shade and said, 'My Lord ! verily, I stand in need of what Thou sendest down to me of good.'

[25] And one of the two came to him walking modestly ; said she, 'Verily, my father calls thee, to reward thee with hire for having watered our flocks for us.' And when he came to him and related to him the story, said he, 'Fear not, thou art safe from the unjust people.' Said one of them, 'O my sire ! hire him ; verily, the best of those whom thou canst hire is the strong and faithful.'

Said he, 'Verily, I desire to marry thee to one of these daughters of mine, on condition that thou dost serve me for hire eight years ; and if thou shalt fulfil ten it is of thyself ; for I do not wish to make it wretched for thee ; thou wilt find me, if it please God, of the righteous !'

Said he, 'That is between you and me ; whichever of the two terms I fulfil, let there be no enmity against me, for God over what we say keeps guard.'

And when Moses had fulfilled the appointed time, and was journeying with his people, he perceived from the side of the mountain a fire; said he to his people, 'Tarry ye here; verily, I have perceived a fire, haply I may bring you good news therefrom, or a brand of fire that haply ye may be warmed ¹.'

[30] And when he came to it he was called to, from the right side of the wady, in the blessed valley, out of the tree, 'O Moses! verily, I am God the Lord of the worlds; so throw down thy rod;' and when he saw it quivering as though it were a snake, he turned away and fled and did not return. 'O Moses! approach and fear not, verily, thou art amongst the safe. Thrust thy hand into thy bosom, it shall come out white, without hurt; and then fold again thy wing, that thou dost now stretch out through dread; for those are two signs from thy Lord to Pharaoh and his chiefs; verily, they are a people who work abomination!'

Said he, 'My Lord! verily, I have killed a person amongst them, and I fear that they will kill me: and my brother Aaron, he is more eloquent of tongue than I; send him then with me as a support, to verify me; verily, I fear that they will call me liar!'

[35] Said He, 'We will strengthen thine arm with thy brother; and we will make for you both authority, and they shall not reach you in our signs; ye two and those who follow you shall gain the upper hand.'

And when Moses came to them with our manifest signs, they said, 'This is only sorcery devised; and we have not heard of this amongst our fathers of yore.'

¹ See Part II, p. 35, note 1.

Moses said, 'My Lord knows best who comes with guidance from Him, and whose shall be the issue of the abode. Verily, the unjust shall not prosper!'

And Pharaoh said, 'O ye chiefs! I do not know any god for you except me; then set fire, O Hâmân! to some clay and make for me a tower, haply I may mount up to the God of Moses; for, verily, I think he is of those who lie!'

And he grew big with pride, he and his armies in the land, without right; and they thought that they to us should not return. [40] And we overtook him and his army, and we flung them into the sea; behold, then, how was the end of the unjust!

But we made them models calling to the fire; and on the resurrection day they shall not be helped; and we followed them up in this world with a curse; and on the resurrection day they shall be abhorred!

And we gave Moses the Book, after that we had destroyed the former generations, as an insight to men and a guidance and a mercy; haply they may be mindful!

Thou wast not upon the western side when we decided for Moses, but afar off; nor wast thou of the witnesses. [45] But we raised up (other) generations, and life was prolonged for them; and thou wast not staying amidst the people of Midian, reciting to them our signs; but we were sending our apostles.

Nor wast thou by the side of the mountain when we called; but it is a mercy from thy Lord, that thou mayest warn a people to whom no warner has come before thee; haply they may be mindful! And lest there should befall them a mishap for what their hands have sent before, and they should say, 'Our Lord! why didst thou not send to us an apostle? for we would have followed thy signs and been of the believers.'

And when the truth comes to them from us they say, 'We are given the like of what Moses was given.' Did they not disbelieve in what Moses was given before?—they say, 'Two works of sorcery¹ back up each other;' and they say, 'Verily, we do disbelieve in all.'

Say, 'Bring, then, a book from God which shall be a better guide than both, and I will follow it, if ye do tell the truth!'

[50] And if they cannot answer thee, then know that they follow their own lusts; and who is more in error than he who follows his own lust without guidance from God? verily, God guides not an unjust people!

And we caused the word to reach them, haply they may be mindful!

Those to whom we gave the Book before it, they believe therein; and when it is recited to them they say, 'We believe in it as truth from our Lord; verily, we were resigned before it came!' These shall be given their hire twice over, for that they were patient, and repelled evil with good, and of what we have bestowed upon them give alms.

[55] And when they hear vain talk, they turn away from it and say, 'We have our works, and ye have your works. Peace be upon you! we do not seek the ignorant!'

¹ That is, the Pentateuch and Qur'ân.

Verily, thou canst not guide whom thou dost like, but God guides whom He pleases; for He knows best who are to be guided.

And they say, 'If we follow the guidance we shall be snatched away from the land.' Have we not established for them a safe sanctuary, to which are imported the fruits of everything as a provision from us? but most of them do not know.

How many a city have we destroyed that exulted in its means of subsistence? These are their dwellings, never dwelt in after them, except a little; for we were the heirs.

But thy Lord would never destroy cities until He sent to the metropolis thereof an apostle, to recite to them our signs; nor would we destroy cities unless their people were unjust. [60] Whatever thing ye may be given, it is a provision for this world's life and the adornment thereof; but what is with God is better and more enduring; have ye then no sense?

Is He to whom we have promised a goodly promise, which he shall meet with, like him to whom we have given the enjoyment of the life of this world, and who upon the resurrection day shall be of the arraigned?

And on the day when He will call them and will say, 'Where are those associates which ye did pretend?' And those against whom the sentence is due shall say, 'Our Lord! these are those whom we have seduced; we seduced them as we were seduced ourselves: but we clear ourselves to thee;—they did not worship us!'

And it will be said, 'Call upon your partners;' and they will call upon them, but they will not answer them, and they shall see the torment; would that they had been guided.

[65] And the day when He shall call them and shall say, 'What was it ye answered the apostles?' and the history shall be blindly confusing to them on that day, and they shall not ask each other.

But, as for him who turns again and believes and does right, it may be that he will be among the prosperous. For thy Lord creates what He pleases and chooses; they have not the choice! Celebrated be the praise of God! and exalted be He above what they associate with Him!

Thy Lord knows what they conceal in their breasts and what they manifest.

[70] He is God, there is no god but He; to Him belongs praise, in the first and the last; and His is the judgment; and unto Him shall ye return!

Have ye considered, if God were to make for you the night endless until the resurrection day, who is the god, but God, to bring you light? can ye not then hear?

Say, 'Have ye considered, if God were to make for you the day endless until the day of judgment, who is the god, except God, to bring you the night to rest therein? can ye not then see?' But of His mercy He has made for you the night and the day, that ye may rest therein, and crave of His grace, haply ye may give thanks.

And the day when He shall call them and shall say, 'Where are my partners whom ye did pretend?'

[75] And we will pluck from every nation a witness; and we will say, 'Bring your proof and know that the truth is God's ;' and that which they had devised shall stray away from them.

Verily, Korah¹ was of the people of Moses, and he was outrageous against them ; and we gave him treasures of which the keys would bear down a band of men endowed with strength. When his people said to him, ' Exult not ; verily, God loves not those who exult ! but crave, through what God has given thee, the future abode ; and forget not thy portion in this world, and do good, as God has done good to thee ; and seek not evil doing in the earth ; verily, God loves not the evildoers !'

Said he, ' I have only been given it for knowledge which I have !' did he not know that God had destroyed before him many generations of those who were stronger than he, and had amassed more ? But the sinners need not to be asked concerning their crimes.

And he went out amongst the people in his ornaments ; those who desired the life of this world said, ' O would that we had the like of what Korah has been given ! verily, he is endowed with mighty fortune !'

[80] But those who had been given knowledge said, ' Woe to you ! the reward of God is better for him who believes and does right ; but none shall meet with it except the patient. And we clave the earth with him and with his house ; and he had no troop to help him against God, nor was he of those who were helped !'

And on the morrow those who had yearned for ¹ In Arabic Qârûn. The legend based upon Talmudic tradition of Korah's immense wealth appears to be also confused with that of Cræsus.

his place the day before said, 'Ah, ah! God extends provision to whom He pleases of His servants, or He doles it out; had not God been gracious to us, the earth would have cleft open with us! Ah, ah! the unbelievers shall not prosper!'

That is the future abode; we make it for those who do not wish to be haughty in the earth, nor to do evil, and the end is for the pious.

He who brings a good deed shall have better than it; and he who brings an evil deed—those who do evil deeds shall only be rewarded for that which they have done. [85] Verily, He who hath ordained the Qur'ân for thee will restore thee to thy returning place. Say, 'My Lord knows best who brings guidance, and who is in obvious error; nor couldst thou hope that the Book would be thrown to thee, save as a mercy from thy Lord! be not then a backer up of those who misbelieve; and let them not turn thee from the signs of God, after they have been sent down to thee; but call unto thy Lord and be not of the idolaters; and call not with God upon any other god; there is no god but He! everything is perishable, except His face; His is the judgment, and unto Him shall ye return!

THE CHAPTER OF THE SPIDER.

(XXIX. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

A. L. M. Do men then reckon that they will be left alone to say, 'We believe,' and not be tried?

we did try those who were before them, and God will surely know those who are truthful, and He will surely know the liars. Do those who do evil reckon that they can outstrip us? evil is it that they judge.

He who hopes for the meeting of God,—verily, God's appointed time will come; and He both hears and knows! [5] And he who fights strenuously, fights strenuously only for his own soul; verily, God is independent of the worlds.

Those who believe and do right, we will surely cover for them their offences; and we will surely reward them with better than that which they have done.

And we have enjoined on man kindness to his parents; and if they strive with thee that thou mayest join with me, what thou hast no knowledge of, then obey them not; to me is your return, and I will inform you of that which ye have done.

But those who believe and do right, we will make them enter amongst the righteous.

And there are those among men who say, 'We believe in God!' but when they are hurt in God's cause, they deem the trials of men like the torment of God; but if help come from thy Lord they will say, 'Verily, we were with you!' does not God know best what is in the breasts of the worlds? [10] God will surely know those who believe, and will surely know the hypocrites.

And those who misbelieved said to those who believed, 'Follow our path, we will bear your sins;' but they could not bear their sins at all; verily, they are liars! But they shall surely bear their own burdens, and burdens with their burdens; and they shall surely be asked upon the resurrection day concerning what they did devise.

And we sent Noah to his people, and he dwelt among them for a thousand years save fifty years ; and the deluge overtook them while they were unjust : but we saved him and the fellows of the ark, and we made it a sign unto the worlds.

And Abraham when he said to his people, ' Serve God and fear Him, that is better for you if ye did but know. [15] Ye only serve beside God idols and do create a lie ; verily, those whom ye serve beside God cannot control for themselves provision ; then crave provision with God, and serve Him, and give thanks to Him ; unto Him shall ye return ! And if ye say it is a lie, nations before you called (the apostles) liars too ; but an apostle has only his plain message to preach !'

Have they not seen how God produces the creation, and then turns it back ? verily, that to God is easy.

Say, ' Journey ye on in the land, and behold how the creation appeared ; then God produces another production : verily, God is mighty over all !'

[20] He torments whom He will, and has mercy on whom He will ; and unto Him shall ye be returned.

Nor can ye make Him helpless in the earth, nor in the heavens ; nor have ye beside God a patron or a helper.

And those who disbelieve in God's signs and in meeting with Him, these shall despair of my mercy ; and these, for them is grievous woe.

But the answer of his people was only to say, ' Kill him or burn him !' But God saved him from the fire ; verily, in that are signs unto a people who believe.

He said, ' Verily, ye take beside God idols, through mutual friendship in the life of this world ; then on the day of judgment ye shall deny each other, and shall curse each other, and your resort shall be the fire, and ye shall have none to help.'

[25] And Lot believed him. And (Abraham) said, ' Verily, I flee unto my Lord ! Verily, He is mighty, wise ! and we granted him Isaac and Jacob ; and we placed in his seed prophecy and the Book ; and we gave him his hire in this world ; and, verily, he in the next shall be among the righteous.'

And Lot when he said to his people, ' Verily, ye approach an abomination which no one in all the world ever anticipated you in ! What ! do ye approach men ? and stop folks on the highway ? and approach in your assembly sin ?' but the answer of his people was only to say, ' Bring us God's torment, if thou art of those who speak the truth !'

Said he, ' My Lord ! help me against a people who do evil !'

[30] And when our messengers came to Abraham with the glad tidings, they said, ' We are about to destroy the people of this city. Verily, the people thereof are wrong-doers.'

Said he, ' Verily, in it is Lot ;' they said, ' We know best who is therein ; we shall of a surety save him and his people, except his wife, who is of those who linger.' And when our messengers came to Lot, he was vexed for them, and his arm was straitened for them ; and they said, ' Fear not, neither grieve ; we are about to save thee and thy people, except thy wife, who is of those who linger. Verily, we are about to send down upon the people of this city a horror from heaven, for that they have sinned ; and we have left therefrom a manifest sign unto a people who have sense.'

[35] And unto Midian we sent their brother Sho'hâib, and he said, 'My people, serve God, and hope for the last day ; and waste not the land, despoiling it.'

But they called him liar ; and the convulsion seized them, and on the morrow they lay in their dwellings prone.

And 'Âd and Thamûd—but it is plain to you from their habitations ; for Satan made seemly to them their works, and turned them from the way, sagacious though they were !

And Korah and Pharaoh and Hâmân—Moses did come to them with manifest signs, but they were too big with pride in the earth, although they could not outstrip us !

And each of them we seized in his sin ; and of them were some against whom we sent a sand-storm ; and of them were some whom the noise seized ; and of them were some with whom we cleaved the earth open ; and of them were some we drowned : God would not have wronged them, but it was themselves they wronged.

[40] The likeness of those who take, beside God, patrons is as the likeness of a spider, that takes to himself a house ; and, verily, the weakest of houses is a spider's house, if they did but know !

Verily, God knows whatever thing they call upon beside Him ; for He is the mighty, wise.

These are parables which we have struck out for men ; but none will understand them, save those who know.

God created the heavens and the earth in truth ; verily, in this is a sign unto believers.

Recite what has been revealed to thee of the Book ; and be steadfast in prayer ; verily, prayer forbids sin and wrong ; and surely the mention of God is greater ; for God knows what ye do. [45] And do not wrangle with the people of the Book, except for what is better ; save with those who have been unjust amongst them and who say, 'We believe in what is sent down to us, and what has been sent down to you ; our God and your God is one, and we are unto Him resigned.'

Thus did we send down to thee the Book ; and every one to whom we have given the Book believes therein. But these will not believe therein ; though none gainsay our signs except the misbelievers.

Thou couldst not recite before this any book, nor write it with thy right hand, for in that case those who deem it vain would have doubted. Nay, but it is evident signs in the breasts of those who are endued with knowledge, and none but the unjust would gainsay our signs !

They say, 'Unless there be sent down upon him signs from his Lord — ;' say, 'Verily, signs are with God, and, verily, I am an obvious warner !'

[50] Is it not enough for them that we have sent down to thee the Book which thou dost recite to them ? verily, in that is a mercy and a reminder to a people who believe.

Say, 'God is witness enough between me and you ; He knows what is in the heavens and what is in the earth ; and those who believe in falsehood and misbelieve in God, they shall be the losers.' They will wish thee to hasten on the torment; but were it not for a stated and appointed time, the torment would have come upon them suddenly, while yet they did not perceive.

They will wish thee to hurry on the torment, but, verily, hell encompasses the misbelievers!

[55] On the day when the torment shall cover them from above them and from beneath their feet, and He shall say, 'Taste that which ye have done!'

O my servants who believe! verily, my land is spacious enough¹; me therefore do ye worship.

Every soul must taste of death, then unto us shall ye return; and those who believe and act aright, we will surely inform them of upper chambers in Paradise, beneath which rivers flow; to dwell therein for aye—pleasant is the hire of those who work! those who are patient and rely upon their Lord!

[60] How many a beast cannot carry its own provision! God provides for it and for you; He both hears and knows!

And if thou shouldst ask them, 'Who created the heavens and the earth, and subjected the sun and the moon?' they will surely say, 'God!' how then can they lie?

God extends provision to whomsoever He will of His servants, or doles it out to him; verily, God all things doth know.

And if thou shouldst ask them, 'Who sends down from the heavens water and quickens therewith the earth in its death ?' they will surely say, 'God !' say, 'And praise be to God !' nay, most of them have no sense.

¹ I.e. if you are pressed in Mecca, there are plenty of places where you can take shelter, as Mohammed himself and a few of his followers did at Medīnah.

This life of the world is nothing but a sport and a play; but, verily, the abode of the next world, that is life,—if they did but know !

[65] And when they ride in the ship they call upon God, making their religion seem sincere to Him ; but when He saves them to the shore, behold, they associate others with Him ; that they may disbelieve in our signs ; and that they may have some enjoyment : but soon they shall know.

Have they not seen that we have made a safe sanctuary whilst people are being snatched away around them ? is it then in falsehood that they will believe, and for the favours of God be ungrateful ?

But who is more unjust than he who devises against God a lie, or calls the truth a lie when it comes to him ? Is there not in hell a resort for the misbelievers ? but those who fight strenuously for us we will surely guide them into our way, for, verily, God is with those who do well.

THE CHAPTER OF THE GREEKS¹.

(XXX. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

The Greeks are overcome in the highest parts of the land ; but after being overcome they shall ¹ In Arabic Rûm, by which is meant the Byzantine or eastern Roman empire.

overcome¹ in a few years ; to God belongs the order before and after ; and on that day the believers shall rejoice in the help of God ;—God helps whom He will, and He is mighty, merciful. [5]—God's promise !—God breaks not His promise, but most men do not know !

They know the outside of this world's life, but of the hereafter they are heedless. Have they not reflected in themselves, that God created not the heavens and the earth, and what is between the two except in truth, and for a stated and appointed time ? but, verily, many men in the meeting of their Lord do disbelieve.

Have they not journeyed on in the land and seen how was the end of those before them who were stronger than they, and who turned up the ground and cultivated it more than they do cultivate it ? and there came to them their apostles with manifest signs ; for God would never wrong them : it was themselves they wronged !

Then evil was the end of those who did evil, in that they said the signs of God were lies and mocked thereat.

¹ About the beginning of the sixth year before the Higrâh the Persians conquered Syria, and made themselves masters also of Palestine, and took Jerusalem. The Greeks were so distressed by their defeat that there appeared little likelihood of their being able to retrieve their fortune, and in the following year the Persians proceeded to lay siege to Constantinople itself. In the year 625 A.D., however, the fourth year before the Higrâh, the Greeks gained a signal victory over the Persians, and not only drove them out of the borders of the Byzantine empire, but carried the war into Persian territory, and despoiled the city of Medâyen. It is the defeat which is alluded to in this passage, and the subsequent victory that is prophesied, the date of the chapter being ascribed to the period when the Persians took Jerusalem.

[10] God produces a creation, then He makes it go back again, then unto Him shall ye return.

And on the day when the Hour shall rise, the sinners shall be confused ; and they shall not have amongst their partners intercessors ; and their partners shall they deny.

And on the day when the Hour shall rise, on that day shall they be scattered apart ; and as for those who believe and do right, they in the garden shall be joyful ; [15] and as for those who misbelieved and said our signs and the meeting of the hereafter were lies, they shall be in the torment arraigned.

Celebrated be the praises of God, when ye are in the evening and when ye are in the morning ! for to Him belongs praise in the heavens and the earth ! and at the evening, and when ye are at noon.

He brings forth the living from the dead, and brings forth the dead from the living ; and He quickens the earth after its death, and thus shall ye too be brought forth.

And of His signs is this, that He hath created you from dust ; then, behold, ye are mortals who are spread abroad.

[20] And of His signs is this, that He hath created for you of yourselves wives with whom ye may cohabit ; He has made between you affection and pity. Verily, in that are signs unto a people who reflect.

And of His signs is the creation of the heavens and the earth, and the diversity of your tongues and colours ; verily, in that are signs unto the worlds¹.

¹ Or, according to another reading, 'unto those who know;' cf. Part II, p. 122, line 2.

And of His signs is your sleep by night and by day; and your craving after His grace. Verily, in that are signs unto a people who do hear.

And of His signs is this, that He shows you lightning for fear and hope; and sends down from the sky water, and quickens therewith the earth after its death; verily, in that are signs unto a people who have sense.

And of His signs is this, that the heavens and the earth stand by His order; then when He calls you from the earth, lo! ye shall come forth. [25] His are those who are in the heavens and the earth, and all to Him are devoted. And He it is who produces a creation and then makes it to go back again; for it is very easy to Him; and His are the loftiest similitudes in the heavens and the earth; and He is the mighty, wise!

He has struck out for you a parable from yourselves; have ye of what your right hand possess partners in what we have bestowed upon you, so that ye share alike therein? do ye fear them as ye fear each other?—Thus do we detail the signs unto a people who have sense¹.

Nay, when those who are unjust follow their lusts without knowledge,—and who shall guide him whom God has led astray? and they shall have none to help.

Set thy face steadfast towards the religion as an ¹ I.e. as they, the Meccans, do not consider their slaves their equals, still less does God hold the false gods they associate with Him to be His equals, it being always remembered that these partners or false gods were not spoken of in the Qur'ân as non-existent, but as supernatural beings, to whom divinity has been wrongly ascribed.

'Hanîf, according to the constitution whereon God has constituted men ; there is no altering the creation of God, that is the standard religion, though most men do not know.

[30] Turn repentant towards Him ; and fear Him, and be steadfast in prayer ; and be not of the idolaters.

Of those who have divided their religion and become sects, every party in what they have, rejoice.

And when distress touches men they call upon their Lord, repentant towards Him ; then when He has made them taste mercy from Himself, behold ! a party of them associate others with their Lord, that they may disbelieve in what we have brought them ;—but enjoy yourselves ; for hereafter ye shall know !

Or have we sent down to them authority which speaks of what they do associate with Him ?

[35] And when we have made men taste of mercy, they rejoice therein ; and if there befall them evil for what their hands have sent before, behold ! they are in despair.

Have they not seen that God extends provision to whom He pleases, or does it out ? verily, in that are signs unto a people who believe.

Then give to the kinsman his due, and to the poor and to the wayfarer ; that is better for those who desire the face of God, and these it is who are prosperous.

And what ye put out to usury that it may increase with the wealth of men, it shall not increase with God ; but what ye put out in alms, desiring the face of God—these it is who shall gain double.

It is God who created you and then provided for you ; and then will make you die, and then will quicken you again ; is there any of your partners who can do aught of that ? Celebrated be His praises, and exalted be He above what they associate with Him !

[40] Trouble hath appeared in the land and the sea, for what men's hands have gained ! to make them taste a part of that which they have done,—haply they may return !

Say, 'Journey on in the land, and behold what was the end of those before you,—most of them were idolaters !'

Set thy face steadfast to the standard religion, before there come a day from God which there is no averting ; on that day shall they be parted into two bands.

He who misbelieves, upon him is his misbelief ; but whoso does right, for themselves they are spreading couches¹ :

That He may reward those who believe and do right of His grace ; verily, He loves not the misbelievers !

[45] And of His signs is this, that He sends forth the winds with glad tidings, to make you taste of His mercy, and to make the ships go on at His bidding, and that ye may crave of His grace, and haply ye may give thanks.

We have sent before thee apostles unto their people, and they came to them with manifest signs : and we took vengeance upon those who sinned, but due from us it was to help the believers.

God it is who sends forth the winds to stir up clouds ; then He spreads them forth over the sky as he pleases ; and He breaks them up and ye see the rain come forth from amongst them ; and when He causes it to fall upon whom He pleases of His servants, behold they hail it with joy, although before it was sent down upon them they were before then confused !

¹ In Paradise.

Look then to the vestiges of God's mercy, how He quickens the earth after its death ; verily, that is the quickener of the dead, and He is mighty over all !

[50] But if we should send a wind and they should see it yellow¹, they would after that become mis-believers.

But, verily, thou canst not make the dead to hear, nor canst thou make the deaf to hear the call, when they turn their backs and flee ; nor hast thou to guide the blind out of their error ; thou canst only make those to hear who believe in our signs and who are resigned.

God it is who created you of weakness, then made for you after weakness strength ; then made for you after strength, weakness and grey hairs : He creates what He pleases, for He is the knowing, the powerful !

And on the day when the Hour shall rise, the sinners shall swear [55] that they have not tarried save an hour ; thus were they wont to lie !

But those who are given knowledge and faith will say, 'We have tarried according to the Book of God, until the day of resurrection ;' and this ^{is} the day of resurrection, but ye—ye do not know.

And on that day their excuse shall profit not those who did wrong ; nor shall they be asked to please God again.

¹ I. e. see the young corn parched.

We have struck out to men in this Qur'ân every kind of parable ; but if thou shouldst bring them a sign¹ then those who misbelieve will surely say, 'Ye are but followers of vanity ; thus does God set a stamp upon the hearts of those who do not know.'

[60] Be thou patient then ; verily, God's promise is true ! and let them not flurry thee who are not sure.

THE CHAPTER OF LOQMÂN².

(XXXI. Mecca.)

In the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

A. L. M. These are the signs of the wise Book, a guidance and a mercy to those who do well, who are steadfast in prayer and give alms and who of the hereafter are sure ; these are in guidance from their Lord, and these are the prosperous.

[5] And amongst men is one³ who buys sportive legends, to lead astray from God's path, without knowledge, and to make a jest of it ; these, for them is shameful woe! And when our signs are recited to him, he turns his back, too big with pride, as though he heard them not,—as if in his two ears were dulness. But give to him glad tidings of grievous woe!

¹ I. e. a verse.

² This sage is generally identified with the Aesop of the Greeks. The legends current in the East concerning him accord exactly with those of the Greek fabulist.

³ An Nadhr ibn al 'Hareth had purchased in Persia some of the old legends of Rustam and Isfendiâr, which were afterwards embodied in the Shâh-nâmeh of Firdausî. These he read to the Qurâis as being more wonderful than the Qur'ân.

Verily, those who believe and do right, for them are gardens of pleasure, to dwell therein for aye;—God's promise in truth, and He is mighty, wise.

He created the heavens without pillars that ye can see, and He threw upon the earth firm mountains lest it should move with you; and He dispersed thereon every sort of beast; and we send down from the heavens water, and we caused to grow therein of every noble kind.

[10] This is God's creation; show me what others beside Him have created;—nay, the unjust are in obvious error!

We did give unto Loqmân wisdom, saying, 'Thank God; for he who thanks God is only thankful for his own soul; and he who is ungrateful—verily, God is independent, worthy of praise!'

And when Loqmân said to his son while admonishing him, 'O my boy! associate none with God, for, verily, such association is a mighty wrong.'—

For we have commended his parents to man; his mother bore him with weakness upon weakness; and his weaning is in two years;—'Be thankful to me and to thy parents; for unto me shall your journey be. But if they strive with thee that thou shouldst associate with me that which thou hast no knowledge of, then obey them not. But associate with them in the world with kindness, and follow the way of him who turns repentant unto me; then unto me is your return, and I will inform you of that which ye have done!—

[15] ‘O my son! verily, if there were the weight of a grain of mustard seed and it were (hidden) in the rock, or in the heaven, or in the earth, God would bring it (to light). Verily, God is subtle, well aware!

‘O my son! be steadfast in prayer, and bid what is reasonable and forbid what is wrong; be patient of what befalls thee, verily, that is one of the determined affairs.

‘And twist not thy cheek proudly, nor walk in the land haughtily; verily, God loves not every arrogant boaster: but be moderate in thy walk, and lower thy voice; verily, the most disagreeable of voices is the voice of asses!’

Have ye not seen that God has subjected to you what is in the heavens and what is in the earth, and has poured down upon you His favours, outwardly and inwardly? but amongst men are those who wrangle about God, without knowledge, and without guidance, and without an illuminating book!

[20] And when it is said to them, ‘Follow what God has sent down;’ they say, ‘Nay! we will follow what we found our fathers agreed upon;’—what! though Satan calls them to the torment of the blaze?

But he who resigns his face unto God, and does good, he has grasped the firm handle; unto God is the issue of affairs. But he who misbelieves, let not his misbelief grieve thee; to us is their return, and we will inform them of what they do;—for, verily, God knows the nature of men’s breasts!

We will let them enjoy themselves a little; then we will force them to rigorous woe!

And if thou shouldst ask them who created the heavens and the earth, they will surely say, 'God.' Say, 'Praise be to God!' but most of them do not know.

[25] God's is what is in the heavens and what is in the earth; verily, God, He is the independent, worthy of praise.

And were the trees that are in the earth pens, and the sea (ink) with seven more seas to swell its tide, the words of God would not be spent; verily, God is mighty, wise!

Your creation and your rising again are but as that of one soul; verily, God both hears and sees!

Dost thou not see that God joins on the night to the day, and joins on the day to the night, and has subjected the sun and the moon,—each of them runs on unto an appointed time? and that God of what ye do is well aware?

That is because God, He is true, and because what ye call on beside Him is falsehood, and because God, He is the high, the great!

[30] Dost thou not see that the ship rides on in the sea by the favour of God, that He may show you of His signs? verily, in that are signs to every grateful person.

And when a wave like shadows covers them, they call on God, being sincere in their religion; and when He saves them to the shore, then amongst them are some who halt between two opinions. But none gainsays our signs save every perfidious misbeliever.

O ye folk! fear your Lord and dread the day when the father shall not atone for his son, nor shall the child atone aught for its parent.

Verily, the promise of God is true! Say, 'Let not the life of this world beguile you; and let not the beguiler beguile you concerning God.'

Verily, God, with Him is the knowledge of the Hour; and He sends down the rain; and He knows what is in the wombs; and no soul knows what it is that it shall earn to-morrow; and no soul knows in what land it shall die; verily, God is knowing, well aware!

THE CHAPTER OF ADORATION.

(XXXII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

A. L. M. The revelation of the Book, there is no doubt therein, from the Lord of the worlds.

Do they say, 'He has forged it?' Nay! it is the truth from thy Lord, that thou mayest warn a people, to whom no warner has come before thee, haply they may be guided.

God it is who created the heavens and the earth and what is between the two in six days; then He made for the throne! ye have no patron beside Him and no intercessor; are ye not then mindful?

He governs the affair from the heaven unto the earth; then shall it ascend to him in a day, the measure of which is as a thousand years of what ye number.

[5] That is He who knows the unseen and the visible; the mighty, the merciful, who has made the best of the creation of everything, and produced the creation of man from clay; then He made his stock from an extract of despicable water; then He fashioned him and breathed into him of his spirit, and made for you hearing and eyesight and hearts;—little is it that ye give thanks!

And they say, 'When we are lost in the earth, shall we then become a new creation?' [10] Nay! in the meeting of their Lord they disbelieve.

Say, 'The angel of death shall take you away, he who is given charge of you; then unto your Lord shall ye be returned.'

And couldst thou see when the sinners hang down their heads before their Lord, 'O Lord! we have seen and we have heard; send us back then and we will do right. Verily, we are sure!'

Had we pleased we would have given to everything its guidance; but the sentence was due from me;—I will surely fill hell with the ginns and with men all together: 'So taste ye, for that ye forgot the meeting of this day of yours,—verily, we have forgotten you! and taste ye the torment of eternity for that which ye have done!'

[15] They only believe in our signs who when they are reminded of them fall down adoring and celebrate the praises of their Lord, and are not too big with pride. As their sides forsake their beds, they call upon their Lord with fear and hope; and of what we have bestowed upon them do they give alms. No soul knows what is reserved for them of cheerfulness for eye, as a reward for that which they have done! Is he who is a believer like him who is a sinner? they shall not be held equal.

As for those who believe and do right, for them are the gardens of resort, an entertainment for that which they have done !

[20] But as for those who commit abomination there resort is the Fire. Every time that they desire to go forth therefrom, we will send them back therein, and it will be said to them, 'Taste ye the torment of the fire which ye did call a lie!' and we will surely make them taste of the torment of the nearer torment beside the greater torment¹,—haply they may yet return.

Who is more unjust than he who is reminded of the signs of his Lord, and then turns away from them? Verily, we will take vengeance on the sinners!

And we did give Moses the Book; be not then in doubt concerning the meeting with him²; and we made it a guidance to the children of Israel.

And we made amongst them high priests who guided by our bidding, since they were patient and were sure of our signs.

[25] Verily, thy Lord, he shall decide between them on the resurrection day concerning that whereon they do dispute.

Is it not conspicuous to them how many generations we have destroyed before them? they walk

¹ I. e. the torment of this world as well as that of the next.

² This may refer to the alleged meeting of Mohammed and Moses in heaven during the 'night journey;' or it may be translated, 'the reception of it,' i. e. the Qur'ân, the expression in Chapter XXVII, 6, being derived from the same root in Arabic, which means 'to meet.' The native commentators are divided in opinion as to these two interpretations. It is quite possible, however, that it may mean, 'be not in doubt as to a meeting with Him,' and be a mere reiteration of the sentiment so often expressed, that Muslims are to be certain of a meeting with their Lord.

over their dwellings! verily, in that are signs: do they not then hear?

Have they not seen that we drive the water to the sterile land, and bring forth thereby corn from which their cattle and themselves do eat? do they not then see?

And they say, 'When shall this decision come if ye do tell the truth?' Say, 'On the day of the decision their faith shall not profit those who misbelieved, nor shall they be respited;' [30] turn then from them and wait; verily, they are waiting too!

THE CHAPTER OF THE CONFEDERATES¹.

(XXXIII. Medīnah.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

O thou prophet! fear God and obey not the misbelievers and hypocrites; verily, God is ever knowing, wise!

But follow what thou art inspired with from thy Lord; verily, God of what you do is ever well aware. And rely upon God, for God is guardian enough.

God has not made for any man two hearts in his inside; nor has He made your wives,—whom you back away from,—your real mothers²; nor has He ¹ When this sūrah was written Medīnah was besieged by a confederation of the Jewish tribes with the Arabs of Mecca, Negd and Tehāmah, at the instigation of the Jewish tribe of Nadhīr, whom Mohammed had expelled from Mecca the year before. The event took place in the fifth year of the Hīgrah.

² The Arabs were in the habit of divorcing their wives on certain occasions with the words, 'Thy back is to me as my made your adopted sons your real sons. That is what ye speak with your mouths; but God speaks the truth and He guides to the path!

[5] Call them by their fathers' names; that is more just in God's sight; but if ye know not their fathers, then they are your brothers in religion and your clients. There is no crime against you for what mistakes ye make therein; but what your hearts do purposely—but God is ever forgiving and merciful.

The prophet is nearer of kin to the believers than themselves, and his wives are their mothers. And blood relations are nearer in kin to each other by the Book of God than the believers and those who fled¹; only your doing kindness to your kindred, that is traced in the Book.

And when we took of the prophets their compact², from thee and from Noah, and Abraham, and Moses, and Jesus the son of Mary, and took of them a rigid compact, that He might ask the truth-tellers of their truth. But He has prepared for those who misbelieve a grievous woe.

O ye who believe! remember God's favours towards you when hosts came to you and we sent against them a wind and hosts³ that ye could not see;—and God knew what ye were doing.

mother's back,' after which they considered it as unnatural to approach them as though they were their real mothers. This practice Mohammed here forbids. They used also to consider their adopted children in the same light as real children of their body; in forbidding this practice also, Mohammed legalised his marriage with Zâinab, the divorced wife of his freedman Zâid, who was also his adopted son.

¹ The Muhâgerîn.

² See Part I, p. 57, note 1.

³ Of angels.

[10] When they came upon you from above you and from below¹ you, and when your eyesights were distracted and your hearts came up into your throats, and ye suspected God with certain suspicions.

There were the believers tried and were made to quake with a severe quaking.

And when the hypocrites and those in whose hearts was sickness said, 'God and His Apostle have only promised us deceitfully.' And when a party of them said, 'O people of Yathreb²; there is no place for you (here)³, return then (to the city).' And a part of them asked leave of the prophet (to return), saying, 'Verily, our houses are defenceless;' but they were not defenceless, they only wished for flight.

But had they been entered upon from its environs and then been asked to show treason they would have done so; but they would only have tarried there a little while⁴.

¹ On the approach of the confederate army, to the number of 12,000, Mohammed, by the advice of Selmân the Persian, ordered a deep trench to be dug round Medînah, and himself went out to defend it with 3,000 men. The two forces remained for nearly a month in their respective camps without coming to an actual conflict: until one night a piercing east wind blew so violently, and made such disorder in the camp of the besiegers, that a panic seized upon them, and they retired precipitately. Some of them had been encamped on the heights to the east of the town, the others in the lower part of the valley.

² The ancient name of the city; it was only called 'El Medînah, 'the city,' after it had become famous by giving shelter to Mohammed.

³ In the trenches.

⁴ I. e. if the confederates had effected an entry, these half-hearted persons would have listened to their proposals, and have deserted the prophet.

[15] They had covenanted with God before, that they would not turn their backs; and God's covenant shall be enquired of.

Say, 'Flight shall avail you naught; if ye fly from death or slaughter, even then ye shall be granted enjoyment only for a little!'

Say, 'Who is it that can save you from God, if He wish you evil, or wish you mercy?' but they will not find beside God a patron or a helper.

Say, 'God knows the hinderers amongst you, and those who say to their brethren, "Come along unto us," and show but little valour;—covetous towards you¹. When fear comes thou wilt see them looking towards thee, their eyes rolling like one fainting with death; but when the fear has passed away they will assail you with sharp tongues, covetous of the best². These have never believed, and God will make vain their works, for that is easy with God.

[20] They reckoned that the confederates would never go away; and if the confederates should come they would fain be in the desert with the Arabs, asking for news of you! and if they were amongst you they would fight but little.

Ye had in the Apostle of God a good example for him who hopes for God and the last day, and who remembers God much.

And when the believers saw the confederates they said, 'This is what God and His Apostle promised us; God and His Apostle are true!' and it only increased them in faith and resignation.

Amongst the believers are men who have been

¹ I. e. chary of helping you, but greedy of the spoils.

² I. e. the best share of the spoils.

true to their covenant with God, and there are some who have fulfilled their vow¹, and some who wait and have not changed² with fickleness.

That God might reward the truthful for their truth, and punish the hypocrites if He please, or turn again towards them;—verily, God is forgiving, merciful!

[25] And God drove back the misbelievers in their rage; they gat no advantage;—God was enough for the believers in the fight, for God is strong, mighty!

And He drove down those of the people of the Book who had helped them³ from their fortresses⁴ and hurled dread into their hearts; a part ye slew and ye took captive a part: and He gave you their land, and their dwellings, and their property for an inheritance, and a land ye had not trodden, for God is ever mighty over all.

O thou prophet! say to thy wives, 'If ye be desirous of the life of this world and its adornments, come, I will give you them to enjoy and I will let you range handsomely at large! But if ye be desirous of God and His Apostle and of the abode of the hereafter, verily, God has prepared for those of you who do good a mighty hire⁵!'

¹ I. e. their vow to fight till they obtained martyrdom.

² I. e. changed their mind.

³ I. e. who had helped the confederates.

⁴ The Qurâi'ah Jews, whom Mohammed attacked after the siege of Medînah had been raised, and punished for their treachery in having joined the confederates although in league with him at the time.

⁵ Mohammed being annoyed by the demands made by his wives for costly dresses and the like, offered them the choice of divorce or of being content with their usual mode of living. They chose the latter.

[30] O ye women of the prophet! whosoever of you commits manifest fornication, doubled shall be her torment twice; and that is easy unto God!

But that one of you who is devoted to God and His Apostle and does right we will give her her hire twice over, and we have prepared for her a noble provision.

O ye women of the prophet! ye are not like any other women; if ye fear God then be not too complaisant in speech, or he in whose heart is sickness will lust after you; but speak a reasonable speech.

And stay still in your houses and show not yourselves with the ostentation of the ignorance of yore; and be steadfast in prayer, and give alms, and obey God and his Apostle;—God only wishes to take away from you¹ the horror as people of His House and to purify you thoroughly.

And remember what is recited in your houses of the signs of God and of wisdom; verily, God is subtle and aware!

[35] Verily, men resigned and women resigned², and believing men and believing women, and devout men and devout women, and truthful men and truthful women, and patient men and patient women, and humble men and humble women, and almsgiving men and almsgiving women, and fasting men and fasting women, and men who guard their private parts and women who guard their private parts, and men who remember God much, and women who remember Him,—God has prepared for them forgiveness and a mighty hire.

¹ Here the pronoun is changed from feminine to masculine, and the passage is appealed to by the Shiahs as showing the intimate relations that existed between Mohammed and 'Alî, for they say that by 'his household' are particularly meant Fa'imah and 'Alî. In the next paragraph the feminine is again used.

² I. e. Muslims; see Part I, p. 15, note 1.

It is not for a believing man or for a believing woman, when God and His Apostle have decided an affair, to have the choice in that affair; and whoso rebels against God and His Apostle has erred with an obvious error.

And when thou didst say to him God had shown favour to and thou hadst shown favour to, 'Keep thy wife to thyself and fear God;' and thou didst conceal in thy soul what God was about to display; and didst fear men, though God is more deserving that thou shouldst fear Him; and when Zâid had fulfilled his desire of her¹ we did wed thee to her that there should be no hindrance to the believers in the matter of the wives of their adopted sons when they have fulfilled their desire of them: and so God's bidding to be done².

There is no hindrance to the prophet about what God has ordained for him;—(such was) the course of God with those who have passed away before,—and God's bidding is a decreed decree! Those who preach God's messages and fear Him and fear not any one except God,—but God is good enough at reckoning up.

¹ I. e. divorced her.

² Zâid was Mohammed's freedman and adopted son. Mohammed had seen and admired Zâid's wife Zâinab, and her husband at once offered to divorce her: this Mohammed dissuaded him from until the transaction was sanctioned by the verse. The relations of the Arabs to their adopted children were, as has been remarked before, p. 138, note 2, very strict; and Mohammed's marriage with Zâinab occasioned much scandal among his contemporaries. This passage and those at the commencement of the chapter abrogate all these inconvenient restrictions. Zâid and Abu Laheb, Sûrah CXI, are the only two persons of Mohammed's acquaintance who are mentioned in the Qur'ân by name.

[40] Mohammed is not the father of any of your men, but the Apostle of God, and the Seal of the Prophets; for God all things doth know!

O ye who believe! remember God with frequent remembrance, and celebrate His praises morning and evening.

He it is who prays¹ for you and His angels too, to bring you forth out of the darkness into the light, for He is merciful to the believers.

Their salutation on the day they meet Him shall be 'Peace!' and He has prepared for them a noble hire.

O thou prophet! verily, we have sent thee as a witness and a herald of glad tidings and a warner, [45] and to call (men) unto God by His permission, and as an illuminating lamp.

Give glad tidings then to the believers, that for them is great grace from God. And follow not the unbelievers and the hypocrites; but let alone their ill-treatment², and rely upon God, for God is guardian enough.

O ye who believe! when ye wed believing women, and then divorce them before ye have touche^d them,

¹ The same word is used as is rendered 'pray' in all the other passages in the Qur'ân, though the commentators interpret it here as meaning 'bless.' So, too, in the formula which is always used after Mohammed's name, zalla 'llâhu 'alâihi wa sallam, 'may God bless and preserve him!' is literally, 'may God pray for him and salute him!'

² Either, 'do not ill-treat them,' or, 'take no notice of their ill-treating thee.'

ye have no term that ye need observe; so make them some provision, and let them go handsomely at large.

O thou prophet! verily, we make lawful for thee thy wives to whom thou hast given their hire¹, and what thy right hand possesses² out of the booty that God has granted thee, and the daughters of thy paternal uncle and the daughters of thy paternal aunts, and the daughters of thy maternal uncle and the daughters of thy maternal aunts, provided they have fled with thee, and any believing woman if she give herself to the prophet, if the prophet desire to marry her;—a special privilege this for thee, above the other believers.

[50] We knew what we ordained for them concerning their wives and what their right hands possess, that there should be no hindrance to thee; and God is forgiving, merciful.

Put off³ whomsoever thou wilt of them and take to thyself whomsoever thou wilt, or whomsoever thou cravest of those whom thou hast deposed⁴, and it shall be no crime against thee. That is nigher to cheering their eyes and that they should not grieve, and should be satisfied with what thou dost bring them all; but God knows best what is in their hearts; and God is knowing, clement.

It is not lawful to thee to take women after (this), nor to change them for (other) wives, even though their beauty please thee; except what thy right hand possesses, for God is ever watchful over all.

¹ I. e. dowry.

² Slave girls.

³ I. e. from her turn of conjugal rights.

⁴ I. e. divorced.

O ye who believe! do not enter the houses of the prophet, unless leave be given you, for a meal,—not watching till it is cooked! But when ye are invited, then enter; and when ye have fed, disperse, not engaging in familiar discourse. Verily, that would annoy the prophet and he would be ashamed for your sake¹, but God is not ashamed of the truth².

And when ye ask them³ for an article, ask them from behind a curtain⁴; that is purer for your hearts and for theirs. It is not right for you to annoy the prophet of God, nor to wed his wives after him ever; verily, that is with God a serious thing.

If ye display a thing or conceal it, verily, God all things doth know.

[55] There is no crime against them⁵ (if they

¹ He would be reluctantly obliged to ask you to leave.

² The tent of an Arab chief is looked upon as a place of general entertainment, and is always besieged by visitors. The advent of a stranger, or indeed any occasion that demands the preparation of food or any form of entertainment, is the signal for every adult male of the encampment to sit round it, and wait for an invitation to partake of the meal. This becomes a very serious tax upon the sheikh, as the laws of Arab hospitality imperatively require every person present to be invited to join in the repast. The translator has often witnessed scenes—especially among the Arabs of Edom and Moab—which gave a very living significance to these words of the Qur'ân. Mohammed's exceptionally prominent position exposed him in a peculiar manner to these irruptions of unbidden guests. Another saying bearing upon the point is traditionally ascribed to him, zur ghibban tazdâd 'hubban, 'visit seldom and you will get more love.'

³ The prophet's wives.

⁴ The women to the present day always remain behind a curtain which screens off their part of the tent from the rest, but freely converse with their husband and his guests, and hand over the dishes and any other articles that may be required by the company.

⁵ The prophet's wives.

speak unveiled) to their fathers, or their sons, or their brothers, or their brothers' sons, or their sisters' sons, or their women, or what their right hands possess; but let them fear God,—verily, God is witness over all.

Verily, God and His angels pray for the prophet. O ye who believe! pray for him and salute him with a salutation¹!

Verily, those who annoy God and His Apostle, God will curse them in this world and the next, and prepare for them shameful woe!

And those who annoy the believers for what they have not earned, such have to bear (the guilt of) calumny and obvious sin.

O thou prophet! tell thy wives and thy daughters, and the women of the believers, to let down over them their outer wrappers; that is nearer for them to be known and that they should not be annoyed; but God is forgiving, merciful.

[60] Surely if the hypocrites and those in whose hearts is a sickness and the insurrectionists in Medinah do not desist, we will surely incite thee against them. Then they shall not dwell near thee therein save for a little while. Cursed wherever they are found,—taken and slain with slaughter!

God's course with those who have passed away before: and thou shalt never find in God's course any alteration.

The folk will ask thee about the Hour; say, 'The knowledge thereof is only with God, and what is to make thee perceive that the Hour is haply nigh?'

¹ See p. 145, note 1.

Verily, God has cursed the misbelievers and has prepared for them a blaze!

[65] To dwell therein for ever and for aye; they shall not find a patron or a helper!

On the day when their faces shall writhe in the fire they shall say, 'O, would that we had obeyed God and obeyed the Apostle!'

And they shall say, 'Our Lord! verily, we obeyed our chiefs and our great men and they led us astray from the path! Our Lord! give them double torment and curse them with a great curse!'

O ye who believe! be not like those who annoyed Moses; but God cleared him of what they said, and he was regarded in the sight of God¹.

[70] O ye who believe! fear God and speak a straightforward speech. He will correct for you your works, and pardon you your sins; for he who obeys God and His Apostle has attained a mighty happiness.

Verily, we offered the trust² to the heavens and the earth and the mountains, but they refused to bear it, and shrank from it; but man bore it: verily, he is ever unjust and ignorant. That God may torment the hypocritical men and hypocritical women, and the idolaters and idolatresses; and that God may turn relenting towards the believing men and believing women; verily, God is ever forgiving, merciful.

¹ The occasion of the revelation of this verse is said to have been that Mohammed being accused of unfairly dividing certain spoils, said, 'God, have mercy on my brother Moses; he was wronged more than this, and bore it patiently.'

² That is, 'the faith.'

THE CHAPTER OF SEBÂ¹.

(XXXIV. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Praise belongs to God, whose is whatsoever is in the heavens and whatsoever is in the earth; His is the praise in the next world, and He is the wise and well aware!

He knows what goes into the earth, and what comes forth therefrom, and what comes down from the sky, and what ascends thereto; for He is the merciful, forgiving.

Those who misbelieve say, 'The Hour shall not come to us;' say, 'Yea, by my Lord it shall surely come to you! by Him who knows the unseen! nor shall there escape from it the weight of an atom, in the heavens or in the earth, or even less than that, or greater, save in the perspicuous Book;' and that He may reward those who believe and do right; these,—for them is forgiveness and a noble provision.

[5] But those who strive concerning our signs to frustrate them; these,—for them is the torment of a grievous plague.

And those to whom knowledge has been given see that what is sent down to thee from thy Lord is the truth, and guides unto the way of the mighty, the praiseworthy.

And those who misbelieve say, 'Shall we guide

¹ A city of Yemen was also called Mârab; it was about three days' journey from Sanâ'h. The bursting of the dyke of Mârab and the destruction of the city by a flood are historical facts, and happened in about the first or second century of our era.

you to a man who will inform you that when ye are torn all to pieces, then ye shall be a new creation? he has forged against God a lie, or there is a *gin*n in him;’—nay, those who believe not in the hereafter are in the torment and in the remote error!

Have they not looked at what is before them and what is behind them of the heaven and the earth? if we pleased we would cleave the earth open with them, or we would make to fall upon them a portion of the heaven; verily, in that is a sign to every repentant servant.

[10] And we did give David grace from us, ‘O ye mountains! echo (God’s praises) with him, and ye birds!’ and we softened for him iron: ‘Make thou coats of mail and adapt the rings thereof, and do right; verily, I at what ye do do look.’ And to Solomon the wind; its morning journey was a month, and its evening journey was a month; and we made to flow for him a fountain of molten brass; and of the ginns some to work before him by the permission of his Lord; and whoso swerves amongst them from our bidding we will give him to taste the torment and the blaze; and they made for him what he pleased of chambers, and images, and dishes like troughs, and firm pots;—work, O ye family of David! thankfully; few is it of my servants who are thankful.

And when we decreed for him death, naught guided them to his death save a reptile of the earth that ate his staff; and when he fell down it was made manifest to the ginns that, had they but known the unseen, they need not have tarried in the shameful torment¹.

¹ The Mohammedan legend is that Solomon had employed the Sebâ had in their dwellings a sign; two gardens, on the right hand and on the left, 'Eat from the provision of your Lord; and give thanks to Him! a good country and a forgiving Lord!' [15] but they turned away, and we sent against them the flood of the dyke; and we changed for them their two gardens into two gardens that grew bitter fruit and tamarisk, and some few lote trees¹.

This did we reward them with, for that they misbelieved; and do we so reward any but misbelievers?

And we made between them and the cities which we had blessed (other) cities which were evident; and we measured out the journey: 'Journey ye thereto nights and days in safety!' And they said, 'Our Lord! make a greater distance between our journeys;' and they wronged themselves, and we made them legends; and we tore them all to pieces; verily, in that are signs to every patient, grateful person. And Iblîs verified his suspicion concerning them, ginns to construct the temple of Jerusalem for him, and perceiving that he must die before it was completed, he prayed God to conceal his death from them lest they should relinquish the work when no longer compelled to keep to it by fear of his presence. This prayer was heard, and Solomon, who died while resting on his staff, remained in this position for a year without his death being suspected, until a worm having eaten away his staff it broke, and the corpse fell to the ground, thus revealing the fact of his death. The shameful torment which the ginns might have avoided is their forced labour in building the temple.

¹ The Rhamnus Nabeca of Forshâl, the Rhamnus Nabeca Spina Christi of Linnæus, its fruit, which is called Nebuk, is a small round berry, in taste something like the jargonelle pear, and is a great favourite with the Bedawîn. It grows freely in the Sinaitic peninsula.

and they followed him, save a party of the believers¹.

[20] Yet had he no authority over them, save that we might know who it was that believed in the hereafter from him who amongst them was in doubt; for thy Lord guards everything.

Say, 'Call on those whom ye pretend beside God;' they cannot control the weight of an atom in the heavens or in the earth; nor have they any partnership in either; nor has He amongst them any supporter; nor is intercession of any avail with Him, except for him whom He permits; so that when fright is removed from their hearts they say, 'What is it that your Lord says?' they say, 'The truth; for He is the high, the great.'

Say, 'Who provides from the heavens and the earth?' Say, 'God.' And, verily, we or ye are surely in guidance or in an obvious error.

Say, 'Ye shall not be asked about what we have sent, nor shall we be asked about what ye do.'

[25] 'Our Lord shall assemble us together; then He shall open between us in truth, for He is the opener who knows.'

Say, 'Show me those whom ye have added to Him as partners; not so! nay, but He is God, the mighty, the wise!'

¹ A great trade used formerly to exist between Sebâ and Syria. The Mohammedan commentators suppose that the cessation of traffic, which naturally caused the gradual ruin of the intermediate towns, and the subsequent destruction of Sebâ or Mâreb itself by the flood, was a punishment for the covetous wish of the people of the city, that the distances which traders had to pass over were longer, so that they themselves might earn more money by providing them with camels and escorts.

We have only sent thee to men generally as a herald of glad tidings and a warner; but most men do not know.

And they say, 'When shall this promise be, if ye do speak the truth?' say, 'For you is the appointment of a day of which ye shall not keep back an hour, nor shall ye bring it on!'

[30] And those who misbelieve say, 'We will never believe in this Qur'ân or in what is before it;' but couldst thou see when the unjust are set before their Lord, they shall rebut each other in speech.

Those who were thought weak shall say to those who were big with pride, 'Had it not been for you we should have been believers.' Those who were big with pride shall say to those who were thought weak, 'Was it we who turned you away from the guidance after it came to you? nay, ye were sinners.'

And those who were thought weak shall say to those who were big with pride, 'Nay, but it was the plotting by night and day, when ye did bid us to disbelieve in God, and to make peers for Him!' and they shall display repentance when they see the torment; and we will put fetters on the necks of those who misbelieved. Shall they be rewarded except for that which they have done?

We have not sent to any city a warner but the opulent thereof said, 'We, in what ye are sent with, disbelieve.'

And they say, 'We have more wealth and children, and we shall not be tormented.'

[35] Say, 'Verily, my Lord extends provision to whom He pleases or doles it out, but most men do not know; but neither your wealth nor your children is that which will bring you to a near approach to us, save him who believes and does right; these, for them is a double reward for what they have done, and they in upper rooms¹ shall be secure.'

And those who strive concerning our signs to frustrate them, these in the torment shall be arraigned. Verily, my Lord extends provision to whomsoever He will of His servants, or doles it out to him. And what ye expend in alms at all, He will repay it; for He is the best of providers.

And on the day He will gather them all together, then He will say to the angels, 'Are these those who used to worship you?'

[40] They shall say, 'Celebrated be thy praises! thou art our patron instead of them. Nay, they used to worship the ginns, most of them believe in them². But to-day they cannot control for each other, either profit or harm;' and we will say to those who have done wrong, 'Taste ye the torment of the fire wherein ye did disbelieve!'

And when our signs are recited to them they say, 'This is only a man who wishes to turn you from what your fathers served;' and they say, 'This is only a lie forged,' and those who misbelieve will say of the truth when it comes to them, 'It is only obvious sorcery!'

But we have not brought them any book which they may study, and we have not sent to them before thee a warner.

Those before them said it was a lie, and these³ have not reached a tithe of what we had given them.

¹ In Paradise.

² See Part I, p. 127, note 2.

³ That is, the Meccans.

And they said my apostles were liars, and how great a change was then!

[45] Say, 'I only admonish you of one thing, that ye should stand up before God in twos or singly, and then that ye reflect that there is no ginn in your companion¹. He is only a warner to you before the keen torment.'

Say, 'I do not ask you for it a hire; that is for yourselves; my hire is only from God, and He is witness over all.'

Say, 'Verily, my Lord hurls forth the truth; and He well knows the unseen.'

Say, 'The truth has come, and falsehood shall vanish and shall not come back.'

Say, 'If I err I only err against myself; and if I am guided it is all what my Lord inspires me; verily, He is the hearing, the nigh!'

[50] And couldst thou see when they are scared, and there shall be no escape, and they shall be taken from a place that is nigh. And they say, 'We believe in it.' But how can they partake of it from a distant place? They misbelieved before, and conjectured about the unseen from a distant place. And there shall be a barrier between them and that which they lust after; as we did with their fellow sectaries before; verily, they were in hesitating doubt.

¹ That he, Mohammed, is not possessed by a ginn.

THE CHAPTER OF THE ANGELS¹.

(XXXV. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Praise belongs to God, the originator of the heavens and the earth; who makes the angels His messengers, endued with wings in pairs, or threes or fours; He adds to creation what He pleases; verily, God is mighty over all!

What God opens to men of His mercy there is none to withhold; and what He withholds, there is none can send it forth after Him; for He is the mighty, the wise.

O ye folk! remember the favours of God towards you; is there a creator beside God, who provides you from the heavens and from the earth? There is no god but He; how then can ye lie?

And if they call thee liar, apostles were called liars before thee, and unto God affairs return.

[5] O ye folk! verily, God's promise is true; then let not the life of this world beguile you, and let not the beguiler beguile you concerning God. Verily, the devil is to you a foe, so take him as a foe; he only calls his crew to be the fellows of the blaze.

Those who misbelieve, for them is keen torment.

But those who believe and do right, for them is forgiveness and a great hire.

What! is he whose evil act is made seemly for him, so that he looks upon it as good,——?

¹ Also called 'of the Originator.'

Verily, God leads astray whom He pleases and guides whom He pleases; let not thy soul then be wasted in sighing for them; verily, God knows what they do!

[10] It is God who sends the winds, and they stir up a cloud, and we irrigate therewith a dead country, and we quicken therewith the earth after its death; so shall the resurrection be!

Whosoever desires honour—honour belongs wholly to God; to Him good words ascend, and a righteous deed He takes up; and those who plot evil deeds, for them is keen torment, and their plotting is in vain.

God created you from earth, then from a clot; then He made you pairs; and no female bears or is delivered, except by His knowledge; nor does he who is aged reach old age, or is aught diminished from his life, without it is in the Book; verily, that is easy unto God.

The two seas are not equal: one is sweet and fresh and pleasant to drink, and the other is salt and pungent; but from each do ye eat fresh flesh, and bring forth ornaments which ye wear; and thou mayest see the ships cleave through it, that ye may search after His grace, and haply ye may give thanks.

He turns the night into day, and He turns the day into night; and He subjects the sun and the moon, each of them runs on to an appointed goal; that is God, your Lord! His is the kingdom; but those ye call on beside Him possess not a straw¹.

[15] If you call upon them they cannot hear your call, and if they hear they cannot answer you ; and on the resurrection day they will deny your associating them with God ; but none can inform thee like the One who is aware.

¹ Literally, the husk of a date stone.

O ye folk ! ye are in need of God ; but God, He is independent, praiseworthy.

If He please He will take you off, and will bring a fresh creation ; for that is no hard matter unto God.

And no burdened soul shall bear the burden of another ; and if a heavily laden one shall call for its load (to be carried) it shall not be carried for it at all, even though it be a kinsman !—thou canst only warn those who fear their Lord in the unseen and who are steadfast in prayer ; and he who is pure is only pure for himself ; and unto God the journey is.

[20] The blind is not equal with him who sees, nor the darkness with the night, nor the shade with the hot blast ; nor are the living equal with the dead ; verily, God causes whom He pleases to hear, and thou canst not make those who are in their graves hear ; thou art but a warner !

Verily, we have sent thee in truth a herald of glad tidings and a warner ; and there is no nation but its warner has passed away with it.

And if they called thee liar, those before thee called their apostles liars too, who came to them with manifest signs, and the Scriptures, and the illuminating Book.

Then I seized those who misbelieved, and what a change it was !

[25] Dost thou not see that God has sent down from the heaven water, and has brought forth therewith fruits varied in hue, and on the mountains dykes¹, white and red, various in hue, and some intensely black, and men and beasts and cattle, various in hue? thus! none fear God but the wise among His servants; but, verily, God is mighty, forgiving.

Verily, those who recite the Book of God, and are steadfast in prayer, and give alms of what we have bestowed in secret and in public, hope for the merchandise that shall not come to naught; that He may pay them their hire, and give them increase of His grace; verily, He is forgiving, grateful.

What we have inspired thee with of the Book is true, verifying what was before it; verily, God of His servants is well aware and sees.

Then we gave the Book for an inheritance to those whom we chose of our servants, and of them are some who wrong themselves, and of them are some who take a middle course, and of them are some who vie in good works by the permission of their Lord; that is great grace.

[30] Gardens of Eden shall they enter, adorned therein with bracelets of gold and pearls; and their garments therein shall be silk; and they shall say, 'Praise belongs to God, who has removed from us our grief; verily, our Lord is forgiving, grateful! who has made us alight in an enduring abode of His grace, wherein no toil shall touch us, and there shall touch us no fatigue.'

But those who misbelieve, for them is the fire of hell; it shall not be decreed for them to die, nor shall aught of the torment be lightened from them; thus do we reward every misbeliever; and they shall shriek therein, 'O our Lord! bring us forth, and we will do right, not what we used to do!'—'Did we not let you grow old enough for every one who would be mindful to be mindful? and there came to you a warner!—[35] So taste it, for the unjust shall have none to help!' verily, God knows the unseen things of the heavens and of the earth; verily, He knows the nature of men's breasts, He it is who made you vicegerents in the earth, and he who misbelieves, his misbelief is against himself; but their misbelief shall only increase the misbelievers in hatred with their Lord; and their misbelief shall only increase the misbelievers in loss.

¹ The word is here used in its geological sense, and is applied to the various coloured streaks which are so plainly to be seen in the bare mountain sides of Arabia. The Arabs of the desert to this day call them by the same name as is here used in the Qur'ân.

Say, 'Have ye considered your associates whom ye call on beside God?' show me what they created of the earth; have they a share in the heavens, or have we given them a book that they rest on a manifest sign? nay, the unjust promise each other naught but guile.

Verily, God holds back the heavens and the earth lest they should decline; and if they should decline there is none to hold them back after Him; verily, He is clement, forgiving.

[40] They swore by God with their most strenuous oath, verily, if there come to them a warner they would be more guided than any one of the nations; but when a warner comes to them, it only increases them in aversion, and in being big with pride in the earth, and in plotting evil; but the plotting of evil only entangles those who practise it; can they then expect aught but the course of those of yore? but thou shalt not find any alteration in the course of God; and they shall not find any change in the course of God.

Have they not journeyed on in the land and seen what was the end of those before them who were stronger than they? but God, nothing can ever make Him helpless in the heavens or in the earth; verily, He is knowing, powerful.

Were God to catch men up for what they earn, He would not leave upon the back of it¹ a beast; but He respites them until an appointed time. [45] When their appointed time comes, verily, God looks upon His servants.

THE CHAPTER OF Y. S.

(XXXVI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Y. S. By the wise Qur'ân, verily, thou art of the apostles upon a right way. The revelation of the mighty, the merciful! [5] That thou mayest warn a people whose fathers were not warned, and who themselves are heedless.

Now is the sentence due against most of them, for they will not believe. Verily, we will place upon their necks fetters, and they shall reach up to their chins, and they shall have their heads forced back; and we will place before them a barrier, and behind them a barrier; and we will cover them and they shall not see; and it is all the same to them if thou dost warn them or dost warn them not, they will not believe. [10] Thou canst only warn him who follows the reminder, and fears the Merciful in the unseen; but give him glad tidings of forgiveness and a noble hire.

¹ The earth.

Verily, we quicken the dead, and write down what they have done before, and what vestiges they leave behind; and everything have we counted in a plain model¹.

Strike out for them a parable: the fellows of the city when there came to it the apostles; when we sent those two and they called them both liars, and we strengthened them with a third; and they said, 'Verily, we are sent to you.'

They said, 'Ye are only mortals like ourselves, nor has the Merciful sent down aught; ye are naught but liars.'

[15] They said, 'Our Lord knows that we are sent to you, and we have only our plain message to preach.'

They said, 'Verily, we have augured concerning you, and if ye do not desist we will surely stone you, and there shall touch you from us a grievous woe.'

Said they, 'Your augury is with you; what! if ye are reminded—? Nay, ye are an extravagant people!'

And there came from the remote part of the city a man hastening up. Said he, 'O my people! follow the apostles; [20] follow those who do not ask you a hire, and who are guided. What ails me that I should not worship Him who originated me, and unto whom I must return? Shall I take gods beside Him? If the Merciful One desires harm for me, their intercession cannot avail me at all, nor can they rescue me. Verily, I should then be in obvious error; verily, I believe in your Lord, then listen ye to me!

¹ The Umm al Kitâb. See Part I, p. 2, note 2.

[25] It was said, 'Enter thou into Paradise!' said he, 'O, would that my people did but know! for that my Lord has forgiven me, and has made me of the honoured.'

And we did send down upon his people no hosts from heaven, nor yet what we were wont to send down; it was but a single noise, and lo! they were extinct¹.

Alas for the servants! there comes to them no apostle but they mock at him!

[30] Have they not seen how many generations we have destroyed before them? verily, they shall not return to them; but all of them shall surely altogether be arraigned.

And a sign for them is the dead earth which we have quickened and brought forth therefrom seed, and from it do they eat; and we made therein gardens and palms and grapes, and we have caused fountains to gush forth therein, [35] that they may eat from the fruit thereof, and of what their hands have made; will they not then give thanks?

Celebrated be the praises of Him who created

¹ The legend is that Jesus sent two of His disciples to the city of Antioch, none believing them but one 'Habîb en Naggâr, that is, 'Habîb the carpenter,' and all three were thrown into prison. Simon Peter was subsequently sent to their rescue; a great many were converted, and the rest were destroyed by a shout from the angel Gabriel. The shrine of 'Habîb en Naggâr at Antioch is still a favourite place of pilgrimage for Mohammedans.

all kinds, of what the earth brings forth, and of themselves, and what they know not of!

And a sign to them is the night, from which we strip off the day, and lo! they are in the dark; and the sun runs on to a place of rest for it¹; that is the ordinance of the mighty, the wise.

And the moon, we have ordered for it stations, until it comes again to be like an old dry palm branch.

[40] Neither is it proper for it to catch up the moon, nor for the night to outstrip the day, but each one floats on in its sky.

And a sign for them is that we bear their seed in a laden ship², and we have created for them the like thereof whereon to ride; and if we please, we drown them, and there is none for them to appeal to; nor are they rescued, save by mercy from us, as a provision for a season.

[45] And when it is said to them, 'Fear what is before you and what is behind you, haply ye may obtain mercy³;' and thou bringest them not any one of the signs of their Lord, but they turn away therefrom; and when it is said to them, 'Expend in alms of what God has bestowed upon you,' those who misbelieve say to those who believe, 'Shall we feed him whom, if God pleased, He would feed? ye are only in an obvious error.'

They say, 'When shall this promise come to pass, if ye do tell the truth?' They await but a single noise, that shall seize them as they are contending. [50] And they shall not be able to make a bequest; nor to their people shall they return; but the trumpet shall be blown, and, behold, from their graves unto their Lord shall they slip out!

¹ There is a various reading here, 'and has no place of rest.'

² Some take this to refer to Noah's ark.

³ That is, the punishment of this world and the next.

They shall say, 'O, woe is us! who has raised us up from our sleeping-place? this is what the Merciful promised, and the apostles told the truth!' It shall be but a single noise, and lo! they are all arraigned before us.

And on that day no soul shall be wronged at all, nor shall ye be rewarded for aught but that which ye have done.

[55] Verily, the fellows of Paradise upon that day shall be employed in enjoyment; they and their wives, in shade upon thrones, reclining; therein shall they have fruits, and they shall have what they may call for. 'Peace!'—a speech from the merciful Lord!

'Separate yourselves to-day, O ye sinners! [60] Did I not covenant with you, O children of Adam! that ye should not serve Satan? verily, he is to you an open foe; but serve ye me, this is the right way. But he led astray a numerous race of you; what! had ye then no sense? this is hell, which ye were threatened; broil therein to-day, for that ye misbelieved!'

[65] On that day we will seal their mouths, and their hands shall speak to us, and their feet shall bear witness of what they earned. And if we please we could put out their eyes, and they would race along the road; and then how could they see? And if we pleased we would transform them in their places, and they should not be able to go on, nor yet to return. And him to whom we grant old age, we bow him down in his form ; have they then no sense ?

We have not taught him¹ poetry, nor was it proper for him ; it is but a reminder and a plain Qur'an, [70] to warn him who is living ; but the sentence is due against the misbelievers.

Have they not seen that we have created for them of what our hands have made for them, cattle, and they are owners thereof ? and we have tamed them for them, and of them are some to ride, and of them are what they eat, and therein have they advantages and beverages ; will they not then give thanks ?

But they take, beside God, gods that haply they may be helped. [75] They cannot help them ; yet are they a host ready for them².

But let not their speech grieve thee : verily, we know what they conceal and what they display.

Has not man seen that we have created him from a clot ? and lo ! he is an open opponent ; and he strikes out for us a likeness ; and forgets his creation ; and says, 'Who shall quicken bones when they are rotten ?' Say, 'He shall quicken them who produced them at first ; for every creation does He know ; [80] who has made for you fire out of a green tree, and lo ! ye kindle therewith.'

Is not He who created the heavens and the earth able to create the like thereof ? yea ! He is the knowing Creator ; His bidding is only, when He desires anything to say to it, 'BE,' and it is. Then celebrated be the praises of Him in whose hands is the kingdom of everything! and unto Him shall ye return.

¹ Mohammed.

² I. e. they are ready to defend their false gods.

THE CHAPTER OF THE 'RANGED.'

(XXXVII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

By the (angels) ranged in ranks, and the drivers driving¹, and the reciters of the reminder, 'Verily, your God is one, [5] the Lord of the heavens and the earth and what is between the two, and the Lord of the sunrises!'

Verily, we have adorned the lower heaven with the adornment of the stars, and to preserve it from every rebellious devil, that they may not listen to the exalted chiefs; for they are hurled at from every side², driven off, and for them is lasting woe; [10] save such as snatches off a word, and there follows him a darting flame!

Ask them³ whether they are stronger by nature or (the angels) whom we have created? We have created them of sticky clay.

Nay, thou dost wonder and they jest! and when they are reminded they will not remember; and when they see a sign they make a jest thereof, [15] and say, 'This is naught but obvious sorcery. What! when we are dead, and have become earth and bones, shall we then be raised? what! and our fathers of yore?'

Say, 'Yes, and ye shall shrink up, and it shall only be one scare, and, behold, they shall look on, [20] and they shall say, 'O, woe is us! this is the day of judgment, this is the day of decision, which ye did call a lie!' Gather ye together, ye who were unjust, with their mates and what they used to serve beside God, and guide them to the way of hell, and stop them; verily, they shall be questioned. [25] 'Why do ye not help each other?' nay, on that day they shall resign themselves, and some shall draw near to others, to question each other, and they shall say, 'Verily, ye came to us from the right¹.' They shall say, 'Nay, ye were not believers, nor had we any authority over you; nay, ye were an outrageous people. [30] And the sentence of our Lord shall be due for us; verily, we shall surely taste thereof; we did seduce you—verily, we were erring too!' therefore, verily, on that day they shall share the torment: thus it is that we will do with the sinners.

¹ Driving the clouds or 'scaring the devils.'

² See Part I, p. 50, note 2.

³ The people of Mecca.

Verily, when it is said to them, 'There is no god but God,' they get too big with pride, and say, [35] 'What! shall we leave our gods for an infatuated poet?' Nay, he came with the truth, and verified the apostles; verily, ye are going to taste of grievous woe, nor shall ye be rewarded save for that which ye have done!

Except God's sincere servants, [40] these shall have a stated provision of fruits, and they shall be honoured in the gardens of pleasure, upon couches facing each other²; they shall be served all round with a cup from a spring, [45] white and delicious to those who drink, wherein is no insidious spirit, nor shall they be drunk therewith; and with them damsels, restraining their looks, large eyed; as though they were a sheltered egg; and some shall come forward to ask others; and a speaker amongst them shall say, 'Verily, I had a mate, [50] who used to say, "Art thou verily of those who credit? What! when we are dead, and have become earth and bones, shall we be surely judged?"' He will say, 'Are ye looking down?' and he shall look down and see him in the midst of hell. He shall say, 'By God, thou didst nearly ruin me! [55] And had it not been for the favour of my Lord, I should have been among the arraigned.'—'What! shall we not die save our first death? and shall we not be tormented?—Verily, this is mighty bliss! for the like of this then let the workers work.'

¹ That is, with a good omen.

² See Chapter XV, verse 47.

[60] Is that better as an entertainment, or the tree of *Ez Zaqqûm*¹? Verily, we have made it a trial to the unjust². Verily, it is a tree that comes forth from the bottom of hell; its spathe is as it were the heads of devils; verily, they shall eat therefrom, and fill their bellies therefrom. [65] Then shall they have upon it a mixture of boiling water; then, verily, their return shall be to hell.

Verily, they found their fathers erring, and they hurried on in their tracks; but there had erred before them most of those of yore, [70] and we had sent warners amongst them. Behold, then, what was the end of those who were warned, save God's sincere servants!

¹ Ez Zaqqûm is a foreign tree with an exceedingly bitter fruit, the name of which is here used for the infernal tree.

² The unbelievers objected that the tree could not grow in hell, where the very stones (see Part I, p. 4, note 1) were fuel for the fire.

Noah did call upon us, and a gracious answer did we give; and we saved him and his people from a mighty trouble; [75] and we made his seed to be the survivors; and we left for him amongst posterity 'peace upon Noah in the worlds; verily, thus do we reward those who do well; verily, he was of our believing servants.' [80] Then we drowned the others.

And, verily, of his sect was Abraham; when he came to his Lord with a sound heart; when he said to his father and his people, 'What is it that ye serve? with a lie do ye desire gods beside God? [85] What then is your thought respecting the Lord of the worlds?'

And he looked a look at the stars and said, 'Verily, I am sick!' and they turned their backs upon him fleeing¹. And he went aside unto their gods and said, 'Will ye not eat? [90] What ails you that ye will not speak?' And he went aside to them smiting with the right hand.

And they² rushed towards him. Said he, 'Do ye serve what ye hew out, when God has created you, and what ye make?'

[95] Said they, 'Build for him a pyre, and throw him into the flaming hell!' They desired to plot against him, but we made them inferior. Said he, 'Verily, I am going to my Lord, He will guide me. My Lord! grant me (a son), one of the

¹ Mohammedan commentators say that he pretended to a knowledge of astrology and made as though he saw a presage of coming sickness for himself in the stars, whereupon the others fled for fear of contagion, and Abraham took the opportunity of absenting himself from the festival which was being held in honour of the idols.

² The people of the city.

righteous;' and we gave him glad tidings of a clement boy.

[100] And when he reached the age to work with him, he said, 'O my boy! verily, I have seen in a dream that I should sacrifice thee¹, look then what thou seest right.'

Said he, 'O my sire! do what thou art bidden; thou wilt find me, if it please God, one of the patient!'

And when they were resigned, and Abraham had thrown him down upon his forehead, we called to him, 'O Abraham! [105] thou hast verified the vision; verily, thus do we reward those who do well. This is surely an obvious trial.' And we ransomed him with a mighty victim; and we left for him amongst posterity, 'Peace upon Abraham; [110] thus do we reward those who do well; verily, he was of our servants who believe!' And we gave him glad tidings of Isaac, a prophet among the righteous; and we blessed him and Isaac;—of their seed is one who does well, and one who obviously wrongs himself.

And we were gracious unto Moses and Aaron. [115] We saved them and their people from mighty trouble, and we helped them and they had the upper hand; and we gave them both the perspicuous Book; and we guided them to the right way; and we left for them amongst posterity, [120] 'Peace upon Moses and Aaron; verily, thus do we reward those who do well; verily, they were both of our servants who believe!'

¹ The Mohammedan theory is that it was Ishmael and not Isaac who was taken as a sacrifice.

And verily Elyâs¹ was of the apostles; when he said to his people, 'Will ye not fear? [125] do ye call upon Baal and leave the best of Creators, God your Lord and the Lord of your fathers of yore?'

But they called him liar; verily, they shall surely be arraigned, save God's sincere servants. And we left for him amongst posterity, [130] 'Peace upon Elyâs²; verily, thus do we reward those who do well; verily, he was of our servants who believe!'

And, verily, Lot was surely among the apostles; when we saved him and his people altogether, [135] except an old woman amongst those who lingered; then we destroyed the others; verily, ye pass by them in the morning and at night; have ye then no sense?

And, verily, Jonah was amongst the apostles; [140] when he ran away³ into the laden ship; and he cast lots and was of those who lost; and a fish swallowed him, for he was to be blamed; and had it not been that he was of those who celebrated ¹ Supposed by the Mohammedans to be the same as Al 'Hidhr and Idris.

² This is probably another form of the word Elyâs, on the model of many Hebrew words which have survived in the later Arabic dialect. The Mohammedan commentators however conjecturally interpret it in various ways, some consider it to be a plural form, including Elias and his followers; others divide the word and read it Âl-ya-sîn, i.e. 'the family of Ya-sin,' namely, Elias and his father. Others imagine it to mean Mohammed or the Qur'ân. Most probably however the final syllable -în was nothing more than a prolonged utterance of the case-ending, here improperly used in order to preserve the rhyme or final cadence of the verse. The modern Bedawîn frequently do the same, and I have heard them singing a song commencing 'Zaidûn, Zaidûn, Zaidûn,' when they should say, Zaidu, 'O Zaid!' &c. Trans.

³ The word used in the text is always applied to runaway slaves.

God's praises he would surely have tarried in the belly thereof to the day when men shall be raised.

[145] But we cast him on to the barren shore; and he was sick; and we made to grow over him a gourd tree; and we sent him to a hundred thousand or more, and they believed; and we gave them enjoyment for a season.

Ask them¹, 'Has thy Lord daughters while they have sons²? [150] or have we created the angels females while they were witnesses?' is it not of their lie that they say, 'God has begotten?' verily, they are liars.

Has he preferred daughters to sons? what ails you? how ye judge! [155] will ye not be mindful, or have ye obvious authority? then bring your Book if ye do speak the truth.

And they made him to be related to the ginns, while the ginns know that they shall be arraigned; celebrated be God's praises from what they attribute!—[160] save God's sincere servants.

'Verily, ye and what ye worship shall not try any one concerning him, save him who shall broil in hell; there is none amongst us but has his appointed place, and, [165] verily, we are ranged, and, verily, we celebrate His praises³.'

And yet they say, 'Had we a reminder from those of yore we should surely have been of God's sincere servants.'

[170] But they misbelieved in it⁴; but soon shall they know.

¹ The Meccans.

² See Part I, p. 256, note 2.

³ This speech is supposed to be the words of the angel Gabriel.

⁴ I. e. in the Qur'ân.

But our word has been passed to our servants who were sent that they should be helped; that, verily, our hosts should gain mastery for them.

Then turn thou thy back upon them for a time, [175] and look upon them, for soon they too shall look.

Would they hasten on our torment? but when it descends in their court, ill will the morning be of those who have been warned!

But turn thy back upon them for a time; and look, for soon they too shall look.

[180] Celebrated be the praises of thy Lord, the Lord of glory, above what they attribute! and peace be upon the apostles and praise be to God, the Lord of the worlds!

THE CHAPTER OF S.¹

(XXXVIII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

S. By the Qur'ân with its reminder! nay, but those who misbelieve are in pride, schism!

How many a generation have we destroyed before them, and they cried out, but it was no time to escape!

And they wonder that a warner has come from amongst themselves, and the misbelievers say, 'This is a magician, a liar!' What! does he make the gods to be one God? verily, this is a wondrous thing.

¹ The Arabic commentators say of this title, 'God only knows what He means by it.' All the explanations given of it are purely conjectural. See the Introduction for this and the other mysterious letters used throughout the Qur'ân.

[5] And the chiefs of them went away: 'Go on and persevere in your gods; this is a thing designed; we never heard this in any other sect; this is nothing but a fiction! Has a reminder come down upon him from amongst us?' nay, they are in doubt concerning my reminder; nay, they have not yet tasted of my torment!

Have they the treasures of the mercy of thy mighty Lord, the giver? or have they the kingdom of the heavens and of the earth, and what is between the two?—then let them climb up the ropes thereof.

[10] Any host whatever of the confederates shall there be routed.

Before them did Noah's people, and 'Âd, and Pharaoh of the stakes¹ call the apostles liars; and Thamûd and the people of Lot, and the fellows of the Grove, they were the confederates too.

They all did naught but call the apostles liars, and just was the punishment! Do these² await aught else but one noise for which there shall be no pause?

[15] But they say, 'O our Lord, hasten for us our share before the day of reckoning!'

Be patient of what they say, and remember our servant David endowed with might; verily, he turned frequently to us. Verily, we subjected the mountains to celebrate with him our praises at the evening and the dawn; and the birds too gathered together, each one would oft return to him; and we strengthened his kingdom, and we gave him wisdom and decisive address.

¹ Some say this refers to the punishment which Pharaoh used to inflict upon those who had offended him, whom he used to tie to four stakes and then torture. Others take the expression to refer to the stability of Pharaoh's kingdom. The word in the original is applied to the pegs with which Arabs fasten their tents.

² The Meccans.

[20] Has there come to thee the story of the antagonists when they scaled the chamber wall? when they entered in unto David, and he was startled at them, they said, 'Fear not, we are two antagonists; one of us has injured the other; judge then between us with the truth and be not partial, but guide us to a level way. Verily, this is my brother: he had ninety-nine ewes and I had one ewe; and he said, "Give her over to my charge;" and he overcame me in the discourse.' Said he, 'He wronged thee in asking for thy ewe in addition to his own ewes. Verily, many associates do injure one another, except those who believe and do what is right, and very few are they!'

And he thought that we were trying him; and he asked pardon of his Lord and fell down bowing, and did turn; and we pardoned him; for, verily, he has a near approach to us and an excellent resort.

[25] O David! verily, we have made thee a vicegerent, judge then between men with truth and follow not lust, for it will lead thee astray from the path of God. Verily, those who go astray from the path of God, for them is keen torment, for that they did forget the day of reckoning!

And we have not created the heavens and the earth, and what is between the two, in vain. That is what those who misbelieved did think, but woe from the fire to those who misbelieve!

Shall we make those who believe and do right like those who do evil in the earth? or shall we make the pious like the sinners?

A blessed Book which we have sent down to thee that they may consider its verses, and that those endowed with minds may be mindful.

And we gave to David, Solomon, an excellent servant; verily, he turned frequently to us. [30] When there were set before him in the evening the steeds that paw the ground¹, and he said, 'Verily, I have loved the love of good things better than the remembrance of my Lord, until (the sun) was hidden behind the veil; bring them back to me;' and he began to sever their legs and necks.

And we did try Solomon, and we threw upon his throne a form; then he turned repentant². Said he,

¹ The word in Arabic signifies a horse that stands on three legs and just touches the ground with the fore part of the hoof of the fourth. The story is that Solomon was so lost in the contemplation of his horses one day that he forgot the time of evening prayer, and was so smitten with remorse on discovering his negligence that he sacrificed them all except a hundred of the best. God however recompensed him by giving him dominion over the winds instead.

² The Mohammedan legend, borrowed from the Talmud, is that having conquered the king of Sidon and brought away his daughter Gerâdeh, he made her his favourite. She however so incessantly mourned her father that Solomon commanded the devils to make an image of him to console her, and to this she and her maids used to pay divine honours. To punish him for encouraging this idolatry, a devil named Sakhar one day obtained possession of his ring, which he used to entrust to a concubine named Amînah when he went out for any necessary purpose. As the whole secret of his power lay in this ring, which was engraved with the Holy Name, the devil was able to personate Solomon, who, being changed in form, was not recognised by his subjects, and wandered about for the space of forty days, the time during which the image had been worshipped in his house. After this Sakhar flew away and threw

‘My Lord, pardon me and grant me a kingdom that is not seemly for any one after me; verily, thou art He who grants!’

[35] And we subjected to him the wind to run on at his bidding gently wherever he directed it; and the devils—every builder and diver, and others bound in fetters—‘this is our gift, so be thou lavish or withhold without account!’

And, verily, he had with us a near approach, and a good resort.

[40] And remember our servant Job when he called upon his Lord that ‘the devil has touched me with toil and torment!’

‘Stamp with thy foot, this is a cool washing-place and a drink.’ And we granted him his family, and the like of them with them, as a mercy from us and a reminder to those endowed with minds,—‘and take in thy hand a bundle, and strike therewith, and break not thy oath!’ Verily, we found him patient¹, an excellent servant; verily, he turned frequently to us.

[45] And remember our servants Abraham and the signet into the sea, where it was swallowed by a fish, which was afterwards caught and brought to Solomon, who by this means recovered his kingdom and power.

¹ The Mohammedan legend is that when Job was undergoing his trials, the devil appeared to his wife and promised, if she would worship him, to restore their former prosperity; this she asked her husband to allow her to do. Job was so enraged at her conduct that he swore if he recovered to give her a hundred stripes. When Job had uttered the prayer recorded on page 52, line 19, Gabriel appeared and bade him in the words of the text to strike the ground with his feet. A fountain at once gushed forth, in which he washed and was healed, his wife also becoming young and beautiful again. In order not to break his oath he was commanded to strike her with a bundle of palm leaves, giving her a hundred painless blows at once.

Isaac and Jacob, endowed with might and sight; verily, we made them sincere by a sincere quality—the remembrance of the abode; and, verily, they were with us of the elect, the best.

And remember Ishmael and Elisha and Dhu-l-kifl, for each was of the righteous¹. This is a reminder! verily, for the pious is there an excellent resort,—[50] gardens of Eden with the doors open to them;—reclining therein; calling therein for much fruit and drink; and beside them maids of modest glance, of their own age,—‘This is what ye were promised for the day of reckoning!’—‘This is surely our provision, it is never spent!’

[55] This!—and, verily, for the rebellious is there an evil resort,—hell; they shall broil therein, and an ill couch shall it be! This,—so let them taste it!—hot water, and pus, and other kinds of the same sort! ‘This is an army plunged in with you! there is no welcome for them! verily, they are going to broil in the fire!’

[60] They shall say, ‘Nay, for you too is there no welcome! it was ye who prepared it beforehand for us, and an ill resting-place it is!’

They shall say, ‘Our Lord! whoso prepared this beforehand for us, give him double torment in the fire!’ And they shall say, ‘What ails us that we do not see men whom we used to think amongst the wicked? whom we used to take for mockery? have our eyes escaped them?’

Verily, that is the truth; the contention of the people of the fire.

[65] Say, ‘I am only a warner; and there is no god but God, the one, the victorious, the Lord of the heavens and the earth, and what is between the two, the mighty, the forgiving!

¹ See page 53.

Say, 'It is a grand story, and yet ye turn from it!' I had no knowledge of the exalted chiefs when they contended.

[70] I am only inspired that I am a plain warner. When thy Lord said to the angels, 'Verily, I am about to create a mortal out of clay; and when I have fashioned him, and breathed into him of my spirit, then fall ye down before him adoring.' And the angels adored all of them, save Iblis, who was too big with pride, and was of the misbelievers.

[75] Said He, 'O Iblis! what prevents thee from adoring what I have created with my two hands? art thou too big with pride? or art thou amongst the exalted?' Said he, 'I am better than he, Thou hast created me from fire, and him Thou hast created from clay.' Said He, 'Then go forth therefrom, for, verily, thou art pelted, and, verily, upon thee is my curse unto the day of judgment.'

[80] Said he, 'My Lord! then respite me until the day when they are raised.' Said He, 'Then thou art amongst the respited until the day of the stated time.' Said he, 'Then, by Thy might! I will surely seduce them all together, except Thy servants amongst them who are sincere!'. [85] Said He, 'It is the truth, and the truth I speak; I will surely fill hell with thee and with those who follow thee amongst them all together.'

Say, 'I do not ask thee for it any hire, nor am I of those who take too much upon myself. It is but a reminder to the servants, and ye shall surely know its story after a time.'

THE CHAPTER OF THE TROOPS.

(XXXIX. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

The sending down of the Book from God, the mighty, the wise.

Verily, we have sent down to thee the Book in truth, then serve God, being sincere in religion unto Him. Aye! God's is the sincere religion: and those who take beside Him patrons — 'We do not serve them save that they may bring us near to God —' Verily, God will judge between them concerning that whereon they do dispute.

[5] Verily, God guides not him who is a misbelieving liar.

Had God wished to take to Himself a child, He would have chosen what He pleased from what He creates;—celebrated be His praises! He is God, the one, the victorious. He created the heavens and the earth in truth! It is He who clothes the day with night; and clothes the night with day; and subjects the sun and the moon, each one runs on to an appointed time; aye! He is the mighty, the forgiving! He created you from one soul; then He made from it its mate; and He sent down upon you of the cattle four pairs¹! He creates you in the bellies of your mothers,—creation after creation, in three darknesses². That is God for you! His is the kingdom, there is no god but He; how then can ye be turned away?

¹ Camel, oxen, sheep, and goats.

² I. e. the belly, the womb, and the placenta.

If ye be thankless, yet is God independent of you. He is not pleased with ingratitude in His servants ; but if ye give thanks, He is pleased with that in you. But no burdened soul shall bear the burden of another ; then unto your Lord is your return, and He will inform you of that which ye have done. [10] Verily, He knows the natures of men's breasts!

And when distress touches a man he calls his Lord, turning repentant to Him ; then when He confers on him a favour from Himself he forgets what he had called upon Him for before, and makes peers for God to lead astray from His way ! Say, ' Enjoy thyself in thy misbelief a little, verily, thou art of the fellows of the Fire.'

Shall he who is devout throughout the night, adoring and standing, cautious concerning the hereafter, and hoping for the mercy of his Lord . . . ? Say, ' Shall those who know be deemed equal with those who know not ? only those will remember, who are endowed with minds !'

Say, ' O my servants who believe ! fear your Lord ! for those who do well in this world is good, and God's earth is spacious ; verily, the patient shall be paid their hire without count !'

Say, ' Verily, I am bidden to serve God, being sincere in religion to Him ; and I am bidden that I be the first of those resigned.'

[15] Say, ' Verily, I fear, if I rebel against my Lord, the torment of a mighty day.' Say, ' God do I serve, being sincere in my religion to Him ; serve then what ye will beside Him !' Say, ' Verily, the losers are those who lose themselves and their families on the resurrection day. Aye, that is the obvious loss.'

They shall have over them shades of fire, and under them shades; with that does God frighten His servants: O my servants! then fear me.

But those who avoid *Tâghûl*¹ and serve them not, but turn repentant unto God, for them shall be glad tidings. Then give glad tidings to my servants who listen to the word and follow the best thereof; they it is whom God guides, and they it is who are endowed with minds. [20] Him against whom the word of torment is due,—canst thou rescue him from the fire?

But for those who fear their Lord for them are upper chambers, and upper chambers above them built, beneath which rivers flow; God's promise! God does not fail in His promise.

Hast thou not seen that God sends down from the heaven water, and conducts it into springs in the earth? then He brings forth therewith corn varied in kind, then it dries up, and ye see it grow yellow; then He makes it grit;—verily, in that is a reminder for those endowed with minds.

Is he whose breast God has expanded for Islâm, and who is in light from his Lord . . . ? And woe to those whose hearts are hardened against a remembrance of God! those are in obvious error.

God has sent down the best of legends, a book uniform and repeating; whereat the skins of those who fear their Lord do creep! then their skins and their hearts soften at the remembrance of God. That is the guidance of God! He guides therewith whom He will. But he whom God leads astray there is no guide for him.

¹ See Part I, p. 40, note 2.

[25] Shall he who must screen himself with his own face from the evil torment on the resurrection day . . . ? And it shall be said of those who do wrong, taste what ye have earned. ✓

Those before them called the (prophets) liars, and the torment came to them from whence they perceived it not ; and God made them taste disgrace in the life of this world. But surely the torment of the hereafter is greater, if they did but know. We have struck out for men in this Qur'ân every sort of parable, haply they may be mindful. An Arabic Qur'ân with no crookedness therein ; haply they may fear !

[30] God has struck out a parable, a man who has partners who oppose each other ; and a man who is wholly given up to another ; shall they be deemed equal in similitude ? praise be to God ! nay, but most of them know not !

✓ Verily, thou shalt die, and, verily, they shall die ; then, verily, on the resurrection day before your Lord shall ye dispute.

And who is more unjust than he who lies against God, and calls the truth a lie when it comes to him ? Is there not in hell a resort for those who misbelieve ? but whoso brings the truth and believes in it, these are they who fear.

[35] For them is what they please with their Lord, that is the reward of those who do well ; that God may cover for them their offences which they have done, and may reward them with their hire for the best of that which they have done. ✓

Is not God sufficient for His servants ? and yet they would frighten thee with those beside Him ¹.

¹ By their idols.

But he whom God leads astray there is no guide for him ; and he whom God guides there is none to lead him astray: is not God mighty, the Lord of vengeance ?

And if thou shouldst ask them who created the heavens and the earth, they will surely say, ' God ! ' Say, ' Have ye considered what ye call on beside God ? If God wished me harm ¹, could they remove His harm ? or did He wish me mercy, could they withhold His mercy ? ' Say, ' God is enough for me, and on Him rely those who rely. '

[40] Say, ' O my people ! act according to your power ; I too am going to act ; and ye shall know. '

He to whom the torment comes it shall disgrace him, and there shall alight upon him lasting torment.

Verily, we have sent down to thee the Book for men in truth ; and whosoever is guided it is for his own soul : but whoso goes astray it is against them, and thou art not a guardian for them.

God takes to Himself souls at the time of their death ; and those which do not die (He takes) in their sleep ; and He holds back those on whom He has decreed death, and sends others back till their appointed time ;—verily, in that are signs unto a people who reflect.

Do they take besides God intercessors ? Say, ' What ! though they have no control over anything and have no sense. '

[45] Say, ' God's is the intercession, all of it ; His ¹ The pronoun in Arabic is feminine, and refers to the false gods, especially to the favourite goddesses of the Qurâis.

is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth; then unto Him shall ye be sent back.'

And when God alone is mentioned the hearts of those who believe not in the hereafter quake, and when those beside Him are mentioned, lo, they are joyful!

Say, 'O God! originator of the heavens and the earth, who knowest the unseen and the visible, thou wilt judge between thy servants concerning that whereon they do dispute!'

And had those who do wrong all that is in the earth, and the like thereof with it, they would ransom themselves therewith from the evil of the torment on the resurrection day! but there shall appear to them from God that which they had not reckoned on; and the evils of what they have earned shall appear to them; but that shall close in on them at which they mocked!

[50] And when harm touches man he calls on us; then, when we grant him favour from us, he says, 'Verily, I am given it through knowledge!' nay, it is a trial,—but most of them do not know!

Those before them said it too, but that availed them not which they had earned, and there befel them the evil deeds of what they had earned: and those who do wrong of these (Meccans), there shall befall them too the evil deeds of what they had earned, nor shall they frustrate Him.

Have they not known that God extends His provision to whom He pleases, or doles it out? verily, in that are signs unto a people who believe.

Say, 'O my servants! who have been extravagant against their own souls!' be not in despair of the mercy of God ; verily, God forgives sins, all of them ; verily, He is forgiving, merciful.

[55] But turn repentant unto your Lord, and resign yourselves to Him, before there comes on you torment ! then ye shall not be helped : and follow the best of what has been sent down to you from your Lord, before there come on you the torment suddenly, ere ye can perceive !

Lest a soul should say, ' O my sighing ! for what I have neglected towards God ! for, verily, I was amongst those who did jest ! ' or lest it should say, ' If God had but guided me, I should surely have been of those who fear ! ' or lest it should say, when it sees the torment, ' Had I another turn I should be of those who do well ! '

[60] ' Yea ! there came to thee my signs and thou didst call them lies, and wert too big with pride, and wert of those who misbelieved ! '

And on the resurrection day thou shalt see those who lied against God, with their faces blackened. Is there not in hell a resort for those who are too big with pride ?

And God shall rescue those who fear Him, into their safe place ; no evil shall touch them, nor shall they be grieved.)

God is the creator of everything, and He is guardian over everything ; His are the keys of the heavens and the earth ; and those who misbelieve in the signs of God, they it is who lose !

Say, ' What ! other than God would you bid me serve, O ye ignorant ones ? [65] When He has inspired thee and those before thee that, " If thou dost associate aught with Him, thy work will surely be in vain, and thou shalt surely be of those who lose !” Nay, but God do thou serve, and be of those who do give thanks !’

And they do not value God at His true value ; while the earth all of it is but a handful for Him on the resurrection day, and the heavens shall be rolled up in His right hand ! Celebrated be His praise ! and exalted be He above what they associate with Him ! And the trumpet shall be blown, and those who are in the heavens and in the earth shall swoon, save whom God pleases. Then it shall be blown again, and, lo ! they shall stand up and look on. And the earth shall beam with the light of its Lord, and the Book shall be set forth, and the prophets and martyrs¹ shall be brought ; and it shall be decreed between them in truth, and they shall not be wronged ! [70] And every soul shall be paid for what it has done, and He knows best that which they do ; and those who misbelieve shall be driven to hell in troops ; and when they come there, its doors shall be opened, and its keepers shall say to them, ‘ Did not apostles from amongst yourselves come to you to recite to you the signs of your Lord, and to warn you of the meeting of this day of yours ? ’ They shall say, ‘ Yea, but the sentence of torment was due against the misbelievers ! ’ It shall be said, ‘ Enter ye the gates of hell, to dwell therein for aye ! Hell is the resort of those who are too big with pride ! ’

But those who fear their Lord shall be driven to Paradise in troops ; until they come there, its doors shall be opened, and its keepers shall say to them, ‘ Peace be upon you, ye have done well ! ’ so enter in to dwell for aye!' and they shall say, 'Praise be to God, who hath made good His promise to us, and hath given us the earth to inherit! We establish ourselves in Paradise wherever we please; and goodly is the reward of those who work!'

¹ Or witnesses.

[75] And thou shalt see the angels circling round about the throne, celebrating the praise of their Lord; and it shall be decided between them in truth; and it shall be said, 'Praise be to God, the Lord of the worlds!'

THE CHAPTER OF THE BELIEVER.

(XL. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

'H. M. The sending down of the Book from God, the mighty, the knowing, the forgiver of sin and acceptor of repentance, keen at punishment, long-suffering! there is no god but He! to whom the journey is!

None wrangle concerning the signs of God but those who misbelieve; then let not their going to and fro in the cities deceive thee.

[5] The people of Noah before them called the prophets liars; and the confederates after them; and every nation schemed against their Apostle to catch him. And they wrangled with falsehood that they might refute the truth thereby, but I seized them, and how was my punishment!

Thus was the sentence of thy Lord due against those who misbelieved, that they are the fellows of the Fire!

Those who bear the throne and those around it celebrate the praise of their Lord, and believe in Him, and ask pardon for those who believe: 'Our Lord! thou dost embrace all things in mercy and knowledge, then pardon those who turn repentant and follow thy way, and guard them from the torment of hell! Our Lord! make them enter into gardens of Eden which thou hast promised to them, and to those who do well of their fathers, and their wives, and their seed; verily, thou art the mighty, the wise! and guard them from evil deeds, for he whom thou shalt guard from evil deeds on that day, thou wilt have had mercy on, and that is mighty bliss!'

[10] Verily, those who misbelieve shall be cried out to, 'Surely, God's hatred is greater than your hatred of each other when ye were called unto the faith and misbelieved!' They shall say, 'Our Lord! Thou hast killed us twice, and Thou hast quickened us twice¹; and we do confess our sins: is there then a way for getting out?'

That is because when God alone was proclaimed ye did disbelieve; but when partners were joined to Him ye did believe; but judgment belongs to God, the high, the great! He it is who shows you His signs, and sends down to you from heaven provision; but none is mindful except him who turns repentant; then call on God, being sincere in your religion to Him, averse although the mis-believers be! [15] Exalted of degrees! The Lord of the throne! He throws the spirit by His bidding upon whom He will of His servants, to give warning of the day of meeting. The day when they shall be issuing forth, naught concerning them shall be hidden from God. Whose is the kingdom on that day?—God's, the one, the dominant! to-day shall every soul be recompensed for that which it has earned. There is no wrong to-day; verily, God is quick at reckoning up!

¹ Referring to the absence of life before birth and the deprivation of it at death, and to the being quickened at birth and raised again after death.

And warn them of the day that approaches, when hearts are choking in the gullets; those who do wrong shall have no warm friend, and no intercessor who shall be obeyed. [20] He knows the deceitful of eye and what men's breasts conceal, and God decides with truth; but those they call on beside Him do not decide at all: verily, God, He both hears and looks.

Have they not journeyed on in the earth and seen how was the end of those who journeyed on before them? They were stronger than them in might, and their vestiges are in the land; but God caught them up in their sins, and they had none to guard them against God.

That is for that their apostles did come to them with manifest signs, and they misbelieved, and God caught them up; verily, He is mighty, keen to punish!

And we did send Moses with our signs, and with obvious authority, [25] unto Pharaoh and Hâmân and Qarûn. They said, 'A lying sorcerer!' and when they came to them with truth from us, they said, 'Kill the sons of those who believe with him, and let their women live!' but the stratagem of the misbelievers is only in error!

And Pharaoh said, 'Let me kill Moses; and then let him call upon his Lord! verily, I fear that he will change your religion, or that he will cause evil doing to appear in the land.'

And Moses said, 'Verily, I take refuge in my Lord and your Lord from every one who is big with pride and believes not on the day of reckoning.'

And a believing man of Pharaoh's people, who concealed his faith, said, 'Will ye kill a man for saying, My Lord is God, when he has come to you with manifest signs from your Lord? and if he be a liar, against him is his lie; and if he be truthful, there will befall you somewhat of that which he threatens you; verily, God guides not him who is an extravagant liar. [30] O my people! yours is the kingdom to-day, ye are eminent in the land, but who will help us against the violence of God, if it comes upon us?'

Said Pharaoh, 'I will only show you what I see, and I will only guide you into the way of right direction.'

And he who believed said, 'O my people! verily, I fear for you the like of the day of the confederates, the like of the wont of the people of Noah and 'Âd and Hâmân, and of those after them; for God desires not injustice for His servants. O my people! verily, I fear for you the day of crying out,— [35] the day when ye shall turn your backs, fleeing, with no defender for you against God; for he whom God leads astray, for him there is no guide!

'And Joseph came to you before with manifest signs, but ye ceased not to doubt concerning what he brought you, until, when he perished, ye said, "God will not send after him an apostle;" thus does God lead astray him who is extravagant, a doubter.

‘Those who wrangle concerning the signs of God without authority having come to them are greatly hated by God and by those who believe; thus does God set a stamp upon the heart of every tyrant too big with pride!’

And Pharaoh said, ‘O Hâmân! build for me a tower, haply I may reach the tracts,—the tracts of heaven, and may mount up to the God of Moses, for, verily, I think him a liar.’

[40] And thus was his evil deed made seemly to Pharaoh, and he was turned from the way; but Pharaoh’s stratagem ended only in ruin, and he who believed said, ‘O my people! follow me, I will guide you to the way of the right direction. O my people! verily, the life of this world is but a provision, but, verily, the hereafter, that is the abode of stability! Whoso does evil, he shall only be recompensed with the like thereof; and whoso does right, be it male or female and a believer, these shall enter into Paradise; they shall be provided therein without count. O my people! why should I call you to salvation, and you call me to the fire? [45] Ye call on me to disbelieve in God, and to join with Him what I have no knowledge of; but I call you to the mighty forgiving One! no doubt that what ye call me to, ought not to be called on in this world or in the hereafter, and that we shall be sent back to God, and that the extravagant, they are the fellows of the Fire!

‘But ye shall remember what I say to you; and I entrust my affair to God, verily, God looks upon His servants!’

And God guarded him from the evils of what they plotted, and there closed in upon Pharaoh evil woe.

The fire—they shall be exposed to it morning and evening; and ‘on the day the Hour shall arise,’ enter, O people of Pharaoh! into the keenest torment.

[50] And when they argue together in the fire, and the weak say to those who were big with pride, ‘Verily, we were followers of yours, can ye then avail us against a portion of the fire?’

Those who were big with pride shall say, ‘Verily, we are all in it; verily, God has judged between His servants.’

And those who are in the fire shall say unto the keepers of hell, ‘Call upon your Lord to lighten from us one day of the torment.’ They shall say, ‘Did not your apostles come to you with manifest signs?’ They shall say, ‘Yea!’ They shall say, ‘Then, call!’—but the call of the misbelievers is only in error.

Verily, we will help our apostles, and those who believe, in the life of this world and on the day when the witnesses shall stand up: [55] the day when their excuse shall not avail the unjust; but for them is the curse, and for them is an evil abode.

And we did give Moses the guidance; and we made the children of Israel to inherit the Book, as a guidance and a reminder to those endowed with minds.

Be thou patient, then; verily, God’s promise is true: and ask thou forgiveness for thy sins, and celebrate the praise of thy Lord in the evening and in the morn.

Verily, those who wrangle concerning the signs of God without authority having come to them, there is naught in their breasts but pride; but they shall not attain it: do thou then seek refuge in God; verily, He both hears and looks!

Surely the creation of the heavens and the earth is greater than the creation of man: but most men know it not.

[60] The blind and the seeing shall not be deemed alike, nor those who believe and do right and the evildoer; little is it that they remember.

Verily, the Hour will surely come; there is no doubt therein; but most men do not believe!

And your Lord said, 'Call upon me, I will answer you; verily, those who are too big with pride to worship shall enter into hell, shrinking up.'

God it is who has made for you the night to repose therein, and the day to see by; verily, God is Lord of grace to men, but most men give no thanks!

There is God for you! your Lord! the creator of everything! there is no god but He, how then can ye lie¹? [65] Thus did those lie who gainsaid the signs of God.

God it is who has made for you the earth as a resting-place, and a heaven as building, and has formed you and made excellent your forms; and has provided you with good things! there is God for you!—your Lord! then blessed be God, the Lord of the worlds!

¹ Or 'turn away.'

He is the living One, there is no god but He! then call on Him, being sincere in your religion to Him; praise be to God, the Lord of the worlds!

Say, 'Verily, I am forbidden to serve those whom ye call on beside God, since there have come to me manifest signs from my Lord, and I am bidden to be resigned unto the Lord of the worlds.'

He it is who created you from the earth, then from a clot, then from congealed blood, then He brings you forth a child; then ye reach to puberty; then do ye become old men,—though of you there are some who are taken away before,—that ye may reach an appointed time, and haply ye may have some sense.

[70] He it is who quickens and kills, and when He decrees a matter, then He only says to it, 'BE,' and it is.

Hast thou not seen those who wrangle concerning the signs of God how they are turned away? Those who call the Book, and what we have sent our apostles with, a lie, soon shall they know—when the fetters are on their necks and the chains, as they are dragged into hell!—then in the fire shall they be baked.

Then it shall be said to them, 'Where is what ye did associate beside God?' They shall say, 'They have strayed away from us; nay, we did not call before upon anything!'—thus does God lead the misbelievers astray.

[75] There! for that ye did rejoice in the land without right; and for that ye did exult; enter ye the gates of hell, to dwell therein for aye; for evil is the resort of those who are too big with pride!

But be thou patient ; verily, the promise of God is true ; and whether we show thee a part of what we promised them, or whether we surely take thee to ourself, unto us shall they be returned.

And we did send apostles before thee : of them are some whose stories we have related to thee, and of them are some whose stories we have not related to thee ; and no apostle might ever bring a sign except by the permission of God ; but when God's bidding came it was decided with truth, and there were those lost who deemed it vain !

God it is who has made for you cattle, that ye may ride on some of them ;—and of them ye eat, [80] and ye have in them advantages ;—and that ye may attain thereon a want which is in your breasts ; upon them and upon ships are ye borne.

He shows you His signs ; which sign then of your Lord do ye deny ?

Have they not journeyed on in the land and seen how was the end of those before them, who were more numerous than they and stronger in might, and in their vestiges which are still in the land ? but of no avail to them was that which they had earned.

And when there came to them their apostles with manifest signs they rejoiced in what knowledge they had ; but there closed in upon them that whereat they had mocked.

And when they saw our violence they said, 'We believe in God alone, and we disbelieve in what we once associated with Him.'

[85] But their faith was of no avail to them when they saw our violence—the course of God with His servants in time past, and there the misbelievers lose !

THE CHAPTER 'DETAILED.'

(XLI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

'H. M. A revelation from the merciful, the compassionate; a book whose signs are detailed; an Arabic Qur'ân for a people who do know; a herald of glad tidings and a warning. But most of them turn aside and do not hear, and say, 'Our hearts are veiled from what thou dost call us to, and in our ears is dulness, and between us and thee there is a veil. Act thou; verily, we are acting too!' [5] Say, 'I am but a mortal like yourselves, I am inspired that your God is one God; then go straight to Him, and ask forgiveness of Him; and woe to the idolaters, who give not alms, and in the hereafter disbelieve!'

Verily, those who believe and do right, for them is a hire that is not grudged.

Say, 'What! do ye really misbelieve in Him who created the earth in two days, and do ye make peers for Him?—that is the Lord of the worlds!'

And He placed thereon¹ firm mountains above it and blessed it, and apportioned therein its foods in four days alike for those who ask. [10] Then He made for the heaven and it was but smoke, and He said to it and to the earth, 'Come, ye two, whether ye will or no!' They said, 'We come willingly!'

And He decreed them seven heavens in two days, and inspired every heaven with its bidding: and we adorned the lower heaven with lamps and guardian angels; that is the decree of the mighty, the knowing One.

¹ On the earth.

But if they turn aside, then say, 'I have warned you of a thunder-clap like the thunder-clap of 'Âd and Thamûd; when their apostles came to them from before them and from behind them (saying), "Serve ye none but God." They said, 'If our Lord pleased He would send down angels; so we in what ye are sent with disbelieve.'

And as for 'Âd, they were big with pride in the land, without right, and said, 'Who is stronger than us in might?' Did they not see that God who created them He was stronger than they in might? But they did gainsay our signs. [15] And we sent upon them a cold blast in unfortunate days, that we might make them taste the torment of disgrace in the life of this world;—but the torment of the hereafter is more disgraceful, and they shall not be helped.

And as for Thamûd we guided them; but they preferred blindness to guidance, and the thunder-clap of the torment of abasement caught them for what they had earned; but we saved those who believed and who did fear.

And the day when the enemies of God shall be gathered together into the fire, marshalled along; until when they come to it, their hearing and their eyesight and their skins shall bear witness against them of that which they have done. [20] And they shall say to their skins, 'Why have ye borne witness against us?' they shall say, 'God gave us speech who has given speech to everything; He created you at first, and unto Him shall ye be returned; and ye could not conceal yourselves that your hearing and your eyesight should not be witness against you, nor your skins; but ye thought that God did not know much of what ye do. And that thought of yours which ye thought concerning your Lord has destroyed you, and ye have now become of those who lose!

And if they are patient, still the fire is a resort for them; and if they ask for favour again, they shall not be taken into favour.

We will allot to them mates¹, for they have made seemly to them what was before them and what was behind them; and due against them was the sentence on the nations who passed away before them; both of ginns and of mankind; verily, they were the losers!

[25] Those who misbelieve say, 'Listen not to this Qur'ân, but talk foolishly about it, haply ye may gain the upper hand².' But we will make those who misbelieve taste keen torment; and we will recompense them with the worst of that which they have done. That is, the recompence of the enemies of God,—the fire! for them is an eternal abode therein: a recompence for that they did gainsay our signs.

And those who misbelieved say, 'Our Lord, show us those who have led us astray amongst the ginns and mankind; we will place them beneath our feet, and they shall both be amongst those who are put down!' [30] Verily, those who say, 'Our Lord is God,' and then go straight, the angels descend upon them—'fear not and be not grieved, but receive the glad tidings of Paradise which ye were promised;

¹ Devils, opposed to the guardian angels of the believers.

² I.e. interrupt the reading of the Qur'ân by talking, in order to overpower the voice of the reader.

we are your patrons in the life of this world and in the next, and ye shall have therein what your souls desire, and ye shall have therein what ye call for,—an entertainment from the forgiving, the merciful !'

And who speaks better than he who calls to God and does right, and says, 'Verily, I am of those resigned ?'

Good and evil shall not be deemed alike ; repel (evil) with what is best, and lo ! He between whom and thyself was enmity is as though he were a warm patron. [35] But none shall meet with it save those who are patient ; and none shall meet with it save those who are endowed with mighty good fortune.

And if an incitement from the devil incites you, then seek refuge in God ; verily, He both hears and knows.

And of His signs are the night and the day, and the sun and the moon. Adore ye not the sun, neither the moon ; but adore God who created you, if it be Him ye serve.

But if they be too big with pride—yet those who are with thy Lord celebrate His praises by night and day, and they are never weary.

And of His signs (is this), that thou mayest see the earth drooping, and when we send down water upon it it stirs and swells ; verily, He who quickens it will surely quicken the dead ; verily, He is mighty over all.

[40] Verily, those who are inclined to oppose our signs are not hidden from us. Is he who is cast into the fire better, or he who comes safe on the resurrection day ? Do what ye will : verily, He on what ye do doth look.

Verily, those who misbelieve in the reminder when it comes to them—and, verily, it is a glorious Book! falsehood shall not come to it, from before it, nor from behind it—a revelation from the wise, the praiseworthy One. Naught is said to thee but what was said to the apostles before thee, 'Verily, thy Lord is Lord of forgiveness and Lord of grievous torment!'

And had we made it a foreign Qur'ân, they would have said, 'Unless its signs be detailed. . . . What! foreign and Arabic¹?' Say, 'It is, for those who believe, a guidance and a healing. But those who believe not, in their ears is dulness, and it is blindness to them; these are called to from a far-off place.'

[45] And we gave Moses the Book, and it was disputed about; but had it not been for thy Lord's word already passed it would have been decided between them, for, verily, they were in hesitating doubt thereon.

Whoso does right it is for his soul, and whoso does evil it is against it, for thy Lord is not unjust towards His servants.

To Him is referred the knowledge of the Hour: and no fruits come forth from their husks, and no female conceives, or is delivered, save with His knowledge.

And the day when He shall call to them, 'Where

¹ I. e. they would have said, 'What! is the revelation in a foreign tongue, and we who are expected to read it Arabs?' This is paraphrased by Sale: 'If we had revealed the Qur'ân in a foreign language, they had surely said, "Unless the signs thereof be distinctly explained we will not receive the same: is the Book to be written in a foreign tongue, and the person unto whom it is directed an Arabian?"' are the partners ye did join with me?' they shall say, 'We do own to thee there is no witness amongst us!' and that on which they used to call before shall stray away from them, and they shall think there is no escape for them. Man is never tired of praying for good, but if evil touch him, then he is despairing and hopeless.

[50] But if we make him taste mercy from us after distress has touched him he will surely say, 'This is for me, and I do not think the Hour is imminent; and if I be brought back to my Lord, verily, I shall surely have good with Him¹;' but we will inform those who misbelieve of what they have done, and we will surely make them taste wretched torment.

And when we have been gracious to man, he turns away and goes aside; but when evil touches him he is one of copious prayer.

Say, 'Let us see now! if it be from God and ye disbelieve in it, who is more in error than he who is in a remote schism?'

We will show them our signs in the regions and in themselves, until it is plain to them that it is the truth. Is it not enough for thy Lord that He is witness over all? Ay, verily, they are in doubt about the meeting of their Lord! Ay, verily, He encompasses all!

¹ Or the words may be rendered, 'There is good with him still due to me.'

THE CHAPTER OF COUNSEL.

(XLII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

'H. M. 'H. S. Q. Thus does God, the mighty, the wise, inspire thee and those before thee.

His is what is in the heavens and what is in the earth, and He is the high, the mighty!

The heavens well-nigh cleave asunder from above them; and the angels celebrate the praises of their Lord, and ask forgiveness for those who are on the earth. Ay, verily, God, He is the forgiving and merciful! but those who take beside Him patrons, God watches over them, and thou hast not charge over them.

[5] Thus have we revealed an Arabic Qur'ân, that thou mayest warn the Mother of cities¹ and all around it; and warn them of a day of gathering, there is no doubt therein;—a part in Paradise and a part in the blaze.

But had God pleased He would have made them one nation; but He makes whom He will enter into His mercy; and the unjust have neither patron nor help. Do they take other patrons besides Him, when God He is the patron, and He quickens the dead and He is mighty over all?

But whatsoever ye dispute about, the judgment of it is God's. There is God for you!—my Lord! upon Him do I rely, and unto Him I turn repentant. The originator of the heavens and the earth, He has made for you from yourselves wives; and of the cattle mates; producing you thereby. There is naught like Him, for He both hears and sees.

¹ Mecca.

[10] His are the keys of the heavens and the earth, He extends provision to whom He will, or doles it out; verily, He knows everything.

He has enjoined upon you for religion what He prescribed to Noah and what we inspired thee with, and what we inspired Abraham and Moses and Jesus,—to be steadfast in religion, and not to part into sects therein—a great thing to the idolaters is that which ye call them to! God elects for Himself whom He pleases and guides unto Himself him who turns repentant.

But they did not part into sects until after the knowledge had come to them, through mutual envy; and had it not been for thy Lord's word already passed for an appointed time, it would surely have been decided between them; but, verily, those who have been given the Book as an inheritance after them, are in hesitating doubt concerning it.

Wherefore call thou, and go straight on as thou art bidden, and follow not their lusts; and say, 'I believe in the Book which God has sent down; and I am bidden to judge justly between you. God is our Lord and your Lord; we have our works and ye have your works; there is no argument between us and you. God will assemble us together and unto Him the journey is.'

[15] But those who argue about God after it has been assented to¹, their arguments shall be rebutted

¹ I.e. after the faith of Islâm had been accepted by them, or after God had assented to the prophet's prayer and supported the before their Lord; and upon them shall be wrath, and for them shall be keen torment.

God it is who has sent down the Book with truth, and the balance¹; and what shall make thee know whether haply the Hour be nigh? Those who believe not would hurry it on; and those who believe shrink with terror at it and know that it is true. Ay, verily, those who dispute concerning the Hour are in remote error!

God is kind to His servants; He provides whom He will, and He is the mighty, the glorious.

He who wishes for the tilth of the next world, we will increase for him the tilth; and he who desires the tilth of this world, we will give him thereof: but in the next he shall have no portion.

[20] Have they associates who have enjoined any religion on them which God permits not?—but were it not for the word of decision² it would have been decreed to them. Verily, the unjust,—for them is grievous woe. Thou shalt see the unjust shrink with terror from what they have gained as it falls upon them; and those who believe and do right, in meads of Paradise, they shall have what they please with their Lord;—that is great grace!

That is what God gives glad tidings of to His servants who believe and do righteous acts.

Say, 'I do not ask for it a hire—only the love of my kinsfolk.' And he who gains a good action faith, or after the Jews and Christians had assented to the teaching of Mohammed, for the commentaries are uncertain as to the exact meaning of the phrase.

¹ I. e. the law contained in the Qur'ân.

² I. e. were it not that God has promised that those things shall be decided at the day of judgment.

we will increase good for him thereby; verily, God is forgiving and grateful!

Or will they say he has forged against God a lie? But if God pleased He could set a seal upon thy heart; but God will blot out falsehood and verify truth by His word; verily, He knows the nature of men's breasts!

He it is who accepts repentance from His servants and pardons their offences and knows that which ye do. [25] And He answers the prayer of those who believe and do right, and gives them increase of His grace; but the misbelievers,—for them is keen torment.

And if God were to extend provision to His servants they would be wanton in the earth. But He sends down by measure what He pleases; verily, of His servants He is well aware and sees.

He it is who sends down the rain after they have despaired; and disperses His mercy, for He is the praiseworthy patron.

And of His signs is the creation of the heavens and the earth, and what He hath spread abroad therein of beasts; and He is able to collect them when He will.

And what misfortunes befall you it is for what your hands have earned; but He pardons much; [30] yet ye cannot make Him helpless in the earth, nor have ye, besides God, either a patron or a helper.

And of His signs are the ships that sail like mountains in the sea. If He will, He calms the wind, and they become motionless on the back thereof: verily, in that are signs to every patient, grateful person:—or He makes them foundering for what they have earned; but He pardons much.

But let those who wrangle about our signs know that they shall have no escape!

And whatever ye are given it is but a provision of the life of this world; but what is with God is better and more lasting for those who believe and who upon their Lord rely, [35] and those who avoid great sins and abominations, and who when they are wroth forgive, and who assent to their Lord, and are steadfast in prayer, and whose affairs go by counsel amongst themselves, and who of what we have bestowed on them give alms, and who, when wrong befalls them, help themselves.

For the recompence of evil is evil like unto it; but he who pardons and does well, then his reward is with God; verily, He loves not the unjust. And he who helps himself after he has been wronged, for these—there is no way against them. [40] The way is only against those who wrong men and are wanton in the earth without right; these—for them is grievous woe.

But surely he who is patient and forgives,—verily, that is a determined affair¹.

But whomsoever God leads astray he has no patron after Him; and thou mayest see the unjust when they see the torment say, 'Is there no way to avert this²?' and thou mayest see them exposed to it, humbled with abasement, looking with a stealthy glance. And those who believe shall say, 'Verily, the losers are they who have lost themselves and their families too upon the resurrection day!' Ay, verily, the unjust are in lasting torment!

¹ I. e. it is a duty laid down by law.

² Or 'to return (to the world),' Bâidhâvî.

[45] And they shall have no patrons to help them beside God, and whomsoever God leads astray, there is no way for him.

Assent to your Lord before the day comes of which there is no averting from God; there is no refuge for you on that day; and for you there is no denial.

But if they turn aside, we have not sent thee to them as a guardian, thou hast only thy message to preach.

And, verily, when we have made man taste of mercy from us he rejoices therein; but if there befall them an evil for what their hands have done before—then, verily, man is ungrateful!

God's is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth, He creates what He pleases, He grants to whom He pleases females, and He grants to whom He pleases males, or He gives them in pairs, males and females; and He makes whom He pleases barren; verily, He is knowing, powerful!

[50] It is not for any mortal that God should speak to him, except by inspiration, or from behind a veil, or by sending an apostle and inspiring, by His permission, what He pleases; verily, He is high and wise!

And thus have we inspired thee by a spirit¹ at our bidding; thou didst not know what the Book was, nor the faith: but we made it a light whereby we guide whom we will of our servants. And, verily, thou shalt surely be guided into the right way,—the way of God, whose is what is in the heavens and what is in the earth. Ay, to God affairs do tend!

¹ Gabriel.

THE CHAPTER OF GILDING
(XLIII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

'H. M. By the perspicuous Book, verily, we have made it an Arabic Qur'ân ; haply ye will have some sense. And it is in the Mother of the Book with us,—high and wise¹. Shall we then push aside from you the Reminder, because ye are a people who are extravagant ?

[5] How many prophets have we sent amongst those of yore ? and there never came to them a prophet but they did mock at him ; then we destroyed them—more valiant than these²; and the example of those of yore passed away.

And if thou shouldst ask them who created the heavens and the earth, they will surely say, 'The mighty, the knowing One created them,' who made for you the earth a couch and placed for you therein roads, haply ye may be guided : [10] and who sent down from the heaven water in due measure ; and we raised up thereby a dead country ; thus shall ye too be brought forth ; and who has created all species ; and has made for you the ships and the cattle whereon to ride that ye may settle yourselves on their backs ; then remember the favour of your Lord when ye settled thereon, and say, 'Celebrated be the praises of Him who hath subjected this to us ! We could not have got this ourselves ; and, verily, unto our Lord shall we return !'

¹ See Part I, p. 2, note 2.

² I. e. the Meccans.

Yet they make for Him of His servants offspring ; verily, man is surely obviously ungrateful.

[15] Has He taken of what He creates daughters, and chosen sons for you ?

Yet when the tidings¹ are given any one of that which he strikes out as a similitude for the Merciful One, his face grows black and he is choked. What ! one brought up amongst ornaments, and who is always in contention without obvious cause² ?

And have they made the angels, who are the servants of the Merciful One, females ? Were they witnesses of their creation ? their witness shall be written down, and they shall be questioned ; and they say, ' Had the Merciful pleased we should never have worshipped them.' They have no knowledge of that, they only conjecture.

[20] Have we given them a book³ before it to which they might hold ?

Nay ; they say, ' We found our fathers (agreed) upon a religion, and, verily, we are guided by their traces.'

Thus, too, did we never send before thee to a city any warner, but the affluent ones thereof said, ' Verily, we found our fathers (agreed) upon a religion, and, verily, we are led by their traces.'

Say, ' What ! if I come to you with what is a better guide than what ye found your fathers agreed upon ?' and they will say, ' Verily, we in what ye are sent with disbelieve !'

¹ I. e. of the birth of a daughter, see Part I, p. 256, note 2.

² I. e. what ! do they assign children of this kind, viz. daughters, to God ?

³ I. e. a scripture authorising the practice of their religion, such as the worship of angels and the ascribing of daughters to God.

Then we took vengeance on them, and see how was the end of those who called the (apostles) liars.

[25] When Abraham said to his father and his people, 'Verily, I am clear of all that ye serve, except Him who created me; for, verily, He will guide me : ' and he made it a word remaining among his posterity, that haply they might return.

Nay; but I let these (Meccans) and their fathers have enjoyment until the truth came to them, and an apostle. And when the truth came to them they said, 'This is magic, and we therein do disbelieve ! ' [30] And they say, 'Unless this Qur'ân were sent down to a man great in the two cities. . . .¹'

Is it they who distribute the mercy of thy Lord ? We distribute amongst them their livelihood in the life of this world, and we exalt some of them above others in degrees, that some may take others into subjection ; but the mercy of thy Lord is better than that which they amass.

And but that men would then have been one nation, we would have made for those who misbelieve in the Merciful One roofs of silver for their houses, and steps up thereto which they might mount ; and to their houses doors, and bedsteads on which they might recline ; and gilding,—for, verily, all that is a provision of the life of this world, but the hereafter is better with thy Lord for those who fear !

[35] And whosoever turns from the reminder of the Merciful One, we will chain to him a devil, who shall be his mate ; and, verily, these shall turn them from the path while they reckon that they are guided ; until when he comes to us he shall say, 'O, would that between me and thee there were the distance of the two orients¹, for an evil mate (art thou)!' But it shall not avail you on that day, since ye were unjust ; verily, in the torment shall ye share !

¹ I.e. had it been sent down to some man of influence and importance in Mecca and Tâ'if we would have received it.

What ! canst thou make the deaf to hear, or guide the blind, or him who is in obvious error ?

[40] Whether then we take thee off we will surely take vengeance on them ; or whether we show thee that which we have promised them ; for, verily, we have power over them.

Say, 'Dost thou hold to what is inspired thee ?' verily, thou art in the right way, and, verily, it is a reminder to thee and to thy people, but in the end they shall be asked.

And ask those whom we have sent before thee amongst the prophets, 'Did we make gods beside the Merciful One for them to serve ?'

[45] We did send Moses with our signs to Pharaoh and his chiefs, and he said, 'Verily, I am the apostle of the Lord of the worlds ; but when he came to them with our signs, lo, they laughed at them !'

And we did not show them a sign, but it was greater than its fellow ; and we seized them with the torment, haply they might turn.

And they said, 'O thou magician ! pray for us to thy Lord, as He has engaged with thee : verily, we are guided.'

¹ I. e. the east and west, though some understand it between the two solstices.

And when we removed from them the torment, behold they broke their word.

[50] And Pharaoh proclaimed amongst his people; said he, 'O my people! is not the kingdom of Egypt mine? and these rivers that flow beneath me? What! can ye then not see? Am I better than this fellow, who is contemptible, who can hardly explain himself¹? Unless then bracelets of gold be cast upon him, or there come with him angels as his mates . . . !'

And he taught his people levity; and they obeyed him: verily, they were an abominable people.

[55] And when they had annoyed us we took vengeance on them, and we drowned them all together, and we made them a precedent and an example to those after them.

And when the son of Mary was set forth as a parable, behold thy people turned away from him and said, 'Are our gods better, or is he?' They did not set it forth to thee save for wrangling. Nay, but they are a contentious people².

He is but a servant whom we have been gracious to, and we have made him an example for the children of Israel. [60] And if we please we can make of you angels in the earth to succeed you³. And, verily, he is a sign of the Hour⁴. Doubt not then

¹ See p. 36, note 1.

² The Arabs objected that Jesus was worshipped by Christians as a God, and that when Mohammed cursed their false gods, the ban must apply equally to him.

³ Just as Jesus was miraculously conceived, so can miraculously conceived offspring be produced among the Meccans themselves.

⁴ Some read, 'a sign,' which is perhaps better. The reference is to the predicted second advent of the Messiah, which is to precede concerning it, but follow this right way; and let not the devil turn you away; verily, he is to you an open foe!

And when Jesus came with manifest signs he said, 'I am come to you with wisdom, and I will explain to you something of that whereon ye did dispute, then fear God, obey me; verily, God, He is my Lord and your Lord, serve Him then, this is the right way.'

[65] But the confederates disputed amongst themselves; and woe to those who are unjust from the torment of a grievous day!

Do they expect aught but that the Hour will come upon them suddenly while they do not perceive? Friends on that day shall be foes to each other, save those who fear.

O my servants! there is no fear for you on that day; nor shall ye be grieved who believe in our signs and who are resigned. [70] Enter ye into Paradise, ye and your wives, happy!

Dishes of gold and pitchers shall be sent round to them; therein is what souls desire, and eyes shall be delighted, and ye therein shall dwell for aye; for that is Paradise which ye are given as an inheritance for that which ye have done. Therein shall ye have much fruit whereof to eat.

Verily, the sinners are in the torment of hell to dwell for aye. [75] It shall not be intermitted for them, and they therein shall be confused. We have not wronged them, but it was themselves they wronged.

the end of the world. Some commentators, however, read 'it,' instead of 'he,' referring to the Qur'ân, instead of to Jesus.

And they shall cry out, 'O Mâlik!¹ let thy lord make an end of us;' he shall say, 'Verily, ye are to tarry here.'

We have brought you the truth, but most of you are averse from the truth. Have they arranged the affair? then will we arrange it too²!

[80] Or do they reckon that we did not hear their secrets and their whispering? Nay, but our messengers are with them writing down³.

Say, 'If the Merciful One has a son then am I the first to worship him. Celebrated be the praise of the Lord of the heavens and the earth! the Lord of the throne, above all they attribute to Him!

But leave them to ponder and to play until they meet that day of theirs which they are promised.

He it is who is in the heaven a God and in the earth a God! and He is the wise, the knowing. [85] And blessed be he whose is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth, and what is between both, and His is the knowledge of the Hour, and unto Him shall ye be brought back!

And those they call on beside Him shall not possess intercession except those only who bear witness for the truth and who do know.

And if thou shouldst ask them who created them they will surely say, 'God!' How then can they lie?

And what he⁴ says, 'O Lord, verily, these are

¹ Mâlik is the keeper of hell, and presides over the tortures of the damned.

² The word used signifies twisting up the strands of a rope.

³ I. e. the recording angel.

⁴ Mohammed.

a people who do not believe; shun them then and say, "Peace!" for they at length shall know!

THE CHAPTER OF SMOKE.

(XLIV. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

'H. M. By the perspicuous Book! verily, we have sent it down on a blessed night;—verily, we had given warning—wherein is decided every wise affair, as an order from us. Verily, we were sending (apostles)—[5] a mercy from thy Lord; verily, He both hears and knows: from the Lord of the heavens and the earth and what is between the two, if ye were but sure. There is no god but He, He quickens and He kills—your Lord and the Lord of your fathers of yore! Nay, they in doubt do play!

But expect thou the day when the heaven shall bring obvious smoke [10] to cover men—this is grievous torment!

Our Lord! remove from us the torment; verily, we are believers.

How can they have the reminder (now), when they have had a plain apostle, and when they turned their backs away from him and said, 'Taught! mad!' Verily, we will remove the torment a little, (but) ye will surely return!

[15] On the day when we will assault with the great assault, verily, we will take vengeance.

And we already tried the people of Pharaoh when there came to them a noble apostle: 'Send back to me God's servants; verily, I am to you a faithful apostle;' and, 'Exalt not yourselves above God; verily, I come to you with obvious authority. And, verily, I seek refuge in my Lord and your Lord, that ye stone me not. [20] And if ye believe not in me then let me alone!'

Then he called upon his Lord, 'Verily, these are a sinful people.' So journey with my servants by night—verily, ye will be pursued. But leave the sea in quiet—verily, they are a host to be drowned! How many gardens and springs have they left, [25] and corn lands and a noble place, and comfort wherein they did enjoy themselves!

Thus—and we gave them for an inheritance to another people. And the heaven wept not for them, nor the earth, nor were they respited.

But we saved the children of Israel from shameful woe!—[30]—from Pharaoh; verily, he was haughty, one of the extravagant! And we did choose them, wittingly, above the worlds; and we gave them signs wherein was an obvious trial!

Verily, these¹ say, 'It is but our first death², so bring our fathers, if ye do speak the truth!'

[35] Are they better than the people of Tubbâ'h³, and those before them? We destroyed them—verily, they were sinners!

Nor did we create the heavens and the earth, and what is between the two in sport: we did but create them in truth, though most of them know it not!

¹ The Meccans.

² I. e. we shall only die once.

³ The Himyarite Arabs, whose kings were called Tubbâ'h, i. e. 'successors.'

[40] Verily, the day of separation is their appointed term; the day when master shall not avail client at all, nor shall they be helped; save whomsoever God shall have mercy on; verily, He is the mighty, the merciful!

Verily, the Zaqqûm tree (shall be) the food of the sinful: [45] as it were melting¹, shall it boil in their bellies like the boiling of hot water!—‘Take him and hale him into the midst of hell! then pour over his head the torment of hot water!—Taste! verily, thou art the mighty, the honourable! [50] Verily, this is that whereon ye did dispute!’

Verily, the pious shall be in a safe place! in gardens and springs, they shall be clad in satin and stout silk face to face. Thus!—and we will wed them to bright and large-eyed maids! [55] They shall call therein for every fruit in safety. They shall not taste therein of death save their first death, and we will keep them from the torment of hell! Grace from thy Lord, that is the grand bliss!

And we have only made it easy for thy tongue, that haply they may be mindful. Then watch thou; verily, they are watching too!

THE CHAPTER OF THE KNEELING.

(XLV. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

‘H.M. A revelation of the Book from God, the mighty, the wise. Verily, in the heavens and the earth are signs to those who believe ; and in your creation and the beasts that are spread abroad are signs to a people who are sure ; and in the alternation of night and day, and the provision that God has sent down from heaven and quickened thereby the earth after its death, and in the veering of the winds are signs unto a people who have sense.

¹ Or ‘like the dregs of oil.’

[5] These are the signs of God which we recite to thee in truth ; and in what new story after God and His signs will they believe ?

Woe to every sinful liar who hears God's signs sent to him, then persists in being big with pride as though he heard them not—so give him the glad tidings of grievous woe—and when he knows something of our signs takes them for a jest ! These,—for them is shameful woe, behind them is hell, and what they have earned shall not avail them aught, nor what they have taken besides God for patrons ; and for them is mighty woe.

[10] This is a guidance, and those who misbelieve in the signs of their Lord, for them is torment of a grievous plague.

God it is who subjects to you the sea that the ships may sail thereon at his bidding, and that ye may crave of His grace, and that haply ye may give thanks ; and He has subjected to you what is in the heavens and what is in the earth,—all from Him ; verily, in that are signs unto a people who reflect.

Say to those who believe that they pardon those who hope not for God's days¹, that He may reward a people for that which they have earned.

¹ That is, the successful battles against the infidels, 'battles' being always spoken of by the ancient Arabs as 'days.'

Whosoever acts aright it is for his own soul, and whosoever does evil it is against it; then unto your Lord shall ye be returned.

[15] And we did bring the children of Israel the Book and judgment and prophecy, and we provided them with good things, and preferred them above the worlds. And we brought them manifest proofs of the affair, and they disputed not until after knowledge had come to them, through mutual envy. Verily, thy Lord will decide between them on the resurrection day concerning that whereon they did dispute.

Then we did set thee¹ over a law concerning the affair: follow it then, and follow not the lusts of those who do not know. Verily, they shall not avail thee against God at all; and, verily, the wrongdoers are patrons of each other, but God is the patron of those who fear.

This is an insight for men and a guidance and a mercy to a people who are sure.

[20] Do those who commit evil deeds count that we will make them like those who believe and work righteous deeds, equal in their life and their death? —ill it is they judge.

And God created the heavens and the earth in truth; and every soul shall be recompensed for that which it has earned, and they shall not be wronged.

Hast thou considered him who takes his lusts for his god, and God leads him astray wittingly, and has set a seal upon his hearing and his heart, and has placed upon his eyesight dimness? who then shall guide him after God? Will they not then mind?

¹ Mohammed.

They say, 'It is only our life in this world, we die and we live, and naught destroys us but time!' But they have no knowledge of this; they do but suspect.

And when our signs are rehearsed to them with evidences their only argument is to say, 'Bring our fathers, if ye speak the truth.'

[25] Say, 'God quickens you, then He kills you, then He will gather you unto the resurrection day, there is no doubt therein; but most men do not know.'

God's is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth, and on the day when the Hour shall arise on that day shall those who call it¹ vain be losers! And thou shalt see each nation kneeling, each nation summoned to its book, 'To-day are ye rewarded for that which ye have done.'

This is our Book that speaketh to you with truth; verily, we have written down what ye have done.

But as to those who believe and do righteous deeds their Lord will make them enter into His mercy: that is the obvious bliss.

[30] And as for those who misbelieve,—were not my signs recited to you and ye were too big with pride and ye were a sinful people? And when it was said, 'Verily, the promise of God is true, and the Hour there is no doubt therein;' ye said, 'We know not what the Hour is, we only suspect, and we are not sure.'

But there shall appear to them the evils of what they have done, and that shall encompass them at which they have been mocking. And it shall be said, 'To-day will we forget you as ye forgot the meeting of this day of yours, and your resort shall be the fire, and ye shall have no helpers. That is because ye took the signs of God for a jest and the life of this world deceived you; wherefore to-day ye shall not be brought forth therefrom, neither shall ye be taken back into favour.'

¹ The Qur'ân.

[35] God's then is the praise, the Lord of the heavens and the Lord of the earth, the Lord of the worlds! His is the grandeur in the heavens and the earth, and He is the mighty and the wise!

THE CHAPTER OF EL A'HQÂF¹.

(XLVI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

'H. M. The revelation of the Book from God the mighty, the wise.

We have only created the heavens and the earth and what is between the two in truth and for an appointed time; but those who misbelieve from being warned do turn aside.

Say, 'Have ye considered what ye call on beside God?' Show me what they have created of the earth? or have they share in the heavens? Bring me a book before this or a vestige of knowledge, if ye do tell the truth!

But who is more in error than he who calls beside God on what will never answer him until the resurrection day and who are heedless of their calling,

¹ Name of a tract of land in Si'hr in Yemen.

[5] and when men are gathered together are enemies of theirs and do deny their service ?

And when our evident signs are recited to them, those who misbelieve say of the truth when it comes to them, 'This is obvious magic.'

Or do they say, 'He has forged it?' Say, 'If I have forged ye cannot obtain for me aught from God; He knows best what ye utter concerning it; He is witness enough between me and you, and He is the forgiving, the merciful.'

Say, 'I am not an innovator among the apostles; nor do I know what will be done with me or with you if I follow aught but what I am inspired with; nor am I aught but a plain warner.'

Say, 'Have ye considered, if it is from God and ye have disbelieved therein, and a witness from the children of Israel testifies to the conformity of it, and he believes while ye are too big with pride? Verily, God guides not the unjust people.'

[10] And those who misbelieve say of those who believe, 'If it had been good, they would not have been beforehand with us therein;' and when they are not guided thereby, then will they say, 'This is an old-fashioned lie.'

But before it was the Book of Moses, a model and a mercy; and this is a book confirming it in Arabic language, to warn those who do wrong and as glad tidings to those who do well.

Verily, those who say, 'Our Lord is God,' and then keep straight, there is no fear for them, and they shall not be grieved. These are the fellows of Paradise to dwell therein for aye, a recompence for that which they have done.

We have prescribed for man kindness towards his parents. His mother bore him with trouble and brought him forth with trouble; and the bearing of him and the weaning of him is thirty months; until, when he reaches puberty, and reaches forty years, he says, 'Lord! stir me up that I may be thankful for thy favours wherewith thou hast favoured me and my parents; and that I may do right to please Thee; and make it right for me in my offspring; verily, I turn repentant unto Thee, and, verily, I am of those resigned.'

[15] There are those from whom we accept the best of what they have done, and we pass over their offences—amongst the fellows of Paradise; the promise of truth which they have been promised.

But he who says to his parents, 'Fie upon you! Do ye promise me that I shall be brought forth¹ when generations have passed away before me?'—then shall they both cry to God for help. Woe to thee! Believe! Verily, the promise of God is true. Then says he, 'This is but old folks' tales.'

There are those against whom the sentence was due amongst the nations who have passed away before them of ginns and men; verily, they have been the losers; and for all are degrees of what they have done, so that He may repay them their works, and they shall not be wronged.

And the day when those who misbelieve shall be exposed to the fire: 'Ye made away with your good things in your worldly life, and ye enjoyed them; wherefore to-day shall ye be rewarded with the torment of disgrace, for that ye were big with pride in the earth without the right, and for that ye did abomination.'

¹ I. e. from the grave.

[20] Remember too the brother of 'Âd¹ when he warned his people at El A'hqâf,—though warners have passed away before him and after him,—'Serve not other than God; verily, I fear for you the torment of a mighty day!'

They said, 'Hast thou come to us to turn us from our gods? then bring us what thou dost threaten us with, if thou art of those who speak the truth!' Said he, 'Knowledge is only with God: but I will preach to you that which I am sent with, though I see you are a people who are ignorant.' And when they saw a traversing cloud approaching their valleys they said, 'This is a cloud to give us rain.' 'Nay, but it is what ye sought to hasten on—a wind in which is grievous torment; it will destroy everything at the order of its Lord!' And in the morning naught was seen save their dwellings. Thus do we reward the sinful people!

[25] We had established them in what we have established you², and we made for them hearing and eyesight and hearts; but neither their hearing nor their eyesight nor their hearts availed them aught, since they did gainsay the signs of God, and that encompassed them whereat they had mocked.

And we destroyed the cities that are around you:—and we turned about the signs that haply they might return.

Why did not those help them, whom beside God they took for gods that could draw nigh to Him? Nay! they strayed away from them; for that was their lie and what they had forged.

¹ The prophet Hûd.

² I. e. the Meccans.

And when we turned towards thee some of the ginn listening to the Qur'ân¹, and when they were present at (the reading of) it, they said, 'Be silent!' and when it was over they turned back to their people, warning them.

Said they, 'O our people! verily, we have heard a book sent down after Moses, verifying what came before it, guiding to the truth, and unto the right way. [30] O our people! respond to God's crier and believe in Him, and He will pardon you your sins and will deliver you from grievous woe.'

And whoso responds not to God's crier shall not frustrate Him in the earth, and shall not have any patrons beside Him :—these are in obvious error!

Did they not see that God who created the heavens and the earth, and was not wearied with creating them, is able to quicken the dead?—nay, verily, He is mighty over all!

And the day when those who misbelieve shall be exposed to the fire,—'Is not this the truth?' they shall say, 'Yea, by our Lord!' He shall say, 'Then taste the torment for that ye did misbelieve!'

Then do thou² be patient, as the apostles endowed with a purpose were patient, and hasten not on (their punishment). It shall be to them, on the day they see what they are threatened with, as though they [35] had tarried but an hour of the day. A preaching this! Shall any perish but the people who work abomination?

¹ See Introduction, p. xxx.

² Addressed to Mohammed.

THE CHAPTER OF MOHAMMED, ALSO CALLED FIGHT.

(XLVII. Medtnah.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Those who misbelieve and turn folk from God's way, He will make their works go wrong. But those who believe and do right and believe in what is revealed to Mohammed,—and it is the truth from their Lord,—He will cover for them their offences and set right their mind.

That is because those who misbelieve follow falsehood, and those who believe follow the truth from their Lord. Thus does God set forth for men their parables.

And when ye meet those who misbelieve—then striking off heads until ye have massacred them, and bind fast the bonds!

[5] Then either a free grant (of liberty) or a ransom until the war shall have laid down its burdens. That!—but if God please He would conquer them—but (it is) that He may try some of you by the others. And those who are slain in God's cause, their works shall not go wrong; He will guide them and set right their mind; and will make them enter into Paradise which He has told them of.

O ye who believe! if ye help God, He will help you, and will make firm your footsteps.

But as for those who misbelieve—confound them! and He will make their works go wrong.

[10] That is because they were averse from what God has revealed; but their works shall be void!

Have they not journeyed through the land and seen how was the end of those before them? God destroyed them; and for the misbelievers is the like thereof.

That is because God is the patron of those who believe, and because the misbelievers have no patron.

Verily, God causes those who believe and do right to enter into gardens beneath which rivers flow; but those who misbelieve enjoy themselves and eat as the cattle eat; but the fire is the resort for them!

How many a city, stronger than thy city which has driven thee out, have we destroyed, and there was none to help them!

[15] Is he who rests upon a manifest sign from his Lord like him, the evil of whose works is made seemly to him, and who follow their lusts?

The similitude of Paradise which is promised to the pious,—in it are rivers of water without corruption, and rivers of milk, the taste whereof changes not, and rivers of wine delicious to those who drink; and rivers of honey clarified; and there shall they have all kinds of fruit and forgiveness from their Lord! (Is that) like him who dwells in the fire for aye? and who are given to drink boiling water that shall rend their bowels asunder?

Some of them there are who listen to thee, until when they go forth from thee they say to those who have been given the knowledge¹, 'What is this which he says now?' These are those on whose hearts God has set a stamp and who follow their lusts.

¹ To the more learned amongst the prophet's companions, such as Ibn 'Abbâs.

But those who are guided, He guides them the more, and gives them the due of their piety.

[20] Do they wait for aught but the Hour, that it should come to them suddenly? The conditions thereof have come already; how, when it has come on them, can they have their reminder?

Know thou that there is no god but God; and ask pardon for thy sin and for the believers, men and women; for God knows your return and your resort!

Those who misbelieve say, 'Why has not a sūrah been revealed?' but when a decisive sūrah is revealed and fighting is mentioned therein, thou mayest see those in whose heart is sickness¹ looking towards thee with the look of one fainting in death. Preferable for them were obedience and a reasonable speech! But when the matter is determined on, then if they believed God it were better for them.

Would ye perhaps, if ye had turned back, have done evil in the land and severed the bonds of kinship?

[25] It is these whom God has cursed, and has made them deaf, and has blinded their eyesight! Do they not peruse the Qur'ān? or are there locks upon their hearts?

Verily, those who turn their backs after the guidance that has been manifested to them—Satan induces them, but (God) lets them go on for a time!

That is for that they say to those who are averse from what God has revealed, 'We will obey you in part of the affair!' but God knows their secrets! How will it be when the angels¹ take their souls, smiting their faces and their backs?

¹ See Introduction, p. lxi.

[30] This is because they follow what angers God and are averse from His goodwill; and their works are void.

Do those in whose hearts is sickness reckon that God will not bring their malice forth?

But did we please we would show thee them, and thou shouldst know them by their cognisances. But thou shalt know them by their distorting their speech, and God knows their works!

But we will try you until we know those among you who fight strenuously and the patient; and we will try the reports concerning you.

Verily, those who misbelieve and turn folks off God's path, and break with the Apostle after the guidance that has been manifested to them, cannot harm God at all, and their works shall be void!

[35] O ye who believe! obey God, and obey the Apostle; and make not your works vain.

Verily, those who misbelieve and turn folks off God's path, and then die misbelievers, God will not pardon them.

Then faint not, nor cry for peace while ye have the upper hand; for God is with you and will not cheat you of your works!

The life of this world is but a play and a sport; but if ye believe and fear God, He will give you your hire.

He does not ask you for (all) your property; if

¹ Munkir and Nakîr; see Introduction, p. lxix.

He were to ask you for it and to press you, ye would be niggardly, and he would bring your malice out.

[40] Here are ye called upon to expend in God's cause, and among you are some who are niggardly; and he who is niggardly is but niggardly against his own soul: but God is rich and ye are poor, and if ye turn your backs He will substitute another people in your stead, then they will not be like you.

THE CHAPTER OF VICTORY.

(XLVIII. Medīnah.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Verily, we have given thee an obvious victory! that God may pardon thee thy former and later sin¹, and may fulfil His favour upon thee, and guide thee in a right way, and that God may help thee with a mighty help.

It is He who sent down his shechina² into the hearts of the believers that they might have faith added to their faith;—and God's are the hosts of the heavens and the earth, and God is knowing, wise—[5] to make the believers, men and women, enter into gardens beneath which rivers flow, to dwell therein for aye; and to cover for them their offences; for that with God is a grand bliss: and ¹ Some of the commentators take this to mean sins committed by Mohammed before his call and after; others refer the word to the liaison with the Coptic handmaiden Mary, and to his marriage with Zâinab the wife of his adopted son Zâid. See Introduction, pp. xxix and xl.

² Or tranquillity; see Part I, p. 38, note 2.

to torment the hypocrites, men and women, and the idolaters, men and women, who think evil thoughts of God;—over them is a turn of evil fortune, and God will be wrath with them and curse them, and has prepared for them hell, and an evil journey shall it be!

God's are the hosts of the heavens and the earth, and God is mighty, wise!

Verily, we have sent thee as a witness, and a herald of glad tidings, and a warner;—that ye may believe in God and His Apostle, and may aid Him and revere Him and celebrate His praises morning and evening!

[10] Verily, those who swear allegiance to thee do but swear allegiance to God;—God's hand is above their hands! and whoso perjures himself does but perjure himself against himself; but he who fulfils what he has covenanted with God, God shall bring him mighty hire.

The desert Arabs who were left behind¹ shall say, 'Our wealth and our people occupied us; ask pardon then for us!'—they speak with their tongues what is not in their hearts!

Say, 'Who can control for you aught from God, if He wish you harm or wish you advantage?' Nay, God of what ye do is well aware!

Nay, ye thought that the Apostle and the believers would not ever return again to their families; that was made seemly in your hearts! and ye thought evil thoughts, and ye were a corrupt people.

¹ Alluding to certain tribes who held aloof from the expedition of 'Hudâibiyeh.

Whoso believes not in God and His Apostle—we have prepared for the unbelievers a blaze!

God's is the kingdom of the heavens and of the earth. He pardons whom He pleases, and torments whom He pleases; and God is forgiving, merciful.

[15] Those who were left behind¹ shall say when ye have gone forth to spoils that ye may take, 'Let us follow you;' they wish to change God's words. Say, 'Ye shall by no means follow us; thus did God say before!'

They will say, 'Nay! but ye envy us!' Nay! they did not understand save a little.

Say to those desert Arabs who were left behind, 'Ye shall be called out against a people endowed with vehement valour², and shall fight them or they shall become Muslims. And if ye obey, God will give you a good hire; but if ye turn your backs, as ye turned your backs before, He will torment you with grievous woe!'

There is no compulsion on the blind, and no compulsion on the lame, and no compulsion on the sick, but whoso obeys God and His Apostle, He will make him enter gardens beneath which rivers flow; but whoso turns his back He will torment with grievous woe.

God was well pleased with the believers when

¹ In an expedition against the Jews of Khâibar, which Mohammed undertook shortly after his return from 'Hudâibîyeh, and obtained considerable booty, which he shared only with those who had accompanied him on the previous occasion.

² The followers of Musâilimah, Mohammed's rival, and the tribes that had apostatized from Islâm. Some think it refers to the Greeks and Persians.

they did swear allegiance to thee beneath the tree¹; and He knew what was in their hearts, and He sent down His shechina² upon them and rewarded them with a victory nigh at hand³, and many spoils for them to take; for God is mighty, wise!

[20] God promised you many spoils and hastened this on for you, and restrained men's hands from you; and it may be a sign for the believers and guide you in a right way;—and other (spoils) which ye could not gain; but God has encompassed them; for God is mighty over all.

And had those who misbelieved fought you, they would have turned their backs; then they would have found neither patron nor helper!—God's course which has been followed before, and thou shalt find no change in the course of God!

He it was who restrained their hands from you, and your hands from them in the mid-valley of Mecca⁴ after He had given you the victory over them; for God on what ye do doth look!

[25] Those who misbelieved and turned (you) away from the Sacred Mosque, and (turned away) the offering, kept from arriving at its destined place⁵; and had it not been for believing men and believing women whom ye knew not, whom ye might have trampled on, and so a crime might have

¹ At 'Hudâibîyeh.

² See Part I, p. 38, note 2.

³ Either the success at Khâibar or the taking of Mecca.

⁴ Alluding to the truce concluded at 'Hudâibîyeh.

⁵ Mohammed having only set out with the intention of peaceably performing the pilgrimage, carried cattle with him to sacrifice in the valley of Minâ, but was obliged by the Qurâis to turn back. See Introduction, pp. xxxix, xl.

occurred to you on their account without your knowledge—that God may make whomsoever He pleases enter into His mercy. Had they been distinct from one another, we would have tormented those of them who misbelieved with grievous woe.

When those who misbelieved put in their hearts pique—the pique of ignorance¹—and God sent down His shechina upon His Apostle and upon the believers, and obliged them to keep to the word of piety², and they were most worthy of it and most suited for it; for God all things doth know.

God truly verified for His Apostle the vision³ that ye shall verily enter the Sacred Mosque, if God please, in safety with shaven heads or cut hair, ye shall not fear; for He knows what ye know not, and He has set for you, beside that, a victory nigh at hand⁴.

He it is who sent His Apostle with guidance

¹ Suhail ibn 'Amr, who concluded the truce with Mohammed at 'Hudâibîyeh, objected to the formula 'In the name of the merciful and compassionate God,' with which the prophet ordered 'Alî to commence the document, and insisted on the heathen formula 'In Thy name, O God!' He also refused to admit the words 'Mohammed, the Apostle of God,' saying, that if they had granted so much they would not have opposed him; the words 'Mohammed the son of Abdallah' were therefore substituted. These objections were so annoying to the Muslims, that it was with difficulty that Mohammed could restrain them from an immediate breach of the peace.

² The Mohammedan profession of faith, 'There is no god but God, and Mohammed His servant is the Apostle.' Or it may be the initial formula which the unbelieving Meccans rejected.

³ Mohammed dreamed that he would accomplish the pilgrimage to Mecca with all its rites; the affair at 'Hudâibîyeh disappointed his followers, but in the following year it was fulfilled.

⁴ I. e. that of Khâibar.

and the religion of truth to set it above all religion ; for God is witness enough !

Mohammed is the Apostle of God, and those who are with Him are vehement against the misbelievers, —compassionate amongst themselves ; thou mayest see them bowing down, adoring, craving grace from God and His goodwill,—their marks are in their faces from the effects of adoration ;—that is their similitude in the law¹ and their similitude in the gospel ; as a seedling puts forth its sprouts and strengthens it, and grows stout, and straightens itself upon its stem, delighting the sower !—that the misbelievers may be angry at them ;—God has promised those of them who believe and do right—forgiveness and a mighty hire.

THE CHAPTER OF THE INNER CHAMBERS.

(XLIX. Medīnah.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

O ye who believe ! do not anticipate God and His Apostle, but fear God ; verily, God both hears and knows.

O ye who believe ! raise not your voices above the voice of the prophet, and do not speak loud to him as ye speak loud to one another², lest your works become vain, while ye do not perceive.

¹ Or the Pentateuch.

² Said to refer to a dispute between Abu Bekr and 'Omar, in the course of which they came to high words in the presence of the prophet.

Verily, those who lower their voice before the Apostle of God, they are those whose hearts God has proved for piety, for them is forgiveness and a mighty hire.

Verily, those who cry out to thee from behind the inner chambers¹, most of them have no sense; [5] but did they wait until thou come out to them, it were better for them;—but God is forgiving, merciful.

O ye who believe! if there come to you a sinner with an information, then discriminate, lest ye fall upon a people in ignorance and on the morrow repent of what ye have done².

And know that among you is the Apostle of God; if he should obey you in many a matter ye would commit a sin³; God has made faith beloved by you, and has made it seemly in your hearts, and has made misbelief and iniquity and rebellion hateful to you.—These are the rightly directed—grace from God and favour! and God is knowing, wise.

And if the two parties of the believers quarrel⁴,

¹ Two of the Arabs wishing to speak with Mohammed when he was sleeping at noon in his harām, cried out rudely to him, 'Mohammed, come out to us!' See p. 82.

² Al Walīd ibn 'Hugbā was sent by Mohammed to collect the zakāt (see Introduction, p. lxxiii) from the tribe of Mustaleq, with whom he had had a feud in the time preceding Islām. Seeing them coming out to meet him in large numbers, he grew apprehensive, and returned hastily with the information that the tribe had refused the tribute. Mohammed thereupon sent 'Halīd ibn Walīd to reduce them by force, when it was found that the former messenger's fears had been quite groundless.

³ I. e. ye would mislead him.

⁴ Alluding to one of the frequent disputes between the tribes of Aus and 'Hazrag at Medīnah. See Introduction, p. xxxiv.

then make peace between them ; and if one of the twain outrages the other, then fight the party that has committed the outrage until it return to God's bidding ; and if it do return then make peace between them with equity, and be just ; verily, God loves the just.

[10] The believers are but brothers, so make peace between your two brethren and fear God, haply ye may obtain mercy !

O ye who believe ! let not one class ridicule another who are perchance better than they ; nor let women ridicule other women who are perchance better than they ; and do not defame each other, nor call each other bad names—an ill name is iniquity after faith¹ !

O ye who believe ! carefully avoid suspicion ; verily, some suspicion is a sin. And do not play the spy, nor backbite each other ; would one of you like to eat his dead brother's flesh ?—why ! ye would abhor it ! then fear God ; verily, God is relentant, compassionate.

O ye folk ! verily, we have created you of male and female, and made you races and tribes that ye may know each other.

Verily, the most honourable of you in the sight of God is the most pious of you ; verily, God is knowing, aware !

¹ I. e. it is defamation to charge a person who has embraced the faith with iniquity. The passage is said to have been revealed on account of Zaffiyah bint 'Huyâi, one of the prophet's wives, who complained to him that she had been taunted by the other women with her Jewish origin. Mohammed answered her, 'Canst thou not say, "Aaron is my father, Moses my uncle, and Mohammed my husband?"'

The desert Arabs say, 'We believe.' Say, 'Ye do not believe; but say, "We have become Muslims;" for the faith has not entered into your hearts: but if ye obey God and His Apostle He will not defraud you of your works at all: verily, God is forgiving, compassionate!'

[15] The believers are only those who believe in God and His Apostle, and then doubt not, but fight strenuously with their wealth and persons in God's cause—these are the truth-tellers!

Say, 'Will ye teach God your religion?' when God knows what is in the heavens and what is in the earth, and God all things doth know!

They deem that they oblige thee by becoming Muslims. Say, 'Nay! deem not that ye oblige me by your becoming Muslims! God obliges you, by directing you to the faith, if ye do speak the truth!'

Verily, God knows the unseen things of the heavens and the earth, and God on what ye do doth look.

THE CHAPTER OF Q.

(L. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Q. By the glorious Qur'ân! nay, they wonder that there has come to them a warner from amongst themselves; and the misbelievers say, 'This is a wondrous thing! What, when we are dead and have become dust?—that is a remote return!'

We well know what the earth consumes of them, for with us is a book that keeps (account).

[5] Nay, they call the truth a lie when it comes to them, and they are in a confused affair ¹.

Do not they behold the heaven above them, how we have built it and adorned it, and how it has no flaws?

And the earth, we have stretched it out and thrown thereon firm mountains, and caused to grow thereon every beautiful kind.

An insight and a reminder to every servant who repents!

And we sent down from the heaven water as a blessing, and caused to grow therewith gardens and the harvest grain!

[10] And the tall palm trees having piled up spathes, for a provision to (our) servants; and we quickened thereby a dead land; thus shall the resurrection be!

Before them the people of Noah and the fellows of ar Rass ² and Thamûd and 'Âd and Pharaoh called the apostles liars; and the brethren of Lot and the fellows of the Grove ³ and the people of Tubbâ'h ⁴ all called the prophets liars, and the threat was duly executed.

Were we then fatigued with the first creation? nay! but they are in obscurity concerning the new creation.

[15] But we created man, and we know what his

¹ Alluding to the various opinions expressed by the unbelievers with reference to the Qur'ân; some calling it sorcery or divination, others poetry, and some asserting it to be 'old folks' tales' or mere invention.

² See Part II, p. 86, note 3.

³ See Part I, p. 249, note 3.

⁴ See Chapter XLIV, verse 35, p. 219, note 3.

soul whispers; for we are nigher to him than his jugular vein!

When the two meeters meet¹, sitting the one on the right and the other on the left, not a word does he utter, but a watcher is by him ready!

And the agony of death shall come in truth!—
'that is what thou didst shun!'

And the trumpet shall be blown!—that is the threatened day!

[20] And every soul shall come—with it a driver and a witness!

'Thou wert heedless of this, and we withdrew thy veil from thee, and to-day is thine eyesight keen²!'

And his mate shall say, 'This is what is ready for me (to attest).

'Throw into hell every stubborn misbeliever³!—who forbids good, a transgressor, a doubter! [25] who sets other gods with God—and throw him, ye twain, into fierce torment!'

His mate shall say, 'Our Lord! I seduced him not, but he was in a remote error.'

He shall say, 'Wrangle not before me; for I sent the threat to you before. The sentence is not changed with me, nor am I unjust to my servants.'

On the day we will say to hell, 'Art thou full?' and it will say, 'Are there any more?'

[30] And Paradise shall be brought near to the pious,—not far off.

¹ The two recording angels, who accompany every man and note down his every word and action.

² These words are supposed to be addressed by the 'driver' to the unbelieving soul.

³ These words are spoken by God.

This is what ye are promised, to every one who turns frequently (to God) and keeps His commandments : who fears the Merciful in secret and brings a repentant heart.

‘ Enter into it in peace : this is the day of eternity !’

They shall have what they wish therein, and increase from us !

[35] How many a generation have we destroyed before them, mightier than they in prowess !

Pass through the land, is there any refuge¹ ? Verily, in that is a reminder to whomsoever has a heart, or gives ear, and is a witness thereto.

We did create the heavens and the earth and what is between the two in six days, and no weariness touched us².

Be thou patient then of what they say, and celebrate the praises of thy Lord before the rising of the sun and before the setting. And through (some) of the night celebrate His praise and the additional adorations³.

[40] And listen for the day when the crier shall cry from a near place⁴;—the day when they shall hear the shout⁵ in truth—that is the day of coming forth !

Verily, we quicken and we kill, and unto us the journey is !

On the day when the earth shall be cleft asunder

¹ I. e. from the vengeance of God.

² A protest against the assertion that God rested on the seventh day.

³ Two sigdahs used at the evening prayers, but not incumbent on the worshipper.

⁴ I. e. a place from which all men may hear ; generally supposed by Muslims to be the temple at Jerusalem.

⁵ The sound of the last trumpet.

from them swiftly;—that is a gathering together which is easy to us!

We know what they say; nor art thou over them one to compel.

[45] Wherefore remind, by the Qur'ân, him who fears the threat.

THE CHAPTER OF THE SCATTERERS.

(LI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

By the scatterers¹ who scatter! and by those pregnant² with their burden! and by those running on³ easily! and by the distributors⁴ of affairs!—[5] verily, what ye are threatened with is surely true!

And, verily, the judgment will surely take place!

By the heaven possessed of paths! verily, ye are at variance in what ye say!

He is turned from it who is turned.

[10] Slain be the liars, who are heedless in a flood (of ignorance).

They will ask, 'When is the day of judgment?' The day when at the fire they shall be tried.—'Taste your trial! this is what ye wished to hasten on!'

[15] Verily, the pious are in gardens and springs, taking what their Lord brings them. Verily, they before that did well. But little of the night they slept; and at the dawn they asked forgiveness.

¹ The winds.

² The clouds.

³ The ships.

⁴ Angels or winds.

And in their wealth was what was due to him who asked, and him who was kept back from asking.

[20] And in the earth are signs to those who are sure, and in yourselves,—what! do ye not then see?

And in the heaven is your provision and that which ye are promised¹.

But by the Lord of the heaven and the earth! verily, it is the truth,—like that which ye do utter²!

Has the tale of Abraham's honoured guests reached thee³? [25] When they entered in unto him and said, 'Peace!' he said, 'Peace!—a people unrecognised.'

And he went aside unto his people and fetched a fat calf, and brought it nigh unto them; said he, 'Will ye then not eat?'

And he felt a secret fear of them: said they, 'Fear not.' And they gave him glad tidings of a knowing boy.

And his wife approached with a noise, and smote her face, and said, 'An old woman, barren!'

[30] Said they, 'Thus says thy Lord, He is knowing, wise.' Said he, 'And about what is your errand, O ye messengers?'

They said, 'Verily, we are sent unto a sinful people, to send upon them stones of clay, marked from thy Lord for the extravagant⁴.'

[35] And we sent out therefrom such as were in it of the believers; but we only found therein one house of Muslims.

¹ I. e. rain, which produces material sustenance, and there too is the promise of the future life.

² I. e. unreserved and plain as ye yourselves affirm truths to each other.

³ See Part I, pp. 212-214.

⁴ See Part I, p. 214, note 1.

And we left therein a sign to those who fear the grievous woe.

And in Moses; when we sent him to Pharaoh with obvious authority.

But he turned his back towards his column¹, and said, 'A sorcerer or mad!'

[40] And we seized him and his hosts and hurled them into the sea; for he was to be blamed.

And in 'Âd, when we sent against them a desolating wind, that left naught on which it came without making it ashes!

And in Thamûd, when it was said to them, 'Enjoy yourselves for a season.' But they revolted against the bidding of their Lord; and the noise caught them as they looked on. [45] And they could not stand upright, and they were not helped!

And the people of Noah of yore; verily, they were an abominable people.

And the heaven—we have built it with might, and, verily, we do surely give it ample space!

And the earth—we have spread it out; and how well we lay it out!

And of everything have we created pairs, haply ye may be mindful.

[50] Flee then to God; verily, I am a plain warner from Him to you!

And do not set with God another god; verily, I am a plain warner from Him to you!

Thus there came no apostle to those before them, but they said, 'A sorcerer, mad!'

¹ Either Pharaoh's forces, or one of his nobles, or something else on which he relied. See Part I, p. 214, first line, and note 1.

Do they bequeath it¹ to each other ?

Yea, they are an outrageous people !

So turn thy back upon them, so thou wilt not be to blame.

[55] And remind ; for, verily, the reminder shall profit the believers.

And I have not created the ginn and mankind save that they may worship me.

I do not desire any provision from them, and I do not wish them to feed me.

Verily, God, He is the provider, endowed with steady might.

Verily, for those who injure (the Apostle) shall be a portion like the portion of their fellows², but let them not hurry Me !

[60] Then woe to those who misbelieve from their day which they are threatened.

THE CHAPTER OF THE MOUNT.

(LII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

By the mount ! by the Book inscribed upon an outstretched vellum ! by the frequented house³ ! [5] by the elevated roof⁴ ! by the swelling sea ! verily, the torment of thy Lord will come to pass ;—there is none to avert it !

The day when the heavens shall reel about,

¹ I. e. this taunt.

² I. e. like the fate of those who wronged the apostles of old.

³ I. e. either the Kaabah itself or the model of it, said to exist in the heavens and to be frequented by the angels.

⁴ I. e. of heaven.

[10] and the mountains shall move about,—then woe upon that day to those who call (the apostles) liars, who plunge into discussion for a sport !

On the day when they shall be thrust away into the fire of hell,—‘ This is the fire, the which ye used to call a lie !—[15] Is it magic, this ? or can ye not see ?—broil ye therein, and be patient thereof or be not patient, it is the same to you : ye are but rewarded for that which ye did do !’

Verily, the pious (shall be) in gardens and pleasure, enjoying what their Lord has given them ; for their Lord will save them from the torment of hell.

‘ Eat and drink with good digestion, for that which ye have done !’

[20] Reclining on couches in rows ; and we will wed them to large-eyed maids.

And those who believe and whose seed follows them in the faith, we will unite their seed with them ; and we will not cheat them of their work at all ;—every man is pledged for what he earns ¹.

And we will extend to them fruit and flesh such as they like. They shall pass to and fro therein a cup in which is neither folly nor sin.

And round them shall go boys of theirs, as though they were hidden pearls.

[25] And they shall accost each other and ask questions, and shall say, ‘ Verily, we were before amidst our families shrinking with terror ², but God has been gracious to us and saved us from the torment of the hot blast.

¹ Every man is pledged to God for his conduct, and, if he does well, redeems himself.

² At the thought of the next life.

'Verily, we used to call on Him before ; verily, He is the righteous, the compassionate !'

Wherefore do thou¹ remind them : for thou art, by the favour of thy Lord, neither a soothsayer nor mad !

Will they say, 'A poet ; we wait for him the sad accidents of fate ?'

[30] Say, 'Wait ye then ; for I too am of those who wait !'

Do their dreams bid them this ? or are they an outrageous people ?

Or will they say, 'He has invented it ?'—nay, but they do not believe !

But let them bring a discourse like it, if they tell the truth !

[35] Or were they created of nothing, or were they the creators ? Or did they create the heavens and the earth ?—nay, but they are not sure !

Or have they the treasures of thy Lord ? or are they the governors supreme ?

Or have they a ladder whereon they can listen² ?—then let their listener bring obvious authority.

Has He daughters, while ye have sons ?

[40] Or dost thou ask them a hire, while they are borne down by debt ?

Or have they the unseen, so that they write it down ?

Or do they desire a plot ?—but those who misbelieve it is who are plotted against !

¹ Addressed to Mohammed.

² I. e. a ladder reaching to the gates of heaven, upon which they may stand and listen to the angels discoursing, as the devils do. See Part I, pp. 50, 51, note 2.

Or have they a god beside God? celebrated be God's praises above what they join with Him!

But if they should see a fragment of the sky falling down, they would say, 'Clouds in masses!'

[45] But leave them till they meet that day of theirs whereon they shall swoon¹; the day when their plotting shall avail them naught, and they shall not be helped!

And, verily, there is a torment beside that² for those who do wrong; but most of them do not know!

But wait thou patiently for the judgment of thy Lord, for thou art in our eyes. And celebrate the praises of thy Lord what time thou risest, and in the night, and at the fading of the stars!

THE CHAPTER OF THE STAR.

(LIII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

By the star when it falls, your comrade errs not, nor is he deluded! nor speaks he out of lust! It is but an inspiration inspired! [5] One mighty in power³ taught him, endowed with sound understanding, and appeared, he being in the loftiest tract.

¹ At the sound of the last trumpet.

² I.e. beside the torment of the judgment day they shall be punished with defeat and loss here.

³ The angel Gabriel, who appeared twice to Mohammed in his natural form, namely, on the occasion of the 'Night Journey,' to which this passage refers, and on the first revelation of the Qur'ân. (See Introduction, pp. xx and xxxii.)

Then drew he near and hovered o'er! until he was two bows' length off or nigher still! [10] Then he inspired his servant what he inspired him; the heart belies not what he saw! What, will ye dispute with him on what he saw?

And he saw him another time, by the lote tree none may pass; [15] near which is the garden of the Abode! When there covered the lote tree what did cover it! The sight swerved not nor wandered. He saw then the greatest of the signs of his Lord.

Have ye considered Allât and Al 'Huzzâ, [20] and Manât the other third¹? Shall there be male offspring for Him and female for you? That were an unfair division! They are but names which ye have named, ye and your fathers! God has sent down no authority for them! They do but follow suspicion and what their souls lust after!—And yet there has come to them guidance from their Lord.

Shall man have what he desires? [25] But God's is the hereafter and the present!

How many an angel in the heaven!—their intercession avails not at all, save after God has given permission to whomsoever He will and is pleased with!

Verily, those who believe not in the hereafter do surely name the angels with female names²!—but they have no knowledge thereof; they do but follow suspicion, and, verily, suspicion shall not avail against the truth at all!

[30] But turn aside from him who turns his back upon our remembrance and desires naught but this world's life! This is their sum of knowledge; verily, thy Lord knows best who has erred from His way, and He knows best who is guided!

¹ See Introduction, p. xxvii, and Part II, p. 62, note 1.

² See Introduction, pp. xii and xiii.

God's is what is in the heavens and what is in the earth, that He may reward those who do evil for what they have done; and may reward those who do good with good! those who shun great sins and iniquities,—all but venial faults,—verily, thy Lord is of ample forgiveness; He knows best about you, when He produced you from the earth, and when ye were embryos in the wombs of your mothers.

Make not yourselves out, then, to be pure; He knows best who it is that fears.

Hast thou considered him who turns his back? who gives but little [35] and then stops¹? Has he then the knowledge of the unseen, so that he can see?

Has he not been informed of what is in the pages of Moses and Abraham who fulfilled his word?—that no burdened soul shall bear the burden of another? [40] and that man shall have only that for which he strives; and that his striving shall at length be seen? Then shall he be rewarded for it with the most full reward; and that unto thy Lord is the limit; [45] and that it is He who makes men laugh and weep; and that it is He who kills and makes alive; and that He created pairs, male and female, from a clot when it is emitted; and that for Him is the next production¹; and that he enriches and gives possession; [50] and that He is the Lord of the Dog-star², and that He it was who destroyed 'Âd of yore, and Thamûd, and left none of them; and the people of Noah before them,—verily, they were most unjust and outrageous!

¹ This passage refers to one El Walîd ibn Mughâirah, who being abused for following Mohammed and forsaking the religion of the Qurâis, answered that he had done so to escape divine vengeance. Thereupon an idolater offered to take on himself El Walîd's sin for a certain sum of money. The offer was accepted, and Walîd apostatized from El Islâm, paying down a portion of the amount agreed upon at the time. Later on he refused to pay the balance on the ground that he had already paid enough.

And the overthrown (cities)³ He threw down; [55] and there covered them what did cover them!

Which then of your Lord's benefits do ye dispute?

This is a warner, one of the warners of yore!

The approaching day approaches; there is none to discover it but God.

At this new discourse then do ye wonder? [60] and do ye laugh and not weep? and ye divert yourselves the while!

But adore God and serve (Him)⁴.

THE CHAPTER OF THE MOON.

(LIV. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

The Hour draws nigh, and the moon is split

¹ I. e. the resurrection.

² Sirius, or the Dog-star, was an object of worship amongst the ancient Arabs.

³ Sodom, Gomorrah, &c.

⁴ At this verse the Qurâis, who were present at the first reading of this chapter when their gods were spoken well of, fell down adoring with Mohammed. See Introduction, p. xxxii.

asunder¹. But if they see a sign they turn aside and say, 'Magic, continuous²!'

And they call it a lie and follow their lusts; but every matter is settled!

There has come to them some information³ with restraint in it—[5] wisdom far-reaching—but warners avail not!

But turn thy back on them!

The day when the caller⁴ shall call to an awkward thing⁵.

Humbly casting down their looks shall they come forth from their graves, as though they were locusts scattered abroad!

Hurrying forwards to the caller! the misbelievers shall say, 'This is a difficult day!'

Noah's people before them called (the apostles) liars; they called our servant a liar; and they said, 'Mad!' and he was rejected.

[10] And he called upon his Lord, 'Verily, I am overcome, come then to my help!'

And we opened the gates of heaven with water pouring down!

¹ According to a tradition this refers to a miracle: the unbelievers having asked for a sign, the moon appeared to be cloven in twain. The tradition is, however, supported by very doubtful authority, and is directly opposed to the teaching of the Qur'ân elsewhere, for the power to comply with the demand for a sign is always distinctly disclaimed. The more usual explanation is the natural one, that the expression merely refers to one of the signs of the day of judgment.

² This word is interpreted by some to mean 'transient,' by others 'powerful.'

³ The Qur'ân.

⁴ The angel Isráfîl.

⁵ The last judgment.

And we made the earth burst forth in springs, and the waters met at a bidding already decreed.

But we bore him on the thing of planks and nails; sailing on beneath our eyes, a reward for him who had been disbelieved!

[15] And we left it a sign;—but is there any one who will mind?

‘Âd called the apostles liars, and how was my punishment and my warning?

Verily, we sent on them a cold storm wind on a day of continuous ill-luck!

[20] It reft men away as though they had been palm stumps torn up!

We have made the Qur’ân easy as a reminder—but is there any one who will mind?

Thamûd called the warnings lies, and said, ‘A mortal, one of us, alone, shall we follow him? then indeed were we in error and excitement!’

[25] ‘Is the warning cast on him alone among us? nay, he is an insolent liar!’

‘They shall know to-morrow about the insolent liar!’

‘Verily, we are about to send the she-camel as a trial for them, then watch them and have patience! and inform them that the water is shared between them (and her); each draught shall be sought by turns.’

Then they called their companion, and he plied (a knife) and hamstrung her.

[30] Then how was my punishment and my warning? Verily, we sent against them one noise, and they were like the dry sticks of him who builds a fold.

¹ Or madness.

We have made the Qur'ân easy as a reminder—but is there any one who will mind?

Lot's people called the apostles liars; verily, we sent against them a heavy sand storm; all, save Lot's family, we saved them at the dawn. [35] As a favour from us; so do we reward him who gives thanks!

He indeed had warned them of our assault, but they doubted of the warning.

And they desired his guest, and we put out their eyes.—

'So taste ye my torment and warning!'

And there overtook them on the morning a settled punishment!—

'So taste ye my torment and warning!'

[40] We have made the Qur'ân easy as a reminder—but is there any one who will mind?

The warning came to Pharaoh's people; they called our signs all lies, and we seized on them with the seizing of a mighty powerful one.

Are your misbelievers better than they? or have ye an exemption in the Scriptures? Or do they say we are a victorious company?

[45] The whole shall be routed and shall turn their backs in flight¹.

Nay, the Hour is their promised time! and the Hour is most severe and bitter!

Verily, the sinners are in error and excitement. On the day when they shall be dragged to the fire upon their faces!—'Taste ye the touch of hell.'

Verily, everything have we created by decree, [50] and our bidding is but one (word), like the twinkling of an eye!

¹ This is appealed to by Muslims as a prophecy fulfilled at the battle of Bedr.

We have destroyed the like of you—but is there any who will mind?

And everything they do is in the books¹, and everything small and great is written down.

Verily, the pious shall be amid gardens and rivers, [55] in the seat of truth, with the powerful king.

THE CHAPTER OF THE MERCIFUL.

(LV. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

The Merciful taught the Qur'ân;

He created man, taught him plain speech.

The sun and the moon have their appointed time;

[5] The herbs and the trees adore;

And the heavens, He raised them and set the balance, that ye should not be outrageous in the balance;

But weigh ye aright, and stint not the balance.

And the earth He has set it for living creatures;

[10] therein are fruits and palms, with sheaths;

and grain with chaff and frequent shoots;

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny?

He created men of crackling clay like the potters.

And He created the ginn from smokeless fire.

[15] Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny?

The Lord of the two easts² and the Lord of the two wests!

¹ The books kept by the recording angels.

² See p. 214, note 1.

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny?

He has let loose the two seas that meet together ;
[20] between them is a barrier they cannot pass !

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny ?

He brings forth from each pearls both large and small !

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny ?

His are the ships which rear aloft in the sea like mountains.

[25] Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny ?

Every one upon it¹ is transient, but the face of thy Lord endowed with majesty and honour shall endure.

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny ?

Of Him whosoever is in the heaven and the earth does beg ; every day He is in (some fresh) business !

[30] Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny ?

We shall be at leisure for you, O ye two weighty ones² !

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny ?

O assembly of ginns and mankind ! if ye are able to pass through the confines of heaven and earth

¹ The earth.

² I. e. mankind and the ginn ; the meaning is, that God will have leisure to judge them both.

then pass through them!—ye cannot pass through save by authority!

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain
deny?

[35] There shall be sent against you a flash of fire, and molten copper, and ye shall not be helped!

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain
deny?

And when the heaven is rent asunder and become rosy red¹—(melting) like grease!

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain
deny?

On that day neither man nor ginn shall be asked about his crime!

[40] Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye
twain deny?

The sinners shall be known by their marks, and shall be seized by the forelock and the feet!

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain
deny?

'This is hell, which the sinners did call a lie! they shall circulate between it and water boiling quite!'

[45] Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny?

But for him who fears the station of his Lord are gardens twain!

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain
deny?

Both furnished with branching trees.

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain
deny?

[50] In each are flowing springs.

¹ The word is also said to mean red leather.

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny?

In each are, of every fruit, two kinds.

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny?

Reclining on beds the linings of which are of brocade, and the fruit of the two gardens within reach to cull.

[55] Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny?

Therein are maids of modest glances whom no man nor ginn has deflowered before.

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny?

As though they were rubies and pearls.

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny?

[60] Is the reward of goodness aught but goodness?

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny?

And besides these, are gardens twain¹,

Then which of your Lord's bounties will be twain deny?

With dark green foliage.

[65] Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny?

In each two gushing springs.

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny?

In each fruit and palms and pomegranates.

Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain deny?

¹ For the inferior inhabitants of Paradise.

[70] In them maidens best and fairest !
Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain
deny ?
Bright and large-eyed maids kept in their tents.
Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain
deny ?
Whom no man nor ginn has deflowered before them.
[75] Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye
twain deny ?
Reclining on green cushions and beautiful carpets.
Then which of your Lord's bounties will ye twain
deny ?
Blessed be the name of thy Lord possessed of majesty and honour !

THE CHAPTER OF THE INEVITABLE.

(LVI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.
When the inevitable¹ happens ; none shall call its happening a lie !—abasing—exalting !
When the earth shall quake, quaking ! [5] and the mountains shall crumble, crumbling, and become like motes dispersed !
And ye shall be three sorts ;
And the fellows of the right hand—what right lucky
fellows !
And the fellows of the left hand—what unlucky
fellows !

¹ I. e. the day of judgment.

[10] And the foremost foremost¹!

These are they who are brought nigh,

In gardens of pleasure!

A crowd of those of yore,

And a few of those of the latter day!

[15] And gold-weft couches, reclining on them face to face.

Around them shall go eternal youths, with goblets and ewers and a cup of flowing wine; no headache shall they feel therefrom, nor shall their wits be dimmed!

[20] And fruits such as they deem the best;

And flesh of fowl as they desire;

And bright and large-eyed maids like hidden pearls;

A reward for that which they have done!

They shall hear no folly there and no sin;

[25] Only the speech, 'Peace, Peace!'

And the fellows of the right—what right lucky fellows!

Amid thornless lote trees.

And tal'h² trees with piles of fruit;

And outspread shade,

[30] And water out-poured;

And fruit in abundance, neither failing nor for-bidden;

And beds upraised!

Verily, we have produced them³ a production.

[35] And made them virgins, darlings of equal age
(with their spouses) for the fellows of the right!

¹ I. e. the foremost in professing the faith on earth shall be the foremost then.

² The mimosa gummifera is generally so called in Arabia; but the banana is said to be meant in this passage.

³ The celestial damsels.

A crowd of those of yore, and a crowd of those of the latter day!

[40] And the fellows of the left—what unlucky fellows!

In hot blasts and boiling water;

And a shade of pitchy smoke,

Neither cool nor generous!

Verily, they were affluent ere this, [45] and did persist in mighty crime; and used to say, 'What, when we die and have become dust and bones, shall we then indeed be raised? or our fathers of yore?'

Say, 'Verily, those of yore and those of the latter day [50] shall surely be gathered together unto the tryst of the well-known day.'

Then ye, O ye who err! who say it is a lie! shall eat of the Zaqqûm tree! and fill your bellies with it! and drink thereon of boiling water! [55] and drink as drinks the thirsty camel.

This is their entertainment on the judgment day!

We created you, then why do ye not credit?

Have ye considered what ye emit?

Do we create it, or are we the creators?

[60] We have decreed amongst you death; but we are not forestalled from making the likes of you in exchange, or producing you as ye know not of.

Ye do know the first production—why then do ye not mind?

Have ye considered what ye till?

Do ye make it bear seed, or do we make it bear seed?

[65] If we pleased we could make it mere grit, so that ye would pause to marvel:

'Verily, we have got into debt¹ and we are excluded².'

¹ I. e. for seed and labour.

² From reaping the fruits of it.

Have ye considered the water which ye drink?
Do ye make it come down from the clouds, or do we make it come down?

If we pleased we could make it pungent—why then do ye not give thanks?

[70] Have ye considered the fire which ye strike?
Do ye produce the tree that gives it¹, or do we produce it?

We have made it a memorial and a chattel for the traveller of the waste?

Then celebrate the grand name of thy Lord!

So I will not swear by the positions of the stars;
[75] and, verily, it is a grand oath if ye did but know—that, verily, this is the honourable Qur'ân
—in the laid-up Book!

Let none touch it but the purified!

A revelation from the Lord of the worlds.

[80] What! this new discourse will ye despise?
And make for your provision, that you call it a lie?

Why then—when it² comes up to the throat, and ye at that time look on, though we are nearer to him than you are, but ye cannot see,—[85] why, if ye are not to be judged, do ye not send it back, if ye do tell the truth?

But either, if he be of those brought nigh to God,—then rest and fragrance and the garden of pleasure!

Or, if he be of the fellows of the right! [90] then
'Peace to thee!' from the fellows of the right!

¹ The ancient Arabs produced fire by the friction of a stick in a hollow piece of wood. Cf. p. 167, line 25.

² The soul of a dying man.

Or, if he be of those who say it 'is a lie,—who err!
then an entertainment of boiling water! and broiling in hell!

[95] Verily, this is surely certain truth!
So celebrate the grand name of thy Lord!

THE CHAPTER OF IRON.

(LVII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate
God.

Whatever is in the heavens and the earth celebrates the praises of God, for He is the mighty, the wise!

His is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth: He quickens and He kills, and He is mighty over all!

He is the first and the last; and the outer and the inner; and He all things doth know!

He it is who created the heavens and the earth in six days, then He made for the throne; and He knows what goes into the earth and what goes forth therefrom, and what comes down from the sky and what goes up therein, and He is with you wheresoe'er ye be: for God on what ye do doth look!

[5] His is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth, and unto God affairs return. He makes the night succeed the day, and makes the day succeed the night; and He knows the nature of men's breasts.

Believe in God and His Apostle, and give alms of what He has made you successors of. For those amongst you who believe and give alms—for them is mighty hire.

What ails you that ye do not believe in God and His Apostle? He calls on you to believe in your Lord; and He has taken a compact from you, if ye be believers.

He it is who sends down upon His servants manifest signs, to bring you forth from the darkness into the light; for, verily, God to you is kind, compassionate!

[10] What ails you that ye give not alms in God's cause? for God's is the inheritance of the heavens and the earth. Not alike amongst you is he who gives alms before the victory and fights,—they are grander in rank than those who give alms afterwards and fight. But to all does God promise good; and God of what ye do is well aware!

Who is there who will lend a good loan to God? for He will double it for him, and for him is a generous reward.

On the day when thou shall see believers, men and women, with their light running on before them and on their right hand¹,—‘Glad tidings for you to-day.—Gardens beneath which rivers flow, to dwell therein for aye; that is the grand bliss!’

On the day when the hypocrites, men and women, shall say to those who believe, ‘Wait for us that we may kindle at your light.’ It will be said, ‘Get ye back, and beg a light.’ And there shall be struck out between them a wall with a door; within it shall be mercy, and outside before it torment. They shall cry out to them, ‘We were not with you!’ they shall say, ‘Yea, but ye did tempt yourselves, and did wait, and did doubt; and your vain hopes beguiled you; and the beguiler beguiled you about God.’

¹ I. e. guiding them to Paradise.

'Wherefore to-day there shall not be taken from you a ransom, nor from those who misbelieved. Your resort is the fire; it is your sovereign, and an ill journey will it be!'

[15] Is the time come to those who believe, for their hearts to be humbled at the remembrance of God, and of what He has sent down in truth? and for them not to be like those who were given the Scriptures before, and over whom time was prolonged, but their hearts grew hard, and many of them were workers of abomination?

Know that God quickens the earth after its death!—we have manifested to you the signs; haply ye may have some sense!

Verily, those who give in charity, men and women, who have lent to God a goodly loan,—it shall be doubled for them, and for them is a generous hire.

And those who believe in God and His Apostle, they are the confessors and the martyrs with their Lord; for them is their hire and their light! But those who misbelieve and call our signs lies, they are the fellows of hell!

Know that the life of this world is but a sport, and a play, and an adornment, and something to boast of amongst yourselves; and the multiplying of children is like a rain-growth, its vegetation pleases the misbelievers; then they wither away, and thou mayest see them become yellow; then they become but grit.

But in the hereafter is a severe woe, [20] and forgiveness from God and His goodwill; but the life of this world is but a chattel of guile.

Race towards forgiveness from your Lord and Paradise, whose breadth is as the breadth of the heavens and the earth, prepared for those who believe in God and His apostles! and God's grace, He gives it to whom He pleases, for God is Lord of mighty grace!

No accident befalls in the earth, or in yourselves, but it was in the Book, before we created them; verily, that is easy unto God.

That ye may not vex yourselves for what ye miss, nor be overjoyed at what He gives you; for God loves no arrogant boaster, who are niggardly and bid men be niggardly: but whoso turns his back¹, verily, God is rich, praiseworthy.

[25] We did send our apostles with manifest signs; and we did send down among you the Book and the balance, that men might stand by justice; and we sent down iron in which is both keen violence and advantages to men; and that God might know who helps Him and His apostles in secret; verily, God is strong and mighty!

And we sent Noah and Abraham; and placed in their seed prophecy and the Book; and some of them are guided, though many of them are workers of abomination!

Then we followed up their footsteps with our apostles; and we followed them up with Jesus the son of Mary; and we gave him the gospel; and we placed in the hearts of those who followed him kindness and compassion.—But monkery, they invented it; we only prescribed to them the craving after the goodwill of God, and they observed it not with due observance. But we gave to those who believe amongst them their hire; though many amongst them were workers of abomination!

¹ I. e. from almsgiving.

O ye who believe! fear God, and believe in His Apostle: He will give you two portions of His mercy, and will make for you a light for you to walk in, and will forgive you; for God is forgiving, compassionate.

That the people of the Book may know that they cannot control aught of God's grace; and that grace is in God's hands, He gives it to whom He will; for God is Lord of mighty grace!

THE CHAPTER OF THE WRANGLER.

(LVIII. Medīnah.)

GOD has heard the speech of her who wrangled with you about her husband¹, and complained to God; and God hears your gossip; verily, God both hears and sees.

Those among you who back out of their wives² they are not their mothers: their mothers are only those who gave them birth; and, verily, they speak a wrong speech and a false.

Verily, God both pardons and forgives. But those who back out of their wives and then would recall their speech,—then the manumission of a captive before they touch each other; that is what ye are admonished, and God of what ye do is well aware!

¹ Khâulah bint Tha'labah being divorced from her husband by the formula mentioned below, and which was always considered to be a final separation, appealed to Mohammed, who said he could not alter the custom. Afterwards, on the woman praying to God, this passage was revealed, abolishing the objectionable form of divorce.

² I. e. divorce them by the formula 'Thou art to me as my mother's back!' See Part I, p. 43, note 4.

[5] But he who finds not (the means) :— then a fast for two months consecutively, before they touch each other ; and he who cannot endure that :—then the feeding of sixty poor folk. That is that ye may believe in God and His Apostle ; and these are the bounds of God ; and for the mis-believers is grievous woe !

Verily, those who oppose God and His Apostle shall be upset, as those before them were upset.

We have sent down manifest signs : for the mis-believers is shameful woe on the day when God shall raise them all together, and shall inform them of what they have done. God has taken account of it, but they forget it ; for God is witness over all !

Dost thou not see that God knows what is in the heavens and what is in the earth ? and that there cannot be a privy discourse of three but He makes the fourth ? nor of five but He makes the sixth ? nor less than that nor more, but that He is with them wheresoe'er they be ? then He will inform them of what they have done upon the resurrection day ; verily, God all things doth know !

Dost thou not look at those who were prohibited from privy talk, and then returned to that they were forbidden ? and they too discourse together with sin and enmity and rebellion against the Apostle ; and when they come to thee they greet thee with what God greets thee not¹ ; and they say in themselves, Why does not God torment us for what we say ? Hell is enough for them ! they shall broil therein, and an ill journey shall it be !

¹ Instead of saying, Es salâm 'halaika, 'peace be upon thee !' they used to say, Es sâm 'halaika, 'mischief be upon thee !'

[10] O ye who believe! when ye discourse together, then discourse not in sin and enmity and rebellion against the Apostle; but discourse together in righteousness and piety; and fear God, for unto Him ye shall be gathered!

Privy talk is only from the devil, that those who do believe may grieve: it cannot hurt them at all, except by the permission of God: and upon God let the believers rely.

O ye who believe! when it is said to you, 'Make room in your assemblies,' then make room; God will make room for you; and when it is said to you, 'Rise up,' then rise up; God will raise all you who believe, as well as those who are given knowledge, in rank; for God of what ye do is well aware!

O ye who believe! when ye address the Apostle, then give in charity before addressing him; that is better for you, and more pure. But if ye find not the means,—then God is forgiving, compassionate. What! do ye shrink from giving in charity before addressing him? then if ye do it not, and God relents towards you, then be steadfast in prayer, and give alms, and fear God and His Apostle; for God is well aware of what ye do!

[15] Dost thou not look at those who take for patrons a people¹ God is wrath with? they are neither of you nor of them, and they swear to you a lie the while they know; for them God has prepared severe torment; verily, evil is it they have done!

They take their faith for a cloak; and they turn men aside from the path of God; and for them is shameful woe!

¹ The Jews.

Their wealth shall not avail them, nor their children at all, against God ; they are the fellows of the Fire, and they shall dwell therein for aye !

On the day when God raises them all together, then will they swear to Him as they swore to you ; and they will think that they rest on somewhat.—Ay, verily, they are liars !

[20] Satan hath overridden them, and made them forget the remembrance of God : they are the crew of Satan ; ay, the crew of Satan, they are the losers !

Verily, those who oppose God and His Apostle are amongst the most vile.

God has written, ‘ I will surely prevail, I and my apostles ;’ verily, God is strong and mighty !

Thou shalt not find a people who believe in God and the last day loving him who opposes God and His Apostle, even though it be their fathers, or their sons, or their brethren, or their clansmen.

He has written faith in their hearts, and He aids them with a spirit from Him ; and will make them enter into gardens beneath which rivers flow, to dwell therein for aye ! God is well pleased with them, and they well pleased with Him : they are God’s crew ; ay, God’s crew, they shall prosper !

THE CHAPTER OF THE EMIGRATION.

(LIX. Medīnah.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

What is in the heavens and in the earth celebrates God’s praises ; He is the mighty, the wise !

He it was who drove those of the people of the Book who misbelieved forth from their houses, at the first emigration¹; ye did not think that they would go forth, and they thought that their fortresses would defend them against God; but God came upon them from whence they did not reckon, and cast dread into their hearts! They ruined their houses with their own hands and the hands of the believers; wherefore take example, O ye who are endowed with sight!

Had it not been that God had prescribed for them banishment, He would have tormented them in this world²; but for them in the next shall be the torment of the Fire! that is because they opposed God and His Apostle: and whoso opposes God, verily, God is keen to punish!

[5] What palm trees ye did cut down or what ye left standing upon their roots was by God's permission, and to disgrace the workers of abomination; and as for the spoils that God gave to His Apostle from these (people) ye did not press forward after them with horse or riding camel; but God gives His Apostle authority over whom He pleases, for God is mighty over all³!

¹ The Jews of en Nadhîr, near Medînah, who at first promised to stand neuter between him and the idolaters. After his success at Bedr they came over to his side, but turned again after the defeat of Ohod. For this offence they were forced to leave the country.

² Like those of Qurâidhah, who were slaughtered. See Introduction, p. xxxix.

³ The Muslims did not use cavalry on the occasion, Mohammed himself being the only mounted member of the expedition. For this reason the spoils were assigned to the prophet alone, and not divided in the usual manner as prescribed in Chapter VIII, verse 42, Part I, pp. 167, 168.

What God gave as spoils to His Apostle of the people of the cities is God's, and the Apostle's, and for kinsfolk, orphans, and the poor, and the way-farer, so that it should not be circulated amongst the rich men of you.

And what the Apostle gives you, take; and what he forbids you, desist from; and fear God, verily, God is keen to punish!

And (it is) for the poor who fled¹, who were driven forth from their houses and their wealth, who crave grace from God and His goodwill, and help God and the Apostle; they are the truthful.

And those who were settled in the abode² and the faith before them, love those who fled to them³; and they do not find in their breasts a need of what has been given to them; preferring them to themselves, even though there be poverty amongst them; and whoso is preserved from his own coveteousness, these are the prosperous!

[10] And those who came after them say, 'Our Lord, forgive us and our brethren who were beforehand with us in the faith, and place not in our hearts ill-will towards those who believe—our Lord! verily, thou art kind, compassionate!'

Dost thou not look on those who were hypocritical, saying to their brethren who misbelieved amongst the people of the Book⁴, 'If ye be driven forth we will go forth with you; and we will never obey any one concerning you; and if ye be fought

¹ The poorer Muhâgerîn were allowed to participate in the spoil, but not the Ansârs.

² The Ansârs at Medînah.

³ The Muhâgerîn.

⁴ The Jews.

against we will help you.' But God bears witness that they are surely liars!

If they be driven forth, these will not go forth with them; and if they be fought against, these will not help them; or if they do help them, they will turn their backs in flight;—then shall they not be helped!

Ye indeed are a keener source of fear in their hearts than God; that is because they are a people who do not understand! They will not fight against you in a body save in fortified cities, or from behind walls; their valour is great amongst themselves;—thou dost reckon them as one body, but their hearts are separated. That is because they are a people who have no sense!

[15] Like unto those before them, recently¹; they tasted the evil result of their affair, and for them is grievous woe.

Like unto the devil when he said to man, 'Disbelieve.' But when he disbelieved, he said, 'Verily, I am clear of thee! Verily, I fear God the Lord of the worlds!' And the end of them both shall be that they shall both be in the Fire, to dwell therein for aye! for that is the reward of the unjust!

O ye who believe! fear God; and let each soul look to what it sends on for the morrow; and fear God; verily, God is well aware of what ye do!

And be ye not like those who forget God, and He makes them forget themselves; they are the workers of abomination!

[20] Not deemed alike shall be the fellows of the ¹ Either the idolaters slain at Bedr, or the Jews of Qâinuqâh, or those of Nadhîr.

Fire and the fellows of Paradise: the fellows of Paradise they are the blissful!

Had we sent down this Qur'ân upon a mountain, thou wouldst have seen it humbling itself, splitting asunder from the fear of God! These parables do we strike out for men; haply they may reflect!

He is God than whom there is no god; who knows the unseen and the visible; He is the merciful, the compassionate! He is God than whom there is no god; the King, the Holy, the Peace-Giver, the Faithful, the Protector, the Mighty, the Repairer, the Great!—celebrated be the praises of God above what they join with Him.

He is God, the Creator, the Maker, the Fashioner; His are the excellent names¹! His praises, whatever are in the heavens and the earth do celebrate; for God is the mighty, the wise!

THE CHAPTER OF THE TRIED

(LX. Medīnah.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

O ye who believe! take not my enemy and your enemy for patrons, encountering them with love; for they misbelieve in the truth that is to come to you; they drive out the Apostle and you for that ye believe in God your Lord²!

¹ See Introduction, p. lxvii.

² 'Hâ'ib ibn abi Balta'hah had given the Meccans warning of an

If ye go forth fighting strenuously in my cause and craving my good pleasure, and secretly show love for them, yet do I know best what ye conceal and what ye display! and he of you who does so has erred from the level path.

If they find you they will be enemies to you, and they will stretch forth against you their hands and their tongues for evil, and would fain that ye should disbelieve; neither your kindred nor your children shall profit you upon the resurrection day; it will separate you! but God on what ye do doth look!

Ye had a good example in Abraham and those with him, when they said to their people, 'Verily, we are clear of you and of what ye serve beside God. We disbelieve in you: and between us and you is enmity and hatred begun for ever, until ye believe in God alone!'

But not¹ the speech of Abraham to his father, 'Verily, I will ask forgiveness for thee, though I cannot control aught from God!' O our Lord! on thee do we rely! and unto thee we turn! and unto thee the journey is!

[5] Our Lord! make us not a trial for those who misbelieve; but forgive us! Our Lord! verily, thou art mighty, wise!

Ye had in them a good example for him who intended surprise by Mohammed, and on his letter being intercepted, excused himself by saying that he had only done so in order to make terms for his family, who were at Mecca, and that he knew that the information would be of no avail. Mohammed pardoned him, but the verse in the text prohibits such conduct for the future.

¹ I. e. they are not to imitate Abraham's speech to his father, and ask forgiveness for their infidel friends. Cp. Part I, p. 189, verse 115.

would hope in God and the last day. But whoso turns his back, verily, God, He is rich and to be praised.

Mayhap that God will place love between you and between those of them ye are hostile towards¹: for God is powerful, and God is forgiving, compassionate.

God forbids you not respecting those who have not fought against you for religion's sake, and who have not driven you forth from your homes, that ye should act righteously and justly towards them; verily, God loves the just!

He only forbids you to make patrons of those who have fought against you for religion's sake, and driven you forth from your homes, or have aided in your expulsion; and whoever makes patrons of them, they are the unjust!

[10] O ye who believe! when there come believing women who have fled, then try them: God knows their faith. If ye know them to be believers do not send them back to the misbelievers;—they are not lawful for them, nor are the men lawful for these;—but give them² what they have expended³, and it shall be no crime against you that ye marry them, when ye have given them their hire. And do not ye retain a right over misbelieving women; but ask for what ye have spent, and let them ask for what they have spent. That is God's judgment: He judges between you, for God is knowing, wise!

And if any of your wives escape from you to the ¹ I. e. by their becoming converted to Islâm.

² I. e. to their infidel husbands.

³ The dowries.

misbelievers, and your turn comes, then give to those whose wives have gone away the like of what they have spent; and fear God, in whom it is that ye believe.

O thou prophet! when believing women come to thee and engage with thee that they will not associate aught with God, and will not steal, and will not fornicate, and will not kill their children, and will not bring a calumny which they have forged between their hands and feet¹, and that they will not rebel against thee in what is reasonable, then engage with them and ask forgiveness for them of God;—verily, God is forgiving, compassionate.

O ye who believe! take not for patrons a people whom God is wrath against; they despair of the hereafter, as the misbelievers despair of the fellows of the tombs²!

THE CHAPTER OF THE RANKS.

(LXI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

What is in the heavens and what is in the earth celebrates the praises of God, for He is the mighty, the wise!

O ye who believe! say not what ye do not. It is most hateful to God that ye say what ye do not.

¹ This is said by some commentators to mean foisting spurious children on to their husbands.

² I. e. of the resurrection of the dead.

Verily, God loves those who fight in His cause in ranks as though they were a compact building ¹.

[5] When Moses said to his people, 'O my people! why do ye hurt me, when ye know that I am the apostle of God to you?' and when they swerved, God made their hearts to swerve; for God guides not the people who work abomination!

And when Jesus the son of Mary said, 'O children of Israel! verily, I am the apostle of God to you, verifying the law that was before me and giving you glad tidings of an apostle who shall come after me, whose name shall be A'hmed ²!'—but when he did come to them with manifest signs, they said, 'This is manifest sorcery!'

And who is more unjust than he who forges against God a lie when called unto Islâm? but God guides not the unjust people.

They desire to put out the light of God with their mouths; but God will perfect His light, averse although the misbeliever be!

He it is who sent His Apostle with guidance and the religion of truth to set it above all religion; averse although the idolaters may be.

[10] O ye who believe! shall I lead you to a merchandise which will save you from grievous woe?

To believe in God and His Apostle, and to fight strenuously in God's cause with your property and

¹ Who fight in close and unbroken lines.

² A'hmed is equivalent in meaning to Mohammed, and means 'Praised,' 'Laudable.' The allusion is to the promise of the Paraclete in John xvi. 7, the Muslims declaring that the word παράκλητος has been substituted in the Greek for περικλητός, which would mean the same as A'hmed. See Introduction, p. xlix.

your persons ; that is better for you if ye did but know !

He will pardon you your sins, and bring you into gardens beneath which rivers flow, and goodly dwellings in gardens of Eden ; — that is the mighty bliss !

And other things which ye love, — help from God and victory nigh ! — so do thou give the glad tidings unto the believers !

O ye who believe ! be ye the helpers¹ of God ! as Jesus son of Mary said to the apostles, 'Who are my helpers for God ?' Said the apostles, 'We are God's helpers² !'

And a party of the children of Israel believed, and a party misbelieved. And we aided those who believed against their enemies, and they were on the morrow superior !

THE CHAPTER OF THE CONGREGATION.

(LXII. Medīnah.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

What is in the heavens and what is in the earth celebrates the praises of God the King, the holy, the mighty, the wise !

He it is who sent unto the Gentiles³ a prophet amongst themselves to recite to them His signs and to purify them, and to teach them the Book and ¹ Ansâr.

² See Part I, p. 53 (Chapter III, verse 45).

³ See Introduction, p. xlvii, and Part I, p. 156, note.

the wisdom, although they were before in obvious error.

And others of them have not yet overtaken them¹; but He is the mighty, the wise!

That is God's grace, He gives it to whomsoever He will; for God is Lord of mighty grace.

[5] The likeness of those who were charged with the law and then bore it not is as the likeness of an ass bearing books: sorry is the likeness of the people who say God's signs are lies! but God guides not an unjust people.

Say, 'O ye who are Jews! if ye pretend that ye are the clients of God, beyond other people; then wish for death if ye do speak the truth!'

But they never wish for it, through what their hands have sent before! but God knows the unjust.

Say, 'Verily, the death from which ye flee will surely meet you; then shall ye be sent back to Him who knows the unseen and the visible, and He will inform you of that which ye have done!'

O ye who believe! when the call to prayer is made upon the Congregation Day², then hasten to the remembrance of God, and leave off traffic; that is better for you, if ye did but know!

[10] And when prayer is performed, then disperse abroad in the land, and crave of God's grace; and remember God much; haply ye may prosper!

But when they see merchandise or sport they flock to it and leave thee standing³! Say, 'What is

¹ I. e. by embracing Islâm.

² Friday, called before this 'Harûbah. It was the day on which Mohammed entered Medînah for the first time.

³ It is said that one Friday a caravan entered the town while Mohammed was conducting the public prayers, and the congregawith God is better than sport and than merchandise, for God is the best of providers !'

THE CHAPTER OF THE HYPOCRITES¹.

(LXIII. Medīnah.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

When the hypocrites come to thee, they say, 'We bear witness that thou art surely the Apostle of God;' but God knows that thou art His Apostle: and God bears witness that the hypocrites are liars!

They take their faith² for a cloak, and then they turn folks from God's way:—evil is that which they have done! That is because they believed and then disbelieved, wherefore is a stamp set on their hearts so that they do not understand!

And when thou seest them, their persons please thee³; but if they speak, thou listenest to their speech: they are like timber propped up⁴: they reckon every noise against them! They are the foe, so beware of them!—God fight against them, how they lie!

tion hearing the drums beat rushed out to see the sight, with the exception of about twelve of them.

¹ The disaffected portion of the inhabitants of Medīnah. See Introduction, p. xxxiv.

² Or, by a various reading, 'their oaths.'

³ Abdallah ibn Ubai, the leader of the 'Hypocrites' (see Introduction, p. xxxv), was a man of fine presence and eloquent address.

⁴ I. e. though of tall and imposing presence, they are really like mere logs.

[5] And when it is said to them, 'Come, and the Apostle of God will ask forgiveness for you!' they turn away their heads, and thou mayest see them turning away since they are so big with pride!

It is the same to them whether thou dost ask forgiveness for them, or whether thou dost not ask forgiveness for them,—God will not forgive them; verily, God guides not a people who work abomination!

They it is who say, 'Expend not in alms upon those who are with the Apostle of God, in order that they may desert him!'—but God's are the treasures of the heavens and the earth; but the hypocrites have no sense!

They say, 'If we return to el Medīnah, the mightier will surely drive out the meaner therefrom;' but to God belongs the might, and to His Apostle and to the believers; but the hypocrites do not know!

O ye who believe! let not your property nor your children divert you from the remembrance of God,—for whosoever does that, they are those who lose!

[10] But expend in alms of what we have bestowed upon you before death come on any one of you, and he says, 'My Lord! wouldst thou but have respited me till an appointed time nigh at hand, then would I surely give in charity and be among the righteous!' But God will never respite a soul when its appointed time has come: and God of what ye do is well aware!

THE CHAPTER OF CHEATING.

(LXIV. Place of origin doubtful.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

What is in the heavens and what is in the earth celebrates God's praises; His is the kingdom, and His is the praise, and He is mighty over all!

He it is who created you, and of you is (one) a misbeliever and (one) a believer; and God on what ye do does look.

He created the heavens and the earth in truth; and has formed you and made excellent your forms; and unto Him the journey is!

He knows what is in the heavens and the earth, and knows what ye conceal and what ye display; for God knows the nature of men's breasts!

[5] Has there not come to you the story of those who misbelieved before, and tasted the evil result of their affair, and for them was grievous woe?

That is because their apostles came to them with manifest signs, and they said, 'Shall mortals guide us?' and they misbelieved and turned their backs. But God was independent of them; for God is rich and to be praised!

Those who misbelieve pretend that they shall surely not be raised: say, 'Yea! by my Lord! ye shall surely be raised: then ye shall be informed of that which ye have done;' for that is easy unto God.

So believe in God and His Apostle and the light which we have sent down; for God of what ye do is well aware!

On the day when he shall gather you to the day of gathering, that is the day of cheating¹! but whoso believes in God and acts aright, He will cover for him his offences, and will bring him into gardens beneath which rivers flow, to dwell therein for aye! that is the mighty bliss!

[10] But those who misbelieve and say our signs are lies, they are the fellows of the Fire, to dwell therein for aye! and evil shall the journey be!

No calamity befalls but by the permission of God: and whoso believes in God, He will guide his heart; for God all things doth know!

So obey God and obey the Apostle²: but if ye turn your backs—our Apostle has only his plain message to preach!

God, there is no god but He; and upon Him let the believers rely!

O ye who believe! verily, among your wives and children are foes of yours: so beware of them! But if ye pardon, and overlook it, and forgive,—verily, God is forgiving, compassionate!

[15] Your property and your children are but a trial; and God, with Him is mighty hire!

Then fear God as much as ye can! and hear, and obey, and expend in alms: it is better for yourselves. But whosoever is saved from his own covetousness—these are the prosperous!

If ye lend to God a goodly loan, He will double it for you, and will forgive you; for God is grateful, clement!

¹ I.e. both the righteous and the wicked will disappoint each other by reversing their positions, the wicked being punished while the righteous are in bliss.

² This expression seems to indicate that this verse at least was revealed at Medīnah.

He knows the unseen and the visible ; the mighty, the wise !

THE CHAPTER OF DIVORCE.

(LXV. Medīnah.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

O thou prophet ! when ye divorce women, then divorce them at their term¹, and calculate the term and fear God your Lord. Do not drive them out of their houses unless they have committed manifest adultery. These are God's bounds, and whoso transgresses God's bounds has wronged himself. Thou knowest not whether haply God may cause something fresh to happen after that².

And when they have reached their appointed time, then retain them with kindness, or separate from them with kindness ; and bring as witnesses men of equity from among you ; and give upright testimony to God. That is what He admonishes him who believes in God and the last day ; and whosoever fears God, He will make for him a (happy) issue, and will provide for him from whence he reckoned not.

And whosoever relies on God, He is sufficient for him : verily, God will attain His purpose :—God has set for everything a period.

And such of your women as despair of menstrua-

¹ When they have had three periods of menstruation ; or, if they prove with child, after their delivery. See Part I, p. 34.

² I. e. whether God may not reconcile them again.

tion,—if ye doubt, then their term is three months ; and such as have not menstruated too.

And those who are heavy with child their appointed time is when they have laid down their burden ; and whosoever fears God, He will make for him an easy affair.

[5] That is God's command, He has sent it down to you ; and whosoever fears God He will cover for him his offences and will make grand for him his hire.

Let them¹ dwell where ye dwell, according to your means, and do not harm them, to reduce them to straits ; and if they be heavy with child, then pay for them until they lay down their burdens ; and if they suckle (the child) for you, then give them their hire, and consult among yourselves in reason ; but if ye be in difficulties, and another woman shall suckle the child for him, let him who has plenty expend of his plenty ; but he whose provision is doled out, let him expend of what God has given him ; God will not compel any soul beyond what He has given it ;—God will make after difficulty ease !

How many a city has turned away from the bidding of its Lord and His apostles ; and we called them to a severe account, and we tormented them with an unheard-of torment !

And they tasted the evil results of their conduct ; and the end of their conduct was loss !

[10] God prepared for them severe torment ;—then fear God, ye who are endowed with minds !

Ye who believe ! God has sent down to you a reminder;—an apostle to recite to you God's manifest signs;—to bring forth those who believe and act aright from darkness into light! and whoso believes in God and acts right He will bring him into gardens beneath which rivers flow, to dwell therein for ever and for aye! God has made goodly for him his provision!

¹ The divorced women.

God it is who created seven heavens, and of the earth the like thereof. The bidding descends between them, that ye may know that God is mighty over all, and that God has encompassed all things with His knowledge!

THE CHAPTER OF PROHIBITION¹.

(LXVI. Medīnah.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

O thou prophet! wherefore dost thou prohibit what God has made lawful to thee, craving to please thy wives? but God is forgiving, compassionate!

God has allowed you to expiate your oaths; for ¹ This chapter was occasioned by Mohammed's liaison with the Coptic girl Mary (see Introduction, p. xl), with whom he lay on the day due to 'Āyeshah or 'Hafsah. The latter was greatly enraged, and Mohammed to pacify her swore never to touch the girl again, and enjoined 'Hafsah to keep the matter secret from the rest of his wives. She, however, revealed it in confidence to 'Āyeshah; when Mohammed, annoyed at finding his confidence betrayed, not only divorced her, but separated himself from his other wives for the space of a month, which time he passed in Mary's apartment. The chapter is intended to free him from his oath respecting Mary, and to reprove his wives for their conduct.

God is your sovereign, and He is the knowing, the wise!

And when the prophet told as a secret to one of his wives a recent event, and when she gave information thereof and exposed it, he acquainted her with some of it and avoided part of it. But when he informed her of it, she said, 'Who told thee this?' he said, 'The wise one, the well-aware informed me.'

'If ye both turn repentant unto God,—for your hearts have swerved!—but if ye back each other up against him,—verily, God, He is the sovereign; and Gabriel and the righteous of the believers, and the angels after that, will back him up.'

'[5] It may be that his Lord if he divorce you will give him in exchange wives better than you, Muslims, believers, devout, repentant, worshipping, giving to fasting—such as have known men and virgins too.'

O ye who believe! save yourselves and your families from the fire, whose fuel is men and stones;—over it are angels stout and stern; they disobey not God in what He bids them, but they do what they are bidden!

O ye who disbelieve! excuse not yourselves to-day;—ye shall only be rewarded for that which ye have done.

O ye who believe! turn repentant to God with sincere repentance; it may be that thy Lord will cover for you your offences and will bring you into gardens beneath which rivers flow!—the day God will not disgrace the Prophet nor those who believe with him; their light shall run on before them, and at their right hands! they shall say, 'Our Lord! perfect for us our light and forgive us; verily, Thou art mighty over all!'

O thou prophet! fight strenuously against the misbelievers and hypocrites and be stern towards them; for their resort is hell, and an evil journey shall it be!

[10] God strikes out a parable to those who misbelieve: the wife of Noah and the wife of Lot; they were under two of our righteous servants, but they betrayed them: and they availed them nothing against God; and it was said, 'Enter the fire with those who enter.'

And God strikes out a parable for those who believe: the wife of Pharaoh, when she said, 'My Lord, build for me a house with Thee in Paradise, and save me from Pharaoh and his works, and save me from the unjust people!'

And Mary, daughter of Imrân, who guarded her private parts, and we breathed therein of our spirit and she verified the words of her Lord and His books, and was of the devout.

THE CHAPTER OF THE KINGDOM.

(LXVII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Blessed be He in whose hand is the kingdom, for He is mighty over all!

Who created death and life, to try you, which of you does best; for He is the mighty, the forgiving!

Who created seven heavens in stories; thou canst not see any discordance in the creation of the Merciful!

Why, look again! canst thou see a flaw? Then look again twice!—thy look shall return to thee driven back and dulled!

[5] And we have adorned the lower heaven with lamps; and set them to pelt the devils with¹; and we have prepared for them the torment of the blaze!

And for those who disbelieve in their Lord is the torment of hell, and an evil journey shall it be!

When they shall be cast therein they shall hear its braying² as it boils—it will well-nigh burst for rage!

Whenever a troop of them is thrown in, its treasurers shall ask them, 'Did not a warner come to you?'

They shall say, 'Yea! a warner came to us, and we called him liar, and said, "God has not sent down aught; ye are but in great error!"'

[10] And they shall say, 'Had we but listened or had sense we had not been amongst the fellows of the blaze!'

And they will confess their sins; but 'Avaunt to the fellows of the blaze!'

Verily, those who fear their Lord in secret, for them is forgiveness and a great hire!

Speak ye secretly or openly, verily, He knows the nature of men's breasts!

Ay! He knows who created! for He is the subtle, the well-aware!

[15] He it is who made the earth flat for you; so walk in the spacious sides thereof and eat of His provision; for unto Him the resurrection is!

¹ See Part I, pp. 50, 51, note 2.

² Cf. Chapters XXV, verse 12, and XXXI, verse 18.

Are ye sure that He who is in the heaven will not cleave the earth with you, and that it then shall quake ?

Or are ye sure that He who is in the heaven will not send against you a heavy sand storm, and that ye then shall know how the warning was ?

But those before them did call the apostles liars, and what a change it was !

Or have they not looked at the birds above them expanding their wings or closing them ?—none holds them in except the Merciful One ; for He on everything doth look.

[20] Or who is this who will be a host for you, to help you against the Merciful ?—the misbelievers are only in delusion !

Or who is this who will provide you if He hold back His provision ?—Nay, but they persist in perverseness and aversion !

Is he who walks prone upon his face more guided than he who walks upright upon a straight path ?

Say, 'It is He who produced you and made for you hearing and sight and hearts'—little is it that ye give thanks.

Say, 'It is He who sowed you in the earth, and unto Him shall ye be gathered !'

[25] They say, 'When shall this threat be, if ye do speak the truth ?'

Say, 'The knowledge is only with God ; and I am but a plain warner !'

And when they see it nigh, sorry shall be the faces of those who misbelieve ; and it shall be said, 'This is that for which ye used to call !'

Say, 'Have ye considered, whether God destroy me and those with me, or whether we obtain mercy, yet who will protect the misbelievers from grievous torment ?'

Say, 'He is the Merciful; we believe in Him, and upon Him do we rely; and ye shall shortly know who it is that is in obvious error!'

[30] Say, 'Have ye considered if your waters on the morrow should have sunk, who is to bring you flowing water?'

THE CHAPTER OF THE PEN.

(LXVIII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

N.¹ By the pen, and what they write, thou art not, by God's grace, mad! and, verily, thine is a hire that is not grudged! [5] and, verily, thou art of a grand nature²!

But thou shalt see and they shall see which of you is the infatuated.

Verily, thy Lord He knows best who errs from His way; and He knows best those who are guided.

Then obey not those who call thee liar; they would fain that thou shouldst be smooth with them, then would they be smooth with thee!

[10] And obey not any mean swearer³, a back-

¹ The Arabic name of the letter nûn signifies both 'a fish' and 'an inkstand;' the symbol is by some supposed to refer to Jonah, mentioned in verse 48, and by others to writing on the eternal tablets (see Part I, p. 2, note 2), to which the first words of the chapter apply.

² For bearing so meekly the insults of the misbelievers.

³ The person meant is, probably, Walîd ibn Mughâirah, the inveterate enemy of the prophet.

biter, a walker about with slander; a forbiddor of good, a transgressor, a sinner; rude, and base-born too; though he have wealth and sons!

[15] When our signs are recited to him he says, 'Old folks' tales!'

We will brand him on the snout!

Verily, we have tried them as we tried the fellows of the garden when they swore, 'We will cut its fruit at morn!'

But they made not the exception¹; and there came round about it an encompassing calamity from thy Lord the while they slept; [20] and on the morrow it was as one the fruit of which is cut.

And they cried to each other in the morning, 'Go early to your tilth if ye would cut it!'

So they set off, saying privily to each other, 'There shall surely enter it to-day unto you no poor person!'

[25] And they went early deciding to be stingy².

And when they saw it they said, 'Verily, we have erred! Nay, we are forbidden (its fruit)!'

Said the most moderate of them, 'Said I not to you, "unless ye celebrate God's praises!"'

Said they, 'Celebrated be the praises of our Lord! verily, we were unjust!'

[30] And they approached each other with mutual blame.

Said they, 'O woe to us! verily, we have been outrageous! Haply our Lord may give us instead a better than it; verily, we unto our Lord do yearn.'

¹ I. e. they did not add, 'If God please!'

² Or, according to another interpretation, 'with a determined purpose.'

Thus is the torment, but, verily, the torment of the hereafter is greater, if ye did but know !

Verily, for the pious with their Lord are gardens of pleasure !

[35] Shall we then make the Muslims like the sinners ? What ails you ? how ye judge !

Or have ye a book in which ye can study, that ye are surely to have what ye may choose ?

Or have ye oaths binding on us until the judgment day that ye are surely to have what ye may judge ?

[40] Ask them, which of them will vouch for this ?

Or have they partners, then let them bring their partners if they do speak the truth ?

On the day when the leg shall be bared¹; and they shall be called to adore and shall not be able !

Lowering their looks, abasement shall attack them, for they were called to adore while yet they were safe !

But let me alone with him who calls this new discourse a lie. We will surely bring them down by degrees from whence they do not know.

[45] And I will let them have their way ! for my device is sure.

Or dost thou ask them a hire for it while they are burdened with debts ?

Or have they the knowledge of the unseen, so that they write ?

But wait patiently for the judgment of thy Lord, and be not like the fellow of the fish², when he cried out as he was choking with rage.

¹ An expression signifying any great calamity or battle, because the non-combatants gird up their loins to be ready for flight.

² Jonah.

Had it not been that grace from his Lord reached him, he would have been cast out on the naked (shore) and blamed the while!

[50] But his Lord elected him, and made him of the pious.

The misbelievers well-nigh upset thee with their looks when they hear the reminder, and they say, 'Surely he is mad!'

And yet it is but a reminder to the worlds!

THE CHAPTER OF THE INFALLIBLE.

(LXIX. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

The Infallible, what is the Infallible? and what should make thee know what the Infallible is?

Thamûd and 'Âd called the Striking¹ Day a lie; [5] but as for Thamûd they perished by the shock; and as for 'Âd they perished with the violent cold blast of wind, which He subjected against them for seven nights and eight days consecutively. Thou mightest see the people therein prostrate as though they were palm stumps thrown down, and canst thou see any of them left?

And Pharaoh and those before him of the overturned cities² committed sins, [10] and they rebelled against the apostle of their Lord, and He seized them with an excessive punishment.

Verily, we, when the water surged, bore you on it in a sailing ship, to make it a memorial for you, and that the retentive ear might hold it.

¹ Cf. Chapter XIII, verse 31, Part I, p. 236.

² Sodom and Gomorrah; cf. Part I, p. 183, note 1.

And when the trumpet shall be blown with one blast, and the earth shall be borne away, and the mountains too, and both be crushed with one crushing; [15] on that day shall the inevitable happen; and the heaven on that day shall be cleft asunder, for on that day shall it wane! and the angels upon the sides thereof; and above them on that day shall eight bear the throne of thy Lord!

On the day when ye shall be set forth no hidden thing of yours shall be concealed.

And as for him who is given his book in his right hand, he shall say, 'Here! take and read my book. [20] Verily, I thought that I should meet my reckoning;' and he shall be in a pleasing life, in a lofty garden, whose fruits are nigh to cull—'Eat ye and drink with good digestion, for what ye did aforetime in the days that have gone by!'

[25] But as for him who is given his book in his left hand he shall say, 'O, would that I had not received my book! I did not know what my account would be. O, would that it¹ had been an end of me! my wealth availed me not! my authority has perished from me!' [30] 'Take him and fetter him, then in hell broil him! then into a chain whose length is seventy cubits force him! verily, he believed not in the mighty God, nor was he particular to feed the poor: [35] therefore he has not here to-day any warm friend, nor any food except foul ichor, which none save sinners shall eat!'

I need not swear by what ye see or what ye do not see, [40] verily, it is the speech of a noble apostle; and it is not the speech of a poet:—little is it ye believe!

¹ I. e. death.

And it is not the speech of a soothsayer,—little is it that ye mind!—a revelation from the Lord of the worlds.

Why if he had invented against us any sayings, [45] we would have seized him by the right hand, then we would have cut his jugular vein; nor could any one of you have kept us off from him.

Verily, it is a memorial to the pious; and, verily, we know that there are amongst you those who say it is a lie; [50] and, verily, it is a source of sighing to the misbelievers; and, verily, it is certain truth!

Therefore celebrate the name of thy mighty Lord!

THE CHAPTER OF THE ASCENTS.

(LXX. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

An asker¹ asked for torment that must befall, for the unbelievers; there is no repelling it; from God the Lord of the ascents², whereby ascend the angels and the Spirit unto Him in a day whose length is fifty thousand years¹.

¹ The person referred to is said to have been either Abu Gahl, who challenged Mohammed to cause a portion of the heaven to fall on them, see Chapter XXVI, verse 187, p. 97, or one Nadhr ibn el 'Hâreth, who said of Islâm, 'If this be the truth from Thee, then rain down on us stones from heaven!'

² Either steps by which the prayers of the righteous or the angels ascend to heaven; or the word may refer to the various degrees of the angels, or to the seven heavens themselves. See Introduction, p. lxx.

[5] Wherefore be patient with fair patience; verily, they see it as afar off, but we see it nigh !

The day when the heaven shall be as molten brass, and the mountains shall be like flocks of wool ; [10] when no warm friend shall question friend ; they shall gaze on each other, and the sinner would fain give as a ransom from the torment of that day his sons and his mate, and his brother and his kin who stand by him, and all who are in the earth, that yet it might rescue him !

[15] Nay, verily, it is a flame,—dragging by the scalp ! it shall call those who retreated and turned their backs and who amassed and hoarded !

Verily, man is by nature rash² ! [20] when evil touches him, very impatient ; when good touches him, niggardly ; all save those who pray, who remain at their prayers, and in whose wealth is a reasonable due (set aside) [25] for him who asks and him who is kept from asking, and those who believe in a day of judgment, and those who shrink in terror from the torment of their Lord ;—verily, the torment of their Lord is not safe ;—and those who guard their private parts, [30] except for their wives or the (slave girls) whom their right hands possess, for they are not to be blamed ; but whoso craves beyond this, they are the transgressors ; and those who observe their trusts and their compacts, and those who are upright in their testimonies, and those who keep their prayers, [35] these shall dwell in gardens honoured.

¹ Cf. Chapter XXXII, verse 4, p. 135.

² Cf. Chapter XVII, verse 12, p. 2.

What ails the misbelievers that they hurry on before thee, crowding together on the right and on the left¹? Does every man of them wish to enter the garden of pleasure?

Nay, we created them of what they know!

[40] And I need not swear by the Lord of the easts and the wests²; verily, we are able to change them for others better, nor are we prevented!

So leave them to plunge in discussion, and to play until they meet that day of theirs which they are threatened with, the day when they shall come forth in haste from the graves, as though they flock to a standard! with their looks abashed; meanness shall cover them! That is the day which they were promised!

THE CHAPTER OF NOAH.

(LXXI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Verily, we sent Noah to his people, 'Warn thy people before there come to them a grievous torment!'

Said he, 'O my people! verily, I am to you an obvious warner, that ye serve God and fear Him and obey me. He will pardon you your sins, and will defer you unto an appointed time; verily, God's appointed time when it comes will not be deferred, did ye but know !'

¹ Cf. pp. 262, 263.

² I. e. of the east and the west; or of the various points of the horizon at which the sun rises and sets in the course of the year.

[5] Said he, 'My Lord! verily, I have called my people by night and day, and my call did but increase them in flight; and, verily, every time I called them, that Thou mightest pardon them, they placed their fingers in their ears and tried to cover themselves with their garments and persisted, and were very big with pride. Then I called them openly; then I published to them and I spoke to them in secret, and I said, "Ask forgiveness of your Lord, verily, He is very forgiving. [10] He will send the rain upon you in torrents, and will extend to you wealth and children, and will make for you gardens, and will make for you rivers. What ails you that ye hope not for something serious from God, when He has created you by steps¹? Do ye not see how God has created the seven heavens in stories, [15] and has set the moon therein for a light, and set the sun for a lamp? and God has made you grow out of the earth, and then He will make you return thereto, and will make you come forth therefrom; and God has made for you the earth a carpet that ye may walk therein in broad paths.'"

[20] Said Noah, 'My Lord! verily, they have rebelled against me, and followed him whose wealth and children have but added to his loss, and they have plotted a great plot, and said, "Ye shall surely not leave your gods: ye shall surely neither leave Wadd, nor Suwâ'h, nor Yaghûth, nor Ya'ûq, nor Nasr², and they led astray many.'" And thou

¹ See Chapter XXII, verse 5, p. 56.

² For these five idols, see Introduction, p. xii.

(Mohammed) wilt only increase the unjust in their error—[25] because of their sins they were drowned and made to enter into the fire, and they found no helpers against God!

And Noah said, 'My Lord! leave not upon the earth one dweller of the misbelievers. Verily, Thou, if Thou shouldst leave them, they will lead astray Thy servants, and they will only bear for children sinners and misbelievers. My Lord! pardon me and my two parents, and whomsoever enters my house believing, and (pardon) the believers men and women—but Thou shalt only increase the unjust in loss.'

THE CHAPTER OF THE GINN.

(LXXII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Say, 'I have been inspired that there listened a company of the *ginn*¹, and they said, "We have heard a marvellous Qur'ân that guides to the right direction; and we believe therein, and we join no one with our Lord, for, verily, He—may the majesty of our Lord be exalted!—has taken to Himself neither consort nor son.

"And, verily, a fool among us spake against God wide of the mark!

"[5] And we thought that men and ginn would never speak a lie against God.

¹ See Introduction, pp. xiii-xiv. The occasion of Mohammed's preaching to the ginn was on his returning from his unsuccessful errand to Tâ'if; see Introduction, p. xxx.

“And there are persons amongst men who seek for refuge with persons amongst the *ginn*¹; but they increase them in their perverseness. And they thought, as ye thought, that God would not raise up any one from the dead.

“But we touched the heavens and found them filled with a mighty guard and shooting-stars; and we did sit in certain seats thereof to listen; but whoso of us listens now finds a shooting-star for him on guard.

“[10] And, verily, we know not whether evil be meant for those who are in the earth, or if their Lord means right by them.

“And of us are some who are pious, and of us are some who are otherwise: we are in separate bands.

“And we thought that we could not frustrate God in the earth, and could not frustrate Him by flight.

“But, verily, when we heard the guidance we believed therein, and he who believes in his Lord shall fear neither diminution nor loss.

“And, verily, of us are some who are Muslims, and of us some are trespassers; but those of us who are Muslims they strive after right direction; [15] and as for the trespassers they are fuel for hell.”

And if they² will go right upon the way, we will irrigate them with copious water to try them thereby; and whoso turns from the remembrance of his Lord He will drive him to severe torment.

And (say) that the mosques are God's, and that ye

¹ The pagan Arabs when they found themselves in a lonely place, such as they supposed the ginn to haunt, used to say, ‘I take refuge in the Lord of this valley from the foolish among his people!’

² The Meccans.

should not call on any one with God, and that when God's servant¹ stood up to pray they² called out to him and well-nigh crowded upon him. [20] Say, 'I only call upon my Lord, and I join no one with Him.'

Say, 'Verily, I cannot control for you either harm, or right direction.'

Say, 'Verily, as for me none can protect me against God, nor do I find any refuge beside Him,—except delivering the message from God and His errands: and whoso rebels against God and His Apostle, verily, for him is the fire of hell for them to dwell therein for ever and for aye!'

[25] Until when they see what they are threatened with, then shall they surely know who is most weak at helping and fewest in numbers!

Say, 'I know not if what ye are threatened with be nigh, or if my Lord will set for it a term. He knows the unseen, and He lets no one know His unseen, save such apostle as He is well pleased with: for, verily, He sends marching before him and behind him a guard!'

That He may know that they have delivered the errands of their Lord, for He compasses what they have, and reckons everything by number.

THE CHAPTER OF THE ENWRAPPED.

(LXXIII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

O thou who art enwrapped! rise by night except a little—the half, or deduct therefrom a little, or ¹ Mohammed.

² The ginn.

add thereto, and chant the Qur'ân chanting. [5]
Verily, we will cast on thee a heavy speech.

Verily, the early part of the night is stronger in impressions and more upright in speech!

Verily, thou hast by day a long employment; but mention the name of thy Lord and devote thyself thoroughly to Him, the Lord of the east and the west; there is no god but He; then take Him for a guardian!

[10] And endure patiently what they say, and flee from them with a decorous flight.

And leave me and those who say it is a lie, who are possessed of comfort; and let them bide for a while.

Verily, with us are heavy fetters and hell-fire, and food that chokes, and mighty woe!

On the day when the earth and the mountains shall tremble and the earth shall be as a crumbling sand-hill!

[15] Verily, we have sent unto you an apostle bearing witness against you, as we sent an apostle unto Pharaoh.

But Pharaoh rebelled against the apostle, and we seized him with an overpowering punishment.

Then how will ye shield yourselves if ye misbelieve from the day which shall make children grey-headed, whereon the heaven cleaves—its promise shall be fulfilled!

Verily, this is a memorial, and whoso will, let him take unto his Lord a way¹.

¹ From verse 20 the rest of the sûrah seems from its style to belong to the Medînah period; and there is a tradition ascribed to 'Âyeshah that it was revealed a year later than the earlier part of the chapter.

[20] Verily, thy Lord knows that thou dost stand up to pray nearly two-thirds of the night, or the half of it or the third of it, as do part of those who are with thee; for God measures the night and the day; He knows that ye cannot calculate it, and He turns relentant towards you.

So read what is easy of the Qur'ân. He knows that there will be of you some who are sick and others who beat about in the earth craving the grace of God, and others who are fighting in the cause of God. Then read what is easy of it and be steadfast in prayer, and give alms, and lend to God a goodly loan, for what ye send forward for yourselves of good ye will find it with God. It is better and a greater hire; and ask ye pardon of God: verily, God is forgiving, merciful!

THE CHAPTER OF THE 'COVERED'¹

(LXXIV. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

O thou who art covered! rise up and warn!

And thy Lord magnify!

[5] And thy garments purify!

And abomination shun!

And grant not favours to gain increase!

And for thy Lord await!

And when the trump is blown,—for that day is a difficult day! [10] for the misbelievers aught but easy!

¹ The first five verses of this chapter form the second revelation by the angel Gabriel in person, and the first after the Fatrah, or period of 'Intermission.' See Introduction, p. xxii.

Leave me alone with him I have created, and for whom I have made extensive wealth¹, and sons that he may look upon, and for whom I have smoothed things down. [15] Then he desires that I should increase! nay, verily, he is hostile to our signs! I will drive him up a hill! Then he reflected and planned! May he be killed,—how he planned! [20] Again, may he be killed,—how he planned! Then he looked; then he frowned and scowled; then he retreated and was big with pride and said, ‘This is only magic exhibited! [25] this is only mortal speech!’—I will broil him in hell-fire! and what shall make thee know what hell-fire is? It will not leave and will not let alone. It scorches the flesh; [30] over it are nineteen (angels).

We have made only angels guardians of the fire, and we have only made their number a trial to those who misbelieve; that those who have been given the Book may be certain, and that those who believe may be increased in faith; and that those who have been given the Book and the believers may not doubt; and that those in whose hearts is sickness, and the misbelievers may say, ‘What does God mean by this as a parable?’

Thus God leads astray whom He pleases, and guides him He pleases: and none knows the hosts of thy Lord save Himself; and it is only a reminder to mortals!

[35] Nay, by the moon!

And the night when it retires!

¹ The person meant is generally supposed to be Walîd ibn Mugâirah, one of the chiefs of the Qurâis.

And the morning when it brightly dawns!

Verily, it is one of the greatest misfortunes; a warning to mortals; [40] for him amongst you who wishes to press forward or to tarry!

Every soul is pledged¹ for what it earns; except the fellows of the right: in gardens shall they ask each other about the sinners!—'What drove you into hell-fire?'

They shall say, 'We weren't² of those who prayed; [45] we didn't feed the poor; but we did plunge into discussion with those who plunged, and we called the judgment day a lie until the certainty³ did come to us!'

But there shall not profit them the intercession of the intercessors.

[50] What ailed them that they turned away from the memorial as though they were timid asses fleeing from a lion?

Nay, every man of them wished that he might have given him books spread open!

Nay, but they did not fear the hereafter!

Nay, it is a memorial! and let him who will remember it; [55] but none will remember it except God please. He is most worthy of fear; and he is most worthy to forgive!

THE CHAPTER OF THE RESURRECTION.

(LXXV. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

I need not swear by the resurrection day!

¹ See Chapter LII, verse 21, p. 249, note 1.

² See Part I, p. 78, note 1.

³ I. e. death.

Nor need I swear by the self-accusing soul!

Does man think that we shall not collect his bones? Able are we to arrange his finger tips!

[5] Nay, but man wishes to be wicked henceforward! he asks, When is the resurrection day?

But when the sight shall be dazed, and the moon be eclipsed, and the sun and the moon be together, [10] and man shall say upon that day, 'Where is a place to flee to?'—nay, no refuge! and to thy Lord that day is the sure settlement: He will inform man on that day of what He has sent forward or delayed!

Nay, man is an evidence against himself, [15] and even if he thrusts forward his excuses—.

Do not move thy tongue thereby to hasten it¹. It is for us to collect it and to read it; and when we read it then follow its reading. And again it is for us to explain it.

[20] Nay, indeed, but ye love the transient life, and ye neglect the hereafter!

Faces on that day shall be bright, gazing on their Lord!

And faces on that day shall be dismal!

[25] Thou wilt think that a back-breaking calamity has happened to them!

Nay, but when the [soul] comes up into the throat, and it is said, 'Who will charm it back?' and he will think that it is his parting [hour]. And leg shall be pressed on leg²; [30] unto thy Lord on that day shall the driving be.

For he did not believe³ and did not pray; but ¹ I. e. the revelation; see p. 16, note 2, and p. 43, note 2. The words are addressed to Mohammed by the angel Gabriel.

² I. e. in the death struggle.

³ Or did not give in charity.

he said it was a lie, and turned his back! Then he went to his people haughtily—woe to thee, and woe to thee! again woe to thee, and woe to thee!

Does man think that he shall be left to himself?

Wasn't¹ he a clot of emitted seed? Then he was congealed blood, and (God) created him, and fashioned him, and made of him pairs, male and female.

[35] Is not He able to quicken the dead?

THE CHAPTER OF MAN.

(LXXVI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Does there not come on man a portion of time when he is nothing worth mentioning²?

Verily, we created man from a mingled clot, to try him; and we gave him hearing and sight. Verily, we guided him in the way, whether he be grateful or ungrateful.

Verily, we have prepared for those who misbelieve chains and fetters and a blaze!

[5] Verily, the righteous shall drink of a cup tempered with Kâfûr³, a spring from which God's servants shall drink and make it gush out as they please!

They who fulfil their vows, and fear a day, the evil which shall fly abroad, and who give food for His

¹ See Part I, p. 78, note 1.

² While in the womb.

³ Name of a river in Paradise, so called because it is white, cool, and sweet-smelling, as camphor is.

love to the poor and the orphan and the captive. 'We only feed you for God's sake; we desire not from you either reward or thanks; [10] we fear from our Lord a frowning, calamitous day!'

And God will guard them from the evil of that day and will cast on them brightness and joy; and their reward for their patience shall be Paradise and silk! reclining therein upon couches they shall neither see therein sun nor piercing cold¹; and close down upon them shall be its shadows; and lowered over them its fruits to cull; [15] and they shall be served round with vessels of silver and goblets that are as flagons—flagons of silver which they shall mete out! and they shall drink therein a cup tempered with Zingabil², a spring therein named Silsabil! and there shall go round about them eternal boys; when thou seest them thou wilt think them scattered pearls; [20] and when thou seest them thou shalt see pleasure and a great estate! On them shall be garments of green embroidered satin and brocade; and they shall be adorned with bracelets of silver; and their Lord shall give them to drink pure drink! Verily, this is a reward for you, and your efforts are thanked.

Verily, we have sent down upon thee the Qur'ân. Wherefore wait patiently for the judgment of thy Lord, and obey not any sinner or misbeliever amongst them. [25] But remember the name of thy Lord morning, and evening, and through the night, and adore Him, and celebrate His praises the whole night long.

¹ Zamharîr, the word here rendered 'piercing cold,' is by some authorities interpreted to mean 'the moon.'

² Zingabil signifies 'ginger.'

Verily, these love the transitory life, and leave behind them a heavy day!

We created them and strengthened their joints; and if we please we can exchange for the likes of them in their stead. Verily, this is a memorial, and whoso will, let him take unto his Lord a way.

[30] But ye will not please except God please! Verily, God is knowing, wise.

He makes whomsoever He pleases to enter into His mercy; but the unjust He has prepared for them a grievous woe!

THE CHAPTER OF THOSE SENT.

(LXXVII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

By those sent in a series¹!

And by those who speed swiftly!

And by the dispensers abroad!

And by the separators apart!

[5] And by those who instil the reminder, as an excuse or warning!

Verily, what ye are threatened with shall surely happen!

And when the stars shall be erased!

And when the heaven shall be cleft!

[10] And when the mountains shall be winnowed!

And when the apostles shall have a time appointed for them!

¹ Either angels or winds, or as some interpret the passage, the verses of the Qur'ân.

For what day is the appointment made ?

For the day of decision ! and what shall make thee know what the decision is ?

[15] Woe on that day for those who say it is a lie !

Have we not destroyed those of yore, and then followed them up with those of the latter day ?
Thus do we with the sinners.

Woe on that day for those who say it is a lie !

[20] Did we not create you from contemptible water, and place it in a sure depository unto a certain decreed term ? for we are able and well able too !

Woe on that day for those who say it is a lie !

[25] Have we not made for them the earth to hold the living and the dead ? and set thereon firm mountains reared aloft ? and given you to drink water in streams ?

Woe on that day for those who say it is a lie !

Go off to that which ye did call a lie ! [30] Go off to the shadow of three columns, that shall not shade nor avail against the flame ! Verily, it throws off sparks like towers,—as though they were yellow camels !

Woe on that day for those who say it is a lie !

[35] This is the day when they may not speak,—when they are not permitted to excuse themselves !

Woe on that day for those who say it is a lie !

This is the day of decision ! We have assembled you with those of yore ; if ye have any stratagem employ it now !

[40] Woe on that day for those who say it is a lie !

Verily, the pious are amid shades and springs and fruit such as they love.—‘Eat and drink with good digestion, for that which ye have done!’

 Verily, thus do we reward those who do well.
 [45] Woe on that day for those who say it is a lie!
 ‘Eat and enjoy yourselves for a little; verily, ye are sinners!’
 Woe on that day for those who say it is a lie!
 And when it is said to them bow down, they bow not down.
 Woe on that day for those who say it is a lie!
 [50] And in what new discourse after it will they believe?

THE CHAPTER OF THE INFORMATION.

(LXXVIII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Of what do they ask each other?—Of the mighty information whereon they do dispute¹? nay, they shall know too well! [5] Again, nay, they shall know too well!

Have we not set the earth as a couch, and the mountains as stakes, and created you in pairs, and made your sleep for rest, [10] and made the night a garment, and made the day for livelihood, and built above you seven solid (heavens) and set a burning lamp, and sent down from the rain expressing clouds water pouring forth, [15] to bring out thereby the grain and herb and gardens thickly planted?

¹ I. e. the news of the resurrection.

Verily, the day of decision is an appointed time; and the day when the trumpet shall be blown, and ye shall come in troops, and the heavens shall be opened, and shall be all doors, [20] and the mountains shall be moved, and shall be like a mirage!

Verily, hell is an ambuscade; a reward for the outrageous, to tarry therein for ages. They shall not taste therein cool nor drink, [25] but only boiling water and pus;—a fit reward!

Verily, they did not hope for the account; but they ever said our signs were lies.

Everything have we remembered in a book.

[30] 'Then taste, for we will only increase your torment!'

Verily, for the pious is a blissful place,—gardens and vineyards, and girls with swelling breasts of the same age as themselves, and a brimming cup; [35] they shall hear therein no folly and no lie;—a reward from thy Lord, a sufficient gift! The Lord of the heavens and the earth, and what is between them both,—the Merciful,—they cannot obtain audience of Him!

The day when the Spirit and the angels shall stand in ranks, they shall not speak save to whom the Merciful permits, and who speaks aright.

That is the true day; and whoso pleases let him take to a resort unto his Lord!

[40] Verily, we have warned you of a torment that is nigh: on a day when man shall see what his two hands have sent forward; and the misbeliever shall say, 'Would that I were dust!'

THE CHAPTER OF THOSE WHO TEAR OUT.

(LXXIX. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

By those who tear out violently!
 And by those who gaily release¹
 And by those who float through the air!
 And the preceders who precede²!

[5] And those who manage the affair!

On the day when the quaking³ quakes which the following one shall succeed! Hearts on that day shall tremble; eyes thereon be humbled!

[10] They say, 'Shall we be sent back to our old course?—What! when we are rotten bones?' they say, 'That then were a losing return!'

But it will only be one scare, and lo! they will be on the surface!

[15] Has the story of Moses⁴ come to you? when his Lord addressed him in the holy valley of Tuvâ, 'Go unto Pharaoh, verily, he is outrageous; and say, "Hast thou a wish to purify thyself, and that I may guide thee to thy Lord, and thou mayest fear?"'

[20] So he showed him the greatest sign; but

¹ Referring to the angel of death and his assistants, who tear away the souls of the wicked violently, and gently release the souls of the good.

² The angels who precede the souls of the righteous to Paradise.

³ The trumpet blast at the last day, which shall make the universe quake.

⁴ See Chapter XX, verse 12, p. 35.

he called him a liar and rebelled. Then he retreated hastily, and gathered, and proclaimed, and said, 'I am your Lord most High!' [25] but God seized him with the punishment of the future life and of the former.

Verily, in that is a lesson to him who fears!

Are ye harder to create or the heaven that He has built? He raised its height and fashioned it; and made its night to cover it, and brought forth its noonday light; [30] and the earth after that He did stretch out. He brings forth from it its water and its pasture.

And the mountains He did firmly set, a provision for you and for your cattle.

And when the great predominant calamity shall come, [35] on the day when man shall remember what he strove after, and hell shall be brought out for him who sees!

And as for him who was outrageous and preferred the life of this world, verily, hell is the resort!

[40] But as for him who feared the station of his Lord, and prohibited his soul from lust, verily, Paradise is the resort!

They shall ask thee about the Hour, for when it is set. Whereby canst thou mention it? Unto thy Lord its period belongs.

[45] Thou art only a warner to him who fears it.

On the day they see it, it will be as though they had only tarried an evening or the noon thereof.

THE CHAPTER 'He FROWNED.'

(LXXX. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

He frowned and turned his back, for that there came to him a blind man¹!

But what should make thee know whether haply he may be purified? or may be mindful and the reminder profit him?

[5] But as for him who is wealthy, thou dost attend to him; and thou dost not care that he is not purified; but as for him who comes to thee earnestly fearing the while, [10] from him thou art diverted!

Nay! verily, it is a memorial; and whoso pleases will remember it.

In honoured pages exalted, purified, [15] in the hands of noble, righteous scribes!

May man be killed! how ungrateful he is!

Of what did He create him? Of a clot. He created him and fated him; [20] then the path He did make easy for him; then He killed him, and laid him in the tomb; then when He pleases will He raise him up again.

¹ One Abdallah ibn Umm Maktûm, a poor blind man, once interrupted Mohammed while the latter was in conversation with Walîd ibn Mughâirah and some others of the Qurâis chiefs. The prophet taking no notice of him, the blind man raised his voice and earnestly begged for religious instruction, but Mohammed, annoyed at the interruption, frowned and turned away. This passage is a reprimand to the prophet for his conduct on the occasion. Afterwards, whenever he saw the blind Abdallah, Mohammed used to say, 'Welcome to him on whose account my Lord reproved me!' and subsequently made him governor of Medînah.

Nay, he has not fulfilled his bidding!

But let man look unto his foods. [25] Verily, we have poured the water out in torrents : then we have cleft the earth asunder, and made to grow therefrom the grain, and the grape, and the hay, and the olive, and the palm, [30] and gardens closely planted, and fruits, and grass,—a provision for you and for your cattle!

But when the stunning noise shall come, on the day when man shall flee from his brother [35] and his mother and his father and his spouse and his sons! Every man among them on that day shall have a business to employ him.

Faces on that day shall be bright,—laughing, joyous! [40] and faces shall have dust upon them,—darkness shall cover them! those are the wicked misbelievers!

THE CHAPTER OF THE FOLDING UP.

(LXXXI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.
When the sun is folded up,
And when the stars do fall,
And when the mountains are moved,
And when the she-camels ten months' gone with young shall be neglected¹,
[5] And when the beasts shall be crowded together²,

¹ Such camels being among the most valuable of an Arab's possessions, neglect of them must imply some terribly engrossing calamity.

² The terrors of the judgment day will drive all the wild beasts together for mutual shelter.

And when the seas shall surge up,
And when souls shall be paired with bodies,
And when the child who was buried alive shall be asked for what sin she was slain¹,

[10] And when the pages shall be spread out,
And when the heaven shall be flayed,
And when hell shall be set ablaze,
And when Paradise shall be brought nigh,
The soul shall know what it has produced !

[15] I need not swear by the stars that slink back, moving swiftly, slinking into their dens !
Nor by the night when darkness draws on !
Nor by the morn when it first breathes up !
Verily, it is the speech of a noble apostle, [20] mighty, standing sure with the Lord of the throne, obeyed and trusty too !

Your comrade is not mad; he saw him² on the plain horizon³, nor does he grudge to communicate the unseen⁴.

[25] Nor is it the speech of a pelted devil⁵.

Then whither do ye go ?

It is but a reminder to the worlds, to whomsoever of you pleases to go straight :—but ye will not please, except God, the Lord of the world, should please.

¹ See Part I, p. 132, note 3, and p. 256, note 2. See also Introduction, p. x.

² Gabriel.

³ See Chapter LIII, verses 1-19, pp. 251, 252.

⁴ Some copies have a various reading, 'suspicious of.'

⁵ See Part I, note 2, pp. 50, 51.

THE CHAPTER OF THE CLEAVING ASUNDER.

(LXXXII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.
When the heaven is cleft asunder,
And when the stars are scattered,
And when the seas gush together,
And when the tombs are turned upside down,

✓ [5] The soul shall know what it has sent on or kept back!

O man! what has seduced thee concerning thy generous Lord, who created thee, and fashioned thee, and gave thee symmetry, and in what form He pleased composed thee?

Nay, but ye call the judgment a lie! [10] but over you are guardians set¹,—noble, writing down!
they know what ye do!

Verily, the righteous are in pleasure, and, verily, the wicked are in hell; [15] they shall broil therein upon the judgment day; nor shall they be absent therefrom!

And what shall make thee know what is the judgment day? Again, what shall make thee know what is the judgment day? a day when no soul shall control aught for another; and the bidding on that day belongs to God!

THE CHAPTER OF THOSE WHO GIVE SHORT WEIGHT.

(LXXXIII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate
God.

Woe to those who give short weight! who when they measure against others take full measure; but when they measure to them or weigh to them, diminish!

¹ See p. 243, note 1.

Do not these think that they shall be raised again [5] at the mighty day? the day when men shall stand before the Lord of the worlds!

Nay, verily, the book of the wicked is in Siggîn¹; and what shall make thee know what Siggîn is?—a book inscribed!

[10] Woe on that day for those who say it is a lie!

Who call the judgment day a lie! but none shall call it a lie except every sinful transgressor, who, when our signs are read to him, says, 'Old folks' tales!'

Nay, but that which they have gained has settled upon their hearts.

Nay, verily, [15] from their Lord on that day are they veiled; and then, verily, they shall broil in hell; then it shall be said, 'This is what ye once did call a lie!'

Nay, verily, the book of the righteous is in 'Illyûn²; and what shall make thee know what 'Illyûn is?—[20] a book inscribed! those nigh to God shall witness it.

Verily, the righteous shall be in pleasure; upon couches shall they gaze; thou mayest recognise in their faces the brightness of pleasure; [25] they shall be given to drink wine that is sealed, whose seal is musk; for that then let the aspirants aspire!

¹ Siggîn, the 'prison' of hell, whence the register of the wicked is named.

² 'Illyûn means 'high places.'

—and it shall be tempered with Tasnīm¹,—a spring from which those nigh to God shall drink.

Verily, those who sin do laugh at those who believe; [30] and when they pass by they wink at one another, and when they return to their family they return ridiculing them; and when they see them they say, 'Verily, these do go astray!'—but they are not sent as guardians over them!

But to-day those who believe shall at the misbelievers laugh! [35] Upon couches shall they gaze; are the misbelievers rewarded for what they have done?

THE CHAPTER OF THE RENDING ASUNDER.

(LXXXIV. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

When the heaven is rent asunder and gives ear unto its Lord, and is dutiful!

And when the earth is stretched out and casts forth what is in it, and is empty, [5] and gives ear unto its Lord, and is dutiful!

O man! verily, thou art toiling after thy Lord, toiling; wherefore shalt thou meet Him!

And as for him who is given his book in his right hand, he shall be reckoned with by an easy reckoning; and he shall go back to his family joyfully.

[10] But as for him who is given his book behind his back², he shall call out for destruction, but he

¹ Name of a fountain in Paradise, so called because it is conveyed to the highest apartments there.

² I. e. in the left hand, which will be chained behind the back, the right hand being fettered to the neck.

shall broil in a blaze ! Verily, he was amongst his family joyful. Verily, he thought that he should never return to God.

[15] Yea, verily, his Lord on him did look !

I need not swear by the evening glow,

Or by the night, and what it drives together,

Or by the moon when it is at its full,

[Ye shall be surely transferred from state to state!¹]

[20] What ails them that they do not believe ?

and, when the Qur'ân is read to them, do not adore ?

Nay, those who misbelieve do say it is a lie, but God knows best the (malice) that they hide.

So give them the glad tidings of grievous woe !

[25] save those who believe and act aright, for them is hire that is not grudged !

THE CHAPTER OF THE ZODIACAL SIGNS.

(LXXXV. Mecca.)

In the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

By the heaven with its zodiacal signs² !

And the promised day !

And the witness and the witnessed³ !

The fellows of the pit were slain ;

[5] And the fire with its kindling,

When they sat over it

And witnessed the while what they were doing with those who believed⁴.

¹ From life to death, and from death to the future life.

² Literally, 'towers.'

³ Various interpretations are given of these words, the most probable perhaps being that 'the witness' is Mohammed, and 'the witnessed' the faith.

⁴ Alluding to the persecution of the Christians at Negrân by

And they took not vengeance on them save for their belief in God,
 The mighty, the praiseworthy,
 Whose is the kingdoms of the heavens and the earth ;
 For God is witness over all !

[10] Verily, those who make trial of the believers, men and women, and then do not repent, for them is the torment of hell, and for them is the torment of the burning !

Verily, those who believe and act aright, for them are gardens beneath which rivers flow,—that is the great bliss !

[Verily, the violence of thy Lord is keen !]

Verily, He produces and returns, and He is the forgiving, the loving, [15] the Lord of the glorious throne ; the doer of what He will !

Has there come to thee the story of the hosts of Pharaoh and Thamûd ?

Nay, those who misbelieve do say it is a lie ;
 [20] but God is behind them—encompassing !

Nay, it is a glorious Qur'ân in a preserved tablet¹.

THE CHAPTER OF THE NIGHT STAR.

(LXXXVI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate
 God.

By the heaven and by the night star ! And what

Dhu 'n Navvâs, king of Yemen, who had embraced the Jewish religion, and who commanded all his subjects who would not do the same to be flung into a pit filled with fire, and burnt to death.

¹ See Part I, p. 2, note 2.

shall make thee know what the night star is?—The star of piercing brightness.

Verily, every soul has a guardian over it.

[5] Then let man look from what he is created : he is created from water poured forth, that comes out from between the loins and the breast bones¹.

Verily, He is able to send him back again, on the day when the secrets shall be tried, [10] and he shall have no strength nor helper.

By the heaven that sends back the rain !

And the earth with its sprouting !

Verily, it is indeed a distinguishing speech, and it is no frivolity !

[15] Verily, they do plot a plot !

But I plot my plot too ! let the misbelievers bide ; do thou then let them bide awhile !

THE CHAPTER OF THE MOST HIGH.

(LXXXVII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Celebrated the name of thy Lord most High, who created and fashioned, and who decreed and guided, and who brings forth the pasture, [5] and then makes it dusky stubble !

We will make thee recite, and thou shalt not forget², save what God pleases. Verily, He knows the open and what is concealed ; and we will send thee easily to ease; wherefore remind, for, verily, the reminder is useful.

¹ From the loins of the man and the breast bones of the woman.—Al Bâidhâvî.

² See Chapter II, verse 100, Part I, p. 14.

[10] But he who fears will be mindful; but the wretch will avoid it; he who will broil on the great fire, and then therein shall neither die nor live!

Prosperous is he who purifies himself, [15] and remembers the name of his Lord and prays!

Nay! but ye prefer the life of this world, while the hereafter is better and more lasting.

Verily, this was in the books of yore,—the books of Abraham and Moses.

THE CHAPTER OF THE OVERWHELMING¹.

(LXXXVIII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Has there come to thee the story of the overwhelming?

Faces on that day shall be humble, labouring, toiling,—shall broil upon a burning fire; [5] shall be given to drink from a boiling spring! no food shall they have save from the foul thorn, which shall not fatten nor avail against hunger!

Faces on that day shall be comfortable, content with their past endeavours,—[10] in a lofty garden wherein they shall hear no foolish word; wherein is a flowing fountain; wherein are couches raised on high, and goblets set down, [15] and cushions arranged, and carpets spread!

¹ Another name of the last day.

Do they not look then at the camel how she is created¹?

And at the heaven how it is reared?

And at the mountains how they are set up?

[20] And at the earth how it is spread out?

But remind: thou art only one to remind; thou art not in authority over them; except such as turns his back and misbelieves, for him will God torment with the greatest torment.

[25] Verily, unto us is their return, and, verily, for us is their account!

THE CHAPTER OF THE DAWN.

(LXXXIX. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

By the dawn and ten nights²!

And the single and the double!

And the night when it travels on!

Is there in that an oath for a man of sense?

[5] Hast thou not seen how thy Lord did with 'Âd?—with Iram of the columns³? the like of which has not been created in the land?

¹ So useful an animal as a camel being to an Arab a singular instance of divine wisdom.

² The first ten nights of the sacred months of Dhu 'l Heggeh.

³ Sheddâd, the son of 'Âd, is related to have ordered the construction of a terrestrial paradise in the desert of Aden, ostensibly in rivalry of the celestial one, and to have called it Irem, after the name of his great-grandfather Irem (Aram). On going to take possession of it, he and all his people were struck dead by a noise from heaven, and the paradise disappeared. Certain Arab travellers are declared to have come across this mysterious garden.

And Thamûd when they hewed the stones in the valley?

And Pharaoh of the stakes¹?

[10] Who were outrageous in the land, and did multiply wickedness therein, and thy Lord poured out upon them the scourge of torment.

Verily, thy Lord is on a watch tower! and as for man, whenever his Lord tries him and honours him and grants him favour, then [15] he says, 'My Lord has honoured me;' but whenever he tries him and doles out to him his subsistence, then he says, 'My Lord despises me!'

Nay, but ye do not honour the orphan, nor do ye urge each other to feed the poor, [20] and ye devour the inheritance (of the weak) with a general devouring², and ye love wealth with a complete love!

Nay, when the earth is crushed to pieces, and thy Lord comes with the angels, rank on rank, and hell is brought on that day,—on that day shall man be reminded! but how shall he have a reminder?

[25] He will say, 'Would that I had sent something forward for my life!'

But on that day no one shall be tormented with a torment like his, and none shall be bound with bonds like his!

O thou comforted soul! return unto thy Lord, well pleased and well pleased with!

And enter amongst my servants, [30] and enter my Paradise!

¹ Cf. p. 176, note 1.

² Cf. Part I, p. 72, note 1.

THE CHAPTER OF THE LAND.

(XC. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

I need not swear by the Lord of this land¹, and thou a dweller in this land²!

Nor by the begetter and what he begets!

We have surely created man in trouble.

[5] Does he think that none can do aught against him?

He says, 'I have wasted wealth in plenty;' does he think that no one sees him?

Have we not made for him two eyes and a tongue, and two lips? [10] and guided him in the two highways? but he will not attempt the steep!

And what shall make thee know what the steep is? It is freeing captives, or feeding on the day of famine, [15] an orphan who is akin, or a poor man who lies in the dust; and again (it is) to be of these who believe and encourage each other to patience, and encourage each other to mercy,—these are the fellows of the right³!

But those who disbelieve in our signs, they are the fellows of the left, [20] for them is fire that closes in!

¹ I. e. the sacred territory of Mecca.

² Or, 'art at liberty to act as thou pleasest.'

³ See pp. 263, 264.

THE CHAPTER OF THE SUN.

(XCI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.
By the sun and its noonday brightness!
And the moon when it follows him!
And the day when it displays him!
And the night when it covers him!
[5] And the heaven and what built it!
And the earth and what spread it!
And the soul and what fashioned it, and taught it its sin and its piety!
Prosperous is he who purifies it!

[10] And disappointed is he who corrupts it!

Thamûd called the apostle a liar¹ in their outrage, when their wretch rose up and the apostle of God said to them, 'God's she-camel! so give her to drink.'

But they called him a liar, and they ham-strung her; but their Lord destroyed them in their sins, and served them all alike; [15] and He fears not the result thereof!

THE CHAPTER OF THE NIGHT.

(XCII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.
By the night when it veils!
And the day when it is displayed!
And by what created male and female!
Verily, your efforts are diverse!

¹ See Part I, p. 147, note 1.

[5] But as for him who gives alms and fears God,
And believes in the best,
We will send him easily to ease !
But as for him who is niggardly,
And longs for wealth,
And calls the good a lie,
[10] We will send him easily to difficulty !
And his wealth shall not avail him
When he falls down (into hell) !
Verily, it is for us to guide ;
And, verily, ours are the hereafter and the former life !
And I have warned you of a fire that flames !
[15] None shall broil thereon, but the most wretched, who says it is a lie and turns his back.
But the pious shall be kept away from it, he who gives his wealth in alms, and who gives no favour to any one for the sake of reward, [20] but only craving the face of his Lord most High ; in the end he shall be well pleased !

THE CHAPTER OF THE FORENOON.

(XCIII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate
God.

By the forenoon !

And the night when it darkens !

Thy Lord has not forsaken thee, nor hated thee !
and surely the hereafter is better for thee than the former ; [5] and in the end thy Lord will give thee, and thou shalt be well pleased !

Did He not find thee an orphan, and give thee shelter? and find thee erring, and guide thee? and find thee poor with a family, and nourish thee?

But as for the orphan oppress him not; [10] and as for the beggar drive him not away; and as for the favour of thy Lord discourse thereof.

THE CHAPTER OF 'HAVE WE NOT EXPANDED?'

(XCIV. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Have we not expanded for thee thy breast¹? and set down from thee thy load which galled thy back? and exalted for thee thy renown?

[5] Verily, with difficulty is ease! verily, with difficulty is ease!

And when thou art at leisure then toil, and for thy Lord do thou yearn!

THE CHAPTER OF THE FIG.

(XCV. Place of origin doubtful.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

By the fig!

And by the olive!

¹ I.e. expanded it for the reception of the truth. Taking the words literally some Muslims have supposed it to refer to the legend, that the angel Gabriel appeared to Mohammed while he was a child, and having cut open his breast took out his heart, and cleansed it from the black drop of original sin. This explanation is, however, rejected by the more sensible of the orthodox Muslim divines.

And by Mount Sinai!

And by this safe land¹!

We have indeed created man in the best of symmetry. [5] Then we will send him back the lowest of the low; save those who believe and act aright; for theirs is a hire that is not grudged.

But what shall make thee call the judgment after this a lie?

Is not God a most just of judges?

THE CHAPTER OF CONGEALED BLOOD².

(XCVI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

READ, in the name of thy Lord!

Who created man from congealed blood!

Read, for thy Lord is most generous!

[5] Who taught the pen!

Taught man what he did not know!

Nay, verily, man is indeed outrageous at seeing himself get rich!

Verily, unto thy Lord is the return!

Hast thou considered him who forbids [10] a servant³ when he prays⁴?

¹ Alluding to the inviolable character of the sacred territory of Mecca.

² The five opening verses of the chapter are generally allowed to have been the first that were revealed. See Introduction, p. xx, and note 1, idem.

³ I. e. Mohammed.

⁴ The allusion is to Abu Gahl, who threatened to set his foot on Mohammed's neck if he caught him in the act of adoration.

Hast thou considered if he were in guidance or bade piety?

Hast thou considered if he said it was a lie, and turned his back?

Did he not know that God can see?

[15] Nay, surely, if he do not desist we will drag him by the forelock!—the lying sinful forelock!

So let him call his counsel: we will call the guards of hell!

Nay, obey him not, but adore and draw nigh!

THE CHAPTER OF POWER¹.

(XCVII. Place of origin doubtful.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Verily, we sent it down on the Night of Power!

And what shall make thee know what the Night of Power is?—the Night of Power is better than a thousand months!

The angels and the Spirit descend therein, by the permission of their Lord with every bidding.

[5] Peace it is until rising of the dawn!

THE CHAPTER OF THE MANIFEST SIGN.

(XCVIII. Place of origin doubtful.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Those of the people of the Book and the idolaters

¹ The word el Qadr signifies 'power,' 'worth,' 'measure,' and 'the divine decree.'

who misbelieve did not fall off until there came to them the manifest sign,—

An apostle from God reading pure pages wherein are right scriptures :

Nor did those who were given the Book divide into sects until after there came to them the manifest sign.

But they were not bidden aught but to worship God, being sincere in religion unto Him as 'Hanîfs, and to be steadfast in prayer, and to give alms : for that is the standard religion.

[5] Verily, those who disbelieve amongst the people of the Book and the idolaters shall be in the fire of hell, to dwell therein for aye ; they are wretched creatures !

Verily, those who believe and act aright, they are the best of creatures ; their reward with their Lord is gardens of Eden, beneath which rivers flow, to dwell therein for aye ; God shall be well pleased with them, and they with Him ! that is for him who fears his Lord !

THE CHAPTER OF THE EARTHQUAKE.

(XCIX. Place of origin doubtful.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

When the earth shall quake with its quaking !

And the earth shall bring forth her burdens, and man shall say, 'What ails her !'

On that day she shall tell her tidings, [5] because thy Lord inspires her.

On the day when men shall come up in separate bands to show their works: and he who does the weight of an atom of good shall see it! and he who does the weight of an atom of evil shall see it!

THE CHAPTER OF THE CHARGERS.

(C. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

By the snorting chargers!

And those who strike fire with their hoofs!

And those who make incursions in the morning,

And raise up dust therein,

[5] And cleave through a host therein!

Verily, man is to his Lord ungrateful; and, verily, he is a witness of that.

Verily, he is keen in his love of good.

Does he not know when the tombs are exposed,
[10] and what is in the breasts is brought to light?

Verily, thy Lord upon that day indeed is well aware.

THE CHAPTER OF THE SMITING.

(CI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

The smiting!

What is the smiting?

And what shall make thee know what the smiting is?

The day when men shall be like scattered moths;
and the mountains shall be like flocks of carded wool!

[5] And as for him whose balance is heavy, he shall be in a well-pleasing life.

But as for him whose balance is light, his dwelling shall be the pit of hell¹.

And who shall make thee know what it is?—a burning fire!

THE CHAPTER OF THE CONTENTION ABOUT NUMBERS.

(CII. Place of origin doubtful.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

The contention about numbers deludes you till ye visit the tombs²!

Not so! In the end ye shall know! And again not so! In the end ye shall know!

[5] Not so! Did ye but know with certain knowledge!

Ye shall surely see hell! And again ye shall surely see it with an eye of certainty.

Then ye shall surely be asked about pleasure³!

THE CHAPTER OF THE AFTERNOON⁴.

(CIII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

By the afternoon! verily, man is in loss! save

¹ El Hâwiyeh, see Introduction, p. lxx.

² The commentators say that in one of the frequent contentions about the respective nobility of the Arab tribes, that the Abu Menaf clan disputed with that of Sahm, which was the most numerous, and the latter, having lost many men in battle, declared that their dead should be taken into account as well as the living.

³ That is, the pleasures of this life.

⁴ Or, 'the age.'

those who believe and do right, and bid each other be true, and bid each other be patient.

THE CHAPTER OF THE BACKBITER.

(CIV. Mecca.)

In the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Woe to every slanderous backbiter, who collects wealth and counts it.

He thinks that his wealth can immortalize him.

Not so! he shall be hurled into El 'Hu'amah!

[5] And what shall make thee understand what El 'Hu'amah¹ is?—the fire of God kindled; which rises above the hearts. Verily, it is an archway over them on long-drawn columns.

THE CHAPTER OF THE ELEPHANT.

(CV. Mecca.)

In the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Hast thou not seen what thy Lord did with the fellows of the elephant²?

Did He not make their stratagem lead them astray, and send down on them birds in flocks, to throw down on them stones of baked clay, [5] and make them like blades of herbage eaten down?

¹ See Introduction, p. lxx.

² Abrahat el Asram, an Abyssinian Christian, and viceroy of the king of Sanaa in Yemen in the year in which Mohammed was born, marched with a large army and some elephants upon Mecca, with the intention of destroying the Kaabah. He was defeated and his army destroyed in so sudden a manner as to have given rise to the

THE CHAPTER OF THE QURÂIS.

(CVI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

For the uniting of the Qurâis; uniting them for the caravan of winter and summer.

So let them serve the Lord of this house who feeds them against hunger and makes them safe against fear¹.

THE CHAPTER OF 'NECESSARIES.'

(CVII. Place of origin doubtful.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Hast thou considered him who calls the judgment a lie? He it is who pushes the orphan away; and urges not (others) to feed the poor.

But woe to those who pray [5] and who are careless in their prayers,

Who pretend and withhold necessities².

THE CHAPTER OF EL KÂUTHAR.

(CVIII. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Verily, we have given thee El Kâuthar³; legend embodied in the text. It is conjectured that small-pox broke out amongst his men.

¹ See Introduction, p. xvi. Some connect the first sentence with the last chapter.

² Or, 'alms.' The word might be rendered 'resources.'

³ The word signifies 'abundance.' It is also the name of a river in Paradise.

So pray to thy Lord and slaughter (victims).
Verily, he who hates thee shall be childless¹.

THE CHAPTER OF MISBELIEVERS.

(CIX. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Say, 'O ye misbelievers! I do not serve what ye serve; nor will ye serve what I serve; nor will I serve what ye serve; [5] nor will ye serve what I serve;—ye have your religion, and I have my religion!'

THE CHAPTER OF HELP.

(CX. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

When there comes God's help and victory,
And thou shalt see men enter into God's religion
by troops,

Then celebrate the praises of thy Lord, and ask forgiveness of Him, verily, He is relentant!

THE CHAPTER OF ABU LAHEB².

(CXI. Mecca.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Abu Laheb's two hands shall perish, and he shall perish!

¹ This is directed against Âs ibn Wail, who, when Mohammed's son El Qâsim died, called him a btar, which means 'docktailed,' i.e. childless.

² See Introduction, p. xxviii. Abu Laheb, 'the father of the flame,'

His wealth shall not avail him, nor what he has earned !

He shall broil in a fire that flames¹, and his wife carrying faggots !—[5] on her neck a cord of palm fibres.

THE CHAPTER OF UNITY².

(CXII. Place of origin doubtful.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Say, 'He is God alone !

God the Eternal !

He begets not and is not begotten !

Nor is there like unto Him any one !'

THE CHAPTER OF THE DAYBREAK.

(CXIII. Place of origin doubtful.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Say, 'I seek refuge in the Lord of the daybreak, from the evil of what He has created ; and from the evil of the night when it cometh on³; and from the evil of the blowers upon knots⁴; [5] and from the evil of the envious when he envies.'

was the nickname of 'Abd el 'Huzzâ, uncle of Mohammed, and a bitter opponent of Islâm.

¹ A pun upon his name.

² The chapter is generally known in Arabic by the name of El I'hlâs, 'clearing oneself,' i. e. of belief in any but one God.

³ Or, according to a traditional explanation given by the prophet to 'Âyeshah, 'the moon when it is eclipsed.'

⁴ Witches who make knots in string and blow upon them, uttering at the same time some magical formula and the name of the persons they wish to injure.

THE CHAPTER OF MEN.

(CXIV. Place of origin doubtful.)

IN the name of the merciful and compassionate God.

Say, 'I seek refuge in the Lord of men, the King of men, the God of men, from the evil of the whisperer¹, who slinks off, [5] who whispers into the hearts of men!—from ginns and men!'

¹ The devil.

INDEX.

- (al) Aarâf, bridge of, Int. p. lxix; Part I, p. 143; Part II, p. 32 note 1.
- Aaron, I, 38, 94, 125, 152, 154, 201; II, 29 n, 36, 39, 41, 50, 51, 68, 86, 91, 92, 110, 172, 240 n.
- Abbâs, xxxii, xli, xlii.
- 'Abd ad Dar, xvii, xviii.
- 'Abdallah ibn Sa'hd ibn Abî Sar'h, Mohammed's secretary, lvii; I, 126 n.
- 'Abdallah ibn Ubai, xxxv.
- 'Abdallah ibn Ubbai, chief of the 'Hypocrites,' lxiii; II, 74 n 2, 77 n 4, 284 n.
- Abdallah ibn Umm Maktûm, II, 320 n.
- 'Abd al 'Hareth, one of Adam's sons, I, 161 n 1.
- 'Abd al Huzzâ, lx; II, 344 n.
- 'Abd al Muz'alib, xvii, xviii.
- 'Abd ar Rahmân ibn Auf, xxiii.
- 'Abd Menâf, xvii, xviii.
- clan of, II, 341 n.
- 'Abd Shems, xviii.
- Abraham, xiii, xvi, xlvii, I, liii, lxxiv; I, 17, 18, 19, 40, 40 n 3, 41, 50, 50 n 2, 54, 57, 58, 59, 80, 90, 94, 125, 133 n 1, 137, 183, 189, 212, 213, 219, 223, 242, 247, 263; II, 30, 31, 65, 93, 120, 124, 139, 179, 206, 246, 253, 269, 278, 329.
- is cast into the fiery furnace, II, 171, 172.
- station of, xvi, xvii, lxxiv.
- surnamed, 'Halîla 'llâh, the Friend of God, lxxi.
- Abrahat al Arram, II, 341 n.
- attacks the Kaabah, II, 341 n.
- Abrogation of verses, lvii.
- Abu'l 'Abbas, I, 175.
- Abu Bekr, xix, xxiii, xxiv, xxv, xxxiii, xlv, xlv; I, 68 n 1.
- hides with Mohammed in a cave, lvii; I, 179 n 1; II, 75 n 1.
- Abu Gahl, xxxiii; II, 300, 336 n.
- challenges Mohammed to cause a portion of the heavens to fall on the Qurâis, II, 300 n.
- Abu 'Hâmîr, I, 188 n 1.
- Abu Laheb, xxix, lx; II, 144, 343.
- Abu Sufiyân, xxxv, xxxvii; I, 164 n 1.
- Abu Tâlib, xviii, xxiv, xxv, xxviii, xxix, xli, xlii.
- Abyssinia, xxvi, xxvii, xl; I, 214 n 3; II, 341 n.
- 'Âd, xlviii; I, 145, 146, 183, 210, 211, 239; II, 61, 86, 95, 121, 176, 193, 200, 227, 242, 247, 254, 256, 298, 330.
- Adam, I, 5 n, 50, 54, 101, 138, 139, 140; II, 8, 9, 19, 31, 43, 44.
- children of, I, 141, 159, 161 n 1.
- Adam, Zaffy allâh, the Chosen of God, lxxi.
- Adrian, persecution of, xv.
- Æsop. See Loqmân.
- A'hmed, prophecy of, xlix; II, 281.
- A'bnas ibn Surâiq ⲉⲩⲏⲛ ⲧⲏⲁⲕⲁⲩⲓ, I, 29 n 3.
- (al) A'hqâf, II, 227.
- chapter of, II, 224.
- Akabeh, xxxi.
- pledge given at, by a deputation from the inhabitants of Medinah, xxxii; I, 9 n 1, 98 n 1.
- Al 'asmâ'u l'husnâ, II, 13 n 1.
- Alexander the Great, his prime minister, II, 23 n 3.
- 'Ali ibn Ali Tâlib, xxxiii; II, 74 n 2, 143.
- Allâh, xii, xiii, xiv, xxiv, lxv, lxvi; I, 132 n 2; II, 13 n 1.
- meaning of name, lxvi.
- Allâh ta'âlah, xii, lxvi.
- Allâhu akbar, II, 13 n 2.
- Allât, xii, xiii, xxvii, xliii; I, 160 n 1; II, 9 n 1, 62 n 1, 252.
- Alms, lxxi, lxxiii; I, 180, 181.
- Amanuensis, employed by Mohammed, lvii.
- Amînah, Mohammed's mother, xviii.
- Amînah, one of Solomon's concubines, II, 178 n.
- 'Amr, xli.
- Amram, I, 50, n 1.
- 'Amr ibn La'hy, xvii.

- Angel of death, II, 136.
 — fallen, xiv.
 Angels, lii, lxxviii, lxx; I, 161 n 1, 164, 169; II, 139, 145, 155, 168, 174, 181, 200, 205, 232, 245, 252, 300, 315, 317.
 — chapter of, II, 157.
 — 'daughters of God,' xiii, lxi; I, 256 n 2.
 — guardian, I, 233.
 — recording, I, 195 n 1.
 Ant, chapter of, II, 99.
 Antichrist, lxxi; I, 94 n 2.
 Antioch, II, 164 n.
 Antistes, I, 17 n 1.
 Apes, Sabbath-breakers turned into, I, 9.
 Apostle of the Gentiles, I, 156 n 1.
 Apostles, the twelve, II, 282.
 Arab orators, I.
 Arab writers, I, 257 n 1.
 Arabia, I, 191 n 1; II, 263.
 — boundaries of, ix.
 Arabian prophets, I, 159 n 1.
 Arabs, I, 256 n 2; II, 13 n 1.
 — ancient, I, 27, 40 n, 48, 64 n, 79, 176 n 1.
 — — beacon fires, I, 106 n 1.
 — — character, x.
 — — Christian tribes, xiv.
 — — formula for avoiding the evil influence of jinns in lonely places, II, 305 n.
 — — formula of deprecation of hostilities during the sacred months, II, 85.
 — — idols, xii.
 — — Jewish tribes, xiv, xv.
 — — manners, ix, x.
 — — position of women amongst, xi.
 — — pride of birth, x.
 — — religion, xi, xiv, xv.
 — — superstitions, xi, xii.
 — — tribes of, I, 145 n 1.
 — — vices, x.
 — battles, II, 221.
 — desert, I, 216 n 1, 259, n 1; II, 36 n 3, 234, 235, 241.
 — desert, ask to be excused from fighting, I, 185, 187.
 — desert and town, ix.
 — dislike of female offspring, II, 212.
 — disregard of treaties if they are themselves of superior strength to their enemy, I, 260 n 2.
 — Himyarite, II, 219 n.
 Arabs, hospitality, II, 147 n.
 — hypocrisy, I, 186, 190.
 — Jewish, xxx.
 — pagan, burying female children alive, I, 132 n.
 — — mutilate the ears of cattle, I, 89 n 1.
 — — offerings to idols, I, 132 n.
 — — superstitions, I, 132 n, 134 n.
 — — superstitious customs respecting cattle, I, 112, 115 n 1.
 — practise of divination amongst, II, 2 n 2.
 — relations to their adopted children, II, 144.
 — sacred months not to be put off, I, 178 n 1.
 — superstitious, II, 7 n 1.
 — superstitious about entering houses by the doors on their return from Mecca, I, 27 n 1.
 'Arafât, lxxiv; I, 29.
 Arafât, Mount, xlv.
 Archangels, lxxix.
 'Arîsh, I, 133 n 2.
 Ark, I, 38; II, 164 n.
 Ar Rahman, lxi; II, 13 n 1.
 Ashram, Abrahâ, the, xviii; II, 341 n.
 Athar, I, 124.
 Athar Nâgat en Nebî, I, 147 n 1.
 Aus, xxx, xxxiv, xxxix; I, 59 n 1; II, 217, 239, 258.
 Âyatu 'l Kursî, I, 40 n 1.
 'Âyeshah, xlv; II, 74 n 2, 75 n 1, 77 n 5, 290, 307 n, 344 n.
 Âzar, I, 124.
 Baal, priests of, I, 68 n 2.
 Babel, tower of, I, 253.
 Babylon, I, 14, 14 n 2.
 Babylonia, ix.
 Ba'hîrah, I, 112, 112 n 1.
 Ba'bt nazr, I, 41 n 1.
 Bâidbâvî, lxxx; I, 33 n 1, 177 n 1; II, 328 n.
 Bait allâh, xiii; I, 17 n 2.
 Balaam, I, 159 n 1.
 Bedawîn, modern, xiv; I, 147 n 1, 256 n 2.
 Bedr, battle of, xxxvi, xxxvii; I, 47 n 1, 61, 66 n 1, 86 n 1, 165 n 1, 171 n 1; II, 20 n 1, 62 n 2, 70 n 2, 257, 274 n, 276.
 Bee, similitude of, I, 4 n 3.
 Bekkah, xvi; I, 58.
 Benu Bakr, xvii.

- Benu Ghanm, I, 188 n 1, 189 n 1.
 Benu 'Huzâ'hah, xvii.
 Benu Kenânah, xvii.
 Bethel, xiii; I, 17 n 2.
 Bilâl, the first Muezzin, xxiii.
 Bismillah, lxviii; I, 24 n 2, 172 n.
 Byzantium, ix, xl.
- Cain, I, 161 n 1.
 Calf, golden, I, 6, 7, 12, 13, 155.
 Camels, II, 321.
 Captives, ransom of, I, 171.
 Carmel, Mount, I, 68 n 2.
 Cave, fellows of the, II, 14.
 Chaldea, xl.
 Christianity, x, xiv, xv, li, lii, lix, lxi.
 Christians, I, 8, 15, 19, 54, 99, 105, 107, 109; II, 16 n 1, 58.
 — accused of perverting the Scriptures, I, 250 n 3.
 Christian traditions, xlvii.
 Confederates the, siege of Medînah by, xxxix; II, 138, 138 n 1, 140 n, 142 n.
 Constantinople, II, 125 n.
 Creator, the, I, 128.
- (ed) Daggâl, lxxi.
 Dan, xii n 1; I, 13 n 2.
 Dâr al Qarâr (Chapter xl, 42), the Abode of Rest, lxx.
 Dâr as Salâm (Chapter vi, 127), the Abode of Peace, lxx.
 David, I, 9 n 1, 39, 52, 52 n, 94, 108, 125; II, 7, 100.
 — taught to make coats of mail, II, 151.
 — the parable of the ewe lamb, II, 177, 178.
 Death, angel of, II, 136.
 Deluge, Mohammedan account of the, I, 209 n 1.
 Demons, lii.
 Denarius, I, 55 n 2.
 Deputations, year of, xliii.
 Dervishes, I, 53 n 4.
 Deuteronomy xxi. 1-9, I, 9 n 2.
 Devil, the, I, 162.
 — tempts man, II, 276.
 Devils, II, 168 n, 179 n.
 — appointed to watch unbelievers, II, 201.
 — are not allowed to listen at the gate of heaven, II, 98, 99, 250 n.
 — do not descend with the Qur'ân, II, 98.
- Devils, on whom they do descend, II, 98.
 — pelted with shooting-stars, I, 51 n; II, 293, 305, 330 n.
 Dhu 'l Heggeh, xxxix; II, 59 n 1.
 Dhu 'l Kiff, II, 53, 180.
 Dhu 'l Qa'hdah, xxxix, xl; I, 27 n 4.
 Dhu 'l Qarnâin, II, 24, 24 n 1, 25.
 Dhu 'n Navvâs, II, 327 n.
 Dhu 'nnûn, II, 53.
 Dinâr = denarius.
 Diodorus, xvi.
 Dioscuri, liv.
 Discrimination, the, I, 7, 26, 46, 55, 55 n 2, 166, 168; II, 50, 83.
 Divorce, II, 138, 146, 270 n, 288, 289.
 — chapter of, II, 288.
 Dog-star, II, 254.
 Dolmens, I, 97 n 2.
 Dualism, lii; I, 115 n 2.
 Duwâr, xiii.
- Eden, gardens of, I, 183, 235, 253; II, 160, 180, 191, 282, 338.
 Edom, II, 147 n.
 Egypt, ix, xl; I, 8, 202, 220 n 1, 221, 227 n 1, 230.
 Egyptian, II, 91.
 Eidolon of Jesus crucified instead of him, I, 53 n 3.
 Elath, I, 9 n 1.
 Elephant, chapter of, I, 214 n 3; II, 341.
 — year of, xviii; II, 341.
 Elias, I, 41 n 1, 125, 147 n 1; II, 23 n 3, 53 n 1.
 Elijah, I, 68 n 2.
 Elisha, I, 125; II, 180.
 Elyâs, II, 172.
 Enoch, xi; II, 31 n.
 Enquirer, the, xv.
 Ephesus, Seven Sleepers of, II, 14 n 1.
 Esdras, I, 41 n 1.
 Eusebius, I, 124.
 Eutychians, li.
 Eve, I, 161 n 1.
 Exodus, II, 36 n 1.
 — ch. x. ver. 9, p. lxxv.
 — ch. xiv. ver. 30, I, 203 n 2.
 — ch. xxxii. ver. 20, I, 13 n 1.
 — ch. xxxii. vers. 24, 26, 27, I, 7 n 1.
 — 'Desert of the,' I, 147 n 1; II, 36 n 1.
 Ezekiel, vision of, I, 37 n 2.
 — ch. xxxvii. vers. 1-10, I, 37 n 2.
 Ezra, Mohammedan legend of, I, 177, 177 n.

Farewell pilgrimage, xlv.

(al) Farqân, lvii.

Fasting, lxxi, lxxiii.

Fâtimah, II, 143 n 1.

Fatrah, the, xxii; II, 308.

Female children buried alive, I, 132 n 2; II, 212, 322.

Firdâus, II, 26 n 1.

Firdausî, II, 131 n 3.

Fire, how produced, II, 167, 265 n.

Flight, the, I, 176 n 1.

Friday, the day of public prayer, lxxii; II, 283.

(al) Furqân, II, 83 n 1.

Future life, belief in, xiv.

Gabriel, xxxvi, lxx, lxix; I, 2 n 2, 13, 13 n 2, 99, 179 n, 203 n 1, 221 n 2, 261 n 2; II, 10 n 1, 28 n 1, 41 n 1, 62 n 1, 98, 164 n, 174 n; 291, 308, 311, 322, 335.

— appears to Mohammed in natural form, II, 251 n.

Gahîm (Chapter ii, 113), the Fierce Fire, lxx.

Gâlût=Goliath, I, 39.

Gannat al Firdaus (Chapter xviii, 107), the Garden of Paradise, lxx.

Gannat al 'Hilliyûn (Chapter lxxxiii, 18), the Garden of the Most High, lxx.

Gannat al 'Huld (Chapter xxv, 16), the Garden of Eternity, lxx.

Gannat al Mâ'wâ (Chapter xxxii, 19), the Garden of Resort, lxx.

Gannat al Na'hîm (Chapter vi, 70), the Garden of Pleasure, lxx.

Gannat 'Hadrn (Chapter ix, 72), the Garden of Eden, lxx.

Gehennum (Chapter xix, 44), Gehenna, lxx.

Genesis ch. i. ver. 2, I, 205.

— ch. vi. ver. 2, I, 14 n 2.

— ch. ix. vers. 20-25, I, 209 n 2.

— ch. xi. ver. 13, I, 147 n 1.

— ch. xv. ver. 9, I, 41 n 2.

— ch. xxviii. vers. 18-19, p. xiii.

Gentiles, I, 48, 56; II, 282.

— prophet of, xlvii.

George, St., II, 23 n 3.

Gerâdeh, one of Solomon's wives, II, 178 n 2.

Ghassan, xiv.

(al) Ghazzâlî, lxx.

Gibt, ancient Arab idol, I, 79.

Gideon, I, 38 n 4.

Gihâd, I, 32 n 2; II, 7 n 1.

Ginns, xii; I, 127, 131, 142, 160, 160 n 3; II, 7 n 1, 69, 156, 259 n, 260, 305 n, 306, 345.

— listen to Mohammed's preaching, lxx; II, 304.

— serve Solomon, II, 102, 151.

— their creation, lxix.

Giordi. See Gûdî.

Gnat, similitude of, I, 4.

God, names of, lxvii; II, 277.

Goddesses of the Qurâî, II, 186 n, 252.

Gog, lxxi; II, 25 n 1, n 2, n 3.

Goliath, I, 39 n 1; II, 1 n 4.

Gomorrhah, I, 183 n 1; II, 255, 298.

Gordyæi. See Giordi.

Gospels, I, 254 n 1; II, 86 n 1.

Goyîm, I, 48 n 1.

Greeks, II, 42 n 1, 235 n.

— chapter of, II, 124.

— prophecy of the victory of, II, 125, 125 n.

Grove, the, I, 249; II, 67, 242.

Gûdî, Mount, where the ark rested, I, 210, 210 n 2.

Gulf of Oman, ix.

Gulf, Persian, ix.

Habbâb, II, 33 n 1.

'Hab'hab, xiii.

Habîb, II, 164 n.

'Hadab, II, 54 n 2.

'Hadhramaut, II, 86 n 3.

'Hadîgah, xix, xxi, xxii, xxiii, xxiv, xxix, xlix, lxxvi.

Hadîth, lxvi.

'Hafsah, II, 290 n.

'Hagg, xvii, liii, lxxvi; I, 29 n 1 and 2.

— meaning of word, lxxv.

— pilgrims, I, 50 n 2.

— rites of, xiii, lxxiii, lxxiv, lxxv.

(al) 'Hagr, I, 244, 249.

— chapter of, I, 244.

— meaning of name, I, 244 n.

'Hâlid ibn Walîd, xxxviii, xli, xlii; II, 239.

Hâmân, Pharaoh's vizier, II, 108, 108 n 1, 112, 121 n.

'Hâmî, I, 112, 112 n 1.

'Hamr, includes all intoxicating drinks, I, 32 n 3.

'Hamzah, Mohammed's uncle, xxxviii; I, 264 n 1; II, 192, 193, 194.

- 'Hanîf, xv, xxiv, lii; I, 19, 54, 90, 124, 133 n 1, 137, 204, 263; II, 59, 338.
 Harîrî, Maqâmat of, lvi; II, 16 n 3.
 'Harûbah, II, 283 n.
 Hârût, xiv; I, 14.
 'Hasan, II, 74 n 2.
 Hâshim, xvi, xviii, lx.
 'Hâsi ibn Wâil, II, 33 n 1.
 'Hârib ibn abi Balta'hah, warns the Meccans of an intended attack by Mohammed, II, 277 n 2.
 'Havâriyûn, I, 53 n 1.
 Hâwiyeh (Chapter cl, 8), the Abyss, lxx.
 'Hazrag, tribe of, xxx, xxxi, xxxiv; I, 59 n 1; II, 239 n.
 Heaven, names of, lxx:—
 Dâr al Qarâr (Chapter xl, 42), the Abode of Rest, lxx.
 Dâr as Salâm (Chapter vi, 127), the Abode of Peace, lxx.
 Gannat al 'Huld (Chapter xxv, 16), the Garden of Eternity, lxx.
 Gannat al 'Hilliyyûn (Chapter lxxxiii, 18), the Garden of the Most High, lxx.
 Gannat al Firdaus (Chapter xviii, 107), the Garden of Paradise, lxx.
 Gannat al Mâ'wâ (Chapter xxxii, 19), the Garden of Resort, lxx.
 Gannat an Na'hîm (Chapter vi, 70), the Garden of Pleasure, lxx.
 Gannat 'Hadn (Chapter ix, 72), the Garden of Eden, lxx.
 Heifer, chapter of, xlii; I, 2.
 Hell, I, 70, 80, 165, 182, 183, 184, 186; II, 293, 301, 309, 317, 322, 329, 337, 340.
 Hell, names of, lxx:—
 Hâwiyeh (Chapter cl, 8), the Abyss, lxx.
 Huṣamah (Chapter civ, 4), the Raging Fire that splits everything to pieces, lxx.
 Gahîm (Chapter ii, 113), the Fierce Fire, lxx.
 Gehennum (Chapter xix, 44), Gehenna, lxx.
 Lal'bâ (Chapter lxx, 15), the Flaming Fire, lxx.
 Sa'hîr (Chapter iv, 11), the Blaze, lxx.
 Saqr (Chapter liv, 58), the Scorching Fire, lxx.
 'Hîd al Az'hâ, lxxiv.
 (al) 'Hîdbr, I, 41; II, 23 n 3.
 Hîgâz, ix.
 Hîgrah, the, xxxiv; I, 16 n 1, 20 n 2, 32 n 1.
 Hind, xxxvii.
 Hirâ, Mount, xxii.
 Hîttatun, I, 7, 7 n 4; II, 157.
 Holy Ghost, I, 113.
 Holy Name, the, II, 178 n.
 Homer, liv.
 Homicide, I, 135.
 Homoiousians, li.
 Honein, xlii, xliii; I, 176 n 1.
 Hour, the, I, 161, 249, 258; II, 16, 33, 56, 57, 62, 84, 126, 130, 135, 148, 150, 195, 204, 215, 231, 254, 257, 319.
 House, the, I, 17, 18, 58, 111, 163, 243; II, 59, 60, 143.
 Hubal, xii.
 Hûd, I, 145, 145 n 2, 210, 211, 215; II, 95, 227.
 Hudâibîyeh, I, 97 n 1; II, 236, 237 n.
 — expedition of, II, 234 n, 235 n.
 — house of, xl, xli; II, 237 n.
 — oath of fealty at, xliii.
 Husein, II, 74 n 2.
 'Huṣamah, II, 341.
 'Huṣamah (Chapter civ, 4), the Raging Fire that splits everything to pieces, lxx.
 'Huṣbah, lxxii.
 'Huzair ibn Sara'hyâ, I, 41 n 1.
 (al) 'Huzzâ, xii, xiii, xxvii; II, 62 n 1, 252.
 Hypocrites, xxxiv, xxxvii, lxiii; I, 169, 182, 183, 184; II, 140, 142, 145, 148, 149, 234, 265, 284.
 Iblîs, lxix; I, 5, 50 n 2, 138, 246; II, 8, 20, 44, 94, 181.
 Ibn Abbâs, II, 230.
 Idols of the Arabs, xii, xiii, xv; I, 4 n 1; II, 185 n, 186 n.
 Idrîs, II, 31, 53.
 Idumæa, I, 146 n 1.
 Ifrît, lxx.
 Igmâ'h, lxvi.
 'Ihfâ'un, meaning of word, II, 35 n 2.
 (el) 'Iblâs, chapter of, II, 344 n.
 'Ihrâm, II, 59 n 2.
 Iliad, liv.
 'Illiyyûn, II, 324.
 Imâm, I, 17 n 1.
 Imâmam, meaning of word, I, 263 n 2.
 Immunity, chapter of, I, 172.

- Imrân, I, 50.
 Iram, terrestrial paradise of, II, 330.
 Iron, chapter of, I, 266.
 Isaac, lxxiv; I, 18, 19, 50 n 2, 57, 125, 213, 219, 223; II, 30, 51, 180.
 Isâf, xlii.
 Isaiah, murder of, II, 1 n 4.
 Isfendiâr, II, 131 n.
 Ishmael, xlii, xvii, lxxiv; I, 17, 19, 57, 94, 125; II, 31, 53, 172, 180.
 Islâm, li; I, 15 n 1, 19 n 1, 30 n 1, 55 n 1, 57, 59 n 1, 60 n 1, 74 n 1, 97, 131, 147 n 1, 175 n 1, 181 n 1, 183, 188 n 1; II, 184, 206.
 — conquests of, I, 237 n 2.
 — meaning of word, li, lxxv.
 — position of women under, lxxv.
 — practical duties of, lxxi.
 Israel, I, 17, 30, 37, 58, 100; II, 31.
 — children of, I, 6, 37 n 2, 107, 108, 113, 153, 202, 203 n 2; II, 1, 1 n 1, 12, 37, 38 n 3, 91, 106, 137, 195, 215, 219, 282.
 Israfil shall sound the last trumpet, II, 255.
 Jacob, I, 18, 19, 57, 94, 125, 213, 219, 223, 226 n 2, 227; II, 27, 30, 51, 180.
 Jacobites, li.
 Jebel Musa, I, 147 n 1.
 (al) Jelâlâin, commentary of, lxxv.
 Jeremiah, imprisonment of, II, 1 n 4.
 Jericho, I, 7 n 2.
 Jerusalem, I, 7 n 2, 20 n 2, 41 n 1; II, 244 n.
 — taken by Persians, liii; II, 125 n.
 — temple at, II, 1 n 4.
 Jesus, xxvi, li; I, 12, 19, 39, 53, 53 n 3, 57, 94, 95, 104, 108, 113, 114, 125; II, 29, 139, 164 n, 206, 216 n, 269, 282.
 — an eidolon crucified instead of, I, 53 n 3.
 — Rû'ha'llâh, the Spirit of God, lxxi.
 Jethro, I, 149 n 1, 249 n 3.
 Jews, xiv, xlvii, l, lix; I, 8, 10 n 1 and 2, 15, 19, 20 n 2, 48 n 1, 54, 55 n 1, 103, 105, 106, 107, 134, 263; II, 42 n 1, 58, 272 n, 275, 282.
 — accused of perverting the Scriptures, I, 125 n, 250 n 3.
 — of Qur'ânîyah, II, 142.
 — of Yathrib, xxxi.
 — sins of the, II, 1 n 4.
 Jewish tradition, xlvii.
 Job, I, 94, 125; II, 52, 179, 179 n.
 John, I, 51, 125; II, 28.
 St. John ch. xvi. ver. 7, quoted II, 281 n.
 — ch. xx. ver. 16, quoted I, 56 n.
 John the Baptist, murder of, II, 1 n 4.
 Jonas, I, 94, 125, 173, 202; II, 53, 295, 297.
 Jordan, I, 52 n 1.
 Jorhamites, xvii.
 Joseph, xxi; I, 219, 220, 220 n 1, 221, 222, 224, 224 n, 225, 227, 227 n 1, 228, 229; II, 13 n 2, 77 n 5, 193.
 Joshua, II, 53 n 1.
 Judaism, xiv, xv, xxxv, li.
 Judges vi, I, 38 n 4.
 Judgment day, II, 106, 107, 255, 262, 297, 298, 311, 314, 315, 318, 319, 321, 323, 325, 329, 338, 339.
 — signs preceding, lxxi.
 Kaabah, xlii, xvi, xvii, xviii, xxvi, xxviii, xxxix, xli, xlii, liii, lxxiv, lxxv; I, 16 n 1, 17 n 1, 2, and 3, 20 n 2, 111, 165 n 2, 243 n 1; II, 1 n 2, 69 n 2, 248 n.
 — model of the, in heaven, xvi; II, 248 n.
 Kâfûr, II, 312.
 Kalîmu'llâh, I, 39 n 2.
 Kautnar, II, 342.
 Khâibar, Jews of, II, 235 n, 236 n, 237 n.
 Khâulah bint Tha'labah, II, 270 n.
 Khorassan, veiled prophet of, xlv.
 Khosrou, xl.
 Kif, II, 53 n 1.
 Kindeh, xiv.
 Korah, II, 116, 116 n, 121.
 Lailat el Qadr, lxxiii.
 Land, the Holy, I, 100.
 Laṣbâ (Chapter lxx, 15), the Flaming Fire, lxx.
 (al) Lau' el Ma'fûṣ, lxxv.
 Loqmân, II, 131, 132.
 Lord's Prayer, liv.
 Lot, xxv; I, 61, 125, 148, 213, 214, 215, 248; II, 20 n 1, 27 n 1, 51, 97, 104, 120, 173, 176, 242.
 — wife of, II, 292.
 Lote tree, the celestial, II, 252.
 — trees, II, 152, 152 n.

- Magicians, I, 151.
 Magog, lxxi; II, 25 n 1, n 2, n 3.
 Mâgûg, II, 25, 54.
 (al) Mâisar, games of chance, I, 32, 32 n 4, 52 n 1, 97 n 2, 110.
 Mâlik, the keeper of hell, lxix; II, 217.
 Manât, xii, xiii, xxvii; II, 62 n 1, 252.
 Manichæans, lii.
 Manna, I, 7.
 Maqâm Ibrâhîm, lxxiv.
 Maquaqas, xl.
 Mârab, bursting of the dyke of, II, 151, 153 n.
 Marriage among the Arabs, xi.
 — with whom lawful, II, 146.
 — with women who have come out from the infidel ranks, II, 279, 280.
 Mârût, xiv; I, 14.
 Marwâ, Mount, xiii.
 Mary, Coptic slave, xl; II, 290.
 Mary, daughter of Imran, II, 292.
 Mary, son of, li; I, 12, 39, 51, 52, 93, 95, 100, 104, 108, 113, 114, 177; II, 28, 29, 68, 215, 269, 282.
 Mary, Virgin, I, 50 n 1; II, 292.
 Mecca, ix, xiii, xvi, xxiv, xxvi, xxx, xxxi, xxxiii, xxxv, xxxvii, xli, xliii, xlv, xlviii, xlix, liii, lix, lxiii, lxxiii, lxxiv; I, 16, 17 n 2, 20 n 2, 22 n 2, 27 n 1, 30 n 1, 58 n 1, 82 n 1, 97 n 1, 126 n 1, 164 n 1, 165 n 2, 176 n 1, 187 n 1, 188 n 1, 192 n 1, 214 n 3, 242 n 1, 260 n 1, 264 n 1; II, 9 n 1, 44 n 1, 70 n 1, 87, 123, 168 n, 213, 236, 275, 332 n, 336 n, 341.
 — invasion of, by the Abyssinians, xviii.
 Medayen, II, 125.
 Medinah, ix, xviii, xxxi, xxxiv, xxxvii, xxxix, xli, xlv, xlviii, lix, lxiii, lxxv; I, 20 n 2, 30 n 1, 32 n 1, 163, 183 n 2, 187, 187 n 2, 188 n 1; II, 123 n 1, 140, 239, 284, 285, 287, 320.
 — Jews of, xxxv.
 Mehdi, coming of, lxxi.
 Merciful, II, 317.
 Merwah, Mount, near Mecca, I, 22.
 Messiah, xxx, li; I, 52, 93, 95, 100, 108, 177.
 Michael, xliii; I, 13 n 2.
 Midian, I, 148, 183, 214, 216, 249 n 4; II, 37, 61, 86 n 3, 109, 110, 121.
 Minâ, lxxiv; I, 50 n 1; II, 236 n.
 — vale of, II, 59 n 1 and 3.
 Miracle, alleged at Bedr, I, 165 n 1.
 Miriam, I, 50 n 1.
 Mista'h, a relation of Abu Bekr, who had assisted in spreading the scandal about 'Ayes Shah, II, 75 n 1.
 Moab, II, 147 n.
 Mohammed, lxxv; I, 13 n 2, 15 n 1, 32 n 1, 50 n 1, 97 n 1, 126 n 2, 165 n 2, 175 n 1, 183 n 2, 188 n 1, 197 n 1; II, 229, 236 n, 238.
 — accused of unfair division of the spoils, II, 149.
 — adopts Mecca as his qiblah, I, 20 n 2.
 — amour of, with the Coptic handmaiden Mary, II, 233, 290.
 — ancestors, xvi, xvii.
 — attempts the pilgrimage to Mecca, xxxix; II, 236.
 — bidden not to hasten the revelation of the Qur'ân, II, 311.
 — bidden to pray by night, II, 308.
 — birth, xviii.
 — 'black drop' taken out of his heart, II, 335 n.
 — chapter of, II, 229.
 — character of, xlv.
 — children of, xix.
 — compromise with the idolatrous Meccans, II, 62 n 1.
 — concludes truce at 'Hudâibîyeh, II, 237 n.
 — conspiracy to murder him, xxxiii.
 — death of, xlv.
 — death of his wife 'Hadîgah, xxix.
 — defeated at Ohod, xxxvii, xxxviii.
 — destroys the idols, xiii.
 — early life of, xix.
 — expedition of, against the Jews of Khâibar, I, 16 n 1.
 — first call of, xx.
 — first collision of, with the Meccan army, xxxv; I, 164 n 1.
 — first converts of, xxiii.
 — flight of, to Medinah, xxxiii; I, 187 n 1.
 — hysterical symptoms of, xxi.
 — inspired through Gabriel, I, 2 n 2.
 — invited to Medinah, xxxi.
 — marriage of, with the divorced wife of Zâid, II, 139 n.

- Mohammed marries 'Hadîgah, xix.
 — mental struggles, xxii.
 — 'night journey' of, to heaven, II, 137 n 2.
 — oath of fealty sworn by him at 'Akabah, I, 98 n 1.
 — pedigree, xviii.
 — personal description of, xix.
 — persons supposed to have helped him in compiling the Qur'ân, I, 261, 261 n 4.
 — prophecies concerning him, xlix; I, 21 n 1, 99 n 2; II, 281 n 1.
 — proscribed by the Qurâis, xxvii, xxviii.
 — put out to nurse, xviii.
 — receives a check at 'Honein, I, 176 n 1.
 — removal of the ban, xxviii.
 — reproved for neglecting a poor convert, II, 320.
 — repulses a poor blind man, II, 320.
 — 'seal of the prophets,' lxxi.
 — second revelation, xxii.
 — secret of his success, xlv.
 — sent to both men and ginn, xix.
 — takes Mecca, xlii.
 — takes refuge with Abu Bekr in a cave, xxxiii, xxxiv; I, 178 n.
 — takes revenge on the Jews, xxxvii.
 — tomb of, at Medînah, lxxv.
 — victorious at the battle of Bedr, xxxvi.
 — vindicated from the charge of being a mere poet, II, 167.
 — vision of the congregation of the ginn listening to the recitation of the Qur'ân, xxx.
 — vision of the 'night journey,' xxxi, xxxii.
 — visits Tâ'if, xxv.
 — wives of, II, 142 n 5, 147.
 — wounded at the battle of Ohod, xxxviii; I, 61 n 1.
- Mohammed, Rusûl allâh, the Apostle of God, lxxi.
- Mohammedan commentators, I, 121 n 1.
- Monophysites, li.
- Monotheism, xv, xlix.
- Monothelites, li.
- Month, sacred, I, 27.
- Moon, chapter of, II, 254.
- alleged miracle of its being cleft asunder, II, 255 n.
- Mosaic law, I, 9 n 2.
- Moses, I, 6, 7, 8, 12, 15, 19, 37, 38, 39 n 2, 57, 93, 94, 100, 125, 136, 147 n 1, 151, 152, 154, 155, 156, 157, 201, 202, 206, 216, 217, 238, 239; II, 1, 12, 21, 22, 23, 30, 35, 36, 36 n 1, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 50, 61, 68, 86, 90, 92, 93, 100, 107, 108, 109, 112, 113, 121, 137, 139, 149 n, 172, 193, 194, 195, 203, 206, 214, 225, 228, 240 n, 247, 253, 281, 318, 329.
 — mother of, II, 108.
- Mosque, I, 16, 176; II, 306.
 — meaning of word, lxxii.
 — 'Remote,' II, 1.
 — 'Sacred,' xxxi, lxxiv; I, 20, 21, 27, 28, 31, 97, 167, 173, 175; II, 1, 58, 237.
- Mother of cities, II, 205.
- Mother of the Book, the, see Umm al Kitâb, I, 211, 237.
- Mu'eddbîn, lxxii.
- (al) Mugbâirah, lxxv.
- Muhagerîn, xxxiv; I, 172 n, 187 n 1; II, 139, 275.
- Mu'harram, I, 96.
- (al) Mukanna', xlv.
- Munâfiqîn, xxxiv, lxiii.
- Munkir, lxix; II, 232 n.
- Muqâm Ibrahîm, I, 17 n 3.
- Mûsâ allâh, II, 18.
- Musâilimah, a false prophet, xlv; II, 235 n.
- Muslims, I, 14 n 1, 18 n 1, 24 n 2, 32 n 1, 110 n 3, 127, 152 n 1, 164 n 2, 176 n 1; II, 65.
 — their flight to Abyssinia, xxvi.
 — they prepare for flight to Medînah, xxxiii.
- Mûta, xli.
- Mutanebbi, xlv.
- (al) Muttalib, xviii.
- Muz'hab, xxxii.
- (an) Nadbîr, Jews of, II, 274 n, 276 n.
- (an) Nadbîr ibn el Hareth, II, 300.
 — prefers the Persian legends to the Qur'ân, II, 131 n.
- Naggâsî, xxvi, xl.
- Nagrân, xiv.
 — persecution of Christians at, II, 326 n.
- Na'ba'h tribe, patois, I, 236 n 2.
- Nakîr, lxix; II, 232 n.

- Names, the excellent, lxvii.
 Nasr, xii; II, 303.
 Nâufel, xviii.
 Nebi Sâleh, I, 147 n 1.
 (an) Nebîy el' ummîy, xlvii.
 Nebuchadnezzar, I, 41 n 1; II, 1 n 4.
 Nebuk, II, 152 n.
 Negd, ix.
 Nehemiah ii. 13, I, 41 n 1.
 Night journey, xxi; II, 1 n 1, 251 n.
 Nights, Arabian, I, 128 n 1.
 Nimrod, I, 40 n 3.
 Noah, xxv; I, 50, 94, 125, 144, 145, 183, 200, 201 n 2, 207, 208, 209, 210, 215, 239; II, 1, 3, 20 n 1, 31, 51, 61, 66, 86, 94, 119, 139, 164 n, 171, 176, 190, 193, 242, 247, 255, 269, 302.
 — chapter of, II, 302, 303, 304.
 — wife of, II, 292.
 Noah, Nabîy allâh, the Prophet of God, lxxi.
 Noah's son, I, 209 n 2.
 Nöldeke, lvi, lx.
 Numberers, the, II, 72.
 Nûn, meaning of word, II, 295 n 1.
 'Obed Adâma, I, 161 n 1.
 Offspring, female, buried alive, I, 132 n 3, 256 n 2.
 Ohod, battle of, xxxvii, xli; I, 61 n 1, 66 n 1, 264 n 1.
 'Omâiyyat ibn Abi Zalt, I, 159 n 1.
 'Omar ibn el 'Hattâb, xxiv, xlv, lvii.
 Ommâiyat ibn 'Half, II, 17 n 1.
 Ommaiyeh, family of, xviii.
 Orators, Arab, l.
 Osamer, xlv.
 Othman, Caliph, xxiii, lix; I, 172 n 3.
 Parables, liv.
 Paradise, xlii, lxx; I, 15, 31, 62, 63, 69, 89, 139, 140, 142, 143, 155, 207, 237, 253; II, 31, 65, 85, 123, 164, 166, 169, 205, 207, 216, 225, 226, 229, 230, 242, 243, 267, 277, 292, 299, 312, 316, 317, 322, 325 n, 329, 331, 342 n.
 παράκλητος, xlix; II, 281 n.
 Paul, St., liv.
 Pen, chapter of, II, 295.
 Pentateuch, li; I, 254 n 1; II, 86 n 1, 113 n.
 περικλυτός, xlix; II, 281 n.
 Persia, ix, xl, lii; II, 125 n, 235 n.
 Persian Gulf, ix.
 Persian invasion, II, 1 n 4.
 Petra, I, 244 n 1.
 Pharaoh, xxv; I, 6, 47, 151, 152, 153, 154, 169, 170, 201, 202, 216, 226 n 2; II, 36, 37, 38, 39 n 1, 40, 68, 90, 91, 92, 92 n 1, 93, 100, 107, 108, 110, 112, 121, 176, 192, 193, 194, 195, 214, 215, 218, 219, 242, 247, 247 n, 257, 298, 307, 318, 327, 331.
 — Mohammedan legend of, I, 203 n 2.
 — surnamed 'of the stakes,' II, 176.
 — wife of, II, 108, 292.
 Phineas ibn Azûra, I, 68 n 1.
 Pilgrimage, lxxi; I, 28, 173; II, 59.
 See 'Hagg.
 — ceremonies of, liii.
 — farewell, xlv.
 Pit, fellows of, II, 326.
 Poets, II, 98.
 Power, night of, II, 337.
 Prayer, lxxi.
 — call to, lxxii.
 — enjoined at night, II, 308.
 — incumbent and supererogatory, lxxii.
 — times of, lxxii.
 Prophet, 'The Righteous,' I, 147 n 1.
 Psalm xxxvii. 29, p. xlviii; II, 55 n 2.
 — cxlviii, II, 52.
 Psalms, the, I, 7, 94; II, 55.
 Ptolemy, works of, I, 145 n 2.
 Qadr, meaning of word, II, 337 n.
 Qâf, Mount, lxx.
 Qâinuqâh, Jews of, xxxvii; I, 68 n 1; II, 276 n.
 Qarûn, II, 192. See Korah.
 (al) Qâsim, Mohammed's son, II, 343 n.
 Qiblah, liii; I, 20, 202.
 Qinsâr = talent, I, 55 n 2.
 Qiyâs, lxvi.
 Quails, I, 7.
 Qubâ', Mosque of, I, 188 n.
 Qurâidbah, Jews of, xxxviii; II, 274 n.
 — fall of the, xxxix.
 Qurâir, xvi, xxvi, xxviii, xxxiii, xlix, liii, lix, lxi; I, 97 n, 165 n 1, 254 n; II, 17 n 1, 62 n 1, 69 n 2, 236, 254, 320 n, 342.
 — compromise with, xxvii.
 — idiom of, lxxvi; II, 35 n 2.
 — territory of, I, 249 n 2.

- Qur'ân, I, 147 n 1; II, 307, 308.
 — abrupt changes of persons in, I, 195 n 2.
 — Arabic, I, 219.
 — chronological arrangement of, lix, lxiv.
 — division into Mecca and Medīnah, l.
 — divisions of sūrah, lx, lxv.
 — English translations of, lxxix.
 — language of, lxxvi.
 — meaning of name, lvii.
 — names of, lxv.
 — on what written, lvii.
 — persons supposed to have assisted in the composition of, xlviii.
 — recensions of, lix.
 — revelation of, not to be hurried, II, 311.
 — style of, liv, lv, lxxvii.
 — various dialects incorporated in, lix.
 — verses of, annulled, lviii.
 Quzai, xvii.
 Rabbāniyīn, I, 56 n 1.
 Rabbi, I, 177 n 2.
 Rabbinic legends, li.
 Rabbis, Jewish, I, 68 n 1, 159 n 1.
 Rabbonī, I, 56 n 1.
 Ramadhbān, lxxiii; I, 26, 26 n 2, 27 n 3.
 (ar-)Raqlm, II, 14, 14 n 1.
 (ar) Rass, II, 86, 86 n 3, 242.
 Razwān, keeper of Paradise, lxix.
 Red Sea, ix, xxxv.
 Reminder, the, I, 53, 245, 254, 255; II, 26, 84, 86.
 Remote Mosque, the, xxxiii.
 Repetition, the seven of, I, 249, 249 n 6.
 Resignation. See Islām.
 Retaliation, law of, I, 25.
 Rodwell, I, 240 n 1.
 Romans, ancient, II, 2 n 2.
 Rosary, lxxviii.
 (ar-)Rū'h al Amīn, lxix.
 (ar-)Rū'h al Qudus, lxix.
 Rukaiyah, xxiii.
 Rūm. See Greeks.
 Rustam, II, 131 n.
 Sa'ad ibn Waqqāz, xxiii.
 Sabæans, I, 8, 107; II, 58.
 Sabbath, I, 263.
 — breakers punished, I, 9 n 1, 79.
 — Israelites commanded to observe the, I, 93.
 Sabbath, legend of breakers of, I, 158.
 Sabeanism, xi.
 Sab'h al Mathānī, I, 249 n.
 Sacred Mosque, xxxiii.
 Sacrifices, lxxiv.
 — human, I, 132 n 2.
 Sadaqah, lxxiii.
 Sa'hīr (Chapter iv, 11), the Blaze, lxx.
 Sahn, tribe of, II, 340 n.
 Sâibah, I, 112, 112 n 1.
 Sakhar, a ginn, assumes Solomon's likeness, II, 178 n.
 Sale, I, 240 n 1.
 Sâleh, prophet, I, 147 n 1.
 Salmān al Fārsī, xlviii.
 Samaritans, the, II, 40 n 1.
 (as) Sāmariy, II, 40, 41.
 Samuel, I, 37 n 3.
 1 Samuel iv, v, vi, I, 38 n 3.
 Sanaa, II, 341 n.
 Saqar (Chapter liv, 58), the Scorching Fire, lxx.
 Saracen inhabitants of Sinai, I, 147 n 1.
 Satan, I, 23, 30, 50, 65, 67, 78, 81, 82, 83, 110, 120, 134, 139, 140, 159, 161 n 1, 164, 169, 223, 223 n 2, 230, 241, 256, 261; II, 6, 8, 21, 30, 75, 86.
 Saul, I, 38 n 1 and 4.
 Sawāliheh, I, 147 n 1.
 Scriptures, I, 16.
 Sebā, II, 101.
 — chapter of, II, 150, 152, 153 n.
 Seil al Arim, xlviii.
 Sennacherib, II, 1 n 4.
 Seth, xi.
 Shāh-nāmeh, II, 131 n.
 Shâibān Wâil, l.
 Shaqq as Sadr, the, II, 335 n.
 Sheba, queen of, II, 101, 102, 103, 103 n.
 Shechina, I, 38, 38 n 2, 176, 179; II, 233, 237.
 Sheddād ibn Ād, constructs a terrestrial Paradise, II, 330.
 Shiahs, II, 143.
 Sho'hâib, I, 149, 150, 214, 215, 249 n 3; II, 97, 121.
 Sigdah, lxxii, lxxii n.
 Sigīn, II, 324.
 (as-)Sigill, II, 55, 55 n 1.
 Simon Peter, II, 164 n.
 Sinai, inhabitants of, I, 147 n 1.

- Sinai, Mount, I, 57 n 1; II, 66, 336.
 — Peninsula of, I, 147 n 1.
 Sinaitic Peninsula, II, 152 n 1.
 (as) Sirât, lxix.
 Sirius, II, 254.
 Slaves, II, 127.
 Sleepers, Seven, II, 14 n 1, 16 n 2.
 Smoke, chapter of, II, 218.
 Sodom, I, 183 n 1, 249 n 4, 254; II, 298.
 Solomon, I, 14, 14 n 1, 94, 125; II, 52, 52 n 1 and 3, 101, 102, 151.
 — a devil assumes his likeness as a punishment for his allowing idolatry in his house, II, 178 n.
 — ring of, II, 178 n.
 — served by gins, lxx.
 — slays his horses, II, 178.
 — taught the language of birds, II, 100.
 Soul, condition of, after death, lxxi.
 Spider, legend of, xxxiii.
 — chapter of, II, 117.
 — similitude of, I, 4 n 3; II, 121.
 Spirit, li; II, 317.
 — the Faithful, lxix; II, 98.
 — of God, II, 53.
 — Holy, lxix; I, 12, 39.
 Spoils, II, 141 n, 145, 148, 274, 275.
 — chapter of, I, 163.
 — distribution of, I, 163.
 Statues, I, 110.
 Stesichorus, liv.
 Strabo, I, 244 n 1.
 Suhail ibn 'Amr concludes truce with Mohammed at 'Hudâibîyeh, II, 237 n.
 Sunnah, lxvi.
 Sunnis, I, 110 n 3.
 Sûrah, I, 182, 197, 206, 231.
 — meaning of word, lvi.
 Suwâ'h, xii; II, 303.
 Syria, ix, xli, xlv; I, 164 n 1, 249 n 2; II, 125 n, 153 n.
 Tabûk, xliii; I, 184 n 1, 190 n 1.
 Tâgûût, ancient Arabs, idols, and demons, I, 40, 79, 81, 82, 106, 254; II, 184.
 Tâ'if, xii, xlii, xliii, lxx; II, 213, 304 n.
 Tal'ha, xxiii, lxxv.
 Tal'h trees, II, 263.
 Talmud, liv; I, 5 n 1, 57 n 1, 116 n, 121 n 1, 155 n; II, 52 n 2, 178 n.
 Tâlût (Saul), I, 38.
 Tamannah, meaning of word, II, 62, n 1.
 Tannûr, meaning of word, I, 209 n 1.
 Târah, I, 124 n.
 Tarwî'h, lxxiv.
 Tasnîm, II, 325.
 Tawâf, ceremony of, lxxv.
 Terah, I, 124 n.
 Thabîr, Mount, xxii.
 Thamûd, xlviii; I, 86, 146, 147 n 1, 183, 211, 212, 216, 239, 244 n 1, 249 n 5; II, 7, 61, 103, 121, 176, 242, 247, 254, 256, 298, 327, 331, 333.
 (eTH) THaqalân, lxx; II, 9 n 1.
 THaqîf, tribe of, xii, xlii.
 Thaur, Mount, xxxiii.
 Tomb, examination of, lxix.
 Tribes, the, I, 19, 57.
 Trinity, the, xiv, lii.
 Tubbâ'h, kings of the Himyarite Arabs so called, II, 219, 242.
 Tuvâ, the holy valley, I, 35; II, 318.
 Umm al Kitâb, xlviii; I, 2 n 2; II, 163.
 Ummatun, II, 53 n 4.
 — meaning of word, I, 263 n 2.
 Umm Gemîl, wife of Abu Laheb, lx.
 Ummîyûn, xlvii; I, 482.
 Umm Salmâ, one of Mohammed's wives, I, 70 n 1.
 Veiled prophet of Khorassan, xlv.
 Venus, xii.
 Vizîr, meaning of word, II, 36 n 2.
 Wadd, xli; II, 303.
 Wady, bed of a torrent, I, 191.
 Wady as Sheikh, I, 147 n 1.
 Walîd ibn 'Hugbâ wrongly accuses the tribe of Mustaleq of insubordination, II, 239 n.
 (al) Walîd ibn Mugbâirah, II, 295, 309 n, 320 n.
 — bargains with an idolater to be relieved of the sin of apostacy, II, 253 n.
 Waqf, lxxiii.
 Waraqah, xv, xx, xlix.
 (al) Watiyeh, I, 147 n 1.
 Wazilah, I, 112, 112 n 1.
 Whisperer, the, II, 345.
 Whistling reprimanded, I, 167.
 Witches, II, 303.
 Women, position of, lxxv.

Word, I; I, 51.

Wuzû'h, lxxii.

Yagbûth, xii; II, 303.

Yâgûg, II, 25, 54.

Yâ'as, meaning of word, I, 236 n 2.

Yamâmah, II, 86 n 3.

Y'arishûn, meaning of word, I, 153 n 1.

Yasîn, II, 173.

YatHrib, xviii, xxx, xxxi, xxxii, xxxiii, xxxiv, xlviii; II, 140, 140 n 1.

— Jews of, xxxi.

Ya'ûq, xii; II, 303.

Yesta'h'allah, new phrase, I, 149 n 2.

Yemâmah, lvii.

Yemen, xiv; II, 150 n, 327 n, 341 n.

Yul'hidûna, meaning of word, I, 160 n 1.

Zachariah, I, 51, 125; II, 27, 27 n 1, 53, 53 n 1.

Zafâ, Mount, near Mecca, xiii; I, 22.

Zaffyah bint 'Huyâi, one of the prophet's wives, II, 240.

Zafwân ibn al Mu'huttal, causes scandal concerning 'Ayesha, II, 74 n 2.

Zâid, Mohammed's adopted son, xxix, xli, xlix; II, 144, 233 n 1.

Zâid ibn Amr, xv, xx, xxiii.

Zâid ibn Thâbit, Mohammed's amanuensis, lvii, lviii, lix.

Zâinab, a widow, afterwards one of Mohammed's wives, xxix.

— divorced wife of Zâid, xxix; II, 139 n, 144 n, 233.

Zakât, lxxiii.

Zâlî'h, I, 146, 147, 148 n 1, 211, 212, 215; II, 96, 103.

Zamharîr, II, 313.

Zaqqûm, II, 7 n 2, 170, 220, 264.

Zemzem, xvii.

Zingabîl, II, 313.

Zobeir, xxiii, lxv.

Zodiacal signs, II, 326.

Zoroastrianism, lxviii.

Zuhâib ibn Sinân er Rûmî, I, 30 n 1.

TRANSLITERATION OF ORIENTAL ALPHABETS ADOPTED FOR THE TRANSLATIONS
OF THE SACRED BOOKS OF THE EAST.

CONSONANTS.	MISSIONARY ALPHABET.			Sanskrit.	Zend.	Pehlvi.	Persian.	Arabic.	Hebrew.	Chinese.
	I Class.	II Class.	III Class.
Gutturales.
1 Tenuis	k	क	𐬕	𐬑	𐬑	𐬑	𐬑	𐬑	k
2 " aspirata	kh	ख	𐬖	𐬒	𐬒	𐬒	𐬒	𐬒	kh
3 Media	g	ग	𐬔	𐬓	𐬓	𐬓	𐬓	𐬓	...
4 " aspirata	gh	घ	𐬕	𐬔	𐬔	𐬔	𐬔	𐬔	...
5 Gutturo-labialis	q	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	...
6 Nasalis	ñ (ng)	ङ	{ 3 (ng) } { 𐬕 (N) }
7 Spiritus asper	h	ह	𐬕 (hv)	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	h, hs
8 " lenis	,
9 " asper faucalis	'h
10 " lenis faucalis	'h
11 " asper fricatus	'h
12 " lenis fricatus	'h
Gutturales modificatae (palatales, &c.)
13 Tenuis	k	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	k
14 " aspirata	kh	kh
15 Media	g	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	...
16 " aspirata	gh	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	...
17 " Nasalis	ñ	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	𐬕	...

CONSONANTS (continued)	MISSIONARY ALPHABET.			Sanskrit.	Zend.	Pehlevi.	Persian.	Arabic.	Hebrew.	Chinese.
	I Class.	II Class.	III Class.
18 Semivocalis	y	य	𐬨 𐬨 𐬨 init.	𐬨	ي	ي	י	y
19 Spiritus asper	(y)
20 " lenis	(y)
21 " asper assibilatus	s	...	श	𐬨	𐬨
22 " lenis assibilatus	z	𐬨	𐬨	z
Dentales.
23 Tenuis	t	त	𐬨	𐬨	ת	t
24 " aspirata	th	थ	𐬨	𐬨	ת	th
25 " assibilata	TH
26 Media	d	द	𐬨	𐬨
27 " aspirata	dh
28 " assibilata	DH
29 Nasalis	n	न	𐬨	𐬨	נ	n
30 Semivocalis	l	𐬨	𐬨	ל	l
31 " mollis 1	l	𐬨	𐬨
32 " mollis 2	L
33 Spiritus asper 1	s	स	𐬨	𐬨	ש	s
34 " asper 2	s (ʃ)	ש	...
35 " lenis	z	ז	z
36 " asperimus 1	z (ʒ)	ז	...
37 " asperimus 2	z (ʒ)	ז	...

Dentales modificatae (linguales, &c.)		Labiales.
38 Tenuis	t	38 Tenuis	p
39 " aspirata	th	48 Tenuis	ph
40 Media	d	49 " aspirata	b
41 " aspirata	dh	50 Media	bh
42 Nasalis	n	51 " aspirata
43 Semivocalis	r	52 Tenuissima	m
44 " fricata	r	53 Nasalis	w
45 " diacritica	r	54 Semivocalis	hw
46 Spiritus asper	sh	55 " aspirata	f
47 " lenis	zh	56 Spiritus asper	v
		57 " lenis
		58 Anusvāra	m
		59 Visarga	h

VOWELS.	MISSIONARY ALPHABET.			Sanskrit.	Zend.	Pehlvi.	Persian.	Arabic.	Hebrew.	Chinese.
	I Class.		III Class.
	II Class.
1 Neutralis	o	ö	ö
2 Laryngo-palatalis	ä	ä	ä
3 " labialis	ä	ä	ä
4 Gutturalis brevis	ä	ä	(a)
5 " longa	i	i	(i)
6 Palatalis brevis	i	i	(i)
7 " longa	i	i	(i)
8 Dentalis brevis	i	i	(i)
9 " longa	i	i	(i)
10 Lingualis brevis	i	i	(i)
11 " longa	i	i	(i)
12 Labialis brevis	i	i	(i)
13 " longa	i	i	(i)
14 Gutturo-palatalis brevis	e	é (ai)	ai
15 " longa	e	é (ai)	ai
16 Diphthongus gutturo-palatalis	ei (éi)	oi (ou)	ou
17 " " " "	o	ö	ö
18 " " " "	o	ö	ö
19 Gutturo-labialis brevis	o	ö	ö
20 " longa	o	ö	ö
21 Diphthongus gutturo-labialis	eu (éu)	ou (ou)	ou
22 " " " "	eu (éu)	ou (ou)	ou
23 " " " "	eu (éu)	ou (ou)	ou
24 Gutturalis fracta	eu (éu)	ou (ou)	ou
25 Palatalis fracta	eu (éu)	ou (ou)	ou
26 Labialis fracta	eu (éu)	ou (ou)	ou
27 Gutturo-labialis fracta	eu (éu)	ou (ou)	ou

THIS BOOK IS DUE ON THE LAST DATE
STAMPED BELOW

AN INITIAL FINE OF 25 CENTS
WILL BE ASSESSED FOR FAILURE TO RETURN
THIS BOOK ON THE DATE DUE. THE PENALTY
WILL INCREASE TO 50 CENTS ON THE FOURTH
DAY AND TO $1.00 ON THE SEVENTH DAY OVERDUE.

OCT 21 1932

MAR 24 1935

Apr 7

NOV 26 1937

9 Jun '49 HJ

Jul '50 AM

4 Jan 51 D7

28 May '52 KU
MAY 24 1952 LU

11 Oct '52 SS
OCT 11 1952 LU

29 Jan '55 MC

JAN 20 1955 LU

25 May '55 PCF

MAY 25 1955 LU

23 Sep '55 E O

SEP 19 1955 LU

May '56 RF

2 May '56 RF

LD 21-50m-8,32

YC 54595

